Congressional Panel

This year's Congressional agenda includes issues of great significance to the identity technology industry. Although it is still unclear what type of legislation, if any, will emerge, the current policy debates on technology, data security, and privacy will certainly be instrumental in shaping political and public opinion for the future about biometric technologies and, prominently, facial recognition. This session, comprised of four senior, knowledgeable, and effective staff representing both Democrats and Republicans and the Senate and House of Representatives, will provide an overview of what is happening and also their insights on developments on facial recognition, privacy, border security, aviation security, and the Department of Homeland Security.

What makes Americans act on behalf of refugees?

12:00-1:30 p.m. PDT, Tuesday, May 1, 2019
ERC Conference Room 115
The Center for Comparative Immigration Studies, UC San Diego
9500 Gilman Drive
La Jolla, CA 92093
https://ccis.ucsd.edu/events/Seminars.html

Speaker:
Claire Adida, Co-Driector, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
Associate Professor of Political Science, UC San Diego

Description: We investigate whether American citizens can be persuaded to adopt more inclusionary behavior toward refugees by using a minimally invasive online perspective-taking exercise frequently used by refugee advocates in the real world. Through the use of a randomized survey experiment on a representative sample of American citizens, we find that this short and interactive perspective-taking exercise can promote, in the short term, Americans' willingness to act on behalf of Syrian refugees, by writing anonymous letters of support to the White House. This effect, while driven primarily by self-identified Democrats, is also apparent among self-identified Republicans.

XCPD-700-01 - Global Trends in International Migration

Certificate in International Migration Studies

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, a successful student will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;

* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;

* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and

* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

Book talk on: "African Immigrant Families in the United States: Transnational Lives and Schooling"
by Serah Shani, Assistant Professor of Anthropology, Westmont University

Description of the Book: Sub-Saharan African immigrants are emerging as the new model minority in the United States, excelling in education and social mobility. In African Immigrant Families in the United States: Transnational Lives and Schooling, Serah Shani examines the socioeconomic and cultural mechanisms behind their high levels of success. Shani explores the dynamics

Canadian Immigration Summit 2019: Expanding Our Horizons

Wednesday-Thursday, May 8-9, 2019
The Shaw Centre
Ottawa, Ontario, Canada
https://www.conferenceboard.ca/conf/immigration/default.aspx

Summit Overview
Expanding Our Horizons
How can we plan for tomorrow, today?
The purpose of the 2019 Summit is to explore how Canada can respond proactively to emerging immigration issues in a rapidly changing world.

We tend to dwell on the past to tackle today's challenges and anticipate the ones we will experience tomorrow. Moreover, we are often focused on the short-term, with too little of our time and energy devoted to thinking about how we can plan for the future. However, the world is not standing still, and Canada is no exception. Changes at home and abroad will disrupt Canada's future immigration system in ways we cannot currently fathom. For example, how many of us five years ago imagined that a wave of populism would take the world by storm?

The Summit will examine key drivers of economic, social, and technological change that could affect our immigration system. The goal is not to predict the future, but rather to assess various, plausible immigration scenarios and how Canada can benefit from the opportunities while mitigating the threats in support of a stronger, more vibrant country. Expert speakers will challenge us to expand our horizons by testing our underlying assumptions and getting us to think and plan beyond the short-term.

Join over 400 delegates to explore these key issues and more:

* Populism: What does Canada need to do to prevent the rise of anti-immigrant populism?

* Future skills and the changing nature of work: As the economy evolves, how can Canada refine its selection and settlement programs for tomorrow's labour market?

* Settlement and technology: How will technological innovations affect the way Canada delivers settlement services?

* Diversity in the workplace: How can employers become more inclusive as the Canadian labour force becomes more diverse?

* Intergovernmental collaboration: How can our immigration system accommodate the growing role of the provinces, territories, and municipalities?

* Refugee flows: With the global refugee population at an all-time high, what can Canada do to help?

* Pan-Canadian Framework for the Assessment and Recognition of Foreign Qualifications: What progress has been made since 2009 and how can we improve further over the next 10 years?

* Global supply of talent: How can Canada remain a destination of choice for immigrants and international students as other countries offer improved economic opportunity to their citizens and global talent?

Speaker:
Joseph Wiltberger, Visiting Scholar, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies, UC San Diego
Assistant Professor of Central American Studies, California State University, Northridge

Description: From the 1980-1992 civil war to the present, Salvadorans have endured and navigated various situations of violence and displacement in El Salvador and elsewhere as migrants. In this talk, I discuss how, in spite of such circumstances, Salvadorans work toward building possibilities to be able to stay in place. Based on my long-range ethnographic fieldwork in El Salvador and with Salvadoran migrants, I examine how mobility and collective action operate jointly as a key resource in these struggles.

Crossing the Race Line: Brexit, Citizenship and “Immigrants” in the Referendum
3:30-5:00 p.m., Thursday, May 23, 2019
Moore Hall 3340, UCLA Campus
Los Angeles, CA 90095-1487

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

http://www.international.ucla.edu/migration/event/13712

Description: In June 2016, a very clear majority of English voters chose to unilaterally take the "United Kingdom" out of the European Union. According to many of the post-Brexit vote analyses, the single strongest motivating factor driving this vote was "immigration" in the UK, an issue which had long been the central mobilising force of the United Kingdom Independence Party. I will focus on how – following the bitter demise of "multiculturalism" – these Brexit related developments may now signal the end of Britain's post-war settlement on immigration and race, the other parts of a progressive philosophy which had long marked out a proud British distinction from its neighbours. In successfully racialising, lumping together and re-labelling as "immigrants" three anomalous non-"immigrant" groups – EU citizens, British Muslims, and asylum seekers – Farage made explicit an insidious colonial re-casting of ideas of "national integration", emergent since the year 2000, that now even threatens the status of the most settled BAME populations (as has been seen in the Windrush scandal). Central to this has been the rejection of the post-national principle of non-discrimination by nationality, which had seen its fullest European expression in the UK during the 1990s and 2000s. The referendum on Brexit enabled an extraordinary "democratic" vote on the notion of "national" population and membership, in which "the people" might openly roll back the various diasporic, multi-national, cosmopolitan, or human rights-based conceptions of "global" society which had taken root during those decades.

There Is No 'Labor Shortage'

Little evidence that employers need immigration to find workers

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (April 17, 2019) - A new report from the Center for Immigration Studies finds no empirical evidence of a "labor shortage" whereby employers need immigration to fill jobs because they are unable to find American workers.

Jason Richwine, an independent policy analyst and the author of the report, said, "When employers tell us that they cannot find workers, what they really mean is that they cannot find workers willing to work for the low wage they'd like to pay. The percentage of working-age Americans not in the labor force remains significantly below the level from the year 2000, and employers should try to bring those Americans back first before they look to immigration."

View the full report: https://cis.org/Report/There-No-Labor-Shortage

Key findings in the report:

- Shortages should not occur in a free market
- Tight labor markets benefit marginalized groups
- Wages have been stagnant over the long term
- Labor force participation is down over the long term
- Domestic industries should hire Americans
- Natives participate in all major occupations
- Plenty of STEM workers are available
- Gains to the economy are not the same as gains to natives
- Immigration is not an efficient solution to population aging

Immigration is fundamentally about trade-offs. Unfortunately, advocates have seized on the idea of a "labor shortage" in order to deny those trade-offs, arguing instead that immigration is necessary to fill jobs that cannot be filled by natives. Neither economic theory nor empirical evidence supports the notion of a "labor shortage". It's time to retire this talking point.

In the Supreme Court of the United States, No. 17-9560
Argument: April 23, 2019
https://www.scotusblog.com/case-files/cases/rehaif-v-united-states/

Issue: Whether the "knowingly" provision of 18 U.S.C. §924(a)(2) applies to both the possession and status elements of a §922(g) crime, or whether it applies only to the possession element.

Summary: "When the federal government prosecutes someone not legally in the United States for possessing a firearm, must the government prove that the person actually knew he was not legally in the country? Or need the government merely prove that the person knew he possessed the firearm? The U.S. Supreme Court will puzzle over this classic, yet novel, statutory question of `mens rea,' or criminal intent, when it hears argument on April 23 in Rehaif v. United States."

Office for National Statistics, March 1, 2019
https://www.ons.gov.uk/peoplepopulationandcommunity/populationandmigration/internationalmigration/bulletins/migrationstatisticsquarterlyreport/february2019

Excerpt: Net migration continues to add to the population of the UK as an estimated 283,000 more people moved to the UK with an intention to stay 12 months or more than left in the year ending September 2018. Over the year, 627,000 people moved to the UK (immigration) and 345,000 people left the UK (emigration).

Our analysis of the available data suggests that net migration, immigration and emigration figures have remained broadly stable overall since the end of 2016. However, there are different patterns for EU and non-EU migration:

High growth rates of labour migration
Statistisches Bundesamt, April 15, 2019
https://www.destatis.de/EN/Press/2019/04/PE19_149_12521.html

Summary: At the end of 2018, roughly 10.9 million people with only foreign citizenship were covered in the Central Register of Foreigners. The Federal Statistical Office (Destatis) reports that this figure included approximately 266,000 foreigners from countries outside the European Union (EU) who had a residence title for purposes of employment. At the end of 2017, the relevant number was 217,000. Thus the annual growth rate was above 20% for the third year in a row. The main countries of origin of the above group of people were India (12%), China (9%), Bosnia and Herzegovina (8%) and the United States (7%).

Refuge Beyond Reach: How Rich Democracies Repel Asylum Seekers
By David Scott FitzGerald

Oxford University Press, 376 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 0190874155, $33.74
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0190874155/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 13760 KB, ASIN: B07NS721F5, 373 pp., $23.99

Book Description: Media pundits, politicians, and the public are often skeptical or ambivalent about granting asylum. They fear that asylum-seekers will impose economic and cultural costs and pose security threats to nationals. Consequently, governments of rich, democratic countries attempt to limit who can approach their borders, which often leads to refugees breaking immigration laws.

In Refuge Beyond Reach, David Scott FitzGerald traces how rich democracies have deliberately and systematically shut down most legal paths to safety. Drawing on official government documents, information obtained via WikiLeaks, and interviews with asylum seekers, he finds that for ninety-nine percent of refugees, the only way to find safety in one of the prosperous democracies of the Global North is to reach its territory and then ask for asylum. FitzGerald shows how the US, Canada, Europe, and Australia comply with the letter of law while violating the spirit of those laws through a range of deterrence methods-first designed to keep out Jews fleeing the Nazis-that have now evolved into a pervasive global system of "remote control." While some of the most draconian remote control practices continue in secret, Fitzgerald identifies some pressure points and finds that a diffuse humanitarian obligation to help those in need is more difficult for governments to evade than the law alone.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Refuge Beyond Reach addresses one of the world's most pressing challenges-how to manage flows of refugees and other types of migrants-and helps to identify the conditions under which individuals can access the protection of their universal rights.

http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1138573124/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 601 KB, ASIN: B077G83251, $39.99

Book Description: This book offers a comprehensive examination of the many forms of victimization of immigrants, including trafficking in persons for sexual exploitation and forced labor; assaulting, robbing and raping; refusing to pay wages; renting illegal living space that violates health codes; and domestic abuse both in general, and in particular, of mail-order brides.

McDonald examines a broad range of quantitative and qualitative data from historical and international sources including the USA, Canada, Mexico, Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, Sweden, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Austria, Poland, and Spain. He writes with a view to correcting myths about the relationship between immigrants and crime, noting that immigrants are more likely to become victims than offenders.

The book outlines the multiple forms and contexts in which immigrants are victimized, exploited, and harmed. Reviewing micro- and macro-level victimological and sociological theories as they apply to patterns and forms of immigrants' victimization, this study ultimately seeks to understand reasons for which immigrants are victimized by their own kind, and by persons outside their community.

Book Description: This important new book examines the status of refugees from a philosophical perspective. The contributors explore the conditions faced by refugees and clarify the conceptual, practical, and ethical issues confronting the contemporary global community with respect to refugees. The book takes up topics ranging from practical matters, such as the social and political production of refugees, refugee status and the tension between citizen rights and human rights, and the handling of detention and deportation, to more conceptual and theoretical concerns, such as the ideology, rhetoric, and propaganda that sustain systems of exclusion and expulsion, to the ethical dimensions that invoke hospitality and transnational responsibility. Ideal for students and scholars in Political and Social Philosophy and Migration Studies more broadly, the book provides a critical commentary on material responses to contemporary refugee crises as a means of opening pathways to more pointed assessments of both the political and ideological underpinnings of statelessness.

Building Walls: Excluding Latin People in the United States

By Ernesto Castañeda, Silvia Chávez-Baray, Eva Moya, Maura Fennelly, et al.

Lexington Books, 236 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1498585655, $84.50
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1498585655/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 4643 KB, ASIN: B07QL3QZNV, $90.00

Book Description: The election of Donald Trump has called attention to the border wall and anti-Mexican discourses and policies, yet these issues are not new. Building Walls puts the recent calls to build a border wall along the US-Mexico border into a larger social and historical context. This book describes the building of walls, symbolic and physical, between Americans and Mexicans, as well as the consequences that these walls have in the lives of immigrants and Latin communities in the United States. The book is divided into three parts: categorical thinking, anti-immigrant speech, and immigration as an experience. The sections discuss how the idea of nation-state constructs borders, how political strategy and racist ideologies construct the idea of irreconcilable differences between whites and Latinos, and how immigrants and their families overcome their struggles to continue living in America. They analyze historical precedents, normative frameworks, divisive discourses, and contemporary daily interactions between whites and Latin individuals. The book discusses the debates on how to name people of Latin American origin and the framing of immigrants as a threat and contrasts them to the experiences of migrants and border residents. Building Walls makes a theoretical contribution by showing how different dimensions work together to create durable inequalities between U.S. native whites, Latinos, and newcomers. It provides a sophisticated analysis and empirical description of racializing and exclusionary processes.

Migration, Work and Home-Making in the City: Dwelling and Belonging among Vietnamese Communities in London

By Annabelle Wilkins

Routledge, 190 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1138577170, $140.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1138577170/centerforimmigra

Book Description: This book explores the relationships between home, work and migration among Vietnamese people in East London, demonstrating the diversity of home-making practices and forms of belonging in relation to the dwelling, workplace and wider city. Engaging with wider scholarship on transnationalism, urban mobilities and the geopolitical dimensions of home among migrants and diasporic communities, the author draws on ethnographic work to examine the experiences of people who migrated from Vietnam to London at different times and in diverse circumstances, including individuals who arrived as refugees in the 1970s, as well as those who have migrated for work or education in recent years. Migration, Work and Home-Making in the City thus sheds new light on the social, material and spiritual practices through which people create senses of home that connect them with their country of origin, and reveals how home-making is constrained by immigration policies, insecure housing and precarious work, thus highlighting the barriers to belonging in the city.

The Road Before Me Weeps: On the Refugee Route Through Europe

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

By Nick Thorpe

Yale University Press, 344 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 0300241224, $26.11
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0300241224/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 7142 KB, ASIN: B07PBGDZBV, $24.80

Book Description: War and chaos in Syria and Iraq, violence in Afghanistan, and hopelessness in countries bordering war zones have spurred several million refugees and migrants to set out for Europe. The West Balkans, from Turkey through Greece, Macedonia, Bulgaria, Serbia, and Hungary, became the main entry route.

Based in Budapest for more than three decades, Nick Thorpe was perfectly placed to cover the birth of the route, its heyday, and the attempts of numerous states to close it. This is his intimate account of the daily lives of those stuck in razor-wire enclosures or on the move along forest tracks, railway lines, motorways—and of the smugglers, border police, and political leaders who help, exploit, or obstruct them. He challenges those who demonize or glorify migration, visits the arrivals in their new environment, and studies their impact on the countries which welcomed them with open arms or hesitation.

CIS Sues CBP for Release of Data

The Center for Immigration Studies seeks information on potential terrorists crossing U.S. borders

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (April 19, 2019) – The Center for Immigration Studies filed a lawsuit this week against U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia to compel the agency to comply with the Center's August 13, 2018, Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request. CBP failed to comply with the time limit set forth in federal statute with respect to the FOIA request for information that would allow the Center to assess the potential security threat at U.S. borders.

View the full complaint: https://cis.org/FOIA/CIS-Sues-CBP-Release-Data

The FOIA request seeks ten years of information pertaining to apprehensions by the Border Patrol of illegal immigrants from specific countries – those with noted terrorist activity – and encounters by CBP personnel at ports of entry of aliens from the same nations.

Todd Bensman, the Center's senior national security fellow, said, "The Center has brought this action against CBP in an effort to secure access to government data that will enable us to examine the level of the terrorism threat at our nation's borders. The extent of the movement of Special Interest Aliens (SIAs) from countries like Syria, Iraq, and Egypt is crucial to assessing terrorist potential. This endeavor is especially critical now with thousands of aliens crossing our borders, including what appears to be an increased number of SIAs."

What's Happening at the Center

In his latest analysis, Jason Richwine explains that neither economic theory nor evidence supports the idea of a "labor shortage". When employers complain of a "shortage", they really mean a shortage of people willing to work for the (low) wage that employers would like to pay. The percentage of working-age Americans in the labor force remains significantly below the level from the year 2000. Tight labor markets benefit marginalized groups and wages have been stagnant over the long term. The United States, with the world's largest economy and a population of 329 million people, has not run out of workers.

The Skill Level of the Average College Graduate Varies Enormously Across Countries

Educational credentials are not sufficient for selecting 'high-skill' immigrants

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (April 22, 2019) - A new Center for Immigration Studies analysis finds that higher levels of education among immigrants to the United States do not necessarily translate to higher levels of skill, as skill levels vary drastically by country of origin.

Jason Richwine, an independent policy analyst and author of the analysis, said, "When we look at test scores among college graduates, we see huge variations by country, with a lot of countries substantially underperforming the U.S. average. Given such disparate cross-country standards, educational credentials alone are probably not sufficient to determine which immigrants are 'high-skill'."

View the full analysis: https://cis.org/Richwine/Skill-Level-Average-College-Graduate-Varies-Enormously-Across-Countries

The test scores in the analysis come from the OECD's Program for the International Assessment of Adult Competencies (PIAAC), and examine the literacy, numeracy, an computer operations skills of people who live in other countries, immigrants excluded.

On all three tests, enormous variations were found by country. For example, with regard to numeracy, Japanese college graduates score better than 70 percent of American college graduates, but Italian graduates score better than just 34 percent of American college graduates. Given the magnitude of differences on display among people with supposedly equal levels of education, policymakers ought to consider more than educational attainment when assessing an immigrant's potential skill level.

UNHCR Corruption: Fraud in the Refugee Resettlement Selection Process

Bribery, not 'vulnerability', may be key to America for some

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (April 24, 2019) – A new analysis from the Center for Immigration Studies examines corruption in refugee resettlement at the UN refugee agency (UNHCR) and highlights the likely subjectivity of the agency's national staff when it comes to making resettlement referrals.

Nayla Rush, senior researcher at the Center and the author of the analysis, said, "The U.S. is entrusting local staff whom we know little about, from highly corrupt countries, to determine which refugees can settle in the U.S. and ultimately become Americans. Given such high stakes and reports of abuse, the government might want to reconsider the UNHCR's whole referral system."

View the full anaylsis: https://cis.org/Report/UNHCR-Corruption-Resettlement-Spots-Price

A recent NBC report found widespread allegations of fraud within UNHCR's resettlement program in five countries (Kenya, Uganda, Yemen, Ethiopia, and Libya), with bribery and corruption being common. For example, refugees claimed that resettlement at the UNHCR processing center in Uganda can be bought for between $268 and $938, or $5,000 for a family. Other refugees complained of stolen identities and case details, while some refugee women and girls claimed they were asked for sex in exchange for resettlement promises.

So far in FY 2019, the United States has resettled 2,756 refugees from the processing centers in those five countries. Do we know how many bribed themselves out of these hosting countries for a life in the United States?

Allegations of bribery and corruption were reported not just at UNHCR, but within "companion organizations" charged with providing services to refugees. These companion organizations could be the State Department-funded Resettlement Support Centers, that pre-screen refugees and help them build their cases to submit to U.S. officials for resettlement. A U.S. Government Accountability Office review of the U.S. Refugee Admission Program's screening process and vulnerability to fraud uncovered major concerns with RSC case preparations, including staff fraud.

If "vulnerability" is no longer the key to selecting refugees for resettlement, does that mean bribery is?

Workshop on Security, Borders and International Development: Intersections, Convergence and Challenges

Thursday-Friday, April 25-26, 2019

Coventry CV4 7AL, United Kingdom
https://www.law.ox.ac.uk/news/2018-05-22-cfp-workshop-security-borders-and-

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

international-development-intersections

Description: As an unprecedented number of people are on the move, international mobility has become one of the most important global challenges of our times. Mounting economic inequality, climate change, natural disasters, civil conflict and political instability, have triggered mass migration on a regional and global scale. This mobility has been increasingly framed as a security problem, linked to terrorism and organized crime, and managed through increasingly punitive and coercive measures, including through criminal justice practices and institutions, to identify, eject and repel irregular migrants and foreign convicts. The containment of migration is also taking place outside the territorial borders of the receiving state with increased border controls, processes and institutions established in migrant transit or home countries aimed at controlling emigration and enabling the repatriation and rehabilitation of foreigners.

This strategic shift towards externalizing border controls is blurring the boundaries between international development, humanitarian aid, and national migration and criminal justice policies. Global mobility has been framed as a development and humanitarian challenge and addressing the purported drivers of transnational migration – poverty, political conflict and instability, and human insecurity – has become a priority for humanitarian aid and international development cooperation. Measures to externalize border controls are increasingly being funded by official development assistance (ODA) and, in the process, reframing the tenets that underpin international development cooperation. Domestic security concerns have been progressively interwoven into the discourse, policy and practice Migrant Boat by Matt Brown 2 of international development to justify the growing proportion of ODA that is being routed towards border control and repatriation programmes.

This workshop aims to bring together scholars, non-governmental organisations, policy and lawmakers to map the novel interconnections between international development cooperation and the securitization of border controls, and to critically assess the legal, social, economic and political implications of this policy trend. The workshop will also facilitate a broader platform to chart emerging frontiers in criminal justice, migration and international development policy.

We welcome papers from socio-legal scholars and policymakers and practitioners, and invite contributors to address the linkages between the securitization of borders, humanitarianism and international development cooperation, with particular emphasis on the following, non-exhaustive, thematic areas:

* historical and contemporary perspectives of global security, aid and humanitarianism;

* comparative studies, including empirical studies, on the relationship between humanitarian aid, development cooperation and security sector reforms, in different geographical and political and economic constituencies;

* intersections between development cooperation, development finance and migration controls and criminal justice, including emerging policy trends from donor countries, multilateral institutions and recipient countries;

* the role of aid and international development in international relations, foreign policy and international law, including international economic law, international human rights law, international humanitarian law and international criminal law;

* linkages between security and justice programmes in developing countries and domestic security and migration policies of donor states;

* relationships between international economic law, migration and security policies;

* extraterritorial border controls, sovereignty and humanitarianism.

Do All High School Graduates Count? Unintended Consequences of State Accountability Policies for English Learner Students

1:00 p.m. ET, Monday, April 29, 2019 .

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

MPI Webinar
https://www.migrationpolicy.org/events/do-all-high-school-graduates-count-unintended-consequences-state-accountability-policies

Speakers:
Russell W. Rumberger, Professor, Gevirtz Graduate School of Education, UC Santa Barbara; Director, California Dropout Research Project

Julie Sugarman, Senior Policy Analyst for PreK-12 Education, Migration Policy Institute (MPI)

Moderator:
Margie McHugh, Director, National Center on Immigrant Integration Policy, MPI

Description: High school graduation is an important personal achievement as well as a key indicator of school system effectiveness and a community's potential economic vitality. For almost a decade, all U.S. states have used a common method to calculate the four-year graduation rate as part of their state school accountability system. This measure counts for a significant portion of a high school's performance rating, which can gain it public accolades or identify it as a school in need of improvement. Even as rates of on-time graduation have improved, English Learners (ELs) post far lower rates than the national average.

This webinar marks the release of a new Migration Policy Institute (MPI) report that investigates the unintended consequences of using the four-year graduation rate for school accountability. The report shows that ELs are more likely than other student subgroups to graduate in five or six years. However, most EL-serving high schools do not get credit for these graduates, as 60 percent of the nation's ELs are served in states that only count the four-year rate for accountability purposes. Attaching high stakes to the four-year rate may also result in perverse incentives not to welcome high school EL newcomers out of fear these students will be unable to complete a degree in four years and thereby pull down the school's performance rating. Schools may also mechanically redesign their instructional programs to "ensure" newcomers graduate in four years without evidence such a trajectory is possible or more educationally beneficial than a five- or six-year path.

Webinar participants will also discuss the implications of California's graduation rate policy choices. California does not use extended-year graduation rates for federal accountability, and—for state reporting—has recently adopted an alternative method for calculating graduation rates for continuation schools that serve older teenagers at significant risk of dropping out. Together, these policies may incentivize administrators to push ELs and other students who need more time to graduate out of traditional high schools and into alternative school settings. Speakers will also discuss policy options states can consider to broaden the definition of a successful high school by using multiple graduation rate indicators.

Lunchtime Keynote Address

Minister Alvarez is the leading negotiator and Mexico's contact point for all bilateral customs and fiscal-related issues and was one of the leading negotiators for the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA).In this keynote address, Minister Alvarez will discuss how Mexico deals with customs and border security and assess the coordination and cooperation between customs authorities in developing innovative trade facilitation initiatives. He will also address important topics of bilateral interest, such as the importance of trade between Mexico and the US and how the re-casting of NAFTA into the USMCA is benefiting Mexico and North American trade in general.

Congressional Panel

This year's Congressional agenda includes issues of great significance to the identity technology industry. Although it is still unclear what type of legislation, if any, will emerge, the current policy debates on technology, data security, and privacy will certainly be instrumental in shaping political and public opinion for the future about biometric technologies and, prominently, facial recognition. This session, comprised of four senior, knowledgeable, and effective staff representing both Democrats and Republicans and the Senate and House of Representatives, will provide an overview of what is happening and also their insights on developments on facial recognition, privacy, border security, aviation security, and the Department of Homeland Security.

What makes Americans act on behalf of refugees?

Speaker:
Claire Adida, Co-Driector, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
Associate Professor of Political Science, UC San Diego

Description: We investigate whether American citizens can be persuaded to adopt more inclusionary behavior toward refugees by using a minimally invasive online perspective-taking exercise frequently used by refugee advocates in the real world. Through the use of a randomized survey experiment on a representative sample of American citizens, we find that this short and interactive perspective-taking exercise can promote, in the short term, Americans' willingness to act on behalf of Syrian refugees, by writing anonymous letters of support to the White House. This effect, while driven primarily by self-identified Democrats, is also apparent among self-identified Republicans.

XCPD-700-01 - Global Trends in International Migration

Certificate in International Migration Studies

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

At the completion of the course, a successful student will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;

* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;

* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;

* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and

* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

Book talk on: "African Immigrant Families in the United States: Transnational Lives and Schooling"
by Serah Shani, Assistant Professor of Anthropology, Westmont University

Description of the Book: Sub-Saharan African immigrants are emerging as the new model minority in the United States, excelling in education and social mobility. In African Immigrant Families in the United States: Transnational Lives and Schooling, Serah Shani examines the socioeconomic and cultural mechanisms behind their high levels of success. Shani explores the dynamics of Ghanaian transnational immigrants' lives and portrays a complex relationship between class, context, beliefs, and cultural practices. This book is recommended for scholars of anthropology, sociology, education, and African studies.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

We're in Danger! Who Will Help Us? Refugees and Migrants: A Test of Civilization with author James Purcell.

While millions of people are displaced around the globe and thousands more contemplate dangerous journeys in search of a better life, We're in Danger! Who Will Help Us? draws on lessons from the "refugee decade" to inform responses to today's crises. During the 1980s, major humanitarian emergencies erupted throughout the world. Indochina was the first complex refugee crisis the global humanitarian community faced after World War II. The international community devised new and creative approaches, with victims of crises at the center of policy decision-making, toward humane and durable solutions. Knowledge gained from Indochina and simultaneous crises in other regions proved invaluable in addressing critical challenges in various parts of the world. Mr. Purcell shares his experiences leading the U.S. State Department's Bureau for Refugee Programs (now called Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration) and the International Organization for Migration (IOM) to call for multilateral approaches—incorporating refugee-decade lessons learned—to solve current and future humanitarian crises.

Canadian Immigration Summit 2019: Expanding Our Horizons

Wednesday-Thursday, May 8-9, 2019
The Shaw Centre
Ottawa, Ontario, Canada
https://www.conferenceboard.ca/conf/immigration/default.aspx

Summit Overview
Expanding Our Horizons
How can we plan for tomorrow, today?
The purpose of the 2019 Summit is to explore how Canada can respond proactively to emerging immigration issues in a rapidly changing world.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

We tend to dwell on the past to tackle today's challenges and anticipate the ones we will experience tomorrow. Moreover, we are often focused on the short-term, with too little of our time and energy devoted to thinking about how we can plan for the future. However, the world is not standing still, and Canada is no exception. Changes at home and abroad will disrupt Canada's future immigration system in ways we cannot currently fathom. For example, how many of us five years ago imagined that a wave of populism would take the world by storm?

The Summit will examine key drivers of economic, social, and technological change that could affect our immigration system. The goal is not to predict the future, but rather to assess various, plausible immigration scenarios and how Canada can benefit from the opportunities while mitigating the threats in support of a stronger, more vibrant country. Expert speakers will challenge us to expand our horizons by testing our underlying assumptions and getting us to think and plan beyond the short-term.
Join over 400 delegates to explore these key issues and more:

* Populism: What does Canada need to do to prevent the rise of anti-immigrant populism?

* Future skills and the changing nature of work: As the economy evolves, how can Canada refine its selection and settlement programs for tomorrow's labour market?

* Settlement and technology: How will technological innovations affect the way Canada delivers settlement services?

* Diversity in the workplace: How can employers become more inclusive as the Canadian labour force becomes more diverse?

* Intergovernmental collaboration: How can our immigration system accommodate the growing role of the provinces, territories, and municipalities?

* Refugee flows: With the global refugee population at an all-time high, what can Canada do to help?

* Pan-Canadian Framework for the Assessment and Recognition of Foreign Qualifications: What progress has been made since 2009 and how can we improve further over the next 10 years?

* Global supply of talent: How can Canada remain a destination of choice for immigrants and international students as other countries offer improved economic opportunity to their citizens and global talent?

Struggles to be able to stay in place: Salvadoran migration and collective action in times of violence

9500 Gilman Drive
La Jolla, CA 92093

Speaker:
Joseph Wiltberger, Visiting Scholar, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies, UC San Diego
Assistant Professor of Central American Studies, California State University, Northridge

Description: From the 1980-1992 civil war to the present, Salvadorans have endured and navigated various situations of violence and displacement in El Salvador and elsewhere as migrants. In this talk, I discuss how, in spite of such circumstances, Salvadorans work toward building possibilities to be able to stay in place. Based on my long-range ethnographic fieldwork in El Salvador and with Salvadoran migrants, I examine how mobility and collective action operate jointly as a key resource in these struggles.

Crossing the Race Line: Brexit, Citizenship and "Immigrants" in the Referendum

3:30-5:00 p.m., Thursday, May 23, 2019
Moore Hall 3340, UCLA Campus
Los Angeles, CA 90095-1487
http://www.international.ucla.edu/migration/event/13712

Description: In June 2016, a very clear majority of English voters chose to unilaterally take the "United Kingdom" out of the European Union. According to many of the post-Brexit vote analyses, the single strongest motivating factor driving this vote was "immigration" in the UK, an issue which had long been the central mobilising force of the United Kingdom Independence Party. I will focus on how – following the bitter demise of "multiculturalism" – these Brexit related developments may now signal the end of Britain's post-war settlement on immigration and race, the other parts of a progressive philosophy which had long marked out a proud British distinction from its neighbours. In successfully racialising, lumping together and re-labelling as "immigrants" three anomalous non-"immigrant" groups – EU citizens, British Muslims, and asylum seekers – Farage made explicit an insidious colonial re-casting of ideas of "national integration", emergent since the year 2000, that now even threatens the status of the most settled BAME populations (as has been seen in the Windrush scandal). Central to this has been the rejection of the post-national principle of non-discrimination by nationality, which had seen its fullest European expression in the UK during the 1990s and 2000s. The referendum on Brexit enabled an extraordinary "democratic" vote on the notion of "national" population and membership, in which "the people" might openly roll back the various diasporic, multi-national, cosmopolitan, or human rights-based conceptions of "global" society which had taken root during those decades.

Refugee Law Initiative 4th Annual Conference: Rethinking the 'Regional' in Refugee Law and Policy

9:00 a.m., Monday, June 2-2:00 p.m., Wednesday, June 5, 2019
Senate House, University of London
Malet St, London WC1E 7HU
United Kingdom
https://rli.sas.ac.uk/events/event/17422

Description: The RLI Annual Conference offers a dedicated annual forum internationally to share and debate the latest research and cutting-edge developments in refugee protection. This conference builds on the success of the previous annual conferences that united academics, practitioners, policy-makers and students in considering pressing challenges to refugee law.

This year's special theme – 'Rethinking the "Regional" in Refugee Law and Policy' – reflects on how a host of 'regional' questions loom large for refugee protection in 2019.

In Africa, the 50th anniversary of the 1969 African refugee convention raises real questions about its continuing role as the preeminent regional refugee treaty, even as the African Union declares 2019 the Year of Refugees in that region. In Europe, the future of the Common European Asylum System (CEAS) is furiously debated as fracture lines grow between European Union (EU) member States and in anticipation of Brexit. Meanwhile, large-scale refugee movements from Syria, Venezuela and Myanmar strain regional responses in the Middle East, Americas and Asia.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Against this backdrop, this year's special conference theme interrogates the role of regional refugee law and policy in light of refugee movements and shifting politics of today's world. It asks participants to reflect on the construction of both 'regions' and 'regional responses' to local and global refugee challenges and to rethink the changing role of both law and policy in these processes. To what extent can a 'regional' approach continue to be taken for granted in certain parts of the world and what potential exists for the emergence of new forms of non-global (State) cooperation based on other forms of identity in the response to refugees?

Alongside presentations from keynote speakers, several panel sessions will be devoted to this theme.

[Conference program to be available soon]

DHS Reports Slight Dip in Overstays in 2018

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (April 25, 2019) – New analysis from the Center for Immigration Studies of the Department of Homeland Security's annual visa overstay report shows a decline in the total number of air and sea travelers believed to have overstayed their authorized visit. Nevertheless, certain countries and categories remain a problem in terms of both the number of overstays and the poor rates of compliance.

View the full analysis: https://cis.org/Report/DHS-Reports-Slight-Dip-Overstays-2018

Jessica Vaughan, the Center's Director of Policy Studies and co-author of the report, said, "While the decline in total overstays is certainly positive, there is more that the Trump administration can do. It should complete the entry-exit system and curtail illegal employment, as well as expand the scope of the vetting travel ban to include more categories and countries, and impose consequences on organizations sponsoring visitors who do not comply with visas."

Key findings:

- DHS tallied 667,000 overstays in 2018, down about 5 percent from 2017.
- While the number of visa-waiver overstays came down by 29 percent, the number of regular visa shortterm visitor overstays was largely unchanged, and the number of overstays in the category including guestworkers went up by 25 percent.
- The number of overstays from India in the guestworker category more than doubled. Overstays in this category from Guatemala, China, and Jamaica also jumped significantly.
- The most notable improvement in visa waiver overstays was the decrease in the number from the United Kingdom, which fell by 45 percent.
- Overstays from air and sea arrivals from Canada and Mexico declined by 9 percent, mostly due to smaller overstays counted from Canadians.
- A large share of regular short-term visitor overstays come from just four countries: Brazil, Venezuela, Nigeria, and Colombia. Citizens of these countries make up more than 40 percent of all overstays in this category.
- A number of countries that are subject to the vetting travel ban have some of the worst visa compliance rates in several different categories.
- Additional steps can be taken by the Trump administration to reduce overstays, including adjusting visa issuance policies and imposing consequences on entities that sponsor non-compliant visitors.

What's Happening at the Center

In her latest report, Nayla Rush discusses recent corruption allegations in refugee processing centers in Kenya, Uganda, Yemen, Ethiopia, and Libya. According to Transparency International, these countries are among the most corrupt in the world, making the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) resettlement program in these places particularly susceptible to fraud. Nearly 80 percent of those who work at UNHCR processing centers are national staff and are often bribed by fellow countrymen seeking resettlement. Women and girls seeking resettlement are asked for sex. And refugees have complained of stolen identities and other forms of exploitation. UNHCR companion organizations, known as Resettlement Support Centers, have also been accused of fraud. As Rush points out, vulnerability is no longer the key to the selection process. Given these problems, and given that 2,756 refugees have been resettled in the United States from these processing centers so far in FY 2019, the United States should reconsider the whole resettlement referral system in place by the United Nations.

What Makes Americans Act on Behalf of Refugees?

12:00-1:30 p.m. PDT, Tuesday, May 1, 2019
ERC Conference Room 115
The Center for Comparative Immigration Studies, UC San Diego
9500 Gilman Drive
La Jolla, CA 92093
https://ccis.ucsd.edu/events/Seminars.html

Speaker:
Claire Adida, Co-Driector, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
Associate Professor of Political Science, UC San Diego

Description: We investigate whether American citizens can be persuaded to adopt more inclusionary behavior toward refugees by using a minimally invasive online perspective-taking exercise frequently used by refugee advocates in the real world. Through the use of a randomized survey experiment on a representative sample of American citizens, we find that this short and interactive perspective-taking exercise can promote, in the short term, Americans' willingness to act on behalf of Syrian refugees, by writing anonymous letters of support to the White House. This effect, while driven primarily by self-identified Democrats, is also apparent among self-identified Republicans.

XCPD-700-01 - Global Trends in International Migration

Certificate in International Migration Studies

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, a successful student will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;

* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;

* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and

* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

Speakers:
James Purcell, Chairman, USA for IOM

Erol Yayboke, Deputy Director and Senior Fellow, Project on Prosperity and Development, Project on U.S. Leadership in Development

Description: CSIS and USA for IOM cordially invite you to a book launch of We're in Danger! Who Will Help Us? Refugees and Migrants: A Test of Civilization with author James Purcell.

While millions of people are displaced around the globe and thousands more contemplate dangerous journeys in search of a better life, We're in Danger! Who Will Help Us? draws on lessons from the "refugee decade" to inform responses to today's crises. During the 1980s, major humanitarian emergencies erupted throughout the world. Indochina was the first complex refugee crisis the global humanitarian community faced after World War II. The international community devised new and creative approaches, with victims of crises at the center of policy decision-making, toward humane and durable solutions. Knowledge gained from Indochina and simultaneous crises in other regions proved invaluable in addressing critical challenges in various parts of the world. Mr. Purcell shares his experiences leading the U.S. State Department's Bureau for Refugee Programs (now called Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration) and the International Organization for Migration (IOM) to call for multilateral approaches—incorporating refugee-decade lessons learned—to solve current and future humanitarian crises.

The Consequences of Cutting U.S. Aid to the Northern Triangle

9:00-11:00 a.m., Thursday, May 9, 2019
Center for Strategic and International Studies, 2nd floor
1616 Rhode Island Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20036
https://www.csis.org/events/consequences-cutting-us-aid-northern-triangle

Description: Please join CSIS Americas and the CSIS Project for Prosperity

and Development for a public event on the critical nature of U.S. foreign assistance to the Northern Triangle and the security, socio-economic, and migratory consequences of recent changes in U.S. policy toward the region.

On Friday, March 29, President Trump stated that his administration was cutting off federal funding to the Northern Triangle countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras. A day later, the State Department announced that the cutoff not only affected future grants, but also ended spending in the Northern Triangle countries on programs funded with FY2017 and FY2018 appropriations, as well as funds recently approved in the Omnibus Appropriations bill for FY2019. In total, more than an estimated $1 billion could be affected. This policy change would not only impact political stability and economic opportunities in those countries, and therefore the push factors affecting migration, but will also likely have additional consequences unexpected by the Administration, which will reverberate throughout the entire region.

During this public event, we will be joined by a panel of experts from the Northern Triangle and U.S. government, business, and civil society communities to discuss what those potential consequences will be. Mark Schneider, Former USAID Deputy Administrator and CSIS Senior Adviser, will moderate the panel.

Additional congressional speakers to be confirmed shortly.

Speaker:
Joseph Wiltberger, Visiting Scholar, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies, UC San Diego
Assistant Professor of Central American Studies, California State University, Northridge

Description: From the 1980-1992 civil war to the present, Salvadorans have endured and navigated various situations of violence and displacement in El Salvador and elsewhere as migrants. In this talk, I discuss how, in spite of such circumstances, Salvadorans work toward building possibilities to be able to stay in place. Based on my long-range ethnographic fieldwork in El Salvador and with Salvadoran migrants, I examine how mobility and collective action operate jointly as a key resource in these struggles.

Immigration Enforcement at the Border

Sunday-Sunday, May 19-26, 2019–26, 2019
Co-sponsored by the Maurice A. Deane School of Law
Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
University of California, San Diego
https://law.hofstra.edu/currentstudents/academics/summerprograms/borderenforcement/index.html

Course Description:
Instructor: Professor Kit Johnson

This course analyzes the ways in which federal immigration officers enforce immigration laws at the border and the various legal, political, human and moral issues that they raise.
The course examines, among other areas, the relevant provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act; The Secure Fence Act of 2006; federal programs and policies, such as the Secure Border Initiative, Operation Streamline and Operation Stonegarden; Fourth Amendment search and seizure cases; and cases and controversies regarding the increasing movement of the borders inward.

Through the study of these laws and relevant cases, the course considers how enforcement of immigration law at the border has led to significant tensions between immigration officers' authority to guard the border on sovereignty and security grounds and the rights of individuals to, among other things, privacy and equal protection under the law.

Crossing the Race Line: Brexit, Citizenship and "Immigrants" in the Referendum

3:30-5:00 p.m., Thursday, May 23, 2019
Moore Hall 3340, UCLA Campus
Los Angeles, CA 90095-1487
http://www.international.ucla.edu/migration/event/13712

Description: In June 2016, a very clear majority of English voters chose to unilaterally take the "United Kingdom" out of the European Union. According to many of the post-Brexit vote analyses, the single strongest motivating factor driving this vote was "immigration" in the UK, an issue which had long been the central mobilising force of the United Kingdom Independence Party. I will focus on how – following the bitter demise of "multiculturalism" – these Brexit related developments may now signal the end of Britain's post-war settlement on immigration and race, the other parts of a progressive philosophy which had long marked out a proud British distinction from its neighbours. In successfully racialising, lumping together and re-labelling as "immigrants" three anomalous non-"immigrant" groups – EU citizens, British Muslims, and asylum seekers – Farage made explicit an insidious colonial re-casting of ideas of "national integration", emergent since the year 2000, that now even threatens the status of the most settled BAME populations (as has been seen in the Windrush scandal). Central to this has been the rejection of the post-national principle of non-discrimination by nationality, which had seen its fullest European expression in the UK during the 1990s and 2000s. The referendum on Brexit enabled an extraordinary "democratic" vote on the notion of "national" population and membership, in which "the people" might openly roll back the various diasporic, multi-national, cosmopolitan, or human rights-based conceptions of "global" society which had taken root during those decades.

Refugee Law Initiative 4th Annual Conference: Rethinking the 'Regional' in Refugee Law and Policy

9:00 a.m., Monday, June 2-2:00 p.m., Wednesday, June 5, 2019
Senate House, University of London
Malet St, London WC1E 7HU
United Kingdom
https://rli.sas.ac.uk/events/event/17422

Description: The RLI Annual Conference offers a dedicated annual forum internationally to share and debate the latest research and cutting-edge developments in refugee protection. This conference builds on the success of the previous annual conferences that united academics, practitioners, policy-makers and students in considering pressing challenges to refugee law.

This year's special theme – 'Rethinking the "Regional" in Refugee Law and Policy' – reflects on how a host of 'regional' questions loom large for refugee protection in 2019.

In Africa, the 50th anniversary of the 1969 African refugee convention raises real questions about its continuing role as the preeminent regional refugee treaty, even as the African Union declares 2019 the Year of Refugees in that region. In Europe, the future of the Common European Asylum System (CEAS) is furiously debated as fracture lines grow between European Union (EU) member States and in anticipation of Brexit. Meanwhile, large-scale refugee movements from Syria, Venezuela and Myanmar strain regional responses in the Middle East, Americas and Asia.

Against this backdrop, this year's special conference theme interrogates the role of regional refugee law and policy in light of refugee movements and shifting politics of today's world. It asks participants to reflect on the construction of both 'regions' and 'regional responses' to local and global refugee challenges and to rethink the changing role of both law and policy in these processes. To what extent can a 'regional' approach continue to be taken for granted in certain parts of the world and what potential exists for the emergence of new forms of non-global (State) cooperation based on other forms of identity in the response to refugees?

Alongside presentations from keynote speakers, several panel sessions will be devoted to this theme.

[Conference program to be available soon]

16th International Migration Law Course

8:00 a.m, Tuesday, June 4-12:30 p.m., Saturday, June 8, 2019
International Institute of Humanitarian Law
Corso Felice Cavallotti
18038 Sanremo IM
Italy
http://iihl.org/event/international-migration-law-course-english-3/

Description: The Course is organised by the International Migration Law and Legal Affairs Department (IML) of the International Organization for Migration (IOM), in cooperation with the International Institute of Humanitarian Law (IIHL). The five-day Course on International Migration Law (IML) is designed for government officials, academia, representatives of international and non-governmental organizations, as well as members of the civil society. It will focus on the international legal framework governing migration, including the rights and responsibilities of States and migrants. The key objective of this Course is to raise the awareness of government officials and those working in the migration context of the importance of international legal instruments in the management of migration.

Department of Commerce v. New York
In the Supreme Court of the United States, No. 18-966
Argued: April 23, 2019
https://www.scotusblog.com/case-files/cases/department-of-commerce-v-new-york/

Issues: (1) Whether the district court erred in enjoining the secretary of the Department of Commerce from reinstating a question about citizenship to the 2020 decennial census on the ground that the secretary's decision violated the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. 701 et seq; (2) whether, in an action seeking to set aside agency action under the APA, a district court may order discovery outside the administrative record to probe the mental processes of the agency decisionmaker -- including by compelling the testimony of high-ranking executive branch officials -- without a strong showing that the decisionmaker disbelieved the objective reasons in the administrative record, irreversibly prejudged the issue, or acted on a legally forbidden basis; and (3) whether the secretary's decision to add a citizenship question to the decennial census violated the enumeration clause of the U.S. Constitution.

Rehaif v. United States
In the Supreme Court of the United States, Docket No. 17-9560
Argued: April 23, 2019
https://www.scotusblog.com/case-files/cases/rehaif-v-united-states/?wpmp_switcher=desktop

Issues: Whether the "knowingly" provision of 18 U.S.C. §924(a)(2) applies to both the possession and status elements of a §922(g) crime, or whether it applies only to the possession element.

Barton v. Barr
In the Supreme Court of the United States, No. 18-725
Argued: TBD
https://www.scotusblog.com/case-files/cases/barton-v-barr/

Issue: Whether a lawfully admitted permanent resident who is not seeking admission to the United States can be "render[ed] ... inadmissible" for the purposes of the stop-time rule, 8 U.S.C. §1229b(d)(1).

Study: Immigrant Entrepreneurs as Job Creators: The Case of Canadian Private Incorporated Companies

Statistics Canada, April 24, 2019

https://www150.statcan.gc.ca/n1/en/daily-quotidien/190424/dq190424c-eng.pdf?st=2l_kIcGH

Excerpt: During the 2003-to-2013 period studied, firms owned by immigrants accounted for a disproportionate share of net job creation. They accounted for 25% of net jobs created by private incorporated firms, while representing 17% of firms. Immigrant-owned private incorporated companies were also 1.3 times as likely to be high-growth firms (with annual employment growth exceeding 20%) than were those owned by the Canadian-born.

The study shows that the relatively larger contribution of immigrant-owned firms to net job creation and the greater tendency to be a high-growth firm, were primarily due to the age of the firm. More than three-quarters of the immigrant-owned firms were less than 10 years old (81%), compared with 53% of Canadian-born-owned firms. Earlier research has shown that younger firms grow faster and create jobs at a higher rate than older firms. When adjustments were made to account for differences in firm age and other firm characteristics, the gap between immigrant-owned firms and Canadian-born-owned firms narrowed substantially.

Population up by over 24 thousand in Q1

Statistics Netherlands, April 30, 2019

https://www.cbs.nl/en-gb/news/2019/18/population-up-by-over-24-thousand-in-q1

Excerpt: In the first three months of 2019, over 61 thousand immigrants registered with a Dutch municipality. Around 36 thousand people left the country. As a result, 25 thousand new Dutch inhabitants were added on balance due to external migration. Total population growth was slightly lower as the number of deaths (nearly 41 thousand) exceeded the number of births (nearly 40 thousand) by over 770. There was a greater difference in the same period last year: almost 46 thousand people passed away in Q1 while the number of live births was approximately the same as this year.

More immigrants

In Q1 2019, the population increase as a result of external migration was nearly 6.5 thousand higher than in Q1 2018, on balance. The number of immigrants was up by more than 7.5 thousand while emigration increased less rapidly: by over one thousand.

Fewer asylum seekers and following relatives in Q1

https://www.cbs.nl/en-gb/news/2019/18/fewer-asylum-seekers-and-following-relatives-in-q1

Summary: In Q1 2019, the Netherlands received 5,405 asylum seekers and 840 following family members. Both numbers were lower than in the preceding quarter. Statistics Netherlands (CBS) reports this based on new figures from the Dutch Immigration and Naturalisation Service (IND).

The number of first asylum requests was down by more than 400 relative to Q4 2018, but up by 1,250 relative to Q1 2018. The number of following family members has dropped for the fifth consecutive quarter.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

EN.pdf/291c8e87-45b5-4108-920d-7d702c1d6990

Summary: In 2018, 19,700 asylum seekers applying for international protection in the Member States of the European Union (EU) were considered to be unaccompanied minors. This is down by more than one third compared with 2017 (31,400) and below the 2014 level (23,100), when the first increase was observed after remaining at a relatively constant level of around 12,000 per year between 2008 and 2013. In 2018, at the EU level, unaccompanied minors accounted for 10% of all asylum applicants aged less than 18.

In 2018, a majority of unaccompanied minors were males (86%). Three quarters were aged 16 to 17 (14,800 persons), while those aged 14 to 15 accounted for 17% (3,400 persons) and those aged less than 14 for 7% (1,400 persons). Over half of asylum applicants considered to be unaccompanied minors in the EU in 2018 were the citizens of six countries: Afghanistan (16%), Eritrea (10%), Pakistan or Syria (both 7%) and Guinea or Iraq (both 6%).

Summary: The 28 Member States of the European Union (EU) granted protection status to nearly 333,400 asylum seekers in 2018, down by almost 40% from 2017 (533,000). In addition to these, the EU Member States received over 24,800 resettled refugees.

The largest group of beneficiaries of protection status in the EU in 2018 remained citizens of Syria (96,100 persons, or 29% of the total number of persons granted protection status in the EU Member States), followed by citizens of Afghanistan (53,500 or 16%) and those of Iraq (24 600 or 7%), as compared with 2017 when 172,900 or 32% of asylum seekers granted protection were Syrians, 99,800 or 19% were Afghanis and 63,800 or 12% were Iraqis.

Population size and growth

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Excerpt: Stimulated by the gold rushes of the 1800s, Australia's population was recorded as being almost four million in 1901. For the first part of the 20th century, natural increase was the main contributor to population growth, as better living conditions saw births outnumber deaths. Following World War II, the total fertility rate grew and Australia actively embarked on an immigration program to boost the population. Fertility declined in the 1970s, and with a slowdown in migration in the 1990s, population growth rates were lower in the last ten years of the century compared to post-war decades. From 2001 to 2016, Australia's population increased by just over 25% to reach 24 million in 2016. Overseas migration is now the main driver of Australia's population growth, accounting for just over 55% of Australia's population increase since 2001.

Americans Say Government, Immigration Are Lead U.S. Woes

By Lydia Saad

Gallup.com, April 24, 2019

https://news.gallup.com/poll/249092/americans-say-government-immigration-lead-woes.aspx

Excerpt: Immigration Has Become a Steady Concern

Immigration is currently near the high point of its historical mentions in Gallup's trend -- the peak was 22% recorded last July, when separation of migrant families at the Southern U.S. border was making news. Mentions of immigration had started exceeding 10% routinely a few months earlier, in February 2018, but have averaged 17% since last August. By contrast, from 2001 through 2017, immigration mentions averaged about 5%.

At 23%, current mentions of government are down slightly from the 35% high mark recorded this past February, measured shortly after the conclusion of the longest government shutdown on record. Mentions of government have averaged 22% since President Donald Trump took office, versus 12% during the

12 months before that. Longer term, government has routinely been cited by more than 10% of Americans as the leading problem since President Barack Obama took office in 2009, including a surge to 33% during a government shutdown in 2013.

Migration and Xenophobia: A Three Country Exploration
By Kyle Farmbry

Lexington Books, 236 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1498553354, $95.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1498553354/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1180 KB, ASIN: B07QH8JHGX, $90.00

Book Description: Migration and Xenophobia: A Three Country Exploration examines issues of migration and xenophobia using the experiences of three nations: the United States, South Africa, and Malta. Through the cases, Kyle Farmbry builds a larger dialogue examining issues related to patterns of movement and the xenophobic realities encountered with such migrations. The book builds upon projections from the United Nations, the World Bank, and the International Organization for Migration that say the world will experience a continued wave of movement between people and place for the foreseeable future are true, then the lessons from the nations examined here have implications for a broader set of realities related to migration. The experiences of these nations represent a microcosm of what is happening globally in relation to nation-based questions on the migration realities of the early twenty-first century.

Racial Migrations: New York City and the Revolutionary Politics of the Spanish Caribbean

By Jesse Hoffnung-Garskof

Princeton University Press, 408 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 0691183538, $35.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0691183538/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 11819 KB, ASIN: B07KBGCL9V, $19.25

Book Description: In the late nineteenth century, a small group of Cubans and Puerto Ricans of African descent settled in the segregated tenements of New York City. At an immigrant educational society in Greenwich Village, these early Afro-Latino New Yorkers taught themselves to be poets, journalists, and revolutionaries. At the same time, these individuals?including Rafael Serra, a cigar maker, writer, and politician; Sotero Figueroa, a typesetter, editor, and publisher; and Gertrudis Heredia, one of the first women of African descent to study midwifery at the University of Havana?built a political network and articulated an ideal of revolutionary nationalism centered on the projects of racial and social justice. These efforts were critical to the poet and diplomat José Martí's writings about race and his bid for leadership among Cuban exiles, and to the later struggle to create space for black political participation in the Cuban Republic.

In Racial Migrations, Jesse Hoffnung-Garskof presents a vivid portrait of these largely forgotten migrant revolutionaries, weaving together their experiences of migrating while black, their relationships with African American civil rights leaders, and their evolving participation in nationalist political movements. By placing Afro-Latino New Yorkers at the center of the story, Hoffnung-Garskof offers a new interpretation of the revolutionary politics of the Spanish Caribbean, including the idea that Cuba could become a nation without racial divisions.

A model of transnational and comparative research, Racial Migrations reveals the complexities of race-making within migrant communities and the power of small groups of immigrants to transform their home societies.

Human Geopolitics: States, Emigrants, and the Rise of Diaspora Institutions
By Alan Gamlen

Oxford University Press, 352 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 0198833490, $90.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0198833490/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 21351 KB, ASIN: B07QVYPXMF, $85.50

Book Description: Human geopolitics, the competition for population rather than territory, is an essential but weakly understood dimension of world politics today. Such competition has preceded violent conflict throughout history, but has been muted since the Treaties of Westphalia laid the territorial foundations of the modern international system in the mid-seventeenth century. Today, however, human geopolitics is being resurrected in unanticipated ways, as governments are enabled and encouraged to engage their emigrant diasporas.

How and why is this happening? Until now these questions have been difficult to answer. The majority of research attention has focused on questions of immigration policy in a handful of wealthy migrant destination countries, largely ignoring the emigration policies that preoccupy the world's many migrant origin states. This book addresses that research imbalance, by focusing on the overlooked sending side of migration policy.

Drawing on data covering all UN members across the post-WWII period, and fieldwork with high-level policy makers across 60 states and a dozen international organisations, the book charts the re-emergence of human geopolitics through the global spread of diaspora institutions â government ministries and offices dedicated to emigrants and their descendants. It calls for the development of stronger guiding principles and evaluation frameworks to govern these new state-diaspora relations in an era of unprecedented global interdependence.

Putting Family First: Migration and Integration in Canada
Edited by Harald Bauder

UBC Press, 288 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 0774861266, $89.95
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0774861266/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1213 KB, ASIN: B07RB2M7ZY, $23.25

Book Description: When migrants reach their new home, we often interpret their settlement and integration as an individual process driven largely by the labour market. But family plays a crucial role. Putting Family First investigates the experience of immigrant families settling in Greater Toronto, from newcomers' initial reception to their deep involvement in and attachment to their receiving society. Contributors explore such themes as the policy environment, children and youth, gender, labour markets and work, and community supports in order to illustrate how the family context can be mobilized to facilitate the successful integration of newcomers.

Refugees and Forced Migration in the Horn and Eastern Africa: Trends, Challenges and Opportunities
Edited by Johannes Dragsbaek Schmidt, Leah Kimathi, and Michael Omondi Owiso

Springer, 308 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 3030037207, $119.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/3030037207/centerforimmigra

Book Description: This volume sheds new light on the refugees and forced migration at the Horn of Africa and East Africa. Adopting a multidisciplinary perspective, it traces historical, structural, and geopolitical factors to reveal the often brutal uprooting of people in a region that hosts more than three million refugees and almost six million internally displaced persons (IDPs). By doing so, it enriches our understanding of the socio-economic, geopolitical and humanitarian causes and implications of migration and population displacement.

The book is divided into five parts, focusing on different drivers of involuntary displacement and people's uprooting: The first part covers geopolitical conflicts rooted partly in the colonial and Cold War geographies. The second part then focuses on security aspects and conflicts, while the third looks at encampment and refugee policies as well as refugee agencies. Part four highlights issues of forced repatriation and human trafficking. Lastly, part five analyzes the dynamics of refugee camps.

No Friend but the Mountains: The True Story of an Illegally Imprisoned Refugee
By Behrouz Boochani

Picador, 416 pp.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Paperback, ISBN: 1529028485, $12.90
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1529028485/centerforimmigra

Book Description: In 2013, Kurdish journalist Behrouz Boochani sought asylum in Australia but was instead illegally imprisoned in the country's most notorious detention centre on Manus Island. He has been there ever since. This book is the result.

Behrouz Boochani spent nearly five years typing passages of this book one text at a time from a secret mobile phone in prison. Compiled and translated from Farsi, they form an incredible story of how escaping political persecution in Iran, he ended up trapped as a stateless person. This vivid, gripping portrait of his years of incarceration and exile shines devastating light on the fates of so many people as borders close around the world.

No Friend but the Mountains is both a brave act of witness and a moving testament to the humanity of all people, in the most extreme of circumstances.

U.S. Workers Replaced by H-1B Program Speak Out

Eleven Americans explain how Big Tech's cheap foreign labor cost them their

livelihoods

Washington, D.C. (May 6, 2019) – As the White House reportedly prepares to push for increases in employment green cards and temporary visas, a new report from the Center for Immigration Studies highlights the stories of displaced US tech workers who have begged for lawmakers to listen to their disheartening stories of discrimination, wage suppression, and displacement from careers.

Matt Sussis, the Center's Assistant Director of Communications and author of the report, said, "Big Tech lobbyists claim that there is a labor shortage of qualified American STEM workers. Our analysis finds that this is completely false and is backed up by American tech workers who have been fired from their careers, humiliated by their employers, and forced to train their unqualified H-1B guest-worker replacements."

View the full report: https://cis.org/Report/Untold-Stories-American-Workers-Replaced-H1B-Visa-Program

Key takeaways:

- There is no shortage of qualified American STEM workers – most Americans with STEM degrees work in other industries, and American graduates outperform foreign-educated immigrants when tested on a range of skills.
- The H-1B program has transformed over time from a means to supplement the American tech workforce to a means of cheaply replacing it.
- Americans who are replaced by H-1B guestworkers are often forced to train their replacements or risk losing their severance payments.
- Foreign STEM workers often have far fewer specialized skills than they claim.
- President Trump and members of Congress ought to meet with laid off American STEM workers in order to hear their stories.

The report highlights stories from eleven tech workers who have been replaced by the H-1B visa program. Below are several notable quotes from these workers' stories:

- "I'm the mother of two beautiful girls, and I don't want them going into technology because there is no future for them. We have been taken over and sold out for cheap foreign labor."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- "I was trying to find medical insurance for my handicapped daughter while being forced to train my replacement."
- "The notion that these visa holders are specialized is a complete sham. They come out of sham universities in Bangalore with no specializations whatsoever."
- "99% of people with H-visas are totally under-qualified...There are millions of Americans who could do this work."
- "At first, foreign labor was used to complement U.S. workers. They performed on the off-hours. Then they brought in the next wave of workers, but this time it was to replace us."
- "We need to meet with Trump so he can tell us the truth. He meets with everybody else, so why not with STEM workers?"

What's Happening at the Center

Immigration reporting tends to rely heavily on stories — stories about illegal immigrant families looking to be reunited, about TPS recipients facing potential deportation, or about legal immigrants working their way toward citizenship. The story of Americans replaced by cheap foreign labor is heard far less often. In his new report, Matt Sussis shares stories from eleven Americans who were replaced by H-1B visas, and how Big Tech's decision to push Americans out of STEM has cost them their livelihoods.

Migration and Distributive Politics in the European Union

European Union Study Group

2:30-4:00 p.m., May 8, 2019
Hoffmann Room, Adolphus Busch Hall
27 Kirkland Street at Cabot Way
Cambridge, MA 02138
https://ces.fas.harvard.edu/events/2019/05/migration-and-distributive-politics-in-the-european-union-1

Speaker:
Merih Angin
Postdoctoral Fellow, Weatherhead Scholars Program, Harvard University

Discussant:
Hernan del Valle
Rita E. Hauser Fellow, Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study, Harvard University

Description: Migration has become a top policy priority of the European Union (EU) in the wake of the recent migrant crisis. Given the significant economic, political, and social ramifications of immigration from outside Europe for its member states, the EU has implemented a variety of policies to minimize popular backlashes within the borders of its wealthiest member states.

In her research, Merih Angin shows that the EU offers fiscal transfers to its migrant-transit member states in exchange for holding non-EU migrants in the European periphery.

Hernan del Valle has led humanitarian aid operations for the past 15 years. His work has taken him across five continents assisting people affected by armed conflict and forced displacement. He was involved in Médecins Sans Frontières (MSF) operations in the Mediterranean Sea, which over the past three years rescued tens of thousands of refugees and migrants fleeing Libya toward Europe in fragile boats.

The Consequences of Cutting U.S. Aid to the Northern Triangle

9:00-11:00 a.m., Thursday, May 9, 2019
Center for Strategic and International Studies, 2nd floor
1616 Rhode Island Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20036
https://www.csis.org/events/consequences-cutting-us-aid-northern-triangle

Description: Please join CSIS Americas and the CSIS Project for Prosperity and Development for a public event on the critical nature of U.S. foreign assistance to the Northern Triangle and the security, socio-economic, and migratory consequences of recent changes in U.S. policy toward the region.

On Friday, March 29, President Trump stated that his administration was cutting off federal funding to the Northern Triangle countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras. A day later, the State Department announced that the cutoff not only affected future grants, but also ended spending in the Northern Triangle countries on programs funded with FY2017 and FY2018 appropriations, as well as funds recently approved in the Omnibus Appropriations bill for FY2019. In total, more than an estimated $1 billion could be affected. This policy change would not only impact political stability and economic opportunities in those countries, and therefore the push factors affecting migration, but will also likely have additional consequences unexpected by the Administration, which will reverberate throughout the entire region.

During this public event, we will be joined by a panel of experts from the Northern Triangle and U.S. government, business, and civil society communities to discuss what those potential consequences will be. Mark Schneider, Former USAID Deputy Administrator and CSIS Senior Adviser, will moderate the panel.

Additional congressional speakers to be confirmed shortly.

Struggles to be able to stay in place: Salvadoran migration and collective action in times of violence

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

La Jolla, CA 92093

Speaker:
Joseph Wiltberger, Visiting Scholar, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies, UC San Diego
Assistant Professor of Central American Studies, California State University, Northridge

Description: From the 1980-1992 civil war to the present, Salvadorans have endured and navigated various situations of violence and displacement in El Salvador and elsewhere as migrants. In this talk, I discuss how, in spite of such circumstances, Salvadorans work toward building possibilities to be able to stay in place. Based on my long-range ethnographic fieldwork in El Salvador and with Salvadoran migrants, I examine how mobility and collective action operate jointly as a key resource in these struggles.

Immigration Enforcement at the Border

Sunday-Sunday, May 19-26, 2019
Co-sponsored by the Maurice A. Deane School of Law
Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
University of California, San Diego
https://law.hofstra.edu/currentstudents/academics/summerprograms/borderenforcement/index.html

Course Description:
Instructor: Professor Kit Johnson

This course analyzes the ways in which federal immigration officers enforce immigration laws at the border and the various legal, political, human and moral issues that they raise.

The course examines, among other areas, the relevant provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act; The Secure Fence Act of 2006; federal programs and policies, such as the Secure Border Initiative, Operation Streamline and Operation Stonegarden; Fourth Amendment search and seizure cases; and cases and controversies regarding the increasing movement of the borders inward.

Through the study of these laws and relevant cases, the course considers how enforcement of immigration law at the border has led to significant tensions between immigration officers' authority to guard the border on sovereignty and security grounds and the rights of individuals to, among other things, privacy and equal protection under the law.

Collaborating For Success: Refugee Training Programs Built with Industry Insights

10:00 a.m., Thursday, May 23, 2019
Cities of Migration Webinar
https://www.eventbrite.com/e/webinar-collaborating-for-success-refugee-training-programs-built-with-industry-insights-tickets-61234289408

Description: While employment is the primary indicator for economic inclusion, ultimately, employment fosters long-term integration in the broader receiving community. Through employment, refugees begin to develop important relationships with colleagues, build their soft skills and cultural knowledge through daily interactions and acquire the financial resources necessary to participate in the community outside of work. Despite the pivotal role employment plays in integration, employers and industry are often excluded from refugee program development.

The role of employers and industry is critical to ensure refugee employment programs are training refugees for available employment opportunities and the skills they develop meet the needs of industry. In our upcoming webinar, we will explore two exceptional examples of program development that captures the needs of both refugees and industry alike to create pathways to employment.

Join us on May 23, 2019, to learn about two refugee training programs that were built with industry to ensure seamless transition from training to employment. From New York City, Edric Huang will share the Emma's Torch initiative launched in June 2016 to support refugee employment through a culinary training and licensing program. From Toronto, Merissa Preston will present the refugee training program focused on creating a talent pipeline to fill trade-related occupations.
In this webinar, you will learn about:

* Developing partnerships with industry to ensure training programs match industry needs
* Creating training programs that are practical and prepare refugees for the labour market
* Lessons learned and strategies for overcoming barriers as a training facilitator and organization

Merissa Preston, Partnership and Business Development, LiUNA! Local 506

Crossing the Race Line: Brexit, Citizenship and "Immigrants" in the Referendum

3:30-5:00 p.m., Thursday, May 23, 2019
Moore Hall 3340, UCLA Campus
Los Angeles, CA 90095-1487
http://www.international.ucla.edu/migration/event/13712

Description: In June 2016, a very clear majority of English voters chose to unilaterally take the "United Kingdom" out of the European Union. According to many of the post-Brexit vote analyses, the single strongest motivating factor driving this vote was "immigration" in the UK, an issue which had long been the central mobilising force of the United Kingdom Independence Party. I will focus on how – following the bitter demise of "multiculturalism" – these Brexit related developments may now signal the end of Britain's post-war settlement on immigration and race, the other parts of a progressive philosophy which had long marked out a proud British distinction from its neighbours. In successfully racialising, lumping together and re-labelling as "immigrants" three anomalous non-"immigrant" groups – EU citizens, British Muslims, and asylum seekers – Farage made explicit an insidious colonial re-casting of ideas of "national integration", emergent since the year 2000, that now even threatens the status of the most settled BAME populations (as has been seen in the Windrush scandal). Central to this has been the rejection of the post-national principle of non-discrimination by nationality, which had seen its fullest European expression in the UK during the 1990s and 2000s. The referendum on Brexit enabled an extraordinary "democratic" vote on the notion of "national" population and membership, in which "the people" might openly roll back the various diasporic, multi-national, cosmopolitan, or human rights-based conceptions of "global" society which had taken root during those decades.

Refugee Law Initiative 4th Annual Conference: Rethinking the 'Regional' in Refugee Law and Policy

9:00 a.m., Monday, June 2-2:00 p.m., Wednesday, June 5, 2019
Senate House, University of London
Malet St, London WC1E 7HU
United Kingdom
https://rli.sas.ac.uk/events/event/17422

Description: The RLI Annual Conference offers a dedicated annual forum internationally to share and debate the latest research and cutting-edge developments in refugee protection. This conference builds on the success of the previous annual conferences that united academics, practitioners, policy-makers and students in considering pressing challenges to refugee law.

This year's special theme – 'Rethinking the "Regional" in Refugee Law and Policy' – reflects on how a host of 'regional' questions loom large for refugee protection in 2019.

In Africa, the 50th anniversary of the 1969 African refugee convention raises real questions about its continuing role as the preeminent regional refugee treaty, even as the African Union declares 2019 the Year of Refugees in that region. In Europe, the future of the Common European Asylum System (CEAS) is furiously debated as fracture lines grow between European Union (EU) member States and in anticipation of Brexit. Meanwhile, large-scale refugee movements from Syria, Venezuela and Myanmar strain regional responses in the Middle East, Americas and Asia.

Against this backdrop, this year's special conference theme interrogates the role of regional refugee law and policy in light of refugee movements and shifting politics of today's world. It asks participants to reflect on the construction of both 'regions' and 'regional responses' to local and global refugee challenges and to rethink the changing role of both law and policy in these processes. To what extent can a 'regional' approach continue to be taken for granted in certain parts of the world and what potential exists for the emergence of new forms of non-global (State) cooperation based on other forms of identity in the response to refugees?

Alongside presentations from keynote speakers, several panel sessions will be devoted to this theme.

IMMIGRATION

Central Americans, Politics
Over 144,000 migrants were apprehended just inside the Mexico-US border in May 2019, including 58,000 Central American parents with children and 8,900 children traveling alone. Another 109,000 migrants were apprehended in April 2019. Some 107,212 families were arrested just inside the Mexico-US border during the 12 months of FY18.

DHS: CBP, ICE, USCIS

DHS Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen resigned in April 2019. Customs and Border Protection Commissioner Kevin McAleenan became acting DHS secretary; he can serve in an acting capacity for 210 days. DHS includes 22 agencies and 240,000 employees and has an annual budget of $40 billion.

H-2A; H-2B

The House Appropriations Committee in June 2019 approved an amendment to the Department of Homeland Security funding bill that would allow farm employers to hire H-2A guest workers in year-round jobs. Most H-2A workers are currently limited to 10 months in the US. Dairy farmers have been requesting the change so that they can hire H-2A workers.

Europe, Asia

The EU continues to struggle with migrants who reach Greece, Italy and Spain by boat and apply for asylum. The European Commission in summer 2016 proposed that the Dublin agreement, which makes the first EU country reached by an asylum seeker the country that decides whether the person is a refugee, should be retained. When "too many" migrants arrive in front-line states in Greece, Italy and Spain, the EU Parliament ordered that some migrants be redistributed by quota to other EU countries.

With a staff of less than two dozen people, the Center has been instrumental in many of the changes that we've seen over the past two years, including interior enforcement, security vetting, refugee resettlement, visa rules, and more. We regularly consult with the White House and executive agencies, testify before Congress and educate lawmakers.

We also punch above our weight in the media, competing with the much larger and better funded organizations pushing for more immigration, as the graphs below illustrate.

We are making a difference and our voice in the debate is critical. With your (tax-deductible) support, we can continue our important work.

Unskilled Immigration Lowers Labor-Force Participation

Washington, D.C. (July 26, 2019) – New analysis from the Center for

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Immigration Studies finds that although unemployment rates are low, high levels of unskilled immigration have lowered labor-force participation rates for native-born Americans, particularly those without a college degree.

Steven Camarota, the Center's Director of Research, said, "The long-term decline in the labor force participation rate and stagnation of wages for low-skilled Americans have contributed to a host of social problems, from the opioid epidemic to the breakdown of families. As long as we continue to admit large numbers of low-skilled immigrants, this decline will almost certainly persist."

Read the full analysis: https://www.nationalreview.com/magazine/2019/08/12/unskilled-immigration-lowers-labor-force-participation/

Among the findings:

- Among men ages 25 to 64 without a bachelor's degree, 81 percent were in the labor force as of the first quarter of this year. Despite the strong economy, this figure is down from 84 percent at the peak of the last expansion, in 2007. In 2000, that figure was 85 percent, and in 1989 it was 87 percent.
- Among women, labor-force participation increased steadily until 2000, but it has followed the pattern for men since then.
- Wages have also stagnated or declined for the less educated. Pew Research reports that since 2000, the bottom quarter of earners saw just a 4.3 percent real-wage increase — equivalent to an annual raise of just 0.2 percent
- Despite claims from advocates of high immigration that there are some jobs Americans won't do, a majority of workers in just about every occupation identified by the Census Bureau are U.S.-born. For example, more than half of maids are native-born, as are 64 percent of meatpackers, 65 percent of construction laborers, and 66 percent of groundskeepers. Wages in all of these sectors show stagnation or long-term decline, so if there is a great need for such workers, why not let wages rise?
- Even the agriculture industry only employs 2 percent of all immigrants and 4 percent of illegal immigrants in the United States.

A Conversation with Senator Tom Cotton

A look at immigration policymaking in Congress.

7:30 a.m., Tuesday, July 30, 2019
National Press Club, Murrow Room
529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor
Washington, D.C. 20045
https://cis.org/Press-Release/EVENT-Conversation-Senator-Tom-Cotton

Description: Senator Tom Cotton (R-Arkansas) will be featured in an Immigration Newsmaker conversation hosted by the Center for Immigration Studies on Tuesday, July 30, at 7:30 a.m. at the National Press Club. We ask that you RSVP via email to Marguerite Telford if you would like to reserve a seat. Media is given priority. In addition, we will stream the event on Facebook Live.

Sen. Tom Cotton has been a strong advocate for border and interior enforcement, speaking often about the dangers of the cartels that smuggle narcotics across the southern border and the growth of violent gangs, such as MS-13. The Senator has sponsored a number of important immigration bills, including the Reforming American Immigration for a Strong Economy Act (RAISE Act), which modernizes our immigration system to attract more high-skilled workers and protects the jobs and wages of American workers.

The conversation on Tuesday, moderated by Mark Krikorian, the Center's executive director, will cover such topics as merit-based immigration, chain migration, the link between national security and immigration, and the prospects for immigration legislation.

The Immigration Newsmaker series provides an opportunity for government agency heads, members of Congress, and other policymakers to discuss their priorities and explore the challenges they face. The events, held at the National Press Club, are seated, on-the-record conversations between the guest and a member of the CIS staff.

The Journey from an E-2 Visa to an EB-5 Green Card: A Fast Track

American Immigration Lawyers Association Web Seminar
2:00 p.m. EDT, Tuesday, August 6, 2019
https://agora.aila.org/Conference/Detail/1588

Description: Eighty countries have treaties with the United States that permit foreign nationals to obtain E-2 treaty investor visas, which allow an investor or certain key executives permission to work in the United States. But, the E-2 visa does not lead to a U.S. green card, and minor children can only stay on their parent's visa until reaching 21 years old. The EB-5 visa does provide, however, a path for a foreign national to become a lawful permanent resident. Thus, the question arises: how may an E-2 treaty investor convert his or her nonimmigrant visa into an EB-5 investor green card to allow him or her to remain permanently in the United States and (after five years) apply to become a U.S. citizen? Our expert panelists will address this journey to permanent residency for E-2 treaty investors. They also will discuss the careful planning and detailed strategy required for E-2 investors to properly structure their respective businesses to transition the visa into an EB-5 green card.

Featured Topics:
*E-2 Treaty Investor Visa and EB-5 Immigrant Investor Visa Program: Similarities and Critical Differences

*Business Plans, Lawful Source of Funds Issues

*Minimum Investment Requirements: Initial Investment Strategies (Including Amount and Location of Business)

*Job Creation: Showing from Inception of the Enterprise That the Investment Will Create the Requisite Jobs for American Workers

*Planning for U.S. Residency and Tax Implications Upon Conversion to an EB-5 Immigrant Investor

Migration Data and Models for a Better World: Perspectives from Academia, Data Science, and International Organizations

Migration plays a central role in population processes, becoming an increasingly important component of social, economic and political change across the globe. Given its often unjust causes and socially transformative consequences to origin and destination communities alike, migration continues to demand the scholarly attention of sociologists, especially those invested in overcoming social injustices. However, despite the growing importance of migration phenomena, migration data remain expensive and difficult to collect. Different institutions use different definitions to meet their various needs, and time after time difficulties comparing data across context limit wider understanding.

The goal of this preconference is to facilitate a conversation about improving migration data by bringing sociologists familiar with the conceptual pitfalls of migration research together with two groups: (1) data scientists with strategies for inferring migration from new forms of digital data and (2) representatives from international organizations (like the UN, located in New York City) with specific needs for particular kinds of migration estimates.

This interdisciplinary conversation will be organized around three substantive issues in migration data and measurement. First, there is a need for data than can improve the lives of migrants. Understanding the conditions migrants face is a key priority of the UN's Global Compact on Migration. Second, there is a need to better understand the uses of migration data by government and the salience of migration data to the public. Preventing distorted views that may lead to unjust immigration restrictions or violence against migrants requires research into how data are interpreted and shared. Third, there is a need for comprehensive tools for comparing different kinds of migration data. Sociologists, in particular, can help international organization and data scientists decide how to prioritize the types of data that are most useful to understand societal processes and migration.

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-708 - Refugees and Displaced Persons

Course Details: Refugees and Displaced Persons focuses on international and domestic law, legal cases and policies designed to protect and assist people who have been forced to flee because of persecution, conflict and other life threatening events. It examines the causes of such flight as well as its consequences. Further discussed are the solutions to forced migration, including return, local integration and resettlement in a new community. The course explores such issues as the nexus between forced and voluntary migration, the transition from relief to development, and the intersection between refugee protection and security issues. It gives particular attention to asylum cases and standards for legal and physical protection of refugees.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, a successful student will be able to:

* Discuss the fundamentals of international and domestic law, legal cases and policies designed to protect and assist people who have been forced to flee because of persecution, conflict and other life threatening events.
* Discuss solutions to forced migration.

Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan

4:30 p.m., Wednesday, September 25, 2019
Princeton University, Jones Hall, #211
Princeton, NJ 08544
https://eap.princeton.edu/events/help-not-wanted-immigration-politics-japan

Speaker(s):
Michael Strausz
Texas Christian University

Description: Why has Japan's immigration policy remained so restrictive, especially in light of economic, demographic, and international political forces that are pushing Japan to admit more immigrants? Michael Strausz will answer this question by drawing on insights from nearly two years of intensive field research in Japan. Ultimately, he will argue that Japan's immigration policy has remained restrictive for two reasons. First, Japan's labor-intensive businesses have failed to defeat anti-immigration forces within the Japanese state, particularly those in the Ministry of Justice and the Japanese Diet. Second, no influential strain of elite thought in postwar Japan exists to support the idea that significant numbers of foreign nationals have a legitimate claim to residency and citizenship.

In addition to an overview of postwar Japan's immigration control policy, this presentation provide context to recent developments in Japanese immigration policy – particularly the December 2018 decision to admit more than 300,000 low skilled foreign laborers.

Michael Strausz is an Associate Professor of Political Science and the Director of Asian Studies at Texas Christian University. He earned his BA in international relations and Japanese from Michigan State University and his MA and PhD in political science from the University of Washington. His book, Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan will be published with SUNY Press in August, and he has published a number of other articles and book chapters about topics including Japan's immigration policy and Japanese whaling. His research has been funded by grants from the Japan Foundation and the Fulbright Foundation, and he is a member of Cohort III of the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation 's U.S.-Japan Network for the Future.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Certificate in International Migration Studies blue

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;
* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and
* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled “Democratic participation for migrant diasporas”. Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members’ involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members’ contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government
2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora
3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin – success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications
10. Emigrant literature

The conference organisers would like to emphasise that presenters have the opportunity to present on a different theme that is related to the general purpose.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

TIME CHANGE: A Conversation with Senator Tom Cotton

A look at immigration policymaking in Congress

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (July 29, 2019) – Senator Tom Cotton (R-Arkansas) will be featured in an Immigration Newsmaker conversation hosted by the Center for Immigration Studies tomorrow, July 30, at 7:30 a.m. at the National Press Club. We ask that you RSVP via email to Marguerite Telford if you would like to reserve a seat. Media is given priority. In addition, we will stream the event on Facebook Live.

Sen. Tom Cotton has been a strong advocate for border and interior enforcement, speaking often about the dangers of the cartels that smuggle narcotics across the southern border and the growth of violent gangs, such as MS-13. The Senator has sponsored a number of important immigration bills, including the Reforming American Immigration for a Strong Economy Act (RAISE Act), which modernizes our immigration system to attract more high-skilled workers and protects the jobs and wages of American workers.

The conversation on Tuesday, moderated by Mark Krikorian, the Center's executive director, will cover such topics as merit-based immigration, chain migration, the link between national security and immigration, and the prospects for immigration legislation.

When: Tuesday, July 30, 2019, at 7:30 a.m.
Where: National Press Club, Murrow Room, 529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor, Washington, D.C.

The Immigration Newsmaker series provides an opportunity for government agency heads, members of Congress, and other policymakers to discuss their priorities and explore the challenges they face. The events, held at the National Press Club, are seated, on-the-record conversations between the guest and a member of the CIS staff.

VIDEO: The Democrats Changed View on Immigration

Washington, D.C. (July 30, 2019) - Mark Krikorian, the executive director of the Center for Immigration Studies, and Senator Tom Cotton (R-Ark.) discuss tonight's Democratic debate. Sen. Cotton says, "The Democrats have lost their minds when it comes to immigration."

The Senator points out that the former Chair of the U.S. Commission on Immigration Reform, Democrat Rep. Barbara Jordan, as well as many old Democratic union leaders used to share his view of immigration, but that the party is now focused less on kitchen table issues and on what matters to working-class Americans and more on questions of race, gender, and sex. He says, "For them it has become more a question of identity than a question about economics and security."

Mass migration, the senator notes, is a good bargain for the elite as immigrants are not taking their jobs or impacting their local economies. Mass migration actually drives down the price of the personal services, like childcare, house cleaning, landscaping etc., on which the elite depend. This is the class the Democratic party now represents.

A Conversation with Senator Tom Cotton

Video and transcript of event now available

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (July 31, 2019) – Transcript and video are now available from the Center for Immigration Studies Newsmaker conversation with Sen. Tom Cotton (R-Ark.) regarding immigration policymaking in Congress. The conversation included topics such as the crisis at the border, reducing total immigration levels, guestworker visas, and the intersection of immigration and national security.

Sen. Cotton has been a strong advocate for border and interior enforcement, speaking often about the dangers of the cartels that smuggle narcotics across the southern border and the growth of violent gangs such as MS-13. He has sponsored a number of important immigration bills, including the Reforming American Immigration for a Strong Economy Act (RAISE Act), which would modernize our legal immigration system by placing more emphasis on high-skilled workers and would protect the jobs and wages of American workers.

"We are at historically elevated numbers, as high as we have been since right before the 1924 Immigration Act," he said, adding that this is "one reason why Americans with high school degrees who are working with their hands or on their feet all day long have seen wages suffer." He also noted, "A gradual decline over time, while refocusing also on high-killed workers, will be very beneficial for unskilled and low-skilled American workers."

Update on the Crowd-Funded Border Wall in New Mexico

By Todd Bensman

The half-mile long, 25-foot-high steel wall is either an affront to proper democratic process and bureaucracy, or a magnificent edifice to a vast, unrequited patriotic will to protect America from the plague of Mexican cartels and illegal immigration, depending on whom you ask.

Expedited Removal Finally to be Applied as Intended

By Dan Cadman

By expanding expedited removal to its full reach, a significant portion of cases can be diverted out of the immigration courts, allowing the backlog to settle and, over time, recede. This move was years overdue.

The Journey from an E-2 Visa to an EB-5 Green Card: A Fast Track

American Immigration Lawyers Association Web Seminar
2:00 p.m. EDT, Tuesday, August 6, 2019
https://agora.aila.org/Conference/Detail/1588

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Description: Eighty countries have treaties with the United States that permit foreign nationals to obtain E-2 treaty investor visas, which allow an investor or certain key executives permission to work in the United States. But, the E-2 visa does not lead to a U.S. green card, and minor children can only stay on their parent's visa until reaching 21 years old. The EB-5 visa does provide, however, a path for a foreign national to become a lawful permanent resident. Thus, the question arises: how may an E-2 treaty investor convert his or her nonimmigrant visa into an EB-5 investor green card to allow him or her to remain permanently in the United States and (after five years) apply to become a U.S. citizen? Our expert panelists will address this journey to permanent residency for E-2 treaty investors. They also will discuss the careful planning and detailed strategy required for E-2 investors to properly structure their respective businesses to transition the visa into an EB-5 green card.

Featured Topics:
*E-2 Treaty Investor Visa and EB-5 Immigrant Investor Visa Program: Similarities and Critical Differences

*Business Plans, Lawful Source of Funds Issues

*Minimum Investment Requirements: Initial Investment Strategies (Including Amount and Location of Business)

*Job Creation: Showing from Inception of the Enterprise That the Investment Will Create the Requisite Jobs for American Workers

*Planning for U.S. Residency and Tax Implications Upon Conversion to an EB-5 Immigrant Investor

Migration Data and Models for a Better World: Perspectives from Academia, Data Science, and International Organizations

Migration plays a central role in population processes, becoming an increasingly important component of social, economic and political change across the globe. Given its often unjust causes and socially transformative consequences to origin and destination communities alike, migration continues to demand the scholarly attention of sociologists, especially those invested in overcoming social injustices. However, despite the growing importance of migration phenomena, migration data remain expensive and difficult to collect. Different institutions use different definitions to meet their various needs, and time after time difficulties comparing data across context limit wider understanding.

The goal of this preconference is to facilitate a conversation about improving migration data by bringing sociologists familiar with the conceptual pitfalls of migration research together with two groups: (1) data scientists with strategies for inferring migration from new forms of digital data and (2) representatives from international organizations (like the UN, located in New York City) with specific needs for particular kinds of migration estimates.

This interdisciplinary conversation will be organized around three substantive issues in migration data and measurement. First, there is a need for data than can improve the lives of migrants. Understanding the conditions migrants face is a key priority of the UN's Global Compact on Migration. Second, there is a need to better understand the uses of migration data by government and the salience of migration data to the public. Preventing distorted views that may lead to unjust immigration restrictions or violence against migrants requires research into how data are interpreted and shared. Third, there is a need for comprehensive tools for comparing different kinds of migration data. Sociologists, in particular, can help international organization and data scientists decide how to prioritize the types of data that are most useful to understand societal processes and migration.

Rethinking U.S. Immigration Policy: Building a Responsive, Effective Immigration System

11:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m. ET, Monday, August 12, 2019
MPI First Floor Conference Room
1400 16th Street NW,
Washington, DC 20036
https://www.migrationpolicy.org/events/rethinking-us-immigration

Description: The U.S. immigration system is widely acknowledged as being broken. Despite multiple attempts, solutions have proven elusive for administrations and Congress for more than two decades.

The evidence of dysfunction is in every direction: Vastly oversubscribed categories for employment visas, deep disagreement between Washington and many state and local governments about immigration enforcement and policy priorities, political paralysis over what to do about a long-settled unauthorized population, years-long caseloads tied up in the immigration court system, sharp pullbacks in refugee admissions and other humanitarian programs, and, most recently, a protracted migration crisis at the U.S.-Mexico border.

As the United States is mired in inaction, its legal immigration system resting on laws dating back to 1965 and 1990, other major immigrant-destination countries have created flexible, modernized immigration systems. What changes are needed to overcome the failings of the current system and meet U.S. economic and security interests in the decades ahead? What values and principles should guide future immigration policymaking?

To answer these and similar questions, the Migration Policy Institute is launching a major new initiative—Rethinking U.S. Immigration Policy—that aims to generate a big-picture, evidence-driven vision of the role immigration can and should play in America's future. This multi-year initiative will provide research, analysis, and policy ideas and proposals—both administrative and legislative—that reflect new realities and needs if immigration is to continue to be a comparative advantage for the United States as a society. Key topics will include employment based-immigration, humanitarian programs, and immigration enforcement.

Historically, immigration policymaking and legislation have only succeeded through across-the-aisle cooperation and consensus-building. This initiative is animated by a commitment to re-energizing such bipartisanship in shaping and advancing feasible solutions.

Please join us as we launch this initiative with a discussion among seasoned players from both political parties.

Speakers:
Carlos Gutierrez, former U.S. Secretary of Commerce; Chair, Albright Stonebridge Group

Cecilia Muñoz, former Director of White House Domestic Policy Council; Vice President, Public Interest Technology and Local Initiatives, New America

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-708 - Refugees and Displaced Persons

Course Details: Refugees and Displaced Persons focuses on international and domestic law, legal cases and policies designed to protect and assist people who have been forced to flee because of persecution, conflict and other life threatening events. It examines the causes of such flight as well as its consequences. Further discussed are the solutions to forced migration, including return, local integration and resettlement in a new community. The course explores such issues as the nexus between forced and voluntary migration, the transition from relief to development, and the intersection between refugee protection and security issues. It gives particular attention to asylum cases and standards for legal and physical protection of refugees.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, a successful student will be able to:

* Discuss the fundamentals of international and domestic law, legal cases and policies designed to protect and assist people who have been forced to flee because of persecution, conflict and other life threatening events.
* Discuss solutions to forced migration.

16th International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference
Thursday-Friday, September 19-20, 2019
Lancelot Thompson Student Union
3154 North Towerview Boulevard
Toledo, OH 43606
https://www.traffickingconference.com/

About: Since 2004, The International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference has been bringing together researchers, practitioners, and individuals with lived experience in an effort to lay the groundwork for future collaborative research, advocacy, and program development.

To date, the trafficking conference has welcomed attendees from 42 states and 30 countries to learn from researchers, survivors, and social service, health care, and criminal justice professionals about human trafficking and social justice topics.

Recently, there have been many new and exciting opportunities for expansion regarding the conference, which includes a name change because of a larger mission. In 2015, the conference title was changed to the International Human Trafficking & Social Justice Conference. The concept of social justice will expand topics at the conference to include many of the injustices seen in the world today.

We greatly appreciate those who have brought the conference this far. Change is hard, but is also necessary. All are welcome to join us in sharing knowledge and diverse perspectives at the conference. Our conference has a maximum of 12 continuing education credits pending for social work, counseling, marriage & family therapy, chemical dependency, nursing, health education, public health, and law.

Migration's Rescue of the European Union and Democracy

Harvard Center for European Studies

11:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m., Friday, September 20, 2019
Hoffmann Room, Adolphus Busch Hall
27 Kirkland Street at Cabot Way
Cambridge, MA 02138
https://ces.fas.harvard.edu/events/2019/09/migrations-rescue-of-the-european-union-and-democracy

Description: What factors make some democracies more resilient and others more prone to democratic backsliding? Thirty years after the fall of communism in Central and Eastern Europe, the political trajectories of the region's new democracies still defy expectations. Countries long-considered leaders in transitions to democracy and capitalism (Hungary, Poland) have experienced democratic backsliding and rising Euroscepticism.

Meanwhile, the laggards of post-communist transitions and EU accession (Romania, Bulgaria) now score higher that their Visegrad counterparts on some measures of democratic quality and retain EU support. What explains the unevenness of democratic consolidation in the region? This book argues that the way in which European citizenship is practiced as intra-EU free movement matters.

Even in times of crisis, European integration and liberalism maintain their appeal in countries where large parts of the population depend on European citizenship in their living-making. The book focuses on high-mobility migrants from Romania and Poland, the EU's main migrant-sending countries, and highlights migrants' contributions to political change in their homelands. Findings show that intra-EU mobility influences sociopolitical attitudes, voting, and the state-citizen relationship when people become economically emancipated from the national labor market (by working abroad) but remain politically rooted.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Findings also show that, paradoxically, a longer history of migration and state-led diaspora engagement limits the political incorporation of intra-EU migrants. A laissez-faire approach provides more space for bottom-up, citizen-led mobilization, empowering intra-EU movers as political actors.

Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan

4:30 p.m., Wednesday, September 25, 2019
Princeton University, Jones Hall, #211
Princeton, NJ 08544
https://eap.princeton.edu/events/help-not-wanted-immigration-politics-japan

Speaker(s):
Michael Strausz
Texas Christian University

Description: Why has Japan's immigration policy remained so restrictive, especially in light of economic, demographic, and international political forces that are pushing Japan to admit more immigrants? Michael Strausz will answer this question by drawing on insights from nearly two years of intensive field research in Japan. Ultimately, he will argue that Japan's immigration policy has remained restrictive for two reasons. First, Japan's labor-intensive businesses have failed to defeat anti-immigration forces within the Japanese state, particularly those in the Ministry of Justice and the Japanese Diet. Second, no influential strain of elite thought in postwar Japan exists to support the idea that significant numbers of foreign nationals have a legitimate claim to residency and citizenship.

In addition to an overview of postwar Japan's immigration control policy, this presentation provide context to recent developments in Japanese immigration policy – particularly the December 2018 decision to admit more than 300,000

low skilled foreign laborers.

Michael Strausz is an Associate Professor of Political Science and the Director of Asian Studies at Texas Christian University. He earned his BA in international relations and Japanese from Michigan State University and his MA and PhD in political science from the University of Washington. His book, Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan will be published with SUNY Press in August, and he has published a number of other articles and book chapters about topics including Japan's immigration policy and Japanese whaling. His research has been funded by grants from the Japan Foundation and the Fulbright Foundation, and he is a member of Cohort III of the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation 's U.S.-Japan Network for the Future.

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;
* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and
* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally

and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled “Democratic participation for migrant diasporas”. Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members’ involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members’ contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government
2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora
3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin –

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin
6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications
10. Emigrant literature

The conference organisers would like to emphasise that presenters have the opportunity to present on a different theme that is related to the general purpose.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

VIDEO: What's Really Driving the Migrant Surge?

Washington, D.C. (August 6, 2019) - A new video from the Center for

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Immigration Studies analyzes the factors behind the current surge in migrants arriving at the U.S.-Mexico border, and what steps Congress could take to end the growing crisis.

Matt Sussis, the Center's Assistant Director of Communications, said, "Many Democratic politicians cite either climate change or fears of violence when asked what is driving the border crisis, but the data indicate otherwise. The reality is that our own asylum loopholes are at the root of this surge, and it will not abate until those loopholes are closed by Congress."

Since 2011, murder rates have fallen in half in Northern Triangle countries, indicating that gang violence is likely not a driver of the crisis. Similarly, despite concerns over climate change, crop production in Central America has steadily risen in recent decades. Asylum loopholes such as the Flores Settlement Agreement appear to be much more direct drivers of current migration.

Economy Recovers, But Less-Educated Natives Left Out

Mississippi has the nation's lowest labor force participation rate

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (August 8, 2019) – The Center of Immigration Studies' analysis of Bureau of Labor Statistics data from the first quarter of 2019 shows that the labor force participation rate – those working or looking for work – of native-born Americans has not returned to pre-2007 recession levels. Things are particularly bad for natives without a bachelor's degree. In nearly every state, the labor force participation rate (the share of adults working or looking for work) of non-college educated natives (ages 18 to 64) has not returned to 2007 levels.

See the report here: https://cis.org/Report/Employment-Situation-Immigrants-and-Natives-First-Quarter-2019

Dr. Steven Camarota, the Center's director of research, writes, "Compared to 2000, in every state the labor force participation for non-college-educated natives was lower in 2019. But, in no state was it as low as in the state of Mississippi. Worksite enforcement efforts, like those this week in Mississippi, help protect illegal workers from mistreatment and protect job opportunities for citizens and immigrants authorized to work."

Among Native-Born Americans:

- The overall unemployment rate for natives in the first quarter of 2019 was 4.1 percent, much lower than at the peak of the Great Recession. However, the overall unemployment rate obscures the low labor force participation rate, especially among those without a bachelor's degree.
- There has been a long-term decline in the labor force participation rate of working-age (18 to 64) natives without a bachelor's degree. Only 70.8 percent of natives in this group were in the labor force in the first quarter of 2019; in 2007, before the recession, it was 74.4 percent, and in the first quarter of 2000 it was 76.7 percent.
- The labor force participation rate of natives without a college degree has shown no meaningful improvement in recent years. For example, in the first quarter of 2012 it was actually slightly better than it was in the first quarter of 2019.
- The decline in labor force participation among those without a bachelor's degree is even more profound when it is measured relative to those who are more educated.
- In the first quarter of 2019, 70.8 percent of natives without a bachelor's degree were in the labor force, compared to 86.8 percent of those with a bachelor's degree – a 16 percentage-point difference. In the first quarter of 2007, the gap was 12.3 percentage points; and in the first quarter of 2000 the gap was 11.4 percentage points.

- In 45 states plus the District of Columbia, labor force participation of natives without a college degree was lower in the first quarter of 2019 than the same quarter in 2007.
- Comparing 2000 to 2019, all 50 states plus the District of Columbia have a lower labor force participation rate for natives without a college degree in 2019.

Among Immigrants:

- Working-age immigrants without a college education also have not fared well since the recession. Unlike the labor force participation of natives, immigrants without a college education did improve their situation between 2000 and 2007. But it has not returned to 2007 levels.
- In the first quarter of 2019, the labor force participation rate of immigrants (18 to 64) without a bachelor's degree was 73.3 percent, somewhat better than that of natives, but still below their rate of 73.8 percent in the first quarter of 2007.

Immigrants and Natives Not in the Labor Force:

- In the first quarter of 2019, there were a total of 47 million immigrants and natives ages 18 to 64 not in the labor force, up from 41.8 million in 2007 and 35.8 million in 2000.
- Of the 47 million immigrants and natives currently not in the labor force, 37.5 million (80 percent) do not have a bachelor's degree.
- The above figures do not include the unemployed, who are considered to be part of the labor force because, although they are not working, they are looking for work. There were almost 6.7 million unemployed immigrants and natives in the first quarter of this year; more than three-fourths of the unemployed do not have a bachelor's degree.

Immigration up in first half of 2019
Statistics Netherlands, July 31, 2019
https://www.cbs.nl/en-gb/news/2019/31/immigration-up-in-first-half-of-2019

Summary: In the first six months of 2019, the population of the Netherlands grew more rapidly than in the same period last year. Nearly 46 thousand inhabitants were added. Mainly more people from abroad settled in the Netherlands, but the number of deaths was also smaller than in the first half of 2018. This is reported by Statistics Netherlands (CBS) on the basis of the most recent population data.

Resident population still decreasing
Statistics Italy, July 8, 2019
https://www.istat.it/it/files//2019/07/Bilancio-demografico_anno-2018_EN.pdf

Excerpt: Demographic decline slowed by the growth of foreign citizens Since 2015, the resident population has been decreasing, setting up a phase of demographic decline for the first time in the last 90 years. At 31 December 2018 the population amounted to 60,359,546 residents, over 124 thousand less than the previous year (-0.2%) and over 400 thousand less than four years earlier. The decline is entirely due to the Italian population, which decrease, with respect to the previous year, to 55 million 104 thousand units at December 31, 2018, 235 thousand less than the previous year (0.4%). The comparison with the same date in 2014, show a loss of Italian citizens (resident in Italy) equal to the disappearance of a city as large as Palermo (-677 thousand). It should also be considered that over the past four years, over 638 thousands new citizens have acquired citizenship. Without this contribution, the decline of Italians would have been around 1 million and 300 thousand units. In the last four-years period, the simultaneous increase of over 241 thousand units of foreign citizens made it possible to contain the overall loss of residents. At December 31, 2018, there were 5,255,503 foreign citizens registered in the registry; compared to 2017 they increased by 111 thousand (+ 2.2%), reaching 8.7% of the total

Monthly Harvard-Harris Poll: July 2019
August 2019
https://harvardharrispoll.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/08/HHP_July2019_Crosstabs_RegisteredVoters-1.pdf

Excerpt:
A new poll shows that a majority of black and Hispanic voters support presidential candidates who are against illegal immigration.
Asked if they would support a candidate who was focused on "strengthening our border to reduce illegal immigrants," 70 percent said they were likely, including 61 percent of Hispanics, 63 percent of blacks, and 69 percent of Independents.

Approximately 30 percent of Hispanics, 26 percent of blacks, and 37 percent of Independents said they were "very likely" to vote for such a candidate, with 31 percent of Hispanics, 37 percent of blacks, and 32 percent of Independents answering they were "somewhat likely" to vote for such a candidate.

A Good Provider Is One Who Leaves: One Family and Migration in the 21st Century
By Jason DeParle

Viking, 400 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 067078592X, $28.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/067078592X/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1958 KB, ASIN: B07KVM5KX8, $14.99

Book Description: When Jason DeParle moved into the Manila slums with Tita Comodas and her family three decades ago, he never imagined his reporting on them would span three generations and turn into the defining chronicle of a new age--the age of global migration. In a monumental book that gives new meaning to "immersion journalism," DeParle paints an intimate portrait of an unforgettable family as they endure years of sacrifice and separation, willing themselves out of shantytown poverty into a new global middle class. At the heart of the story is Tita's daughter, Rosalie. Beating the odds, she struggles through nursing school and works her way across the Middle East until a Texas hospital fulfills her dreams with a job offer in the States.

Migration is changing the world--reordering politics, economics, and cultures across the globe. With nearly 45 million immigrants in the United States, few issues are as polarizing. But if the politics of immigration is broken, immigration itself--tens of millions of people gathered from every corner of the globe--remains an underappreciated American success. Expertly combining the personal and panoramic, DeParle presents a family saga and a global phenomenon. Restarting her life in Galveston, Rosalie brings her reluctant husband and three young children with whom she has rarely lived. They must learn to become a family, even as they learn a new country. Ordinary and extraordinary at once, their journey is a twenty-first-century classic, rendered in gripping detail.

Does Immigration Increase Crime?: Migration Policy and the Creation of the Criminal Immigrant

By Francesco Fasani, Giovanni Mastrobuoni, et al.

Cambridge University Press, 212 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1108494552, $79.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1108494552/centerforimmigra

Paperback, ISBN: 1108731775, $28.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1108731775/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 212 pp., ASIN: B07VBNPCD8, $23.00

Book Description: Do migrants lead to an increase of crime rates in their host societies? This highly contentious issue has become a mainstay in the political debate and a lightning rod for the galvanization of populist movements, despite often lacking any empirical support. In this game-changing book, the authors examine what the existing data actually says, and provide their own novel evidence on the immigration-crime connection. Taking the unusual approach of analysing the subject from an economic perspective, the authors build on the pioneering work of Nobel Prize winner Gary Becker to construct their innovative arguments. By considering evidence from different countries, with a focus on establishing causal relationships, the authors are able to analyse not only if migrants do cause crime but also whether migration policies can play a role in shaping incentives for migrants to engage in crime. This book will appeal to students and academics across the social sciences, as well as citizens interested in this topical issue.

Sanctuary cities and urban struggles: Rescaling migration, citizenship,

By Jonathan Darling and Harald Bauder

Manchester University Press, 256 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1526134918, $88.51
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1526134918/centerforimmigra

Book Description: Sanctuary Cities and Urban Struggles makes the first sustained intervention into exploring how cities are challenging the primacy of the nation-state as the key guarantor of rights and entitlements. It brings together cutting-edge scholars of political geography, urban geography, citizenship studies, socio-legal studies and refugee studies to explore how urban social movements, localised practices of belonging and rights claiming, and diverse articulations of sanctuary are reshaping the governance of migration. By offering a collection of empirical cases and conceptualisations that move beyond 'seeing like a state', Sanctuary Cities and Urban Struggles proposes not a singular alternative but rather a set of interlocking sites and scales of political imagination and practice. In an era when migrant rights are under attack and nationalism is on the rise, the topic of how citizenship, rights and mobility can be recast at the urban scale is more relevant than ever.

Empire of Borders: The Expansion of the US Border Around the World

Kindle, 1002 KB, 305 pp., ASIN: B07GD5V8GS, $9.99

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Book Description: The twenty-first century has witnessed the rapid hardening of international borders. Security, surveillance, and militarization are widening the chasm between those who travel where they please and those whose movements are restricted. But that is only part of the story. As journalist Todd Miller reveals in Empire of Borders, the nature of US borders has changed. These boundaries have effectively expanded thousands of miles outside of US territory to encircle not simply American land but Washington's interests. Resources, training, and agents from the United States infiltrate the Caribbean and Central America; they reach across the Canadian border; and they go even farther afield, enforcing the division between Global South and North.

The highly publicized focus on a wall between the United States and Mexico misses the bigger picture of strengthening border enforcement around the world.

Empire of Borders is a tremendous work of narrative investigative journalism that traces the rise of this border regime. It delves into the practices of "extreme vetting," which raise the possibility of "ideological" tests and cyber-policing for migrants and visitors, a level of scrutiny that threatens fundamental freedoms and allows, once again, for America's security concerns to infringe upon the sovereign rights of other nations.

In Syria, Guatemala, Kenya, Palestine, Mexico, the Philippines, and elsewhere, Miller finds that borders aren't making the world safe—they are the frontline in a global war against the poor.

Making Migration Law: The Foreigner, Sovereignty, and the Case of Australia

By Eve Lester

Cambridge University Press, 384 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1107173272, $43.75

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Kindle, 1996 KB, 357 pp., ASIN: B079521HQP, $37.99

Book Description: The emergence of international human rights law and the end of the White Australia immigration policy were events of great historical moment. Yet, they were not harbingers of a new dawn in migration law. This book argues that this is because migration law in Australia is best understood as part of a longer jurisprudential tradition in which certain political-economic interests have shaped the relationship between the foreigner and the sovereign. Eve Lester explores how this relationship has been wrought by a political-economic desire to regulate race and labour; a desire that has produced the claim that there exists an absolute sovereign right to exclude or condition the entry and stay of foreigners. Lester calls this putative right a discourse of 'absolute sovereignty'. She argues that 'absolute sovereignty' talk continues to be a driver of migration lawmaking, shaping the foreigner-sovereign relation and making thinkable some of the world's harshest asylum policies.

What's Happening at the Center

The latest report from Director of Research Steven Camarota challenges the notion that we need to import mor foreign workers. Newly released data shows that the labor force participation rate – those working or looking fo work – of native-born Americans has not returned to pre-2007 recession levels. Only 70.8 percent of natives in this group were in the labor force in the first quarter of 2019, compared to 86.8 percent of those with a degree. Working-age immigrants without a college education also have not fared well since the recession, with a labor force participation rate of 73.3 percent. In the first quarter of 2019, there were a total of 47 million immigrants an natives, ages 18 to 64, not in the labor force, up from 41.8 million in 2007 and 35.8 million in 2000. These figure do not include the unemployed, who are considered to be part of the labor force because, although they are no working, they are looking for work. There were almost 6.7 million unemployed immigrants and natives in the firs quarter of this year.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Center for Immigration Studies

From: Center for Immigration Studies
Sent: Monday, August 12, 2019 9:57 AM
To: Law, Robert T
Subject: Trump Administration Announces Public Charge Rule

Trump Administration Announces Public Charge Rule

Washington, D.C. (August 12, 2019) - USCIS Acting Director Ken Cuccinelli

today announced the Trump administration's new "public charge" rules making it harder for prospective immigrants to qualify for lawful permanent residence (green cards) if they use or are likely to use U.S. welfare programs.

Mark Krikorian, the Center's Executive Director, said, "There are hundreds of millions of people who want to move to the United States, and this rule ensures that we allow in only those who will be able to pay their own bills. The heavy use of welfare by immigrant households is not the result of laziness or some other moral shortcoming; immigrants are as likely to work as native-born Americans. Instead, it is the inevitable result of admitting people with little education, meaning that they will have low earnings in a modern, knowledge-based economy."

According to Census Bureau data, in 2014, 63 percent of households headed by a non-citizen reported that they used at least one welfare program, compared to 35 percent of native-headed households. Compared to native households, non-citizen households have much higher use of food programs (45 percent vs. 21 percent for natives) and Medicaid (50 percent vs. 23 percent for natives).

Guidelines in use since 1999 referred to a public charge as someone primarily depending on cash assistance only, and did not take into account non-cash welfare. But under new rules the Department of Homeland Security has redefined public charge to mean someone who is "more likely than not" to receive any taxpayer-funded public benefits, including Medicaid, housing assistance, or food assistance.

The rule will take effect 60 days after publication in the Federal Register on Tuesday.

Chronicling Migration in the 21st Century Through One Family's Journey

4:00-5:15 p.m., Tuesday, August 20, 2019
MPI Conference Room, Suite 300

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

1400 16th Street NW,
Washington, DC 20036
https://www.migrationpolicy.org/events/chronicling-migration-21st-century-through-one-familys-journey

Speakers:
Jason DeParle, Book Author and Reporter, The New York Times

Dilip Ratha, Head of KNOMAD and Lead Economist, Migration and Remittances Team, Social Protection and Jobs Global Practice, The World Bank

Andrew Selee, President, Migration Policy Institute

Description: The story of global migration as a force shaping economies, politics, and cultures around the world is typically told via analysis of data and policies, with a focus on trends rather than individuals. Yet at the end of the day, migration is the most human of phenomena, and one that has been around as long as humans have been on the planet. This discussion with award-winning New York Times reporter Jason DeParle traces the arc of migration and its impacts through the life of an extended family of Filipino migrants that he has followed from the slums of Manila to the Houston suburbs over three decades.

As DeParle launches his new book, A Good Provider Is One Who Leaves: One Family and Migration in the 21st Century, join the Migration Policy Institute for a conversation exploring migration at both a global and very personal level.

As he chronicles the story of three generations of a Filipino family, DeParle documents the personal, cultural, and economic challenges and opportunities the family faces, whether as migrants or those remaining behind. His reporting and analysis on immigration trends, the costs and rewards of migration to both sending and receiving communities, and examination of the political and economic questions surrounding migration offer the opportunity for a rich discussion. After the discussion, books will be for sale, and the author will be available to sign books.

No registration is necessary to view the livestream.

Out of the Shadows: Shining a Light on Irregular Migration

Launch Event for a New Report on Irregular Migration

3:00-4:30 p.m., Thursday, August 29, 2019
CSIS Headquarters, 2nd Floor
https://www.csis.org/events/out-shadows-shining-light-irregular-migration

Description: Millions of people around the world live in and travel through the shadows. Compelled to leave home, they migrate irregularly without proper documentation to gain access to jobs, education, healthcare, food, and other essential services. Irregular migration exists because there are not enough opportunities for safety and prosperity at home and too few conventional means through which to remedy that lack of opportunity. Recognizing the critical, understudied, and often misunderstood nature of this global phenomenon, CSIS produced a research study on irregular migration involving field research in Mexico, Eritrea, and Ghana. This report, which builds on CSIS' past work on the global forced migration crisis, aims to shine a light on irregular migration and contribute to an enormously consequential conversation.

Please join us for an event to launch CSIS's new report Out of the Shadows: Shining a Light on Irregular Migration.

domestic law, legal cases and policies designed to protect and assist people who have been forced to flee because of persecution, conflict and other life threatening events. It examines the causes of such flight as well as its consequences. Further discussed are the solutions to forced migration, including return, local integration and resettlement in a new community. The course explores such issues as the nexus between forced and voluntary migration, the transition from relief to development, and the intersection between refugee protection and security issues. It gives particular attention to asylum cases and standards for legal and physical protection of refugees.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, a successful student will be able to:

* Discuss the fundamentals of international and domestic law, legal cases and policies designed to protect and assist people who have been forced to flee because of persecution, conflict and other life threatening events.

* Discuss solutions to forced migration.

Leveraging Economic Migration for Development

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

12:30-2:00 p.m., Wednesday, September 11, 2019
The World Bank, JB1-080
701 18th St NW
Washington, DC 20006
https://www.knomad.org/event/leveraging-economic-migration-development

Description: This publication provides an overview of how the World Bank Group can leverage economic migration for development, based on a recent briefing to the World Bank's Board of Directors. It provides an update on data, drivers, and impacts; discusses recent changes in international governance, including the adoption of the Global Compact on Migration; describes World Bank Group activities during FY2017–19; and suggests future areas of activity. Migration is set to increase, driven by income gaps, demographic imbalances, and climate change. The World Bank Group can complement global efforts by (i) supporting safe and regular (legal) labor mobility, (ii) supporting the migration-related indicators specified in the Sustainable Development Goals (reducing recruitment costs paid by migrant workers, reducing remittance costs, leveraging remittances, and mobilizing diaspora resources for development), (iii) generating knowledge for policy making, and (iv) supporting global partnerships.

Archived video will be available after the event.

16th International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference
Thursday-Friday, September 19-20, 2019
Lancelot Thompson Student Union
3154 North Towerview Boulevard
Toledo, OH 43606
https://www.traffickingconference.com/

About: Since 2004, The International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference has been bringing together researchers, practitioners, and individuals with lived experience in an effort to lay the groundwork for future collaborative research, advocacy, and program development.

To date, the trafficking conference has welcomed attendees from 42 states and 30 countries to learn from researchers, survivors, and social service, health care, and criminal justice professionals about human trafficking and social justice topics.

Recently, there have been many new and exciting opportunities for expansion regarding the conference, which includes a name change because of a larger mission. In 2015, the conference title was changed to the International Human Trafficking & Social Justice Conference. The concept of social justice will expand topics at the conference to include many of the injustices seen in the world today.

We greatly appreciate those who have brought the conference this far. Change is hard, but is also necessary. All are welcome to join us in sharing knowledge and diverse perspectives at the conference. Our conference has a maximum of 12 continuing education credits pending for social work, counseling, marriage & family therapy, chemical dependency, nursing, health education, public health, and law.

Migration's Rescue of the European Union and Democracy

Harvard Center for European Studies

11:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m., Friday, September 20, 2019
Hoffmann Room, Adolphus Busch Hall
27 Kirkland Street at Cabot Way
Cambridge, MA 02138
https://ces.fas.harvard.edu/events/2019/09/migrations-rescue-of-the-european-union-and-democracy

Description: What factors make some democracies more resilient and others more prone to democratic backsliding? Thirty years after the fall of communism in Central and Eastern Europe, the political trajectories of the region's new democracies still defy expectations. Countries long-considered leaders in transitions to democracy and capitalism (Hungary, Poland) have experienced democratic backsliding and rising Euroscepticism.

Meanwhile, the laggards of post-communist transitions and EU accession (Romania, Bulgaria) now score higher that their Visegrad counterparts on some measures of democratic quality and retain EU support. What explains the unevenness of democratic consolidation in the region? This book argues that the way in which European citizenship is practiced as intra-EU free movement matters.

Even in times of crisis, European integration and liberalism maintain their appeal in countries where large parts of the population depend on European citizenship in their living-making. The book focuses on high-mobility migrants from Romania and Poland, the EU's main migrant-sending countries, and highlights migrants' contributions to political change in their homelands. Findings show that intra-EU mobility influences sociopolitical attitudes, voting, and the state-citizen relationship when people become economically emancipated from the national labor market (by working abroad) but remain politically rooted.

Findings also show that, paradoxically, a longer history of migration and state-led diaspora engagement limits the political incorporation of intra-EU migrants. A laissez-faire approach provides more space for bottom-up, citizen-led mobilization, empowering intra-EU movers as political actors.

Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan

4:30 p.m., Wednesday, September 25, 2019
Princeton University, Jones Hall, #211
Princeton, NJ 08544
https://eap.princeton.edu/events/help-not-wanted-immigration-politics-japan

Speaker(s):
Michael Strausz
Texas Christian University

Description: Why has Japan's immigration policy remained so restrictive, especially in light of economic, demographic, and international political forces that are pushing Japan to admit more immigrants? Michael Strausz will answer this question by drawing on insights from nearly two years of intensive field research in Japan. Ultimately, he will argue that Japan's immigration policy has remained restrictive for two reasons. First, Japan's labor-intensive businesses have failed to defeat anti-immigration forces within the Japanese state, particularly those in the Ministry of Justice and the Japanese Diet. Second, no influential strain of elite thought in postwar Japan exists to support the idea that significant numbers of foreign nationals have a legitimate claim to residency and citizenship.

In addition to an overview of postwar Japan's immigration control policy, this presentation provide context to recent developments in Japanese immigration policy – particularly the December 2018 decision to admit more than 300,000 low skilled foreign laborers.

Michael Strausz is an Associate Professor of Political Science and the Director of Asian Studies at Texas Christian University. He earned his BA in international relations and Japanese from Michigan State University and his MA and PhD in political science from the University of Washington. His book, Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan will be published with SUNY Press in August, and he has published a number of other articles and book chapters about topics including Japan's immigration policy and Japanese whaling. His research has been funded by grants from the Japan Foundation and the Fulbright Foundation, and he is a member of Cohort III of the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation 's U.S.-Japan Network for the Future.

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities

contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled “Democratic participation for migrant diasporas”. Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members’ involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members’ contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government
2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin – success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin
6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications
10. Emigrant literature

The conference organisers would like to emphasise that presenters have the opportunity to present on a different theme that is related to the general purpose.

Forced Migration, Protection, and Border Control

8:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m., Thursday, October 17, 2019
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, LLP
ONE New York Plaza, 1 FDR Drive
New York, NY 10004
https://cmsny.org/event/2019-symposium/

Description: On October 17, 2019, the Center for Migration Studies will hold its annual academic and policy symposium at the law offices of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP. The event will open with a keynote address by T. Alexander Aleinikoff, Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility, about new directions for forced migration policy studies. The keynote will be followed by panels about enforcement, responding to the needs of refugees, and access to the US asylum system. In the closing session, panelists and attendees will engage in an open discussion about research and policy priorities. This is CMS's sixth annual academic and policy conference, which celebrates the work of leading scholars and thinkers on international migration.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Agenda:

9:00–9:15 a.m.

Welcome:

Karen Grisez, Public Service Counsel
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP

Introduction:

Most Rev. Nicholas DiMarzio
Bishop of Brooklyn

9:15–10:30 p.m.

Keynote: New Directions for Forced Migration Policy Studies

T. Alexander Aleinikoff
Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility
The New School

10:45 a.m.–12:00 p.m.

Session I: Enforcement Efforts and their Adverse Impact on Protection: A Discussion about North America, Europe, and the Global South

Over the last few years, we have seen increased efforts to build barriers and systems that prevent refugees and asylum seekers from reaching safety and applying for asylum protection. How are enforcement efforts in various regions of the world impacting refugee protection and access to asylum? What challenges do enhanced enforcement efforts impose? How have efforts to externalize borders and prevent access to asylum countries impacted genuine refugees? How can we address these problems?

Moderator: Michele Pistone, Non-Resident Fellow and Associate Editor, Journal on Migration and Human Security, Center for Migration Studies; Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES), Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law
Speakers will be announced shortly.

1:15–2:30 p.m.

Session II: Challenges in Responding to the Needs of Refugees, Displaced Persons and their Host Communities in Protracted Situations

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

A majority of refugees and internally displaced persons are in protracted situations—defined by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees as five years or longer. Many of them are in low and medium income countries that have few resources available to provide security, education, livelihood and entrepreneurship opportunities, healthcare and other services for host communities, let alone refugees and displaced persons. This panel will discuss opportunities and challenges in addressing protracted situations, particularly in the context of adoption of the Global Compact on Refugees in December 2019.

Moderator:
Susan Martin, Donald G. Herzberg Professor Emeritus in the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University

Speakers:
Sarah Deardorff Miller, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

Leah Zamore, Center on International Cooperation, New York University

2:45–4:00 p.m.
Session III: Access to Asylum on the US-Mexico Border

The Trump administration and DHS officers have pursued a series of strategies to restrict access to the US asylum system. Most of these strategies – interception, turn-backs, zero tolerance enforcement, the separation of children from parents, requiring asylum-seekers to await the US asylum process in Mexico and barring asylum to most migrants who arrive at the US-Mexico border – have been focused on the US southern border. Other measures, such as the expansion of expedited removal, began at the border but have now been expanded to cover the entire United States and persons in the country for two years or less. The panel will review, critique and discuss alternatives to these policies.

Moderator:
Donald Kerwin, Executive Director, Center for Migration Studies

Speakers:
Josiah Heyman, Professor of Anthropology, Endowed Professor of Border Trade Issues, and Director of Center for Interamerican and Border Studies, University

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

of Texas, El Paso

Carmen Maquilon, Director of Catholic Charities Immigration Services of the Diocese of Rockville Centre

4:00–5:00 p.m.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

Engaging with the Private Sector to Better Protect Critical Infrastructures

-Weather related threats to critical supply chains
-Improving emergency protocols
-Conducting research into improving strategies and practices Kay Mereish, Senior Advisor, DHS

The race for 5G: Protecting Emerging FifthGeneration Wireless Networks

-End-to-end protection of network traffic
-Investing in R&D to address threats and vulnerabilities to mobile networks
-Improving visibility of traffic from mobile devices to detect malware, cyberattacks and data exfiltration attempts

12:30 p.m.

Interactive Discussion Groups

During this part of the conference, each attendee will have the opportunity to select three topics of their interest from the list below and will rotate between those sessions. Discussion groups are kept small to ensure all attendees get the opportunity to ask their most pressing questions, ensuring a perfectly tailored experience.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

1:30 p.m.

IDG Group 1

Key to Identifying Potential Terrorists through Research

-Identity crises often plays a significant role in a person's transition to terrorism
-Often potential terrorists will take part in certain activities that raise red flags about their intents
-Connections with known terrorists online or offline are a big factor in radicalization

Dr. Allison G. Smith, Social Scientist, DHS

IDG Group 2

Using AI for Video Analysis and Increasing Security

-Improving multimedia analytics
-Increasing video data processing time through automation
-Increasing automatic threat detection

Jeff Alstott, Program Manager, Intelligence Advanced Research Projects Activity

IDG Group 3

sUAS Threats and Policy Hurdles Facing Local Police Authorities

-sUAS threat profile for local communities
-Laws and policies limiting the abilities of local law enforcement
-Partnership opportunities with DHS to counter the threat of sUAS

IDG Group 4

Deploying Biometrics Technologies To Secure Sensitive Facilities

-Assessing security vulnerabilities of facilities
-Adding biometrics as an added layer of security
-Picking the best biometric security solutions for your facility

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2:15 p.m.

Key Updates On The National Vetting Center Operations

-What are some of the lessons learned?
-Approaches to working with the IC community to support NVC's operations
-Plans for expansion of vetting and enabling advanced analytics capabilities

National Security Threats Posed by Quantum Computing & Strategies to Mitigate Them

-Deploying more resilient cryptography standards
-Investing in quantum computing solutions
-Developing partnership with private industry to share technological know how

Using Artificial Intelligence and Situational Awareness Technologies for Critical Incident Response

-Enhancing quick decision-making skills
-Improving awareness connectivity between first responders
-Improving patient outcomes and healthcare

The Future of Biometrics & Identity Technologies

-What does the future of identity verification look like?
-Strategies and policies for biometric technology for the next 10 years
-Addressing privacy concerns and data leaks

2:45 p.m.

Improving Airport Security with the Help of AI

-Using machine learning-powered tools that can aide agents to identify threats
-accurately predict the location of threat objects on the body

Using Blockchain Technology to Improve Safety of Critical Infrastructures

-Blockchain shows promise to better protect IoT
-Improved defense mechanisms against collaborative intrusion detection

Dangers of Irregular Migration to National Security

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

-Human trafficking and drug smuggling networks
-Risk of potential terrorists
-Increased chance of spread of infectious diseases

Blas Nunez-Neto, Senior Policy Researcher, RAND

Transitioning Identity Management Systems To The Cloud
-Update on the development of HART
-Addressing stakeholder challenges
-Increasing collaboration and data sharing

4:00 p.m.
Promoting Best Practices and Streamlining Acquisition Management at DHS

-Establish cross-functional teams in which key stakeholders coordinate and execute the acquisition tasks
-Strategically assess agency needs and how acquisition can meet those needs
-Establish mechanisms that promote the participation of small business suppliers

4:30 p.m.
Cyber threats to critical infrastructure (what are the threats? How to counter them? How to mitigate impact of?

Bob Kolasky, Director, National Risk Management Center, CISA
Lara Schmidt, Director, Strategy, Policy, and Operations Program, RAND Ryan Consaul, Senior International Defense Researcher, RAND

Friday, November 22, 2019

9:00 a.m.
Breaking Down the DHS Information Technology Strategic Plan 2019-2023

-Optimize workplace technologies with cost-efficient and high impact solutions
-Developing a plan for safe and swift cloud migration
-Implement data protection practices to safeguard DHS systems and applications

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

9:45 a.m.

Keynote Presentation -James P. O'Neill, Police Commissioner, NYPD

11:15 a.m.

The Nexus Between Homeland Defense and Homeland Security

Homeland Defense: A Whole of Nation Mission

-The strategic environment demands an urgent reexamination of Homeland Defense
-Any gaps between Homeland Defense and Homeland Security must be addressed
-DoD Mission Assurance requires whole of community partnerships

Neal Anderson, Senior Advisor to DHS, NORAD

Promoting Public-Private Partnerships to Promote Security and Increase Resilience within the Nation's Chemical Industry

-Developing and implementing partnerships -Strategies and protocols during natural disasters
-Promoting good practices among federal, state and local agencies

Eric Choy, Chief, Chemical Sector Specific Agency, CISA, DHS
Amy Graydon, Deputy Director at Infrastructure Security Compliance Division, DHS Jonathan Buckles, Section Chief, Government & Industry Affairs, DHS

12:00 p.m.

Engaging with the Private Sector to Better Protect Critical Infrastructures

-Establishing protocols to promote information sharing
-Equipping Private Sector critical infrastructure owners and the intelligence needed to protect instrumental assets
-Strengthening and expanding current partnership agreements

Modernizing CBP's IT Infrastructure to increase network resilience and streamlining CBP operations

-Implementing cloud technologies to better connect the vast CBP IT network

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

-Using machine learning and data analytics tools to improve CBP's threat and fraud detection capabilities
-Modernizing CBP network to increase bandwidth for all users and increasing protection against attacks

1:30 p.m.

Developing Effective Response Plans to CBRN Attacks That Minimize Risk to Personnel

-Training federal government employees in how to best respond to CBRN attacks with minimal loss of services
-Identifying new and emerging technologies in the field and finding their applications within Homeland Security

Sean Crawford, Director, Chemical, Biological, Radiological, Nuclear Office, FEMA

Investing in full spectrum impedance and denial capabilities to reduce illegal immigration, drug smuggling and human trafficking

-Increasing infrastructure investment at the border and enforcement of immigration and criminal laws
-Equipping our law enforcement professionals with the latest tools, technology, and training they need to do their job
-Collaborating with federal and local law enforcement agencies and international

2:15 p.m.

Supporting Border Response And Recovery Capabilities With And Between Federal, State, Local And Canadian Partners

-Implementing plans to promote open communication and strategies across the international boundary
-Evaluating progress toward addressing capability gaps in the Northern and Southern Border
-Policies & Plans to facilitate effective response and recovery operations

Manpower, the core of CBP: Recruiting, Hiring, training, and retaining the most qualifies people

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

-Enhancing recruiting and hiring efforts and reducing obstacles to attracting quality candidates
-Improving the messaging of recruitment campaigns to more closely align with CBP's mission
-Offering incentives to increase staff retention

3:15 p.m.
Intelligence Sharing Panel Discussion

Protecting the American people from ever-changing domestic and transnational threats requires a DHS that shares intelligence not only with internal agencies but also partnering federal intelligence agencies. In this panel leaders from various national intelligence agencies will discuss how far they have come since 9/11 when it comes to intelligence sharing and pinpoint areas for improvement.

Panelists:
Sean Moon, Chief, Global Strategies, Office of Strategy, Policy, and Plans, DHS

Lilian Alessa, Deputy Chief, Global Strategies, DHS

Trump's Commonsense Rule on Immigrant Welfare Use

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (August 13, 2019) [From a post in National Review by Mark Krikorian]- The newly finalized rule about immigrant welfare use is 837 pages long, but it boils down to two things: Foreigners who can't pay their bills shouldn't be allowed to move here, and "welfare" doesn't just mean cash benefits.

As to the first: The first comprehensive immigration law at the federal level was the 1882 Immigration Act, which, among other things, excluded anyone who was "unable to take care of himself or herself without becoming a public charge." That principle — the "public-charge doctrine," as it's called — has been included in all subsequent immigration legislation, including the 1996 immigration and welfare-reform laws.

But the exclusion of "public charges" didn't start in the 19th century, but well before that, when immigration law was handled by the states. In fact, preventing the immigration of people who couldn't support themselves was the subject of the very first immigration law ever passed in the colonies, in Massachusetts Bay in 1645. It's not too much to say that the public-charge doctrine is the founding principle of American immigration policy.

The second point involves a more recent issue. In 1996 Congress passed welfare-reform and immigration laws that sought to put more teeth in the existing public-charge rules. These measures had no lasting impact on the share of immigrants using welfare; within five years, the rate of immigration welfare use was right back where it had been before the changes. Today, some 63 percent of households headed by non-citizens use at least one welfare program, including an astonishing 80 percent of non-citizen households with children.

Immigrants shouldn't just use welfare less than the native-born — ideally, they shouldn't use it at all. Past attempts at building a wall around the welfare state have enjoyed only modest success at best, and I don't expect this latest effort to be an exception. The only way to truly fix this is much lower overall numbers and much higher standards.

Baltimore as a Model for Bad Immigration Policies

Washington, D.C. (August 13, 2019) - Several new analyses from the Center for Immigration Studies find that Baltimore's immigration policies, both at the federal and local level, negatively impact Baltimore's native-born residents.

Andrew Arthur, the Center's Resident Fellow in Law and Policy, said, "Baltimore's mayor recently instructed city employees not to cooperate with federal immigration authorities. Yet, when it comes to crime against Baltimore residents, the mayor pleads for cooperation with law enforcement. Why are black Americans in Baltimore being treated more harshly by law enforcement than aliens?"

View the full analysis: https://cis.org/Arthur/Baltimore-Model-Democrats-Schizophrenia-Immigration

Further, the unemployment rate in Baltimore remains well above the national average, and 17 percent of all Baltimoreans 25 or older dropped out of school before completing high school, or failed to receive any schooling at all. On a federal level, failure to secure the border means Baltimoreans will continue to compete with illegal immigrants with modest levels of education for jobs.

Finally, Baltimore is harshly affected by two drugs that come largely from south of the border: fentanyl and heroin. Between 2011 and 2017, Baltimore's overdose rate soared from 22.7 per 100,000 residents to 85.2 per 100,000. Baltimore has the highest overdose fatality rate of any city in the United States.

Restricting immigration and securing the border would mean fewer drug deaths in Baltimore, less job competition, and would help to reduce the law enforcement treatment disparity between aliens and citizens.

Minimizing the National Security Risk of U.S. Foreign Student and Exchange Visitor Policies

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The Center for Immigration Studies will host a panel discussion on Tuesday, August 20, focusing on the potential national security risk posed by our current policies relating to foreign students and exchange visitors. The conversation will center around the release of a report, "U.S. Foreign Student and Exchange Visitor Policies Undercut National Security". Well over a million foreign students and scholars are in the U.S., many accompanied by spouses and children, most either studying or working on their student visas through the Optional Practical Training (OPT) program. These numbers do not include the large number of foreign nationals who remain illegally in the country after their visas expire – the student and exchange visa category has the highest overstay rate of all visa categories.

Jessica Vaughan, the Center's director of policy studies, and Center fellows David North and Dan Cadman will address how to balance protecting national security with introducing international students to our culture, institutions, and values. Panelists will also discuss options that will encourage, educate and provide opportunities to native-born STEM (science technology, engineering, mathematics) students – a population hurt by present policies.

TOPIC: Minimizing the National Security Risks of U.S. Foreign Student and Exchange Visitor Policies

What's Happening at the Center

In a recent column, Mark Krikorian explains that the administration's newly finalized public charge rule is intended to restrict admittance of foreigners who can't pay their bills and to define welfare use more accurately to include non-cash benefits. The public-charge doctrine was the subject of the very first immigration law ever passed in the colonies, in Massachusetts Bay in 1645. It is the founding principle of American immigration policy. Today, some 63 percent of households headed by non-citizens use at least one welfare program, including an astonishing 80 percent of non-citizen households with children. Under the new rule, immigrants using non-cash subsidies, such as food stamps, Medicaid, free school lunch, and public housing, will not be considered self-supporting, which is a change from the current narrowly defined use of welfare. The new rule is a change in the right direction but even if it is enforced as stringently as possible, you're still going to end up with relatively high levels of immigrant welfare use so long as the federal immigration program selects people based mainly on family connections or random chance.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Student and Exchange Visitor Policies

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The Center for Immigration Studies will host a panel discussion on Tuesday, August 20, focusing on the potential national security risk posed by our current policies relating to foreign students and exchange visitors. The conversation will center around the release of a report authored by CIS fellow Dan Cadman, "How U.S. Foreign Student and Exchange Visitor Policies Undercut National Security".

FACEBOOK LIVE:
https://www.facebook.com/CenterforImmigrationStudies/posts/10158812155243102

Well over a million foreign students and scholars are in the U.S., many accompanied by spouses and children, most either studying or working on their student visas through the Optional Practical Training (OPT) program. These numbers do not include the large number of foreign nationals who remain illegally in the country after their visas expire – the student and exchange visa category has the highest overstay rate of all visa categories.

Jessica Vaughan, the Center's director of policy studies, and Center fellows David North and Dan Cadman will address how to balance protecting national security with introducing international students to our culture, institutions, and values. Panelists will also discuss options that will encourage, educate and provide opportunities to native-born STEM (science technology, engineering, mathematics) students – a population hurt by present policies.

How the Flores Loophole Is Driving the Border Crisis

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Matthew Sussis, the Center's former Assistant Director of Communications

Washington, D.C. (August 21, 2019) - A video from the Center for Immigration Studies analyzes how a loophole in our asylum system known as the Flores Settlement Agreement is driving the border crisis.

Matt Sussis, the Center's former Assistant Director of Communications, said, "Flores began as an agreement governing the treatment of certain minors in detention, but it has been drastically expanded by activist judges. Now, it ensures that all minors and their parents are caught-and-released into the U.S. within three weeks, creating a powerful incentive for migration."

The Flores Settlement Agreement was originally signed in 1997 as a deal between immigration activists and the Clinton administration regarding unaccompanied minors. In 2015, a California district judge named Dolly Gee expanded Flores to apply to accompanied minors as well, and set a 20-day limit for all minors to be released from Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) custody.

As a result, the number of apprehended aliens claiming credible fear, which is the first step in seeking asylum, soared 67 percent in 2018 and rose ten-fold compared to a decade ago.

ICE Secure Communities Removals Falling
August 13, 2019
https://trac.syr.edu/immigration/reports/570/

Summary: Recently released Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) removal-by-removal records on Secure Communities (SC) reveal that the number of SC deportations has been trending downward during the past year. As of April 2019—the latest data available—the monthly number of SC removals had fallen to 6,152. This is down from 7,456 in May of 2018. These national trends are shown in Figure 1. The height of each bar reflects the actual number of SC deportations each month, while the superimposed line shows the moving 3-month average that smooths out month-to-month fluctuations.

Skilled Labor Mobility and Migration: Challenges and Opportunities for the ASEAN Economic Community

By Elisabetta Gentile

Edward Elgar Pub., 320 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 178811616X, $79.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/178811616X/centerforimmigra

Paperback, ISBN: 1108731775, $28.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1108731775/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 212 pp., ASIN: B07VBNPCD8, $23.00

Book Description: Regional integration plays an important role in the advance of economic and social development across many parts of the world. Generating growth and expanding markets, it boosts productivity through the exchange of ideas, technologies, and human resources. This book explores the key vision of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN): fostering the free flow of goods, services, investment, and skilled labor in order to establish a globally competitive region with a single market and production base.

Bringing together contributions from renowned scholars in their respective fields, this book takes stock of the trends and patterns of skilled labor migration in the ASEAN, examining the existing literature and adding to it with unique insights drawn from original case studies and policy simulations. Identifying the challenges posed by recent significant changes, this book also looks to the future, to identify potential policy responses. The contributions dispel a common assumption that skill mobility is a zero-sum game, and instead contend that it can be mutually beneficial for both sides.

With rigorous quantitative analysis, this book will be a useful tool for both policy practitioners and policymakers as well as for researchers and students of international development, economics, and Asian studies.

The Unsettling of Europe: How Migration Reshaped a Continent

By Peter Gatrell

Basic Books, 576 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 0465093612, $35.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0465093612/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 71659 KB, ASIN: B07H28QJF5, $19.99

Book Description: Migration is perhaps the most pressing issue of our time, and it has completely decentered European politics in recent years. But as we consider the current refugee crisis, acclaimed historian Peter Gatrell reminds us that the history of Europe has always been one of people on the move.

The end of World War II left Europe in a state of confusion with many Europeans virtually stateless. Later, as former colonial states gained national independence, colonists and their supporters migrated to often-unwelcoming metropoles. The collapse of communism in 1989 marked another fundamental turning point.

Gatrell places migration at the center of post-war European history, and the aspirations of migrants themselves at the center of the story of migration. This is an urgent history that will reshape our understanding of modern Europe.

Social Work with Refugees, Asylum Seekers and Migrants: Theory and

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Skills for Practice
By Lauren Wroe, Rachel Larkin, Reima Ana Maglajlic, et al.

Jessica Kingsley Publishers, 296 pp.

Paperback, ISBN: 1785923447, $29.95
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1785923447/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1043 KB, ASIN: 1785923447, 298 pp., $28.45

Book Description: Mass-migration, conflict and poverty are now persistent features of our globalised world. This reference book for social workers and service providers offers constructive ideas for practice within an inter-disciplinary framework.

Each chapter speaks to a skill and knowledge area that is key to this work, bringing together myriad voices from across disciplines, interspersed with the vital perspectives of asylum seekers, refugees and migrants themselves. The book discusses the specific challenges faced when working in the community, and where people have suffered torture, in the context of social work practiced from an ethical value-base.

Staying up to date with the latest developments in policy; and addressing key specific skills needed to work with people affected by borders, this book is a valuable resource for both practitioners and students.

Precarious Hope: Migration and the Limits of Belonging in Turkey
By Ayse Parla

Stanford University Press, 256 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1503608107, $90.00

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1503608107/centerforimmigra

Paperback, ISBN: 150360943X, $28.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/150360943X/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 942 KB, ASIN: B07V4FYL76, 305 pp., $28.00

Book Description: There are more than 700,000 Bulgaristanli migrants residing in Turkey. Immigrants from Bulgaria who are ethnically Turkish, they assume certain privileges because of these ethnic ties, yet access to citizenship remains dependent on the whims of those in power. Through vivid accounts of encounters with the police and state bureaucracy, of nostalgic memories of home and aspirations for a more secure life in Turkey, Precarious Hope explores the tensions between ethnic privilege and economic vulnerability and rethinks the limits of migrant belonging among those for whom it is intimated and promised but never guaranteed.

In contrast to the typical focus on despair, Ayse Parla studies the hopefulness of migrants. Turkish immigration policies have worked in lockstep with national aspirations for ethnic, religious, and ideological conformity, offering Bulgaristanli migrants an advantage over others. Their hope is the product of privilege and an act of dignity and perseverance. It is also a tool of the state, reproducing a migration regime that categorizes some as desirable and others as foreign and dispensable. Through the experiences of the Bulgaristanli, Precarious Hope speaks to the global predicament in which increasing numbers of people are forced to manage both cultivation of hope and relentless anxiety within structures of inequality.

Ethiopian Migrant Domestic Workers: Migrant Agency and Social Change
By Bina Fernandez

Palgrave Pivot, 156 pp.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Hardcover, ISBN: 3030240541, $59.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/3030240541/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 415 KB, ASIN: B07W7XK2SF, $56.99

Book Description: This book tells the stories of the Ethiopian women who migrate to work as domestic workers in the Middle East. Drawing on qualitative research in Ethiopia, Lebanon and Kuwait, the author reveals how women's aspirations to migrate are constituted within unequal gendered structures of opportunity in Ethiopia and asks us to consider how gender, race, class and nationality intersect in the construction of migrant subjectivities and agency. By analysing the impact of migration on social reproduction both in Ethiopia and the destination countries, the book offers fresh empirical and theoretical insights into the largest stream of women's autonomous international migration from Africa.

Australia, Migration and Empire: Immigrants in a Globalised World
By Philip Payton and Andrekos Varnava

Palgrave Macmillan, 319 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 3030223884, $119.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/3030223884/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 6402 KB, ASIN: B07WHGSZJD, $84.99

Book Description: This edited collection explores how migrants played a major role in the creation and settlement of the British Empire, by focusing on a series of Australian case studies. Despite their shared experiences of migration and settlement, migrants nonetheless often exhibited distinctive cultural identities, which could be deployed for advantage. Migration established global mobility as a defining feature of the Empire. Ethnicity, class and gender were often powerful determinants of migrant attitudes and behaviour. This volume addresses these considerations, illuminating the complexity and diversity of the British Empire's global immigration story. Since 1788, the propensity of the populations of Britain and Ireland to immigrate to Australia varied widely, but what this volume highlights is their remarkable diversity in character and impact. The book also presents the opportunities that existed for other immigrant groups to demonstrate their loyalty as members of the (white) Australian community, along with notable exceptions which demonstrated the limits of this inclusivity.

Video and Report: Foreign Student Policies Undercutting National Security

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (August 26, 2019) – Transcript and video is now available of the Center for Immigration Studies' panel discussion centered around a new Center report, highlighting the ongoing national security risks the United States confronts as a result of current policies regarding international students and scholars. The problems related to these policies are intensified by the numbers; a five-year trend reflects over two million admissions each year in the three relevant visa categories (F-1 students, M-1 vocational students, and J-1 exchange visitors).

Dan Cadman, a Center fellow and author of the report, stressed that hundreds of thousands of these foreign students come from countries that are known to be home to active terrorist movements, or have hostile and aggressive intelligence agencies actively engaged in collection of sensitive U.S. data, or have established official stumbling blocks to the repatriation of their citizens under final orders of removal. Foreign students enter U.S. academic institutions from countries like North Korea, Iran, Syria, and Yemen.

David North, a Center fellow, highlighted the Optional Practical Training (OPT) – a program that incentivizes foreign students to extend their stay in the U.S. and provides corporations a financial incentive to hire the foreign graduates, not the American graduates, of U.S. schools. OPT "takes billions of dollars away from Social Security and Medicare … and simultaneously deny about a third of a million Americans a job."

Jessica Vaughan, the Center's director of policy studies, voiced concern about the overstay rate of foreign students - double the rate of other nonimmigrants in the country. "We see very large numbers from countries of concern for espionage like China and Iran, and countries of national security concern like Saudi Arabia." China had the highest number of visa overstays in the student and exchange visitor category in 2018 with 13,000 people overstaying their visa.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Cadman said, "How the U.S. handles its massive foreign student population is both unacceptable and, in the long run, a danger to our nation's security and competitive edge. There is a general lack of oversight of the institutions authorized to accept foreign students and scholars, many of them seduced by the lure of money. This lack of oversight is also true regarding the students themselves."

The report stresses the dangers of temporary visa holders earning 37 percent of the country's doctorate degrees in science and engineering and Chinese nationals earning 25 percent of all U.S. STEM degrees. Mr. Cadman recommends that the U.S.:

- encourage native-born STEM students;
- limit the number of student and research visas granted;
- limit the exposure of foreign students and research scholars to sensitive information and courses of study;
- re-invigorate nonimmigrant student and scholar control and enforcement programs; and
- change the culture at Student and Exchange Visitor Program (SEVP is the agency within ICE that oversees the foreign student program) and hold approved institutions to their commitments.

The FY 2020 Refugee Ceiling?

15,000 could cover all UNHCR urgent and emergency submissions worldwide next year

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

President Trump's determination of the FY 2020 refugee resettlement ceiling is set to take place very soon. Some news outlets have reported that the refugee admissions this upcoming fiscal year (October 1, 2019, to September 30, 2020) are set to drop dramatically, perhaps even to zero. Outraged responses were quick to follow.

Read the Full Report

Contrary to common claims, for most refugees, resettlement is not a matter of life and death. UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) data on its 2017 and 2018 resettlement activities shows that the vast majority of refugees referred to third countries for resettlement (including the United States) are neither the most vulnerable nor in urgent need of relocation. Only 17 percent were "urgent" or "emergency" submissions.

As underlined by the State Department, the U.S. resettlement program is intended to serve refugees "who are especially vulnerable; those who fled violence or persecution and cannot safely stay where they are or return home." But that is not who the United States is currently resettling. The majority of refugees resettled here could have stayed in the countries they fled to. While most did, undoubtedly, suffer from unemployment, destitution, and despair in their country of first refuge, those hardships alone are not grounds for resettlement.

The United States must not diverge from the raison d'être of the resettlement program, a protection tool for exceptionally vulnerable refugees in situations where it is impossible for them to remain in their host country. Even if the Trump administration decides to resettle all urgent and emergency cases submitted by UNHCR worldwide next year, a FY 2020 refugee ceiling of 15,000 is more than sufficient and commendable.

Foreign Students and National Security: Student Visa Overstays
By Jessica Vaughn

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Horrendous crimes at the hands of illegal aliens in Montgomery County, Maryland due to reckless sanctuary city policies. Arthur explains the obstacles of local law enforcement and ICE attempting to apprehend dangerous illegal alien criminals who often harm immigrant communities. Arthur elaborates on the nationwide implications of these sanctuary policies.

The FY 2020 Refugee Ceiling?
By Nayla Rush
Controversy over refugee resettlement and entry continues on in the Trump administration. Rush reviews the policy behind resettlement and breaks down the financial and moral implications it has on the American people. Finally, Rush explains whether abolishing the resettlement program is a solution to solving the refugee problem.

Visa overstays by foreign student and exchange visitors adds to the growing illegal immigration problem in the United States. Vaughn details the overstay rates of this group by year and country, and offers recommendations to remedy the problem to assist employers, schools, and exchange program sponsors involved in the Optional Practical Training program.

U.S.-Supported Brazilian Op Busts Smugglers Moving Migrants from Muslim-Majority Countries
By Todd Bensman
U.S. and Brazilian law enforcement dismantle a human smuggling operation, many of the migrants smuggled had national security designations. Bensman highlights the growing numbers of migrants from high-volume terror regions of the Middle East, Africa, and South Asia attempting to reach the United States.

Europe's Policies Toward Refugees: Pressures, Contradictions, and Consequences

12:30-1:30 p.m,, Thursday, September 5, 2019
Elizabeth E. Nanovic Seminar Room, 1050
Jenkins Nanovic Halls
University of Notre Dame
Notre Dame, IN 46556 USA
https://events.nd.edu/events/2019/09/05/lecture-with-elizabeth-ferris/

Description: In 2015, over a million migrants and asylum-seekers arrived in Europe, leading to a crisis in the international refugee system, to soaring tensions within the European Union and to the rise of hardline anti-immigrant parties in almost all European countries. Europe now struggles to reconcile its liberal democratic values with political pressures to stem the flow of immigrants and asylum-seekers. European refugee policies are not merely debated in the halls of power in Brussels, Berlin and Rome. They have real human consequences as evidenced by the thousands of deaths in the Mediterranean Sea in the past few years. This presentation will explore the pressures, contradictions and potential consequences of European policies toward those arriving on its borders in search of safety.

Description: In his new book, "A Good Provider Is One Who Leaves: One Family and Migration in the 21st Century" (Viking, 2019), New York Times reporter and two-time Pulitzer Prize–finalist Jason DeParle explores a wide range of economic, political, and cultural facets of contemporary immigration. He tells the story of a Filipino family, the Comodas, from the Manila shantytown where he first met them in the early 1980s to Saudi Arabia, Texas, and Abu Dhabi, as they navigate cultural and linguistic differences, visas and credit cards, and complicated household structures.

Please join AEI for a conversation about Mr. DeParle's new book and the complex and global nature of migration flows.

Leveraging Economic Migration for Development

12:30-2:00 p.m., Wednesday, September 11, 2019
The World Bank, JB1-080

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

701 18th St NW
Washington, DC 20006
https://www.knomad.org/event/leveraging-economic-migration-development

Description: This publication provides an overview of how the World Bank Group can leverage economic migration for development, based on a recent briefing to the World Bank's Board of Directors. It provides an update on data, drivers, and impacts; discusses recent changes in international governance, including the adoption of the Global Compact on Migration; describes World Bank Group activities during FY2017–19; and suggests future areas of activity. Migration is set to increase, driven by income gaps, demographic imbalances, and climate change. The World Bank Group can complement global efforts by (i) supporting safe and regular (legal) labor mobility, (ii) supporting the migration-related indicators specified in the Sustainable Development Goals (reducing recruitment costs paid by migrant workers, reducing remittance costs, leveraging remittances, and mobilizing diaspora resources for development), (iii) generating knowledge for policy making, and (iv) supporting global partnerships.

Archived video will be available after the event.

16th International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference
Thursday-Friday, September 19-20, 2019

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Lancelot Thompson Student Union
3154 North Towerview Boulevard
Toledo, OH 43606
https://www.traffickingconference.com/

About: Since 2004, The International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference has been bringing together researchers, practitioners, and individuals with lived experience in an effort to lay the groundwork for future collaborative research, advocacy, and program development.

To date, the trafficking conference has welcomed attendees from 42 states and 30 countries to learn from researchers, survivors, and social service, health care, and criminal justice professionals about human trafficking and social justice topics.

Recently, there have been many new and exciting opportunities for expansion regarding the conference, which includes a name change because of a larger mission. In 2015, the conference title was changed to the International Human Trafficking & Social Justice Conference. The concept of social justice will expand topics at the conference to include many of the injustices seen in the world today.

We greatly appreciate those who have brought the conference this far. Change is hard, but is also necessary. All are welcome to join us in sharing knowledge and diverse perspectives at the conference. Our conference has a maximum of 12 continuing education credits pending for social work, counseling, marriage & family therapy, chemical dependency, nursing, health education, public health, and law.

Migration's Rescue of the European Union and Democracy

Harvard Center for European Studies

11:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m., Friday, September 20, 2019
Hoffmann Room, Adolphus Busch Hall
27 Kirkland Street at Cabot Way
Cambridge, MA 02138
https://ces.fas.harvard.edu/events/2019/09/migrations-rescue-of-the-european-union-and-democracy

Description: What factors make some democracies more resilient and others more prone to democratic backsliding? Thirty years after the fall of communism in Central and Eastern Europe, the political trajectories of the region's new democracies still defy expectations. Countries long-considered leaders in transitions to democracy and capitalism (Hungary, Poland) have experienced democratic backsliding and rising Euroscepticism.

Meanwhile, the laggards of post-communist transitions and EU accession (Romania, Bulgaria) now score higher that their Visegrad counterparts on some measures of democratic quality and retain EU support. What explains the unevenness of democratic consolidation in the region? This book argues that the way in which European citizenship is practiced as intra-EU free movement matters.

Even in times of crisis, European integration and liberalism maintain their appeal in countries where large parts of the population depend on European citizenship in their living-making. The book focuses on high-mobility migrants from Romania and Poland, the EU's main migrant-sending countries, and highlights migrants' contributions to political change in their homelands. Findings show that intra-EU mobility influences sociopolitical attitudes, voting, and the state-citizen relationship when people become economically emancipated from the national labor market (by working abroad) but remain politically rooted.

Findings also show that, paradoxically, a longer history of migration and state-led diaspora engagement limits the political incorporation of intra-EU migrants. A laissez-faire approach provides more space for bottom-up, citizen-led mobilization, empowering intra-EU movers as political actors.

Ruxandra Paul, Assistant Professor of Political Science, Amherst College; Local Affiliate, CES, Harvard University

Princeton University, Jones Hall, #211
Princeton, NJ 08544
https://eap.princeton.edu/events/help-not-wanted-immigration-politics-japan

Speaker(s):
Michael Strausz
Texas Christian University

Description: Why has Japan's immigration policy remained so restrictive, especially in light of economic, demographic, and international political forces that are pushing Japan to admit more immigrants? Michael Strausz will answer this question by drawing on insights from nearly two years of intensive field research in Japan. Ultimately, he will argue that Japan's immigration policy has remained restrictive for two reasons. First, Japan's labor-intensive businesses have failed to defeat anti-immigration forces within the Japanese state, particularly those in the Ministry of Justice and the Japanese Diet. Second, no influential strain of elite thought in postwar Japan exists to support the idea that significant numbers of foreign nationals have a legitimate claim to residency and citizenship.

In addition to an overview of postwar Japan's immigration control policy, this presentation provide context to recent developments in Japanese immigration policy – particularly the December 2018 decision to admit more than 300,000 low skilled foreign laborers.

Michael Strausz is an Associate Professor of Political Science and the Director of Asian Studies at Texas Christian University. He earned his BA in international relations and Japanese from Michigan State University and his MA and PhD in political science from the University of Washington. His book, Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan will be published with SUNY Press in August, and he has published a number of other articles and book chapters about topics including Japan's immigration policy and Japanese whaling. His research has been funded by grants from the Japan Foundation and the Fulbright Foundation, and he is a member of Cohort III of the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation 's U.S.-Japan Network for the Future.

16th Annual Immigration Law and Policy Conference

Monday, October 7, 2019
Georgetown University Law Center
Bernard P. McDonough Hall
Hart Auditorium
600 New Jersey Ave. NW
Washington, D.C. 20001
https://www.migrationpolicy.org/events/16thannual-immigration-law-policy-conference

Keynote Speaker:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Kevin K. McAleenan, Acting Secretary of Homeland Security

Panels:

State of Play: Central to the Trump Administration's Record, Immigration Looms as the Major 2020 Issue

Moderator:

Doris Meissner, Senior Fellow and Director, U.S. Policy Program, MPI

From Donald Trump's first utterances as a presidential candidate in 2015 to the hundreds of policy actions undertaken during his administration, immigration has loomed as the major touchstone for his political base. It is the issue to which the president and his administration return again and again. Chaos at the U.S.-Mexico border resulted from a sharp uptick in flows, as well as outmatched policies, infrastructure, and resources. Now, a growing number of Americans cite immigration as one of the most crucial national issues. Yet Congress remains incapable of even small-bore fixes, continuing its nearly two-decade inability to undertake substantive immigration legislation. Vast differences exist among Republican and Democratic politicians and other stakeholders—from "build the wall" and narrowing humanitarian protections on one side, to #AbolishICE and pressing to decriminalize illegal crossings on the other.

Whither immigration as high-stakes elections approach in 2020? In what's sure to be a lively State of Play conversation, political and policy experts will explore the politics of immigration, the pitfalls for both political parties, and the potential for a post-election pause in the brinkmanship. Also, what about the possibility for reform as DREAMers await a major decision at the Supreme Court? What other pressing challenges may converge to force action in Washington?

Volleying among the Branches of Government: DACA, TPS, Asylum, and Other Policies That Hang in the Balance

Moderator:

Muzaffar Chishti, Director, MPI's office at New York University School of Law

In an unprecedented era of executive branch policy-making in the immigration arena, the nation's federal judiciary has been called to decide a raft of major cases that hold the lives of more than 1 million recipients of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals and Temporary Protected Status in the balance, and govern

the conditions of care for children in immigration detention and the ability to apply for asylum. The administration's action on the "public charge" rule may end up in the courts as well, and the fallout from the controversy of including a citizenship question on the 2020 census remains unsettled. What are the legal underpinnings, the stakes, and the possible outcomes as the nation's courts, from district courts all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, hear and rule on a consequential portfolio of legal challenges? And what is or will be Congress' response given the dynamic interplay of litigation and executive action? Our panel of top experts will tackle these big questions.

Drawing a New Line: Recent Changes in U.S.-Mexico Border Policy

Moderator:
Anna Gallagher, Executive Director, Catholic Legal Immigration Network, Inc.

Under the current administration, U.S.-Mexico border polices have dominated headlines, becoming both the symbol and testing ground of hardline immigration policy. Family separation, the deaths of children in immigration custody, and the detention of men, women, and children in unsafe, overcrowded conditions have stirred national concern.

The asylum system alone has been hamstrung by "metering" that slows entry to a trickle, enormous court backlogs, the wholesale return to Mexico of asylum applicants awaiting their court appearances, and policies that attempt to force applicants to first seek protection in other countries.

This panel will explore what these policies have meant to asylum seekers and the communities that straddle the 2,000-mile-long line. Topics will include family separation, Remain in Mexico, the wall, state and local work, and more. The panelists also will consider whether the administration is achieving results with its efforts to reshape overall enforcement, the responses from local border communities, and related litigation.

The Humanitarian and Migration Crisis Originating in Central America: The Need for Regional Approaches

Moderator:
Andrew Schoenholtz, Professor from Practice, Georgetown Law; Director, Human Rights Institute; Co-Director, Center for Applied Legal Studies

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In recent years, the humanitarian and migration crisis in the three Northern Triangle countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras has resulted in increasing international migration, particularly of women and children as well as unaccompanied minors. Most of them cross the Guatemala-Mexico border to head towards the United States, while some migrate to countries in the region, such as Costa Rica. Many are fleeing serious violence carried out by gangs and other non-state actors, though the search for better livelihoods and family reunification with relatives already in the United States plays a role as well. Governments do not control territories where gangs and drug cartels rule, nor are they able to protect women and girls from domestic abuse and other forms of violence or insecurity. Natural disasters, climate change, food insecurity, and poor economic conditions exacerbate the situation for vulnerable people. This panel will discuss the best ways for governments, international organizations, and NGOs in the region to address this crisis, particularly in terms of root causes and the protection of families and children.

More information on the agenda and speakers to follow soon. This event will not be live streamed.

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;
* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;
* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and
* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled “Democratic participation for migrant diasporas”. Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members’ involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members’ contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government
2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora
3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin – success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin
6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications
10. Emigrant literature

The conference organisers would like to emphasise that presenters have the opportunity to present on a different theme that is related to the general purpose.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Session I: Enforcement Efforts and their Adverse Impact on Protection: A Discussion about North America, Europe, and the Global South

Over the last few years, we have seen increased efforts to build barriers and systems that prevent refugees and asylum seekers from reaching safety and applying for asylum protection. How are enforcement efforts in various regions of the world impacting refugee protection and access to asylum? What challenges do enhanced enforcement efforts impose? How have efforts to externalize borders and prevent access to asylum countries impacted genuine refugees? How can we address these problems?
Moderator: Michele Pistone, Non-Resident Fellow and Associate Editor, Journal on Migration and Human Security, Center for Migration Studies; Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES), Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law
Speakers will be announced shortly.

1:15–2:30 p.m.
Session II: Challenges in Responding to the Needs of Refugees, Displaced Persons and their Host Communities in Protracted Situations

A majority of refugees and internally displaced persons are in protracted situations—defined by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees as five years or longer. Many of them are in low and medium income countries that have few resources available to provide security, education, livelihood and entrepreneurship opportunities, healthcare and other services for host communities, let alone refugees and displaced persons. This panel will discuss opportunities and challenges in addressing protracted situations, particularly in the context of adoption of the Global Compact on Refugees in December 2019.

Moderator:
Susan Martin, Donald G. Herzberg Professor Emeritus in the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University

Speakers:
Sarah Deardorff Miller, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

Leah Zamore, Center on International Cooperation, New York University

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2:45–4:00 p.m.

Session III: Access to Asylum on the US-Mexico Border

The Trump administration and DHS officers have pursued a series of strategies to restrict access to the US asylum system. Most of these strategies – interception, turn-backs, zero tolerance enforcement, the separation of children from parents, requiring asylum-seekers to await the US asylum process in Mexico and barring asylum to most migrants who arrive at the US-Mexico border – have been focused on the US southern border. Other measures, such as the expansion of expedited removal, began at the border but have now been expanded to cover the entire United States and persons in the country for two years or less. The panel will review, critique and discuss alternatives to these policies.
Moderator: Donald Kerwin, Executive Director, Center for Migration Studies

Speakers:
Josiah Heyman, Professor of Anthropology, Endowed Professor of Border Trade Issues, and Director of Center for Interamerican and Border Studies, University of Texas, El Paso

Carmen Maquilon, Director of Catholic Charities Immigration Services of the Diocese of Rockville Centre

4:00–5:00 p.m.

Closing Presentation:
Jaime Winders will moderate an open discussion of research and policy priorities.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

Overview: The southern border shared between Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. is an enormous economic gateway for the United States, but it requires control, safety and modernization to maintain it. Enforcing laws and securing the border is a top priority for the Department of Homeland Security. As time passes, the need for operator driven policies and solutions, modern devices, and fully integrated border becomes more crucial.

This year's Border Management South Summit will aim to connect local, federal and state officials to discuss the top challenges and priorities in the field. Interactive group discussions and panels will address procurement initiatives and aligning border solutions with development of operators.

Agenda:

Focus Day, Wednesday, December 4, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

USING THE INTEGRATION OF IT SYSTEMS TO ENHANCE RESPONSE AT THE BORDER

The U.S./Mexico border is in need of becoming a fully integrated border. This session will evaluate how communication between law enforcement officials and security personnel will be seamless and sufficient using integration strategies.

* Understanding how the integration of technological systems will enhance communication across the border
* Enhancing border mobility
* Managing information data flow across the border

10:30 a.m.

OPTIMIZING THE USE OF SECURITY PERSONNEL USING SECURITY APPLICATIONS

This session will provide a break down of how the use of advanced analytics can transform and protect the border. Advanced analytics will be able to detect security breaches from objects, unauthorized people and more. Security personnel will be able to receive knowledge of potential threats and act accordingly and in a timely manner.

* Using AI and ML to not only stockpile data, but also manage it
* Utilizing analytical tools to enhance perimeter protection
* Enabling security personnel to recognize threats using intelligent video

12:30 p.m.

ANALYZING DATA TO PREDICT FUTURE EVENTS AND OUTCOMES

Data will only become sufficient and useful if it is then transformed into action. Join us as we learn about the transforming of paper data into visionary plans and help detect future events. Information management allows room for improvement to border services and protection of citizens.

* Managing current data and transforming it into visionary plans and action
* Collecting and exploiting data to drive border decision making Timothy Bennett, Science and Technology Directorate, Department of Homeland Security

CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.

TEXAS IN REAL-TIME: RESPONDING AT THE BORDER

* Gain insight on how front line law enforcement officials are tackling border issues in real-time

Sheriff Waybourn, Tarrant County Sheriff Joe Frank Martinez, Del Val Verde County

9:45 a.m.

ANALYZING THE U.S. BORDER AS A SYSTEM: THE MEMBRANE, THE SURVEILLANCE AND THE HUMAN ELEMENT

In order to effectively secure the U.S. / Mexico border, it should be thought of as a system divided into three parts. A representative of the DHS will outline ways of uniting the organizational structure and breaking down each border element into compartments that work together to provide one outcome - effective border security.

* Evaluating the border as a whole system and not in parts
* Identifying the humanity aspect when working at the border

11:00 a.m.

ADVANCING ALL SITUATIONAL AND DOMAIN AWARENESS TO SUPPORT BORDER MISSIONS

Supporting border missions through situational and all domain awareness allows room to address challenges and provides understanding on how to respond in a threatening environment. Custom Border Patrol representatives will share how to appropriately notice changes across the border and respond rapidly.

* Building and sustaining situational awareness in a threat environment
* Using all domain awareness to predict future actions and threats

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Being aware of air, land and maritime border challenges and opportunities
Jennifer Barreras-Rawls, Operations Section Chief of Joint Task Force West, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

11:45 a.m.

ENSURING INTELLIGENCE DRIVEN OPERATIONS IN A THREAT ENVIRONMENT

It is important to use intelligence for improvement of the border system as a whole. Understanding how to share intelligence between partners and how to utilize the data given is a key component in securing the border.

* Understanding a threat environment using information and data
* Sharing Intelligence between Law Enforcement Enterprise Partners
Brad Skinner, Deputy Director Office of Field Operations Laredo Field Office, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

* Advancing the border using intelligence and innovative technology
* Enhancing operation objectives to increase border protection productivity
* Bringing the human element back into border management

1:30 p.m.

USING A SCIENTIFIC APPROACH TO ADDRESS BORDER CHALLENGES

Scientific breakthroughs and advancements have caused a huge gateway for the use of CIP and enhancing threat management. Here you will understand how intelligence pictures and process help conquer nearby threats.

* Using common intelligence pictures to showcase threat capabilities
* Establishing the ability to detect threats beyond the border
* Deploying a systematic process for analyzing and distributing data

2:15 p.m.

ENHANCING PARTNERSHIPS AND ENFORCEMENT COOPERATION

Establishing partnerships will assist the border in creating meaningful relationships and thus, actively creating new ways to guard the U.S. / Mexico Border. Utilizing department-wide cooperation and international input will help overcome border threats.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Establishing a unity of effort approach to effectively guard the U.S/Mexico Border
* Building international partnerships to effectively detect threats
* Enhancing supply chain security to conduct thorough examinations at the border
Ismael Navarez Jr., Special Agent in Charge, IRS

3:00 p.m.
ADVANCING THE BORDER WITH THE MODEL PORTS PROGRAM

The Model Ports Program was designed to improve overall experience and operations at the port of entry. This session will showcase the reasoning and effectiveness behind the Model Ports Program.

* Improving wait time monitoring and processing
* Conducting meetings with senior level industry leaders for establish goals and monitoring techniques
* Using Public-Private Partnerships to enhance operation at the ports of entry

Friday, December 6, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
PROCUREMENT: FUTURE INITIATIVES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

A DHS representative will disclose the 2020 Vision for the Department of Homeland Security. Attendees will understand where important investments are being made and how future policy will evolve border management.

* The 2020 outlook for the U.S./Mexico Border
* How policy changes will provide solutions to current border challenges
* Understanding future border investments
Rose Marie Davis, Director innovation Program Acquisitions, DHS

9:45 a.m.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

IMMIGRATION OF FAMILIES ACROSS THE BORDER

The border is currently filled with multiple families including children seeking to come to the U.S. Due to the increase of migrants, facilities constantly become over crowded. Gain insights on how to ensure maintenance of facilities and navigate current and future border policies to secure the border.

* Maintaining protocol and policies when dealing with families at border
* Creating a safe and ethical environment at the U.S. /Mexico border
Robert Gross, DHS Attaché, Department of Homeland Security

11:00 a.m.
PROMOTING INNOVATION AND INTEGRITY AMONGST PERSONNEL

Training personnel on how to react in force situations and maintaining DHS ethical standards is important. Join us as we evaluate new initiatives taking place to reconstruct and advance CBP's organizational structure.

* Reconstructing the border's organizational structure
* Ensuring ethical conduct and integrity along the border
* Advancing training initiatives in assisting use of force situations

11:45 a.m.
PREVENTING COUNTERTERRORISM AND TRANSNATIONAL CRIME AT THE BORDER

Joining forces across law enforcement allows one to maximize its resources and enhance operational integration. Leaders of the Department of Homeland Security will share how the interaction of global partners will assist with reducing crime and potential threats.

* Joining forces with local, state, and federal law enforcement to increase resources
* Using integrated operations to detect weapons and disrupt illegal crossings
* Expanding mobility to quicken response to threats John Jones, Divisional Director Intelligence and Counterterrorism, Texas Department of Public Safety

1:30 p.m.
ADVANCING BORDER TRADING IN ORDER TO PROTECT THE U.S.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Implementing strategies and trade intelligence will protect against unlawful items from entering. This session will break down the use of trade intelligence in real time and how it will shape enforcement efforts.

* Collaborating with advanced technology and enforcement to intercept high-risk shipment
* Responding to border risk in real-time using trade intelligence
* Integration of law enforcement to help protect the border from illegal trade

Finland's preliminary population figure 5,522,848 at the end of July

https://www.stat.fi/til/vamuu/2019/07/vamuu_2019_07_2019-08-27_tie_001_en.html

Summary: According to Statistics Finland's preliminary data, Finland's population was 5,522,848 at the end of July. Our country's population increased by 4,929 persons during January-July. The reason for the increase was migration gain from abroad, since immigration exceeded emigration by 10,226. The number of births was 4,948 lower than that of deaths.

According to the preliminary statistics for July, 17,568 persons immigrated to Finland from abroad and 7,342 persons emigrated from Finland. The number of immigrants was 782 higher and the number of emigrants 2,613 lower than in the corresponding period of the previous year. In all, 5,091 of the immigrants and 4,702 of the emigrants were Finnish citizens.

Population and Migration Estimates

Statistics Ireland, August 27, 2019

https://www.cso.ie/en/releasesandpublications/er/pme/populationandmigrationestimatesapril2019/

Excerpt: The number of immigrants to the State in the year to April 2019 is estimated to have decreased by 1.9% to 88,600 from 90,300 the previous year. The number of emigrants declined over the same period to 54,900 (-2.5%) from 56,300. These combined changes have resulted in net inward migration for Ireland in 2019 of 33,700.

Irish nationals experienced a return to net outward migration, falling to -2,100 in 2019 from the positive net inflow of 100 the previous year. Net inward migration among non-Irish nationals remained strong, increasing to 35,800 in 2019 from Open Borders Inc.: Who's Funding America's Destruction?

By Michelle Malkin

Regnery Publishing, 256 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1621579719, $26.09
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1621579719/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 5703 KB, ASIN: B07NLJ2KNR, $12.99

Book Description: In the name of compassion—but driven by financial profit—globalist elites, Silicon Valley, and the radical Left are conspiring to undo the rule of law, subvert our homeland security, shut down free speech, and make gobs of money off the backs of illegal aliens, refugees, and low-wage guest workers.

Politicians want cheap votes or cheap labor. Church leaders want pew-fillers and collection plate donors. Social justice militants, working with corporate America, want to silence free speech they deem “hateful,” while raking in tens of millions of dollars promoting mass, uncontrolled immigration both legal and illegal.

The Ungrateful Refugee: What Immigrants Never Tell You

By Dina Nayeri

Catapult, 368 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1948226421, $18.08
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1948226421/centerforimmigra

Paperback, ISBN: 1786893460, 384 pp., $12.48
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1786893460/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1247 KB, ASIN: B07MWH2RC6, $9.36

Book Description: What is it like to be a refugee? It is a question many of us do not give much thought to, and yet there are more than 25 million refugees in the world.

Aged eight, Dina Nayeri fled Iran along with her mother and brother and lived in the crumbling shell of an Italian hotel–turned–refugee camp. Eventually she was granted asylum in America. She settled in Oklahoma, then made her way to Princeton University. In this book, Nayeri weaves together her own vivid story with the stories of other refugees and asylum seekers in recent years, bringing us inside their daily lives and taking us through the different stages of their journeys, from escape to asylum to resettlement. In these pages, a couple fall in love over the phone, and women gather to prepare the noodles that remind them of home. A closeted queer man tries to make his case truthfully as he seeks asylum, and a translator attempts to help new arrivals present their stories to officials.

Nayeri confronts notions like “the swarm,” and, on the other hand, “good” immigrants. She calls attention to the harmful way in which Western governments privilege certain dangers over others. With surprising and provocative questions, The Ungrateful Refugee challenges us to rethink how we talk about the refugee crisis.

African Americans & American Africans: Migration, History, Race and Identities
By Dmitri M. Bondarenko

Sean Kingston Publishing, 184 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1912385007, $75.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1912385007/centerforimmigra

Book Description: In America today, two communities with sub-Saharan African genetic origins exist side by side, though they have differing histories and positions within society. This book explores the relationship between African Americans, descendants of those Africans brought to America as slaves, and migrants from sub-Saharan Africa, who have come to the United States of America voluntarily, mainly since the 1990s. Members of these groups have both a great deal in common and much that separates them, largely hidden in their assumptions about, and attitudes towards, each other.

In a work grounded in extensive fieldwork Bondarenko and his research team interviewed African Americans, and migrants from twenty-three African States and five Caribbean nations, as well as non-black Americans involved with African Americans and African migrants. Seeking a wide range of perspectives, from different ages, classes and levels of education, they explored the historically rooted mutual images of African Americans and contemporary African migrants, so as to understand how these images influence the relationship between them. In particular, they examined conceptions of 'black history' as a common history of all people and nations with roots in Africa.

What emerges is a complex picture. While collective historical memory of oppression forges solidarity, lack of knowledge of each other's history can create distance between communities. African migrants tend to define their identities not by race, but on the basis of multiple layers of national, ethnic, religious and linguistic affinities (of which African Americans are often unaware). For African Americans, however, although national and regional identities are important, it is above all race that is the defining factor. While drawing on wider themes from anthropology and African studies, this in-depth study on a little-researched subject allows valuable new understandings of contemporary American society.

Immigration and Democracy
By Sarah Song

Oxford University Press, 264 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 0190909226, $25.45
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0190909226/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 826 KB, ASIN: B07HCKV117, 258 pp., $14.39

Book Description: Immigration is one of the most polarizing issues in contemporary politics. It raises questions about identity, economic well-being, the legitimacy of state power, and the boundaries of membership and justice. How should we think about immigration and what policies should democratic societies pursue?

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Some contend that borders should generally be open and people should be free to migrate in search of better lives. Others insist that governments have the right to unilaterally close their borders and should do so. In Immigration and Democracy, Sarah Song develops an intermediate ethical position that takes seriously both the claims of receiving countries and the claims of prospective migrants. She argues that political membership is morally significant, even if morally arbitrary. Political membership grounds particular rights and obligations, and a government may show some partiality toward the interests of its members. Yet, we also have universal obligations to those outside our orders. Where prospective migrants have urgent reasons to move, as in the case of refugees, their interests may trump the less weighty interests of members. What is required is not open or closed borders but open doors.

An accessible ethical framework that clarifies and deepens the ideas with which members of democratic societies can debate immigration, Immigration and Democracy considers the implications of a realistically utopian theory for immigration law and policy.

Immigrants as Outsiders in the Two Irelands

By Bryan Fanning and Lucy Michael

Manchester University Press, 272 pp.

Paperback, ISBN: 1526145596, $29.27
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1526145596/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 891 KB, ASIN: B07WHRSK5N, $28.50

Book Description: Immigrants as outsiders in the two Irelands examines how a wide range of immigrant groups who settled in the Republic of Ireland and in Northern Ireland since the 1990s are faring today. It asks to what extent might different immigrant communities be understood as outsiders in both jurisdictions. Chapters include analyses of the specific experiences of Polish, Filipino, Muslim, African, Roma, refugee and asylum seeker populations and of the experiences of children, as well as analyses of the impacts of education, health, employment, housing, immigration law, asylum policy, the media and the contemporary politics of borders and migration on successful integration. The book is aimed at general readers interested in understanding immigration and social change and at students in areas including sociology, social policy, human geography, politics, law and psychology.

At Europe's Edge: Migration and Crisis in the Mediterranean
By Cetta Mainwaring

Oxford University Press, 240 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 0198842511, $80.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0198842511/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1198 KB, ASIN: B07X5BRL8W, $76.00

Book Description: The Mediterranean Sea is now the deadliest region in the world for migrants. Although the death toll has been rising for many years, the EU response remains fragmented and short sighted. Politicians frame these migration flows as an unprecedented crisis and emphasize migration control at the EU's external boundaries. In this context, At Europe's Edge investigates why the EU prioritizes the fortification of its external borders; why migrants nevertheless continue to cross the Mediterranean and to die at sea; and how EU member states on the southern periphery respond to their new role as migration gatekeepers. The book addresses these questions by examining the relationship between the EU and Malta, a small state with an outsized role in migration politics as EU policies place it at the crosshairs of migration flows and controls. The chapters combine ethnographic methods with macro-level analyses to weave together policymaker, practitioner, and migrant experiences, and demonstrate how the Mediterranean is an important space for the contested construction of 'Europe'. This book provides rich insight into the unexpected level of influence Malta exerts on EU migration governance, as well as the critical role migrants and their clandestine journeys play in animating EU and Maltese migration policies, driving international relations, and producing Malta's political power. By centring on the margins, the book pushes the boundaries of our knowledge of the global politics of migration, asylum, and border security.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

A good provider is one who leaves: A book event with Jason DeParle

3:00-4:15 p.m., Tuesday, September 10, 2019
American Enterprise Institute Auditorium
1789 Massachusetts Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20036
http://www.aei.org/events/a-good-provider-is-one-who-leaves-a-book-event-with-jason-deparle/

Description: In his new book, "A Good Provider Is One Who Leaves: One Family and Migration in the 21st Century" (Viking, 2019), New York Times reporter and two-time Pulitzer Prize–finalist Jason DeParle explores a wide range of economic, political, and cultural facets of contemporary immigration. He tells the story of a Filipino family, the Comodas, from the Manila shantytown where he first met them in the early 1980s to Saudi Arabia, Texas, and Abu Dhabi, as they navigate cultural and linguistic differences, visas and credit cards, and complicated household structures.

Please join AEI for a conversation about Mr. DeParle's new book and the complex and global nature of migration flows.

Leveraging Economic Migration for Development

12:30-2:00 p.m., Wednesday, September 11, 2019
The World Bank, JB1-080
701 18th St NW
Washington, DC 20006
https://www.knomad.org/event/leveraging-economic-migration-development

Description: This publication provides an overview of how the World Bank Group can leverage economic migration for development, based on a recent briefing to the World Bank's Board of Directors. It provides an update on data, drivers, and impacts; discusses recent changes in international governance, including the adoption of the Global Compact on Migration; describes World Bank Group activities during FY2017–19; and suggests future areas of activity. Migration is set to increase, driven by income gaps, demographic imbalances, and climate change. The World Bank Group can complement global efforts by (i) supporting safe and regular (legal) labor mobility, (ii) supporting the migration-related indicators specified in the Sustainable Development Goals (reducing recruitment costs paid by migrant workers, reducing remittance costs, leveraging remittances, and mobilizing diaspora resources for development), (iii) generating knowledge for policy making, and (iv) supporting global partnerships.

Archived video will be available after the event.

ORG Permanent Modernity

Moderator:
Risa Perlmutter Goldstein
Partner, The Goldstein Partnership, Architects & Planners

Closing Remarks:
Alexandria Villasenor
Climate Activist
Co-founder of US Youth Climate Strike, Founder of Earth Uprising

Description: Climate migration refers to the displacement of populations, forced by the effects of climate change. While in the New York area we tend to think this takes place only in far away places, the United States joins countries around the world that are dealing with these issues.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

This evening, the guest panelists will present local, national, and global endeavors that are currently underway, including the first Federally-funded climate migration effort in the United States: the relocation of the indigenous people of the Isle de Jean Charles. The conversation is an international one. The panelists will discuss how lessons are being learned, ideas exchanged, and how all of this is now forming the basis for ongoing policies and decisions.

16th International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference
Thursday-Friday, September 19-20, 2019
Lancelot Thompson Student Union
3154 North Towerview Boulevard
Toledo, OH 43606
https://www.traffickingconference.com/

About: Since 2004, The International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference has been bringing together researchers, practitioners, and individuals with lived experience in an effort to lay the groundwork for future collaborative research, advocacy, and program development.

To date, the trafficking conference has welcomed attendees from 42 states and 30 countries to learn from researchers, survivors, and social service, health care, and criminal justice professionals about human trafficking and social justice topics.

Recently, there have been many new and exciting opportunities for expansion regarding the conference, which includes a name change because of a larger mission. In 2015, the conference title was changed to the International Human Trafficking & Social Justice Conference. The concept of social justice will expand topics at the conference to include many of the injustices seen in the world today.

We greatly appreciate those who have brought the conference this far. Change is hard, but is also necessary. All are welcome to join us in sharing knowledge and diverse perspectives at the conference. Our conference has a maximum of 12 continuing education credits pending for social work, counseling, marriage & family therapy, chemical dependency, nursing, health education, public health, and law.

Migration's Rescue of the European Union and Democracy

Harvard Center for European Studies

11:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m., Friday, September 20, 2019

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Hoffmann Room, Adolphus Busch Hall
27 Kirkland Street at Cabot Way
Cambridge, MA 02138
https://ces.fas.harvard.edu/events/2019/09/migrations-rescue-of-the-european-union-and-democracy

Description: What factors make some democracies more resilient and others more prone to democratic backsliding? Thirty years after the fall of communism in Central and Eastern Europe, the political trajectories of the region's new democracies still defy expectations. Countries long-considered leaders in transitions to democracy and capitalism (Hungary, Poland) have experienced democratic backsliding and rising Euroscepticism.

Meanwhile, the laggards of post-communist transitions and EU accession (Romania, Bulgaria) now score higher that their Visegrad counterparts on some measures of democratic quality and retain EU support. What explains the unevenness of democratic consolidation in the region? This book argues that the way in which European citizenship is practiced as intra-EU free movement matters.

Even in times of crisis, European integration and liberalism maintain their appeal in countries where large parts of the population depend on European citizenship in their living-making. The book focuses on high-mobility migrants from Romania and Poland, the EU's main migrant-sending countries, and highlights migrants' contributions to political change in their homelands. Findings show that intra-EU mobility influences sociopolitical attitudes, voting, and the state-citizen relationship when people become economically emancipated from the national labor market (by working abroad) but remain politically rooted.

Findings also show that, paradoxically, a longer history of migration and state-led diaspora engagement limits the political incorporation of intra-EU migrants. A laissez-faire approach provides more space for bottom-up, citizen-led mobilization, empowering intra-EU movers as political actors.

Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan

4:30 p.m., Wednesday, September 25, 2019
Princeton University, Jones Hall, #211
Princeton, NJ 08544
https://eap.princeton.edu/events/help-not-wanted-immigration-politics-japan

Speaker(s):
Michael Strausz
Texas Christian University

Description: Why has Japan's immigration policy remained so restrictive, especially in light of economic, demographic, and international political forces that are pushing Japan to admit more immigrants? Michael Strausz will answer this question by drawing on insights from nearly two years of intensive field research in Japan. Ultimately, he will argue that Japan's immigration policy has remained restrictive for two reasons. First, Japan's labor-intensive businesses have failed to defeat anti-immigration forces within the Japanese state, particularly those in the Ministry of Justice and the Japanese Diet. Second, no influential strain of elite thought in postwar Japan exists to support the idea that significant numbers of foreign nationals have a legitimate claim to residency and citizenship.

In addition to an overview of postwar Japan's immigration control policy, this presentation provide context to recent developments in Japanese immigration policy – particularly the December 2018 decision to admit more than 300,000 low skilled foreign laborers.

Michael Strausz is an Associate Professor of Political Science and the Director of Asian Studies at Texas Christian University. He earned his BA in international relations and Japanese from Michigan State University and his MA and PhD in political science from the University of Washington. His book, Help (Not)

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan will be published with SUNY Press in August, and he has published a number of other articles and book chapters about topics including Japan's immigration policy and Japanese whaling. AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

1225 Eye Street NW, Suite 1000
Washington, DC 20005
https://bipartisanpolicy.org/event/immigration-and-the-2020-election/

Description: It is evident from the Democratic presidential debates, President Trump's continued focus on the issue, media coverage, and national discourse that immigration will play a key role in the 2020 election. On September 27, see the results of a new survey, conducted for BPC by Morning Consult, on what the American public will be prioritizing on immigration when they head to the polls, and more importantly, whether there is an appetite for bipartisanship on the issue. Then, a panel of political and policy experts from both sides of the aisle will break down what it all means for the candidates and the future of immigration reform.

16th Annual Immigration Law and Policy Conference

Monday, October 7, 2019
Georgetown University Law Center
Bernard P. McDonough Hall, Hart Auditorium
600 New Jersey Ave. NW
Washington, D.C. 20001
https://www.migrationpolicy.org/events/16thannual-immigration-law-policy-conference

Keynote Speaker:
Kevin K. McAleenan, Acting Secretary of Homeland Security

Panels:
State of Play: Central to the Trump Administration's Record, Immigration Looms as the Major 2020 Issue

Moderator:
Doris Meissner, Senior Fellow and Director, U.S. Policy Program, MPI

From Donald Trump's first utterances as a presidential candidate in 2015 to the hundreds of policy actions undertaken during his administration, immigration has loomed as the major touchstone for his political base. It is the issue to which the president and his administration return again and again. Chaos at the U.S.-Mexico border resulted from a sharp uptick in flows, as well as outmatched policies, infrastructure, and resources. Now, a growing number of Americans cite immigration as one of the most crucial national issues. Yet Congress remains incapable of even small-bore fixes, continuing its nearly two-decade inability to undertake substantive immigration legislation. Vast differences exist among Republican and Democratic politicians and other stakeholders—from

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“build the wall” and narrowing humanitarian protections on one side, to #AbolishICE and pressing to decriminalize illegal crossings on the other.

Whither immigration as high-stakes elections approach in 2020? In what’s sure to be a lively State of Play conversation, political and policy experts will explore the politics of immigration, the pitfalls for both political parties, and the potential for a post-election pause in the brinkmanship. Also, what about the possibility for reform as DREAMers await a major decision at the Supreme Court? What other pressing challenges may converge to force action in Washington?

Volleying among the Branches of Government: DACA, TPS, Asylum, and Other Policies That Hang in the Balance

Moderator:
Muzaffar Chishti, Director, MPI's office at New York University School of Law

In an unprecedented era of executive branch policy-making in the immigration arena, the nation’s federal judiciary has been called to decide a raft of major cases that hold the lives of more than 1 million recipients of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals and Temporary Protected Status in the balance, and govern the conditions of care for children in immigration detention and the ability to apply for asylum. The administration’s action on the "public charge" rule may end up in the courts as well, and the fallout from the controversy of including a citizenship question on the 2020 census remains unsettled. What are the legal underpinnings, the stakes, and the possible outcomes as the nation’s courts, from district courts all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, hear and rule on a consequential portfolio of legal challenges? And what is or will be Congress’ response given the dynamic interplay of litigation and executive action? Our panel of top experts will tackle these big questions.

Drawing a New Line: Recent Changes in U.S.-Mexico Border Policy

Moderator:
Anna Gallagher, Executive Director, Catholic Legal Immigration Network, Inc.

Under the current administration, U.S.-Mexico border polices have dominated headlines, becoming both the symbol and testing ground of hardline immigration policy. Family separation, the deaths of children in immigration custody, and the detention of men, women, and children in unsafe, overcrowded conditions have stirred national concern.

The asylum system alone has been hamstrung by “metering” that slows entry to a trickle, enormous court backlogs, the wholesale return to Mexico of asylum applicants awaiting their court appearances, and policies that attempt to force applicants to first seek protection in other countries.

This panel will explore what these policies have meant to asylum seekers and the communities that straddle the 2,000-mile-long line. Topics will include family separation, Remain in Mexico, the wall, state and local work, and more. The panelists also will consider whether the administration is achieving results with its efforts to reshape overall enforcement, the responses from local border communities, and related litigation.

The Humanitarian and Migration Crisis Originating in Central America: The Need for Regional Approaches

Moderator:
Andrew Schoenholtz, Professor from Practice, Georgetown Law; Director, Human Rights Institute; Co-Director, Center for Applied Legal Studies

In recent years, the humanitarian and migration crisis in the three Northern Triangle countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras has resulted in increasing international migration, particularly of women and children as well as unaccompanied minors. Most of them cross the Guatemala-Mexico border to head towards the United States, while some migrate to countries in the region, such as Costa Rica. Many are fleeing serious violence carried out by gangs and other non-state actors, though the search for better livelihoods and family reunification with relatives already in the United States plays a role as well. Governments do not control territories where gangs and drug cartels rule, nor are they able to protect women and girls from domestic abuse and other forms of violence or insecurity. Natural disasters, climate change, food insecurity, and poor economic conditions exacerbate the situation for vulnerable people. This panel will discuss the best ways for governments, international organizations, and NGOs in the region to address this crisis, particularly in terms of root causes and the protection of families and children.

More information on the agenda and speakers to follow soon. This event will not be live streamed.

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

and the responsibilities of states;
* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;
* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and
* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

The swinging of the pendulum? Centre-right parties in a post-migration crisis Europe

9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m., Monday, October 7, 2019
Sala Belvedere - Villa Schifanoia, EUI
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/the-swinging-of-the-pendulum-centre-right-parties-in-a-post-migration-crisis-europe/

Description: This workshop will explore how the European centre-right is handling immigration in the wake of the migration crisis: are we witnessing a radicalisation of claims, and a shift from more 'moderate', mainstream positions to more radical, 'hardline' positions on immigration? Papers presented in this workshop will analyse recent positional shifts on, and reconfigurations related to, immigration of the centre-right in Europe. Contributions will explore the assumption that the crisis has pulled the centre-right irrevocably towards a more restrictive position. The focus on immigration serves as a magnifying glass, for wider trends related to the challenges of liberal democracy, and the reaction of a key political actor to the inherent dilemma between democratic accountability and the protection of liberal rights. The workshop focuses on centre-right parties of countries in which immigration has been highly tangible in numbers and in political debate (Austria, Germany, Sweden, Italy, the United Kingdom and Hungary), and also provides a broader (contextual) debate on political conflicts and the impact of the migration crisis across Europe.

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled “Democratic participation for migrant diasporas”. Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members’ involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members’ contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government
2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora
3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin – success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin
6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications
10. Emigrant literature

The conference organisers would like to emphasise that presenters have the opportunity to present on a different theme that is related to the general purpose.

Forced Migration, Protection, and Border Control

8:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m., Thursday, October 17, 2019
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, LLP
ONE New York Plaza, 1 FDR Drive
New York, NY 10004
https://cmsny.org/event/2019-symposium/

Description: On October 17, 2019, the Center for Migration Studies will hold its annual academic and policy symposium at the law offices of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP. The event will open with a keynote address by T. Alexander Aleinikoff, Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility, about new directions for forced migration policy studies. The keynote will be followed by panels about enforcement, responding to the needs of refugees, and access to the US asylum system. In the closing session, panelists and attendees will engage in an open discussion about research and policy priorities. This is CMS's sixth annual academic and policy conference, which celebrates the work of leading scholars and thinkers on international migration.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Agenda:

9:00–9:15 a.m.
Welcome:
Karen Grisez, Public Service Counsel
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP

Introduction:
Most Rev. Nicholas DiMarzio
Bishop of Brooklyn

9:15–10:30 p.m.
Keynote: New Directions for Forced Migration Policy Studies
T. Alexander Aleinikoff
Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility
The New School

10:45 a.m.–12:00 p.m.
Session I: Enforcement Efforts and their Adverse Impact on Protection: A Discussion about North America, Europe, and the Global South

Over the last few years, we have seen increased efforts to build barriers and systems that prevent refugees and asylum seekers from reaching safety and applying for asylum protection. How are enforcement efforts in various regions of the world impacting refugee protection and access to asylum? What challenges do enhanced enforcement efforts impose? How have efforts to externalize borders and prevent access to asylum countries impacted genuine refugees? How can we address these problems?
Moderator: Michele Pistone, Non-Resident Fellow and Associate Editor, Journal on Migration and Human Security, Center for Migration Studies; Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES), Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law
Speakers will be announced shortly.

1:15–2:30 p.m.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Session II: Challenges in Responding to the Needs of Refugees, Displaced Persons and their Host Communities in Protracted Situations

A majority of refugees and internally displaced persons are in protracted situations—defined by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees as five years or longer. Many of them are in low and medium income countries that have few resources available to provide security, education, livelihood and entrepreneurship opportunities, healthcare and other services for host communities, let alone refugees and displaced persons. This panel will discuss opportunities and challenges in addressing protracted situations, particularly in the context of adoption of the Global Compact on Refugees in December 2019.

Moderator:
Susan Martin, Donald G. Herzberg Professor Emeritus in the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University

Speakers:
Sarah Deardorff Miller, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

Leah Zamore, Center on International Cooperation, New York University

2:45–4:00 p.m.
Session III: Access to Asylum on the US-Mexico Border

The Trump administration and DHS officers have pursued a series of strategies to restrict access to the US asylum system. Most of these strategies – interception, turn-backs, zero tolerance enforcement, the separation of children from parents, requiring asylum-seekers to await the US asylum process in Mexico and barring asylum to most migrants who arrive at the US-Mexico border – have been focused on the US southern border. Other measures, such as the expansion of expedited removal, began at the border but have now been expanded to cover the entire United States and persons in the country for two years or less. The panel will review, critique and discuss alternatives to these policies.
Moderator: Donald Kerwin, Executive Director, Center for Migration Studies

Speakers:
Josiah Heyman, Professor of Anthropology, Endowed Professor of Border Trade

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Issues, and Director of Center for Interamerican and Border Studies, University of Texas, El Paso

Carmen Maquilon, Director of Catholic Charities Immigration Services of the Diocese of Rockville Centre

4:00–5:00 p.m.
Closing Presentation:
Jaime Winders will moderate an open discussion of research and policy priorities.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

Border Management South

Wednesday-Friday, December 4-6, 2019
Hilton Garden Inn San Antonio
8101 Pat Booker Rd.
Live Oak, Texas, 78233, USA
https://www.idga.org/events-bordermanagementsummit/landing/official-border-management-south-brochure
https://plsadaptive.s3.amazonaws.com/eco/files/event_content/border-management-south-2019.pdf

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Overview: The southern border shared between Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. is an enormous economic gateway for the United States, but it requires control, safety and modernization to maintain it. Enforcing laws and securing the border is a top priority for the Department of Homeland Security. As time passes, the need for operator driven policies and solutions, modern devices, and fully integrated border becomes more crucial.

This year's Border Management South Summit will aim to connect local, federal and state officials to discuss the top challenges and priorities in the field. Interactive group discussions and panels will address procurement initiatives and aligning border solutions with development of operators.

Agenda:

Focus Day, Wednesday, December 4, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
USING THE INTEGRATION OF IT SYSTEMS TO ENHANCE RESPONSE AT THE BORDER

The U.S./Mexico border is in need of becoming a fully integrated border. This session will evaluate how communication between law enforcement officials and security personnel will be seamless and sufficient using integration strategies.

* Understanding how the integration of technological systems will enhance communication across the border
* Enhancing border mobility
* Managing information data flow across the border

10:30 a.m.

This session will provide a break down of how the use of advanced analytics can transform and protect the border. Advanced analytics will be able to detect security breaches from objects, unauthorized people and more. Security personnel will be able to receive knowledge of potential threats and act accordingly and in a timely manner.

* Using AI and ML to not only stockpile data, but also manage it
* Utilizing analytical tools to enhance perimeter protection
* Enabling security personnel to recognize threats using intelligent video

12:30 p.m.
ANALYZING DATA TO PREDICT FUTURE EVENTS AND OUTCOMES

Data will only become sufficient and useful if it is then transformed into action. Join us as we learn about the transforming of paper data into visionary plans and help detect future events. Information management allows room for improvement to border services and protection of citizens.

* Managing current data and transforming it into visionary plans and action
* Collecting and exploiting data to drive border decision making Timothy Bennett, Science and Technology Directorate, Department of Homeland Security

Thursday, December 5, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
TEXAS IN REAL-TIME: RESPONDING AT THE BORDER

* Gain insight on how front line law enforcement officials are tackling border issues in real-time
Sheriff Waybourn, Tarrant County Sheriff Joe Frank Martinez, Del Val Verde County

9:45 a.m.
ANALYZING THE U.S. BORDER AS A SYSTEM: THE MEMBRANE, THE SURVEILLANCE AND THE HUMAN ELEMENT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In order to effectively secure the U.S. / Mexico border, it should be thought of as a system divided into three parts. A representative of the DHS will outline ways of uniting the organizational structure and breaking down each border element into compartments that work together to provide one outcome - effective border security.

* Evaluating the border as a whole system and not in parts
* Identifying the humanity aspect when working at the border

11:00 a.m.

ADVANCING ALL SITUATIONAL AND DOMAIN AWARENESS TO SUPPORT BORDER MISSIONS

Supporting border missions through situational and all domain awareness allows room to address challenges and provides understanding on how to respond in a threatening environment. Custom Border Patrol representatives will share how to appropriately notice changes across the border and respond rapidly.

* Building and sustaining situational awareness in a threat environment
* Using all domain awareness to predict future actions and threats
* Being aware of air, land and maritime border challenges and opportunities

Jennifer Barreras-Rawls, Operations Section Chief of Joint Task Force West, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

11:45 a.m.

ENSURING INTELLIGENCE DRIVEN OPERATIONS IN A THREAT ENVIRONMENT

It is important to use intelligence for improvement of the border system as a whole. Understanding how to share intelligence between partners and how to utilize the data given is a key component in securing the border.

* Understanding a threat environment using information and data
* Sharing Intelligence between Law Enforcement Enterprise Partners

Brad Skinner, Deputy Director Office of Field Operations Laredo Field Office, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

* Advancing the border using intelligence and innovative technology

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Enhancing operation objectives to increase border protection productivity
* Bringing the human element back into border management

1:30 p.m.

USING A SCIENTIFIC APPROACH TO ADDRESS BORDER CHALLENGES

Scientific breakthroughs and advancements have caused a huge gateway for the use of CIP and enhancing threat management. Here you will understand how intelligence pictures and process help conquer nearby threats.

* Using common intelligence pictures to showcase threat capabilities
* Establishing the ability to detect threats beyond the border
* Deploying a systematic process for analyzing and distributing data

2:15 p.m.

ENHANCING PARTNERSHIPS AND ENFORCEMENT COOPERATION

Establishing partnerships will assist the border in creating meaningful relationships and thus, actively creating new ways to guard the U.S. / Mexico Border. Utilizing department-wide cooperation and international input will help overcome border threats.

* Establishing a unity of effort approach to effectively guard the U.S/Mexico Border
* Building international partnerships to effectively detect threats
* Enhancing supply chain security to conduct thorough examinations at the border

Ismael Navarez Jr., Special Agent in Charge, IRS

3:00 p.m.

ADVANCING THE BORDER WITH THE MODEL PORTS PROGRAM

Sanctuary brick walls impede the flow of information

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

about criminal aliens

Washington, D.C. (September 11, 2019) [Excerpt from a blog by Andrew Arthur] - On the 18th anniversary of the darkest day in the last seven decades of American history, it is natural to look back at not only the events that led to the attacks of September 11, 2001, but also to review the lessons that were learned from the series of missed opportunities to prevent those attacks. Regrettably, many of those lessons have been forgotten, and many of the protections that were implemented in response have started to erode. Nowhere is that more true than in the so-called "sanctuary jurisdiction" movement that has gained strength in states and localities across America in recent months and years.

For all of the breaking down of the "stovepipes" that existed between federal government entities in the aftermath of 9/11, recent years have seen many new barriers erected with respect to information relating to immigration violations, particularly between sanctuary states and localities on the one hand and the immigration-enforcement agencies on the other with respect to criminal aliens.

View the entire blog at: https://cis.org/Arthur/Back-September-10th-World

I have written, in recent posts, about such sanctuary policies (as well as "sanctuary-lite" policies) that have been instituted by two localities, Montgomery and Baltimore Counties in the state of Maryland. In one, I analyzed a sweeping executive order in Montgomery County captioned "Promoting Community Trust".

The following excerpt from the local news about the reaction of County Executive Marc Elrich (D) to that order and his county's attitude toward ICE will give you a flavor:

Speaking from the podium in a room full of activists and members of the press, Elrich opined that the mandate will strengthen trust and safety within the county of nearly 1.1 million residents.

"If ICE thinks it's really important, they can probably get here. You know, they've got cars. They know where the jail is. They know where the pre-release center is. ... It's not my job to do that part of their job," Elrich stated with a slight grin on his face. "If ICE manages to be outside the [jail] door when someone walks outside the door, I can't do anything about that, but if they ask us on anything other than a judicial order, then we're not holding them."

Elrich further explained that President Donald Trump's directives to ICE have discernable parallels to terrorism.
"It's really partly the definition of terrorism, to take the civilian population and subject them to constant fear, that is terrorism in its basic form," Elrich remarked. [Emphasis added.]

Yes, you read that correctly. Immigration enforcement is now akin to terrorism, and Montgomery County, Md., refuses therefore to aid in the effort to enforce the immigration laws.

It bears repeating that all 19 9/11 terrorists were aliens present in the United States, that Hani Hanjour (who flew America Airlines Flight 77 into the Pentagon at 9:37 AM that morning) obtained a Maryland ID card on September 5, and that "Ziad Samir Jarrah, who was on board United Airlines Flight 93 that crashed in Pennsylvania on 9/11, was issued a speeding ticket on September 9 in Maryland for driving 95 miles an hour in a 60-mile-per-hour zone."

More mundanely, however, sanctuary policies (and attitudes such as that expressed by County Executive Elrich) impede the ability of ICE agents to apprehend and remove criminal aliens, and to thereby prevent them from committing additional offenses (often if not usually targeting other aliens in their own communities). Future victims will suffer because there are sanctimonious public officials hustling for future votes and/or higher office, who believe that the simple enforcement of the immigration laws written by Congress is the equivalent of the murders committed on that awful Tuesday morning. There will not be (I hope) 2,977 victims killed in a matter of a couple of hours again, but there will be even more who will be killed, maimed, or robbed, or have their innocence stolen from them, one crime at a time, as criminal aliens are allowed to walk free instead of being removed, as the law stipulates.

The intelligence stovepipe of September 10, 2001, has now become the sanctuary jurisdiction brick wall of September 10, 2019. Trust me – I have lived through this scenario before, and I know how it ends: not well.

Ecuador: An Unlikely Battleground to Secure America's Southern Border
By Todd Bensman
Human smugglers and those bent on reaching the U.S. border are notoriously adaptable. They can be expected to either corrupt Ecuadorian inspections and immigration personnel, or simply try other countries like Brazil, Nicaragua, and Peru to get to the American border.

The country of Bangladesh fairly teems with ISIS and al-Qaeda members, followers of a radical Islamist political party now out of power, homegrown jihadists of other various strands, and foreign terrorist fighters returning from Syria with combat experience.

Let's Tax Illegal Aliens to Ease the Pressures on the Southern Border

I suggest, short of tax reform (and tax increases on the rich), that we spend billions on discouraging illegal migration from Central America and do it all by taking the needed money from America's illegal aliens.

Making the Case for Our Immigrant Future: Regional Perspectives

12:00 p.m. EDT, Wednesday, September 18, 2019
Cities of Migration Webinar
http://citiesofmigration.ca/integration-learning-exchange/

Description: Until a decade ago, labour market growth in Canada's smaller cities, towns and regions depended on turnover and growth in the local population. Today, many of those communities are experiencing structural decline and need a substantial boost in population growth to ensure both that local businesses and industries have the workers they need, and local governments have the tax base required to sustain community resilience and well-being. Municipal and community leaders in Canada's regions are learning that the retention of local youth alone is not enough to reverse the impact of an ageing population and shrinking workforce. Labour market growth and regional prosperity depends on immigration outside the big cities. So, what does it take to successfully attract and retain newcomers to our regions?

To address this challenge, in 2018 the New Brunswick Multicultural Council (NBMC) tapped leading economists to conduct New Conversations in 15 communities across the province and raise awareness of the demographic and labour market realities with employers, municipalities, community agencies, and the general public; to engage employers in the possibility of exploring immigration to address immediate and future labour shortages; and to engage communities in discussions and stimulate their future actions to provide welcoming communities for immigrants.

Register today and join us on September 18 when Alex LeBlanc, New

16th International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference
Thursday-Friday, September 19-20, 2019
Lancelot Thompson Student Union
3154 North Towerview Boulevard
Toledo, OH 43606
https://www.traffickingconference.com/

About: Since 2004, The International Human Trafficking and Social Justice Conference has been bringing together researchers, practitioners, and individuals with lived experience in an effort to lay the groundwork for future collaborative research, advocacy, and program development.

To date, the trafficking conference has welcomed attendees from 42 states and 30 countries to learn from researchers, survivors, and social service, health care, and criminal justice professionals about human trafficking and social justice topics.

Recently, there have been many new and exciting opportunities for expansion regarding the conference, which includes a name change because of a larger mission. In 2015, the conference title was changed to the International Human Trafficking & Social Justice Conference. The concept of social justice will expand topics at the conference to include many of the injustices seen in the world today.

We greatly appreciate those who have brought the conference this far. Change is hard, but is also necessary. All are welcome to join us in sharing knowledge and diverse perspectives at the conference. Our conference has a maximum of

Migration's Rescue of the European Union and Democracy

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Harvard Center for European Studies

11:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m., Friday, September 20, 2019
Hoffmann Room, Adolphus Busch Hall
27 Kirkland Street at Cabot Way
Cambridge, MA 02138
https://ces.fas.harvard.edu/events/2019/09/migrations-rescue-of-the-european-union-and-democracy

Description: What factors make some democracies more resilient and others more prone to democratic backsliding? Thirty years after the fall of communism in Central and Eastern Europe, the political trajectories of the region's new democracies still defy expectations. Countries long-considered leaders in transitions to democracy and capitalism (Hungary, Poland) have experienced democratic backsliding and rising Euroscepticism.

Meanwhile, the laggards of post-communist transitions and EU accession (Romania, Bulgaria) now score higher that their Visegrad counterparts on some measures of democratic quality and retain EU support. What explains the unevenness of democratic consolidation in the region? This book argues that the way in which European citizenship is practiced as intra-EU free movement matters.

Even in times of crisis, European integration and liberalism maintain their appeal in countries where large parts of the population depend on European citizenship in their living-making. The book focuses on high-mobility migrants from Romania and Poland, the EU's main migrant-sending countries, and highlights migrants' contributions to political change in their homelands. Findings show that intra-EU mobility influences sociopolitical attitudes, voting, and the state-citizen relationship when people become economically emancipated from the national labor market (by working abroad) but remain politically rooted.

Findings also show that, paradoxically, a longer history of migration and state-led diaspora engagement limits the political incorporation of intra-EU migrants. A laissez-faire approach provides more space for bottom-up, citizen-led mobilization, empowering intra-EU movers as political actors.

Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan

Princeton University, Jones Hall, #211
Princeton, NJ 08544
https://eap.princeton.edu/events/help-not-wanted-immigration-politics-japan

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Speaker(s):
Michael Strausz
Texas Christian University

Description: Why has Japan's immigration policy remained so restrictive, especially in light of economic, demographic, and international political forces that are pushing Japan to admit more immigrants? Michael Strausz will answer this question by drawing on insights from nearly two years of intensive field research in Japan. Ultimately, he will argue that Japan's immigration policy has remained restrictive for two reasons. First, Japan's labor-intensive businesses have failed to defeat anti-immigration forces within the Japanese state, particularly those in the Ministry of Justice and the Japanese Diet. Second, no influential strain of elite thought in postwar Japan exists to support the idea that significant numbers of foreign nationals have a legitimate claim to residency and citizenship.

In addition to an overview of postwar Japan's immigration control policy, this presentation provide context to recent developments in Japanese immigration policy – particularly the December 2018 decision to admit more than 300,000 low skilled foreign laborers.

Michael Strausz is an Associate Professor of Political Science and the Director of Asian Studies at Texas Christian University. He earned his BA in international relations and Japanese from Michigan State University and his MA and PhD in political science from the University of Washington. His book, Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan will be published with SUNY Press in August, and he has published a number of other articles and book chapters about topics including Japan's immigration policy and Japanese whaling. His research has been funded by grants from the Japan Foundation and the Fulbright Foundation, and he is a member of Cohort III of the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation 's U.S.-Japan Network for the Future.

Immigration and the 2020 Election

10:00-11:30 a.m., Friday, September 27, 2019
Bipartisan Policy Center
1225 Eye Street NW, Suite 1000
Washington, DC 20005
https://bipartisanpolicy.org/event/immigration-and-the-2020-election/

Description: It is evident from the Democratic presidential debates, President Trump's continued focus on the issue, media coverage, and national discourse that immigration will play a key role in the 2020 election. On September 27, see the results of a new survey, conducted for BPC by Morning Consult, on what the American public will be prioritizing on immigration when they head to the polls, and more importantly, whether there is an appetite for bipartisanship on the issue. Then, a panel of political and policy experts from both sides of the aisle will break down what it all means for the candidates and the future of immigration reform.

Moderator:
Doris Meissner, Senior Fellow and Director, U.S. Policy Program, MPI

From Donald Trump's first utterances as a presidential candidate in 2015 to the hundreds of policy actions undertaken during his administration, immigration has loomed as the major touchstone for his political base. It is the issue to which the president and his administration return again and again. Chaos at the U.S.-Mexico border resulted from a sharp uptick in flows, as well as outmatched policies, infrastructure, and resources. Now, a growing number of Americans cite immigration as one of the most crucial national issues. Yet Congress remains incapable of even small-bore fixes, continuing its nearly two-decade inability to undertake substantive immigration legislation. Vast differences exist among Republican and Democratic politicians and other stakeholders—from "build the wall" and narrowing humanitarian protections on one side, to #AbolishICE and pressing to decriminalize illegal crossings on the other.

Whither immigration as high-stakes elections approach in 2020? In what's sure to be a lively State of Play conversation, political and policy experts will explore the politics of immigration, the pitfalls for both political parties, and the potential for a post-election pause in the brinkmanship. Also, what about the possibility for reform as DREAMers await a major decision at the Supreme Court? What other pressing challenges may converge to force action in Washington?

Volleying among the Branches of Government: DACA, TPS, Asylum, and Other Policies That Hang in the Balance

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Moderator:
Muzaffar Chishti, Director, MPI's office at New York University School of Law

In an unprecedented era of executive branch policy-making in the immigration arena, the nation's federal judiciary has been called to decide a raft of major cases that hold the lives of more than 1 million recipients of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals and Temporary Protected Status in the balance, and govern the conditions of care for children in immigration detention and the ability to apply for asylum. The administration's action on the "public charge" rule may end up in the courts as well, and the fallout from the controversy of including a citizenship question on the 2020 census remains unsettled. What are the legal underpinnings, the stakes, and the possible outcomes as the nation's courts, from district courts all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, hear and rule on a consequential portfolio of legal challenges? And what is or will be Congress' response given the dynamic interplay of litigation and executive action? Our panel of top experts will tackle these big questions.

Drawing a New Line: Recent Changes in U.S.-Mexico Border Policy

Moderator:
Anna Gallagher, Executive Director, Catholic Legal Immigration Network, Inc.

Under the current administration, U.S.-Mexico border polices have dominated headlines, becoming both the symbol and testing ground of hardline immigration policy. Family separation, the deaths of children in immigration custody, and the detention of men, women, and children in unsafe, overcrowded conditions have stirred national concern.

The asylum system alone has been hamstrung by "metering" that slows entry to a trickle, enormous court backlogs, the wholesale return to Mexico of asylum applicants awaiting their court appearances, and policies that attempt to force applicants to first seek protection in other countries.

This panel will explore what these policies have meant to asylum seekers and the communities that straddle the 2,000-mile-long line. Topics will include family separation, Remain in Mexico, the wall, state and local work, and more. The panelists also will consider whether the administration is achieving results with its efforts to reshape overall enforcement, the responses from local border communities, and related litigation.

The Humanitarian and Migration Crisis Originating in Central America: The Need for Regional Approaches

Moderator:
Andrew Schoenholtz, Professor from Practice, Georgetown Law; Director, Human Rights Institute; Co-Director, Center for Applied Legal Studies

In recent years, the humanitarian and migration crisis in the three Northern Triangle countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras has resulted in increasing international migration, particularly of women and children as well as unaccompanied minors. Most of them cross the Guatemala-Mexico border to head towards the United States, while some migrate to countries in the region, such as Costa Rica. Many are fleeing serious violence carried out by gangs and other non-state actors, though the search for better livelihoods and family reunification with relatives already in the United States plays a role as well. Governments do not control territories where gangs and drug cartels rule, nor are they able to protect women and girls from domestic abuse and other forms of violence or insecurity. Natural disasters, climate change, food insecurity, and poor economic conditions exacerbate the situation for vulnerable people. This panel will discuss the best ways for governments, international organizations, and NGOs in the region to address this crisis, particularly in terms of root causes and the protection of families and children.

More information on the agenda and speakers to follow soon. This event will not be live streamed.

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;
* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;
* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and
* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

The swinging of the pendulum? Centre-right parties in a post-migration crisis Europe

9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m., Monday, October 7, 2019
Sala Belvedere - Villa Schifanoia, EUI
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/the-swinging-of-the-pendulum-centre-right-parties-in-a-post-migration-crisis-europe/

Description: This workshop will explore how the European centre-right is handling immigration in the wake of the migration crisis: are we witnessing a radicalisation of claims, and a shift from more 'moderate', mainstream positions to more radical, 'hardline' positions on immigration? Papers presented in this workshop will analyse recent positional shifts on, and reconfigurations related to, immigration of the centre-right in Europe. Contributions will explore the assumption that the crisis has pulled the centre-right irrevocably towards a more restrictive position. The focus on immigration serves as a magnifying glass, for wider trends related to the challenges of liberal democracy, and the reaction of a key political actor to the inherent dilemma between democratic accountability and the protection of liberal rights. The workshop focuses on centre-right parties of countries in which immigration has been highly tangible in numbers and in political debate (Austria, Germany, Sweden, Italy, the United Kingdom and Hungary), and also provides a broader (contextual) debate on political conflicts and the impact of the migration crisis across Europe.

Expanded refugee protection for some: Understanding the application patterns of the Cartagena refugee definition in Mexico

TBA, Wednesday, October 9, 2019
Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
University of California, San Diego
Eleanor Roosevelt College Provost's Building, Conference Room 115
9500 Gilman Drive
La Jolla, CA 92093
https://ccis.ucsd.edu/_files/Event%20Flyers-Programs-Agendas/Event-Flyer---Freier-10-9-19.pdf

Speaker:

Feline Freier, Assistant Professor of Political Sciences at the Universidad del Pacífico (Lima, Peru).

Description: Since the entry into force of Mexico's new Law on Refugees, Complementary Protection and Political Asylum in 2011, it has been praised as an exceptionally progressive norm. A core aspect of the new law is the inclusion of the expanded refugee definition derived from the Cartagena Declaration. At the same time, implementation gaps tend to persist between Mexico's laws and policy practice. This paper seeks to analyze in practice, how far Mexico has applied the Cartagena definition to allegeable asylum seekers. In order to fulfill this objective, we implemented a monitoring mechanism of the asylum system in Mexico through which we can identify patterns in the RSD administrative and legal reasoning such as the lack of application of the Cartagena definition to Central Americans, on the one hand, and the 99% refugee recognition rate under Cartagena of Venezuelan asylum seekers, on the other. Twenty in-depth elite interviews with authorities of different levels of government and NGO representatives shed light on the determinants of this differentiated application, which in practice, results in the regional refugee definition only benefiting a select group of people.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled “Democratic participation for migrant diasporas”. Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members’ involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members’ contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government
2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora
3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin – success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin
6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications

Forced Migration, Protection, and Border Control

8:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m., Thursday, October 17, 2019
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, LLP
One New York Plaza, 1 FDR Drive
New York, NY 10004
https://cmsny.org/event/2019-symposium/

Description: On October 17, 2019, the Center for Migration Studies will hold its annual academic and policy symposium at the law offices of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP. The event will open with a keynote address by T. Alexander Aleinikoff, Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility, about new directions for forced migration policy studies. The keynote will be followed by panels about enforcement, responding to the needs of refugees, and access to the US asylum system. In the closing session, panelists and attendees will engage in an open discussion about research and policy priorities. This is CMS's sixth annual academic and policy conference, which celebrates the work of leading scholars and thinkers on international migration.

Agenda:

9:00–9:15 a.m.
Welcome:
Karen Grisez, Public Service Counsel
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP

Introduction:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Most Rev. Nicholas DiMarzio
Bishop of Brooklyn

9:15–10:30 p.m.

Keynote: New Directions for Forced Migration Policy Studies

T. Alexander Aleinikoff
Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility
The New School

10:45 a.m.–12:00 p.m.

Session I: Enforcement Efforts and their Adverse Impact on Protection: A Discussion about North America, Europe, and the Global South

Over the last few years, we have seen increased efforts to build barriers and systems that prevent refugees and asylum seekers from reaching safety and applying for asylum protection. How are enforcement efforts in various regions of the world impacting refugee protection and access to asylum? What challenges do enhanced enforcement efforts impose? How have efforts to externalize borders and prevent access to asylum countries impacted genuine refugees? How can we address these problems?
Moderator: Michele Pistone, Non-Resident Fellow and Associate Editor, Journal on Migration and Human Security, Center for Migration Studies; Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES), Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law
Speakers will be announced shortly.

1:15–2:30 p.m.

Session II: Challenges in Responding to the Needs of Refugees, Displaced Persons and their Host Communities in Protracted Situations

A majority of refugees and internally displaced persons are in protracted situations—defined by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees as five years or longer. Many of them are in low and medium income countries that have few resources available to provide security, education, livelihood and entrepreneurship opportunities, healthcare and other services for host communities, let alone refugees and displaced persons. This panel will discuss opportunities and challenges in addressing protracted situations, particularly in the context of adoption of the Global Compact on Refugees in December 2019.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Moderator:
Susan Martin, Donald G. Herzberg Professor Emeritus in the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University

Speakers:
Sarah Deardorff Miller, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

Leah Zamore, Center on International Cooperation, New York University

2:45–4:00 p.m.
Session III: Access to Asylum on the US-Mexico Border

The Trump administration and DHS officers have pursued a series of strategies to restrict access to the US asylum system. Most of these strategies – interception, turn-backs, zero tolerance enforcement, the separation of children from parents, requiring asylum-seekers to await the US asylum process in Mexico and barring asylum to most migrants who arrive at the US-Mexico border – have been focused on the US southern border. Other measures, such as the expansion of expedited removal, began at the border but have now been expanded to cover the entire United States and persons in the country for two years or less. The panel will review, critique and discuss alternatives to these policies.
Moderator: Donald Kerwin, Executive Director, Center for Migration Studies

Speakers:
Josiah Heyman, Professor of Anthropology, Endowed Professor of Border Trade Issues, and Director of Center for Interamerican and Border Studies, University of Texas, El Paso

Carmen Maquilon, Director of Catholic Charities Immigration Services of the Diocese of Rockville Centre

4:00–5:00 p.m.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

Overview: The southern border shared between Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. is an enormous economic gateway for the United States, but it requires control, safety and modernization to maintain it. Enforcing laws and securing the border is a top priority for the Department of Homeland Security. As time passes, the need for operator driven policies and solutions, modern devices, and fully integrated border becomes more crucial.

This year's Border Management South Summit will aim to connect local, federal and state officials to discuss the top challenges and priorities in the field. Interactive group discussions and panels will address procurement initiatives and aligning border solutions with development of operators.

Agenda:

Focus Day, Wednesday, December 4, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
USING THE INTEGRATION OF IT SYSTEMS TO ENHANCE RESPONSE AT THE BORDER

The U.S./Mexico border is in need of becoming a fully integrated border. This session will evaluate how communication between law enforcement officials and security personnel will be seamless and sufficient using integration strategies.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Understanding how the integration of technological systems will enhance communication across the border
* Enhancing border mobility
* Managing information data flow across the border

10:30 a.m.

OPTIMIZING THE USE OF SECURITY PERSONNEL USING SECURITY APPLICATIONS

This session will provide a break down of how the use of advanced analytics can transform and protect the border. Advanced analytics will be able to detect security breaches from objects, unauthorized people and more. Security personnel will be able to receive knowledge of potential threats and act accordingly and in a timely manner.

* Using AI and ML to not only stockpile data, but also manage it
* Utilizing analytical tools to enhance perimeter protection
* Enabling security personnel to recognize threats using intelligent video

12:30 p.m.

ANALYZING DATA TO PREDICT FUTURE EVENTS AND OUTCOMES

Data will only become sufficient and useful if it is then transformed into action. Join us as we learn about the transforming of paper data into visionary plans and help detect future events. Information management allows room for improvement to border services and protection of citizens.

* Managing current data and transforming it into visionary plans and action
* Collecting and exploiting data to drive border decision making Timothy Bennett, Science and Technology Directorate, Department of Homeland Security

Thursday, December 5, 2019

8:50 a.m.

CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.

TEXAS IN REAL-TIME: RESPONDING AT THE BORDER

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Gain insight on how front line law enforcement officials are tackling border issues in real-time
Sheriff Waybourn, Tarrant County Sheriff Joe Frank Martinez, Del Val Verde County

9:45 a.m.

ANALYZING THE U.S. BORDER AS A SYSTEM: THE MEMBRANE, THE SURVEILLANCE AND THE HUMAN ELEMENT

In order to effectively secure the U.S. / Mexico border, it should be thought of as a system divided into three parts. A representative of the DHS will outline ways of uniting the organizational structure and breaking down each border element into compartments that work together to provide one outcome - effective border security.

* Evaluating the border as a whole system and not in parts
* Identifying the humanity aspect when working at the border

11:00 a.m.

ADVANCING ALL SITUATIONAL AND DOMAIN AWARENESS TO SUPPORT BORDER MISSIONS

Supporting border missions through situational and all domain awareness allows room to address challenges and provides understanding on how to respond in a threatening environment. Custom Border Patrol representatives will share how to appropriately notice changes across the border and respond rapidly.

* Building and sustaining situational awareness in a threat environment
* Using all domain awareness to predict future actions and threats
* Being aware of air, land and maritime border challenges and opportunities
Jennifer Barreras-Rawls, Operations Section Chief of Joint Task Force West, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

11:45 a.m.

ENSURING INTELLIGENCE DRIVEN OPERATIONS IN A THREAT ENVIRONMENT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

It is important to use intelligence for improvement of the border system as a whole. Understanding how to share intelligence between partners and how to utilize the data given is a key component in securing the border.

* Understanding a threat environment using information and data
* Sharing Intelligence between Law Enforcement Enterprise Partners
Brad Skinner, Deputy Director Office of Field Operations Laredo Field Office, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

* Advancing the border using intelligence and innovative technology
* Enhancing operation objectives to increase border protection productivity
* Bringing the human element back into border management

1:30 p.m.
USING A SCIENTIFIC APPROACH TO ADDRESS BORDER CHALLENGES

Scientific breakthroughs and advancements have caused a huge gateway for the use of CIP and enhancing threat management. Here you will understand how intelligence pictures and process help conquer nearby threats.

* Using common intelligence pictures to showcase threat capabilities
* Establishing the ability to detect threats beyond the border
* Deploying a systematic process for analyzing and distributing data

2:15 p.m.
ENHANCING PARTNERSHIPS AND ENFORCEMENT COOPERATION

Establishing partnerships will assist the border in creating meaningful relationships and thus, actively creating new ways to guard the U.S. / Mexico Border. Utilizing department-wide cooperation and international input will help overcome border threats.

* Establishing a unity of effort approach to effectively guard the U.S/Mexico Border
* Building international partnerships to effectively detect threats
* Enhancing supply chain security to conduct thorough examinations at the border
Ismael Navarez Jr., Special Agent in Charge, IRS

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3:00 p.m.

ADVANCING THE BORDER WITH THE MODEL PORTS PROGRAM

The Model Ports Program was designed to improve overall experience and operations at the port of entry. This session will showcase the reasoning and effectiveness behind the Model Ports Program.

* Improving wait time monitoring and processing
* Conducting meetings with senior level industry leaders for establish goals and monitoring techniques
* Using Public-Private Partnerships to enhance operation at the ports of entry

Friday, December 6, 2019

8:50 a.m.

CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.

PROCUREMENT: FUTURE INITIATIVES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

A DHS representative will disclose the 2020 Vision for the Department of Homeland Security. Attendees will understand where important investments are being made and how future policy will evolve border management.

* The 2020 outlook for the U.S./Mexico Border
* How policy changes will provide solutions to current border challenges
* Understanding future border investments

Rose Marie Davis, Director innovation Program Acquisitions, DHS

9:45 a.m.

IMMIGRATION OF FAMILIES ACROSS THE BORDER

The border is currently filled with multiple families including children seeking to come to the U.S. Due to the increase of migrants, facilities constantly become over crowded. Gain insights on how to ensure maintenance of facilities and navigate current and future border policies to secure the border.

* Maintaining protocol and policies when dealing with families at border

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Creating a safe and ethical environment at the U.S. /Mexico border
Robert Gross, DHS Attaché, Department of Homeland Security

11:00 a.m.

PROMOTING INNOVATION AND INTEGRITY AMONGST PERSONNEL

Training personnel on how to react in force situations and maintaining DHS ethical standards is important. Join us as we evaluate new initiatives taking place to reconstruct and advance CBP's organizational structure.

* Reconstructing the border's organizational structure
* Ensuring ethical conduct and integrity along the border
* Advancing training initiatives in assisting use of force situations

11:45 a.m.

PREVENTING COUNTERTERRORISM AND TRANSNATIONAL CRIME AT THE BORDER

Joining forces across law enforcement allows one to maximize its resources and enhance operational integration. Leaders of the Department of Homeland Security will share how the interaction of global partners will assist with reducing crime and potential threats.

* Joining forces with local, state, and federal law enforcement to increase resources
* Using integrated operations to detect weapons and disrupt illegal crossings
* Expanding mobility to quicken response to threats John Jones, Divisional Director Intelligence and Counterterrorism, Texas Department of Public Safety

1:30 p.m.

ADVANCING BORDER TRADING IN ORDER TO PROTECT THE U.S.

Implementing strategies and trade intelligence will protect against unlawful items from entering. This session will break down the use of trade intelligence in real time and how it will shape enforcement efforts.

* Collaborating with advanced technology and enforcement to intercept high-risk shipment
* Responding to border risk in real-time using trade intelligence

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Integration of law enforcement to help protect the border from illegal trade

Subject: Senate Action Expected on Big Tech Green Card Bill (S.386)

Senate Action Expected on Big Tech Green Card Bill

Washington, DC (September 18, 2019) - According to advocacy groups representing the Big Tech employers and their guestworkers, tomorrow the Senate will consider a bill that would dramatically change our system for awarding employment green cards in a way that rewards their business model — which has displaced U.S. workers on a grand scale. The bill is the Fairness for High Skilled Immigrants Act (S. 386), which is a companion bill that is very similar to H.R.1044, which passed in the House earlier this year.

This bill is anything but fair to U.S. workers, because it strengthens and perpetuates a system that is actively displacing them. It offers a major concession to employers who have bypassed U.S. workers for decades, without reforming the system to reduce guestworker admissions or prevent employers from replacing U.S. workers. This is one reason that DHS issued a statement opposing the bill when the House considered it earlier this year.

It eliminates a control known as the per-country cap, which meters issuance of green cards so that they are distributed to applicants from all countries before citizens of any one country can go above a certain number. Under this system, applicants from India now receive 20 percent of the employment green cards. Most of the applicants from India hold temporary visas (usually H-1B) as contract workers in technology occupations, and the number of green card applicants greatly exceeds the number of visas available, especially with the per-country cap. But according to USCIS, if the cap were eliminated, citizens of India would suddenly be able to claim nearly 100 percent of the employment green cards — for the next 10 years. So applicants from all other countries would effectively be blocked for the foreseeable future. This also means that U.S. employers who want to sponsor new foreign workers for green cards from any other part of the world would no longer be able to do so.

The Indian contract workers who are waiting for the chance to apply for a green card may apply for a visa extension and are not forced to leave the United States. And they still have their jobs — unlike the Americans they replaced.

Sources tell us that an actual vote is highly unlikely; instead, a unanimous consent request from a senator is more likely, which allows them to bypass the committee process, hearings, amendments, and, most importantly, a public debate. Reportedly, even at this late hour, most offices still do not have a final version of the legislation to review.

The Senate version of the bill was co-introduced by Sens. Mike Lee (R-Utah)

and Kamala Harris (D-Calif.). Sen. Rand Paul (R-Ky.) had blocked it from unanimous consent because of concerns that it would reduce the admission of foreign nurses. Reportedly, Sen. Paul has recently agreed to let it come up if it includes a provision that would guarantee admission of 5,000 foreign nurses on temporary visas each year for the next 10 years. This will please U.S. hospitals, which generally prefer to import nurses from abroad rather than expand the number of slots for Americans to enter domestic nursing schools to fill the need. Since when is nursing a job Americans won't do?

The best solution to this issue is not to scrap the per country cap, or to increase the number of green cards, as some have argued, but to enact a merit-based system for awarding employment green cards that rewards the most qualified, talented, and likely to succeed, regardless of their country of origin.

Immigration Challenges and Solutions

A conversation with

USCIS Acting Director Ken Cuccinelli

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (September 19, 2019) – Ken Cuccinelli, Acting Director of U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, will be featured in an Immigration Newsmaker conversation hosted by the Center for Immigration Studies on Thursday, September 26, at 1 p.m. at the National Press Club. Please RSVP to Marguerite Telford via email if you would like to reserve a seat; media is given priority. In addition, the event will be streamed on Facebook Live.

Since taking his position as Acting Director of USCIS in June, Cuccinelli has moved quickly to ensure compliance with immigration laws on the books as well as to provide guidance to clarify current regulations and policies to asylum officers and others. He made headlines recently announcing new "public charge" regulations, clarifying the law for prospective immigrants on qualifying for lawful permanent residence (green cards). They may be inadmissible if they are likely to use U.S. welfare programs.

The conversation on Thursday, September 26, moderated by Mark Krikorian, the Center's executive director, will cover such topics as public charge, work permits, processing of asylum claims, backlogs, fees, fraud, and E-Verify.

When: Thursday, September 26, 2019, at 1:00 p.m.

Where: National Press Club, First Amendment Lounge, 529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor, Washington, D.C.

The Immigration Newsmaker series provides an opportunity for government agency heads, members of Congress, and other policymakers to discuss their priorities and explore the challenges they face. The events, held at the National Press Club, are seated, on-the-record conversations between the guest and a member of the CIS staff. See previous interviews here.

Population projections: Canada, provinces and territories, 2018 to 2068
Statistics Canada, September 17, 2019
https://www150.statcan.gc.ca/n1/daily-quotidien/190917/dq190917b-eng.htm

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Excerpt: 55 million Canadians by 2068?

While the populations of many developed countries are expected to decrease, Canada's population is projected to grow over the next 50 years, largely because of strong immigration.

Population growth, however, is likely to vary across the country, with the population of some provinces and territories increasing and others decreasing. As a result, the provinces and territories may experience diverse opportunities and challenges over the coming decades.

The Canadian population has grown substantially in recent years, increasing from 30.7 million people in 2000 to 37.1 million in 2018.

The projections show that growth would continue in Canada over the next 50 years, and that the population could reach between 44.4 million and 70.2 million inhabitants by 2068. In the medium-growth scenario, the Canadian population would grow from 37.1 million inhabitants in 2018 to 55.2 million by 2068.

According to the low- and medium-growth scenarios, the rate of population growth would slow in the coming years, owing mainly to an increasing number of deaths relative to births. The expected increase in the number of deaths is mainly related to population aging.

In all scenarios, immigration would remain the key driver of population growth over the next 50 years, as has been the case since the early 1990s.

Population change - 1st half of 2019

Nationals of Ukraine dominated the international migration

Czech Statistical Office,

https://www.czso.cz/csu/czso/ari/population-change-1st-half-of-2019

Summary: At the end of June, the Czech Republic had almost 10.67 million inhabitants. From the beginning of the year the population increased by 18.8 thousand. The all increase resulted from the international migration. The number of live births was lower by 2.1 thousand than the number of deaths. The number of marriages was again higher in the year-on-year comparison.

The population of the Czech Republic increased by 18.8 thousand to nearly 10.67 million from 1 January to 30 June according to the preliminary statistical balance. The all increase resulted from the international migration, whose balance amounted to 20.9 thousand persons. The natural change reduced the population, when the number of live births was lower by 2.1 thousand than the number of deaths.

Due to international migration, the population of the Czech Republic increased by 20.9 thousand people during the first six months of 2019.The total migration balance was higher by 2.7 thousand in year-on-year comparison. A total of 34.1 thousand people immigrated to the Czech Republic from abroad and 13.2 thousand people emigrated from the Czech Republic. Compared to the first half of 2018, flows of both immigrants and emigrants were higher in 2019. Foreign migration was dominated by nationals of Ukraine. They prevailed among both immigrants and emigrants, and they reached also the highest positive net migration (8.6 thousand). The second highest was the net migration of Slovak nationals (2.1 thousand), followed by the migration balance of Russian (1.1 thousand) and Romanian nationals (1.1 thousand). The migration balance of the Czech nationals was negative (-0.6 thousand).

Net migration levels steady

Statistics New Zealand, September 10, 2019

https://www.stats.govt.nz/news/net-migration-levels-steady

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Summary: Annual net migration was provisionally estimated at 53,200 (± 900) in the year ended February 2019 compared with 51,500 in the previous year, Stats NZ said today.

"Increases for both migrant arrivals and migrant departures meant that there was a slight increase in net migration in the year ended February 2019," population indicators manager Tehseen Islam said.

"Annual net migration has fluctuated between 49,000 and 55,000 since the year ended October 2017."
Provisional migrant arrivals were up 8,300 to 147,300 in the year ended February 2019. The top source countries for arrivals were:

Australia (25,800 – 15,600 of which were New Zealand citizens)
China (15,800)
India (12,300)

Provisional estimates of migrant departures were up 6,500 to 94,100.

Immigration Court's Active Backlog Surpasses One Million
September 18, 2019
https://trac.syr.edu/immigration/reports/574/

Summary: The Immigration Court's active backlog of cases just passed the million case mark. The latest case-by-case court records through the end of August 2019 show the court's active case backlog was 1,007,155. If the additional 322,535 cases [1]which the court says are pending but have not been placed on the active caseload rolls are added, then the backlog now tops 1.3

million.

During the first eleven months of FY 2019, court records reveal a total of 384,977 new cases reached the court. If the pace of filings continues through the final month of this fiscal year, FY 2019 will also mark a new filing record.

While much in the news, new cases where individuals have been required to "Remain in Mexico" during their court processing currently make up just under 10 percent (9.9%) of these new filings. These MPP cases comprise an even smaller share - only 3.3 percent - of the court's active backlog.

As of the end of August, a total of 38,291 MPP cases had reached the court[2], of which 33,564 were still pending. MPP filings by month are shown below in Figure 1.

Migration, Borders and Citizenship: Between Policy and Public Spheres

By Maurizio Ambrosini, Manlio Cinalli, and David Jacobson

Palgrave Macmillan, 309 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 3030221563, $113.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/3030221563/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 4878 KB, ASIN: B07WWBCMQM, $84.99

Book Description: This edited collection goes beyond the limited definition of borders as simply dividing lines across states, to uncover another, yet related, type of division: one that separates policies and institutions from public debate and contestation.

Bringing together expertise from established and emerging academics, it examines the fluid and varied borderscape across policy and the public domains. The chapters encompass a wide range of analyses that covers local, national and transnational frameworks, policies and private actors. In doing so, Migration, Borders and Citizenship reveals the tensions between border control and state economic interests; legal frameworks designed to contain criminality and solidarity movements; international conventions, national constitutions and local migration governance; and democratic and exclusive constructions of citizenship.

This novel approach to the politics of borders will appeal to sociologists, political scientists and geographers working in the fields of migration, citizenship, urban geography and human rights; in addition to students and scholars of security studies and international relations.

What the Oceans Remember: Searching for Belonging and Home

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

By Sonja Boon

Wilfrid Laurier University Press, 328 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1771124237, $27.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1771124237/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 7249 KB, ASIN: B07Y2FJVR1, $19.99

Book Description: Author Sonja Boon's heritage is complicated. Although she has lived in Canada for more than thirty years, she was born in the UK to a Surinamese mother and a Dutch father. Boon's family history spans five continents: Europe, Africa, Southeast Asia, South America, and North America. Despite her complex and multi-layered background, she has often omitted her full heritage, replying "I'm Dutch-Canadian" to anyone who asks about her identity. An invitation to join a family tree project inspired a journey to the heart of the histories that have shaped her identity. It was an opportunity to answer the two questions that have dogged her over the years: Where does she belong? And who does she belong to?

Boon's archival research—in Suriname, the Netherlands, the UK, and Canada—brings her opportunities to reflect on the possibilities and limitations of the archives themselves, the tangliness of oceanic migration, histories, the meaning of legacy, music, love, freedom, memory, ruin, and imagination. Ultimately, she reflected on the relevance of our past to understanding our present.

Deeply informed by archival research and current scholarship, but written as a reflective and intimate memoir, What the Oceans Remember addresses current issues in migration, identity, belonging, and history through an interrogation of race, ethnicity, gender, archives and memory. More importantly, it addresses the relevance of our past to understanding our present. It shows the multiplicity of identities and origins that can shape the way we understand our histories and our own selves.

Mobilizing Global Knowledge: Refugee Research in an Age of Displacement

By Susan McGrath, Julie E.E. Young, et al.

University of Calgary Press, 336 pp.

Paperback, ISBN: 1773850857, $42.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1773850857/centerforimmigra

Book Description: In 2018, the United Nations High Commission for Refugees documented a record high 71.4 million displaced people around the world. As states struggle with the costs of providing protection to so many people and popular conceptions of refugees have become increasingly politicized and sensationalized, researchers have come together to form regional and global networks dedicated to working with displaced people to learn how to respond to their needs ethically, compassionately, and for the best interests of the global community.

Mobilizing Global Knowledge brings together academics and practitioners to reflect on a global collaborative refugee research network. Together, the members of this network have had a wide-ranging impact on research and policy, working to bridge silos, sectors, and regions. They have addressed power and politics in refugee research, engaged across tensions between the Global North and Global South, and worked deeply with questions of practice, methodology, and ethics in refugee research.

Bridging scholarship on network building for knowledge production and scholarship on research with and about refugees, Mobilizing Global Knowledge brings together a vibrant collection of topics and perspectives. It addresses ethical methods in research practice, the possibilities of social media for data collection and information dissemination, environmental displacement, transitional justice, and more. This is essential reading for anyone interested in how to create and share knowledge to the benefit of the millions of people around the world who have been forced to flee their homes.

Separated: Family and Community in the Aftermath of an Immigration Raid
By William D. Lopez

Johns Hopkins University Press, 232 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1421433311, $27.95
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1421433311/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1184 KB, ASIN: B07NRS3W3B, $16.49

Book Description: On a Thursday in November of 2013, Guadalupe Morales waited anxiously with her sister-in-law and their four small children. Every Latino man who drove away from their shared apartment above a small auto repair shop that day had failed to return—arrested, one by one, by ICE agents and local police. As the two women discussed what to do next, a SWAT team clad in body armor and carrying assault rifles stormed the room. As Guadalupe remembers it, "The soldiers came in the house. They knocked down doors. They threw gas. They had guns. We were two women with small children... The kids terrified, the kids screaming."

In Separated, William D. Lopez examines the lasting damage done by this daylong act of collaborative immigration enforcement in Washtenaw County, Michigan. Exploring the chaos of enforcement through the lens of community health, Lopez discusses deportation's rippling negative effects on families, communities, and individuals. Focusing on those left behind, Lopez reveals their efforts to cope with trauma, avoid homelessness, handle worsening health, and keep their families together as they attempt to deal with a deportation machine that is militarized, traumatic, implicitly racist, and profoundly violent.

Lopez uses this single home raid to show what immigration law enforcement looks like from the perspective of the people who actually experience it. Drawing on in-depth interviews with twenty-four individuals whose lives were changed that day in 2013, as well as field notes, records obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, and his own experience as an activist, Lopez combines rigorous research with narrative storytelling. Putting faces and names to the numbers behind deportation statistics, Separated urges readers to move beyond sound bites and consider the human experience of mixed-status communities in the small everyday towns that dot the interior of the United States.

Kindle, 9577 KB, ASIN: B07N5HCTQ6, 317 pp., $12.99

Book Description: Every year, three to four million people move to a new country. From war refugees to corporate expats, migrants constantly reshape their places of origin and arrival. This selection of works collected together for the first time brings together the most compelling literary depictions of migration.

Organized in four parts (Departures, Arrivals, Generations, and Returns), The Penguin Book of Migration Literature conveys the intricacy of worldwide migration patterns, the diversity of immigrant experiences, and the commonalities among many of those diverse experiences. Ranging widely across the eighteenth through twenty-first centuries, across every continent of the earth, and across multiple literary genres, the anthology gives readers an understanding of our rapidly changing world, through the eyes of those at the center of that change. With thirty carefully selected poems, short stories, and excerpts spanning three hundred years and twenty-five countries, the collection brings together luminaries, emerging writers, and others who have earned a wide following in their home countries but have been less recognized in the Anglophone world. Editor of the volume Dohra Ahmad provides a contextual introduction, notes, and suggestions for further exploration.

Foreign Organizations' Use of Our Immigration System to Penetrate U.S. Education

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Senate will consider a bill on Thursday, October 19th that would dramatically change our system for awarding employment green cards in a way that rewards their business model — which has displaced U.S. workers on a grand scale.

Is the U.S. Government Discriminating Against Middle Class Illegal Aliens?

By David North

Arriving legally does not mean you can stay forever; someone who enters legally and overstays is equally in lawless status as one who enters without inspection. Those with money are virtually always treated better than those without. Had the Trump administration, contrary to its own nature, upset that rule?

By Dan Cadman

It appears that foreign organizations are seeking ways to influence American society and outlooks through the educational system and, of course, in the process, taking advantage of U.S. immigration laws to do so.

Immigration Judicial Warrants Don't Exist

By Andrew R. Arthur

Immigration detainers are,civil detainers, because immigration proceedings are civil — as opposed to criminal — in nature. Immigration detention is, however, detention, and the authority for such detention has been recognized as valid since the 19th Century.

Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan

4:30 p.m., Wednesday, September 25, 2019
Princeton University, Jones Hall, #211
Princeton, NJ 08544
https://eap.princeton.edu/events/help-not-wanted-immigration-politics-japan

Speaker(s):
Michael Strausz
Texas Christian University

Description: Why has Japan's immigration policy remained so restrictive, especially in light of economic, demographic, and international political forces that are pushing Japan to admit more immigrants? Michael Strausz will answer this question by drawing on insights from nearly two years of intensive field research in Japan. Ultimately, he will argue that Japan's immigration policy has remained restrictive for two reasons. First, Japan's labor-intensive businesses have failed to defeat anti-immigration forces within the Japanese state, particularly those in the Ministry of Justice and the Japanese Diet. Second, no influential strain of elite thought in postwar Japan exists to support the idea that significant numbers of foreign nationals have a legitimate claim to residency and citizenship.

In addition to an overview of postwar Japan's immigration control policy, this presentation provide context to recent developments in Japanese immigration policy – particularly the December 2018 decision to admit more than 300,000 low skilled foreign laborers.

Michael Strausz is an Associate Professor of Political Science and the Director of Asian Studies at Texas Christian University. He earned his BA in international relations and Japanese from Michigan State University and his MA and PhD in political science from the University of Washington. His book, Help (Not) Wanted: Immigration Politics in Japan will be published with SUNY Press in

August, and he has published a number of other articles and book chapters about topics including Japan's immigration policy and Japanese whaling. His research has been funded by grants from the Japan Foundation and the Fulbright Foundation, and he is a member of Cohort III of the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation 's U.S.-Japan Network for the Future.

Immigration Newsmaker: A Conversation with USCIS Acting Director Ken Cuccinelli

1:00 p.m., Thursday, September 26, 2019
National Press Club
529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor
Washington, D.C. 20045
https://cis.org/

Ken Cuccinelli, Acting Director of U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, will be featured in an Immigration Newsmaker conversation hosted by the Center for Immigration Studies on Thursday, September 26, at 1 p.m. at the National Press Club. Please RSVP to Marguerite Telford via email if you would like to reserve a seat; media is given priority. In addition, the event will be streamed on Facebook Live.
Since taking his position as Acting Director of USCIS in June, Cuccinelli has moved quickly to ensure compliance with immigration laws on the books as well as to provide guidance to clarify current regulations and policies to asylum officers and others. He made headlines recently announcing new "public charge" regulations, clarifying the law for prospective immigrants on qualifying for lawful permanent residence (green cards). They may be inadmissible if they are likely to use U.S. welfare programs.

The conversation on Thursday, September 26, moderated by Mark Krikorian, the Center's executive director, will cover such topics as public charge, work permits, processing of asylum claims, backlogs, fees, fraud, and E-Verify.

The Immigration Newsmaker series provides an opportunity for government agency heads, members of Congress, and other policymakers to discuss their priorities and explore the challenges they face. The events, held at the National Press Club, are seated, on-the-record conversations between the guest and a member of the CIS staff.

Immigration and the 2020 Election

10:00-11:30 a.m., Friday, September 27, 2019
Bipartisan Policy Center
1225 Eye Street NW, Suite 1000
Washington, DC 20005
https://bipartisanpolicy.org/event/immigration-and-the-2020-election/

Description: It is evident from the Democratic presidential debates, President Trump's continued focus on the issue, media coverage, and national discourse that immigration will play a key role in the 2020 election. On September 27, see the results of a new survey, conducted for BPC by Morning Consult, on what the American public will be prioritizing on immigration when they head to the polls, and more importantly, whether there is an appetite for bipartisanship on the issue. Then, a panel of political and policy experts from both sides of the aisle will break down what it all means for the candidates and the future of immigration reform.

The Colombian Response to the Venezuelan Migration Crisis: A Dialogue with Colombia's Migration Czar

11:00 a.m.-12:15 p.m., Friday, September 27, 2019
MPI Conference Room, Suite 300
1400 16th Street NW
Washington, DC 20036
https://www.migrationpolicy.org/events/colombia-response-venezuelan-migration

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Description: The political and economic unraveling of Venezuela has sparked the flight of more than 4 million people in what now stands as the largest exodus of migrants in the western hemisphere—a number that could exceed 5 million by year's end. More than 1.4 million Venezuelans have settled in Colombia, which has generously opened its doors.
As the primary destination for Venezuelans, Colombia is providing a variety of legal pathways through temporary programs that allow the new arrivals access to work permits, public services, and protection from possible exploitation. And in September 2018, Colombia joined other countries in adopting the Declaration of Quito on Human Mobility of Venezuelan Citizens in the Region and launched an action plan emphasizing regularization and integration for migrants.

However, Colombia's capacity to continue to host further arrivals is being stretched amid increasing pressure on public services and local economies, the growing recognition these arrivals will be more than short-term guests, and the strong possibility of additional inflows. Also at play is the slow arrival of international assistance. The UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) has deemed the Venezuelan crisis one of the most underfunded humanitarian appeals in the world.

As the crisis continues to unfold, join the Migration Policy Institute and Inter-American Dialogue for an important conversation with Felipe Muñoz, Advisor to the President of Colombia for the Colombian-Venezuelan Border, on how Colombia is coping with this influx, plans for future policy decisions, and developments in regional and international cooperation, including with the United States.

State of Play: Central to the Trump Administration's Record, Immigration Looms as the Major 2020 Issue

Moderator:

Doris Meissner, Senior Fellow and Director, U.S. Policy Program, MPI

From Donald Trump's first utterances as a presidential candidate in 2015 to the hundreds of policy actions undertaken during his administration, immigration has loomed as the major touchstone for his political base. It is the issue to which the president and his administration return again and again. Chaos at the U.S.-Mexico border resulted from a sharp uptick in flows, as well as outmatched policies, infrastructure, and resources. Now, a growing number of Americans cite immigration as one of the most crucial national issues. Yet Congress remains incapable of even small-bore fixes, continuing its nearly two-decade inability to undertake substantive immigration legislation. Vast differences exist among Republican and Democratic politicians and other stakeholders—from "build the wall" and narrowing humanitarian protections on one side, to #AbolishICE and pressing to decriminalize illegal crossings on the other.

Whither immigration as high-stakes elections approach in 2020? In what's sure to be a lively State of Play conversation, political and policy experts will explore the politics of immigration, the pitfalls for both political parties, and the potential for a post-election pause in the brinkmanship. Also, what about the possibility for reform as DREAMers await a major decision at the Supreme Court? What other pressing challenges may converge to force action in Washington?

Volleying among the Branches of Government: DACA, TPS, Asylum, and Other Policies That Hang in the Balance

Moderator:

Muzaffar Chishti, Director, MPI's office at New York University School of Law

In an unprecedented era of executive branch policy-making in the immigration arena, the nation's federal judiciary has been called to decide a raft of major cases that hold the lives of more than 1 million recipients of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals and Temporary Protected Status in the balance, and govern

the conditions of care for children in immigration detention and the ability to apply for asylum. The administration's action on the "public charge" rule may end up in the courts as well, and the fallout from the controversy of including a citizenship question on the 2020 census remains unsettled. What are the legal underpinnings, the stakes, and the possible outcomes as the nation's courts, from district courts all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, hear and rule on a consequential portfolio of legal challenges? And what is or will be Congress' response given the dynamic interplay of litigation and executive action? Our panel of top experts will tackle these big questions.

Drawing a New Line: Recent Changes in U.S.-Mexico Border Policy

Moderator:
Anna Gallagher, Executive Director, Catholic Legal Immigration Network, Inc.

Under the current administration, U.S.-Mexico border polices have dominated headlines, becoming both the symbol and testing ground of hardline immigration policy. Family separation, the deaths of children in immigration custody, and the detention of men, women, and children in unsafe, overcrowded conditions have stirred national concern.

The asylum system alone has been hamstrung by "metering" that slows entry to a trickle, enormous court backlogs, the wholesale return to Mexico of asylum applicants awaiting their court appearances, and policies that attempt to force applicants to first seek protection in other countries.

This panel will explore what these policies have meant to asylum seekers and the communities that straddle the 2,000-mile-long line. Topics will include family separation, Remain in Mexico, the wall, state and local work, and more. The panelists also will consider whether the administration is achieving results with its efforts to reshape overall enforcement, the responses from local border communities, and related litigation.

The Humanitarian and Migration Crisis Originating in Central America: The Need for Regional Approaches

Moderator:
Andrew Schoenholtz, Professor from Practice, Georgetown Law; Director, Human Rights Institute; Co-Director, Center for Applied Legal Studies

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In recent years, the humanitarian and migration crisis in the three Northern Triangle countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras has resulted in increasing international migration, particularly of women and children as well as unaccompanied minors. Most of them cross the Guatemala-Mexico border to head towards the United States, while some migrate to countries in the region, such as Costa Rica. Many are fleeing serious violence carried out by gangs and other non-state actors, though the search for better livelihoods and family reunification with relatives already in the United States plays a role as well. Governments do not control territories where gangs and drug cartels rule, nor are they able to protect women and girls from domestic abuse and other forms of violence or insecurity. Natural disasters, climate change, food insecurity, and poor economic conditions exacerbate the situation for vulnerable people. This panel will discuss the best ways for governments, international organizations, and NGOs in the region to address this crisis, particularly in terms of root causes and the protection of families and children.

More information on the agenda and speakers to follow soon. This event will not be live streamed.

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;
* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;
* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and
* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

The swinging of the pendulum? Centre-right parties in a post-migration crisis Europe

9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m., Monday, October 7, 2019
Sala Belvedere - Villa Schifanoia, EUI
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/the-swinging-of-the-pendulum-centre-right-parties-in-a-post-migration-crisis-europe/

Description: This workshop will explore how the European centre-right is handling immigration in the wake of the migration crisis: are we witnessing a radicalisation of claims, and a shift from more 'moderate', mainstream positions to more radical, 'hardline' positions on immigration? Papers presented in this workshop will analyse recent positional shifts on, and reconfigurations related to, immigration of the centre-right in Europe. Contributions will explore the assumption that the crisis has pulled the centre-right irrevocably towards a more restrictive position. The focus on immigration serves as a magnifying glass, for wider trends related to the challenges of liberal democracy, and the reaction of a key political actor to the inherent dilemma between democratic accountability and the protection of liberal rights. The workshop focuses on centre-right parties of countries in which immigration has been highly tangible in numbers and in political debate (Austria, Germany, Sweden, Italy, the United Kingdom and Hungary), and also provides a broader (contextual) debate on political conflicts and the impact of the migration crisis across Europe.

Expanded refugee protection for some: Understanding the application patterns of the Cartagena refugee definition in Mexico

TBA, Wednesday, October 9, 2019
Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
University of California, San Diego
Eleanor Roosevelt College Provost's Building, Conference Room 115
9500 Gilman Drive
La Jolla, CA 92093
https://ccis.ucsd.edu/_files/Event%20Flyers-Programs-Agendas/Event-Flyer---Freier-10-9-19.pdf

Speaker:
Feline Freier, Assistant Professor of Political Sciences at the Universidad del Pacífico (Lima, Peru).

Description: Since the entry into force of Mexico's new Law on Refugees, Complementary Protection and Political Asylum in 2011, it has been praised as an exceptionally progressive norm. A core aspect of the new law is the inclusion of the expanded refugee definition derived from the Cartagena Declaration. At the same time, implementation gaps tend to persist between Mexico's laws and policy practice. This paper seeks to analyze in practice, how far Mexico has applied the Cartagena definition to allegeable asylum seekers. In order to fulfill this objective, we implemented a monitoring mechanism of the asylum system in Mexico through which we can identify patterns in the RSD administrative and legal reasoning such as the lack of application of the Cartagena definition to Central Americans, on the one hand, and the 99% refugee recognition rate under Cartagena of Venezuelan asylum seekers, on the other. Twenty in-depth elite interviews with authorities of different levels of government and NGO representatives shed light on the determinants of this differentiated application, which in practice, results in the regional refugee definition only benefiting a select group of people.

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled "Democratic participation for migrant diasporas". Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members' involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members' contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government
2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora
3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin – success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin
6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications
10. Emigrant literature

The conference organisers would like to emphasise that presenters have the opportunity to present on a different theme that is related to the general purpose.

Forced Migration, Protection, and Border Control

8:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m., Thursday, October 17, 2019
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, LLP
One New York Plaza, 1 FDR Drive
New York, NY 10004
https://cmsny.org/event/2019-symposium/

Description: On October 17, 2019, the Center for Migration Studies will hold its annual academic and policy symposium at the law offices of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP. The event will open with a keynote address by T. Alexander Aleinikoff, Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility, about new directions for forced migration policy studies. The keynote will be followed by panels about enforcement, responding to the needs of refugees, and access to the US asylum system. In the closing session, panelists and attendees will engage in an open discussion about research and policy priorities. This is CMS's sixth annual academic and policy conference, which celebrates the work of leading scholars and thinkers on international migration.

Agenda:

9:00–9:15 a.m.
Welcome:
Karen Grisez, Public Service Counsel
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP

Introduction:
Most Rev. Nicholas DiMarzio
Bishop of Brooklyn

9:15–10:30 p.m.
Keynote: New Directions for Forced Migration Policy Studies
T. Alexander Aleinikoff
Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The New School

10:45 a.m.–12:00 p.m.

Session I: Enforcement Efforts and their Adverse Impact on Protection: A Discussion about North America, Europe, and the Global South

Over the last few years, we have seen increased efforts to build barriers and systems that prevent refugees and asylum seekers from reaching safety and applying for asylum protection. How are enforcement efforts in various regions of the world impacting refugee protection and access to asylum? What challenges do enhanced enforcement efforts impose? How have efforts to externalize borders and prevent access to asylum countries impacted genuine refugees? How can we address these problems?
Moderator: Michele Pistone, Non-Resident Fellow and Associate Editor, Journal on Migration and Human Security, Center for Migration Studies; Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES), Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law
Speakers will be announced shortly.

1:15–2:30 p.m.

Session II: Challenges in Responding to the Needs of Refugees, Displaced Persons and their Host Communities in Protracted Situations

A majority of refugees and internally displaced persons are in protracted situations—defined by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees as five years or longer. Many of them are in low and medium income countries that have few resources available to provide security, education, livelihood and entrepreneurship opportunities, healthcare and other services for host communities, let alone refugees and displaced persons. This panel will discuss opportunities and challenges in addressing protracted situations, particularly in the context of adoption of the Global Compact on Refugees in December 2019.

Moderator:
Susan Martin, Donald G. Herzberg Professor Emeritus in the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University

Speakers:
Sarah Deardorff Miller, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Leah Zamore, Center on International Cooperation, New York University

2:45–4:00 p.m.

Session III: Access to Asylum on the US-Mexico Border

The Trump administration and DHS officers have pursued a series of strategies to restrict access to the US asylum system. Most of these strategies – interception, turn-backs, zero tolerance enforcement, the separation of children from parents, requiring asylum-seekers to await the US asylum process in Mexico and barring asylum to most migrants who arrive at the US-Mexico border – have been focused on the US southern border. Other measures, such as the expansion of expedited removal, began at the border but have now been expanded to cover the entire United States and persons in the country for two years or less. The panel will review, critique and discuss alternatives to these policies.

Moderator: Donald Kerwin, Executive Director, Center for Migration Studies

Speakers:

Josiah Heyman, Professor of Anthropology, Endowed Professor of Border Trade Issues, and Director of Center for Interamerican and Border Studies, University of Texas, El Paso

Carmen Maquilon, Director of Catholic Charities Immigration Services of the Diocese of Rockville Centre

4:00–5:00 p.m.

Closing Presentation:

Jaime Winders will moderate an open discussion of research and policy priorities.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

Overview: The southern border shared between Canada, Mexico, and the U.S.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

is an enormous economic gateway for the United States, but it requires control, safety and modernization to maintain it. Enforcing laws and securing the border is a top priority for the Department of Homeland Security. As time passes, the need for operator driven policies and solutions, modern devices, and fully integrated border becomes more crucial.

This year's Border Management South Summit will aim to connect local, federal and state officials to discuss the top challenges and priorities in the field. Interactive group discussions and panels will address procurement initiatives and aligning border solutions with development of operators.

Agenda:

Immigration Challenges and Solutions

A conversation with

USCIS Acting Director Ken Cuccinelli

Washington, D.C. (September 26, 2019) – Ken Cuccinelli, Acting Director of U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, will be featured in an Immigration Newsmaker conversation hosted by the Center for Immigration Studies on Thursday, September 26, at 1 p.m. at the National Press Club. Please RSVP to Marguerite Telford via email if you would like to reserve a seat; media is given priority. In addition, the event will be streamed on Facebook Live.

Since taking his position as Acting Director of USCIS in June, Cuccinelli has moved quickly to ensure compliance with immigration laws on the books as well as to provide guidance to clarify current regulations and policies to asylum officers and others. He made headlines recently announcing new "public charge" regulations, clarifying the law for prospective immigrants on qualifying for lawful permanent residence (green cards). They may be inadmissible if they are likely to use U.S. welfare programs.

The conversation on Thursday, September 26, moderated by Mark Krikorian, the Center's executive director, will cover such topics as public charge, work permits, processing of asylum claims, backlogs, fees, fraud, and E-Verify.

When: Thursday, September 26, 2019, at 1:00 p.m.

Where: National Press Club, First Amendment Lounge, 529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor, Washington, D.C.

The Immigration Newsmaker series provides an opportunity for government agency heads, members of Congress, and other policymakers to discuss their priorities and explore the challenges they face. The events, held at the National Press Club, are seated, on-the-record conversations between the guest and a member of the CIS staff. See previous interviews here.

The Trump administration announced last week a number of measures to be implemented to the refugee resettlement program in FY 2020, which starts tomorrow. These include a lower refugee ceiling of 18,000 (a drop from last year's 30,000); an end to the random selection of refugees for resettlement, to be replaced by a new focus on categories of special humanitarian concern such as religious minorities or Iraqis; a reduced reliance on the UN refugee agency (UNHCR) for the pre-vetting and selection process of refugees; and a possibility given to state and local governments to opt out of the program altogether and refuse to welcome refugees in their localities.

CIS has provided instant analysis of the decision, as Dr. Nayla Rush details why the revisions to the refugee resettlement program are long overdue. And Mark Krikorian explains what the purpose of refugee resettlement, and refugee protection more generally, should be.

Panels:
State of Play: Central to the Trump Administration's Record, Immigration Looms as the Major 2020 Issue

Moderator:
Doris Meissner, Senior Fellow and Director, U.S. Policy Program, MPI

From Donald Trump's first utterances as a presidential candidate in 2015 to the hundreds of policy actions undertaken during his administration, immigration has loomed as the major touchstone for his political base. It is the issue to which the president and his administration return again and again. Chaos at the U.S.-Mexico border resulted from a sharp uptick in flows, as well as outmatched policies, infrastructure, and resources. Now, a growing number of Americans cite immigration as one of the most crucial national issues. Yet Congress remains incapable of even small-bore fixes, continuing its nearly two-decade inability to undertake substantive immigration legislation. Vast differences exist among Republican and Democratic politicians and other stakeholders—from "build the wall" and narrowing humanitarian protections on one side, to #AbolishICE and pressing to decriminalize illegal crossings on the other.

Whither immigration as high-stakes elections approach in 2020? In what's sure to be a lively State of Play conversation, political and policy experts will explore the politics of immigration, the pitfalls for both political parties, and the potential for a post-election pause in the brinkmanship. Also, what about the possibility for reform as DREAMers await a major decision at the Supreme Court? What other pressing challenges may converge to force action in Washington?

Volleying among the Branches of Government: DACA, TPS, Asylum, and Other Policies That Hang in the Balance

Moderator:
Muzaffar Chishti, Director, MPI's office at New York University School of Law

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In an unprecedented era of executive branch policy-making in the immigration arena, the nation's federal judiciary has been called to decide a raft of major cases that hold the lives of more than 1 million recipients of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals and Temporary Protected Status in the balance, and govern the conditions of care for children in immigration detention and the ability to apply for asylum. The administration's action on the "public charge" rule may end up in the courts as well, and the fallout from the controversy of including a citizenship question on the 2020 census remains unsettled. What are the legal underpinnings, the stakes, and the possible outcomes as the nation's courts, from district courts all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, hear and rule on a consequential portfolio of legal challenges? And what is or will be Congress' response given the dynamic interplay of litigation and executive action? Our panel of top experts will tackle these big questions.

Drawing a New Line: Recent Changes in U.S.-Mexico Border Policy

Moderator:
Anna Gallagher, Executive Director, Catholic Legal Immigration Network, Inc.

Under the current administration, U.S.-Mexico border polices have dominated headlines, becoming both the symbol and testing ground of hardline immigration policy. Family separation, the deaths of children in immigration custody, and the detention of men, women, and children in unsafe, overcrowded conditions have stirred national concern.

The asylum system alone has been hamstrung by "metering" that slows entry to a trickle, enormous court backlogs, the wholesale return to Mexico of asylum applicants awaiting their court appearances, and policies that attempt to force applicants to first seek protection in other countries.

This panel will explore what these policies have meant to asylum seekers and the communities that straddle the 2,000-mile-long line. Topics will include family separation, Remain in Mexico, the wall, state and local work, and more. The panelists also will consider whether the administration is achieving results with its efforts to reshape overall enforcement, the responses from local border communities, and related litigation.

The Humanitarian and Migration Crisis Originating in Central America: The Need for Regional Approaches

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Moderator:
Andrew Schoenholtz, Professor from Practice, Georgetown Law; Director, Human Rights Institute; Co-Director, Center for Applied Legal Studies

In recent years, the humanitarian and migration crisis in the three Northern Triangle countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras has resulted in increasing international migration, particularly of women and children as well as unaccompanied minors. Most of them cross the Guatemala-Mexico border to head towards the United States, while some migrate to countries in the region, such as Costa Rica. Many are fleeing serious violence carried out by gangs and other non-state actors, though the search for better livelihoods and family reunification with relatives already in the United States plays a role as well. Governments do not control territories where gangs and drug cartels rule, nor are they able to protect women and girls from domestic abuse and other forms of violence or insecurity. Natural disasters, climate change, food insecurity, and poor economic conditions exacerbate the situation for vulnerable people. This panel will discuss the best ways for governments, international organizations, and NGOs in the region to address this crisis, particularly in terms of root causes and the protection of families and children.

Description: While scholars have examined the cross-border ties between migrants and nonmigrants, they have largely neglected the transnational ties among the children of migrants born in the host country, i.e. second-generation Americans. Earlier scholars of transnationalism argued that second-generation Americans would not engage in any cross-border ties as they often have only fleeting connections to those abroad, relatively low levels of linguistic and cultural proficiency, and typically no plans to return permanently to the ancestral home country. However, utilizing public survey data and interviews with Mexican- and Filipino-Americans, this research reveals the much larger scope of second-generation transnationalism. This talk discusses how first-generation migrants play a crucial role in facilitating second-generation American cross-border ties as they compensate for the lack of emotional attachments and logistical knowledge necessary for such connections. In addition, this research shows the ways in which country-to-country conditions shape the particularities of how these forms of cross-border ties emerge.

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;
* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;
* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and
* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

The swinging of the pendulum? Centre-right parties in a post-migration crisis Europe

9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m., Monday, October 7, 2019
Sala Belvedere - Villa Schifanoia, EUI
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/the-swinging-of-the-pendulum-centre-right-parties-in-a-post-migration-crisis-europe/

Description: This workshop will explore how the European centre-right is handling immigration in the wake of the migration crisis: are we witnessing a radicalisation of claims, and a shift from more 'moderate', mainstream positions to more radical, 'hardline' positions on immigration? Papers presented in this workshop will analyse recent positional shifts on, and reconfigurations related to, immigration of the centre-right in Europe. Contributions will explore the assumption that the crisis has pulled the centre-right irrevocably towards a more restrictive position. The focus on immigration serves as a magnifying glass, for wider trends related to the challenges of liberal democracy, and the reaction of a key political actor to the inherent dilemma between democratic accountability and the protection of liberal rights. The workshop focuses on centre-right parties of countries in which immigration has been highly tangible in numbers and in political debate (Austria, Germany, Sweden, Italy, the United Kingdom and Hungary), and also provides a broader (contextual) debate on political conflicts and the impact of the migration crisis across Europe.

Expanded refugee protection for some: Understanding the application patterns of the Cartagena refugee definition in Mexico

Speaker:
Feline Freier, Assistant Professor of Political Sciences at the Universidad del Pacífico (Lima, Peru).

Description: Since the entry into force of Mexico's new Law on Refugees, Complementary Protection and Political Asylum in 2011, it has been praised as an exceptionally progressive norm. A core aspect of the new law is the inclusion of the expanded refugee definition derived from the Cartagena Declaration. At the same time, implementation gaps tend to persist between Mexico's laws and policy practice. This paper seeks to analyze in practice, how far Mexico has applied the Cartagena definition to allegeable asylum seekers. In order to fulfill this objective, we implemented a monitoring mechanism of the asylum system in Mexico through which we can identify patterns in the RSD administrative and legal reasoning such as the lack of application of the Cartagena definition to

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Central Americans, on the one hand, and the 99% refugee recognition rate under Cartagena of Venezuelan asylum seekers, on the other. Twenty in-depth elite interviews with authorities of different levels of government and NGO representatives shed light on the determinants of this differentiated application, which in practice, results in the regional refugee definition only benefiting a select group of people.

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled "Democratic participation for migrant diasporas". Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members' involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members' contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government
2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora
3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin – success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin
6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications
10. Emigrant literature

The conference organisers would like to emphasise that presenters have the opportunity to present on a different theme that is related to the general purpose.

Rethinking EU migration and asylum policies: Managing immigration jointly with countries of origin and transit

9:00 a.m.-3:30 p.m., Wednesday, October 16, 2019
1 Place du Congrès 1000
CEPS, Bruxelles, Belgium
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/rethinking-eu-migration-and-asylum-policies-managing-immigration-jointly-with-countries-of-origin-and-transit-16-october-2019-brussels/

Description: Asylum and migration policy continues to be high up on the EU policy agenda and will remain an important topic for the next European Commission. Though current positions in the European Council regarding how to make progress on the Common European Asylum System seem deadlocked, there is considerable scope for dialogue and debate on the future of EU asylum policy as well as the wider issue of improving overall management of migration.

This 'Mercator Dialogue on Asylum and Migration' (MEDAM) conference is launching the annual assessment report on asylum and migration policy. This year's report is titled "Rethinking EU migration and asylum policies: Managing immigration jointly with countries of origin and transit". State Secretary for Migration María del Consuelo Rumí Ibáñez (Spain), Ambassador H.E. Ms. Teneng Mba Jaiteh (Gambia) and MEP Delara Burkhardt are among the confirmed speakers.

Anyone working on international migration, development and cooperation is encouraged to join the panellists at this debate and to contribute to the discussion during the three Q&A sessions, and coffee and lunch breaks.

For more information and to register to the conference, consult the event page.

Forced Migration, Protection, and Border Control

8:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m., Thursday, October 17, 2019
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, LLP
One New York Plaza, 1 FDR Drive
New York, NY 10004
https://cmsny.org/event/2019-symposium/

Description: On October 17, 2019, the Center for Migration Studies will hold its annual academic and policy symposium at the law offices of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP. The event will open with a keynote address by T. Alexander Aleinikoff, Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility, about new directions for forced migration policy studies. The keynote will be followed by panels about enforcement, responding to the needs of refugees, and access to the US asylum system. In the closing session, panelists and attendees will engage in an open discussion about research and policy priorities. This is CMS's sixth annual academic and policy conference, which celebrates the work of leading scholars and thinkers on international migration.

Agenda:

9:00–9:15 a.m.
Welcome:
Karen Grisez, Public Service Counsel
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP

Introduction:
Most Rev. Nicholas DiMarzio

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Bishop of Brooklyn

9:15–10:30 p.m.

Keynote: New Directions for Forced Migration Policy Studies

T. Alexander Aleinikoff
Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility
The New School

10:45 a.m.–12:00 p.m.

Session I: Enforcement Efforts and their Adverse Impact on Protection: A Discussion about North America, Europe, and the Global South

Over the last few years, we have seen increased efforts to build barriers and systems that prevent refugees and asylum seekers from reaching safety and applying for asylum protection. How are enforcement efforts in various regions of the world impacting refugee protection and access to asylum? What challenges do enhanced enforcement efforts impose? How have efforts to externalize borders and prevent access to asylum countries impacted genuine refugees? How can we address these problems?
Moderator: Michele Pistone, Non-Resident Fellow and Associate Editor, Journal on Migration and Human Security, Center for Migration Studies; Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES), Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law
Speakers will be announced shortly.

1:15–2:30 p.m.

Session II: Challenges in Responding to the Needs of Refugees, Displaced Persons and their Host Communities in Protracted Situations

A majority of refugees and internally displaced persons are in protracted situations—defined by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees as five years or longer. Many of them are in low and medium income countries that have few resources available to provide security, education, livelihood and entrepreneurship opportunities, healthcare and other services for host communities, let alone refugees and displaced persons. This panel will discuss opportunities and challenges in addressing protracted situations, particularly in the context of adoption of the Global Compact on Refugees in December 2019.

Moderator:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Susan Martin, Donald G. Herzberg Professor Emeritus in the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University

Speakers:
Sarah Deardorff Miller, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

Leah Zamore, Center on International Cooperation, New York University

2:45–4:00 p.m.
Session III: Access to Asylum on the US-Mexico Border

The Trump administration and DHS officers have pursued a series of strategies to restrict access to the US asylum system. Most of these strategies – interception, turn-backs, zero tolerance enforcement, the separation of children from parents, requiring asylum-seekers to await the US asylum process in Mexico and barring asylum to most migrants who arrive at the US-Mexico border – have been focused on the US southern border. Other measures, such as the expansion of expedited removal, began at the border but have now been expanded to cover the entire United States and persons in the country for two years or less. The panel will review, critique and discuss alternatives to these policies.
Moderator: Donald Kerwin, Executive Director, Center for Migration Studies

Speakers:
Josiah Heyman, Professor of Anthropology, Endowed Professor of Border Trade Issues, and Director of Center for Interamerican and Border Studies, University of Texas, El Paso

Carmen Maquilon, Director of Catholic Charities Immigration Services of the Diocese of Rockville Centre

4:00–5:00 p.m.
Closing Presentation:
Jaime Winders will moderate an open discussion of research and policy priorities.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-

migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

Overview: The southern border shared between Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. is an enormous economic gateway for the United States, but it requires control, safety and modernization to maintain it. Enforcing laws and securing the border is a top priority for the Department of Homeland Security. As time passes, the need for operator driven policies and solutions, modern devices, and fully integrated border becomes more crucial.

This year's Border Management South Summit will aim to connect local, federal and state officials to discuss the top challenges and priorities in the field. Interactive group discussions and panels will address procurement initiatives and aligning border solutions with development of operators.

Agenda:

Focus Day, Wednesday, December 4, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
USING THE INTEGRATION OF IT SYSTEMS TO ENHANCE RESPONSE AT THE BORDER

The U.S./Mexico border is in need of becoming a fully integrated border. This session will evaluate how communication between law enforcement officials and security personnel will be seamless and sufficient using integration strategies.

* Understanding how the integration of technological systems will enhance communication across the border
* Enhancing border mobility
* Managing information data flow across the border

10:30 a.m.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

OPTIMIZING THE USE OF SECURITY PERSONNEL USING SECURITY APPLICATIONS

This session will provide a break down of how the use of advanced analytics can transform and protect the border. Advanced analytics will be able to detect security breaches from objects, unauthorized people and more. Security personnel will be able to receive knowledge of potential threats and act accordingly and in a timely manner.

* Using AI and ML to not only stockpile data, but also manage it
* Utilizing analytical tools to enhance perimeter protection
* Enabling security personnel to recognize threats using intelligent video

12:30 p.m.
ANALYZING DATA TO PREDICT FUTURE EVENTS AND OUTCOMES

Data will only become sufficient and useful if it is then transformed into action. Join us as we learn about the transforming of paper data into visionary plans and help detect future events. Information management allows room for improvement to border services and protection of citizens.

* Managing current data and transforming it into visionary plans and action
* Collecting and exploiting data to drive border decision making Timothy Bennett, Science and Technology Directorate, Department of Homeland Security

Thursday, December 5, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
TEXAS IN REAL-TIME: RESPONDING AT THE BORDER

* Gain insight on how front line law enforcement officials are tackling border issues in real-time
Sheriff Waybourn, Tarrant County Sheriff Joe Frank Martinez, Del Val Verde County

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

9:45 a.m.

ANALYZING THE U.S. BORDER AS A SYSTEM: THE MEMBRANE, THE SURVEILLANCE AND THE HUMAN ELEMENT

In order to effectively secure the U.S. / Mexico border, it should be thought of as a system divided into three parts. A representative of the DHS will outline ways of uniting the organizational structure and breaking down each border element into compartments that work together to provide one outcome - effective border security.

* Evaluating the border as a whole system and not in parts
* Identifying the humanity aspect when working at the border

11:00 a.m.

ADVANCING ALL SITUATIONAL AND DOMAIN AWARENESS TO SUPPORT BORDER MISSIONS

Supporting border missions through situational and all domain awareness allows room to address challenges and provides understanding on how to respond in a threatening environment. Custom Border Patrol representatives will share how to appropriately notice changes across the border and respond rapidly.

* Building and sustaining situational awareness in a threat environment
* Using all domain awareness to predict future actions and threats
* Being aware of air, land and maritime border challenges and opportunities

Jennifer Barreras-Rawls, Operations Section Chief of Joint Task Force West, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

11:45 a.m.

ENSURING INTELLIGENCE DRIVEN OPERATIONS IN A THREAT ENVIRONMENT

It is important to use intelligence for improvement of the border system as a whole. Understanding how to share intelligence between partners and how to utilize the data given is a key component in securing the border.

* Understanding a threat environment using information and data
* Sharing Intelligence between Law Enforcement Enterprise Partners

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brad Skinner, Deputy Director Office of Field Operations Laredo Field Office, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

* Advancing the border using intelligence and innovative technology
* Enhancing operation objectives to increase border protection productivity
* Bringing the human element back into border management

1:30 p.m.

USING A SCIENTIFIC APPROACH TO ADDRESS BORDER CHALLENGES

Scientific breakthroughs and advancements have caused a huge gateway for the use of CIP and enhancing threat management. Here you will understand how intelligence pictures and process help conquer nearby threats.

* Using common intelligence pictures to showcase threat capabilities
* Establishing the ability to detect threats beyond the border
* Deploying a systematic process for analyzing and distributing data

2:15 p.m.

ENHANCING PARTNERSHIPS AND ENFORCEMENT COOPERATION

Establishing partnerships will assist the border in creating meaningful relationships and thus, actively creating new ways to guard the U.S. / Mexico Border. Utilizing department-wide cooperation and international input will help overcome border threats.

* Establishing a unity of effort approach to effectively guard the U.S/Mexico Border
* Building international partnerships to effectively detect threats
* Enhancing supply chain security to conduct thorough examinations at the border

Ismael Navarez Jr., Special Agent in Charge, IRS

3:00 p.m.

ADVANCING THE BORDER WITH THE MODEL PORTS PROGRAM

The Model Ports Program was designed to improve overall experience and operations at the port of entry. This session will showcase the reasoning and effectiveness behind the Model Ports Program.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Improving wait time monitoring and processing
* Conducting meetings with senior level industry leaders for establish goals and monitoring techniques
* Using Public-Private Partnerships to enhance operation at the ports of entry

Friday, December 6, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
PROCUREMENT: FUTURE INITIATIVES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

A DHS representative will disclose the 2020 Vision for the Department of Homeland Security. Attendees will understand where important investments are being made and how future policy will evolve border management.

* The 2020 outlook for the U.S./Mexico Border
* How policy changes will provide solutions to current border challenges
* Understanding future border investments
Rose Marie Davis, Director innovation Program Acquisitions, DHS

9:45 a.m.
IMMIGRATION OF FAMILIES ACROSS THE BORDER

The border is currently filled with multiple families including children seeking to come to the U.S. Due to the increase of migrants, facilities constantly become over crowded. Gain insights on how to ensure maintenance of facilities and navigate current and future border policies to secure the border.

* Maintaining protocol and policies when dealing with families at border
* Creating a safe and ethical environment at the U.S. /Mexico border
Robert Gross, DHS Attaché, Department of Homeland Security

11:00 a.m.
PROMOTING INNOVATION AND INTEGRITY AMONGST PERSONNEL

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Training personnel on how to react in force situations and maintaining DHS ethical standards is important. Join us as we evaluate new initiatives taking place to reconstruct and advance CBP's organizational structure.

* Reconstructing the border's organizational structure
* Ensuring ethical conduct and integrity along the border
* Advancing training initiatives in assisting use of force situations

11:45 a.m.

PREVENTING COUNTERTERRORISM AND TRANSNATIONAL CRIME AT THE BORDER

Joining forces across law enforcement allows one to maximize its resources and enhance operational integration. Leaders of the Department of Homeland Security will share how the interaction of global partners will assist with reducing crime and potential threats.

* Joining forces with local, state, and federal law enforcement to increase resources
* Using integrated operations to detect weapons and disrupt illegal crossings
* Expanding mobility to quicken response to threats John Jones, Divisional Director Intelligence and Counterterrorism, Texas Department of Public Safety

1:30 p.m.

ADVANCING BORDER TRADING IN ORDER TO PROTECT THE U.S.

Implementing strategies and trade intelligence will protect against unlawful items from entering. This session will break down the use of trade intelligence in real time and how it will shape enforcement efforts.

* Collaborating with advanced technology and enforcement to intercept high-risk shipment
* Responding to border risk in real-time using trade intelligence
* Integration of law enforcement to help protect the border from illegal trade

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (October 3, 2019) - Video and transcript are now available from the Center for Immigration Studies' recent Immigration Newsmaker conversation with USCIS Acting Director Ken Cuccinelli at the National Press Club. Cuccinelli, who leads the agency's 19,000 employees and contractors, stressed the Trump administration's "hard-charging approach" to immigration.

View the stream of the full event here.
View the transcript here.

Highlights:

Asylum
The percentage of asylum seekers who pass credible fear interviews use to be almost a hundred percent. It has come down to 80%, which is still very high. But "when these cases are heard on the merits, it's about 10, 12, 15 percent" of the 80 percent…"and so you have this massive amount that is just clogging the pipeline that's never going to get approved and is swamping the system. And look, let's face it. The strategy on the part of the people coming illegally is a collective strategy. It is to swamp the border and to swamp the Border Patrol, and ICE, and our resources at the border."

Detention
If you don't make a claim of credible fear you will be returned; if you do make a claim you will be detained. " – which is, by the way, what the law says. The only thing the law speaks of is detaining people through the course of their hearing. It doesn't say anywhere that you can or should let people go – nowhere in American law. That just became a habit, and as much as Congress – some congressional reps were coming down to the border during the height of the crisis and complaining about overcrowding – and there was overcrowding – but whose responsibility is that? The Border Patrol works with what they have. Well, who gives them what they have? Congress."

Fraud
Fraud Detection and National Security (FDNS) is tasked with dealing with fraud at USCIS. We have expanded their numbers and their capabilities. "They aren't the only ones…every officer is expected to play a role in vetting this…We are also shifting over to electronic filing which will give us the ability to do data analysis that we just can't do now with a(n) overwhelmingly paper system…it will dramatically expand our capacity to detect suspected fraud…I am also working on positioning USCIS to be the source of many, many more prosecutions for fraud."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Temporary Agricultural Workers

"In the H-2A…there are transportation cost requirements and there are housing requirements for bringing in foreign workers. That almost – that automatically builds in costs added to the use of foreign workers versus U.S. workers. I like that. I like that. I want it to cost more to use non-American workers because if you are willing to pay that amount, that's actually the truest test, to me, that in fact that particular market we really do need temporary foreign workers. Otherwise, why wouldn't you just pay less and get someone who can stay here year-round?"

A Fee-funded Agency

"Unlike the rest of government, we [USCIS] are fee funded. We operate much as a business does. With the exception of 4 percent of our budget, we run a balanced budget…One of the good things Congress did a long time ago is say the immigrants have to fund our immigration system [Immigration and Nationality Act, Sections 286(m) and (n)]. That was a great policy decision, and we have stuck to that."

"It's public that we're reviewing our fee structure, and particularly with the humanitarian burden we are bearing in our agency for which we are not compensated…no one is charged for like all the humanitarian work that we do – again, so that the immigrant community that is seeking to come to this country or seeking to change status in this country is carrying the costs of this whole system.That does mean that, as burdens go up, we've got to raise prices."

H-1B Workers Replacing U.S. Workers

"We start all these discussions with the assumption of the law not changing, which is a sad place to start a discussion. I mean, the right way to decide policy is for Congress and the president to decide policy. That's the way the government was set up. What we – in the alternative, we talk about what amount to workarounds to that. Of course, they have to be within the boundaries of the law, but I really wish – and I'm hopeful – that we'll see some cleanup work done here because it is very messy, and it is concerning."

"You know, I have a high regard – as does the president – for protecting U.S.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

workers, and the H-1B program has been controversial in this regard, and not just because of Disney and those sorts of situations, but the potential to not have the same financial obligations for H-1B employees that a company might have for a U.S. citizen employee doing the same work. And, you know, that's the reverse of how it should be."

Canada's population estimates: Age and sex, July 1, 2019
Statistics Canada, September 30, 2019
https://www150.statcan.gc.ca/n1/daily-quotidien/190930/dq190930a-eng.htm

Excerpt:
Canada posts the largest annual population increase in numbers

Canada's population was estimated at 37,589,262 on July 1, 2019, up 531,497 compared with July 1, 2018. Such an annual increase in the number of people living in the country is the highest ever observed. This growth also corresponds to adding just over one person every minute.
Permanent and temporary immigration accelerating growth

Canada's sustained population growth is driven mostly (82.2%) by the arrival of a large number of immigrants and non-permanent residents. The difference between births and deaths accounted for a small portion (17.8%) of the growth, a share that is decreasing year after year.

Canada admitted 313,580 immigrants in 2018/2019, one of the highest levels in

Canadian history. In 2015/2016, Canada received 323,192 permanent immigrants, including nearly 30,000 Syrian refugees.

The number of non-permanent residents rose by 171,536 in 2018/2019, the largest increase in the country's history. While also fuelled by rapid growth in asylum claimants, this gain was mainly led by an increase in the number of work and study permit holders. Temporary immigration assists Canada in meeting its labour market needs.

Excerpt:
Australia's population grew by 1.6 per cent during the year ending 31 March 2019, according to the latest figures released by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS).

ABS Demography Director Beidar Cho said: "The population at 31 March 2019 was 25.3 million people, following an annual increase of 388,800 people."

Natural increase accounted for 35.8 per cent of annual population growth, while net overseas migration accounted for the remaining 64.2 per cent.

There were 298,100 births and 159,100 deaths registered in Australia during the year ending 31 March 2019. Natural increase during this period was 139,100 people, down 2.2 per cent from the previous year.

There were 534,700 overseas migration arrivals and 285,100 departures during the year ending 31 March 2019, resulting in net overseas migration of 249,700 people. Net overseas migration was up 4.9 per cent compared to the previous

2018 Census population and dwelling counts
Statistics New Zealand, September 22, 2019
https://www.stats.govt.nz/information-releases/2018-census-population-and-dwelling-counts

Excerpt:
Results of the 2018 Census showed:

The 2018 Census usually resident population count was 4,699,755 – up 457,707 from the 2013 Census (4,242,048).

On average, the population grew by about 2.1 percent a year since the 2013 Census – significantly higher than the annual average growth between 2006 and 2013 (0.7 percent). The higher growth rate is consistent with higher net migration (259,000 in the five years ended 30 June 2018 compared with 59,000 in the seven years ended 30 June 2013).

The Supreme Court Goes to War
By Edwin Meese III and Charles Stimson

Excerpt:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Immigration and National Security

Another aspect of judicial involvement in national security involves the issue of immigration, and in particular the travel ban cases during the Trump Administration. The President's executive order included a finding that immigrant and nonimmigrant entry into the United States by aliens from seven countries "would be detrimental to the interests of the United States" and ordered suspension of entry for nationals from those countries for 90 days. It also directed the Secretary of State to suspend the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program for 120 days (with exceptions on a case-by-case basis) and suspended indefinitely the entry of Syrian refugees.

Traditionally, immigration policy is an area in which both the Supreme Court and inferior courts have held that the courts must defer to the political judgment of the President and Congress. Courts have distinguished between two groups of aliens: those who are present within our borders and those seeking admission.

After proceedings in the courts, and despite a revised executive order, the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals essentially struck down President Trump's travel ban. However, as 9th Circuit Court Judge Jay Bybee made clear in a dissent from the denial of reconsideration en banc, which was joined by four other judges, the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 delegated authority to the President to suspend entry of "any class of aliens" as he deems appropriate. It reads in part:

> Whenever the President finds that the entry of any class of aliens into the United States would be detrimental to the interests of the United States, he may by proclamation, and for such period as he shall deem necessary, suspend the entry of all aliens or any class of aliens as immigrants or nonimmigrants, or impose on the entry any restrictions he may deem appropriate.

Bybee made clear that the "appropriate test for judging executive and congressional action affecting aliens who are outside our borders and seeking admission is set forth in Kleindienst v. Mandel." In Mandel, the government denied a visa to a Marxist journalist who had been invited to address conferences at some universities in the United States. The Supreme Court found that Mandel was "an unadmitted and nonresident alien, [who] had no constitutional right of entry," and declined to revisit the principle that the political branches may decide whom to admit and whom to exclude. Despite the logical relevance of this case law, the ruling of the panel of the 9th Circuit gave short shrift to Mandel because it "involved only a decision by a consular officer, not the President."

After pointing out the absurdity of giving deference to a consular officer yet none to the President, the dissenters also pointed out how the panel ignored the Supreme Court's decisions in Fiallo v Bell and Kerry v Din and even prior 9th Circuit precedent. Bybee concluded: "It is our duty to say what the law is; and the meta-source of our law, the U.S. Constitution, commits the power to make foreign policy, including the decisions to permit or forbid entry into the United States, to the President and Congress."

Re-thinking the Political Economy of Immigration Control: A Comparative Analysis

By Lea Sitkin

Routledge, 244 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1138121576, $131.67

http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1138121576/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1184 KB, ASIN: B07H4XSBJK, $49.95

Book Description: This book offers a systematic exploration of the changing politics around immigration and the impact of resultant policy regimes on immigrant communities. It does so across a uniquely wide range of policy areas: immigration admissions, citizenship, internal immigration controls, labour market regulation, the welfare state and the criminal justice system. Challenging the current state of theoretical literature on the 'criminalisation' or 'marginalisation' of immigrants, this book examines the ways in which immigrants are treated differently in different national contexts, as well as the institutional factors driving this variation. To this end, it offers data on overall trends across 20 high-income countries, as well as more detailed case studies on the UK, Australia, the USA, Germany, Italy and Sweden. At the same time, it charts an emerging common regime of exploitation, which threatens the depiction of some countries as more inclusionary than others.

The politicisation of immigration has intensified the challenge for policy-makers, who today must respond to populist calls for restrictive immigration policy whilst simultaneously heeding business groups' calls for cheap labour and respecting legal obligations that require more liberal and welcoming policy regimes. The resultant policy regimes often have counterproductive effects, in many cases marginalising immigrant communities and contributing to the growth of underground and criminal economies. Finally, developments on the horizon, driven by technological progress, threaten to intensify distributional challenges. While these will make the politics around immigration even more fraught in coming decades, the real issue is not immigration but the loss of good jobs, which will have serious implications across all Western countries.

This book will appeal to scholars and students of criminology, social policy, political economy, political sociology, the sociology of immigration and race, and migration studies.

Migration
By Robin Cohen

Hardcover, ISBN: 0233005978, $21.21
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0233005978/centerforimmigra

Book Description: While recognizing that distinctions between categories are often fuzzy, Migration covers many types of migrants including explorers, slaves, pilgrims, mineworkers, labourers, exiles, refugees, sex workers, students, tourists, retirees and expatriates. Cohen covers a long span of history and many regions and themes, giving context and colour to one of the most pressing issues of our time. The text is supplemented by a series of vivid maps, evocative photographs and powerful graphics. Migration is present at the dawn of human history - the phenomena of hunting and gathering, seeking seasonal pasture and nomadism being as old as human social organization itself. The flight from natural disasters, adverse climatic changes, famine, and territorial aggression by other communities or other species were also common occurrences. But if migration is as old as the hills, why is it now so politically sensitive? Why do migrants leave? Where do they go, in what numbers and for what reasons? Do migrants represent a threat to the social and political order? Are they none-the-less necessary to provide labour, develop their home countries, increase consumer demand and generate wealth? Can migration be stopped? All these questions are probed in an authoritative text by one of Britain's leading migration scholars.

The Guarded Gate: Bigotry, Eugenics, and the Law That Kept Two Generations of Jews, Italians, and Other European Immigrants Out of America

By Daniel Okrent

Scribner, 496 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1476798036, $22.30
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1476798036/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 53142 KB, ASIN: B07MKDJP4Z, 497 pp., $14.99

Book Description: A forgotten, dark chapter of American history with implications for the current day, The Guarded Gate tells the story of the scientists who argued that certain nationalities were inherently inferior, providing the intellectual justification for the harshest immigration law in American history. Brandished by the upper class Bostonians and New Yorkers —many of them progressives—who led the anti-immigration movement, the eugenic arguments helped keep hundreds of thousands of Jews, Italians, and other unwanted groups out of the US for more than 40 years.

Over five years in the writing, The Guarded Gate tells the complete story from its beginning in 1895, when Henry Cabot Lodge and other Boston Brahmins launched their anti-immigrant campaign. In 1921, Vice President Calvin Coolidge declared that "biological laws" had proven the inferiority of southern and eastern Europeans; the restrictive law was enacted three years later. In his characteristic style, both lively and authoritative, Okrent brings to life the rich cast of characters from this time, including Lodge's closest friend, Theodore Roosevelt; Charles Darwin's first cousin, Francis Galton, the idiosyncratic polymath who gave life to eugenics; the fabulously wealthy and profoundly bigoted Madison Grant, founder of the Bronx Zoo, and his best friend, H. Fairfield Osborn, director of the American Museum of Natural History; Margaret Sanger, who saw eugenics as a sensible adjunct to her birth control campaign; and Maxwell Perkins, the celebrated editor of Hemingway and Fitzgerald. A work of history relevant for today, The Guarded Gate is an important, insightful tale that painstakingly connects the American eugenicists to the rise of Nazism, and shows how their beliefs found fertile soil in the minds of citizens and leaders both here and abroad.

Border Wars: Inside Trump's Assault on Immigration

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis and Michael D. Shear

Simon & Schuster, 480 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1982117397, $28.00

http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1982117397/centerforimmigra

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Paperback, ISBN: 1982135778, 320 pp., $18.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1982135778/centerforimmigra

Kindle, ASIN: B07P5GVZGK, $14.99

Book Description: As his campaign rhetoric in the 2018 midterms demonstrated, no issue matters more to Donald Trump than immigration. And no issue—with the possible exception of his opposition to Robert Mueller's investigation of his 2016 campaign—better defines his administration.

Julie Hirschfeld Davis and Michael D. Shear have covered the Trump administration from its earliest days. In Border Wars, they take readers inside the White House to document how Trump and his allies blocked asylum-seekers and refugees, separated families, threatened deportation and sought to erode the longstanding bipartisan consensus that immigration and immigrants make positive contributions to America.

As the authors reveal, Trump has used immigration to stoke fears ("the caravan"), attack Democrats and the courts, and distract from negative news and political difficulties. Even as illegal immigration has fallen in recent years, Trump has elevated it in the imaginations of many Americans into a national crisis. Moreover, his comments about legal immigrants—Nigerians in their "huts," Haitians infected with AIDS, and people from "@#$%hole countries"—have been incendiary.

Border Wars identifies the players behind Trump's anti-immigration policies, showing how they planned, stumbled, and fought their way toward major immigration changes that have further polarized the nation. This definitive, behind-the-scenes account is filled with previously unreported stories that reveal how Trump's decision-making is driven by gut instinct and marked by disorganization, paranoia, and a constantly feuding staff.

The Windrush Betrayal: Exposing the Hostile Environment

By Amelia Gentleman

Guardian Faber Publishing, 384 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1783351845, $20.03

http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1783351845/centerforimmigra

Book Description: Paulette Wilson had always assumed she was British. She had spent most of her life in London working as a cook; she even worked in the House of Commons' canteen. How could someone who had lived in England since being a primary school pupil suddenly be classified as an illegal immigrant? It was only through Amelia Gentleman's tenacious investigative and campaigning journalism that it emerged that thousands were in Paulette's position. What united them was that they had all arrived in the UK from the Commonwealth as children in the 1950s and 1960s. In The Windrush Betrayal, Gentleman tells the story of the scandal and exposes deeply disturbing truths about modern Britain.

EVENT: Healthcare for Illegal Immigrants: What would it cost?

Affordable Care Act subsidies for illegal immigrants could cost

$10-23 billion a year

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (October 7, 2019) – The Center for Immigration Studies will release two reports as part of Thursday's panel discussion on the cost of granting healthcare benefits to illegal immigrants, a policy advocated by all ten Democratic candidates who participated in the June 27 debate. The first report details the participation rate and cost of Medicaid usage by immigrants under existing policy, which offers noncitizens less access to the program compared to citizens. The second report estimates the cost of providing illegal immigrants full access to public health benefits. At the panel discussion, commentary will be provided by Christopher Pope, a senior fellow at the Manhattan Institute.

Steven Camarota, the Center's director of research, said, "Any serious debate on providing healthcare coverage to those in the country illegally requires a cost estimate. Depending on the type of coverage and the take-up rate, the cost could be as high as $22.6 billion a year – a reminder that tolerating illegal immigration creates a significant burden for taxpayers."

The event will be streamed on Facebook Live.

When: Thursday, October 10, 2019, at 9:30 a.m.

Where: National Press Club, Murrow Room, 529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor, Washington, D.C.

WHO:

STEVEN CAMAROTA

Steven Camarota Ph.D. is the director of research at the Center for Immigration Studies. As the lead researcher on a contract with the Census Bureau, Camarota examined the quality of immigrant data in the American Community Survey. He will present his new report, "How Much Would It Cost to Provide Health Insurance to Illegal Immigrants?"

JASON RICHWINE

Jason Richwine Ph.D. is an independent public policy analyst based in Washington, D.C., and a contributing writer at National Review. He will present his new report, "The Cost of Immigrant Medicaid Coverage Under Current Policy."

CHRISTOPHER POPE

Christopher Pope, Ph.D. is a senior fellow at the Manhattan Institute. Previously he served as director of policy research at a nonprofit medical research organization, a health-policy fellow at the U.S. House Committee on Energy and Commerce, and a research manager at the American Enterprise Institute.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

What's Happening at the Center

Ken Cuccinelli, Acting Director of U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, was featured in an Immigration Newsmaker conversation recently hosted by the Center for Immigration Studies. Since taking the position, Cuccinelli has moved quickly to ensure compliance with immigration laws on the books and to provide guidance to clarify current regulations and policies to asylum officers and others. He made headlines recently announcing new "public charge" regulations, clarifying the law for prospective immigrants on qualifying for lawful permanent residence (green cards).

The conversation, which can be seen here, was moderated by Mark Krikorian and covered topics such as public charge, work permits, processing of asylum claims, backlogs, fees, fraud, and E-Verify.

I find this interesting in light of the bilateral agreement recently inked between the United States and El Salvador, which provides for that country's help in acting as a safe third country/staging area to host amnesty applicants from Central America's Northern Triangle.

Certificate in International Migration Studies

XCPD-700 - Global Trends in International Migration

Course Details: Worldwide international migration is a large and growing phenomenon, with more than 230 million people now living outside of their home countries for extended periods. Understanding the complex dynamics behind international migration is essential to improved policies and programs to address the multiple causes and consequences of these movements of people. This course provides an overview of international migration numbers and trends, causes of population movements, the impact of international migration on source and receiving countries, and policy responses to population movements.

The course provides an introduction to the major theories underpinning the study of international migration, including the new economics of labor migration, dual labor market theory, world systems theory, cumulative causation, and migration networks theory. The course focuses attention on domestic and international legal regimes regarding migration, examining laws, major legal cases and regulatory frameworks. It also examines issues pertaining to the integration of immigrants in destination countries. The connections between migration and such other issues as security, development and environmental change are discussed.

Objectives:

At the completion of the course, successful students will be able to:

* Assess the positive and negative impacts of international migration on source, transit, and destination countries;
* Describe the international legal frameworks that set out the rights of migrants and the responsibilities of states;
* Discuss and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of the principal policy frameworks governing the admission of migrants, control of irregular migration, and protection of refugees and other forced migrants;
* Explain the importance of gender in understanding the causes and consequences of international migration; and

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Describe models for integration of immigrants in destination countries and articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches.

Expanded refugee protection for some: Understanding the application patterns of the Cartagena refugee definition in Mexico

TBA, Wednesday, October 9, 2019
Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
University of California, San Diego
Eleanor Roosevelt College Provost's Building, Conference Room 115
9500 Gilman Drive
La Jolla, CA 92093
https://ccis.ucsd.edu/_files/Event%20Flyers-Programs-Agendas/Event-Flyer---Freier-10-9-19.pdf

Speaker:
Feline Freier, Assistant Professor of Political Sciences at the Universidad del Pacífico (Lima, Peru).

Description: Since the entry into force of Mexico's new Law on Refugees, Complementary Protection and Political Asylum in 2011, it has been praised as an exceptionally progressive norm. A core aspect of the new law is the inclusion of the expanded refugee definition derived from the Cartagena Declaration. At the same time, implementation gaps tend to persist between Mexico's laws and policy practice. This paper seeks to analyze in practice, how far Mexico has applied the Cartagena definition to allegeable asylum seekers. In order to fulfill this objective, we implemented a monitoring mechanism of the asylum system in Mexico through which we can identify patterns in the RSD administrative and legal reasoning such as the lack of application of the Cartagena definition to Central Americans, on the one hand, and the 99% refugee recognition rate under Cartagena of Venezuelan asylum seekers, on the other. Twenty in-depth elite interviews with authorities of different levels of government and NGO representatives shed light on the determinants of this differentiated application, which in practice, results in the regional refugee definition only benefiting a select group of people.

Healthcare for Illegal Immigrants: What would it cost?

Affordable Care Act subsidies for illegal immigrants could cost $10-23 billion a year.

9:30 a.m., Thursday, October 10, 2019
National Press Club, Murrow Room
529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor
Washington, D.C. 20045
https://www.press.org/events/healthcare-illegal-immigrants-what-would-it-cost

The Center for Immigration Studies will release two reports as part of Thursday's panel discussion on the cost of granting healthcare benefits to illegal immigrants, a policy advocated by all ten Democratic candidates who participated in the June 27 debate. The first report details the participation rate and cost of Medicaid usage by immigrants under existing policy, which offers noncitizens less access to the program compared to citizens. The second report estimates the cost of providing illegal immigrants full access to public health benefits. At the panel discussion, commentary will be provided by Christopher Pope, a senior fellow at the Manhattan Institute.

Steven Camarota, the Center's director of research, said, "Any serious debate on providing healthcare coverage to those in the country illegally requires a cost estimate. Depending on the type of coverage and the take-up rate, the cost could be as high as $22.6 billion a year – a reminder that tolerating illegal immigration creates a significant burden for taxpayers."

Speakers:

Steven Camarota, Director of research at the Center for Immigration Studies. As the lead researcher on a contract with the Census Bureau, Camarota examined the quality of immigrant data in the American Community Survey. He will present his new report, "How Much Would It Cost to Provide Health Insurance to Illegal Immigrants?"

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Jason Richwine, Independent public policy analys and a contributing writer at National Review. He will present his new report, "The Cost of Immigrant Medicaid Coverage Under Current Policy."

Christopher Pope, Ph.D., Senior fellow at the Manhattan Institute. Previously he served as director of policy research at a nonprofit medical research organization, a health-policy fellow at the U.S. House Committee on Energy and Commerce, and a research manager at the American Enterprise Institute.

Diaspora and Homeland

Thursday-Friday, October 10-11, 2019
Zagreb, Croatia
https://croatiandiasporacentre.com/english/

Description: In today's globalized world we are witness to the fact that, as never before in history, diasporas have a major role in the political, ecoonomic, cultural, religious, social and sporting life of their countries of origin. The fact that over 258 million people live outside of their country of birth and that they send more than 625 billion dollars in remittances to their country of origion perhaps best illustrates the huge potential of diasporas for their home countries. While the major focus of diasporas and homeland is on their remittances, there are many examples of how diasporas can and do through their various activities contribute to the advancement and success of their homelands both internally and in foreign affairs.

One such example which illustrates the success of a diaspora in creating economic success in the homeland is that of Chilean immigrants who returned to their homeland at the call of then Chilean leader Pinochet. These returning immigrants brought their know-how and experience to practically empower in a short period of time the economic upturn of the Chilean economy.The recent world cup of football in Russia is another example of diaspora contributions to homeland. Many football teams had diaspora players as part of their starting lineups. The best example of this was the Croatian national team which played in the finals of the world cup and which had two thirds of its players born outside of Croatia. These examples not only manifest on the one hand the strength and power of diasporas, but on the other hand also evidence of its huge potential and role in the developmental strategy of their countries of origin. Following the disintegration of the former Soviet Union, millions of citizens of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia and other countries of the former Yugoslavia moved to the more developed countries of the democratic world, especially Europe. Faced with this new process of emigration, these countries were overnight faced with the task of developing national strategies and programs of cooperation between diaspora communities and their homelands.

In light of this new situation and the relations between diaspora and homeland, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in 2015 accepted Resolution 2043 titled “Democratic participation for migrant diasporas”. Among other things this resolution recommended that its members introduce policies which would facilitate diaspora members’ involvement in political life, review national legislation with a view to granting special status to members of diasporas in their countries of origin and facilitating the return process where appropriate, and promote diaspora members’ contribution to the development of their country of origin through the transfer of their knowledge, education and experience. The main focus of the conference is to examine the strategies and programs of individual countries towards their diasporas and in turn the relationships of diaspora with their home countries.

Conference themes include:

1. Diaspora relations – government

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2. State policy and practice relating to the diaspora
3. The return of emigrants and their integration into the country of origin – success or failure
4. Direct diaspora investments
5. The influence of the diaspora on the country of origin
6. Immigrant tourism
7. Diaspora in international relations
8. Diaspora as a safety factor
9. Diaspora – media, radio programs, newspapers and publications
10. Emigrant literature

The conference organisers would like to emphasise that presenters have the opportunity to present on a different theme that is related to the general purpose.

Rethinking EU migration and asylum policies: Managing immigration jointly with countries of origin and transit

9:00 a.m.-3:30 p.m., Wednesday, October 16, 2019
1 Place du Congrès 1000
CEPS, Bruxelles, Belgium
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/rethinking-eu-migration-and-asylum-policies-managing-immigration-jointly-with-countries-of-origin-and-transit-16-october-2019-brussels/

Description: Asylum and migration policy continues to be high up on the EU policy agenda and will remain an important topic for the next European Commission. Though current positions in the European Council regarding how to make progress on the Common European Asylum System seem deadlocked, there is considerable scope for dialogue and debate on the future of EU asylum policy as well as the wider issue of improving overall management of migration.

This 'Mercator Dialogue on Asylum and Migration' (MEDAM) conference is launching the annual assessment report on asylum and migration policy. This year's report is titled "Rethinking EU migration and asylum policies: Managing immigration jointly with countries of origin and transit". State Secretary for Migration María del Consuelo Rumí Ibáñez (Spain), Ambassador H.E. Ms. Teneng Mba Jaiteh (Gambia) and MEP Delara Burkhardt are among the confirmed speakers.

Anyone working on international migration, development and cooperation is encouraged to join the panellists at this debate and to contribute to the discussion during the three Q&A sessions, and coffee and lunch breaks.

For more information and to register to the conference, consult the event page.

The MPC is one of three partner institutions of the 'Mercator Dialogue on Asylum and Migration' (MEDAM), funded by the Mercator Foundation and led by the Kiel Institute for the World Economy.

Description: On October 17, 2019, the Center for Migration Studies will hold its annual academic and policy symposium at the law offices of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP. The event will open with a keynote address by T. Alexander Aleinikoff, Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility, about new directions for forced migration policy studies. The keynote will be followed by panels about enforcement, responding to the needs of refugees, and access to the US asylum system. In the closing session, panelists and attendees will engage in an open discussion about research and policy

Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility
The New School

10:45 a.m.–12:00 p.m.
Session I: Enforcement Efforts and their Adverse Impact on Protection: A Discussion about North America, Europe, and the Global South

Over the last few years, we have seen increased efforts to build barriers and systems that prevent refugees and asylum seekers from reaching safety and applying for asylum protection. How are enforcement efforts in various regions of the world impacting refugee protection and access to asylum? What challenges do enhanced enforcement efforts impose? How have efforts to externalize borders and prevent access to asylum countries impacted genuine refugees? How can we address these problems?
Moderator: Michele Pistone, Non-Resident Fellow and Associate Editor, Journal on Migration and Human Security, Center for Migration Studies; Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES), Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law
Speakers will be announced shortly.

1:15–2:30 p.m.
Session II: Challenges in Responding to the Needs of Refugees,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Displaced Persons and their Host Communities in Protracted Situations

A majority of refugees and internally displaced persons are in protracted situations—defined by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees as five years or longer. Many of them are in low and medium income countries that have few resources available to provide security, education, livelihood and entrepreneurship opportunities, healthcare and other services for host communities, let alone refugees and displaced persons. This panel will discuss opportunities and challenges in addressing protracted situations, particularly in the context of adoption of the Global Compact on Refugees in December 2019.

Moderator:
Susan Martin, Donald G. Herzberg Professor Emeritus in the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University

Speakers:
Sarah Deardorff Miller, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

Leah Zamore, Center on International Cooperation, New York University

2:45–4:00 p.m.
Session III: Access to Asylum on the US-Mexico Border

The Trump administration and DHS officers have pursued a series of strategies to restrict access to the US asylum system. Most of these strategies – interception, turn-backs, zero tolerance enforcement, the separation of children from parents, requiring asylum-seekers to await the US asylum process in Mexico and barring asylum to most migrants who arrive at the US-Mexico border – have been focused on the US southern border. Other measures, such as the expansion of expedited removal, began at the border but have now been expanded to cover the entire United States and persons in the country for two years or less. The panel will review, critique and discuss alternatives to these policies.
Moderator: Donald Kerwin, Executive Director, Center for Migration Studies

Speakers:
Josiah Heyman, Professor of Anthropology, Endowed Professor of Border Trade Issues, and Director of Center for Interamerican and Border Studies, University

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

Cato Institute, F.A. Hayek Auditorium
1000 Massachusetts Ave, NW
Washington, DC 20001-5403
https://www.cato.org/events/open-borders-science-ethics-immigration

Speakers:
Bryan Caplan, Author and Professor of Economics, George Mason University

Zach Weinersmith, Illustrator, Saturday Morning Breakfast Cereal comic strip; New York Times bestselling author

Commentator:
Tim Kane, JP Conte Fellow in Immigration Studies at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University

Moderator:
Alex Nowrasteh, Director of Immigration Policy Studies, Center for Global Liberty and Prosperity, Cato Institute

Description: In their new graphic nonfiction book Open Borders: The Science and Ethics of Immigration, authors Bryan Caplan and Zach Weinersmith turn the heated public debate over immigration on its head by proposing a radical and controversial solution: open borders. Caplan argues that opening all borders would practically eliminate absolute poverty worldwide and usher in a booming worldwide economy?greatly benefiting all of humanity, including Americans. With a clear and conversational tone, exhaustive research, and vibrant illustrations by Zach Weinersmith of Saturday Morning Breakfast Cereal fame, Open Borders makes the case for unrestricted immigration in a new format sure to spark lively debate. Caplan and Weinersmith will be joined by Tim Kane, the JP Conte Fellow in Immigration Studies at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University, who is a supporter of liberal immigration laws but a critic of open borders. Please join us for a timely and lively discussion.

Border Management South

Wednesday-Friday, December 4-6, 2019
Hilton Garden Inn San Antonio
8101 Pat Booker Rd.
Live Oak, Texas, 78233, USA
https://plsadaptive.s3.amazonaws.com/eco/files/event_content/border-management-south-2019.pdf

Overview: The southern border shared between Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. is an enormous economic gateway for the United States, but it requires control, safety and modernization to maintain it. Enforcing laws and securing the border is a top priority for the Department of Homeland Security. As time passes, the need for operator driven policies and solutions, modern devices, and fully integrated border becomes more crucial.

This year's Border Management South Summit will aim to connect local, federal and state officials to discuss the top challenges and priorities in the field. Interactive group discussions and panels will address procurement initiatives and aligning border solutions with development of operators.

Agenda:

Focus Day, Wednesday, December 4, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
USING THE INTEGRATION OF IT SYSTEMS TO ENHANCE RESPONSE AT THE BORDER

The U.S./Mexico border is in need of becoming a fully integrated border. This session will evaluate how communication between law enforcement officials and security personnel will be seamless and sufficient using integration strategies.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Understanding how the integration of technological systems will enhance communication across the border
* Enhancing border mobility
* Managing information data flow across the border

10:30 a.m.

OPTIMIZING THE USE OF SECURITY PERSONNEL USING SECURITY APPLICATIONS

This session will provide a break down of how the use of advanced analytics can transform and protect the border. Advanced analytics will be able to detect security breaches from objects, unauthorized people and more. Security personnel will be able to receive knowledge of potential threats and act accordingly and in a timely manner.

* Using AI and ML to not only stockpile data, but also manage it
* Utilizing analytical tools to enhance perimeter protection
* Enabling security personnel to recognize threats using intelligent video

12:30 p.m.

ANALYZING DATA TO PREDICT FUTURE EVENTS AND OUTCOMES

Data will only become sufficient and useful if it is then transformed into action. Join us as we learn about the transforming of paper data into visionary plans and help detect future events. Information management allows room for improvement to border services and protection of citizens.

* Managing current data and transforming it into visionary plans and action
* Collecting and exploiting data to drive border decision making Timothy Bennett, Science and Technology Directorate, Department of Homeland Security

Thursday, December 5, 2019

8:50 a.m.

CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.

TEXAS IN REAL-TIME: RESPONDING AT THE BORDER

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Gain insight on how front line law enforcement officials are tackling border issues in real-time
Sheriff Waybourn, Tarrant County Sheriff Joe Frank Martinez, Del Val Verde County

9:45 a.m.

ANALYZING THE U.S. BORDER AS A SYSTEM: THE MEMBRANE, THE SURVEILLANCE AND THE HUMAN ELEMENT

In order to effectively secure the U.S. / Mexico border, it should be thought of as a system divided into three parts. A representative of the DHS will outline ways of uniting the organizational structure and breaking down each border element into compartments that work together to provide one outcome - effective border security.

* Evaluating the border as a whole system and not in parts
* Identifying the humanity aspect when working at the border

11:00 a.m.

ADVANCING ALL SITUATIONAL AND DOMAIN AWARENESS TO SUPPORT BORDER MISSIONS

Supporting border missions through situational and all domain awareness allows room to address challenges and provides understanding on how to respond in a threatening environment. Custom Border Patrol representatives will share how to appropriately notice changes across the border and respond rapidly.

* Building and sustaining situational awareness in a threat environment
* Using all domain awareness to predict future actions and threats
* Being aware of air, land and maritime border challenges and opportunities
Jennifer Barreras-Rawls, Operations Section Chief of Joint Task Force West, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

11:45 a.m.

ENSURING INTELLIGENCE DRIVEN OPERATIONS IN A THREAT ENVIRONMENT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

It is important to use intelligence for improvement of the border system as a whole. Understanding how to share intelligence between partners and how to utilize the data given is a key component in securing the border.

* Understanding a threat environment using information and data
* Sharing Intelligence between Law Enforcement Enterprise Partners
Brad Skinner, Deputy Director Office of Field Operations Laredo Field Office, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

* Advancing the border using intelligence and innovative technology
* Enhancing operation objectives to increase border protection productivity
* Bringing the human element back into border management

1:30 p.m.
USING A SCIENTIFIC APPROACH TO ADDRESS BORDER CHALLENGES

Scientific breakthroughs and advancements have caused a huge gateway for the use of CIP and enhancing threat management. Here you will understand how intelligence pictures and process help conquer nearby threats.

* Using common intelligence pictures to showcase threat capabilities
* Establishing the ability to detect threats beyond the border
* Deploying a systematic process for analyzing and distributing data

2:15 p.m.
ENHANCING PARTNERSHIPS AND ENFORCEMENT COOPERATION

Establishing partnerships will assist the border in creating meaningful relationships and thus, actively creating new ways to guard the U.S. / Mexico Border. Utilizing department-wide cooperation and international input will help overcome border threats.

* Establishing a unity of effort approach to effectively guard the U.S/Mexico Border
* Building international partnerships to effectively detect threats
* Enhancing supply chain security to conduct thorough examinations at the border
Ismael Navarez Jr., Special Agent in Charge, IRS

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3:00 p.m.

ADVANCING THE BORDER WITH THE MODEL PORTS PROGRAM

The Model Ports Program was designed to improve overall experience and operations at the port of entry. This session will showcase the reasoning and effectiveness behind the Model Ports Program.

* Improving wait time monitoring and processing
* Conducting meetings with senior level industry leaders for establish goals and monitoring techniques
* Using Public-Private Partnerships to enhance operation at the ports of entry

Friday, December 6, 2019

8:50 a.m.

CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.

PROCUREMENT: FUTURE INITIATIVES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

A DHS representative will disclose the 2020 Vision for the Department of Homeland Security. Attendees will understand where important investments are being made and how future policy will evolve border management.

* The 2020 outlook for the U.S./Mexico Border
* How policy changes will provide solutions to current border challenges
* Understanding future border investments

Rose Marie Davis, Director innovation Program Acquisitions, DHS

9:45 a.m.

IMMIGRATION OF FAMILIES ACROSS THE BORDER

The border is currently filled with multiple families including children seeking to come to the U.S. Due to the increase of migrants, facilities constantly become over crowded. Gain insights on how to ensure maintenance of facilities and navigate current and future border policies to secure the border.

* Maintaining protocol and policies when dealing with families at border

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Creating a safe and ethical environment at the U.S. /Mexico border
Robert Gross, DHS Attaché, Department of Homeland Security

11:00 a.m.

PROMOTING INNOVATION AND INTEGRITY AMONGST PERSONNEL

Training personnel on how to react in force situations and maintaining DHS ethical standards is important. Join us as we evaluate new initiatives taking place to reconstruct and advance CBP's organizational structure.

* Reconstructing the border's organizational structure
* Ensuring ethical conduct and integrity along the border
* Advancing training initiatives in assisting use of force situations

Subject:	New Report- Enforcing Immigration Law: What State Can Do to Assist the Federal Government and Fight the Illegal Immigration Problem
Attachments:	States Role in Immigration Enforcement.pdf

Good Afternoon,

I thought you might be interested in this…

Today the Heritage Foundation released a report titled Enforcing Immigration Law: What States Can Do to Assist the Federal Government and Fight the Illegal Immigration Problem, by Hans von Spakovsky and Charles Stimson. The report lays out policies that states can implement, including:

- Require licensed businesses to use E-Verify
- Target businesses who knowingly hire illegal aliens
- Require state and local law enforcement to determine immigration status
- Prevent sanctuary policies in counties and cities
- Empower legal residents to sue officials who thwart immigration law enforcement
- Require law enforcement to participate in the 287(g) Program
- Publish crimes committed by aliens

While the federal government bears the chief responsibility for immigration enforcement, states must do more, and certainly not continue policies that inhibit the removal of illegal aliens.

Please feel free to contact me if you would like more information or to discuss the recommendations.

Enforcing Immigration Law: What States Can Do To Assist the Federal Government and Fight the Illegal Immigration Problem

Hans von Spakovsky and Charles Stimson

KEY TAKEAWAYS

Many state politicians are not aware of all that they can do at the state level to fight illegal immigration.

States can pass licensing and similar laws directed at those who employ, recruit, transport, or refer illegal aliens.

The assistance and support of the states is essential to comprehensive and effective enforcement of our immigration laws.

States play, and should continue to play, an important role in enforcing federal immigration law—but more can be done by the states. The problem is many state politicians are not aware of all that they can do at the state level to fight illegal immigration. This research paper should act as their guide in that effort. True, the federal government has the primary role in establishing immigration rules for the country, including the employment rules governing noncitizens. But the states do have a supporting role.

It is "well settled," says the U.S. Supreme Court, that it is the federal government, not state governments, that "has broad, undoubted power over the subject of immigration and the status of aliens."[1] But the "pervasiveness of federal regulation does not diminish the importance of immigration policy to the States," which bear the many "consequences of unlawful immigration."[2]

States can legislate and act in this space to a limited—but crucial—extent as long as their actions are not preempted by federal law. For example, states can pass licensing and similar laws directed at those who employ, recruit, or refer for a fee illegal aliens. There is no doubt, given the enormity of the problem and the limited resources of the federal government, that the assistance and support of the states is essential to comprehensive and effective enforcement of our immigration laws.

How Great Is the Problem?

The federal government, despite its vast financial resources and expansive workforce, simply does not have the manpower to enforce every federal immigration law. That is where the states come in, as they are force multipliers in confronting the problem—and no one can rationally deny that we have an illegal alien problem in this country. According to the U.S. government, there were 12 million illegal aliens residing in the U.S. in 2015.[3] Another study says the number in 2016 may have ranged from almost 17 million to as high as 22 million.[4]

Illegal aliens have a fiscal impact on local governments due to costs incurred for public education, health care, law enforcement,[5] and other government services.[6] States primarily fund those local essential government services, and, as a result, bear the burden of those costs. States, and the citizens who live there, feel the impact of illegal immigration much more than federal bureaucrats squirreled away in Washington, DC.

States and, in some instances, counties within states, can—and indeed should—play a crucial role in the enforcement of federal immigration law. For too long, opponents of commonsense, step-by-step immigration reform have repeated the myth that only the federal government can enforce immigration law or pass immigration laws. That is simply not true.

What States Can Do

What follows is a list of the major types of laws that states have passed to enforce immigration law at the state level, and a discussion about how they work, and why they make common sense.

Require Licensed Businesses to Use E-Verify. One of the major driving forces behind illegal immigration is our economy and the ability to earn money. That is where the term "economic migrants" stems from. Aliens from less prosperous areas of the world want to take advantage of our thriving economy and high standard of living. Aliens in the U.S. send over $54 billion per year back to their native countries. Mexico receives the most remittances, over $24 billion in 2015, making up 2 percent of the nation's economy and nearly 20 percent of income in the poorest parts of the country.[7]

But illegal aliens are not authorized to work for businesses in the United States. That is one of the major differences between being an illegal alien and a lawful permanent resident (LPR, or "green card" holder). The former are prohibited from working; the latter can be employed, just like American citizens. But as is obvious, many illegal aliens are working in the United States. Where else would the remittances come from?

States can pass laws that make it more difficult for illegal aliens to work, hold jobs, and earn salaries by considering requiring businesses, which are licensed by the state, to use E-Verify. A real-time, Web-based verification system run by the Department of Homeland Security and the Social Security Administration, E-Verify can determine with great accuracy the authenticity of the personal information and credentials offered by new hires. In most cases, verification occurs almost instantly.[8] E-Verify is used by the federal government and all federal contractors to verify if a potential employee has proper work authorization and can legally work in the United States.

In 2007, Arizona passed a law that requires employers to use the voluntary federal E-Verify system to "verify the employment eligibility of the employee."[9] E-Verify is not foolproof. No law and no government program is, nor does it completely prevent document or identity fraud. But it is very accurate and the "best means available to determine the employment eligibility of new hires" according to the Department of Homeland Security.[10] Requiring state-licensed businesses (selecting the size of the business it applies to is a legislative question) to use E-Verify or suffer financial consequences helps the federal government fight the problem of illegal aliens working in the United States.

Target Businesses Who Knowingly Hire Illegal Aliens. The other aspect of the Arizona law that was upheld by the Supreme Court, above and beyond the use of E-Verify, is the part that provides that the license of a business can be suspended or revoked by the state if an employer "knowingly" hires an illegal alien.[11] Willful ignorance of immigration status by businesses happens all too often.

Opponents of tough enforcement of current immigration laws, like the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, argued against the Arizona E-Verify law. So did the Obama Administration, which unsuccessfully filed a brief with the Supreme Court arguing that the Arizona law was preempted by federal law.[12]

But the Supreme Court, in a 5–3 decision, disagreed, and held that the licensing law, including requiring employers to use a citizenship verification

system that is voluntary under federal law, fell well within the confines of the authority Congress left to the states—and was not directly or impliedly preempted by federal law.[13] Of particular note, the Court found that federal immigration law "expressly reserves to the States the authority to impose sanctions on employers hiring unauthorized workers, through licensing and similar laws."[14]

Part of the key to the acceptability (and legality) of this provision of the Arizona statute was that the state was not making its own determination on the citizenship status of aliens. Arizona was using the federal government's definition of an "unauthorized alien," and the state was relying "solely on the Federal Government's own determination of who is an unauthorized alien" using the federal government's "own system for checking employee status."[15]

Since that 2011 Supreme Court decision, states have had a green light to pass similar laws in their states.[16] Seven states in addition to Arizona have made E-Verify mandatory for all or most employers: Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Utah. Other states, such as Texas and Oklahoma, use E-Verify only for public employees.[17]

Pass Vehicle Laws Aimed at Thwarting Day Labor. One obvious outward sign of aliens who are in the country illegally is the proliferation of day laborers. Eager to work, illegal aliens gather on busy intersections or streets in communities with lots of traffic in the hope that someone, often a contractor, will hire them for the day and pay them cash wages—with no questions asked—for that day's work. Hence the name "day laborer." Day laborers are a common sight in Arizona, California, Texas, and other states with large illegal immigrant populations.[18]

Illegal immigrants choose the day-labor route precisely because it avoids official work verification tools, such as E-Verify. Because they know that they do not have the legal authority to work, many would prefer not to engage in fraud by holding themselves out as lawfully able to work in the United States.

Residents in those states and neighborhoods where day laborers congregate know, or at the very least, must suspect that the young, working-age males on the side of the street, usually early in the morning, are not only illegal aliens, but are available for day labor. To engage a day laborer, an employer simply drives up to the individual or group, has a quick conversation about work, and the day laborer hops into the vehicle and is taken to the job site. This happens thousands of times each day across America, including in Arizona.

The Arizona legislature decided to do something about the day laborer phenomenon by passing three criminal laws aimed at this practice. None of those laws were preempted by federal law, and none has been struck down by the courts, so each is available for states to pass.

In general, the Arizona vehicle law makes it unlawful to hire or pick up passengers for work under certain circumstances:

1. Under the first provision (Section A), it is a state law crime for the occupant of a motor vehicle that is stopped on a street to attempt to hire or hire and pick up passengers for work at a different location if the motor vehicle blocks or impedes the normal movement of traffic.[19]

   Notice that the statute does not mention the word immigration at all, and applies to legal and illegal immigrants alike, as well as citizens. It also applies to the "occupant," which would include both the driver and non-driver occupants in the vehicle.

2. The second provision (Section B) is focused on the day laborer. It is unlawful for a person to enter a motor vehicle that is stopped on a street, roadway, or highway in order to be hired by an occupant of the motor vehicle and transported to a different location if the motor vehicle blocks or impedes the normal movement of traffic.[20]

   Again, the statute does not mention the word immigration, much less illegal immigrant or the like.

   Presumably, it could be a defense to each of these statutes to argue that the vehicle in question was not blocking or impeding the normal movement of traffic. And creative employers could pull up to red lights or stop signs before quickly hiring the laborer, thus avoiding the block or impede operative language of the statute.

3. The third provision (Section C) applies to illegal aliens. The statute reads: "It is unlawful for a person who is unlawfully present in the United States and who is an unauthorized alien to knowingly apply for work, solicit work in a public place or perform work as an employee or independent contractor in Arizona."[21]

Each of these provisions was part of the controversial and much larger Arizona statute called the Support Our Law Enforcement and Safe Neighborhoods Act, or as it came to be known, Arizona S.B. 1070 (S.B. because it was passed in Senate Bill 1070).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Obama Administration sued the State of Arizona, challenging many provisions of S.B. 1070, claiming that they were unconstitutional, and moved for an injunction to prevent Arizona from enforcing the statute.[22] Of particular note, the Obama Administration did not seek to enjoin the first two sections discussed above, sections (A) and (B). The district court refused to enjoin the entire act, and instead evaluated the constitutionality of individual provisions.[23] Since the Obama Administration did not seek to enjoin Sections (A) and (B) of Title 13–2928, they remain on the books today in Arizona.[24]

States concerned about day laborers can consider passing laws like Sections (A) and (B) above.

The district court did enjoin paragraph C, which prohibits illegal aliens from applying for work.[25] The Supreme Court upheld that injunction, concluding that the state provision was preempted by federal law because the "text, structure, and history" of federal immigration law showed that "Congress decided it would be inappropriate to impose criminal penalties on aliens who seek or engage in unauthorized employment."[26]

Require State and Local Law Enforcement to Determine Immigration Status. In 2012, the Supreme Court upheld another section of Arizona S.B. 1070, which required state and local law enforcement officials to make a "reasonable" attempt to determine the immigration status of any person they stop, detain, or arrest if "reasonable suspicion exists that the person is an alien and is unlawfully present in the United States."[27] Any person arrested "shall have the person's immigration status determined before the person is released." But officers may not consider "race, color or national origin...except to the extent permitted by the United States [and] Arizona Constitution[s]."[28]

Thus, state legislatures can require law enforcement officers to verify the citizenship status of anyone who is stopped, detained, or arrested on state and local matters. Moreover, "no formal agreement or special training needs to be in place for state officials to 'communicate with the [Federal Government] regarding the immigration status of any individual, including reporting knowledge that a particular alien is not lawfully present in the United States.'"[29]

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), which must respond to any such request for information from state officials, runs a Law Enforcement Support Center that operates "24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year" to provide "immigration status, identity information and real-time assistance to local, state and federal law enforcement agencies."[30]

Prevent Sanctuary Policies in Counties and Cities. When an illegal alien commits a crime in the United States and is caught, usually by local law enforcement, law enforcement officers typically attempt to ascertain who the person is (naturally) and, if he or she is in the country illegally, to notify the federal authorities. That is commonsense policing and is what has happened, for the most part, for a long time. It is no different than local authorities notifying law enforcement officials in the federal government, like the FBI, or in other state governments when they discover that there is an outstanding arrest warrant on an individual they have arrested issued by the federal government or another state.

Then President Trump was elected. He promised to secure our southern border and vigorously enforce existing immigration law. As a reaction to his election and this policy, a handful of states, politicians, and cities decided to resist Trump by refusing to cooperate with federal law enforcement in the arena of immigration law, and in some instances, to actively obstruct such enforcement.[31]

Jurisdictions that refuse to cooperate with ICE detainer requests to hold criminal aliens in their custody are known as "sanctuary" states or cities. These states, counties, and cities have enacted a variety of sanctuary-like policies in addition to simply refusing outright to cooperate with ICE. Sanctuary policies, largely an outgrowth of the "resist" movement, have serious consequences, endangering the public and threatening the safety of both local and federal law enforcement officers.

Variations of sanctuary policies include not providing adequate notice of criminal aliens who are already in custody, releasing criminal aliens back into communities without notice to the federal government, refusing to notify ICE of detained criminal aliens with final removal orders, and the like.[32]

All of these unwise policies release criminals back into local communities—where they can reoffend and commit more crimes against local residents. A report released by the Department of Homeland Security in June detailed the crimes committed by criminal illegal aliens, including assault, rape, and murder—after they were released by local authorities in Oregon and Washington who ignored ICE detainer warrants due to their sanctuary policies.[33] Sanctuary policies just create sanctuaries for criminals.

Picking up criminal aliens from local jails—where they obviously have no access to weapons—also lowers the threat to the safety of federal immigration officers, in contrast to having to find and detain them outside prison.

State legislatures can pass a law forbidding state officials from enacting sanctuary policies in their states. Furthermore, state officials who are concerned about local jurisdictions implementing so-called "sanctuary" policies that prevent local sheriffs, police officers, and other law enforcement officials from communicating with federal officials over the immigration status of aliens who have been arrested for committing local crimes, should be aware of a federal law that bans such a policy.

Federal law specifically provides that:

> [A] Federal, State, or local government entity or official may not prohibit, or in any way restrict, any government entity or official from sending to, or receiving from, the Immigration and Naturalization Service information regarding the citizenship or immigration status, lawful or unlawful, of any individual.[34]

Under the Arizona law upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court, if an illegal alien is convicted of a state or local crime, ICE must be notified by local officials when that alien is discharged from imprisonment or is assessed a "monetary obligation."[35]

Furthermore, the Arizona law provides a ban on state and local governments and agencies imposing any limits or restrictions on providing information on immigration status that will be used to determine eligibility for public benefits, services, or licenses; to verify claims of residence or domicile; or to check whether the alien is in compliance with federal immigration registration laws.[36]

Empower Legal Residents to Sue Officials Who Thwart Immigration Law Enforcement. Another provision of Arizona's law that was upheld is a prohibition on local officials implementing any policy that limits the enforcement of federal immigration laws.[37] This statute allows any legal resident of Arizona to bring an action in court against any official who adopts or implements such a policy—and provides for the recovery of attorneys' fees and costs if he or she prevails. A violation is also punishable by a civil penalty of up to $5,000 a day "for each day that the policy has remained in effect" after the lawsuit is filed.[38]

The State of Texas fought back against sanctuary policies as well. The purpose was to prevent political subdivisions within the state (counties, cities, and towns) from imposing sanctuary policies that limit cooperation and the exchange of information with federal authorities and obstruct enforcement of federal immigration laws. Naturally, the opponents of commonsense immigration enforcement and cooperation sued. But the law was also upheld in Texas.[39]

The Texas state legislature passed a law that required city and county officials to assist federal immigration agents, including honoring all detainer requests on illegal aliens in custody. The Texas law imposes a civil penalty on sanctuary cities of up to $25,500 for each day they intentionally violate the law. Texas law enforcement officials, such as local sheriffs, can be charged with a criminal misdemeanor for failing to honor detainer warrants, and the state attorney general can file a petition with a state court to remove them from office.[40]

Require Law Enforcement to Participate in the 287(g) Program. The vast majority of law enforcement officials across the country are state and local police officers, sheriffs, and the like. They come into contact with far more people across the country on a day-to-day basis than federal immigration officers. That is because of pure numbers; there are hundreds of state and local law enforcement officers for every federal immigration officer.[41] As a result, state and local officials are much more likely to come into contact with illegal aliens. As stated above, state and local law enforcement are force multipliers for the federal government and act cooperatively (for the most part) with their federal colleagues in law enforcement.

States can enhance enforcement of federal immigration law by requiring state and local law enforcement agencies to participate in the 287(g) program, a provision added to federal law in the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996.[42] The 287(g) program authorizes ICE to "enter into agreements with state and local law enforcement agencies, which permit designated officers to perform limited immigration law enforcement functions." ICE provides training to local officials, and they "function under the supervision of ICE officers."[43]

As of July 2019, ICE has 287(g) agreements with 79 law enforcement agencies in 21 states.[44] One report from 2012 indicated that in a six-year period, the 287(g) program resulted in the removal of 120,000 illegal aliens. This is an effective program that should be vastly expanded to the thousands of state, county, and local law enforcement agencies that exist across the country.

Enroll Rural Jurisdictions That Cannot Afford the 287(g) Program in the WSO Program. One of the challenges to the 287(g) program for jurisdictions is that it requires the expenditure of resources to enroll in and support the program. Local offices must fund the travel and training of designated officers. Smaller jurisdictions, with more limited resources, may not be able to add such costs to their budgets.

Responding to this reality, ICE worked with law enforcement to come up with a 287(g)-lite program, called the Warrant Service Officer (WSO) program. Launched in May of 2019, the WSO program is designed for jurisdictions that either limit cooperation with ICE or do not have the budget and personnel resources to participate in the full 287(g) program.[45]

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

According to ICE, the WSO program differs from the 287(g) program in several respects:

1. Whereas 287(g)-designated officers attend a four-week training program at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in South Carolina for certification, WSO officers are given one day of training from ICE at a local training site.

2. WSO officers do not question people about their citizenship, alienage, or removability, nor do they process aliens who are unlawfully in the United States. Instead, WSO officers serve administrative warrants and execute arrests on behalf of ICE, but only within the confines of the jails where they work. If ICE does not take the alien into custody within 48 hours after service of process, the alien must be released.[46]

As the executive director of the National Sheriffs' Association, Jonathan Thompson, says, the "program gives sheriffs the legal support to help federal law enforcement keep dangerous criminal illegal aliens out of their communities."[47]

Pass Laws Making It a Crime to Transport, Conceal, or Induce an Alien. Once again, Arizona has been a leader among states in passing laws to enforce federal immigration law.

Arizona has made it a state law crime to "transport or move or attempt to transport or move an alien in this state, in furtherance of the illegal presence of the alien in the United States, in a means of transportation if the person knows or recklessly disregards the fact that the alien has come to, has entered or remains in the United States in violation of the law."[48]

Notice the mens rea requirement of the offender in the statute. A common defense to a violation of this statute would be that the offender did not have knowledge of the immigration status of the person they moved or transported. But that is a factual matter, where, no doubt, all the surrounding circumstances would come into play in making that determination. Having this law on the books will likely make residents of Arizona think twice before violating the statute, just as posted speed limits make drivers think twice before exceeding the speed limit.

Another provision in this law makes it a criminal offense to "conceal, harbor or shield or attempt to conceal, harbor or shield an alien from detection in any place in this state, including any building or any means of transportation, if the person knows or recklessly disregards the fact that the alien has come to, has entered or remains in the United States in violation of law."[49] The Obama Administration was unsuccessful in its attempt to convince a federal court to enjoin this provision.[50]

The geographical scope of this provision is broad, as it covers "any place in the state," to include "any building" or "any means of transportation." This is exceptionally useful, as it would seem to cover churches, some of which have attempted to give safe harbor to illegal aliens.

Another Arizona provision makes it a crime to encourage or induce "an alien to come to or reside in this state."[51] Taken together, this trio of statutes sends a loud and clear message to the residents of the state: Do not help illegal aliens, because if you do, you could be charged with a crime.

Make It Illegal to Provide Illegal Aliens Licenses, Automobile Plates, or In-State Tuition. There are other steps that a state can take to limit the transportation options of illegal aliens, which will make it more difficult for them to work and live in a state. No state is required to provide aliens who are unlawfully in the country with a driver's license, although at least 13 states and the District of Columbia do so.[52] Providing illegal aliens with driver's licenses is an unwise policy because it helps aliens evade immigration law by providing them with the major form of identification used by U.S. citizens.

A driver's license gives the alien the ability to travel freely throughout the country[53] and is used for countless other purposes, including registering to vote and applying for government benefits, as well as establishing bank and credit card accounts. As one critic has said, it provides illegal aliens with the appearance of "legality, giving the alien access to goods and services he would otherwise be unable to use."[54] And it "defies common sense to contend that the best way to combat accidents by illegal aliens is to give them all drivers' licenses...to prevent crashes by unlicensed drivers, that state should discourage them from driving in the first place."[55]

Another action states can take that has been upheld in court is restricting the issuance of license plates for vehicles to citizens and noncitizens legally in the U.S.[56] This may be an effective method of restricting the transportation ability of illegal aliens. After all, it is far easier for an individual without a driver's license to drive a car without detection as long as he obeys traffic laws and is not stopped by law enforcement authorities. But an automobile without a current license plate will be detected more quickly, making it much more difficult for an illegal alien to own an automobile.

In fact, an Alabama law that makes it a state felony for an illegal alien to apply, or attempt to apply for, not just vehicle license plates, but also driver's licenses, identification cards, and business, commercial, and professional licenses was upheld by a federal appellate court in 2012.[57]

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Finally, under Arizona law, it is a felony to "intentionally engage in the smuggling of human beings for profit or commercial purpose."[58] Smuggling is defined very broadly to include "the transportation, procurement of transportation or use of property or real property" by someone who "knows or has reason to know that the person" being transported is not lawfully in the U.S.[59]

As we have previously written, there is a provision in federal immigration law regarding in-state college tuition for illegal aliens.[60] Section 1623 of the Immigration Reform and Immigrants Responsibility Act of 1996 prohibits state colleges and universities from providing in-state tuition rates to illegal aliens "on the basis of residence within the state" unless the same in-state rates were offered to all citizens of the United States.[61]

One of the major problems with this law is that it did not provide for a private right of action by people offended that their kids have to pay out-of-state tuition prices when illegal aliens got in-state tuition at a college or university. As things stand, it is up to the federal government, through the U.S. Department of Justice, to sue states that have violated that federal law. As of the date of this publication, 19 states offer in-state tuition rates to illegal aliens.[62] Unfortunately, the Justice Department has never enforced this provision against any state.[63]

That said, states are not helpless in this arena. States can pass their own laws prohibiting in-state tuition for illegal aliens. Doing so would make it quite difficult for future governors of that state to ignore the law and give in-state tuition to illegal aliens by executive fiat.

Publish Crimes Committed by Aliens. One of the arguments made by open-borders supporters is that Americans are not harmed by sanctuary policies or the large inflow of illegal aliens into the country. There are a number of studies showing that this claim is not true—and documenting the crimes committed by criminal aliens.

For example, a Government Accountability Office (GAO) report released in 2005 looked at the crimes committed by 55,322 aliens who "had entered the country illegally and were still illegally in the country at the time of their incarceration in federal or state prison or local jail."[64] According to the report, these aliens were arrested a total of 459,614 times and committed almost 700,000 criminal offenses.[65] The crimes committed included murder, robbery, assault, burglary, drug dealing, and sex-related crimes.

A 2011 GAO report on 251,000 criminal aliens in federal, state, and local jails showed they had been arrested 1.7 million times for committing 3 million criminal offenses.[66] Another report, this time by state, instead of federal, authorities, provides a good example of the type of information all state law enforcement and incarceration authorities should be reporting so that we have accurate and timely information on the extent of this problem.

The Texas Department of Public Safety released a report on the 297,000 aliens "booked into local Texas jails between June 1, 2011 and July 31, 2019" for committing local crimes.[67] Texas participates in the Department of Homeland Security's Priority Enforcement Program, which allows the state to determine the immigration status of individuals arrested and booked into local jails. More than two-thirds (202,000) of those aliens were confirmed as illegal immigrants by the federal government. Over the course of their criminal careers, they were charged with committing 494,000 criminal offenses. Those illegal aliens have been convicted of crimes ranging from murder to kidnapping to robbery and sexual assault.[68]

This type of information is needed from all states, particularly those with the largest populations of criminal aliens. According to the 2011 GAO report, those states are California, Texas, Arizona, Florida, New York, and Illinois.[69] Every state has a criminal justice system that collects large amounts of data. If states do not collect information on the immigration status of each criminal arrested and incarcerated in state and local prisons and jails, they should. And if they do collect that data, they should look at the method Texas is using to disclose that information and consider doing something similar on a constantly updated basis.

The public is entitled to that information since it affects their safety as well as the cost of government that they are paying for through taxes.

States Must Do More

Illegal immigration is a large and growing problem that has many deleterious effects on states, from increasing costs for education, health care, and law enforcement, to endangering residents who would otherwise not be victimized if those aliens who commit crimes were not in the country.

While the federal government bears the chief responsibility for immigration enforcement, there are many actions that state governments can take to help enforce the law, deter illegal aliens from residing in their states, and publicize the problems caused by uncontrolled, illegal immigration.

5. Some aliens commit crimes and are a threat to public safety. In that regard, the Supreme Court noted, for example, that illegal aliens in Maricopa County, Arizona, are "responsible for a disproportionate share of serious crime." While representing 8.9 percent of the population of the county, they account for 21.8 percent of the felonies. Arizona, 567 U.S. at 398. Furthermore, a study released by the U.S. Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics in August 2019 reveals that aliens accounted for nearly two-thirds (64 percent) of all federal arrests in 2018. In fact, more Mexicans than U.S. citizens were arrested on charges of committing federal crimes. Mark Motivans, Immigration, Citizenship, and the Federal Justice System, U.S. Dept. of Justice, Office of Justice Programs, Bureau of Justice Statistics, NCJ 253116 (August 2019); https://www.bjs.gov/content/pub/pdf/icfjs9818.pdf. Another report from the Texas Department of Public Safety found that over 300,000 aliens had been "booked into local Texas jails between June 1, 2011[,] and August 31, 2019." More than two-thirds of them (204,000) were illegal aliens. Over the course of their entire criminal careers, those illegal aliens were charged with committing almost 500,000 criminal offenses, ranging from murder, rape, and assault, to burglary, kidnapping, and robbery. Texas Criminal Illegal Alien Data, Texas Dept. of Public Safety; https://www.dps.texas.gov/administration/crime_records/pages/txCriminalAlienStatistics.htm.

The 11th Circuit Court of Appeals recently upheld the State of Georgia's requirement that selective colleges and universities verify the "lawful presence" of all students seeking admission. The Center for Immigration Studies will release two reports as part of Thursday's panel discussion on the cost of granting healthcare benefits to illegal immigrants, a policy advocated by all ten Democratic candidates who participated in the June 27 debate. The first report details the participation rate and cost of Medicaid usage by immigrants under existing policy, which offers noncitizens less access to the program compared to citizens. The second report estimates the cost of providing illegal immigrants full access to public health benefits. At the panel discussion, commentary will be provided by Christopher Pope, a senior fellow at the Manhattan Institute.

Steven Camarota, the Center's director of research, said, "Any serious debate on providing healthcare coverage to those in the country illegally requires a cost estimate. Depending on the type of coverage and the take-up rate, the cost could be as high as $22.6 billion a year – a reminder that tolerating illegal immigration creates a significant burden for taxpayers."

STEVEN CAMAROTA

Steven Camarota Ph.D.is the director of research at the Center for Immigration Studies. What's Happening at the Center

We recently released two reports on the cost of granting health care benefits to illegal immigrants, a policy advocated by all ten Democratic candidates who participated in the June 27 debate. The first report details the participation rate and cost of Medicaid usage by immigrants under existing policy, which offers noncitizens less access to the program compared to citizens. The second report estimates the cost of providing illegal immigrants full access to public health benefits.

Steven Camarota, Jason Richwine, and Christopher Pope of the Manhattan Institute discussed the findings at a National Press Club panel moderated by Mark Krikrorian that was broadcast on C-SPAN. The reports, as well as a video and transcript of the panel, are available here.

Final FY 2019 CBP Numbers

By Andrew R. Arthur

U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) has released its final number of apprehensions for FY 2019. CBP reported that 977,509 individuals were encountered attempting to cross the Southwest border. This was a 72 percent increase over FY 2014, which would suggest to an objective observer that there are significant issues that need to be addressed.

Rethinking EU migration and asylum policies: Managing immigration jointly with countries of origin and transit

9:00 a.m.-3:30 p.m., Wednesday, October 16, 2019

CEPS, Bruxelles, Belgium
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/rethinking-eu-migration-and-asylum-policies-managing-immigration-jointly-with-countries-of-origin-and-transit-16-october-2019-brussels/

Description: Asylum and migration policy continues to be high up on the EU policy agenda and will remain an important topic for the next European

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Commission. Though current positions in the European Council regarding how to make progress on the Common European Asylum System seem deadlocked, there is considerable scope for dialogue and debate on the future of EU asylum policy as well as the wider issue of improving overall management of migration.

This 'Mercator Dialogue on Asylum and Migration' (MEDAM) conference is launching the annual assessment report on asylum and migration policy. This year's report is titled "Rethinking EU migration and asylum policies: Managing immigration jointly with countries of origin and transit". State Secretary for Migration María del Consuelo Rumí Ibáñez (Spain), Ambassador H.E. Ms. Teneng Mba Jaiteh (Gambia) and MEP Delara Burkhardt are among the confirmed speakers.

Anyone working on international migration, development and cooperation is encouraged to join the panellists at this debate and to contribute to the discussion during the three Q&A sessions, and coffee and lunch breaks.

For more information and to register to the conference, consult the event page.

The MPC is one of three partner institutions of the 'Mercator Dialogue on Asylum and Migration' (MEDAM), funded by the Mercator Foundation and led by the Kiel Institute for the World Economy.

Description: The speakers will address the notion of belonging in conjunction with the exhibition "Crossing Lines, Constructing Home: Displacement and Belonging in Contemporary Art" at the Harvard Art Museums.

The panel brings together the exhibition's curators, Makeda Best and Mary Schneider Enriquez, and two social scientists, Friederike Römer and Jonathan Laurence, to explore questions such as: How might we expand our understanding of the ways in which refugees and immigrants assert their own sense of belonging while navigating the expectations of their new societies? How do visual representations shape our notion of what it means to belong? How are processes of belonging shaped by social, cultural, and political contexts?

Speakers:
Makeda Best, Richard L. Menschel Curator of Photography, Harvard Art Museums

Jonathan Laurence, Professor of Political Science, Boston College; Local Affiliate, CES, Harvard University

Friederike Römer, Postdoctoral Researcher, CRC Global Dynamics of Social Polity, University of Bremen; John F. Kennedy Memorial Fellow & Visiting Scholar 2019-2020, CES, Harvard University

Forced Migration, Protection, and Border Control

8:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m., Thursday, October 17, 2019
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, LLP

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

One New York Plaza, 1 FDR Drive
New York, NY 10004
https://cmsny.org/event/2019-symposium/

Description: On October 17, 2019, the Center for Migration Studies will hold its annual academic and policy symposium at the law offices of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP. The event will open with a keynote address by T. Alexander Aleinikoff, Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility, about new directions for forced migration policy studies. The keynote will be followed by panels about enforcement, responding to the needs of refugees, and access to the US asylum system. In the closing session, panelists and attendees will engage in an open discussion about research and policy priorities. This is CMS's sixth annual academic and policy conference, which celebrates the work of leading scholars and thinkers on international migration.

Agenda:

9:00–9:15 a.m.
Welcome:
Karen Grisez, Public Service Counsel
Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP

Introduction:
Most Rev. Nicholas DiMarzio
Bishop of Brooklyn

9:15–10:30 p.m.
Keynote: New Directions for Forced Migration Policy Studies
T. Alexander Aleinikoff
Director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility
The New School

10:45 a.m.–12:00 p.m.
Session I: Enforcement Efforts and their Adverse Impact on Protection: A Discussion about North America, Europe, and the Global South

Over the last few years, we have seen increased efforts to build barriers and systems that prevent refugees and asylum seekers from reaching safety and applying for asylum protection. How are enforcement efforts in various regions of the world impacting refugee protection and access to asylum? What challenges do enhanced enforcement efforts impose? How have efforts to externalize borders and prevent access to asylum countries impacted genuine refugees? How can we address these problems?

Moderator: Michele Pistone, Non-Resident Fellow and Associate Editor, Journal on Migration and Human Security, Center for Migration Studies; Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES), Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law
Speakers will be announced shortly.

1:15–2:30 p.m.
Session II: Challenges in Responding to the Needs of Refugees, Displaced Persons and their Host Communities in Protracted Situations

A majority of refugees and internally displaced persons are in protracted situations—defined by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees as five years or longer. Many of them are in low and medium income countries that have few resources available to provide security, education, livelihood and entrepreneurship opportunities, healthcare and other services for host communities, let alone refugees and displaced persons. This panel will discuss opportunities and challenges in addressing protracted situations, particularly in the context of adoption of the Global Compact on Refugees in December 2019.

Moderator:
Susan Martin, Donald G. Herzberg Professor Emeritus in the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University

Speakers:
Sarah Deardorff Miller, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

Leah Zamore, Center on International Cooperation, New York University

2:45–4:00 p.m.
Session III: Access to Asylum on the US-Mexico Border

The Trump administration and DHS officers have pursued a series of strategies to restrict access to the US asylum system. Most of these strategies – interception, turn-backs, zero tolerance enforcement, the separation of children from parents, requiring asylum-seekers to await the US asylum process in Mexico and barring asylum to most migrants who arrive at the US-Mexico border – have been focused on the US southern border. Other measures, such as the expansion of expedited removal, began at the border but have now been expanded to cover the entire United States and persons in the country for two years or less. The panel will review, critique and discuss alternatives to these policies.

Moderator: Donald Kerwin, Executive Director, Center for Migration Studies

Speakers:
Josiah Heyman, Professor of Anthropology, Endowed Professor of Border Trade Issues, and Director of Center for Interamerican and Border Studies, University of Texas, El Paso

Carmen Maquilon, Director of Catholic Charities Immigration Services of the Diocese of Rockville Centre

4:00–5:00 p.m.
Closing Presentation:
Jaime Winders will moderate an open discussion of research and policy priorities.

Workshop: Cities and the global governance of migration. An under-explored link.

Thursday-Friday, October 17-18, 2019
Seminar Room, Villa Malafrasca
Migration Policy Centre
Florence, Italy
http://www.migrationpolicycentre.eu/event/cities-and-the-global-governance-of-migration-an-under-explored-link-17-18-october-2019/

Description: In the last two decades research on various aspects of subnational governments' policymaking on migration and diversity issues has been expanding and consolidating, leading to a 'local turn' in migration scholarship. Case studies and comparative research in Europe and beyond have shed light on how migration policies and laws are not only implemented but also actively produced and shaped in local arenas in which actors with different interests and conceptions of migration-related challenges continuously interact. More recently, a relational and multilevel governance perspective has been emerging: local governments are conceptualised more and more as actors in complex regulatory processes which include a multiplicity of actors at different territorial scales, both public and non public.

In this panorama though, the dimension of the global mobilisation of local governments on migration is still underdeveloped, especially vis-á-vis other policy fields such as environment and climate change. Why and how cities get engaged in policy processes around migration issues beyond the borders of their national principals are still open questions. Yet cities are becoming more and more active on the international and global migration scene, as demonstrated by their participation in the Global Compact of Migration or by the mobilisation of – old and new – transnational city networks on the issue of refugees' reception.

In this workshop we aim at establishing a dialogue between scholars who, from different disciplinary perspectives and using different theoretical and methodological approaches, are working on the mobilisation of cities in the global governance of migration. We welcome studies that take a city perspective as well as those that focus on the organisations (e.g. City Networks) or venues (e.g. GCM forum) promoting/enabling cities' international mobilisation on various aspects of migration-related policies (e.g. integration, asylum seekers reception, access to social assistance etc.).

Speakers:
Bryan Caplan, Author and Professor of Economics, George Mason University

Zach Weinersmith, Illustrator, Saturday Morning Breakfast Cereal comic strip; New York Times bestselling author

Commentator:
Tim Kane, JP Conte Fellow in Immigration Studies at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University

Moderator:
Alex Nowrasteh, Director of Immigration Policy Studies, Center for Global Liberty and Prosperity, Cato Institute

Description: In their new graphic nonfiction book Open Borders: The Science and Ethics of Immigration, authors Bryan Caplan and Zach Weinersmith turn the heated public debate over immigration on its head by proposing a radical and controversial solution: open borders. Caplan argues that opening all borders would practically eliminate absolute poverty worldwide and usher in a booming worldwide economy?greatly benefiting all of humanity, including Americans. With a clear and conversational tone, exhaustive research, and vibrant illustrations by Zach Weinersmith of Saturday Morning Breakfast Cereal fame, Open Borders makes the case for unrestricted immigration in a new format sure to spark lively debate. Caplan and Weinersmith will be joined by Tim Kane, the JP Conte Fellow in Immigration Studies at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University, who is a supporter of liberal immigration laws but a critic of open borders. Please join us for a timely and lively discussion.

Overview: The southern border shared between Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. is an enormous economic gateway for the United States, but it requires control, safety and modernization to maintain it. Enforcing laws and securing the border is a top priority for the Department of Homeland Security. As time passes, the need for operator driven policies and solutions, modern devices, and fully integrated border becomes more crucial.

This year's Border Management South Summit will aim to connect local, federal and state officials to discuss the top challenges and priorities in the field. Interactive group discussions and panels will address procurement initiatives and aligning border solutions with development of operators.

Agenda:

Focus Day, Wednesday, December 4, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

9:00 a.m.

USING THE INTEGRATION OF IT SYSTEMS TO ENHANCE RESPONSE AT THE BORDER

The U.S./Mexico border is in need of becoming a fully integrated border. This session will evaluate how communication between law enforcement officials and security personnel will be seamless and sufficient using integration strategies.

* Understanding how the integration of technological systems will enhance communication across the border
* Enhancing border mobility
* Managing information data flow across the border

10:30 a.m.

OPTIMIZING THE USE OF SECURITY PERSONNEL USING SECURITY APPLICATIONS

This session will provide a break down of how the use of advanced analytics can transform and protect the border. Advanced analytics will be able to detect security breaches from objects, unauthorized people and more. Security personnel will be able to receive knowledge of potential threats and act accordingly and in a timely manner.

* Using AI and ML to not only stockpile data, but also manage it
* Utilizing analytical tools to enhance perimeter protection
* Enabling security personnel to recognize threats using intelligent video

12:30 p.m.

ANALYZING DATA TO PREDICT FUTURE EVENTS AND OUTCOMES

Data will only become sufficient and useful if it is then transformed into action. Join us as we learn about the transforming of paper data into visionary plans and help detect future events. Information management allows room for improvement to border services and protection of citizens.

* Managing current data and transforming it into visionary plans and action
* Collecting and exploiting data to drive border decision making Timothy

CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
TEXAS IN REAL-TIME: RESPONDING AT THE BORDER

* Gain insight on how front line law enforcement officials are tackling border issues in real-time
Sheriff Waybourn, Tarrant County Sheriff Joe Frank Martinez, Del Val Verde County

9:45 a.m.
ANALYZING THE U.S. BORDER AS A SYSTEM: THE MEMBRANE, THE SURVEILLANCE AND THE HUMAN ELEMENT

In order to effectively secure the U.S. / Mexico border, it should be thought of as a system divided into three parts. A representative of the DHS will outline ways of uniting the organizational structure and breaking down each border element into compartments that work together to provide one outcome - effective border security.

* Evaluating the border as a whole system and not in parts
* Identifying the humanity aspect when working at the border

11:00 a.m.
ADVANCING ALL SITUATIONAL AND DOMAIN AWARENESS TO SUPPORT BORDER MISSIONS

Supporting border missions through situational and all domain awareness allows room to address challenges and provides understanding on how to respond in a threatening environment. Custom Border Patrol representatives will share how to appropriately notice changes across the border and respond rapidly.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

* Building and sustaining situational awareness in a threat environment
* Using all domain awareness to predict future actions and threats
* Being aware of air, land and maritime border challenges and opportunities
Jennifer Barreras-Rawls, Operations Section Chief of Joint Task Force West, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

11:45 a.m.

ENSURING INTELLIGENCE DRIVEN OPERATIONS IN A THREAT ENVIRONMENT

It is important to use intelligence for improvement of the border system as a whole. Understanding how to share intelligence between partners and how to utilize the data given is a key component in securing the border.

* Understanding a threat environment using information and data
* Sharing Intelligence between Law Enforcement Enterprise Partners
Brad Skinner, Deputy Director Office of Field Operations Laredo Field Office, U.S. Customs and Border Protection

* Advancing the border using intelligence and innovative technology
* Enhancing operation objectives to increase border protection productivity
* Bringing the human element back into border management

1:30 p.m.

USING A SCIENTIFIC APPROACH TO ADDRESS BORDER CHALLENGES

Scientific breakthroughs and advancements have caused a huge gateway for the use of CIP and enhancing threat management. Here you will understand how intelligence pictures and process help conquer nearby threats.

* Using common intelligence pictures to showcase threat capabilities
* Establishing the ability to detect threats beyond the border
* Deploying a systematic process for analyzing and distributing data

2:15 p.m.

ENHANCING PARTNERSHIPS AND ENFORCEMENT COOPERATION

Establishing partnerships will assist the border in creating meaningful relationships and thus, actively creating new ways to guard the U.S. / Mexico

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Border. Utilizing department-wide cooperation and international input will help overcome border threats.

* Establishing a unity of effort approach to effectively guard the U.S/Mexico Border
* Building international partnerships to effectively detect threats
* Enhancing supply chain security to conduct thorough examinations at the border
Ismael Navarez Jr., Special Agent in Charge, IRS

3:00 p.m.
ADVANCING THE BORDER WITH THE MODEL PORTS PROGRAM

The Model Ports Program was designed to improve overall experience and operations at the port of entry. This session will showcase the reasoning and effectiveness behind the Model Ports Program.

* Improving wait time monitoring and processing
* Conducting meetings with senior level industry leaders for establish goals and monitoring techniques
* Using Public-Private Partnerships to enhance operation at the ports of entry

Friday, December 6, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
PROCUREMENT: FUTURE INITIATIVES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

A DHS representative will disclose the 2020 Vision for the Department of Homeland Security. Attendees will understand where important investments are being made and how future policy will evolve border management.

* The 2020 outlook for the U.S./Mexico Border
* How policy changes will provide solutions to current border challenges
* Understanding future border investments
Rose Marie Davis, Director innovation Program Acquisitions, DHS

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

9:45 a.m.

IMMIGRATION OF FAMILIES ACROSS THE BORDER

The border is currently filled with multiple families including children seeking to come to the U.S. Due to the increase of migrants, facilities constantly become over crowded. Gain insights on how to ensure maintenance of facilities and navigate current and future border policies to secure the border.

* Maintaining protocol and policies when dealing with families at border
* Creating a safe and ethical environment at the U.S. /Mexico border
Robert Gross, DHS Attaché, Department of Homeland Security

11:00 a.m.

PROMOTING INNOVATION AND INTEGRITY AMONGST PERSONNEL

Training personnel on how to react in force situations and maintaining DHS ethical standards is important. Join us as we evaluate new initiatives taking place to reconstruct and advance CBP's organizational structure.

* Reconstructing the border's organizational structure
* Ensuring ethical conduct and integrity along the border
* Advancing training initiatives in assisting use of force situations

11:45 a.m.

PREVENTING COUNTERTERRORISM AND TRANSNATIONAL CRIME AT THE BORDER

Joining forces across law enforcement allows one to maximize its resources and enhance operational integration. Leaders of the Department of Homeland Security will share how the interaction of global partners will assist with reducing crime and potential threats.

* Joining forces with local, state, and federal law enforcement to increase resources
* Using integrated operations to detect weapons and disrupt illegal crossings
* Expanding mobility to quicken response to threats John Jones, Divisional Director Intelligence and Counterterrorism, Texas Department of Public Safety

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

1:30 p.m.

ADVANCING BORDER TRADING IN ORDER TO PROTECT THE U.S.

Implementing strategies and trade intelligence will protect against unlawful items from entering. This session will break down the use of trade intelligence in real time and how it will shape enforcement efforts.

* Collaborating with advanced technology and enforcement to intercept high-risk shipment
* Responding to border risk in real-time using trade intelligence
* Integration of law enforcement to help protect the border from illegal trade

Subject: Conflicting Picture From Two Census Bureau Surveys

Conflicting Picture of Immigrant Numbers and Trends From Two Census Bureau Surveys

Is there a 'Trump effect'?

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (October 16, 2019) – A recent news story in the New York Times announced that growth in the immigrant population "Slows to a Trickle." But it's not clear that any slowdown in immigration has actually taken place. First, growth in the immigrant population does not measure new arrivals; immigrants come and go, so the net change in the total is not the same as the annual number of new arrivals.

More important, the two Census Bureau surveys that measure the foreign-born have recently diverged in unexpected ways. The Times story only reported results from the American Community Survey (ACS), showing a growth of 200,000 immigrants. But the other data source, the Current Population Survey (CPS), shows an increase of 1.6 million in the immigrant population between 2017 and 2018.

Not only does the CPS show more rapid growth in recent years, it also now shows a larger number of immigrants (legal and illegal) in the country. This is the case even though the CPS does not include people in group quarters, while the ACS does include them.

It is possible that President Trump's rhetoric and policies have contributed to this development, but if so, why would they affect the surveys differently? Clearly, more analysis is needed to better understand why the two surveys have diverged.

"Given that the two surveys no longer agree," said Steven Camarota the Center's Director of Research, "reporters and commentators should be cautious when discussing immigration levels and trends until a clearer picture emerges."

The complete analysis is available at https://cis.org/Camarota/Latest-Census-Bureau-Surveys-Do-Not-Agree-Size-and-Growth-Immigrant-Population

Key findings:

- Since 2006, when the ACS began capturing the entire population, the survey has consistently shown a larger immigrant population (legal and illegal) than the CPS. This is mainly due to the fact that the ACS includes all those in "group quarters", such as nursing homes, prisons, and dorms.

- However, in 2018 the CPS showed about 700,000 more immigrants in

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

March 2018 than the 2018 ACS (the newest ACS) showed for July 2018, a statistically significant difference. The March 2019 CPS (the newest CPS) shows 45.8 million — 1.1 million larger than the 2018 ACS.

- In terms of growth, the ACS shows a 4.8 million increase from 2010 to 2018 in the immigrant population, while the CPS shows a 6.9 million increase over the same period. The just-released 2019 CPS shows an increase of 7.3 million since 2010.

- Looking at more recent years shows the largest divergence in growth rates between the CPS and the ACS. From 2015 to 2019, growth in the immigrant population averaged one million in the CPS, while in the ACS it averaged 600,000 from 2015 to 2018.

- One of the biggest differences between the two surveys is the size and change in the Mexican immigrant population (legal and illegal). The total Mexican immigrant population in the 2019 CPS is 12.1 million, the largest number ever reported in Census data for immigrants from any one country. But the 2018 ACS, in contrast, shows only 11.2 million immigrants from Mexico — nearly 800,000 fewer than the 2018 CPS and about 900,000 fewer than the new 2019 CPS.

- The two surveys show a very different pattern of growth in the Mexican immigrant population. From 2016 to the 2018, the CPS shows an increase of more than 200,000 in the Mexican population, while the ACS shows roughly a 400,000 decline. The new 2019 data from the CPS shows an additional 100,000 increase in the Mexican population over 2018.

Discussion & report on employer discrimination against native-born workers

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (October 17, 2019) – The Center for Immigration Studies will host a panel discussion on Thursday, October 24, focusing on employer discrimination against native-born workers.

The conversation will center on the release of a new report examining real-world case studies in which the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) has sued employers for systematically favoring low-skill immigrants over native workers. After the report's author, independent policy analyst Jason Richwine, presents his findings, Peter Kirsanow, a member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, will offer comments based on the Commission's work on immigration's impact on black workers. Kevin Lynn, executive director of Progressives for Immigration Reform, will complement the discussion by highlighting similar discrimination against higher-skilled native workers.

Richwine says, "U.S. companies appear to prefer low-skill foreign-born labor over their native-born counterparts, particularly blacks, and the resulting discrimination against U.S.-born workers is neither subconscious nor subtle. If the anti-native mindset among U.S. employers is as widespread as these cases suggest, the number of American workers who suffer could be large."

When: Thursday, October 24, 2019, at 9:30 a.m.

Where: National Press Club, 529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor, Washington, D.C.

Stream: Facebook Live

Who:

- Jason Richwine Ph.D., an independent public policy analyst and National Review contributor.

- Peter Kirsanow, serving his third term as a member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, and a partner with a law firm specializing in labor and employment law.

- Kevin Lynn, executive director of Progressives for Immigration Reform, an organization focused on the unintended consequences of immigration policies and guest worker programs that undermine working Americans.

Open Borders: The Science and Ethics of Immigration
By Bryan Caplan and Zach Weinersmith

First Second, 256 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1250316979, $27.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1250316979/centerforimmigra

Paperback, ISBN: 1250316960, $13.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1250316960/centerforimmigra

Kindle, ASIN: B07YRKYKZ3, $9.99

Book Description: American policy-makers have long been locked in a heated battle over whether, how many, and what kind of immigrants to allow to live and work in the country. Those in favor of welcoming more immigrants often cite humanitarian reasons, while those in favor of more restrictive laws argue the need to protect native citizens.

But economist Bryan Caplan adds a new, compelling perspective to the immigration debate: He argues that opening all borders could eliminate absolute poverty worldwide and usher in a booming worldwide economy—greatly benefiting humanity.

With a clear and conversational tone, exhaustive research, and vibrant illustrations by Zach Weinersmith, Open Borders makes the case for unrestricted immigration easy to follow and hard to deny.

Calais and its Border Politics: From Control to Demolition

By Yasmin Ibrahim and Anita Howarth

Routledge, 130 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 1138049166, $53.67
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1138049166/centerforimmigra

Paperback, ISBN: 0367820994, 120 pp., $47.95
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0367820994/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 1607 KB, ASIN: B07BL572XB, $25.00

Book Description: Calais has a long history of transient refugee settlements and is often narrated through the endeavour to 'sanitize' it by both the English and the French in their policy and media discourses. Calais and its Border Politics encapsulates the border politics of Calais as an entry port through the refugee settlements known as the 'Jungle'. By deconstructing how the jungle is a constant threat to the civilisation and sanity of Calais, the book traces the story of the jungle, both its revival and destruction as a recurrent narrative through the context of border politics. The book approaches Calais historically and through the key concept of the camp or the 'jungle' - a metaphor that becomes crucial to the inhuman approach to the settlement and in the justifications to destroy it continuously. The demolition and rebuilding of Calais also emphasises the denigration of humanity in the border sites.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The authors offer a comprehensive insight into the making and unmaking of one of Europe's long-standing refugee camps. The book explores the history of refugee camps in Calais and provides an insight into its representation and governance over time. The book provides an interdisciplinary perspective, employing concepts of space making, human form and corporeality, as well as modes of representation of the 'Other' to narrate the story of Calais as a border space through time, up to its recent representations in the media.

This book's exploration of the representation and governance of the contentious Calais camps will be an invaluable resource to students and scholars of forced migration, border politics, displacement, refugee crisis, camps and human trauma.

Lost in Media: Migrant Perspectives and the Public Sphere

By Ismail Einashe and Thomas Roueche

Valiz, 168 pp.

Paperback, ISBN: 9492095688, $25.00
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/9492095688/centerforimmigra

Book Description: This volume gathers critical responses to the representations of migrants in the media in Europe through nine essays by prominent writers, artists and journalists. The starting point is the assertion that migrants may have entered European countries, but they have not yet entered the public sphere. When they do, it is as characters in other people's stories: they are spoken about but rarely spoken to, pointed at but rarely heard. If migrants and refugees are to become fully recognized citizens of Europe, they need to be participants in public debate.

Lost in Media features essays by Tania Bruguera, Moha Gerehou, Aleksandar Hemon, Lubaina Himid, Dawid Krawczyk, Antonija Letinic, Nesrine Malik,

Migration, Borders and Citizenship: Between Policy and Public Spheres

By Maurizio Ambrosini, Manlio Cinalli, and David Jacobson

Palgrave Macmillan, 309 pp.

Hardcover, ISBN: 3030221563, $113.99
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/3030221563/centerforimmigra

Kindle, 4878 KB, ASIN: B07WWBCMQM, $76.49

Book Description: This edited collection goes beyond the limited definition of borders as simply dividing lines across states, to uncover another, yet related, type of division: one that separates policies and institutions from public debate and contestation.

Bringing together expertise from established and emerging academics, it examines the fluid and varied borderscape across policy and the public domains. The chapters encompass a wide range of analyses that covers local, national and transnational frameworks, policies and private actors. In doing so, Migration, Borders and Citizenship reveals the tensions between border control and state economic interests; legal frameworks designed to contain criminality and solidarity movements; international conventions, national constitutions and local migration governance; and democratic and exclusive constructions of citizenship.

This novel approach to the politics of borders will appeal to sociologists, political scientists and geographers working in the fields of migration, citizenship, urban geography and human rights; in addition to students and scholars of security studies and international relations.

IMMIGRATION

Central Americans, Politics
A record 390,308 people traveling as families entered the US illegally in the first nine months of FY19, plus 63,624 unaccompanied children under 18.

DHS: CBP, ICE, USCIS
American Community Survey data estimate that the US had 45 million foreign-born residents in 2018, making immigrants 13.7 percent of US residents. Almost half of these immigrants were naturalized US citizens, and a quarter were unauthorized.

Border. CBP apprehended 104,344 foreigners just inside US borders in June

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2019, down 28 percent from over 144,278 in May 2019. Apprehensions fell to 94,908 in July 2018, including 42,566 family units and 5,561 unaccompanied minors, and fell further to 60,000 in August 2019.

https://migration.ucdavis.edu/rmn/more.php?id=2348

H-2A; H-2B

The H-2A program continues to expand. Over 206,000 farm jobs were certified to be filled with H-2A workers during the first three quarters of FY19, up seven percent from 193,000 in FY18. Most jobs are certified between January and June: two-thirds of the total 243,000 jobs certified in FY18 were certified in the first two quarters of the year.

The Department of Labor certified 171,000 H-2A jobs between January and June 2019, which suggests that total certifications for FY19 could top 255,000. The growth in the H-2A program may be slowing. The increase in third-quarter applications over 2018 was the slowest in five years.

https://migration.ucdavis.edu/rmn/more.php?id=2349

Canada, Mexico

Canada has one of the world's highest rates of immigration and one of the largest shares of guest workers in its labor force, including foreign students who may work 20 hours a week while studying and work full time during school breaks. Canada admitted 400,000 foreign students in 2018.

Canada has an international mobility program akin to other countries' working holiday-maker programs that permits foreigners to work for two years in Canada. Some 250,000 international mobility migrants were admitted in 2018.

https://migration.ucdavis.edu/rmn/more.php?id=2350

Europe, Asia

A March 2016 EU-Turkey agreement commits Turkey to accept the return of migrants who leave Turkey's western coast and arrive illegally on nearby Greek islands. For each migrant returned from Greece to Turkey, the EU accepts one refugee waiting in Turkey for resettlement. Migrants who are returned from Greece go to the back of the line for resettlement.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In October 2015, some 6,000 migrants a day went by boat from Turkey to nearby Greek islands, a total of 210,000 during the month. The outflow of migrants almost stopped after the EU-Turkey agreement, but climbed 12,000 in September 2019, including some days when 500 migrants arrived on Greek islands. Most are from Afghanistan, Syria and Congo.
One reason for more migrants arriving on Greek islands is that fewer than 2,000 migrants have been returned from Greek islands to Turkey since March 2016.
https://migration.ucdavis.edu/rmn/more.php?id=2351

Global Migration, Population

By some estimates, at least a quarter of migrants "fail" and return to their home countries. Some are returned by the International Organization for Migration, an intergovernmental organization funded that offers free transport home and sometimes re-integration services. IOM wants to avoid offering too many re-integration services for fear of creating a magnet for people to try and fail in migration in order to get ahead at home.

What's Happening at the Center

In a recent column, Mark Krikorian explains that Mexico has been pretty aggressive in stopping third-country nationals from traversing its territory on their way north to make bogus asylum claims so they can be released into the United States because the current flow of illegals is mainly made up of foreigners, not Mexicans. A majority of the flow is from Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador (the “northern triangle” countries of Central America), but with growing numbers from Haiti, Cuba, various African countries, and even the Middle East.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

When the first caravan to catch the world’s attention passed through Mexican towns on its way north in spring 2018, it was often welcomed with mariachi bands, offers of food and water, and even medical checkups. But as more caravans arrived, plus many migrants in smaller groups, all drawn by loopholes in American law that facilitated their release into the United States, the welcome started to wear out. Exhaustion has turned to resentment.

The United States and Mexico have a confluence of interests in stopping the flow of third-country “asylum-seekers” heading for the American border. Mexicans love their country, as they should, and they’re tired of foreigners using it as a doormat.

Latest Census Bureau Surveys Do Not Agree on Size and Growth of Immigrant Population
By Steven A. Camarota
CIS Report, October 16, 2019

Excerpt: A recent news story in the New York Times announced that growth in the immigrant population "Slows to a Trickle". An op-ed in the Times a few weeks later went even further, mistakenly interpreting the earlier report as meaning that "immigration fell 70%" in the last year. The writers interpret this as the result of President Trump's immigration policy changes.

But it's not clear that any slowdown in immigration has actually taken place.

California Hobbles Itself - and the Federal Government - in Preventing Use of Private Detention Facilities

By Dan Cadman

California Governor Gavin Newsom recently signed into law, after passage through the legislature, a ban on private prisons, including private immigration detention facilities. Many progressives have hailed passage of the law, ostensibly because it represents a step toward "criminal justice reform" by "taking the profit motive" from incarceration. The more you limit where individuals, citizen or alien, may be detained, the more likely it is that they will be placed in the remaining few facilities in remote locations — most likely far from friends, family, or even their legal counsel.

Senior Judge David Briones of the of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas, El Paso Division, issued a Memorandum Opinion last week in which he found that a "Presidential Proclamation on Declaring a National Emergency Concerning the Southern Border of the United States" violated the 2019 Consolidated Appropriations Act (2019 CAA).

H-1B Denials Rate Quadruples, but the Number of Approvals Keeps Rising

By David North

We keep hearing, from the industry and from the Indian press, that denial rates in the H-1B program are rising sharply, that more and more of the dreaded questions about applications (the Request for Evidence (RFE) process) are being asked by DHS staff, and that the post-RFE approval rate in the H-1B program is falling. The reality is that some of the most marginal applications are now being rejected by DHS staff, and that the quality and the legitimacy of the jobs in the program have advanced a small amount.

Panel: No Americans Need Apply

Discussion & report on employer discrimination against native-born workers

9:30 a.m., Thursday, October 24, 2019
National Press Club, Fourth Estate Room
529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor
Washington, D.C. 20045
https://www.press.org/events/worker-discrimination-americans-need-not-apply

Description: The Center for Immigration Studies will host a panel discussion on Thursday, October 24, focusing on employer discrimination against native-born workers.

The conversation will center on the release of a new report examining real-world case studies in which the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) has sued employers for systematically favoring low-skill immigrants over native workers. After the report's author, independent policy analyst Jason Richwine, presents his findings, Peter Kirsanow, a member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, will offer comments based on the Commission's work on immigration's impact on black workers. Kevin Lynn, executive director of Progressives for Immigration Reform, will complement the discussion by highlighting similar discrimination against higher-skilled native workers.

Richwine says, "U.S. companies appear to prefer low-skill foreign-born labor over their native-born counterparts, particularly blacks, and the resulting discrimination against U.S.-born workers is neither subconscious nor subtle. If the anti-native mindset among U.S. employers is as widespread as these cases suggest, the number of American workers who suffer could be large."

Speakers:
Jason Richwine Ph.D., an independent public policy analyst and National Review contributor.

The Administration of Immigration

8:15 a.m.-4:00 p.m., Friday, October 25, 2019
The C. Boyden Gray Center for the Study of the Administrative State
George Mason University Antonin Scalia Law School
3301 Fairfax Drive
Arlington, VA 22201
https://administrativestate.gmu.edu/events/the-administration-of-immigration/

Description: Perhaps no area of American law is as complexly administered as our nation's immigration system. This system involves criminal and civil statutes, enforced by federal and state officials and often involving private or quasi-public actors. It involves rulemaking, adjudication, grantmaking, and governmental operations by multiple federal agencies, giving rise to some of our nation's most interesting administrative law cases. These issues implicate domestic policy and foreign policy, and there has historically been no single central White House staff dedicated to coordinating interagency action in the immigration space.

Our conference on The Administration of Immigration will center around new scholarship that the Gray Center has helped to incubate. These papers explore ways to improve our nation's immigration system, addressing such topics as the costs and benefits of immigration, public administration of the immigration system, and the moral underpinnings of immigration law. As with all Gray Center events, this conference will seek to bring the lessons of administration and administrative law to bear on this particular area of law, and take the lessons of this particular area of law back to the general practice of administration.

Authors and panelists will include private practitioners, public interest lawyers, government attorneys, and academics, collectively contributing many decades of varied experience to a discussion on some of the thorniest issues our nation's immigration system faces today. Please join us for what will be a wide-ranging and thoughtful set of discussions on these important new papers.

https://calendar.mit.edu/event/our_hidden_borders_guantanamo_interdiction_and_the_rise_of_offshore_migration_policing#.Xa4MOm5Fyyd

Description: Where exactly are the United States' immigration borders? Are they simply at the edge of US sovereign territory as the fixation on walls, fences, and domestic enforcement programs would suggest? In this talk, I offer a different perspective by tracing the rise of a mobile US border regime and its extension out into ocean spaces hundreds and thousands of miles beyond US soil. Along the way, we'll examine the reimagining of Guantánamo as a model for flexible, extraterritorial migration control and the intensive litigation battles over the treatment of Haitian asylum seekers that both gave birth to the US asylum system and partially drove it into a space of oceanic exceptionalism. As we'll see, the emergence of offshore interdiction and detention reveals not only hidden features of our contemporary borderscape but the roots of a respatialization of the nation-state itself.

Commentator:
Tim Kane, JP Conte Fellow in Immigration Studies at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University

Moderator:
Alex Nowrasteh, Director of Immigration Policy Studies, Center for Global Liberty and Prosperity, Cato Institute

Description: In their new graphic nonfiction book Open Borders: The Science and Ethics of Immigration, authors Bryan Caplan and Zach Weinersmith turn the heated public debate over immigration on its head by proposing a radical and controversial solution: open borders. Caplan argues that opening all borders would practically eliminate absolute poverty worldwide and usher in a booming worldwide economy?greatly benefiting all of humanity, including Americans. With a clear and conversational tone, exhaustive research, and vibrant illustrations by Zach Weinersmith of Saturday Morning Breakfast Cereal fame, Open Borders makes the case for unrestricted immigration in a new format sure to spark lively debate. Caplan and Weinersmith will be joined by Tim Kane, the JP Conte Fellow in Immigration Studies at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University, who is a supporter of liberal immigration laws but a critic of open borders. Please join us for a timely and lively discussion.

Border Management South

Wednesday-Friday, December 4-6, 2019
Hilton Garden Inn San Antonio

https://www.idga.org/events-bordermanagementsummit/landing/official-border-management-south-brochure
https://plsadaptive.s3.amazonaws.com/eco/files/event_content/border-management-south-2019.pdf

Overview: The southern border shared between Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. is an enormous economic gateway for the United States, but it requires control,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

safety and modernization to maintain it. Enforcing laws and securing the border is a top priority for the Department of Homeland Security. As time passes, the need for operator driven policies and solutions, modern devices, and fully integrated border becomes more crucial.

This year's Border Management South Summit will aim to connect local, federal and state officials to discuss the top challenges and priorities in the field. Interactive group discussions and panels will address procurement initiatives and aligning border solutions with development of operators.

Agenda:

Focus Day, Wednesday, December 4, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
USING THE INTEGRATION OF IT SYSTEMS TO ENHANCE RESPONSE AT THE BORDER

The U.S./Mexico border is in need of becoming a fully integrated border. This session will evaluate how communication between law enforcement officials and security personnel will be seamless and sufficient using integration strategies.

* Understanding how the integration of technological systems will enhance communication across the border
* Enhancing border mobility
* Managing information data flow across the border

10:30 a.m.
OPTIMIZING THE USE OF SECURITY PERSONNEL USING SECURITY APPLICATIONS

This session will provide a break down of how the use of advanced analytics can transform and protect the border. Advanced analytics will be able to detect security breaches from objects, unauthorized people and more. Security personnel will be able to receive knowledge of potential threats and act accordingly and in a timely manner.

* Using AI and ML to not only stockpile data, but also manage it
* Utilizing analytical tools to enhance perimeter protection
* Enabling security personnel to recognize threats using intelligent video

12:30 p.m.
ANALYZING DATA TO PREDICT FUTURE EVENTS AND OUTCOMES

Data will only become sufficient and useful if it is then transformed into action. Join us as we learn about the transforming of paper data into visionary plans and help detect future events. Information management allows room for improvement to border services and protection of citizens.

* Managing current data and transforming it into visionary plans and action
* Collecting and exploiting data to drive border decision making Timothy Bennett, Science and Technology Directorate, Department of Homeland Security

Thursday, December 5, 2019

8:50 a.m.
CHAIRMAN'S OPENING REMARKS

9:00 a.m.
TEXAS IN REAL-TIME: RESPONDING AT THE BORDER

* Gain insight on how front line law enforcement officials are tackling border issues in real-time
Sheriff Waybourn, Tarrant County Sheriff Joe Frank Martinez, Del Val Verde County

9:45 a.m.
ANALYZING THE U.S. BORDER AS A SYSTEM: THE MEMBRANE, THE SURVEILLANCE AND THE HUMAN ELEMENT

In order to effectively secure the U.S. / Mexico border, it should be thought of as a system divided into three parts. A representative of the DHS will outline ways of uniting the organizational structure and breaking down each border element into compartments that work together to provide one outcome - effective border security.

* Evaluating the border as a whole system and not in parts
* Identifying the humanity aspect when working at the border

11:00 a.m.

ADVANCING ALL SITUATIONAL AND DOMAIN AWARENESS TO SUPPORT BORDER MISSIONS

Supporting border missions through situational and all domain awareness allows room to address challenges and provides understanding on how to respond in a threatening environment. Custom Border Patrol representatives will share how to appropriately notice changes across the border and respond rapidly.

* Building and sustaining situational awareness in a threat environment
* Using all domain awareness to predict future actions and threats
* Being aware of air, land and maritime border challenges and opportunities

Discussion and Report on employer discrimination against native-born workers

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Worker Discrimination: Americans Need not Apply

The Center for Immigration Studies will host a panel discussion on Thursday, October 24 at the National Press Club, focusing on employer discrimination against native-born workers. The event will be streamed on Facebook Live.

The conversation will center on the release of a new report examining real-world case studies in which the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) has sued employers for systematically favoring low-skill immigrants over native workers. After the report's author, independent policy analyst Jason Richwine, presents his findings, Peter Kirsanow, a member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, will offer comments based on the Commission's work on immigration's impact on black workers. Kevin Lynn, executive director of Progressives for Immigration Reform, will complement the discussion by highlighting similar discrimination against higher-skilled native workers.

Richwine says, "U.S. companies appear to prefer low-skill foreign-born labor over their native-born counterparts, particularly blacks, and the resulting discrimination against U.S.-born workers is neither subconscious nor subtle. If the anti-native mindset among U.S. employers is as widespread as these cases suggest, the number of American workers who suffer could be large."

When: Thursday, October 24, 2019, at 9:30 a.m.

Where: National Press Club, 529 14th St. NW, 13th Floor, Washington, D.C.

Stream: Facebook Live

Who:
Jason Richwine Ph.D., an independent public policy analyst and National Review contributor.
Peter Kirsanow, serving his third term as a member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, and a partner with a law firm specializing in labor and employment law.
Kevin Lynn, executive director of Progressives for Immigration Reform, an organization focused on the unintended consequences of immigration policies and guest worker programs that undermine working Americans.

House Democrats Want to Provide a Road Map to Know Where Soldiers on the Border Work and Sleep

A road map for Antifa and the drug cartels

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Washington, D.C. (October 28, 2019) – [excerpt from blog by Andrew R. Arthur] House Democrats who control the Armed Services Committee want to know specifically where troops who are sent to the southern border to assist U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) in its mission are deployed and where they sleep. Why? No idea. This intelligence can only be useful to the drug cartels who control vast swaths of the Mexican side of the border and to Antifa goons.

H.R.2500, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2020 (NDAA 2020) passed the House on July 12, 2019, by a vote of 220 to 197, with 16 members not voting. All of those who voted in favor of the bill were Democrats, and eight voted against. The bill itself is 1,976 pages long, but section 1044 (captioned "MODIFICATION AND TECHNICAL CORRECTION OF AUTHORITY FOR DEPLOYMENT OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES TO THE SOUTHERN LAND BORDER OF THE UNITED STATES"), about seven pages long, is the most interesting.

Among other things, that bill requires the Secretary of Defense to notify the Committees on Armed Forces of the Senate and House of Representatives 30 days in advance of any "deployment of any member of the Armed Forces or unit of the Armed Forces to the southern land border of the United States in support" of CBP. I will leave alone for the moment the constitutionality of this provision, which requires the commander in chief to provide Congress with advance notice of the movement of troops within the United States I will also leave alone for the moment the very concept that Congress in H.R. 2500 seeks to control the commander in chief in his efforts to protect the borders of the United States.

With those caveats, I want to focus on two specific provisions in section 1044 of H.R. 2500, which amend paragraph 1059(f)(1) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2016 (NDAA 2016), and in particular add subparagraphs (H) and (I).

That paragraph, as amended, itself would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Senate and House Committees on Armed Services, the House Homeland Security Committee, and the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, within 30 days of the deployment of troops at the request of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) along the southern border, and every 90 days thereafter, that includes:
