I'm fine with both versions.

If we use Louise's last version, it should be Health Care Administration, not Healthcare Administration.

WHEREAS, surgeons, patients, and hospitals need to prioritize preserving equipment and protecting patients from unnecessary exposure to COVID-19;

How does this look? It tracks the format of the Bar EO from yesterday. The Governor likes to show the chronology of getting to the need for an EO. If there is another WHEREAS clause about new guidance re: elective procedures etc that would be nice to add.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, RON DESANTIS, as Governor of Florida, by virtue of the authority vested in me by Article IV, Section (1)(a) of the Florida Constitution, Chapter 252, Florida Statutes, and all other applicable laws, promulgate the following Executive Order to take immediate effect:

Section 1. Because of the foregoing conditions, I declare a state of emergency exists in the State of Florida.

DRAFT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Section 2. I designate the Director of the Division of Emergency Management ("Director") as the State Coordinating Officer for the duration of this emergency and direct him to execute the State's Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan and other response, recovery, and mitigation plans necessary to cope with the emergency. Additionally, I designate the State Health Officer and Surgeon General as a Deputy State Coordinating Officer and State Incident Commander.

Pursuant to section 252.36(1)(a), Florida Statutes, I delegate to the State Coordinating Officer the authority to exercise those powers delineated in sections 252.36(5)-(10), Florida Statutes, which he shall exercise as needed to meet this emergency, subject to the limitations of section 252.33, Florida Statutes. In exercising the powers delegated by this Order, the State Coordinating Officer shall confer with the Governor to the fullest extent practicable. The State Coordinating Officer shall also have the authority to:

A. Seek direct assistance and enter into agreements with any and all agencies of the United States Government as may be needed to meet the emergency.

B. Designate additional Deputy State Coordinating Officers, as necessary.

C. Suspend the effect of any statute, rule, or order that would in any way prevent, hinder, or delay any mitigation, response, or recovery action necessary to cope with this emergency.

D. Enter orders as may be needed to implement any of the foregoing powers; however, the requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54(4), Florida Statutes, do not apply to any such orders issued by the State Coordinating Officer; however, no such order shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extension.

Section 3. I order the Adjutant General to activate the Florida National Guard, as needed, to deal with this emergency.

DRAFT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Section 4. I find that the special duties and responsibilities resting upon some State, regional, and local agencies and other governmental bodies in responding to the emergency may require them to suspend the application of the statutes, rules, ordinances, and orders they administer. Therefore, I issue the following authorizations:

A. Pursuant to section 252.36(1)(a), Florida Statutes, the Executive Office of the Governor may suspend all statutes and rules affecting budgeting to the extent necessary to provide budget authority for state agencies to cope with this emergency. The requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54(4), Florida Statutes, do not apply to any such suspension issued by the Executive Office of the Governor; however, no such suspension shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extension.

B. Each State agency may suspend the provisions of any regulatory statute prescribing the procedures for conduct of state business or the orders or rules of that agency, if strict compliance with the provisions of any such statute, order, or rule would in any way prevent, hinder, or delay necessary action in coping with the emergency. This includes, but is not limited to, the authority to suspend any and all statutes, rules, ordinances, or orders which affect leasing, printing, purchasing, travel, and the condition of employment and the compensation of employees. For the purposes of this Executive Order, "necessary action in coping with the emergency" means any emergency mitigation, response, or recovery action: (1) prescribed in the State Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan ("CEMP"); or (2) ordered by the State Coordinating Officer. The requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54, Florida Statutes, shall not apply to any such suspension issued by a State agency; however, no such suspension shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extensions.

C. In accordance with section 465.0275, Florida Statutes, pharmacists may dispense up to a 30-day emergency prescription refill of maintenance medication to persons who reside in an area or county covered under this Executive Order and to emergency personnel who have been activated by their state and local agency but who do not reside in an area or county covered by this Executive Order.

D. In accordance with section 252.38, Florida Statutes, each political subdivision within the State of Florida may waive the procedures and formalities otherwise required of the political subdivision by law pertaining to:

1) Performance of public work and taking whatever prudent action is necessary to ensure the health, safety, and welfare of the community;

2) Entering into contracts; however, political subdivisions are cautioned against entering into time and materials contracts without ceiling as defined by 2 CFR 200.318(j) or cost plus percentage contracts as defined by 2 CFR 200.323(d);

3) Incurring obligations;

4) Employment of permanent and temporary workers;

5) Utilization of volunteer workers;

6) Rental of equipment;

7) Acquisition and distribution, with or without compensation, of supplies, materials, and facilities; and,

8) Appropriation and expenditure of public funds.

E. All State agencies responsible for the use of State buildings and facilities may close such buildings and facilities in those portions of the State affected by this emergency, to the extent necessary to meet this emergency. I direct each State agency to report the closure of any State building or facility to the Secretary of the Department of Management Services. Under the authority contained in section 252.36, Florida Statutes, I direct each County to report the closure of any building or facility operated or maintained by the County or any political subdivision therein to the Secretary of the Department of Management Services. Furthermore, I direct the Secretary of the Department of Management Services to:

1) Maintain an accurate and up-to-date list of all such closures; and,

2) Provide that list daily to the State Coordinating Officer.

Section 5. I find that the demands placed upon the funds appropriated to the agencies of the State of Florida and to local agencies are unreasonably great and the funds currently available may be inadequate to pay the costs of coping with this emergency. In accordance with section 252.37(2), Florida Statutes, I direct that sufficient funds be made available, as needed, by transferring and expending moneys appropriated for other purposes, moneys from unappropriated surplus funds, or from the Budget Stabilization Fund.

Section 6. All State agencies entering emergency final orders or other final actions in response to this emergency shall advise the State Coordinating Officer contemporaneously or as soon as practicable.

Section 7. Medical professionals and workers, social workers, and counselors with good and valid professional licenses issued by states other than the State of Florida may render such services in Florida during this emergency for persons affected by this emergency with the condition that such services be rendered to such persons free of charge, and with the further condition that such services be rendered under the auspices of the American Red Cross or the Florida Department of Health.

Section 8. All activities taken by the Director of the Division of Emergency Management and the State Health Officer and Surgeon General with respect to this emergency before the issuance of this Executive Order are ratified. IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Florida to be affixed, at Tallahassee, this XX day of March, 20202.

Princess Cruises Announces a Voluntary and Temporary Pause of its Global Ship Operations for 60 Days

Cruise Line Remains Committed to the Health, Safety and Well-Being of Guests, Team Members and Communities Visited Globally

[12-March-2020]

SANTA CLARITA, Calif., March 12, 2020 /PRNewswire/ -- In proactive response to the unpredictable circumstances evolving from the global spread of COVID-19 and in an abundance of caution, Princess Cruises announced that it will voluntarily pause global operations of its 18 cruise ships for two months (60 days), impacting voyages departing March 12 to May 10.

"Princess Cruises is a global vacation company that serves more than 50,000 guests daily from 70 countries as part of our diverse business, and it is widely known that we have been managing the implications of COVID-19 on two continents," said Jan Swartz, president of Princess Cruises. "By taking this bold action of voluntarily pausing the operations of our ships, it is our intention to reassure our loyal guests, team members and global stakeholders of our commitment to the health, safety and well-being of all who sail with us, as well as those who do business with us, and the countries and communities we visit around the world," added Swartz.

Those currently onboard a cruise that will end in the next five days will continue to sail as expected through the end of the itinerary so that onward travel arrangements are not disrupted. Current voyages that are underway and extend beyond March 17 will be ended at the most convenient location for guests, factoring in operational requirements. Princess will do everything possible to return each guest home with the greatest amount of care possible. During this time, our operations and medical teams across the fleet will remain vigilant in their care and service for guests and crew onboard.

For those who are impacted by this business decision, Princess is offering guests the opportunity to transfer 100% of the money paid for their cancelled cruise to a future cruise of their choice. To add a bonus incentive for guests to accept this offer, the company will add an additional generous future cruise credit benefit which can be applied to the cruise fare or onboard expenses. In addition, Princess will honor this offer for those guests who had made final payment and cancelled their booking on or after February 4, 2020. The future cruise credit can be used on any voyage departing through May 1, 2022.

Princess will protect travel advisor commissions on bookings for cancelled cruises that were paid in full and for the total amount of the future cruise credits, in recognition of the critical role they play in the cruise line's business and success.

If the future cruise credit option does not work for some guests, they will be able to complete an electronic form on Princess.com to request a cash refund. Princess asks guests not to call the Reservation Call Center due to the possibility of high call volumes and the potential of long on-hold wait times due to this unprecedented action. Guests and their travel advisors will be sent communications on how to manage cancellations and desired compensation. Information and instructions for requesting a refund are available online at Princess.com

In a video posted on YouTube, Jan Swartz shares that "while this is a difficult business decision, we firmly believe it is the right one and is in alignment with our company's core values. Rest assured the long-serving and dedicated professionals at our company will make best use of this time to prepare Princess Cruises' fleet of cruise ships for a successful return to operation to serve our guests by delivering an exceptional vacation experience."

Loyal guests, employees, travel advisor partners and business partners around the world have asked what they can do support Princess Cruises and its more than 35,000 team members in these challenging times. The answer is simple – book a cruise with Princess and bring your family and friends along. The company offers over 180 itineraries to popular and exotic destinations around the globe.

Princess Cruises plans to be back in operation beginning with cruises departing May 11, 2020.

Subject: INFO NEEDED: Governor Directs Suspension of State License and Registration Renewal Requirements for 30 Days

Team –

At the Governor's press conference re: COVID-19 response this afternoon, the Governor announced he is directing all agencies to suspend the state license and registration renewal requirements for all existing professional licenses for a period of 30 days. The Governor also gave specific direction to other agencies on similar license matters that do not impact DBPR.

DS Page and DS Johnston – will you please identify through your divisions any license renewal deadline that would occur in March or April and provide those for reference in a potential agency order and related planning/communications about the suspension?

GC Treadwell – will you please coordinate with your team on a draft agency order that would incorporate this action formally under authority of EO 20-52?

Thank you.

Press Advisory – President Donald J. Trump Directs FEMA Support Under Emergency Declaration for COVID-19 (PRESIDENTIAL PROCLAMATION HERE)
The federal government continues to take aggressive and proactive steps to address the COVID-19 threat as the health and safety of the American people remain a top priority. Today, President Trump declared a nationwide emergency pursuant to Sec. 501(b) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, 42 U.S.C. 5121-5207 (the "Stafford Act"). This increases federal support to the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) in its role as the lead federal agency for the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic response. As a result of the President's decisive, unprecedented action, FEMA is directed to assist state, local, tribal, territorial governments and other eligible entities with the health and safety actions they take on behalf of the American public. Today's declaration does not make direct financial assistance available to individuals.

The emergency declaration does not change measures authorized under other federal statutes and HHS remains the lead federal agency directing the federal response to COVID-19. FEMA actions will be in support of HHS and in coordination with state, tribal and territorial governments. Eligible emergency protective measures taken at the direction or guidance of public health officials in response to this emergency, and not supported by the authorities of another federal agency, will be reimbursed strictly under the FEMA Public Assistance program. FEMA assistance will be provided at a 75 percent Federal cost share. Reimbursable activities typically include emergency protective measures such as the activation of State Emergency Operations Centers, National Guard costs, law enforcement and other measures necessary to protect public health and safety.

Presidential Message to the Congress on Declaring a National Emergency Concerning the Novel Coronavirus Disease (COVID-19) Outbreak (March 13, 2020) (PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE HERE)
"Pursuant to section 201 of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1621), I hereby report that I have exercised my authority to declare that the outbreak of coronavirus disease (COVID-19) in the United States constitutes a national emergency. This declaration invokes section 1135 of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. 1320b–5, to allow the Secretary of Health and Human Services to exercise the authority under that section to temporarily waive or modify certain requirements of the Medicare, Medicaid, and State Children's Health Insurance programs and of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act Privacy Rule throughout the duration of the public health emergency declared in response to the COVID-19 outbreak."

Memorandum on Expanding State-Approved Diagnostic Tests (FULL MEMORANDUM HERE)
"By the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America, it is hereby ordered as follows: It is the policy of the United States to take proactive measures to prepare for and respond to public health threats, including the public health emergency involving Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19), which was declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services (the "Secretary") on January 31, 2020, pursuant to section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d). Our response must include heightened coordination among Federal, State, local, and tribal agencies, and we must offer States the flexibility they need to care for their citizens. In accordance with this principle, the Food and Drug Administration, in coordination with the State of New York, allowed the State flexibility in expediting State-approved COVID-19 testing. Should additional States request flexibility to authorize laboratories within the State to develop and perform tests used to detect COVID-19, the Secretary shall take appropriate action, consistent with law, to facilitate the request."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Below, please find additional information. The White House Office of Intergovernmental Affairs (WH IGA) will continue to share pertinent information as it becomes available. Please do not hesitate to reach out to our office directly if we can be of assistance.

COVID-19: Background & Additional Information

Background

Under the leadership of President Trump and Vice President Pence, the full weight of the U.S. Government is working to protect the health and safety of the American people. Since the beginning of the outbreak, President Trump has taken unprecedented steps – including prudent travel restrictions and an early containment strategy – to protect the health of Americans in response to the coronavirus. In January, the President formed a Coronavirus Task Force, led by Vice President Mike Pence and comprised of subject-matter experts, to organize a whole-of-government response (President Donald J. Trump Has Taken Unprecedented Steps to Respond To the Coronavirus and Protect the Health and Safety of Americans). The Coronavirus Task Force and broader Administration have and will continue to work with State-Local-Tribal officials and private sector and non-profit partners in preparing for and responding to the Coronavirus. It is important to note that at this time, the risk to the average American remains low. All agencies are working aggressively to monitor this continuously evolving situation and to keep our partners and the public informed.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

FL-GOV-20-0899-A-002181

I. Background and Qualifications

1. This second supplemental declaration updates my original report, dated August 2, 2019, and my supplemental report, dated September 17, 2019, submitted in this case. My background and qualifications, in addition to my curriculum vitae and rate of pay, have been disclosed to Defendants by counsel for plaintiffs.

2. This declaration includes data from all of Florida's 67 counties. The data can be used to gauge the impact of SB7066 on the ability of persons of voting-age living in Florida who appear to be eligible to register and vote, but for legal financial obligations ("LFOs"), that is fines, fees, costs, and/or restitution assessed as part of a felony conviction, including, when possible, any civil liens stemming from those LFOs.[1] Although included in the public records request, fewer than a dozen of the 67 county clerks of court provided data on restitution and civil liens.[2]

[1] SB7066 conditions restoration of voting rights on the satisfaction of LFOs imposed "in the four corners of the sentencing document." Fla. Stat. § 98.075(2)(a). It is beyond the scope of this report to determine whether or how this limitation is applied, and the data that I have received from county clerks of court do not differentiate among outstanding LFOs, and may not include restitution or civil liens.

[2] Between June 4, 2019 and July 19, 2019, a team of researchers working in partnership with the ACLU-FL made public records request to all 67 county clerks of court for individual-level data for every person in their county, from 1980 to the present, with a felony conviction (guilty or no contest plea). Information from all available fields maintained in a county's Case Management System ("CMS") was requested, including full name, Florida Department of Corrections number, the FDLE's OBTS number, address, date of birth, gender, race, charges (offense category), convictions (prior and current convictions within the county), current

3. In formulating my opinions in this supplemental report, I utilize the same methods in my original report and supplemental reports. I draw on standard sources in political science analyses, including, but not limited to: publicly available data and reports produced by the Florida Department of Corrections ("FDC"), data from the state's county clerks of court and the association of the Florida Court of Clerks & Comptrollers ("FCCC"),[3] reports from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement ("FDLE"), and information from various state and local agencies, national public interest groups, and scholarly studies.

II. Summary of Findings

4. As I emphasized in my original report and in my supplemental reports, as far as I can determine, the State of Florida does not maintain a publicly available, unified, up-to-date, centralized database or repository that compiles information on whether an individual with a felony conviction has completed all the terms of his or her sentence, including parole, probation, or community control or supervision, or has satisfied any LFOs tied to a felony conviction, to say nothing status of supervision (parole, probation, release, etc.), any outstanding LFOs, and expected date of completion of supervision (or sentencing effective date and the length of incarceration or community supervision). Escambia, the final county to provide data, fulfilled the public records request in January 2020.

[3] Of the 67 counties, 12 clerks of court responded to the public records requests by generating their own data; each has a unique data format. In addition, 55 counties provided data through the FCCC. These counties have data files with identical formats; however, these FCCC counties employed varying rules for how they format their data. The idiosyncrasies and variance across the data files complicate the determination of the balance due of LFOs for each individual.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

of such penalties when they are converted into civil liens. As such, it is unclear to me how an individual with a felony conviction could determine his or her eligibility to register and vote under the conditions established by SB7066. Equally problematic, in my expert opinion, is that the state's 67 county Supervisors of Elections and the Florida Secretary of State cannot definitively determine if an individual with a past felony conviction has outstanding disqualifying LFOs or is eligible to register and vote in Florida under SB7066. Even if the State of Florida somehow managed to create a database of eligible persons who were convicted of a felony in Florida with precise information about all LFOs tied to a felony conviction, such a database would almost assuredly exclude those persons who have a federal felony conviction or those who have moved to Florida with an out-of-state felony conviction.

5. As in my original and supplemental reports, and as explained below, my estimates of the number of persons in Florida with felony convictions (which exclude out-of-state and federal felony convictions) who are likely permitted under SB7066 to register to vote are conservative—that is, they are biased against inflating the number of persons with felony convictions who are otherwise eligible to vote under SB7066 but for their outstanding LFOs. For example, although these data were requested, most of the counties did not provide data on restitution owed or civil liens. As a result, my calculations likely underestimate the total amount of outstanding LFOs for many individuals who owe restitution, or who have LFOs that have been converted into a civil lien.

6. Furthermore, my calculations regarding persons' LFO obligations only include persons in Florida with Florida state convictions, who have fulfilled the terms of their felony conviction (other than murder or sexual offense), including completion of incarceration and release from parole, probation, or community control or supervision. My calculations are based on data obtained from all 67 county clerks of court,[4] which I use to determine any outstanding LFOs a person who has otherwise met the conditions of a felony conviction might still owe.

7. There are certainly limits to my calculations, but they are intentionally conservative, in that they likely underestimate the number (and percentage) of individuals with felony convictions in Florida who have met all the terms of their sentence but who owe LFOs. Undoubtedly, there are likely additional individuals with past felony convictions who are eligible to have their voting rights restored in Florida but for outstanding LFOs, but I have no data from other states' criminal justice systems or the federal court system regarding the LFOs of individuals who

[4] As with my previous reports, this report does not include felons convicted in Escambia County who are in FDC's Offender Based Information System ("OBIS") database because the individual-level LFOs data received from the Escambia clerk of court did not provide the month or day of an individual's birthdate. An individual's full birthdate is needed to match a county's LFOs data to FDC's felon release data. This report, however, does include data on felons convicted in Escambia County who have been released from county control or supervision and who are not in FDC's OBIS database.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

now reside in Florida. In addition, the data obtained directly from the Florida county clerks of court are by no means immune from errors. The clerks of court data obtained from the FCCC, working on behalf of many of the county clerks of court, have multiple formats regarding a felony conviction, different conventions of recording length of sentences and LFOs, and different ranges of dates of felony convictions included in their own local databases. As I describe in my initial report, there is no unique identification number for me to definitively link individuals across various data sources across the state's 67 counties and FDC's Offender Based Information System ("OBIS").[5] I have also uncovered numerous instances of missing data, data entry errors, and inconsistent or illogical data entries in county clerks of court official data, as well as FDC's data, all of which complicate my analysis. That said, I have taken every step to make sure my calculations do not overinflate the number of individuals with felony convictions in [5] When attempting to link across big databases that lack a unique identifier, there is always a trade-off between coverage and precision. As I describe in my earlier reports, there will undoubtedly be some matching errors when linking individuals from FDC's OBIS database with individuals in the CMS databases maintained by the county clerks of court. My approach is to change all text in both databases to lowercase, removing all punctuation, concatenate a string consisting of a person's first name, last name, name suffix, date of birth, race code, and sex code. I then attempt to exactly match the concatenated strings across both datasets and across individual county datasets. Errors in any matching exercise can result from data that are temporally asynchronous across the various data sources, as well as from issues related to missing data, coding errors in the raw data, inconsistent and illogical data entries, and truncated data, all of which exist in the official administrative data I received through public records requests.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Florida, nor overinflate the number of individuals who are likely eligible to have their voting rights restored but who owe LFOs under SB7066 .

8. As in my original and supplemental reports, I provide breakdowns by race (e.g., whether someone is identified as black or white)[6] of those persons with felony convictions (other than murder or sexual offense) who have been released from FDC (as of January 2020)[7] or county control or supervision, including those who have outstanding LFOs and those who have a balance of $0.00 in LFOs.[8] I also provide information from two counties on LFOs owed by individuals released from county control or supervision who were convicted of a qualifying felony and [6] When totals are provided, individuals of other racial/ethnic categories are included in the calculations.

[7] FDOC_Jan_2020.mdb database downloaded on January 21, 2020. FDC's OBIS data are available for download at: http://www.dc.state.fl.us/pub/obis_request.html. The OBIS database is made available purportedly "to aid in the recording of the offender's day-to-day activities as well as to record historical data" (State of Florida, Auditor General, Report No. 2014-202, June 2014, Department of corrections Offender Based Information System (OBIS), "Information Technology Operational Audit," available: https://flauditor.gov/pages/pdf_files/2014-202.pdf. Unfortunately, FDC's OBIS database—at least the database that is available for public download—does not provide any information regarding LFOs. The publicly available OBIS database also does not include reliable information about persons with felony convictions who were not placed under FDC's custody, but instead were in county jail, probation, or community control or supervision.

[8] Data from all available fields maintained in a county's CMS was requested from the 67 clerks of court, including an individual's full name, FDC number, the FDLE's OBTS number, address, date of birth, gender, race, charges (offense category), convictions (prior and current convictions within the county), current status of supervision (parole, probation, release, etc.), any outstanding LFOs, and expected date of completion of supervision (or sentencing effective date and the length of incarceration or community control or supervision).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

whether they were represented by a public defender. In addition, I provide data from the FCCC's annual reports that show that county clerks of court in Florida have minimal expectation that a majority of formerly incarcerated individuals will be able to pay their assessed LFOs because they face significant economic barriers.

9. Overall, of the more than 1 million persons convicted of a qualifying felony in Florida and who have completed all terms of their sentence (including parole, probation, or community control or supervision), my estimates from across the state's 67 counties indicate that 77.4% of these individuals are not qualified to register or to vote under SB7066 due to outstanding felony-related LFOs. In other words, I estimate that slightly less than four-in-five of all persons in Florida with a felony conviction in Florida (other than murder or a sexual offense) and who have completed all terms of their sentence, are likely not qualified to register to vote under SB7066 due to outstanding felony-related LFOs. This disqualification rate of individuals with felony convictions able to regain their voting rights under SB7066 is quite consistent with my initial report, which included 373,256 individuals across 48 counties from data provided by the clerks of court and FDC, as well as my supplemental report.[9]

[9] To my knowledge, the county clerks of court are not required to have an FDC number for a person in their CMS database; it is usually only provided when a county clerk of court receives notice of a violation of probation. The CMS database does include an individual's Uniform Case Number ("UCN"), at least since January 1, 2003 after such a requirement was ordered in 1998 by the Supreme Court of Florida. Each UCN is a unique alpha/numeric string of characters that can be used to identify where a case was filed; the year in which the

III. Florida Does Not Maintain a Unified, Up-to-Date, Centralized Database or Repository of Persons with Felony Convictions and their related LFOs that is Publicly Available

10. I continue to maintain, as I wrote in my initial report, that as far as I can determine, "the State of Florida does not maintain a publicly available unified, up-to-date, centralized database or repository that compiles information on whether an individual with a felony has completed all the terms of his or her sentence, including parole, probation, or community control or supervision, or has satisfied any LFOs tied to a felony conviction, to say nothing of such penalties when they are converted into civil liens." I will not rehash here the reasoning I laid out in detail in that report, only to say that I am not aware of anything that should change my opinion on this matter.

11. Furthermore, even if an individual is able to identify all the LFOs he or she owes in one Florida county, he or she might have difficultly determining any outstanding LFOs he or she owes in another Florida county, in another state, or in the federal court system. On this point, I agree with the House sponsor of SB7066, who stated during the 2019 legislative session that "[t]here is no stakeholder in the State of Florida that can serve as a source of truth that somebody completed all terms of their sentence."[10] This is because Florida's criminal justice system is highly decentralized,[11] and as such, relevant data are "spread out all over government," making it nearly impossible for state and local officials to compile the necessary data.[12] Thus, it is exceedingly difficult, if not practically impossible, for Supervisors of Elections, the Office of the Secretary of State, or third-party organizations conducting voter registration drives—much less a citizen in Florida who has been released from control or supervision for a qualifying felony—to determine whether an individual with a qualifying felony conviction is eligible to register and vote in the state.

12. Even if such a unified, centralized database was created by a state agency or private contractor that included whether an individual had met all the obligations of his or her LFOs tied to a felony conviction, I would remain highly skeptical of its reliability. This is because the databases maintained by the county clerks of court are, at times, unreliable.

13. Perhaps a few examples from a randomly drawn county, Brevard County, suffice to show this point. Examples of data errors that exist in the CMS of the county clerk of courts abound, so my focus here on Brevard County here should be taken as illustrative of database problems existing in nearly every county, and not as an indictment of the Brevard clerk of the court.

14. My analysis indicates that nearly 15,000 individuals in Brevard County with a felony conviction were not incarcerated in Florida state prison, were adjudicated guilty and did not have that adjudication withheld, did not commit murder or a sex crime (in Brevard County or any other Florida county), have a release date prior to or on June 30, 2019, and had a sentence imposed date year of 1960 or thereafter. Of the nearly 15,000 otherwise eligible individuals released from Brevard County control or supervision (so, excluding those in FDC's database), roughly 30% owe $0.00 in LFOs. More than half of the nearly 15,000 individuals with felony convictions who have been released from Brevard County control or supervision owe more than $500.00 in LFOs. Roughly two-thirds of all those released from county control or supervision are white individuals and one-third are black individuals. Black individuals with a felony conviction who have been released from county control or supervision are nearly 9 percentage points less likely to owe $0.00 in LFOs than comparable white individuals.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

15. Within a single county clerk of court's CMS database, such as that of Brevard County, an individual may appear multiple times with different names and different birthdates, which in my opinion will make it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for Supervisors of Elections, the Office of the Secretary of State, third-party organizations conducting voter registration drives, or even an individual with a qualifying felony conviction to determine whether he or she is eligible to register and vote in Florida.

16. For example, there is a woman released from Brevard County who is listed in Brevard County's CMS database with two different spellings of her middle name. This might seem innocuous, but it is not. In one record, the county clerk of court lists that she still owes more than $200.00 in LFOs from a felony conviction in 2004; in another record, that has a different spelling of her name, she still owes over $700.00 in LFOs from a felony conviction in 2007. Same residence, same date-of-birth, but separate records. Perhaps the woman pays off the $200.00 in LFOs she thinks she owes after relying on the record that happens to have the correct spelling of her name. She then proceeds to register and vote in the county, not knowing there is a separate record because of the clerk's misspelling of her name. Has she violated the terms of SB7066?

17. Or take another example drawn from Brevard County. An individual who certainly appears to be the same person—there are separate records of an individual with exactly the same name—is listed multiple times in the county's

CMS database under two different dates-of-birth. The date-of-birth in both entries is very close—it's only off by a month, likely a scrivener's error—but in the clerk's database he is identified in two separate records, one for a felony conviction in 2017 and another for a felony conviction in 2018. The problem for this individual is that one record indicates that he owes roughly $1,000.00 in LFOs, whereas the other record indicates he owes $0.00 in LFOs. If the correct date-of-birth is contained in the record where he owes $0.00 in LFOs, he might very well register to vote and cast a ballot in the next election, even though he likely still owes $1,000.00 in LFOs, but under a record with an incorrect birth date. Upon registering, has he violated the terms of SB7066?

18. Examples are plentiful, even from just one county. There's a man listed twice in the county's CMS database, one with a "Jr." suffix in his name and the other with no suffix. Same exact date-of-birth, same race, and same address for two felony convictions, one handed down in 1996 and the other in 2013. For one, he owes $0.00 in LFOs; for the other, he owes over $3,000.00 in LFOs. Let's assume a third party group assists him in registering to vote, querying the county's database using his correct name and date-of-birth, which indicates that he owes $0.00. Has the group and the individual violated the terms of SB7066 if he registers and votes, but in actuality, still owes over $3,000.00 in LFOs?

19. These examples come from simple queries of one county's CMS database. To my knowledge, there is no centralized database in Florida that provides current information about the status of an individual's LFOs across counties, or even LFOs in a county that have been converted into civil liens. As such, county clerks of court may not even have the capacity to produce the necessary information to determine whether a person with a felony conviction is eligible to vote with regard to outstanding LFOs. If the clerks themselves are unable to provide this information, how is an individual, an advocacy group, or a Supervisor of Elections supposed to confirm if all LFOs have been paid by an individual attempting to register to vote?[13]

20. Furthermore, even if such a statewide database existed of eligible persons convicted of a qualifying felony in a Florida state court and who have been released from all control or supervision and who have paid off all their LFOs, it would most certainly not have information about persons residing in Florida who have completed all the terms of a federal or out-of-state felony sentence, much less if they have any outstanding felony-related LFOs.

[13] As I wrote in my initial report, there is every indication that several clerks of the court do not have the capacity to provide individuals accurate information about their LFOs. "Due to budget constraints," wrote a staff member from a clerk of the court in response to a public records request, "we lack the resources necessary to fulfill your request as presented," including "data on sentencing," but that "[o]n an optimistic note, much of what you requested will be available through the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in 2021 when, in cooperation with Florida's Clerks, the Legislature-mandated Criminal Justice Transparency statute is scheduled to be fully realized." IV. Over 1 Million Floridians with Felony Convictions Have Been Released from FDC or County Control/Supervision, and 77.4% Owe More Than $0.00 in Outstanding LFOs

21. Table 1 summarizes—separately for FDC and county control or supervision, and also combined—the number and percentage of the more than 1 million eligible or otherwise eligible individuals who owe $0.00 or more in outstanding LFOs, according to official records obtained by the 67 county clerks.

Consistent with the findings in my original and supplemental reports, but now extended to all 67 counties and drawing on FDC's updated January 2020 release data, Table 1 reports that 25,752 of the 232,773 (11.1%) individuals who have been released from FDC[14] control or supervision, and 200,567 of the 768,036 (26.1%) individuals with a felony conviction who were not in FDC control or supervision and who have been released from county control or supervision, have a balance of $0.00 outstanding LFOs. Taken together, then, an estimated 226,319 of the 1,000,809 (22.6%) of the individuals for whom I have data have completed payment of their LFOs. The remaining 774,490 individuals who I have identified across Florida's counties, or 77.4% of all otherwise eligible individuals who have fulfilled the terms of their felony conviction, have outstanding LFOs and are thus likely to be disenfranchised under SB7066.

V. LFOs Balance Due of Eligible Persons with Felony Convictions, FDC and County Data (and Combined), by Race

23. Consistent with my previous reports, my analysis reveals racial disparities exist across persons who have met the terms of their felony conviction but who have outstanding LFOs. Table 2 summarizes my calculations broken down by race. The rate of black individuals with a felony conviction (combined FDC and county) who are otherwise qualified to register to vote but for outstanding LFOs, is more than 8 percentage points lower than the comparable rate of white individuals. As Table 2 shows, among white individuals with a felony conviction who have been released from control or supervision and who are otherwise eligible to obtain their voting rights, 13.5% from FDC, 29.7% from county, and 26.0% overall (combined FDC and county) have a balance of LFOs of $0.00. In contrast, among black individuals with a qualifying felony conviction who have been released from control or supervision, only 8.0% from FDC, 21.0% from county, and 17.8% overall (combined FDC and county) have a balance of LFOs of $0.00.

24. To summarize: fewer than one in five (17.8%) black individuals released from control or supervision, who have a qualifying felony conviction, are eligible to register and vote under SB7066, as they still owe LFOs; in contrast, more than one in four (26.0%) white individuals released from control or supervision, who have a qualifying felony conviction, are eligible to register to vote or vote under SB7066.

individuals—who otherwise have completed all the terms of their felony convictions. The following figures are based on data received directly from the county clerks of court or on their behalf as provided by the FCCC. In keeping with this and previous reports, Table 3 includes data for individuals with felony convictions dating as far back to 1997, although most of the LFOs from the counties date back only to the early 2000s. It provides the number of persons and the amounts of LFOs owed in graduated dollar amounts, broken down by race. As the numbers in Table 3 bear out, overall, of the 774,490 individuals (released from FDC and county control/supervision) who have outstanding LFOs of any amount, 610,252 (78.8%) owe at least $500, and 458,163 (59.2%) owe more than $1,000. Also, as Table 3 reveals, among persons who owe LFOs of any amount, black individuals are more likely to owe over $500, as well as over $1,000, compared to individuals.

26. In the following section, I present separately data for eligible persons with felony convictions who are not in FDC's OBIS database and those who are in FDC's OBIS database.

VII. LFOs Balance Due of Eligible Persons with Felony Convictions who are Not in FDC's OBIS Database, by Race

27. Table 4 provides the amount of LFOs owed by 768,036 individuals with felony convictions who are not found in FDC's OBIS inmate release database. These individuals were not convicted of murder or a sex crime under SB7066, have a release date prior to June 30, 2019, and have met all the terms of the felony sentence.[15] As mentioned previously, of these individuals, roughly one in four—26.1%—have paid off their LFOs related to a felony offense.

28. Table 4 also provides the racial breakdown (black and white individuals) of those released from county control or supervision who owe LFOs in the various categories. As Table 4 reveals, only 21.0% of black individuals who have otherwise met all the terms of their felony conviction are likely to owe $0.00 in LFOs, compared to 29.7% of white individuals. In addition, black individuals are disproportionately more likely than white individuals to owe over $10,000 in LFOs. In my opinion, it is clear from Table 4 that black individuals who have otherwise met all the terms of their felony conviction at the county-level are significantly less likely to be able to gain or re-gain their voting rights under SB7066, as compared to similar white individuals, because of the amount of outstanding LFOs tied to their felony conviction.

[15] The summary information about LFOs owed by individuals with qualifying felony convictions was received either directly from the clerks or via the FCCC. Table 4 includes data on individuals who: (1) are found in one or more county's CMS database; (2) are not found in FDC's OBIS database; (3) were not convicted of murder or a sexual offense as defined by SB7066; and (4) have met the terms of their felony sentence as of June 30, 2019. Individuals whose outstanding LFOs appear to be negative are dropped.

VIII. LFOs Balance Due of Eligible Persons with Felony Convictions who are in FDC's OBIS Database, by Race

29. Finally, using the same methodology in my previous two reports which link an individual in FDC's OBIS inmate release database to that same individual in the data provided by county clerks of court, it is possible to provide estimates of the number of persons who were convicted of a felony (other than those convicted of murder or a sexual offense) in each county, who had a release date prior to January 2020, who have completed all the terms of their felony sentence under the authority of FDC, but who are not eligible to register to vote under SB7066 because they owe LFOs tied to a felony conviction.

30. Drawing on inmate release data from FDC's updated January 2020 OBIS database, merged with LFOs data drawn provided by the county clerks of court, Table 5 calculates the number of individuals are prohibited under SB7066 from registering or voting, even though they have been released from FDC control or supervision, because they have outstanding LFOs tied to a felony conviction. Table 5 also provides the racial breakdown of black and white individuals across the counties who have been released from FDC control or supervision—that is, they completed all the terms of their sentence, including parole, probation, or community control or supervision—and any outstanding LFOs tied to their felony conviction(s).

31. Overall, I calculate there to be 232,773 individuals in FDC's OBIS inmate released database, including 130,237 white individuals and 101,476 black individuals, who are qualified to re-gain their voting rights but for outstanding LFOs. These individuals were adjudicated guilty, were under the control of FDC, were not convicted of murder or a sex crime, and since 1997 were released from control or supervision. By linking these individuals to the databases provided by the clerks of court (all except Escambia),[16] it is possible to approximate the amounts of outstanding LFOs tied to a felony conviction. Table 5 breaks down by each range of estimated minimum outstanding LFOs by the race of the individual (black and white).[17] Overall, only 11.1% of these individuals— just 25,752 individuals out of the 232,773 released from FDC control or supervision—owe $0 in LFOs tied to their felony conviction. Of those who have outstanding LFOs, 73.8% owe over $500 and 57.4% owe more than $1,000.

[16] The analysis does not include felons convicted in Escambia County, as the Escambia clerk of court did not provide data that included an individual's complete birthdate, making it impossible to merge county-provided LFO data with FDC's OBIS database.

[17] As in my original and supplemental reports, matching records across FDC's October 1, 2019 OBIS database and the clerks of court data is based on an exact match between first name, last name, name suffix, date of birth, race code, and sex code. Records with missing first names are not part of the match. Individuals with a negative LFOs balance due are not included, as this would indicate (implausibly) that an individual overpaid a county clerk of court. There are over 7,400 such individuals with a negative LFO balance; the bulk (over 6,400) are found in Duval County, indicating data entry/data processing errors made by the county clerk of the court. Finally, this report assumes individuals whose name suffix in the FDOC database is either "J" or "JRR" are juniors (e.g., "Jr"). Because of data reliability concerns, individuals with county sentence imposed dates prior to 1960 are excluded from the analysis, as are individuals in FDC's OBIS release database released prior to October 1, 1997. Roughly 17.4% of individuals in FDC's OBIS inmate release database that were matched with county LFOs data were in more than one of the 66 counties and had positive LFOs in more than one county.

32. As Table 5 makes clear, only 8.0% of black individuals, compared to 13.5% of white individuals who have been released from FDC control or supervision, appear to be eligible to register and vote under SB7066 because they have paid off their LFOs. Black individuals released from FDC control or supervision are also more likely than similar white individuals to owe between $250 and $10,000 in LFOs across the counties.

33. In my opinion, it is clear from Table 5 that black individuals released from the control or supervision of FDC are significantly less likely to be able to re-gain their voting rights, as compared to comparable white individuals with felony convictions, as a result of the amount of outstanding LFOs tied to a felony conviction.

IX. LFOs and the FCCC's Annual Assessments and Collections Reports

34. In this section, I provide some additional evidence that many of the individuals LFOs remain unpaid by those who are indigent. It does not surprise me that fewer than one-in-four of the more than 1 million individuals in Florida who have been convicted of a felony and have been released from the control or supervision of FDC or county authorities are likely to be able to re-gain their voting rights because of outstanding LFOs. Indeed, all one needs to do is consult the FCCC and any "Annual Assessments and Collections Report" that it has published over the years. According to the FCCC, circuit criminal, county criminal, and juvenile court divisions use a "risk factor" methodology to assess which associated cases are likely to have a "minimal collections expectation." Such conditions include whether a "defendant was incarcerated, indigent, or had a judgment/lien case status."[18] According to the FCCC's various annual reports, "Risk factor amounts include all mandatory and discretionary fines, court costs, monetary penalties, and fees, service charges and costs." In its 2018 report, for example, the FCCC's statewide summary (page 11) for the 2017-2018 fiscal year (October 1, 2017 to September 30, 2018), calculates the total Risk Factor Impacts expected LFOs (for people who are incarcerated, indigent, or judgment/lien) to be $226,976,841, which amounts to 85.79% of the "total amount actually assessed" in fiscal year 2018. The total amount of LFOs actually assessed statewide in 2018 in the criminal courts was $264,557,647.[19] If we eliminate those individuals who were assessed LFOs but who remained incarcerated during the time period, we can calculate—according to the FCCC's 2018 report—a total of $119,041,561 in LFOs for the non-incarcerated community (that is, $264,572,609 (total LFOs assessed) minus $145,516,086 (LFOs of those still incarcerated)).

35. The FCCC also reports that $81,460,756 of LFOs assessed in 2017-2018 fall into the indigent or judgment/lien categories. If we divide $81,460,756 by $119,041,561, the FCCC's own data reveals that 68.4%, or more than two-thirds, of all LFOs assessed to non-incarcerated returning citizens in fiscal year 2018 fall into the category of "minimal collections expectation." That is, these individuals according to the FCCC are either indigent or had their LFOs converted into a civil judgment/lien, a common mechanism used in Florida by the courts when individuals are unable to pay their LFOs.

[19] This amount is calculated by totaling three figures on pages 10 and 11 of the FCCC's 2018 report: (1) the $191,959,237 in mandatory fines, court costs, and other monetary penalties; (2) the $21,019,347 in discretionary fines, court costs, and other monetary penalties; and (3) the $51,579,063 in mandatory fees, service charges, and costs.

36. My assessment of the FCCC's "Annual Assessments and Collections Report" from the other four fiscal years is that they follow a similar pattern, that is, the FCCC concedes in its own reports that it has minimal collections expectations for a supermajority of the LFOs assessed on non-incarcerated individuals on account of the fact that these individuals are unable to pay. These figures likely include individuals on probation/parole, and might include those convicted of murder or felony sex offense, but it certainly provides strong evidence of many individuals in Florida who face significant financial barriers when assessed LFOs.

37. Using the annual assessments and collections reports in Florida from 2013-2018, I find that Florida had minimal collections expectations for between 58.2% to 68.4% of all fines and fees it assessed to returning citizens outside of incarceration during this time based on inability to pay.[20]

38. The financial hardships that people with felony offenses face are reflected in the expected collections rate for felony offenses as compared to misdemeanor offenses. The collections performance standard set by the Florida

Clerks of Court Operations Corporation is only 9% for felony cases but 40% for misdemeanor cases.[21]

39. Analysis of federal government data supports the conclusions drawn from the FCCC's Annual Assessments and Collections Reports that a comparatively high percentage of persons with a past conviction will be unable to pay outstanding LFOs. Why might this be? Income is lower among people incarcerated, even before their incarceration.[22] After a conviction, there is a significant incarceration "wage penalty" estimated to range between 10–30% between those with a conviction and those without,[23] with earnings decreases in the first year following release from incarceration.[24] The unemployment rates among formerly incarcerated persons between the ages of 25-44 years old exceeds 27%—over four times that of the general public (5.8%) and greater than the total U.S.

unemployment rate during any historical period, including the Great Depression (24.9%).[25] Homelessness rates are also higher for persons formerly incarcerated, as "2% of formerly incarcerated people were homeless in 2008 (the most recent year for which data are available), a rate nearly 10 times higher than among the general public").[26] In short, it is clear from the data that individuals face significant economic barriers as a result of a conviction. As a scholar of Florida politics, it comes as little surprise to me, as the FCCC concedes in its own reports, that there is minimal expectation that a majority of formerly incarcerated individuals will be able to pay their assessed LFOs because they face significant economic barriers.

X. In the Two Counties for Which Data is Available, a Supermajority of Returning Citizens Were Afforded a Public Defender

40. In this final section, I provide some additional insight into the question of whether SB7066 is likely to deny persons with a past felony conviction access to the franchise due to indigency. Although the data that I received from the 67 clerks of court and FDC do not include specific information about the ability or inability of an individual with a qualifying felony conviction to pay outstanding LFOs, two counties (Escambia and Lake) provided information about whether an individual convicted of a qualifying felony was represented by a public defender or not. As such, it is possible to determine the amount of outstanding LFOs owed by individuals in the two counties who have a felony conviction and who have been released from control or supervision, and who were represented by a public defender, versus those who were not. It is my understanding that the standard to qualify for public defender services is governed by state law. In order to qualify to be represented by a public defender, a criminal defendant in Florida attests to his or her income and assets, which must be less that 200 percent of the federal poverty guidelines and meet other criteria. Fla. Stat. Ann § 27.52.

41. As I explain above, persons with a past conviction tend to be worse-off economically both at the time of the conviction and as a result of the conviction. Thus, I reviewed data on assignment of a public defender at the time of conviction, which would have required a finding of indigency, as a proxy for an individual lacking the financial means to pay off his or her outstanding LFOs.

42. Drawing on records provided by the Escambia County clerk of courts of individuals who were not in FDC's OBIS database, I am able to determine that 72% of the more than 18,000 individuals released from county control or supervision with a felony conviction other than murder or a sexual offense were represented by a public defender.[27]

[27] Escambia County and Lake County were the only counties among the state's 67 clerks of court that included data that documented which individuals were assigned a public defender. The data from these two counties likely understates the rate of Over 65% of all released individuals from Escambia county control or supervision with a qualifying felony conviction and who were represented by a public defender—a proxy here for indigency—owe outstanding LFOs. Over 45% of all convicted felons who were represented by a public defender in the county owe more than $500, with 15.7% owing more than $1,000 in outstanding LFOs. Black individuals (30.3%), compared to comparable white individuals (39.1%) who were represented by a public defender, are less likely to owe $0.00 in LFOs and more likely to owe between $250 and $5,000 in outstanding LFOs.

and represented by a public defender (34.7%) to owe $0.00 in LFOs, and about half as likely to owe more than $500 in LFOs.

45. It is clear from my analysis of data provided by the Escambia County clerk of court that over 60% of all individuals convicted of a felony not in the FDC OBIS system, and who were represented by a public defender owe more than $500 in LFOs.

46. Similar to the analysis for Escambia County, I am able to draw on records provided by the Lake County clerk of courts to determine that 71% of the more than 21,000 individuals released from county control or supervision with a felony conviction other than murder or a sexual offense were represented by a public defender.[28]

47. Table 8 provides a breakdown of dollar ranges of LFOs owed by all individuals, as well as black and white individuals, who were represented by a public defender in Lake County, and Table 9 does the same for those convicted of a qualifying felony and who have been released who were not represented by a public defender. Overall, less than 29% of all released individuals with a qualifying felony conviction in Lake County who were represented by a public defender have $0.00 in LFOs, and over two-thirds of all convicted felons in the county who were represented by a public defender owe more than $500, with over 55% owing more than $5,000 in outstanding LFOs. Black and white individuals represented by a public defender are quite comparable regarding both the percentage who owe $0.00 in LFOs and those across the various ranges of outstanding LFOs.

48. As Table 9 reveals, white individuals convicted of a qualifying felony, but who were not represented by a public defender in Lake County, are more likely than those convicted of a qualifying felony and represented by a public defender to owe $0.00 in LFOs, but that is not the case for black individuals.

49. As with Escambia County, my analysis of LFOs owed by individuals released from Lake County who were represented by a public defender excludes individuals in the county released from FDC control or supervision; these individuals in Lake County, and statewide more generally, are considerably more likely to have outstanding LFOs than individuals released from county control or supervision. Furthermore, among non-FDC individuals, Lake's percentage of people (either represented by a public defender or not) who owe $0.00 in LFOs is considerably higher than the statewide average of 26.3%.

50. Studies in Volusia and Lee Counties found similar results. A study of cases in Volusia County from fiscal years 2010-2014 found 69% of defendants were adjudicated indigent and 62% of all LFOs were assessed against individuals found indigent.[29] Likewise, a survey conducted by the Lee County Clerk of Court of experts in this field found that 92.3% of survey respondents indicated that inability to pay is a significant factor in the low collections rates for LFOs.[30]

XI. Conclusion

51. Despite the absence of data on out-of-state and federal convictions of persons with felony convictions living in Florida, and the inconsistent and often unreliable correctional data from various State of Florida agencies or clerks of court that are needed to establish more definitively which persons with Florida non-disqualifying felony convictions who reside in Florida might be eligible to vote, there is little doubt that the financial requirements of SB7066 will severely limit the ability of otherwise eligible Floridians with a past felony conviction to be able to register or vote. This is because there is a large share of individuals who still have outstanding LFOs originally assessed as part of their felony conviction. Due to outstanding LFOs, my analysis finds that a little more than one-in-five of the 1,000,809 individuals identified as having a felony conviction other than murder or a sexual offense, who have been released from either county or FDC control or supervision, are likely to be qualified to register to vote under SB7066. The rate of an individual released from either county or FDC control or supervision who owes $0.00 in LFOs is lower for black individuals in nearly every one of the state's 67 counties.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

52. In sum, my findings should be taken as conservative due to the limitations of available data. I do not have accurate or comprehensive data on federal or out-of-state felony convictions, and even within the Florida criminal justice systems, I do not have comprehensive or systematic data on individuals convicted of a felony who were never referred to FDC, e.g., those who served time in a county jail or under county control or supervision. This is because, to the best of my knowledge, no such database exists in the State of Florida.

53. Because of missing and unreliable data, I am unable to cross-reference whether an individual with an LFO balance of $0.00 in one county has outstanding debt from a felony conviction in all other counties, and the available data from FDC and the county clerks of court only go back as far as the 1990s. Short of calling each county clerk of court to identify, on an individual basis, LFOs owed by as many as a million people—which still may not yield results—I have not uncovered a database that allows me to determine whether LFOs have been converted into a civil lien, or to track restitution obligations not recorded or updated by the clerks of court. In addition, I do not have data to confirm that those I have identified meet other voter eligibility requirements (such as mental competence and U.S. citizenship). I would like to reserve the right to continue to supplement my declarations in light of additional facts, data, and testimony.

54. I also provide evidence from five years of Florida's own data indicating that Florida has minimal collections expectations for the majority of fines and fees it assessed to non-incarcerated individuals between 2013-2018. And I provide evidence from two counties showing that more than seven-in-ten individuals released from supervision for a felony conviction other than murder or a sex offense were represented by a public defender, and studies from two additional counties showing significant LFOs assessed against those who are indigent. Many of these individuals, who would be eligible to register to vote but for their outstanding LFOs, are unlikely to be able to pay their LFOs.

55. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed this 2nd day of March, 2020, at Alachua County, Florida.

FDOC report

Date and time of this document: 06 February, 2020 (10:41:02 America/New_York)

Purpose of this document

This report calculates statistics associated with balance owed for released felons in the Florida Division of Corrections database.

Balance owed amounts are taken from individual county clerk reports. When it appears to be necessary, balance owed amounts are conservative. In particular, for some case numbers it is not clear how to interpret repeated balance owed amounts; as such, minimum values are taken conditonal on case number. While this is conservative in terms of amounts owed, it could mean that some released felons are associated with a balance owed amount of zero yet have actual balances owed.

Data notes

- This script relies on data from the January 2020 FDOC database, available at http://www.dc.state.fl.us/pub/obis_request.html (http://www.dc.state.fl.us/pub/obis_request.html).
- Felons records that have no first name are dropped.
- Okaloosa County records with missing balances are dropped.
- The records in a county's list of felons are not exclusive of other counties. That is, if a felon has a balance due in multiple counties, this person will appear in multiple county tables.
- For FCCC counties, the amount presently due for a felon (conditional on a case number) is the difference between fields tot_amt_due and tot_amt_pd. Ignored here are the columns rest_amt_due and rest_amt_pd.
- The Duval county clerk and the Seminole County clerk may be using felon data fields in a way that is different than the rest of Florida.
- In the tables that list balance due, felons with negative balance due are dropped. Negative balances may reflect restitution payments present in a non-restitution field or data entry/data processing errors made by county clerks of the court.
- This report does not include felons convicted in Escambia County. This is because the felon-level data from the Escambia clerk of court do not include birthdates, and birthdates are used to merge county-provided data with FDOC data.
- THe FDOC database includes a name suffix field. Felons whose name suffix is either "J" or "JRR" are assumed to be juniors ("JR").

Summary of 363,941 released and free individuals

In the January 2020 FDOC database (named FDOC_Jan_2020.mdb) there are a total of 363,941 released and free individuals. These individuals are listed in the release table and are not listed in the offender or active inmate tables. Of the released and free individuals, there are 0 duplicated DCNumbers.

Of released and free felons, 1,794 have missing offenses. For these individuals, it is not possible to determine if they have committed MSC offenses. Of all felons in inmate release root table, 0 have missing race codes. Of all felons in inmate release root table, 0 have missing prison release years.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

From this point onward, the report restricts attention to individuals with release dates of 1997 or later. These individuals, broken down by race and MSC crime status, are described in the following table. For the purposes of this report, a felon has committed an MSC offence if he or she has “murder” or “homicide” in his or her adjudication charge description; the field for this is adjudicationcharge_descr. Note that attempted murder and attempted homicide are excluded based on the word “attempt” in the field adjudicationcharge_descr. In addition, an individual committed an MSC offense if he or she has the word “RAPE” or “SEX” in adjudicationcharge_descr. Lastly, an individual committed an MSC offense if he or she has“MAT SUPP OF TERR” or “BECOME WILLFUL TERR” in adjudicationcharge_descr.

Here is the number of felons who have a release year of 1997 or after, are released and free according to the FDOC, and have not committed an MSC crime. This number does not double count any felons. Each unique felon ID is counted only once: 347,745

Here is the number of felons who have a release year of 1997 or after, are released and free according to the FDOC, have not committed an MSC crime, and are matched to a county record. This number does not double count any felons, and felons who match in multiple counties are only counted once: 238,133

Results broken down by county

The following tables present balance results broken down by county and race. The felons described have a release year of 1997 or after, are matched from county files, have not committed an MSC crime, and are released and free. Note that some counties have matched felons who are neither black nor white. No negative balances are included in the tables that follow.

Summary of matched records across all counties

As noted above, matching records is based on an exact match between first name, last name, name suffix, birth date, race, and gender. The following tables describe results across the counties considered in this report. Note: a felon who committed a crime in two counties, and has balances due in two counties, is treated here as two separate individuals. Negative balances are disregarded. This table only includes felons who have a release date of 1997 or later, are released and free, did not commit an MSC crime, and matched to a county record.

Matched felon balances across multiple counties

Some matched felons have committed crimes and have balances due in multiple counties. The following table describes the free and released felons who matched from at least one county to the FDOC database and have a positive balance in each county. The table only includes felons who have a release year of 1997 or later and did not commit an MSC crime.

Individual County Reports

Date and time of this document: 16 February, 2020 (09:15:33 America/New_York)

Note on individuals described

This document describes individuals in 67 Florida counties, who satisfy the following requirements:

- Were not incarcerated in Florida state prison, to the extent that this can be determined.
- Were adjudicated guilty and did not have that adjudication withheld (assuming that a value of “W” in the data field c_action, when it exists, means adjudication withheld).
- Did not commit murder or a sex crime, based on the word “murder” or “sex” in an appropriate data field. Any felon with multiple felonies in a single county, with possibly different offense dates, is excluded from this report if any of the felon’s felonies is a murder or a sex crime.
- Have a release date prior to or on June 30, 2019 with release date calculated as sentence effective date plus time in jail plus time probation plus time community control, to the extent that a county data file contains information on these details. Release dates for “Time Served” sentences as calculated as sentence imposition dates.
- Have a zero or a positive balance due to a county office (individuals with negative balances are discarded).
- Have a least one valid sentence effective date, even if the person has a positive court balance (it is not possible to estimate release dates when no sentence effective dates are provided).
- Have a least one valid sentence length variable for a non-monetary sentence (it is not possible to estimate release dates when no sentence length information is available) or have at least one monetary sentence imposed on a valid sentence effectiveness date.
- Have a sentence imposed date year of 1960 or thereafter.

Individuals who do not satisfy the above requirements are not part of the analysis in this report.

Data issues

Some counties have idiosyncratic data issues, and these are noted below.

Issue: sentence lengths

The FCCC counties in this report describe sentence lengths in a field named sent_conf_len. This field should be six digits long (years, months, days). However, this is not always the case. In some counties (e.g., Gadsden) there are spaces in the sent_conf_len field. To deal with this, all spaces are removed from sent_conf_len. Then, any values of sent_conf_len that are fewer than six digits long are prepended with zeroes. Lastly, all data rows that have letters in sent_conf_len are dropped from the analysis.

Issue: calculating balance due

There are 12 counties that have unique formats. For these counties, balance due per felon is determined based on the idiosyncrasies of the county’s data format.

In addition, there are 55 counties whose data formats accord with the Floride Clerk of the Courts. These FCCC counties have data files with identical formats. However, it appears that the individual FCCC counties employed varying rules for how they used their data files. This variance complicates determining balance due per felon.

For the FCCC counties, the approach used here is as follows. For any crime incident, corresponding to a row or set of rows associated with a single ucn number, the incident's balance due amount is the minimum value across all of the rows' values of the difference between tot_amt_due and tot_amt_pd (total amount due minus total amount paid). This is conservative since it uses minimum values of total amount due minus total amount paid.

Issue: Lake County

Like some of the FCCC counties, the Lake County data contain multiple rows per crime incident. This, for any such incident, corresponding to a row or set of rows associated with a single OBTS number, the incident's balance due amount is the minimum value across all of the rows' values of Total_Case_Fines_Fees_Balance_Due. This is conservative since it uses minimum values of total amount due. For a Lake County felon, balance due is summed over OBTS numbers.

Issue: Brevard County

In the Brevard data, when a given crime has a value of "DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS" in jail_sentencing_agency, the crime is assumed to be one that led to a felon being incarcerated in a state facility. However, the field probation_sentencing_agency is ignored here. In some cases, this variable has a value of, "DOC STATE PROBATION." However, to maintain consistency with other counties in the report, the variable probation_sentencing_agency is not used to determine whether a given crime is associated with state-level incarceration or probation.

Issue: Miami-Dade County

The Miami-Dade felon is spread across two files. Each file is combination of case rows and charge rows. There are several notable features of the Miami-Dade files.

- Felons who have sentences that are greater in length than a year are assumed to be in the Florida state prison system.
- There is no name suffix in the Miami-Dade files. Suffixes sometimes appear in last name fields and sometimes in middle names fields.
- The files appear to contain both felony convictions and cases that did not lead to felonies. The latter are screened out by looking for the word "withheld" in a disposition field (other screens are used as well, i.e., for records associated with deceased individuals).
- The Miami-Dade files contain no information on the dates that sentences were imposed. For felons who have probation end dates, these dates are assumed to be final release dates. For felons who have sentences but no probation end dates, final release dates are assumed to be the case filed date plus a two years plus sentence (this is conservative as long as cases are resolved within two years of filing). Felons who have no probation dates and no sentence information are dropped from the analysis.

Issue: Broward

Broward County data appear in a set of Excel files.

- Amounts due that are NULL are assumed to be zero.
- Amounts owed are carried across lines in the Broward files based on case numbers. For each case number, the amount due is taken as the minimum value. This is summed by felon ID to create a conservative measure for the balanced owed per felon.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Name suffixes sometimes appear in last names and sometimes in middle name fields.
- The case disposition field is used to eliminate cases that do not appear to have resulted in felony convictions. Acquittals are dropped as are cases with disposition Nolle Prosequi.

Issue: Duval

- The Duval county clerk may be using its data fields in a way that is different than other counties in Florida.
- There are 45,718 entries in the Duval County felon data that have a tot_amt_pd field value of exactly $16380.50. The regularity in this number is puzzling. These entries are associated with 23,634 individuals.

Issue: Escambia

Escambia data appear in a set of ascii files.

- The Escambia County data have a field named DateofBirth. This field, however, only contains years, which are assumed here to be years of birth.
- The race description field RaceDescription contains a small number of erroneous entries (i.e., one entry of “HEATHER,” one entry of “DALE,” and several others).
- The field SexDescription has similar issues (e.g., nine entries of “PUBLIC DEFENDER PD” and so forth).
- The column in the Escamiba County data describing balance owed has 33 problematic entries. Seven of these consist of the words “THIRD DEGREE.” It is assumed here that the aforementioned 33 entries should be zero.
- There is not a separate name suffix field in the Escambia data. Instead, suffixes appear in middle name and last name fields.
- Amounts owed are carried across lines in the Escambia files based on uniform case numbers (UniformCaseNumber). For each such number, the amount due is taken as the minimum value across applicable rows. This is summed by felon ID to create a conservative measure for the balanced owed per felon.
- Misdemeanors are dropped using the variable ChargeLevel. When a charge has this variable set to “M” then the charge is ignored here.
- MSC status is based on the variable ProsecutorStatuteDescription
- The data have multiple fields for confinement, probation, and community controls length, e.g., “MaxConfinementYears” and “OBTSMaxConfinementYears.” OBTS fields are used here, and to be conservative release dates are computed using maximum sentence lengths as opposed to minimum lengths.
- Release dates are based on time after the date that a sentence was imposed via the field SentenceImposedDate. There appears to be no field for sentence effective date.
- Records with missing first and last names are dropped from the analysis.

Issue: Hillsborough County

The Hillsborough data do not contain a field for name suffix. Instead, name suffixes are spread across middle and last name. Visual inspection shows there are a small number of individuals whose middle name fields have “JR” elided with a name, i.e., “LEEJR.” For the purposes of this report, fields like this are not assumed to be associated with a suffix of “junior.”

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Issue: abbreviations for “junior”

Name suffixes equal to “JR” and “JRR” are assumed to connote junior. If a suffix field is “J,” this is also assumed to mean junior.

Issue: types of probation

For the purposes of this report, all types of probation (regular probation, drug offender probation, and administrative probation) are assumed to be equivalent.

Issue: individuals with felony convictions yet no post-conviction prison and no post-conviction probation

There are Florida felons in the counties analyzed in this report who were adjudicated guilty of a felony but served neither post-conviction prison time nor probation. Two such classes of felons are those who were sentenced to time served and those who served no time at all but were assessed monetary penalties. Individuals with felony convictions yet no post-conviction prison and no post-conviction probation are considered released as of the date of sentence imposition.

County reports

The tables that follow report balanced owed amount by county and race. An individual who has a balanced owed amount in more than one county will appear in each county report. Here, each instance of a felon in a county contributes one individual to “all” felons.

Plot of zero percent by county

The following plot shows the distribution by race and county of the fraction of felons who have a zero balance.

Analysis of county-level felons appearing in multiple county reports

Across the 67 counties considered in this report, there are 742,388 felons who have valid birthdates, races, and genders. Of these, 695,685 appear in exactly one county. And, 46,703 appear in multiple counties.

The following table describes the number of counties in which felons have a positive balance owed, restricting attention to felons with valid birthdates, races, and genders. The restriction to valid birthdates, races, and genders is implemented here because felons are being compared across counties.

I. Background and Qualifications

My name is Traci Burch. I am Associate Professor of Political Science at Northwestern University and Research Professor at the American Bar Foundation. I received my Ph.D. in Government and Social Policy from Harvard University in 2007.

Over the past 15 years, I have led several large, long-term quantitative and qualitative research projects on political participation in the United States, with a particular focus on the ways in which interactions with the criminal justice system can either mobilize or inhibit political participation. I am widely regarded as an expert on the intersection of criminal justice and political participation, having produced some of the first direct estimates of the voting patterns of individuals who had been convicted of felony offenses. My work in this field has been widely cited and has won several awards. In particular, my dissertation on felony disfranchisement, "Punishment and Participation: How Criminal Convictions Threaten American Democracy" won the Robert Noxon Toppan Prize for the Best Dissertation on a Subject of Political Science at Harvard in 2007. I also achieved national recognition for this work; the dissertation was also awarded the E.E. Schattschneider Award from the American Political Science Association for the best dissertation in American Government, and the William Anderson Award for the best dissertation in federalism, intergovernmental relations, and state and local politics. Several articles from this dissertation, including work evaluating voting patterns among people with felony convictions in Florida, have been published in leading peer-reviewed journals such as Political Behavior and Law and Society Review. My academic book on this matter, Trading Democracy for Justice, was published by the University of Chicago Press and also won multiple national awards from the American Political Science Association and its sections, including the Ralph J. Bunche Award for the best scholarly work that explores the phenomenon of ethnic and cultural pluralism and best book awards from the law and politics and urban politics sections.

I have testified before the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights about the collateral consequences of felony convictions. I have received several grants for my work, including a grant from the Stanford University Center on Poverty and Inequality. I also serve as co-Principal Investigator on a National Science Foundation grant that supports graduate and postdoctoral fellowships at the American Bar Foundation. I have served on Editorial Boards of several leading journals including Political Behavior and Law and Social Inquiry. Currently, I am on the Board of Overseers for the General Social Survey, a longstanding national public opinion survey run by the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

My curriculum vitae is provided in the Appendix. I am being compensated $300 per hour for work in this case, plus expenses. This is my first engagement as an expert witness.

Counsel for the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned litigation retained me to provide consultation and analysis on the impact of certain provisions of Senate Bill (SB) 7066, which was adopted by the Florida state legislature and signed into law on June 28, 2019. I have been asked to assess the burdens imposed on returning citizens[1] who seek to determine whether they have certain legal financial obligations (LFOs), as defined by SB7066, so that they may determine whether they are eligible to vote in the state of Florida. I also have been asked to assess the consistency and reliability of the information provided by Florida officials about what LFOs returning citizens may owe before registering to vote and voting.

In formulating my opinions in this report, I draw primarily on standard sources and methods in political science, including (1) a study conducted by me and my research team, under my direction and supervision, of the LFOs of a random sample of 153 Florida returning citizens; and (2) a second study of LFOs and payment procedures, which we conducted through (a) phone calls with offices

[1] This report uses the term returning citizens to refer to people with felony convictions (other than murder and sexual offense) who have completed any incarceration and community supervision and would be eligible to vote but for outstanding legal financial obligations under Florida law.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

of clerks of court and (b) reviewing and analyzing clerk online databases in all 67 of Florida's counties. In the course of conducting this research, I also rely upon – many other standard sources that include, but are not limited to, publicly available data and reports produced by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE); the state's county clerks of courts and their online databases; the Florida Department of Corrections (FDOC); and other state and local agencies, national public interest groups, and scholarly studies.

II. Summary of Opinions Offered

As I will discuss below in greater detail, my report draws on a multi-stage study examining three public sources of information about LFOs from Florida state or county agencies, which do not include information about LFOs stemming from out-of-state or federal convictions. Based on my preliminary analysis of the LFOs assessed in 760 felony cases across a random sample of 153 Florida returning citizens, the State of Florida cannot provide reliable or consistent information about what LFOs returning citizens may owe when they are otherwise eligible to register to vote and vote.

SB7066 provides that county Supervisors of Elections ("Supervisors") will look to sources including, but not limited to "a clerk of the circuit court, the Board of Executive Clemency, the Department of Corrections, the Department of Law Enforcement, or a United States Attorney's Office" in making determinations that

LFOs have or have not been satisfied. Fla. Stat. § 98.075(5). My research team and I attempted to verify criminal history and LFOs for a random sample of 153 individuals in the three public sources that contain information about LFOs assessed at sentencing for state felony convictions—reports from the FDLE, online databases of the clerks of the circuit court in several counties, and phone calls with the clerks' offices—to assess the consistency and accessibility of the information that Florida's sources are providing to the public. The goal of the research was to determine what information Florida's agencies are providing to the public and how easy or difficult it is to obtain that information. As such, I was not attempting to make a final determination of the true assessed amount for the individuals in my study. Rather, I was interested in reporting what the agencies told me and how easy or difficult it was to get these answers. With respect to accuracy, I draw my conclusions based on discrepancies in the data provided throughout these sources. Where there are discrepancies, only one (or none) of the reports can be accurate. I do not otherwise attempt to test the accuracy of the reports provided by these public sources.

I am able to draw two conclusions from my analysis of these data. First, I conclude that the state agencies we studied cannot provide consistent and reliable information with regard to the LFOs owed to the state assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document." Fla. Stat. § 98.0751(2)(a). This provision conditions voter restoration on the repayment of all LFOs contained in the "four corners of the sentencing document." I will show that we had several indicators that the data provided by at least some of these sources was not reliable. We found major discrepancies in the amounts initially assessed and still due according to information from the county clerks' offices as compared to the FDLE reports, and as between the county clerks' staff and their own online databases. These discrepancies affect almost all of the 153 individuals in our study. In fact, only five of the 153 people did not have discrepancies between the clerk online databases and the FDLE report in any of their cases. When we include calls to the clerks of court, we had difficulty reconciling the information across the FDLE report, the clerks' online data, and the information given to us by clerk staff for almost all of the 153 individuals we researched. In particular, we were able to confirm that the three sources matched for all cases for only three of the 153 people in the sample. In other words, 98% of the 153 people in our sample experienced inconsistencies across the three sources we considered for at least one, and sometimes all, of their cases.

The discrepancies are widespread. The FDLE reports conflicted with the clerks' online data in 79.6% of the cases we studied, and we could not validate the clerks' online data over the phone in 76.5% of cases. Moreover, the discrepancies are serious. We count only discrepancies that represent more than 10% of the amount owed on a case or discrepancies that stem from missing cases and data. The discrepancies result from issues such as different totals for the amounts initially assessed, a lack of correspondence between cases (e.g., we found several cases that appear in the FDLE report that we could not find in the clerks' online databases and vice versa), failures to update records (e.g., a clerk told us a debt was due even though it was listed as paid on their website), and the inability or unwillingness of clerks to answer questions over the phone. The effect of these discrepancies is that a potential registrant may pay their LFOs based on information from one source—and, therefore, believe they have satisfied their obligation to vote under SB7066; and a Supervisor, relying on another source, could conclude that the registrant has not satisfied their LFO obligations under SB7066. A potential registrant also may decline to register because they cannot conclusively determine if or how much they owe, or be in jeopardy of removal from the voter rolls because a different agency or source may indicate that they owe more money on the same case or even on a different set of cases altogether.

I also find that the state will have difficulty disaggregating initially assessed amounts from interest, fees, or other penalties that have accrued in some cases. SB7066 explicitly states that the LFOs required to be paid to register to vote "include only the amount specifically ordered by the court as part of the sentence and do not include any fines, fees, or costs that accrue after the date the obligation is ordered as a part of the sentence." Fla. Stat. § 98.0751(2)(a)(5)(c). In some cases, it is possible to make this distinction. However, in other cases, it is unclear whether the "amount due" (sometimes the only figure given online or over the phone) includes collections fees or other surcharges in addition to the obligations originally assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document." For instance, in response to phone inquiries, staff in several clerks' offices (Alachua, Nassau, Duval, Holmes, Leon, Gadsden, Osceola, and Pinellas) either would not or could not distinguish the portion of the LFO for the initial assessment from late charges and other penalties in 25 cases. While it may be possible to refer directly to sentencing documents to calculate the initial amount due, we found evidence that at least ten counties—including Holmes, Okaloosa, Gulf, Dixie, Columbia, Broward, and Pinellas—charge to access documents that could provide those initial assessed amounts.

Second, in addition to the widespread confusion that discrepancies in the assessed amounts and payments across government sources will cause, we identified several other burdensome policies at the state and county levels that will likely affect many, if not all, returning citizens who attempt to determine and pay their LFOs. These policies generally present three problems: (i) it can be impossible to pay only the amounts assessed for felony convictions at the time of sentencing and not also pay interest, collection agency fees, convenience fees, or other debt imposed after sentencing; (ii) clerks' offices lacked the expertise and capacity to help returning citizens determine their LFOs and which ones are disqualifying for voting purposes; and/or (iii) there are burdensome administrative costs associated with simply seeking access to LFO information. In fact, as a result of such policies, I conclude that the process of researching and paying LFOs is expensive, time consuming, and ultimately, discouraging for people who want to vote.

In my opinion, clerks' offices are not equipped to accept and apply payments only to amounts assessed in "the four corners of the sentencing document." SB7066's LFO payment requirements "include only the amount specifically ordered by the court as part of the sentence" and do not "include any fines, fees, or costs that accrue after the date the obligation is ordered as a part of the sentence." Fla. Stat. § 98.075(5). However, based on my examination of county online databases and Florida law, policies preventing partial payments and policies that require the payment of interest, collection agency fees, convenience fees, or other debt imposed after sentencing make it impossible for some returning citizens to pay towards only the amounts originally assessed "in the four corners of the sentencing document." In at least 25 counties,[2] policies require residents to pay amounts beyond the LFOs assessed at sentencing on their felony cases when making payments in some instances. These policies are especially strict for debts that are in collections (and the state allows counties to turn over LFOs to debt collectors after 90 days, per Florida Statute §§938.35 and 28.246). Clerks' staff in eight counties (Clay, Gilchrist, Gulf, Hardee, Charlotte, Bradford, Walton, and Lake) agreed that it is not possible to make payments only toward the originally assessed amounts and not the fees imposed after the sentence.

[2] These 25 counties are: Clay, Gilchrist, Gulf, Hardee, Charlotte, Bradford, Walton, Lake, Polk, Collier, Miami-Dade, Santa Rosa, Seminole, Escambia, Brevard, Citrus, Lee, Osceola, St. Lucie, Orange, Hernando, Manatee, St. Johns, Okaloosa, and Palm Beach.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Further, I also document that under the current policies against partial payments in at least five counties—including Brevard, Miami Dade, Lee, Okaloosa, and Palm Beach—clerks will refuse payments on debts in collections from anyone who attempts to pay only an assessed amount without the additional collections and other fees. These additional costs are not just nominal fees, as these costs may add more than 40% to the assessed amount due. In at least seven other counties (Collier, Hernando, Manatee, Orange, St. Lucie, St. Johns, and Seminole), clerks do not accept payments on debts in collections at all; the payments must go through collection agencies and are subject to the partial payment policies of the specific agency. Some counties, such as Lee, Osceola, and St. Lucie, prohibit partial payments unless the individual is enrolled in a payment plan, which means that paying a partial payment equal to just the amount assessed at sentencing is prohibited.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I also show that when county clerks do accept partial payments, policies at the local and state levels still prevent the payment of costs exclusively from "the four corners of the sentencing document." In many counties, some of the payment will be directed toward payment fees, which would leave outstanding debt. In accordance with Florida Statute §§28.246 and 28.24(26)(b-c), some counties charge either $5 per payment or a one-time $25 fee for processing partial payments for each case, including through payment plans. I found explicit mention of these fees on the online databases of Clay, Citrus, Brevard, Santa Rosa, Seminole, Escambia, and Lee counties. These fees accrue on top of other payment or processing fees such as Polk County's $14 satisfaction fee that is added to all payments or convenience fees that are added for credit card payments. As one example, in Polk County, even if a returning citizen pays the $100 assessed against her at sentencing, the clerk will not certify that the LFO is paid unless the returning citizen also pays an additional $14 satisfaction fee. Therefore, such policies ensure that only payment of all debts for felony cases—including the after-applied fees, interest, and surcharges that are assessed on top of the originally ordered amount—will practically meet SB7066's obligation because counties may divert part of a payment to satisfy these payment fees and not the amount from the four corners of the sentencing document.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

We uncovered additional burdens on determining the amount of and paying off LFOs through our research on clerks' online databases and processes and from our analysis of LFOs in 760 cases of 153 Florida returning citizens. These issues also complicated our attempts to get data on LFOs for our sample of 153 people. In addition to the discrepancies we found with respect to missing cases and differing assessed amounts, we found online databases with broken links or links to entirely different cases than the ones we selected. We sometimes found it difficult to look up cases in the online databases or by calling the clerks using case numbers from the FDLE reports because the formats were not the same. One county (Escambia) requires a certain format for case number searches on their website that sometimes do not match FDLE Uniform Case Numbers. Calling the clerks' offices can take multiple attempts and long holds. Ultimately, we were unable to get through to clerks to research 171 (of 677) cases (for 153 individuals) because no one answered the phone in some counties despite repeated attempts.[3] Other offices operate under limited business hours because of cost constraints: for instance, the Miami-Dade court of the circuit clerks' office is open only three hours per day. Some clerks refused to answer questions about cases or directed us to other agencies. We were unable to research 235 of our 677 cases (for 153 individuals) over the phone because clerks could not or would not help us.[4] Some clerks' online databases charged for access to their documents or other resources. Many county online databases do not provide clear information about which debts are in collections, or the amount of additional collections fees. During our initial round of calls to research the process of looking up LFOs, staff in eight[5] clerks' offices told us that people with felony convictions needed to file for clemency or check with the parole or probation offices to vote.

In the sections that follow, I provide more detailed data, documentation, and examples to support these conclusions. First, however, I begin by briefly reviewing the literature on LFOs that is relevant for this study. Following that discussion, I will outline my research and data collection methods.

stems from the difficulty of financing expensive criminal justice systems in the face of tight state and local budgets, especially in Florida where there is no income tax. Nationally, a majority of inmates and 84% of people sentenced to probation were also assessed a fine or fee upon conviction, and nearly 40% of people sentenced to probation were required to pay restitution upon conviction.[6] According to a Brennan Center for Justice report, in addition to restitution, Florida courts can impose nearly numerous fines and/or fees upon conviction for a crime, many of which are mandatory.[7]

The imposition of LFOs by legislatures has proceeded in many instances without any corresponding investment in the administrative capacity necessary to implement them effectively. As a result, many states lack a centralized system designed to keep track of the obligations imposed on individuals by the patchwork of institutions that impose legal debt. Florida is no exception. I was not able to find a single complete data source that could provide the information required under SB7066—that is, that would provide information about the completion of prison, probation, parole, court-ordered fines, fees, costs, and restitution.[8] Currently, aside from restitution payees who may sometimes be able to collect on their own, the administrative responsibility for these debts is fragmented across many Florida actors, including judges, county attorneys, court administrators, clerks, probation and parole officers, and prison officials, which means that fines and fees are levied and collected by different agencies without coordination. A joint report by the Bureau of Justice Assistance and the Justice Center of the Council of State Governments recommends that agencies coordinate and integrate distinct policies, procedures, and information systems to consolidate the fines, fees, and restitution owed by each individual.[9] As of the date of this report, it does not appear that Florida, however, has yet to start much less complete such integration.

The collection of legal debts by multiple agencies with limited resources makes debt collection and communication with debtors less efficient. In Florida, LFOs may be collected by the FDLE, FDOC, or the clerk of the circuit court in which the conviction occurred. Some debts may have been turned over to collection agencies as well. LFOs imposed for federal convictions and convictions in other states also are implicated by SB7066's requirements.

Accounting for this reality, SB7066 allows elections Supervisors to consult with a range of sources including but not limited to, "a clerk of the circuit court, the Board of Executive Clemency, the Department of Corrections, the Department of Law Enforcement, or a United States Attorney's Office," in making determinations about the status of LFOs associated with felony sentences. Fla. Stat. § 98.075(5). There is some indication of coordination across these sources with respect to the accuracy of information (for instance, the FDLE receives information about cases and dispositions from the county circuit court clerks through the LOGAN reporting system).[10] However, it is still an open question as to whether the public can access the data from the clerks' offices or FDLE, and if so, whether these sources would give the same information about the obligations, financial and otherwise, imposed by courts in individual cases. Moreover, there are some sources that are not available to the public, such as the Comprehensive Case Information System (CCIS).

IV. Methodology

Given the importance of the data sources enumerated in SB7066 to the election Supervisors' decisions about eligibility, it is necessary to take a closer look at these data sources to determine whether people who have exited custody and are otherwise eligible to register and vote can access and use them to get accurate information about the existence and status of their LFOs. My report draws on a multi-stage study that examines the three public sources of information about LFOs assessed for felony convictions in Florida's circuit courts, which are referenced in SB7066: (i) reports generated by the FDLE, (ii) the online databases of clerks of the court, and (iii) the staff of the clerks of the circuit courts. We do not examine data from the FDOC or Board of Executive Clemency because their LFO data are not generally accessible to the public and we are not interested in LFOs assessed for supervision; we do not examine US Attorneys' Offices because we are not looking at LFOs from federal cases. Nor do we examine data from out-of-state convictions.

Initially, my research team and I accessed the county circuit courts' online databases in all 67 counties and collected data on such factors as (a) the time, information, or other resources needed to access case dispositions, (b) whether sentencing documents were available online, (c) convenience and other fees for accessing information, documents, and making payments, (d) the availability of online payments, and (e) other payment policies.[11] We also called the clerks' offices in all 67 counties to ask questions about the process for looking up LFOs by phone. The calls were made between September 27 and November 25, 2019.

We followed up this initial cataloguing of general information by attempting to research LFOs for a random sample of 153 individuals.[12] First, we purchased [11] It is important to note that about 30 clerk websites utilized common content from a template. This template content did not provide much information about payment policies, collections fees, or other information we sought in the study.

[12] Counsel for Gruver Plaintiffs provided me with a list of 229,608 individuals who had exited supervision for felony convictions (excluding murder or sex offenses) in Florida state courts who had been assessed LFOs at the time of sentencing. We used a random number generator to produce our sample from people with addresses in Bunnell, Clearwater, Ft. Lauderdale, Gainesville, Jacksonville, Kissimmee, Pensacola, Quincy, St. Petersburg, Tallahassee, and Tampa from this list. Narrowing the sample to cities in just a few counties would allow for sufficient sample size for county-level analyses if necessary. The counties were matched in terms of presidential party vote choice, racial diversity, and population size. Our target sample size was 150 people. To estimate an error rate is to estimate a proportion. Estimating the appropriate sample size is an inexact science that requires a number of assumptions, balanced by experience and efficiency concerns. Because I was interested in both individual-level and case-level estimates, I wanted to get a sufficient number of both to make inferences. Under the assumptions that each person has, on average, three felony cases and that the true error rate in the population for individuals is 10%, we arrive at an individual level sample size minimum of 138 to be able to calculate a margin of error within +/- five percentage points at traditional levels of statistical significance and power. This sample size more than allows for the calculation of margins of error within +/- five percentage points at the case level regardless of the true error rate in the cases (minimum sample size =384 cases; assuming three cases per person gives 414 cases). Even at a 50% error rate, a sample size of 150 individuals would give confidence intervals of +/- eight percentage points at traditional levels of statistical significance and power. Since it turns out that the error rate at the individual level is 98%, the sample size of 153 individuals is more than sufficient to give estimates with a margin of error close to +/- two percentage points. Also, since I found about five cases per person in my sample, 760 cases was enough to get close to a margin of error about +/- three percentage points even at an error rate of about 20-25% for FDLE and phone comparisons on individual cases.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

public criminal background reports on those 153 individuals from the FDLE at a cost of $25 per report (including a $1 convenience fee) and recorded data on the amount assessed for court costs, fines, fees, and restitution associated with felony convictions.[13] We also recorded sentencing dates, the race, counties of conviction, and other data about the person convicted of the felony. We then attempted to verify the information from the FDLE background report first via the clerks' online databases accessible to the public, and then again via phone calls to the county clerks' offices. We searched the clerks' databases for individual cases listed in the FDLE report, and also in the conviction counties listed in the FDLE report by name and date of birth to look for felony cases that might be in the clerks' records but not in the FDLE records.

We kept track of numerous variables for both the calls and online searches. For both the database searches and the calls, researchers were trained to look for or ask about several items that would be useful for calculating the amount due on LFOs, including the amount initially assessed at sentencing for fines, fees, court costs, and restitution, the total amount of payments made, the amount still due on the initial assessed amount, any late fees or other charges that had been assessed, and the total amount due. We kept track of the financial costs associated with looking up cases. We also tracked the time it took to research cases online or the time we spent on calls for the cases. We kept notes about the outcomes of online searches and calls, such as when we or the clerks could not find cases. Finally, we also recorded qualitative information such as our impressions, direct quotations, problems we encountered, or sources of confusion. I provide detailed descriptions of any and all scripts we used for phone calls in the Appendix to this report.

The research design outlined here has several strengths. Most importantly, relying on a random sample of the population of the returning citizens who might register to vote allows me to produce an unbiased estimate of the discrepancies in LFO amounts between sources, the number of individuals affected by such discrepancies, the average investment of time and money an individual would need to make to look up cases, and other factors. We did not cherry-pick subjects based on whether they might have errors; each person in the data had an equal likelihood of being part of our analysis. The research design also allows me to assess qualitative factors related to looking up information, such as difficulty in interpreting case records or the helpfulness of clerk staff. Finally, I was able to learn about aspects of the process—including policies about making payments—that might ultimately affect whether a person could satisfy their LFOs.

It is also worth noting, however, that this methodology allowed me to identify inconsistencies in the state's information on outstanding LFOs, not the actual amount owed. Due to the nature of the process of looking up LFOs set up by the clerks' offices, especially the lack of a statewide, comprehensive, unified database of information about LFOs imposed by various entities in the state, my estimates of the LFOs owed by each person are only as reliable as the information I was able to obtain from the state and clerks of court. In fact, the point, as I will show below, is that state and local agencies often give out conflicting information about LFOs. For this reason, I do not provide estimates of the amount of LFOs owed for felony convictions.

Moreover, my estimates of the effort needed to obtain information about LFOs are conservative for several reasons. First, I do not consider convictions that take place in federal or other state courts, the addition of which involve other data sources and may incur further time and other burdens. I also do not count the significant amount of time spent looking through and discarding misdemeanor and traffic cases that often came up in public records in addition to the felony cases at issue here. We only researched cases in counties for which we had evidence that an individual might have felony convictions—typically the county of residence and all conviction counties listed in the criminal background check document we purchased from the FDLE. We found evidence that 23 people in the sample had cases in multiple counties. We did not search databases or make calls to all 67 counties for all 153 individuals in the study, as one would need to do to verify that there were not additional, outstanding LFOs in other counties that were not included in the FDLE report. As shown below, we did find some evidence that the FDLE reports are not comprehensive in that there were some cases in the clerk data that did not appear on the FDLE report, so calling counties beyond those included in the FDLE may be necessary to ensure that there are no outstanding LFOs. I also do not consider or comprehensively quantify the time or money it may take to sort out discrepancies in LFOs across sources when possible, either by contacting the clerks' offices by phone or in person, obtaining receipts or other proof of payment, or looking up sentencing documents. As a result, even with the extent of the problems I am able to document, my research still underestimates the true burden of establishing the LFOs that must be satisfied before a person can register to vote and vote.

V. Results: Financial Costs and other Barriers to Accessing Accurate and Complete Information

Navigating bureaucracies can be quite difficult and time consuming for most people, who encounter government agencies only periodically. Rational choice is one theory that is helpful for understanding individual behavior, such as whether to contact a government agency. In this context, rational choice theory posits that individuals choose to engage in or abstain from a behavior based on whether they believe the benefits they receive from engaging will outweigh the associated costs of activity.[14] Engaging with a bureaucracy is costly to the extent that researching who to contact and then visiting or calling to get information requires time and money.[15]

State and local agencies determine how much time and money an individual needs to invest to obtain information by setting the rules for accessing information—by making it freely available on the web, or by requiring forms or other steps for access. They can also set their hours and staffing to increase service and train staff to be more or less helpful. In particular, the agency experience in terms of staff knowledgeability, friendliness, and helpfulness matters a great deal. As White, Nathan, and Faller (2015) write:

> Recent scholarship, however, has shown that small changes in the costs of obtaining information about an action can significantly influence voluntary behaviors. For example, simplifying information and providing assistance in completing forms can lead to significantly higher rates of college enrollment among students from low-income families (Bettinger et al. 2012), more applications to selective colleges from high-achieving students who are eligible for scholarships (Hoxby and Turner 2013), and higher uptake of valuable tax credits among eligible tax payers (Bhargava and Manoli 2013; Saez 2009). Importantly, these experimental studies show that small information costs deter action even when substantial individual benefits are at stake.[16]

State and local government staff have a great deal of control over access to information. White, Nathan, and Faller (2015) argue that "resource-constrained bureaucrats frequently have discretion over which services are delivered and to whom; discretionary decisions made by local bureaucrats often become de facto public policy."[17]

For individuals seeking information, their ability to bear the cost of engaging with a bureaucracy is greatly affected by their resources such as time, money, education, and civic skills.[18] It is worth noting that my research team and I are all highly educated (aside from me, there are four advanced undergraduates and six people with masters' degrees all associated with major research universities on the project). We also had the benefit of sharing our collective wisdom and experience gained over (approximately two months of) time from investigating multiple cases across Florida. However, it is no secret that people with felony convictions tend to have access to fewer resources than the rest of the population even prior to their convictions. For instance, in a national sample of state prisoners, about 70% of state inmates and 40% of state probationers did not have a high school diploma—in comparison, only 18% of the general population lacked high school diplomas.[19] Only 55% of state prisoners were employed full time at the time of their arrest and only 15% reported earning more than $25,000 before their arrest.[20] Thus, our estimates of difficulties are only a floor—the general public are likely to have an even more difficult time navigating what I will show to be a very cumbersome system.

My research team and I encountered several barriers that arose during our interactions with the clerks over the phone and in the online databases that made it difficult to calculate LFOs for particular individuals. These barriers required resources such as time, money, and civic skills to navigate successfully, and even then we were sometimes unable to do so. I detail the issues we encountered below.

A. Problems Encountered During Phone Calls with Clerks' Offices

With respect to our calls to the clerks' offices, we encountered several issues that made looking up LFOs particularly burdensome. Figure 1 below summarizes the problems we encountered in our initial calls to clerks of court to document processes across all 67 counties. First, we experienced long wait times and difficulty getting someone on the line when we called some offices. For our initial call to research the lookup process in Jefferson County, for instance, our team had to call the clerk's office five times before someone answered the phone. In Palm Beach County, wait times were extraordinarily long—the recording said we were 35th in the queue and the system disconnected the calls after 30 minutes of waiting. We were disconnected several times. The Public Records center line was often busy in Escambia County. In Miami-Dade County, the clerk's office had reduced hours (including telephone hours) because of budget cuts—to 9am-12pm on Monday through Friday, times when most people are working and may be unable to call to look up their LFOs. When we called the Miami-Dade Clerk to look up cases for an individual, we were told that "they do not take calls for this matter as they are understaffed and to email or look online." We could not get a live person on the phone in Hillsborough County at times and often their automated system could not find the cases we requested. Palm Beach County also had a queue when we called to look up individual cases, and we never got through to the clerk either to look up cases or ask questions about the process. Ultimately, we were unable to look up 25% (of 677) cases over the phone because of problems getting through.

In cases where someone answered the phone, we experienced hold times longer than 10 minutes for 11 counties (including Marion, Miami-Dade, Monroe, Sarasota, Brevard, Broward, Flagler, Duval, and Hillsborough) when we called to research general information about the process of looking up LFOs. We also recorded several instances of long wait times (10 minutes or more) for information on specific cases.

Second, even when we got through to a live person, sometimes a member of the clerks' staff could not or would not provide information to us over the phone. Staff refused to help us on a number of occasions for several reasons. In our initial calls for information about the process, clerks' office staff in eight of 67 counties directed us to other offices (such as collections agencies or Parole and Probation) because they did not think they could help us because of concerns about felon voting (Hendry, Hernando, Highlands, Hamilton, Gadsden, Hardee, Calhoun, and Walton counties, as discussed in more detail below). In response to inquiries about particular cases, the clerks in at least two counties, Broward[21] and Escambia, do [21] We were told that in Broward, no information on closed cases could be provided over the phone.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

not provide information about at least some LFOs over the phone and require all requests to be made in writing. In Broward, the written requests must be made for closed cases and responses often take three to four weeks according to the clerk's office. Several other counties, including Charlotte, Pinellas, Polk, and Hillsborough, also require requests for information on older cases to be made in writing.[22] We were told that the Volusia County clerk's office, as another example, does not answer questions over the phone about cases sentenced 2013 and earlier. Occasionally, a staff member would refuse to look up LFO information for a particular individual because they had too many cases—we received this response in Duval, Hillsborough, and Pinellas counties. For instance, in Pinellas County, we were told that clerks would only look up three cases per individual at a time over the phone. Duval County also implemented a policy in which clerks would only look up three cases at a time. Broward County has a similar three-case policy as well (for open cases—closed cases require a written request). It is worth noting that 56.86% of our sample of 153 individuals had more than three felony cases, which means that most of our sample would have to call the clerks' office multiple times to look up all their cases if they had felony convictions in counties with such a policy. One research assistant could not research LFOs for six individuals in Duval County because the clerk refused to help and directed our caller to "just check the website," despite our caller discussing with the clerk that sometimes the two sources conflicted. We had other clerks direct us to use the website in lieu of talking to them as well. Overall, we were not able to look up information over the phone for 235 cases (34.7% of our sample) because clerks could not or would not help us.

[22] For this report, we are not defining what "older cases" means because it varied from county to county and there was no clear cut off date. For example, a common response would be that a case "is so old that it is not in my system."

Finally, an unexpected barrier arose during some of our initial inquiries about the process of looking up LFOs: clerks' staff in several counties gave out information that cast doubt on the ability of people with felony convictions to vote in Florida. As noted in the script used by callers appended to this report, our research team called each office saying that they wanted to help a family member figure out how much money they owed in LFOs so that the family member could register to vote.[23] (We did not state that we were calling about a relative or family member when looking up LFOs for the 153 specific individuals, just in the calls for general information.) As shown in Figure 1 below, in response to this prompt, eight of the 67 offices (11.9%) told the caller that they did not think a person with a felony conviction could vote and suggested they call the "election supervisors," "clemency board," or "parole and probation" to check. Specifically, clerks' office staff in Hendry, Hernando, Highlands, Hamilton, Gadsden, Hardee, Calhoun, and Walton counties gave such responses. For instance, in Walton County, our caller was directed to "come down to the office to get a petition for clemency through the Tallahassee office of the executive in order to be able to vote." The felony clerk in Hamilton County insisted that we call Probation and Parole about paying LFOs to vote because "all fines needed to be paid through them." The clerk in Gadsden County also told us that felons could not vote unless they apply for clemency first. There was also some confusion among the clerks' staff—the Broward clerks' office told us that there was nothing "in the book" about paying fines to vote. The Brevard County Clerk also said they had not heard about anyone paying fines to vote.

B. Problems Encountered in Online Databases

We also encountered difficulties during our attempts to look up cases for the 153 individuals in the clerks' online databases. We found several instances in which Uniform Case Numbers on the FDLE report did not match case numbers in the clerks' online databases or over the phone. We found 35 cases affected by this problem. The problem was widespread in Escambia County (which had space for too few digits for case numbers in the online database), but we also found examples of these case number discrepancies in Nassau, Osceola, Duval, Pinellas, and Polk counties. We also found at least one individual in Pinellas County where the FDLE year of birth did not match that listed in the county clerk's database, which made it difficult to look up this person's LFOs initially. Information about relatively older cases was available only sporadically in some counties. We could not find any information for cases, or could only find sporadic information for cases, online before the 1990s or early 2000s in Jackson, DeSoto, and Hillsborough counties. In other counties, such as Broward, Polk, Gadsden, and Escambia, such cases are available online but are sometimes missing information about LFOs. As I will show below, the lack of information, or incorrect information, for older cases caused many of the discrepancies between the FDLE information and clerk data that we were able to find.

There are several other barriers to getting access to the online data. On their initial page, Leon County appears to require a full application, a notarized letter, and a submission to get access to case documents. Researchers looking up cases in Duval and Marion counties had to sign up for an account to access even their public data. As shown in Figure 2 below, we could find evidence that at least ten counties (such as Holmes, Okaloosa, Gulf, Dixie, Columbia, Broward, Hamilton, Flagler, Calhoun and Pinellas) charge fees to access case records online (or to request additional information when it is not shown online, a common problem for relatively older cases). For instance, in Dixie County, the "Records Search: Court and Official" button on the home page links to myfloridacounty.com, a pay site

(but confusingly, their dropdown menu to search court records goes to their "free" court records site).[24] Sometimes, relatively older cases are not available online, but only in paper. Counties charge to fill these records requests. For instance, Gulf County charges $1 per page and $2 per certified document, $.75 for shipping, and a $3.50 service fee to access case records (and there is a $7.25 minimum). We were told to request several cases from Pinellas County, where it costs $1.00 per page ($2.00 per page for certified copies) plus a 3.5% processing fee to mail official records—and there still is no guarantee that these documents will have information about LFOs. We had to request specific case records from Holmes County at a cost of $3.00 per page. We were told by the clerk's office that looking up interest on liens in Alachua County costs $7 per lien (for the cases we were researching, we could only figure out the initial assessed amount if we knew the interest rate).[25] Overall, there were 13 cases where clerk staff had no information about a case because the cases were too old, and, as mentioned previously, some noted that they would need to do further research to answer questions about those older cases.

[25] The clerk's office had the total due and needed to know the interest rate. It was unclear why they needed the interest rate, perhaps to figure out the initial amount. But either way, it would cost $7.00 to look up the lien to get that interest rate.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Many online databases were poorly designed and confusing. For instance, several researchers had trouble looking up information using the Hillsborough County website; one researcher took 26 minutes to find the correct place to start her case searches on that county website. In Osceola County, the website is not clear that records for felony cases can be found by searching "Court Records," not "Official Records." I found several sites that did not have a search function to allow a user to quickly jump to relevant information (Baker, Nassau, and Okeechobee counties). The Calhoun County site crashed twice when we were trying to look up payment information. The Osceola County site search function did not work when we tried to access it in late December 2019.

We noticed other design flaws that made the online databases difficult to use. Often, the records searches contained no help menu or key for interpreting the returned records. These features would have been helpful for understanding abbreviations. There were many Latin legal terms and court processes in the records that would be unfamiliar to lay people. There is no consistency in what is included in the "amount due" and other aggregations. For example, sometimes collections fees or interest are included in a county's "assessed amount" calculations and sometimes they are not. I will discuss this phenomenon more fully in the sections that follow.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Figure 2: Counties that Impose Fees to Verify and Pay Legal Debt. Data from initial calls to all 67 Florida counties.

C. Problems Determining the Payment Due to Satisfy the Requirements of SB7066

To reiterate, SB7066 provides that only outstanding LFOs imposed at sentencing for felony convictions would prevent eligibility for voter registration. See Fla. Stat. §98.0751(2)(a). The statute further clarifies that fines, interest, late charges, and other debt incurred after the sentence should not disqualify a potential voter. See Fla. Stat. §98.0751(2)(a)(5.)(c.). Election Supervisors may check with several sources, including "a clerk of the circuit court, the Board of Executive Clemency, the Department of Corrections, the Department of Law Enforcement, or a United States Attorney's Office," to verify whether a person seeking to vote still owes LFOs. Fla. Stat. § 98.075(5).

A serious problem facing people who may have LFOs is the inability of state agencies to provide them with clear and consistent information about the amount that they would need to pay to satisfy SB7066's LFO requirement. As discussed in the previous sections, my research team and I examined LFOs incurred for 760 felony cases for 153 individuals using FDLE reports, clerk of the county circuit court online court records, and phone calls to the clerks of the court offices, all of which Florida identifies as sources election Supervisors may consult when determining voter eligibility. Where possible, we recorded the initial amount assessed at sentencing for court costs, fines, fees, and restitution, any information on payments made, and, where available, the amount due on the assessed amounts and the total amount due. We encountered three problems. First, because of discrepancies within and across sources or a lack of information, we often were not able to determine definitively the initially assessed LFO amount. Second, information about the payments made was sometimes unavailable or incorrect. Third, as a result of these and other issues, we often were not able to separate what was still due on LFOs imposed at sentencing from what was due on other fees imposed afterwards, making it impossible to discern the amount that needed to be paid from "the four corners of the sentencing document." I consider each issue in more detail below.

1. Inability to Discern Initial Assessed Amounts

In my opinion, it is frequently not possible to definitively determine the LFOs assessed at sentencing using FDLE reports, clerks of courts online databases, or phone calls to the clerks of courts. As I will show, in some cases, the initial LFO amount is not available through these sources. In other cases, I will show that when information about initial LFO amounts is provided, that information often conflicts with that provided by the other sources. As a result, an individual who relies on one of these sources to determine their LFOs may get different information from that provided to election Supervisors, leading to consequences like people declining to register to vote, the purging of voters from the rolls, or initiation of a criminal investigation if they have registered and/or voted in error. The fact that relying on these sources to determine and pay LFOs is no guarantee against adverse consequences could have a chilling effect on registration and voting. Put another way, the lack of reliability and contradictions in the data, in my opinion, will likely have a chilling effect on registration and voting. For the 153 individuals we researched, we were not able to verify consistency in the information across all three sources for 150 (98.04%) of them. The 95% confidence interval for this estimate ranges from 94.61% to 99.55%.[26] If the true error rate among the population in the counties we studied fell above or below this range, the probability of us getting the estimated error rate that we got from our random sample of that population purely by chance is less than 5%.

When comparing the FDLE reports to the clerks' online databases, the LFO assessments provided by the two sources are frequently not consistent with one another and it is unclear which is correct. We found that of the 153 individuals whose records we researched, the information was consistent between the county clerk online databases and the FDLE reports in all cases for only five individuals (3.27%). This means that for 96.73% of the people in our sample, the FDLE and the clerk databases provided inconsistent information for some or all of their felony cases. At the case level, of the 760 felony cases we examined across those 153 people, only 156 were consistent across the FDLE and clerk online databases (20.53%). We found discrepancies in 79.47% of cases, with a 95% confidence interval of 76.61% to 82.36%.

As Figure 3 below shows, we found four reasons for the discrepancies. The most common problem is that the FDLE had a different amount for the initial assessment than the clerk website, a problem we found in 281 of 760 cases [26] This and other confidence intervals calculated using R package "binom" by Sundar Dorai-Raj.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(36.97%).[27] We counted only differences greater than 10% of the assessment as "discrepancies," which means these discrepancies were not trivial amounts. More troubling is that we found that cases sometimes appeared in one source but not the other. We found 146 cases that were in the FDLE report that we could not find on the clerk website (19.21%). We found an additional 108 cases that were in the clerk online databases but not in the FDLE report (14.21%). Finally, we found 70 cases where the clerk had the case online, but the financial information was missing (9.21%).

[27] One likely explanation for some of these errors is that what clerks listed as "assessed amounts" often included hidden fees or other charges incurred after sentencing. Often, there was no other information on the website that would enable one to determine the initial assessment.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Figure 3: Outcomes from researching cases through FDLE reports and clerks' online databases. N=760. The chart presents results from comparing initial assessed amounts listed in FDLE reports with those listed in county clerks' online data. The category "Online but Not FDLE" refers to cases that were in the clerks' database but not listed in the FDLE report; "In FDLE Not Online" refers to cases that were in the FDLE report but could not be found in clerks' database; "Clerk has case but no info" refers to cases in which clerks found a record but the record did not have LFO information; "FDLE ≠ Online" refers to cases in which the assessed amount listed in the FDLE does not match clerks' data; and "OK" refers to cases in which there are no discrepancies between the FDLE and clerks' online data.*

We also found discrepancies between the information the clerks' staff provided over the phone and the information from the clerks' online databases. As shown in Figure 4 below, in 518 or 76.51% of our cases, we were unable to verify information we found in the FDLE report or website over the phone.[28] We found an additional 47 cases (6.94%) in which the assessed amount or other information provided over the phone did not agree with the online amounts. We found another 38 cases (5.61%) that were in the FDLE report or on the clerk website that the clerks' staff could not find over the phone. We found 14 cases that the clerk found on the phone that we could not find online or in the FDLE report (2.07%). There were 13 cases where the clerk could find a case but had no information about LFOs due, as discussed in the previous section (1.94%). The biggest problem with getting case information over the phone, as noted in the previous section, is that in many of our cases, clerks' staff either refused to look up cases we requested (235 cases or 34.71%) or we could not get through over the phone (171 cases or 25.26%). In total, we could not verify the clerks' databases against their phone responses in 76.51% of cases. The 95% confidence interval for this estimate ranges from 73.19% to 79.60%.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

[28] As of the date of this report, we have called and have not yet obtained data for 83 cases. We have data for 677 cases and thus use that number as the denominator when calculating percentages for call discrepancies.

The discrepancies stemmed from several problems with the data. First, data quality issues abound: we found several examples of conflicting and inaccurate information about initial assessed amounts in the clerk records. Across counties, clerks inconsistently included post-sentencing fines and fees (such as interest or collections fees) in their aggregations of the initial assessed amounts, such that different counties' total due calculations relate differently to the amount assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document." Also, in many counties, the aggregated amounts calculated on these websites sometimes contain information about post-sentence fines and fees and are not accurate representations of what is due on the fines imposed at sentencing. For example, Figures 5 and 6 below show two cases for an individual, who was convicted of felonies in Pinellas County. Examining these two cases, the first of which is in collections, shows how fines and fees are recorded in the "Total Financial Assessment" calculated by the Pinellas clerk of court database. In Figure 5, we see that the "Total Financial Assessment" is listed as $772.20 in case number "AAA" [the actual case number, as with cases "BBB" through "JJJ" infra, has been redacted; in each instance, the originals are on file with report author]. However, closer examination reveals that the amount assessed at sentencing was only $468. The remaining $304.20 reflects collections fees, some of which were recalled (listed as "Payments and Credits"). In contrast, Figure 6 shows that for that same individual in Pinellas County, in case “AAA”, the “Total Financial Assessment” is $800 and includes only the amount assessed at sentencing.

Similarly, Hernando County treats the "Assessed Amount" inconsistently—the collections fee is included in the total online in case number "BBB" (Figure 7) (below), but not in case number "BBB" (Figure 8) (below). As a result of these differences in what is included in balance calculations on-line, it is difficult to determine a rule across counties and sometimes within counties for how closely their total due tracks the remaining balance on fines and fees assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document."

However, the collection agency fee is not added to the assessment or the balance due. Entire record from Hernando County online database available in Appendix.

We have other indications of data issues from the clerks' staff. For example, when we called Martin County to look up information about case number "CCC", the person on the phone noticed that the restitution assessment was not in the online records and updated their database on the spot to reflect an additional $6,000 in debt. Similarly, when we called Alachua County to research LFOs for an individual, the clerk said that the "online numbers are probably wrong" and that she would research them with her supervisor and call us back (she found missing payments; that update is discussed below). The clerk in Alachua County also noted that she could not see everything for "older" cases, so she was not even sure about some of the totals she gave us for cases "DDD" and "EEE" and would call us back after she researched them further.

Clerks' staff repeatedly noted difficulties with "older" cases, which pose problems for the clerk databases. Cases from before 2005 were more likely to be missing from the clerk databases, and, as mentioned previously, we had several instances in which staff said that cases were too old to be in their system. Older cases were not available over the phone and needed to be requested in writing, often for a fee in those 13 cases where clerks had no information over the phone. Altogether, however, the error rate did not differ significantly depending on the age of the case because newer cases had different types of errors (see Table in the Appendix for more information).

Because of these discrepancies across sources and the inconsistencies within sources, sentencing documents, which we did not pull, may be a better source for determining the amount assessed at sentencing. However, in some counties as noted above, these documents can only be obtained via written request, and for a fee. These fees may become expensive, as counties charge per page to send these documents, and persons with multiple convictions would have to purchase multiple sets of sentencing documents. Most importantly, sentencing documents do not have information about payments that have been made and how those payments are applied, which, as I shall discuss in the next section, also pose problems for calculating the amount still due on the initial assessment.

2. Problems Determining How Much Was Paid on a Case

To know how much remains due on LFOs assessed at sentencing, we need some information about the payments made on the debt. Only the clerks of court, and in some cases debt collection agencies, can provide this information; if it is not in the initial sentencing document or the FDLE report. Unfortunately, however, the data quality issues that pervade the initial assessed amounts are even worse when it comes to payment data.

We found several examples of cases in which the listed payments do not add up to the payment totals listed. One typical example can be found in Pinellas, again looking at an individual's case identified as "AAA" in Figure 6, previously referenced above. The clerk's aggregated "Total Payments and Credits" column lists $303.07 paid on this case and a balance due of $496.93. But looking more closely at the record, we found $471.76 had been paid if we include all the partial payments on the case. It is unclear why only the $250 in counter payments and the $53.07 partial payment were included in the payment total aggregated by the clerk. We had difficulties calculating payments in at least five additional cases in Pinellas County. We also found discrepancies in Duval County, where clerks said money was still owed on cases that the website said had been paid in full (cases "FFF" and "GGG"). We found payment discrepancies in Marion County as well (case "HHH"). Sometimes payments had been made, but were not recorded online. We found this issue with six cases in Leon County. Regarding an individual's cases that the Alachua clerk flagged for us as potentially inaccurate referenced above, the clerk's office called us back and told us about additional payments made on two of the cases that were not reflected in the online data.

Finally, we also had questions about whether clerks gave full information about payments made through collections agencies. For instance, in the example from Hernando County shown in Figure 8 above, we can see that the clerk applied a payment of $76.92 received on the case from the collection agency. But, according to their website, Hernando County charges a 30% fee on debts in collections. Did the collection agency take its 30% fee off the top before forwarding that payment to the clerk? If so, then the person may have paid $100 ($76.92 to the clerk and $23.08, which is 30% of $76.92, to the collections agency).

3. Problems Determining How Payments are Applied

To try to figure out what is still owed on amounts assessed "in the four corners of the sentencing document," under SB7066, it is also necessary to know how payments are applied—that is, how much of each payment goes toward paying down the initial debt rather than to fees or interest. I found a few examples where this math was clear. In Hernando County, for instance, the record for case "BBB" from Figure 8 above clearly indicates that $40 of the $76.92 payment satisfied the public defender fee and the remainder was applied to the $708 felony assessment so that the remaining balance on that fee was $671.08. (However, as noted above, it is not clear whether an additional amount was paid to the collection agency). Pinellas County, for its faults that I noted, also sometimes attempts to link payments to particular assessed amounts; the records in the individual's case ("AAA") from Figure 6 above show that his payments were applied to his public defender and prosecution fees; however, there are some payments that are not counted in the total amount paid and that are not earmarked to particular debts. For most cases in which partial payments, but not full payments, have been made, it is not possible to figure out how much of the remaining debt is for the amount assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document" rather than post-sentencing fines and fees. In some cases, clerks over the phone could not differentiate outstanding balances based on whether they were assessed at sentencing or after. In 25 (of the 677) cases (3.69%), the clerks' staff could not give us an initial assessed amount and just provided the total still due.[29] Often, [29] For instance, for case "III", the clerk could only tell us the total amount due, which included interest, but could not tell us the initial amount or the interest rate.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

information online also was insufficient to disaggregate the remaining originally assessed amount (after payments) from later-applied charges. I have already noted examples in Pinellas and Hernando counties where the assessed amounts includes collections fees inconsistently; sometimes we were unable to figure out whether an assessed amount matched what was in the sentencing document or included additional fees. The online data often did not indicate how much these post-sentence fees were or even that they were imposed. Going back to the above-mentioned case involving the individual in Alachua County, the clerk told us about 10 liens based on that individuals' cases but would charge $7 per lien to look up the amount of interest that was being added to the cases. For these cases, we could not determine the remaining amount due on the amount initially assessed at sentencing without paying the lookup fee to find out the amount of interest that was being added.

In sum, based on our experiences with comparing information on LFOs that we gathered from clerks' staff, clerks' databases, and FDLE reports, I conclude that the State of Florida cannot provide consistent information about what an individual owes on the amounts initially assessed at sentencing. Moreover, acquiring any information about LFOs is burdensome in terms of time and money, and requires substantial skill, time, and practice to decipher court records and FDLE reports. We found numerous discrepancies and inconsistencies both within and across sources. We also encountered problems accessing clerk staff over the phone and finding cases online and in the FDLE reports. These problems affected 150 of 153, or 98%, of the people in our random sample. Put another way, for 150 of 153 in our random sample, we were ultimately unable to verify how much was owed of the outstanding disqualifying LFOs imposed at sentencing.

D. Prohibitions and Other Logistical Barriers to Partial Payments.

Before registering to vote and voting, SB7066 requires that citizens—who are no longer supervised in prison, on probation, or on parole for felonies—must satisfy the amount assessed "in the four corners of the sentencing document" and the law explicitly excludes "any fines, fees, or costs that accrue after the date the obligation is ordered as a part of the sentence." However, as noted in the summary, the state and county policies that govern partial payments may make it impossible for people who owe LFOs due to felony convictions to avoid paying interest, collection agency fees, convenience fees, and other debt imposed after sentencing before they can complete payment of the full four-corners amount.

We were able to determine that 51 of the 153 individuals in the study (33.33%) had at least one case that, according to the county clerk or their website, was in collections. Florida Statute §28.246 allows counties to turn over LFOs to debt collectors after 90 days past due. These agencies may add fees of up to 40% of the total amount due as payment for collecting the fee. Table 1 below provides all the information I was able to find about the collection agency fees charged in each county. Eight counties—including Gulf, Miami-Dade, Duval, Martin (before 12/2015), Polk, Leon, St. Lucie, and Volusia—charge the full 40% fee on debts in collections. An additional twelve counties—Orange, Broward, Brevard, Martin (after 12/2015), Escambia, Sarasota, Clay, Seminole, Marion, Collier, Pinellas, and Hernando—charge fees ranging from 20 to 35% of the total for debts sent to collection agencies. This additional 20-40% fee might take people by surprise because the court clerks' offices provide very little information on clerks' websites or in their online databases about the collections fee. In our searches, we could see that counties inconsistently included the collections agency fee in the total amount due, or made note of the existence and amount of collections fees only occasionally, if at all on their websites. Miami-Dade and Collier counties indicated elsewhere on their website that the total amount due from their databases did not include collections agency fees, but most counties did not provide additional information about the collections agency fees or indicate that defendants would have to submit a large additional sum to satisfy their court-ordered debt.

Orange County is quite typical. When we called to inquire about ways to pay legal debt, we were told by the court clerk's office that the collections fee was 25% plus a $25 payment fee for cases turned over to collections. According to Orange County's website, all cases not paid in full within 90 days in the absence of a payment plan, or cases with payment plans that are more than 90 days past due, get turned over to collections agencies and will be assessed 25% plus $25 to pay on top of the court-ordered amount.

A relatively common practice, cited below, prevents clerks from accepting partial payments or any payments on debts after they have been sent to collection agencies. I was able to find language on online databases in at least five counties—Brevard, Miami-Dade, Lee, Okaloosa, and Palm Beach—that stated that clerks would refuse to accept payment on debts in collections from anyone who attempts to pay just an assessed amount without including the additional collections and other fees. A typical example can be found on the Miami-Dade County website, which states, "If your case has been assigned to a collection agency, the Clerk's Office will be able to accept full payment of your outstanding financial obligation. You can contact the collection agency assigned to your case(s) directly to make partial payments as well as full payments" (http://www.miami-dadeclerk.com/courts_criminal_collections.asp. Last accessed 2/26/2020. Screenshot on file with report author.). Similarly, Okaloosa County directs that people with debts in collections "must either pay the balance in full or call Penn Credit to make arrangements to resolve the balance due" (http://www.okaloosaclerk.com/index.php/court-services/198-payments-plans. Last accessed 2/26/2020. Screenshot on file with report author.). I do not have information about the policy of the collection agencies with respect to allocating partial payments toward assessments, collections fees, or other costs. Some counties may have rules that add contingency fees to all partial payments: for instance, Brevard County does allow partial payments, but their website notes explicitly that "[p]artial payments are only accepted in amounts of $100 or greater plus the collection agency fee unless the account balance is less than $100"

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(http://www.brevardclerk.us/pay-collection-agency-debt-directly-to-clerk. Last accessed 2/26/2020. Screenshot on file with report author.) Other counties may enforce similar policies although I could not find such information on their online databases.

In practice, these policies can dramatically increase the amount a person with a felony conviction needs to pay to vote. In our data, an individual has debt from case "JJJ" that has been sent to a collections agency in Brevard County. The clerk reports an outstanding balance of $807. Based on the above policy, which requires all payments to include the 25% collections fee, this individual would need to pay at least $201.75 in additional fees to pay off this $807 debt to Brevard County (assuming there are no other fees or penalties).

In at least seven other counties, clerks do not accept payments on debts in collections at all; the payments must go through collection agencies and thus are subject to the partial payment policies of the agency. I found language to this effect on the online databases of Collier, Hernando, Manatee, Orange, St. Lucie, St. Johns, and Seminole counties, but others may enforce similar policies without explicitly mentioning them online. For instance, the Collier County website says that for debts in collections, "you must add an additional 32% service charge. You must also pay all collections agency payments directly to the Collections Agency" (https://apps.collierclerk.com/court-divisions/criminal/collection-agency-payments.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Last accessed 2/26/2020. Screenshot on file with author). Likewise, according to the Orange County Clerk website, "Once an account is turned over to a collection agency, all payments must be made through that collection agency" (https://www.myorangeclerk.com/Divisions/Criminal/Collections-Court, Last accessed 2/26/2020. Screenshot on file with author.). I noted previously regarding the Hernando County case in Figure 8 above that I was not able to determine from the record whether the collections agency took its fee before sending the payment to the county clerk. In these instances, I do not have information on collection agency payment policies and further research is needed to determine whether collection agencies will allocate payments to just amounts assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document" or whether they take a portion of all monies collected as their fee. In Seminole County, it appears that payments to the agencies must include the 25% fee as they provide, "Fines and fees referred to a Collection Agency must be paid directly to the Agency listed in the notice you received. Payment must include the Collection Agency's 25% contingency fee" (https://www.seminoleclerk.org/collection-agencies/. Last accessed 2/26/2020. Screenshot available upon request.).[30]

[30] It is worth noting that all counties participate in "Operation Green Light," which is a one-day amnesty program for paying LFOs. Operation Green Light waives collection agency fees for debts in collections, but only for debts that are paid in full, including late fees and other charges. However, Operation Green Light does not allow a person to

Other policies at the local and state levels still prevent individuals from being able to pay just the costs from "the four corners of the sentencing document" even for debts that are not in collections. First, some counties, such as Lee, Osceola, and St. Lucie, explicitly prohibit partial payments unless the individual is enrolled in a payment plan, so that individuals who are not in a payment plan cannot direct payments just to the assessed amount. For example, Osceola County's Ncourt payment portal states, "You may make a partial payment using a payment plan only if the court has approved and assigned you a plan with a beginning balance and a specified monthly payment amount" (https://www.ncourt.com/x-pressV3_2/juris/fl/flosceola/Landing_Osceola.aspx. Last accessed 2/26/2020. Screenshot available upon request.).

Second, even when county clerks do accept partial payments, in accordance with Florida Statute §28.246, counties charge fees for processing payments on a per case basis. Partial payment fees typically are charged either $5 per payment or a one-time $25 fee. I was able to find explicit mention of these fees on the online databases of Clay, Citrus, Brevard, Santa Rosa, Seminole, Escambia, and Lee counties. Most policies are similar to Santa Rosa County's policy, which states, avoid paying all post-sentence fees and interest. Some counties (Pinellas is an example) do allow people with outstanding LFOs to enter into payment plans on amnesty days, but entering the payment plan incurs a $25 fee per case. It also is worth considering the timing of this amnesty day relative to voter registration deadlines. The last event was in October 2019.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

"Partial payments are accepted w/a fee; $5 per payment or one time $25 fee" (http://www.santarosaclerk.com/court_info.html. Last accessed 2/26/2020. Screenshot available upon request.). These fees accrue on top of other payment or processing fees such as Polk County's $14 satisfaction fee or Miami-Dade County's $25 payment fee that are added to all payments. Counties also charge convenience fees, especially for credit card payments. We were able to verify these payment charges and fees for about 27 of the 67 counties (40.3%). The usual fee is 3% or 3.5% of the payment amount for online and/or phone credit card payments or , in some counties, a flat fee. Collier County charges $5 to pay online. Seminole County charges credit card payment fees ranging from 3.5% in-person to 6% over the phone. These fees are important—if an individual were to pay only the amount initially assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document," some of their payment may be directed toward these payment fees, leaving an outstanding balance on the debt that was initially assessed.

Third, as previously mentioned, under SB7066, the Florida Legislature limited the LFOs relevant for voter eligibility to "victim restitution and fines and fees ordered as part of the sentence" and provided that they "do not include fines, fees, interest, or other penalties that accrued after the sentence." However, based on my understanding, Florida Statute §28.246 allocates partial payments across fees, service charges, court costs, and fines owed to different government entities on a pro-rated basis. Several county clerks reference Florida Statute §§28.246 and 28.24(26) at various points on their online databases, especially with respect to partial payment plans and fees as I noted above (See https://www.lakecountyclerk.org/courts/payment_plans.aspx. and https://www.citrusclerk.org/242/Payment-Plan for typical examples. Last accessed 2/26/2020.)

Subsection 5 of Florida Statute §28.246 reads as follows:

> (5) When receiving partial payment of fees, service charges, court costs, and fines, clerks shall distribute funds according to the following order of priority:
>
> (a) That portion of fees, service charges, court costs, and fines to be remitted to the state for deposit into the General Revenue Fund.
>
> (b) That portion of fees, service charges, court costs, and fines required to be retained by the clerk of the court or deposited into the Clerks of the Court Trust Fund within the Department of Revenue.
>
> (c) That portion of fees, service charges, court costs, and fines payable to state trust funds, allocated on a pro rata basis among the various authorized funds if the total collection amount is insufficient to fully fund all such funds as provided by law.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(d) That portion of fees, service charges, court costs, and fines payable to counties, municipalities, or other local entities, allocated on a pro rata basis among the various authorized recipients if the total collection amount is insufficient to fully fund all such recipients as provided by law.

It is worth researching further whether, in practice, clerks allocate payments on a pro rata bases among the various authorized recipients in line with the requirements listed above, as well as whether this policy can be construed to allow payments of just fines and fees imposed at sentencing.

Further evidence supports my contention that clerks are not set up to apply payments only to amounts assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document." As part of the initial calls to all 67 county clerks' offices, we asked the clerks' office staff whether it would be possible to direct payments just to satisfy originally assessed amounts rather than fees or other charges. Staff in 8 counties—Clay, Gilchrist, Gulf, Hardee, Charlotte, Bradford, Walton, and Lake—said this was not possible. Staff in 33 other counties said they did not know if it was possible to direct payments to satisfy originally assessed amounts.[31] Only 8 counties indicated that it may be possible to pay just the assessed amounts in some circumstances (Hillsborough, Holmes, Indian River, Jackson, Jefferson, Lafayette, Lee, and Liberty).

To summarize these findings, several policies at the county and state levels combine to make paying just the amounts "assessed in the four corners of the sentencing document" for a felony conviction impossible for many people. County clerks and collection agencies require the payment of collections agency fees ranging from 20-40% of the amount due and charge satisfaction fees, payment fees, partial payment fees, and convenience fees to accept payments. Often, counties are not able to direct payments toward fees "assessed in the four corners of the sentencing document" rather than late fees, interest, or other penalties. Clerks' office staff made this point explicitly to the research team in eight counties over the phone, and other counties may have similar policies. As a result of the county-level policies, based on language that I could find on their online databases or through calls to their offices, some or all individuals in at least the following 25 counties would be forced to pay more than just the amount assessed in the four corners of the sentencing document to satisfy the requirements of SB7066, especially if their payments were more than 90 days past due: Clay, Gilchrist, Gulf, Hardee, Charlotte, Bradford, Walton, Lake, Polk, Collier, Miami-Dade, Santa Rosa, Seminole, Escambia, Brevard, Citrus, Lee, Osceola, St. Lucie, Orange, Hernando, Manatee, St. Johns, Okaloosa, and Palm Beach.

VI. Conclusion

For the reasons I set out above, I conclude that researching the amount owed for LFOs in Florida is a time consuming, expensive, and burdensome endeavor and, notwithstanding, still may lead to inconclusive answers and inconsistent information about the amount of LFOs owed. In this report, I provide numerous examples of the difficulties that we encountered when trying to research LFOs for a random sample of 153 individuals across 760 cases, including: an inability to get through to clerks' offices even after multiple calls; long wait times in seeking to contact clerks' offices; website issues including glitches and incomplete or missing information; and clerks who refused to help us or, when they did, lacked complete information. As I have shown, sometimes cases required written requests or additional payments to get information. I have provided abundant evidence that court records may be confusing even to researchers with advanced degrees because the records can provide contradictory or incomplete information.

I also conclude that expending the effort to research LFOs through the sources listed in SB7066 is unlikely to provide reliable information about the LFOs an individual would need to pay to satisfy the debts imposed "in the four corners of the sentencing document." I have documented widespread discrepancies between the FDLE reports and the clerks' online databases, and even between the clerks' online databases and their own staff's information. We were unable to match the FDLE records to the clerks' online data for 96.73% of our 153 sampled individuals. We found discrepancies between the clerks' online data and their responses over the phone for 16.54% of the 677 cases we attempted to call and could not verify the online information due to unanswered phone calls or clerks' refusal to help us in an additional 59.99% of cases. We found payments that did not add up and missing cases. Sometimes, even the clerks' staff questioned the reliability of their own data, such as in Alachua County when a clerk thought the records needed additional research. Clerks staff also complained about lack of time to complete these requests, such as the Miami-Dade Deputy Clerk who said they were "understaffed."

Finally, despite language in SB 7066 that excludes debt imposed after sentencing such as interest or late fees, I found evidence that in many counties, it is nearly impossible to pay only debts imposed at sentencing due to policies governing partial payments, payment fees, and collection fees. I highlighted several counties that do not accept partial payments on certain debts. I discussed how other counties impose payment fees and collections fees and will direct portions of payments to those other obligations. Eight counties told us over the phone that they could not direct payments just to pay down initial imposed amounts. As a result, I was able to identify at least 25 counties with policies that could require at least some of the people trying to pay LFOs to pay more than just the amount assessed in the "four corners of the sentencing document" to satisfy their obligation under SB7066.

LFO Lookup Call Script for Cases for Specific Individuals

Call the county court clerk in the conviction county for the case(s) for the individuals listed in the FDLE to request the following:

"Hi, I'm calling to find out how much someone owes for felony convictions. I want to know how much was originally assessed in fines and fees or restitution and whether they've been paid." Make sure it's clear that you're only interested in FELONY convictions.

IF THEY ASK YOU WHO YOU ARE, SAY "I'm a student doing some research on fines and fees." If they say they can't release information to you say, "Yes you can, this is a matter of public record."

If they give you totals, ask, "Can you please break down these totals for me?" and then use the following prompts:

--"Is that just for the assessed amount?"

--"How much was it originally?"

--"Was there any victim restitution?"

--IF YES: "Have they paid any of that?"

--"Have any payments been made?"

--IF YES: "What's the total of the payments?"

--"Can you tell me anything about late fees or interest or other things that would also need to be paid?"

--"Is it in collections?"

IF they ask for an email follow up to look up all this information, make a note and send the email. Consult with me if you need help writing it.

Also, record the time of the phone call and any other notes about holds, unusual information as noted in the excel sheet using the worksheet below.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I. Purpose and Organization of This Report

1. I have been asked by the plaintiffs in Jones v. DeSantis to examine evidence related to the question of whether the bill that the Florida Legislature passed in May 2019 in response to Amendment 4, the Voter Restoration Amendment (hereinafter referred to by its legislative designation as "S.B. 7066") was adopted with a racially discriminatory purpose and to summarize that evidence. To do so, I have reviewed the sorts of sources conventionally used by historians in such inquiries: legislative records, depositions, scholarly papers and books, unpublished reports related to the issues in the case, and newspaper and other reports of the activities and expressions of participants in the debates over the issues, not only in 2019, but in previous years. If other materials become available in the course of discovery, I will either include them in a revised form of this paper or write a supplementary report. As is conventional in academic papers, I will phrase the inquiry as a hypothesis to be tested and offer my judgment as to the weight of the evidence.

2. Because the evidence I will present is plentiful and covers more than the few months of the legislative session, it will be useful to outline the report and to include a table of contents for easy reference. I will begin by introducing my qualifications. To introduce the reader to the evidence and arguments of this report, I will next include an overview of the evidence to be presented more extensively in Sections IV-VII of the paper. This is followed by a sketch of ten "intent factors," drawn from federal court cases and my experience as an expert in litigation and scholarship in analyzing discriminatory intent. The central case in the analysis of intent in civil rights cases, Village of Arlington Heights v. Metropolitan Housing Development Corp., 429 U.S. 252 (1977), guides my review of the intent factors. I then offer a brief discussion of the sorts of sources that I have examined for this report and whether they are conventionally employed by historians in their scholarly and expert witness work, followed by a relatively brief summary of the evidence. Next, I will turn to a more intensive and detailed examination of the evidence, which will form the core of the report. I will then, much less extensively, reorganize that evidence under ten rubrics, drawn largely from federal court opinions, that are relevant to the larger question of determining the intent of S.B. 7066.

II. Credentials

3. I am a professor of history and social science at the California Institute of Technology. Educated at Princeton and Yale, I have been a visiting professor at Michigan, Harvard, Claremont, and the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. In 1984-85, I was Harmsworth Professor of American History at Oxford. As my curriculum vitae, attached as an appendix shows, I have published three books and edited another, in addition to 47 scholarly articles, 86 book reviews, and 27 entries in reference works. I have given 80 talks at universities and 50 at scholarly conventions. My work has focused on minority voting rights, educational discrimination, race relations, the legal history of all of the foregoing subjects, political history, and quantitative methods. I was editor of the journal Historical Methods, which specializes in interdisciplinary and quantitative history, from 2000 through 2012. My doctoral dissertation and first book, The Shaping of Southern Politics: Suffrage Restriction and the Establishment of the One-Party South, 1880-1910 (1974), was the first comprehensive study of the subject. Termed "the definitive monograph on the establishment of the one-party system in the postwar South" by the late David Donald of Harvard, and more recently, in the Harvard Law Review, as "still magisterial,"[1] Shaping concerned the connection between party politics and the disfranchisement of black and poor white people in the late 19th and early 20th century South. My 1999 book, Colorblind Injustice: Minority Voting Rights and the Undoing of the Second Reconstruction, was co-winner of the annual Lillian Smith Award of the Southern Regional Council for the best book on the South and co-winner of the annual Ralph J. Bunche Award of the American Political Science Association for the best scholarly work in political science which explores the phenomenon of ethnic and cultural pluralism. One of my most recent articles, "The Strange, Ironic Career of Section Five of the Voting Rights Act, 1965-2007," published in the Texas Law Review, is the first comprehensive history of the Voting Rights Act's first 42 years. Another, "Do the Facts of Voting Rights Support Chief Justice Roberts's Opinion in Shelby County?" introduced the largest data base of voting rights cases and administrative actions yet compiled, covering the U.S. from 1957 through 2006. It has now been extended through 2019.

Among my forthcoming articles is a 9000-word entry on "Voting Rights" for the Oxford Handbook of American Political History.

4. I am being compensated at $400 per hour for my work on this case. My compensation is not contingent on or affected by the substance of my opinions or the outcome of this case.

5. I have previously testified or consulted in 37 federal voting rights or redistricting cases and 18 state cases (in Alaska and California). The first case I testified in (by deposition) concerned the disfranchisement of former felons in Alabama.[2] I also testified by deposition in a felon disfranchisement case in Washington State.[3] Many cases in which I testified, such as the key case of City of Mobile v. Bolden,[4] concerned whether at-large systems of voting were adopted or maintained with a racially discriminatory intent or whether they had discriminatory effects. Others, such as Garza v. County of Los Angeles Board of Supervisors,[5] involved questions of "racial gerrymandering." In some cases, such as the 2003 Texas "re-redistricting" case, LULAC v. Perry,[6] the sources of my testimony were primarily qualitative. In others, such as the 2002 California state redistricting case, Cano v. Davis,[7] the sources of my testimony were primarily quantitative. My most recent testimony includes the Section 2[8] and Section 5[9] of the Voting Rights Act Texas redistricting cases and the 2012 Texas voter identification case,[10] the 2014 North Carolina photo identification and election law case,[11] and an at-large elections case in Santa Monica, California that involved both California Voting Rights Act and intent contentions.[12] I testified about both the intent and the effect of the laws in both the Texas voter ID case and the North Carolina election law case. III. Summary

A. An Overview of the Intent of the Florida Legislature

7. Sections IV-VII of this report lay out the evidence in considerable detail. I begin by examining whether Amendment 4 compelled the legislature to adopt exactly the restrictions on the vote for returning citizens set out in S.B. 7066 – no more, no less, and as finally adopted. Several legislators, particularly the central framer of S.B. 7066, Rep. James Grant (R-Tampa), claimed that the legislature had no discretion whatsoever, that he was a mere instrument of the will of the voters. I refer to this contention as the "faithful steward" assertion. If incontrovertible, it offers a perfect defense against charges that S.B. 7066 was adopted with a racial or any other intent. But perfection comes at a price. If there was any evidence that casts doubt on the exact congruence between Amendment 4 and S.B. 7066, [12] Pico Neighborhood Assn. v. City of Santa Monica, BC616804 (Superior Court, Los Angeles County, 2019), under appeal.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

then the legislature had discretion, and the reasons for the choices that it made, and the foreseeable effects of those choices are worth analyzing. The choices might possibly support a contention that the law was adopted with a racial intent. While it is true that the Florida Supreme Court has recently issued an advisory opinion ruling that Amendment 4 contemplated "all terms of sentence" to include fines, fees, costs, and restitution, that opinion came long after the legislative session; the issue, as shown below, was much less settled during that session; and there were crucial questions, such as how to treat legal financial obligations (hereinafter LFOs) that had been converted to civil liens, that the Supreme Court's opinion did not address.[13]

8. To be completely fair to the faithful steward assertion, I begin by laying out the evidence relied on by the proponents of S.B. 7066, and the bills that preceded it, S.B. 7086 and H.B. 7089. In particular, I review statements made by a representative of the Florida Rights Restoration Coalition, Jon Mills, before the Florida Supreme Court in 2017 when that court considered only whether the proposed amendment's ballot language violated the single subject rule and the purposes of the amendment were clear.

9. I then turn to inconsistencies in statements by some of the proponents of Amendment 4 during the campaign for its adoption. They did not consistently use the same definition of the completion of a sentence, which undercuts contentions that the meaning of Amendment 4 was entirely clear.

10. I next review discussions and the final report of the Financial Impact Estimating Conference (hereinafter FIEC), an official body composed of state civil servants, several drawn from agencies closely connected with the Florida Legislature, which is tasked with examining the financial consequences for state and local governmental bodies of any state ballot proposition. Their videotaped discussions and final, public report explicitly stated that the definition of completion of a sentence in Amendment 4 was unclear, which was very important for their purposes, because the fiscal consequences for various departments of state and local government might differ considerably depending on how "completion of a sentence" was defined. This report was available to the legislature in 2016—two years before Amendment 4 was voted on.

11. Ten of the state's major newspapers provide the most comprehensive data source available for determining what the state's voters thought a "sentence" meant. The defendants in this case looked to statements in the State Supreme Court judicial hearing, a newspaper article, a television program, and two press releases. But they cherry-picked the evidence. I searched for "felon voting" in archives containing those ten major newspapers from Oct. 1, 2018 through Nov. 7, 2018 (the day after the election). I found 55 news articles, editorials, or op-eds. Only two of them clearly defined a "sentence" as referring to restitution, fines, and fees. Twenty articles treated a "sentence" as something that ended when one completed a prison term or parole and probation. Five articles that mentioned restitution considered a "sentence" a prison term, while nine that mentioned restitution were not clear about the definition of a sentence; but none of those fourteen articles included fines, fees, or costs in their descriptions. Nineteen articles were ambiguous, not referring to any LFOs, but also not definitively implying that a sentence constituted only prison time. The conclusion is that what newspapers told the voters about the meaning of a "sentence" was inexact, not the absolutely certain definition that the faithful steward assertion requires. In fact, only two of 55 mentions of a "sentence" in newspaper discussions of Amendment 4 track the terms of S.B. 7066.

12. Nor did the legislators act as if they believed that the definition of a sentence in Amendment 4 was "crystal clear," as Rep. Grant often put it. At first, even House Speaker Jose Oliva (R-Miami Lakes) seemed unsure what Amendment 4 meant, and Rep. Byron Donalds (R-Naples) told a newspaper that "Completion of sentence is all over the map." Rep. Grant's initial bill required payment not only of all LFOs set out in a person's original sentence, but all of the later expenses imposed in prison or as part of probation or tacked on by collection agencies. Until a day or so before the legislative session ended, Sen. Brandes's bill allowed returning citizens to vote if their LFOs had been converted to civil liens, but the House forced him to drop that provision from the final bill. Throughout the legislative session, then, the sponsors and proponents of what became S.B. 7066 acted as if they had considerable discretion in framing the terms of a bill to implement Amendment 4– i.e., as if they were considerably more than mere faithful stewards.

13. The sponsors and proponents of Amendment 4 believed that it was self-executing. When it became clear that the Republican-dominated legislature was going to pass some sort of implementing law, the Amendment 4 sponsors and several Democratic leaders in the legislature reluctantly worked with the proponents of the implementing legislation, particularly Sen. Brandes, to attempt to mitigate the impact of any such legislation. But Sen. Brandes and, to a much greater extent, the Amendment 4 sponsors, expressed disappointment with the final bill, which they thought continued the felon disfranchisement regime.

14. Despite the fact that Rep. Grant claimed to be "dumbfounded" by charges that his bill was a racially discriminatory poll tax, his hometown newspaper had announced, three days before the November 2018 election, in a banner, front-page headline, that, "Amendment 4 would restore felons, disproportionately black and Democrat, to the rolls." Rep. Grant's repeated brusque dismissals of such charges should be taken not as evidence of their inaccuracy, but of the opposite.

15. The history of executive clemency in Florida from 1975 through 2018 suggests why Amendment 4 was proposed and strengthens the argument that felon disfranchisement was always connected to racial issues. Under Democratic governors Reubin Askew and Bob Graham from 1975 through 1987, returning citizens had their civil rights restored automatically when they finished probation and parole. There was a marked decline in the number of instances of executive clemency in the 1990s, but after the 2000 Bush/Gore debacle, Gov. Jeb Bush significantly relaxed the clemency process. After Bush, Charlie Crist, in an apparently successful effort to win black votes in the 2006 gubernatorial election, promised much greater ease, and he largely delivered. Crist's efforts, which some Republicans thought cost John McCain Florida's electoral votes in 2008, were stunningly reversed by Gov. Rick Scott after 2010. The number of clemencies fell from a high of nearly 90,000 in one year under Crist to a little over 3,000 in eight years under Scott. Black legislators and newspapers denounced Gov. Scott's executive clemency process as "racial and partisan."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

16. From 1998 through 2018, there were 53 bills introduced to ease felon disfranchisement, 95 of whose 118 sponsors were black legislators. Almost none received even a committee hearing. The failure of all of these bills and the blockage of the clemency process by the Scott Administration increased the pressure for change, and the only means was the petitioning process to put a rights restoration measure on the ballot. The impetus for change was in the black community because black individuals were disproportionately likely to be convicted of felonies and to lose their rights, often for life, even after they had emerged from prisons or jails. Furthermore, newspaper articles in the years before 2018, often stressed the connection between race and felon disfranchisement.

17. During the debate on Amendment 4, certain proponents hesitated to stress the measure's connection to racial justice because they needed a supermajority of voters and private polling that they commissioned suggested that a racial justice message would defeat the measure. Nonetheless, numerous newspaper articles mentioned the racial disparities in felon disfranchisement and the effect on that discriminatory pattern if Amendment 4 were to pass.

18. Political scientists often disparage the effect of felon re-enfranchisement measures, on the grounds that relatively poor and uneducated people whose connections with society are often strained are unlikely to participate in civic affairs. Nevertheless, the breadth and depth of the Amendment 4 campaign threatened to undermine this conventional wisdom. Passing Amendment 4 took a movement, and Republicans who had just beaten a black gubernatorial candidate by 0.4% or 33,000 votes must have thought that it might be costly to run a real world experiment on the political science proposition.

19. Repeatedly during the debates over what became S.B. 7066, Rep. Grant repeated that he did not want to see any data about how many people would be affected by S.B. 7066 and its predecessor bills or, more specifically, what its effect on black people would be because, he claimed, "I don't want to know the impact of this [bill]." But a mountain of evidence shows that Rep. Grant, Sen. Brandes, and other legislators and members of the public must have known the impact of the bill. Rep. Grant did not need to see the data and did not want to discuss it publicly because he obviously knew what it would show, and how that would reflect on his motives.

20. Because the sponsors of Amendment 4 hoped that they might be able to convince the proponents of what became S.B. 7066 to compromise on the bill's harshest restrictions on the vote, they discouraged legislators, especially black legislators, from raising racial issues during the debates. When several did, especially after the period when a compromise seemed possible ended, the proponents of S.B. 7066 refused to answer them directly, relying entirely on the faithful steward defense or disdaining opponents of the bill as lacking "truth and fact and intellectual honesty."

21. The crucial amendment of the original bill, Sen. Brandes's agreement to enfranchise returning citizens whose LFOs had been converted to civil liens, would have considerably enlarged the proportion of returning citizens who could vote under S.B. 7066. The final abandonment of that amendment demonstrates that the legislature was determined to pass a bill that was almost the most restrictive of the rights of former felons that it possibly could. It rejected not only Sen. Brandes's amendment, but a series of amendments by black legislators that would have partially mitigated the harm to the franchises of returning citizens.

22. But there are even stronger reasons to believe that the Legislature was aiming at a bill that had a maximal disfranchisement result. From the 2016 hearings of the FIEC, it was clear that the felon disfranchisement process was a Kafkaesque bureaucratic nightmare. After hearing testimony from a variety of state officials, the FIEC determined that it would take eleven databases, stored in different agencies, in addition to restitution information that often no one at all kept track of, to determine whether someone had fulfilled all of his financial obligations. This was repeatedly discussed during the legislative process, and Rep. Grant openly admitted that Florida did not have a centralized system in place and that it would be very difficult for the state agencies to perform the tasks that they were somehow supposed to after S.B. 7066 went into effect. The legislature knew that the more information – restitution plus fines plus fees plus court costs – they piled into the bill's requirements, the longer it would take state and county staffers to check a returning citizen's satisfaction of all the qualifications to vote, and the more likely it would be that the task could never be completed—by staffers or returning citizens. Sociologists have called such a set of rules "bureaucratic disentitlement." That the legislators made no serious effort to overcome this bureaucratic disfranchisement casts a serious reflection on their motives.

23. The legislators knew, because of the well-documented, widely publicized racial disparities in the criminal justice system, that a disproportionate number of returning citizens were black. They purposely made the prospect of restoring voting rights nearly as restrictive as they could, and they piled bureaucratic complexity after complexity on the process, assuring that it would clog. They ignored and, as suggested by an internal legislative "talking points" memo, never deigned to answer repeated charges that the bill was racially discriminatory. The conclusion is inescapable that the sponsors of S.B. 7066 intended to restrict the rights of black and poorer returning citizens of every race.

B. Ten Intent Factors

24. To organize and systematize inquiries into the intent of the framers of a law or redistricting plan, I set out nine "intent factors" in a law review article in 1991, basing them on Supreme Court and lower federal court opinions, as well as on law journal articles and my experience in analyzing such questions in normal scholarship and for trials.[14] While in the central U.S. Supreme Court case on such matters, Arlington Heights, Justice Powell did not spend much time explaining the rationale for each factor, I tried to do so, drawing on fuller discussions in lower courts, law reviews, and historical research.[15] I subdivided some of Justice Powell's factors for purposes of clarity. In my later book, Colorblind Injustice, I increased the number of factors to ten and expanded the discussion and examples.[16] Because it may help the reader of this report to consider the framework before actually beginning to review the evidence in detail, I will lay out the factors and brief rationales for them here. 25. Underlying every causal explanation in history is an implicit or explicit model of human behavior, a theory, often inchoate, of how people typically act in certain kinds of situations. Sometimes based on empirical generalizations, sometimes, on rough analogies, sometimes, on common sense, these frameworks should not mechanically determine conclusions--if they do, why bother about the evidence? But they do establish baselines of initial plausibility for different possible interpretations, and the thinner the available evidence in any instance, the more determinative of conclusions the theory is likely to be. What, for example, have historians, sociologists, and political scientists said about the connections between felon disfranchisement and race? And how have they treated politicians' explanations of their actions? Do political scientists generally believe that politicians are self-interested actors who manipulate electoral rules for their own advantage, or to secure the triumph of their particular ideals, or do they accept at face value the frequent claim by politicians that they are merely transparent vehicles for public opinion? The first factor is meant to be partly prescriptive, for analysts of electoral rules and structures ought to be aware of relevant scholarly literature about parallel instances; partly descriptive, for expectations based on one's reading and experience will inevitably affect one's assessment of evidence; and partly cautionary, for awareness of possible unconscious biases may help one avoid them.

26. The second factor is the historical context, especially the sequence of events, which is important for what it reveals about the general attitudes and interests of decisionmakers. Laws passed during periods of racial turmoil, such as the First Reconstruction or its aftermath, or the Civil Rights Era, or after an upsurge in minority voting or minority candidate success, must be viewed with suspicion. As we shall see, Amendment 4 was: the culmination of over 20 years of unsuccessful legislative efforts, unsuccessful lawsuits, inconsistent use of executive orders, and other advocacy to ease restrictions on the voting of returning citizens; passed at the same time as the most serious black political candidate in the history of the state had barely lost; and it was then, as most proponents of Amendment 4 believed, virtually reversed by S.B. 7066. Putting the events of the 2019 Florida state legislative session into their full historical context helps to illuminate the motives of the participants.

27. The third factor should be the text or provisions of the law or regulation. In the Alabama constitutional convention of 1901, delegates added some, but not other misdemeanors to the list of felonies for which men were disfranchised. This selectivity was taken to be an indication of racially discriminatory intent by the Supreme Court in Hunter v. Underwood, especially since one of the misdemeanors appended was miscegenation, a racist "crime" for which white men were rarely convicted in the South.[17] The text of Amendment 4 and the selection and exclusion of specific LFOs, in the text of the bills and amendments that went into of S.B. 7066, much discussed during the 2019 legislative session, and subsequent bills, may shine some light on the motives of the proponents of S.B. 7066.

28. The fourth variety of evidence is basic demographic facts. A rising and/or concentrated minority population, or populations whose depressed educational and economic levels reflect the vestiges of past and present racial and ethnic discrimination, are facts that politicians can be expected to observe, and that, therefore, should be assumed to affect their design of electoral rules and structures. The racial composition of the current and returning citizen population in Florida, well known because of widespread and publicly-available reporting, and especially to the sponsors of S.B. 7066, both of whom sat on criminal justice subcommittees in Florida's Legislature, is of obvious relevance to the question of what expectations those sponsors must have had about the likely effect of the law. That the same legislative session spent a great deal of time considering criminal justice legislation, in the course of which they heard testimony about racial disparities in the criminal justice system, reinforces the point. The legislators also surely knew that black people were, on average, less affluent than whites, so that a "colorblind" requirement that returning citizens completely pay the sometimes hefty fines, fees, costs, and restitution before being allowed to register to vote would have a disproportionate effect on black people.

29. The fifth factor is the climate of racial politics, which is usually indicated by two basic political facts, the number of minority candidates elected and the approximate extent of racial polarization among voters.

[17] Hunter v. Underwood, 471 U.S. 222 (1985), at 226-28.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Such facts must be assumed to condition the expectations of officials who frame or maintain electoral arrangements. If the Republicans in the legislature who voted unanimously for S.B. 7066 were somehow—though implausibly—unaware that the Democratic nominee for governor in 2018, Andrew Gillum, was black, the first black nominee for Florida Governor from a major party, and that, according to exit polls, black voters supported him by 86-14, they had only to look around them at the racial identity of so many leading Democratic legislators, which contrasted dramatically with the Republicans' own racial identities.[18] The racial polarization of the electorate is reflected too in several racists and coded attacks that Gillum faced during his campaign. Moreover, other black candidates, local as well as statewide, posed increasingly potent threats to the hegemony of the state's dominant political group.

30. A sixth factor is the background of key decisionmakers, because it may reflect on their motives in particular instances. At minimum, the experiences of the two principal sponsors of S.B. 7066, Rep. James Grant (R-Tampa) and Sen. Jeff Brandes (R-St. Petersburg) on the criminal justice committees in a legislative session in which criminal justice reform shared the headlines with S.B. 7066, makes it certain that those sponsors, along with other committee members, were perfectly aware of the racially disparate consequences of a law that made it much harder for returning citizens to register to vote. Even if some Florida legislators had not considered the racial disparities in its criminal justice system during the same legislative session as S.B. 7066, it is otherwise common-knowledge that black people disproportionately have felony convictions in Florida and that there are socio-economic disparities between black and white people, which is exacerbated when a black person has a felony conviction.

Like their backgrounds, the seventh factor, other actions of decisionmakers may be indirect indicators of their general attitudes toward minority groups. That the House limited even the rather minimal reforms of the "First Step Act," a conservative bill aimed at reducing expenditures on the criminal justice system and modeled on a Trump Administration measure, is an indication that the sponsors of S.B. 7066, especially Rep.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Grant, were less interested in alleviating prison conditions than in saving taxpayer money.

The eighth factor, statements by important participants, which are referred to as "smoking gun" evidence if they are sufficiently incriminating, are difficult to come by, especially for laws passed in the very recent past. Given the care with which litigation-conscious legislators typically speak these days, those few statements that admit racial motives attract and should attract extraordinary attention. In this case, the repeated and adamant statements by Rep. Grant that he did not want to see any data on the effect of S.B. 7066 on racial minorities or the poor should be interpreted as a smoking gun, on the grounds that he "doth protest too much."[19]

31. State policies and formal and informal institutional rules constitute the ninth general category of relevance. The executive clemency procedure for restoring the rights of returning citizens in Florida had never required the payment of all LFOs before clemency was granted, which calls into question the assertion that Amendment 4 would have been interpreted by Florida voters to mandate such payments. Although it was not unprecedented to make major changes in a bill in the last 24 hours before the end of a legislative session and then cram it into an existing, relatively uncontroversial bill before passing it, the procedure did make it more difficult for legislators to express their opinions on every facet of the measure and to seek further compromises. Last-minute changes also make it impossible for the public to express its opinions in public hearings.

32. Whether or not elections have been held under the system being evaluated, there is a tenth factor, the impact of the adopted rule, that overlaps with several of the previous nine. This may be prospective, concerned with the expected impact of a proposed law, even before it goes into effect or even if it initially fails. The rationale for using effect as a measure of intent is that, especially with electoral rules, framers may be assumed to be aware of and calculate the consequences of their actions carefully and to be quite good at such calculations. Often, the legislative record, official or unofficial, will make clear that the impact in question was fully foreseen, at least by opponents of the measure. That was certainly the case with S.B. 7066.

C. A Note on Sources

33. Much of the detailed discussion in this report is based on articles that appeared in newspapers, documents that historians usually must rely on in researching what happened in legislatures or Congress, and which I have used extensively in my academic research and in previous expert witness reports in legal cases. At times, lawyers for the opposing side have challenged such documents as unsworn and second-hand "hearsay." They would confine the evidence in cases about discriminatory intent to transcripts of official proceedings or hearings, particularly, in this case, to one hearing before the State Supreme Court.

34. I have relied on newspapers for three reasons. First, they represent standard evidence in my academic field, and to fail to consult them would undermine any claim to the expert nature of a report. A forensic scientist called as an expert in a legal case would be expected to employ the usual tools of her trade in reaching conclusions. A chemist could hardly be barred from conducting and reporting on experiments in a similar circumstance. An engineer examining the reasons for a bridge collapse or an automobile crash would draw on the tools and methods of his field. If newspapers are approached skeptically and used carefully, they fill the same purpose as sources and methods in other fields, and if they are quoted and cited explicitly, as they are in this report, they may be checked in exactly the same way as reports by forensic scientists, chemists, or engineers can be.

35. Second, if used systematically, they are the best evidence for the way in which voters interpreted Amendment 4, which is a crucial question in this case. There were no public opinion polls that asked voters at the time of the Amendment 4 campaign and passage just what they thought "completion of all terms of sentence" meant. But newspapers that sought to inform voters about the ballot measures did contain phrases that can be held to define this phrase. This was not a statute whose meaning was closely tied to previous statutes or judicial opinions, such as a codification of a legal case or a technical amendment to a larger statute. It was an initiative campaigned for in popular meetings and media, and it is in this larger arena where the understanding of the words should be sought. The only systematic way to determine such popular opinion is to analyze the plentiful newspaper articles on the subject.

36. Third, some of the most important events and statements in the struggle over the issue of felon disfranchisement took place away from the legislative floor or the courtroom. Contemporary newspaper reports of the actions on executive clemency of governors from Reubin Askew to Rick Scott are of considerable importance in understanding the historical context of S.B. 7066, and the connection between felon disfranchisement and race made in the newspapers for a generation helps to gauge what voters knew even before the campaign for Amendment 4 began to heat up.

37. The conclusion must be that the use of newspapers as a source for this and possibly for other reports in this case is not only absolutely necessary, but desirable. While, of course, specific newspaper articles or my interpretation of them are subject to the ultimate interpretation of a judge acting as a fact-finder, any general attempt to dismiss newspaper articles as sources of information is neither intellectually sound nor consistent with the best practices of historians.

IV. Did Amendment 4 Force the Legislature to Pass S.B. 7066?

A. The Faithful Steward Assertion

38. In the April 23, 2019 floor hearing in the Florida House of Representatives on House Bill (H.B.) 7089, a predecessor of S.B. 7066, chief sponsor Rep. James W. Grant (R, Tampa) asserted that he had no other motive than to implement the unmistakable will of the nearly 65% of the Florida voters who favored Amendment 4 on Nov. 7, 2018.

> "Nothing in our bill conflicts with what the voters voted for. . . . [T]he only intellectually honest way to approach this is to take the strictest construction, the most complete review of the entire history – how this got on the ballot, how it was messaged to voters, what the ballot summary said and what the [Florida Rights Restoration Coalition said themselves] . . . .We complied explicitly with the ballot summary. We complied explicitly with [the FRRC's] own words to the voters. . . .
> ". . . nobody [is] losing anything in this bill. The only thing this bill is doing is taking the exact language that was presented before the Court > to get [it] on the ballot, that was presented to the voters, and explained to voters to pass. So to suggest that this bill is disenfranchising anybody, I believe, is misguided. What this bill is doing is saying, we're going to embrace the restitution of rights that was passed by the voters."[20]

39. Although admitting that other parts of the language of Amendment 4 were "full of ambiguities and legal fallacies," Rep. Grant claimed that it was "crystal clear" that the phrase "completion of all terms of sentence [including parole or probation]" implicitly included several particular legal financial obligations (hereinafter LFOs).[21] This assertion, which implicitly disavowed any partisan or racial motives for the legislature's action, was repeated in almost the same words again and again throughout committee hearings and floor debates, not only by Grant, but also by the Senate sponsor, Jeff Brandes (R-St. Petersburg), Sen. David Simmons (R-Altamonte Springs), Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee Sen. Keith Perry (R-Gainesville), Rep. Byron Donalds (R-Naples), Rep. Thad Altman (R-Indialantic), Chair of the House Judiciary Committee Paul Renner (R-Palm Coast), and other members of their party who took part of the debate, all claiming that the bill faithfully implemented the clear intent of Amendment 4.[22] It might be termed the "faithful steward" hypothesis.

40. Opponents of S.B. 7066 repeatedly doubted all parts of the faithful steward syllogism. For example, Rep. Fentrice Driskell (D-Tampa), a black legislator who took a prominent role in the legislative debate, stressed the plain language of Amendment 4 in a question and answer with Rep. Grant: "Because the plain language of Amendment 4 does not make any express reference to the repayment of financial obligations, isn't it true that excluding payment would not conflict with what the voters voted for?" Without disputing the point in logic or as a matter of interpretative theory, Rep. Grant simply dismissed it, as he dismissed similar questions from other legislators.[23]

41. The faithful steward assertion represents an ingenious effort to absolve the legislature of all responsibility for S.B. 7066, to deflect any consideration of racial, partisan, or just self-interested motives of the legislators. If all the legislators did was to determine the will of the voters carefully and objectively and then mechanically write that unequivocal will into a statute, on what grounds could anyone challenge their intentions? Such an account of their actions would form a perfect defense during legislative debates, campaigns for office, or the inevitable litigation that would follow passage of a bill that they knew that proponents of Amendment 4 had found unsatisfactory.

B. Evidence for the Faithful Steward Assertion

42. Instead, Rep. Grant and other backers of S.B. 7066 relied on statements made by Jon Mills, a one-term Speaker of the Florida House in 1987-88 and emeritus Dean of the University of Florida School of Law. Mr. Mills had represented the proponents of what became Amendment 4 before the Florida Supreme Court in a hearing on whether Amendment violated the "single subject rule" and whether "the title and summary" of the Amendment gave "a clear explanation of the overall purpose of the initiative."[24] In answering a question from Justice Alan Lawson, Mr. Mills arguably agreed that the Amendment required completion of all terms of the sentence, including fines, costs, and restitution.[25] Rep. Grant conceded, however, that Mills's interpretation of the meaning of the amendment still gave the legislature considerable discretion. In a colloquy with Rep. Joe Geller (D-Aventura), Rep. Grant remarked that,

> I have never suggested…that the testimony [of Dean Mills] before the Supreme [Court] bind us in any way. But, what the testimony before the Supreme Court was in fact binding on, was whether or not this language got to the ballot. I have never suggested that the FRCC's [sic] language, communicating to the voters, asking them to support Amendment 4, bind us to do exactly that. But what I will suggest is that it bound them to what they told the voters.[26]

43. What did proponents' websites say? According to the Senate Sponsor of S.B. 7066, Jeff Brandes (R-St. Petersburg),

> "[W]e also go to the two instances of the two websites that the sponsors have used to message to the public, we can, I think, those are very instructive as well. In the question-and-answer section [of] FRRC's website, it says what does the completion of all terms of my sentence mean. C. Evidence Against the Faithful Steward Assertion

1. Inconsistencies

44. One difficulty with the website information is immediately apparent. The terms on the website of the organization that sponsored the petition drive and the initiative campaign, Floridians for a Fair Democracy, included restitution, but not fines and fees. Another problem is that the website of the FRRC did not mention that payment of fines and fees were required to vote under Amendment 4 during the 2018 campaign. In an op-ed responding to claims like that of Sen. Brandes, Desmond Meade and Neal Volz, leaders of the FRRC, stated that "According to archived versions of the website that are available to anyone online, the page in question did not exist until January 2019 — two months after the election." The group's stance > included a specific understanding that a "paid debt" included the completion of probation and payment of restitution. That simple position was included in our campaign materials and verified during the [2019] debate in the legislature, when we publicly supported a bill that required payment of restitution before voting eligibility was restored. We took that position because of our belief in the values of forgiveness, redemption and restoration.[28]

45. In sum, during the campaign for Amendment 4, both Floridians for a Fair Democracy and the FRRC, in its advertisements, interpreted the Amendment as requiring payment of restitution, but not fines and fees, before a returning citizen could vote. Neither group mentioned requiring payment of any LFOs that had been converted to civil liens before the person would be allowed to vote.

2. The Financial Impact Estimating Conference Report

46. While proponents of S.B. 7066 and its predecessors in 2019 often referred to Mr. Mills's statements before the Florida Supreme Court, they largely ignored an official report on the Voting Restoration Amendment (VRA) completed by the Financial Impact Estimating Conference (FIEC) in 2016. The FIEC is an interagency group charged with determining the prospective costs of measures to state and local governmental bodies before the initiatives are voted on by the public. It is chaired by a representative of the Office of Economic and Demographic Research, "a research arm of the Legislature."[29] So the legislature can be assumed to have been aware of the FIEC report before it began to consider whether or how to implement Amendment 4.

47. To analyze the impact of the VRA, the FIEC held a series of five workshops in October, 2016 that involved not only the proponents of the VRA, but also Florida county election supervisors, representatives of the Governor, the Secretary of State, the Office of Economic and Demographic Research, the Department of Corrections, the Department of Law Enforcement, the Executive Office of Clemency, and the Commission on Offender Review.[30]

48. These workshops drilled down into the details of how the pre-VRA system of determining the eligibility of returned citizens to vote worked.[31] In particular, they examined the availability of information on payments of restitution, fines, and fees – who collected it, how both former felons and election officials could access it, and what problems might be anticipated if payment of some or all such LFOs were required before someone were allowed to vote under Amendment 4. They uncovered a bureaucratic horror story, with no central data repository, no established or proposed process for obtaining information on the payment of LFOs, and no agreed-upon definitions of what a "sentence" was or what constituted "completion."[32]

49. The FIEC's report concluded that "The precise effect of this amendment on state and local government costs cannot be determined" because there were too many unknowns, including the difficulty of predicting how many returning and returned citizens would attempt to register to vote and what process would be set up to gather and disseminate information about each individual's completion of the terms of his sentence. But the FIEC report emphasized in two separate places in a ten-page typescript that "It is not clear whether the phrase 'terms of sentence' includes payment of court-ordered restitution, fines, and court costs."[33]

50. This was the only official body – one centered in the research arm of the legislature itself – that issued a report on the meaning of what became Amendment 4. Far from stating that the legislature was compelled by the terms of the Amendment to require the payment of all restitution, fines, fees, and costs before enfranchising former felons, the FIEC announced that the Amendment itself settled nothing about LFOs. The FIEC's reading of the Amendment gave the legislature complete discretion to exclude particular

3. How Did Voters Understand Amendment 4? A Systematic Analysis of Newspaper Stories

51. As certain as he was about what Amendment 4 meant legally, Rep. Grant was completely agnostic about the intentions of the voters who passed the measure. "It is impossible to get inside the heads of one hundred percent of the voters," he remarked in a hearing before the House Judiciary Committee.[34] Defending the bill before the House on April 23 in a colloquy with a black representative, Rep. Wengay Newton (D-St. Petersburg), Grant expanded the thought:

> I have not talked about the will of the voters. I don't think that the voters are a monolith….What I do believe is crystal clear is what was offered to the voters…. We can pretend that all 5 million people…thought the same thing. . . . I'm suggesting that we not pretend anything and simply take the proponents of Amendment 4 at their word at every step of the way until the legislature convened. . . .
> "Newton: So, your bill is implementing what the voters understood they were voting for?...
> "Grant: I am not to say that this is what voters meant. What I'm standing up and saying is this is exactly what was presented to the voters. To do the former, would require me to read the mind of 5 million people….[W]e don't have to wonder what was presented to the voters, because the record is replete and consistent every step of the way…. I know exactly what was presented to the voters because that was unambiguous."[35]

52. This was a crucial move in the argument of those who favored S.B. 7066: According to Rep. Grant, statements of proponents of Amendment 4 were not just pieces of the evidence about the intentions of the voters, to be weighed against other, perhaps conflicting information. Those statements were not only unambiguous; they were the only evidence that mattered. If the words of the amendment or the statements of the proponents were ambiguous, or if there was other evidence of the intent of the voters, then the legislature had discretion in implementing Amendment 4, and the faithful steward explanation of the intent of the legislature would be fatally undermined.

53. It should be emphasized that the sponsors of S.B. 7066 and its 2019 predecessors did not rely merely on statutory and judicial language about what a "sentence" meant or the words of representatives of the campaign for Amendment 4 in a State Supreme Court judicial hearing of which voters were very likely unaware. The sponsors also quoted a campaign website, and in later court briefs, the Secretary of State cited one newspaper article, one television program, and two press releases as support for the contention that Floridians understood Amendment 4 to require completion of all LFOs before a returning citizen could vote.[36] Evidently, sponsors and defenders of S.B. 7066 understood that determining the intention of voters who passed a constitutional amendment by initiative required considerably more than narrow legalistic evidence. How many voters could possibly be aware of arcane canons of legal interpretation, intricate definitions of legal terms, or complicated discussions of case law?[37]

54. But we have much more data about voters' understanding of Amendment 4 than the tiny, cherry-picked amount presented by proponents of S.B. 7066 in the legislative debates and subsequent legal briefs. To gauge more systematically how Florida voters understood the terms of the Voter Restoration Amendment, I searched for "felon voting" for the dates October

1 through November 7 (the day after the election), 2018 in every Florida newspaper covered in the database "Newspapers.com."[38] The database includes every major newspaper in the state except the Miami Herald and the Jacksonville Florida Times-Union. I searched those two newspapers on their individual websites. I include the relevant phrases from every article that appeared during the timeframe which contained any statement of what Amendment 4 was meant to accomplish. I found a total of 55 articles under the search term "felon voting" that contained explicit or implicit references to sentences. To allow the court to judge the results of my search independently, I have given not only the newspaper and article titles, dates, and page numbers, but also all excerpts from the articles that comment on the meaning of "sentence" under Amendment 4.[39] In the quotations, I have left out references to the exclusion of those convicted of murder or sex crimes, except when it was grammatically less clumsy to include them.

55. I have divided the newspaper definitions into five groups: First are those that clearly referred to sentences as prison terms (often including parole and probation), and that therefore clearly exclude LFOs from the definition of the terms of a sentence. For example, articles that say a felon would have to "serve" or "finish" his sentence would fall into this category, because in English, one cannot "serve" or "finish" a fine, fee, or restitution. I put references to time, such as "the entirety of their sentence" or the "period" of their sentence, into this category. I found 20 articles that fit these definitions. (See Table 2 below.)

[38] I included in the tables below every news article, editorial, or op-ed column, but not letters to the editor, on the grounds that letters to the editor might not be considered authoritative. Because I did not put the search term in quotations, the search engine picked up articles in which an exact match – "felon" followed immediately by "voting" – did not occur, as well as those in which there was an exact match. I limited the newspapers to those which were published in Florida because I thought that Florida voters looking for information on in-state issues were more likely to consult in-state newspapers.

[39] Newspapers.com does not give web addresses of the articles. I omitted the web addresses of the articles in the Miami Herald and the Jacksonville Florida Times-Union to save space in the tables.

57. Second are those that refer to parole, probation, and restitution, but not to fines or fees, or to restitution alone, which imply that readers would not consider the payment of fines or fees necessary for re-enfranchisement under Amendment 4. The logic of this position is that mention of a single LFO, but not others, would be read by voters as not including the other LFOs. Restitution is particularly important in this respect, because the campaign for Amendment 4 heavily stressed regret, reform, and forgiveness in a campaign that received support from the Christian Coalition and the Koch Brothers, as well as the ACLU.[40] Restitution to individuals damaged by a felony echoed the evangelical tone and appeal of the campaign.[41]

Third, I have divided articles that mention restitution into two groups – those that clearly imply that a "sentence" means time spent in prison, and those that are ambiguous about the nature of a "sentence," but that do not mention fines or fees. I found five articles that treated sentences as prison time and mentioned restitution and nine articles that mentioned restitution, but were not definite about the definition of "sentence." Neither group mentioned fines or fees. (See Tables 3 and 4 below.)

59. Fourth, after the two restitution categories, are those that do not clearly include or exclude any LFOs. An article saying that the Amendment would require a returning citizen to have "completed" his sentence or would "restore the right to vote to most felons" would fall into this category. The ambiguity of this category is captured perfectly in an article that appeared in the Miami Herald on October 5, 2018, which stated both that Amendment 4 "would restore voting rights to former felons who have completed their sentences, including parole and probation" and that "A vote 'yes' means felons who have served their sentences, parole and probation can have their civil rights restored." I placed this in the more specific category, category 1, because it clearly defined a "sentence" as a prison term. But many of the articles that mentioned "completion of sentence" might have been intended or interpreted as referring to prison terms. We simply cannot determine this from the words they used. I found 19 articles that fell into this ambiguous category. (See Table 5 below)

60. A fifth category is articles in which it was explicitly mentioned that Amendment 4 required payment of all fines, fees, and restitution. These are the only ones of the 55 that fully and completely support the faithful steward assertion. Only two articles (those in Table 6 below) fit into this category, including the only newspaper article cited as evidence of voter opinion on Amendment 4 by either the sponsors or their attorneys.[42]

61. One may draw five conclusions from this evidence. First, it is possible to generalize about what information voters were exposed to on the very specific question of how they were to understand a "sentence" in Amendment 4. Surely most voters deciding how to vote on down-ballot issues would at least peruse newspaper articles with titles like "What the 12 amendments on the ballot mean" or "Learn how 12 Florida amendments affect your life, and your wallet, before you vote." Representative Grant's agnostic stance – that it was impossible to know what voters meant by "completion of all terms of sentence"--was unwarranted.

62. Second, 25 of the 55 articles (those in Tables 2 and 3 above) clearly understood a "sentence" to be a "prison term," not one involving LFOs.

63. Third, 14 of the 55 (those in Tables 3 and 4 above) included restitution, but not fines and fees, which implies that not all LFOs were understood to be included in Amendment 4.

64. Fourth, Amendment 4 was obviously drafted as a brief statement of principles, designed to attract a supermajority of voters. Nineteen of the 55 articles (those in Table 5 above) described Amendment 4 in such general terms that voters may have interpreted a sentence to include all, some, or no LFOs. We cannot tell, and the legislature could not, either.

65. Fifth and most important, 53 of the 55 (those in Tables 2-5 above) did not mention all of the LFOs that are contained in S.B. 7066. To contend that voters unequivocally meant Amendment 4 to be interpreted as requiring all LFOs to be paid in full before a returning citizen could be re-enfranchised is to fly in the face of the overwhelming evidence – the best we are likely to find – of newspaper coverage of the issue.

4. The Legislature's Actions Belie the Contention That Everyone Understood Amendment 4 to Require the Payment of All LFOs

66. When Amendment 4 passed, almost all of those who had been active in this widespread grassroots campaign believed that there was no need for the legislature to pass a bill to implement the measure. One of the three people who drafted the language of the amendment, the longtime executive director of the ACLU in Florida, Howard Simon, declared that the amendment was self-executing. "It says that voting rights 'shall be restored.' I don't know what is unclear about that, what could be unclear about that. . . . This was written in a way intentionally--we worked ... on this language intentionally to say that there is no role for politicians."[43] Senate President Bill Galvano (R-Bradenton) seemed to agree, and he promised that "'whatever we [the Legislature] determine our role is, if any, is going to be to fulfill the will of the people in a diligent manner."[44]

67. At the beginning of the legislative session, there was no consensus on what the supposedly crystal clear term "completion of all terms of sentence" meant. The assistant to Sen. Jeff Brandes, who became the chief Senate sponsor of S.B. 7066, sent him a memo dated Dec. 12, 2018 and entitled "Action Items,," which contained the following question under the topic "Amendment 4 implementation language": "When should rights be restored – at the end of the sentence or after restitution has been repaid?"[45] Although House Speaker Jose Oliva (R-Miami Lakes) "wanted to ensure voters' wishes are carried out," he was uncertain, a month after Amendment 4 passed, about exactly what the voters intended: "I think it [the Amendment] was rather broad,'" he remarked, "'but I think that the intent of the people was to make sure that those people who have paid their price to society for certain crimes were able to become a participant in our electoral process again. That part of it is pretty clear . . .'"[46]

68. During a March 19, 2019 House subcommittee hearing on H.B. 7089, Rep. Mike Grieco (D-Miami Beach) pointed out that under the then-current Rule 9A3 of the Florida Commission on Offender Review, a central institution in the executive clemency regime that preceded passage of Amendment 4, court costs and fees did not have to be repaid before a returning citizen could apply to have his civil rights restored. To be sure, the clemency rules did require that a sentence be completed, but "completion of a sentence" did not include the payment of court costs and fees. Indeed, according to a news story, the Commission "had never taken into consideration court costs, fees or fines when considering applications for clemency."[47] Rep. Grant recognized this fact and explicitly advocated that H.B. 7089 should impose a higher standard – one that enfranchised fewer people – than the clemency process, declaring that "The clemency process is an individual applicant applying for executive grace, and I absolutely believe that should be a lower standard."[48] So the status quo ante lent no support to the view that all LFOs had to be paid before civil rights could be restored, and the chief House sponsor explicitly favored a standard that would be more stringent, i.e., more disfranchising, than that status quo. Grant's recognition of the differences in the executive clemency and H.B. 7089 standards is also yet another indication that the legislature understood that it had discretion in framing its measure to implement Amendment 4.

69. Republican uncertainty about what "completion of all terms of the sentence" meant was best captured in a statement by Rep. Byron Donalds (R-Naples) the day that the House Criminal Justice Subcommittee held its first hearing on H.B. 7089. "'Completion of sentence is all over the map,' said Donalds, who supported the amendment and the implementing bill. 'Nobody knows how to tell a previous offender that they have completed their time.'"[49] Even as late as April 9, 2019, House Judiciary Chair Paul Renner (R-Palm Coast) commented that "One of the problems is the Amendment did not define what terms of sentence means, which it could have done."[50]

70. The House bill introduced by Rep. Grant initially required payment not only of all restitution, fines, and fees associated with a felon's original sentence, but also the costs of drug tests during probation and other expenses related to felony convictions.[51] Republicans in the Senate, meeting six days after the House Criminal Justice Subcommittee hearing, had been, in the view of a Capitol Hill reporter, "stung by critics who said a House proposal to implement the constitutional amendment would create a new Jim Crow law by imposing a poll tax." Accordingly, they voted to confine the LFOs required to be paid before enfranchisement to those initially imposed by a judge.[52] Eventually, Rep. Grant amended his House bill to move closer to the Senate's measure by waiving repayment of interest and administrative fees charged during incarceration as a prerequisite for voting registration.[53]

71. An even more important difference between the House and Senate measures was over the issue of whether former felons could vote, even if they still owed fines and fees, so long as those fines and fees had been converted to civil liens.[54] Rep. Grant adamantly opposed allowing someone whose fines, fees, or restitution had been converted to a civil lien to vote. "A civil judgment," Grant announced at the first House committee hearing on H.B. 7089, "is an outstanding financial obligation" which must be paid before a returning citizen could register to vote.[55] According to Rep. Michael Gottlieb (D-Broward), a House member who had been a criminal defense lawyer for 25 years, such an understanding of the difference between "criminal" and "civil" violated the common understanding of court practices. When a judge agrees to convert an offender's financial obligations to a civil lien, Gottlieb declared, "it's understood in court that the criminal obligation has terminated and ended. And I think by creating these new definitions that we are, we're bypassing longstanding, well-rooted definitions and concepts that have been embraced by and utilized in the criminal justice system."[56]

72. In contrast to Rep. Grant's belief that Amendment 4 absolutely prohibited the legislature from allowing a returning citizen to vote if whatever LFOs he had outstanding were converted to a civil lien, Sen. Brandes successfully amended S.B. 7086, another predecessor to S.B. 7066, to allow former felons to vote if their fines and fees had been converted to civil liens.[57] Senator Brandes's amendment was the product of "weeks of talks" with proponents of Amendment 4, who preferred no implementation bill at all for Amendment 4, but who, facing the reality that the legislature was likely to pass a bill of some sort, eventually compromised with the Senator. Explicitly undercutting the notion that everyone agreed on exactly what Amendment 4 meant by completing a sentence, Brandes opined that his version of the measure was "fairer to felons."[58]

73. Sen. Randolph Bracy (D-Orlando), who is black, went a step further, proposing to treat restitution that had been converted to a civil lien the same way as Sen. Brandes's amendment treated fines and fees.[59] The Brandes and Bracy amendments to S.B. 7066 prompted one of the leaders of the Amendment 4 campaign, Cecile Scoon, first Vice President of the League of Women Voters of Florida, to testify in a Senate hearing that both amendments were necessary to bring S.B. 7086 into line with Amendment 4. "When the financial aspects of a criminal sentence are converted to a civil judgment," Scoon remarked, "the sentence is over and complete." A prominent black woman, Scoon noted that "many hardworking returning citizens with limited job opportunities are unable to earn enough to pay restitution completely," and she asserted that the overreaching purpose of Amendment 4 was to allow "a person who completed incarceration and all supervision to be able to vote."[60] The political director of the ACLU of Florida, Kirk Bailey, took exactly the same position as Scoon did in his testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, as did Neil Volz, co-leader of the FRRC, and Shelly Freeland Eddie, a black criminal lawyer and City Council member from Sarasota.[61] positions on civil liens would finally be adopted continued to be contentious. "This is a dance between us and the House," Sen. Brandes told the Senate committee. "We're still [pretty] far apart. There's probably going to be another substantial amendment on the floor."[62] In the judgment of a reporter for the Miami Herald, "If the Senate adopts the House version, it would be a devastating blow to supporters of Amendment 4," because of the difference in the treatment of LFOs that were converted into civil liens. "The House bill sponsor, Jamie Grant, R-Tampa, said he would negotiate with Brandes and others over the weekend," the Miami Herald reported.[63]

75. "The high-profile bill," the Tallahassee Democrat reported, "has been mired in drama throughout the 60-day session."[64] But the final compromise, which, on the last day of the legislative session, inserted parts of H.B. 7089 and S.B. 7086 into an unrelated elections bill, S.B. 7066, did not include a provision allowing people to vote after converting financial penalties to civil liens, whether the penalties involved fines, fees, or restitution. Instead, they could vote only if they paid all LFOs outright, if they convinced a judge to dismiss the unpaid LFOs and a victim who was owed restitution approved, or if a judge converted all fines, fees, and restitution to community service (that potentially could be paid at extremely low wages), and the returning citizen completed all of the community service hours. Brandes was disappointed, telling reporters "Obviously you know my heart is in a different place."[65]

D. Just Faithful Stewards?

76. The faithful steward contention, put forward as the perfect defense to any charge that S.B. 7066 was adopted with a discriminatory racial or partisan intention, contained a fatal flaw: For it to be persuasive, every single piece of evidence about the voters' intent and the legislators' understanding of that intent had to line up exactly.

77. First, the words of the Amendment must seem unambiguous to experts, civil servants with long and detailed experience in administering the criminal justice system and the clemency process.

78. Second, evidence of the voters' intent about "completion of all terms of a sentence" must be unequivocal, or at the very least, it must overwhelmingly support the view that voters considered that returning citizens would have to repay all fines, fees, costs, and restitution before being allowed to register to vote.

79. Third, legislators, or at least legislators who finally voted for S.B. 7066, must have unanimously agreed on what Amendment 4 meant; there should have been no controversy about S.B. 7066 or either of its predecessors on the majority side.

80. Fourth, the chief proponents of Amendment 4 should have supported S.B. 7066 or at least only mildly opposed it. If any of these categories of evidence failed to support the mechanistic faithful servant assertion, then the defense would completely collapse. If it collapsed, then the legislators had discretion, and they must have had other motives for passing S.B. 7066 in its final form.

81. This section of this report has shown conclusively that none of the conditions necessary to support the faithful steward assertion are satisfied. Different proponents of Amendment 4 took different positions on LFOs during the campaign for the Amendment. In 2016, the FIEC, the governmental body officially tasked with spelling out the meaning of prospective amendments in order to determine their fiscal impacts on local and state governments, specifically told Florida's Legislature and the interested public that the meaning of completion of a sentence in Amendment 4 was "unclear," not unequivocal.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

82. A systematic examination of newspaper stories with titles like "What the 12 amendments on the ballot mean," which voters likely perused to guide their decisions on down-ballot propositions, found that only two of 55 articles described Amendment 4 as requiring payment of all fines, fees, and restitution before a returning citizen could vote.

83. Legislators disagreed on the terms of S.B. 7066 and its predecessors, repeatedly amended the bill, and clashed seemingly rather harshly behind closed doors about the final product, disagreements that left the bill's Senate sponsor, Jeff Brandes, quite disappointed with the final product.

84. Members of the public who had worked so long and hard to pass an amendment restoring the voting rights of former felons and who had had to negotiate with the legislature after they had convinced the voters, were much more bitter than Sen. Brandes. Requiring the payment of all fines and fees before becoming eligible to register to vote, said Neil Volz of the FRRC, "will restrict the ability to vote for thousands of Floridians, especially people who are poor, especially people of color."[66]

85. Legislators who opposed S.B. 7066 agreed. Representative Adam Hattersley (D-Riverview) stated that if the legislature passed the bill, "we'd create two classes of returning citizens. . . . There would be a minority of well-off individuals who would be able to repay their fines quickly and regain the right to vote; then, there'd be indigent citizens."[67] And Representative Michael Grieco (D-Miami Beach) warned that the proposed legislation would not be faithful to "the will of the voters," which was "very clear" that "1.4 million Floridians or more" would have their voting rights restored.[68]

86. Facts about the framing, consideration, and passage of S.B. 7066 completely undermine the foundations of the faithful steward assertion. It should be rejected as pretextual.

V. What Light Does the History of Ex-Felon Voting Reform from 1975 to 2019 Shed on the Motives of the Framers of S.B. 7066?

A. Was Rep. James Grant Really Incredulous?

87. During the two-hour debate on final passage of S.B. 7066, Rep. Dottie Joseph (D-North Miami), a black representative, recounted for the House a lengthy history of racially-motivated voting laws and their impact in Florida, placing S.B. 7066 squarely within that tradition.[69] Another black legislator, Rep. Geraldine Thompson (D-Orlando) decried the bill as "cash-register justice. What you're being asked to do here today is wrong. It's wrong like poll taxes were wrong . . . and it continues FL's pattern of disenfranchising a significant portion of the population." Rep. James Grant claimed to be "dumbfounded by the critique."[70]

88. This was one of a series of strikingly disingenuous statements about the issue by Rep. Grant. Three days before voters went to the polls to decide on Amendment 4, Grant's hometown newspaper, the Tampa Bay Times, published the results of an extensive investigation, conducted jointly with the Miami Herald, of racial and partisan bias in the system of disfranchising former felons. "Bias in Fla. voting rights," the banner front-page headline read, "Amendment 4 would restore felons, disproportionately black and Democrat, to the rolls."[71]

Because the Times/Herald story analyzed only the 21 most populous counties, some of its statistics may not be entirely correct. I quote it to show what expectations voters considering whether to support Amendment 4 and legislators considering whether to support S.B. 7066 may have had on the basis of publicly-available information. https://www.miamiherald.com/news/politics-government/state-politics/article221021940.html.

89. The story distilled for voters and legislators many facts about the current system and the possible impacts of the passage of Amendment 4:

> Black voters were five times as likely as white voters to lose their voting rights last year, the Times/Herald analysis shows. Democratic voters were three times as likely as Republican voters to be removed.
> If Amendment 4 is approved by more than 60 percent of voters on Tuesday, most felons will automatically be able to register to vote after completing all terms of their sentences. . . .
>
> Any significant change in the makeup of the electorate would upend politics in a state with a recent history of extraordinarily close races. . . .
>
> The Palm Beach Post has reported that during [Gov. Rick] Scott's two terms in office, he voted to restore the right to vote to twice as many white people as black people, and three times as many white men as black men.
> The Post found that Scott, a Republican, restored voting rights to the highest percentage of Republican felons and the lowest percentage of Democrats of any governor since 1971.

90. In one of his defenses of H.B. 7089, Rep. Grant declaimed that "The only intellectually honest way to approach this is to take the strictest construction, the most complete review of the entire history . . ."[72] Neither Rep. Grant nor other legislators, however, reviewed the entire history. But a consideration of the recent part of that history will help us understand what moved legislators to pass S.B. 7066.

B. Executive Clemency from Gov. Reubin Askew to Gov. Rick Scott

both proponents of Amendment 4 and of S.B. 7066. The inconsistencies depended entirely on the policies and often whims of the governor and the other three members of the Executive Clemency Board for, as then-Governor Rick Scott remarked in one clemency hearing, "We can do whatever we want."[73] The history of the changes in policy on the issue also reveals strong connections with the racial composition of the former prisoners.

92. From 1975 to 1978 under Gov. Reubin Askew and from 1979 to 1987 under Gov. Bob Graham, rights were restored automatically, without a hearing. Apparently, all they had to do was to submit short, simple forms. According to Graham, "if a person served their time…and post-incarceration parole and they lived an upstanding life," they resumed full citizenship without difficulty.[74] A later estimate of the number of people who had their rights restored under Gov. Askew was from 400,000 to 600,000, "a disproportionate number of whom," according to civil rights attorney Randy Berg, "are black."[75] Although I have not yet obtained statistics on the exact number of people granted executive clemency before 1997, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel published a graph based on such data from 1986 through 2000. I reproduce the graph in Figure 1 below.

bills, to be discussed below, went nowhere. It was the debacle of the 2000 presidential election that brought greater attention to the issue of the disfranchisement of former felons, and which shined a bright light on the racially disproportionate effects of felon disfranchisement laws and practices.[78]

94. Before the 2000 election, the Florida Secretary of State, Katherine Harris, sent county election supervisors a list of 58,000 alleged felons whom she said should be purged from the voting rolls. Although only 11% of Florida's registered voters at the time were black, 44% of those on the purge list were. After the election, the NAACP sued Florida under the Voting Rights Act, and as a result of the subsequent settlement, the company that had executed the purge reran it with stricter criteria and found 12,000 voters who had been wrongfully purged. Simple calculations by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights suggested that the wrongful purge cost Al Gore the presidency that he lost by 537 votes in Florida.[79]

95. Two days after the U.S. Supreme Court issued its opinion in Bush v. Gore, Gov. Jeb Bush pledged to begin reforming Florida's election system, naming a bipartisan, 21-member task force to recommend changes, including changes in the process of restoring citizenship to persons convicted of felonies.[80] The task force, which contained two prominent black legislators, Rep. Chris Smith (D-Fort Lauderdale) and Sen. Daryl Jones (D-Miami), recommended that the legislature should restore voting rights to returning citizens who had served their sentences and paid restitution, but it did not include payment of fines, fees, or costs as a prerequisite for re-enfranchisement.[81] At the same time as the task force was meeting, several organizations filed lawsuits in state and federal court charging that the disfranchisement of former felons was a violation of the equal protection clause because, in a reporter's summary, of "its disproportionate effect on blacks." State Sen. Kendrick Meek (D-Miami), a prominent black politician, asked Gov. Bush to revise the executive clemency process, referring to the law as "a part of the Jim Crow era."[82] Along with the Florida Justice Institute and Florida Legal Services, the ACLU formed the Florida Equal Voting Rights Project, which sought, among other things, to "push for the restoration of ex-felons' voting rights."[83]

96. The rights restoration process in 2001 had two tracks, according to a description in the South Florida Sun-Sentinel:

> The state Clemency Board automatically reviews cases if a convict has no more than two felonies, no victim restitution due, and no other fines of more than $1000. Certain crimes – including drug trafficking, violent crimes, sexual battery or battery against law enforcement – are excluded.
> Felons who do not meet the automatic standards must apply for clemency from the state in order to vote and regain other rights, such as to sit on a jury.

paperwork, including tax returns, diplomas or degrees, and any loans, leases or mortgages. . . .[84]

97. Although companion bills to amend the constitution and legislatively weaken the restrictions on rights recovery were backed strongly by the 22-member Black Caucus, they failed in the House. Senate passage, however, encouraged reformers, and according to one report, "proponents of the change expect to see some administrative easing of the procedures felons must now undergo to regain the right to vote."[85]

98. Responding to criticisms, the Jeb Bush Administration reexamined its procedures, finding a major error in a computer program, mistakes in applying the rules that would have allowed the automatic restoration of rights, and a failure to begin the process of restoration for departing inmates. From 1998 to 2000, it announced, 14,208 more former felons should have had their rights automatically restored. The Administration also put into effect two changes, the most important of which allowed felons who had completed their sentences, but still owed court costs and fines, to apply for automatic restoration without a hearing. According to Gov. Bush, this change was aimed at promoting greater fairness. "Some offenders, despite their best efforts," the Governor remarked, "simply lack the financial ability to pay the fines against them."[86]

99. In 2003, the Bush Administration also settled a state court case, brought by black state legislators, in which the State admitted to not having provided proper help on rights restoration to nearly 125,000 released offenders between 1992 and 2001. About 31,000 of these persons were eligible for automatic restoration, according to news reports, although the other 94,000 would have to apply for clemency hearings.[87] Noting the rise from fewer than 1,000 restorations in 2,000 to approximately 20,000 in 2004, Bush bragged that "We have streamlined the system." About 15% of felons had their names automatically submitted to state clemency officials immediately after they completed their sentences, and the other 85% were sent applications for a hearing by mail.[88]

100. Nonetheless, criticism of the State's procedures for blatant errors that at the least resulted in disparate racial and partisan purging of people wrongly identified as "felons" continued to bedevil the Jeb Bush Administration. In 2004, the State compiled a list of 48,000 people on the voting rolls who were suspected of having been felons who had not received clemency. But it did so by merging two databases – a felon database which did not contain a "Hispanic" category, and a voter registration database, which did use "Hispanic" as an identifier. A voter registered as "Hispanic" whose name and birthdate matched those of a person on the voting rolls was left off of the purge list unless his race on the felon list was characterized as "unknown." Consequently, only 61 Hispanic people appeared on the list of 48,000, while more than 22,000 were black. A majority of Hispanics then registered to vote in Florida were Republicans, while more than 90% of black people registered as Democrats. Of the 48,000 names, 28,025 were registered Democrats, 9,521 Republicans, and the rest unaffiliated. The embarrassed State scrapped the list. The company that compiled it contended that the State had known of the glitch since early 1998.[89]

Bush's task force on voting reform and was by 2005 the Democratic leader in the state House, declared that black voters should force candidates in the 2006 governor's contest to take a stand on the issue. "'They come to our churches [asking for votes]. They have to make that a part of their platform,' Smith said. 'This is the last little bit of Jim Crow. It was developed to keep blacks from voting and became law when a black man whistling at a white woman was a felony.'"[91]

102. Statewide candidates listened. After Congressman and Democratic gubernatorial nominee Jim Davis picked State Senator Daryl Jones, who is black, as his lieutenant governor running mate and endorsed automatic restoration of the civil rights of former felons, Republican Attorney General Charlie Crist took a similar position on the issue late in the campaign, switching from the stance he had taken during the Bush Administration. Black Democratic legislators who, as discussed below, had long pushed for new laws and constitutional amendments on the issue were skeptical.

> State Sen. Frederica Wilson, a Miami Democrat who has repeatedly failed to pass legislation to change the state rule, said Crist never helped her efforts to lower the hurdles for felons and often was the lone vote blocking the restoration of rights for many who came before the clemency board.
> "This man will say anything to win," she said. "It is misleading and pandering to the black vote and it will blow up in his face."[92]

But Crist's last-minute change in position succeeded, and he won the election with triple the percentage of black voter support that Bush had received in 2002.[93]

103. Contrary to cynical expectations, Crist worked hard to convince the swing member of the Executive Clemency Board, Agriculture Secretary, Charles Bronson, to change his position on the issue.[94] By April, 2007, Crist succeeded, putting into effect changes in procedures that the Sun-Sentinel, a longtime opponent of ex-felon disfranchisement, called "a sea change that should impact the vast majority of non-violent felons immediately."[95] Thereafter, returning citizens convicted of nonviolent crimes who had completed parole and probation and paid restitution would have their rights automatically restored without a hearing or finishing paying fines, fees, or costs. By October, 2007, particularly because of the new governor's push on rights restoration, one black Democratic member of the Florida House was referring to Crist as the state's "first black governor."[96] This was an exaggeration, because the process was still bureaucratically complex, it too often failed to notify people of their right to register to vote, and it neglected to keep up with people's addresses after they came off of parole.[97] But as Figure 2 below shows, the Crist reforms vastly increased the number of people who could enjoy their rights again.

104. Crist's stance on ex-felon voting may have helped him attract support from black voters, but it alienated Republicans, and when he attempted to run for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate in 2010, he was so unpopular that he had to drop out and campaign as an independent. His Republican successor as governor, Rick Scott, quickly reversed the Crist clemency rules, forcing every clemency application into a hearing and delaying consideration for clemency until at least five years after release from prison. The Washington Post spelled out the partisan and racial nature of the issue as it detailed the changes and their implications:

> Florida Gov. Rick Scott and other Cabinet-level officials voted unanimously Wednesday to roll back state rules enacted four years ago that made it easier for many ex-felons to regain the right to vote.
>
> Now, under the new rules, even nonviolent offenders would have to wait five years after the conclusion of their sentences to apply for the chance to have their civil rights restored.
>
> The vote carries national political implications. Many GOP leaders never forgave then-Gov. Charlie Crist for his move to make civil rights restoration almost automatic for most ex-felons.
>
> The 2007 rule change spurred more than 100,000 ex-felons to earn the ability to register to vote ahead of the 2008 election in which then-candidate Barack Obama swept Florida. Experts say many of those new voters were likely Democratic-leaning African Americans. . . .
>
> Public comment was limited, with black lawmakers, civil rights leaders and a county elections official decrying the change as unfair and overly hasty. . . .
> Crist pushed the new rule in 2007 as he was looking for inroads into the state's black electorate. He won praise from Florida's black legislative caucus, which had long made the issue a priority.[98]

105. The Post's story was reserved, compared to that in the Miami Herald. "Welcome back, Jim Crow," the paper's editorial screamed in bold type. "Plan to toughen felons' rights-restoration process is biased and unfair."

> In record time, Florida's Cabinet brought us back to Jim Crow-era laws Wednesday. Unanimously, the Cabinet undid a judicious measure that had partially streamlined the voting-rights restoration process for tens of thousands of felons convicted of nonviolent crimes.. . . .
>
> Make no mistake: This proposal has racial and partisan implications. . . .
> A disproportionate number of Florida's felons are African American, and in this state, blacks overwhelmingly vote Democratic. The Cabinet has further alienated black voters by adopting these more-stringent restoration rules. What purpose does that serve the state or the Republican Party?[99]

106. Figure 2, above, makes dramatically clear the overall effect of the substitution of Scott's rules for Crist's, and it suggests the impetus behind the drive for Amendment 4. When the legislature refused to pass any of the bills, discussed below, authorizing a vote of the people on the issue, proponents had no alternative to trying to gather the hundreds of thousands of signatures they needed to put the measure, now known as Amendment 4, on the ballot.

C. A Racial Issue

1. Reform Bills from 1998 to 2018

107. During the second floor hearing on H.B. 7089 on April 23, 2019, Rep. James Grant expressed again and again his dissatisfaction with making new law by constitutional amendment, instead of initiating it in the legislature. "[A] republic does not make policy in a constitution," he proclaimed. There were "troubling consequences of making policy in the constitution." "This is why policy in the constitution is a terrifying and troubling trend, because we don't get to ask questions like 'what did other states do, what would be the best approach to this. We simply take what was given to us, sealed on election night last November, and follow that."[100] Representative Grant failed to note that since constraints on the civil rights of former felons were written into the constitution, reforms had first to amend that document.

108. This was another remarkably disingenuous statement from Rep. Grant, who had served in the legislature since 2010, and who could hardly have helped knowing that black legislators had made repeated efforts to revise the State's laws on the rights of former felons. In fact, there had been 53 bills introduced into the legislature from 1998 through 2018. Table 7 (in the Appendix) summarizes them, with years of introduction, links to copies of original bills, sponsor names and their racial identities (black legislators' names are bold-faced), and truncated bill abstracts.

109. There are four major conclusions to note from this lengthy table: First, this was an issue that drew a lot of attention. Year after year, legislators kept introducing bills. Second, almost all of the bills died in committees. Only in 2000 and 2001 did committee substitutes emerge, and only in 2001 did a bill pass one house of the legislature. It was a task for Sisyphus. Third, the inability to pass a bill was not the result of inflexibility on the part of reformers. The proposed measures went through many permutations – bills or proposed constitutional amendments that restored rights automatically upon completion of parole; bills with different treatments of restitution, costs, and fees; bills with different waiting periods. Fourth, and perhaps most significant, this was an issue of particular concern to black legislators and the communities that they represented. Of 118 sponsors of the 53 bills and resolutions, 95 were black legislators. In the halls of the legislature, this was clearly an issue associated with race and, in particular, with black people.

2. Felon Disfranchisement Linked to Race in the Media Before Amendment 4

110. We have already observed several connections of the felon disfranchisement issue with racial concerns in the newspapers. It is as easy as it would be tedious to multiply examples, so we can confine ourselves to a few.

112. "'It has been documented that it was a way to deny blacks the right to vote,' said state Rep. Chris Smith, D-Fort Lauderdale. 'If you were convicted of a crime, your rights could be taken. It was started for racist reasons. But Florida went a step further. They put it in the constitution, and that's made it real hard to change.'"[102]

113. "When it comes to convicted felons, Florida doesn't play. There are 400,000 in the state – a third of them black – who can't vote, can't hold certain jobs and can't receive certain benefits, like financial aid for college."[103]

nearly one in four of them from casting ballots – prolonging a shameful legacy of policies concocted to disenfranchise black people that began after the Civil War."[106]

3. Race and Amendment 4

117. In March, 2017, the Florida Rights Restoration Coalition received the results of a telephone survey by two opinion research groups which tested, among other things, the success of various messages in convincing people to vote for or against a constitutional amendment on ex-felon disfranchisement. Of six potential messages to supporters, the one that the smallest number of respondents found either "very convincing" or "somewhat convincing" was a race-themed message: "There are over 1.6 million people in Florida who are banned for life from voting, and a disproportionate share are poor, African American or Hispanic. This amendment returns fairness to the historically-biased Florida criminal justice system."[107] Only 51% were convinced by the statement, compared to 79% who found a "second chances" message convincing or very convincing: "Americans believe in second chances and that people can earn forgiveness. Restoring a person's ability to vote is the right thing to do for those who have turned their life around and have become contributing members of their communities."[108] Not surprisingly, the FRRC chose to emphasize "second chances," not racial fairness in its advertising and direct appeals.

118. It is therefore surprising that so many newspaper articles about Amendment 4 stressed the racial context and potential effect of the Amendment. The intricate maneuvering of one of the Amendment's chief spokespersons, Desmond Meade, and the solid anchoring of the issue in the reality of racial discrimination was evident even before the Amendment had qualified for the ballot:

> Some 500,000 of the 1.7 million Floridians who have lost the right to vote are African-Americans – just over 20% of the state's African-American population. That makes the issue a major concern in the African-American community, but Meade points out that it also means more than a million of these disenfranchised voters are not black.
> "It's very easy for this to be pigeonholed as an African-American issue or a political issue, but our belief is that this transcends those things," Meade said. "This issue impacts all Americans."[109]

119. By contrast, black State Sen. Perry Thurston (D-Fort Lauderdale) was more open about the racial issues involved when he urged every citizen to sign and circulate petitions to qualify the Amendment for the ballot:

> It may be 2017, but institutional racism is not gone. Through biases in our criminal justice system, Florida's felony disenfranchisement law unjustly leaves over two million African-Americans voiceless in our democracy. Of Florida's 1.6 million disenfranchised voters, about one-third are black, despite African-Americans making up only 15% of our state's population.[110]

120. During the campaign, newspaper article after article stressed the racial and partisan aspects of the current ex-felon disfranchisement process and of the racial stakes in the passage of Amendment 4.

121. In an op-ed column titled "Old Jim Crow still darkly looms over Florida state elections," Fred Grimm pronounced that

125. A story about Amendment 4 in the Orlando Sentinel featured a statement by the retired Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court, Harry Lee Anstead, which began: "It's been widely reported an estimated 1.5 million-plus Floridians are disenfranchised long after completing felony sentences resulting in the loss of their civil rights upon conviction, representing more than 25 percent of all felony disenfranchisement in the U.S. Of those, disproportionately high numbers are racial and ethnic minorities given the nature of our criminal justice system, exacerbating divisions in civil society."[115]

126. Assessing Gov. Rick Scott's legacy, an article in Florida Today noted that Scott "reversed a policy automatically restoring voting rights to nonviolent felons who complete their sentence. The decision appealed to law-and-order Floridians, but critics said it was a political move because felons are disproportionately low income and minority – groups that tend to vote for Democrats. The issue is on the ballot this fall."[116]

127. An article about the amendment from the News Service of Florida published in the Tallahassee Democrat noted that "Amendment 4 has drawn national support, with Florida one of a handful of states that have laws on the books critics say are remnants of post-Civil War Jim Crow policies designed to keep blacks from casting ballots."[117]

128. Endorsing Amendment 4, the Palm Beach Post pointed out that "Although a majority of felons are white, Fl's ban disproportionately affects black people. The outrageous reality is that more than one in five voting-age blacks can't vote in Florida, compared with about one in 10 voters in the state's general population. . . .[Felon disfranchisement] "is a living remnant of Reconstruction and Jim Crow."[118]

136. In sum, however anxious the FRRC and its allies were to downplay racial considerations during the campaign for Amendment 4, because they feared that a racial justice appeal would fail to gain the support of a supermajority of Floridians, the media were under no such constraints. Numerous articles in newspapers pointed out, often starkly, the racial discrimination that underlay Florida's long of disfranchising people who had been convicted of felonies. Few people who voted on the issue could have been unaware that Amendment 4 not only aimed at giving people in general a second chance, but more specifically, that it would likely bring about at least some change in the racial composition of the electorate.

D. A "Complete Review of the Entire History" of Felon Disfranchisement from 1975 Through 2018 Shows the Issue to Have Been Suffused with Racial Concerns

137. Had Rep. James Grant publicly examined or engaged with the modern history of felon disfranchisement in the state, instead of just employing "history" in a rhetorical flourish, he would have found racial discrimination at every turn, and he might have understood how vast swings in the treatment of felon rights motivated proponents of Amendment 4 to seek a much more humane and permanent policy on rights restoration than Gov. Scott had put into force. It would then have been more difficult for him to have argued that S.B. 7066 merely carried out the will of the Florida electorate.

138. As discussed above, in 1975, Gov. Reubin Askew made the process of restoring the civil rights of former felons nearly automatic for most, and that policy was followed by his successor, Bob Graham. The number of people who had their rights restored under these two Democratic governors may have numbered in the hundreds of thousands. From 1986 to 1992, the number of restorations ranged from 5,000 to 15,000 annually. Executive clemency diminished in the 1990s, and in response, black legislators began to introduce bills aimed at easing former prisoners back into society. Those bills failed, and the presidential election of 2000 was likely determined by the imposition of an error-filled purge of purported felons who had not had their rights restored. In response, Gov. Jeb Bush appointed a bipartisan election reform task force which recommended, among other things, changes in the felon disfranchisement laws and procedures. The bills failed, but Gov. Bush changed the clemency rules, allowing people who could not afford to pay remaining fines, fees, and costs to vote as a matter of "fairness." The number of people regaining their rights rose from fewer than 1,000 in 2000 to 20,000 by 2004.

139. But, the most dramatic change that we can fully document in this period came with Republican Gov. Charlie Crist's reform of the system, a reform that he clearly made to win black voter support, which he did. From 1998 through 2006, 74 black and 11 white legislators sponsored 40 bills aimed at making it easier for returning citizens to regain their rights. All failed to be adopted, and almost none received a floor vote. In 2005, a major challenge to the disfranchisement of former felons failed in federal court. As a result, black leaders pushed the 2006 gubernatorial candidates to commit to reforms of the clemency process. After the Democratic gubernatorial candidate took a firm stand on the issue and chose a prominent black running mate, Charlie Crist, late in the campaign, switched the stance that he had taken as attorney general and endorsed easing the process of restoring rights.

140. Crist lived up to his campaign promises, the number of people who won executive clemency skyrocketed, and Crist's enfranchisement of so many former felons was blamed by some in his party for the Republicans' loss of the State in the 2008 presidential contest. In contrast, Crist's successor as governor, Rick Scott, dramatically cut back the number of returning citizens who were re-enfranchised, an action widely understood to have a disparate impact on black people. As the Miami Herald remarked of Scott's changes in the process of executive clemency, "Welcome back, Jim Crow . . . . Make no mistake: this proposal has racial and partisan implications."[126] Pressure built up to return to the practices of Scott's predecessor. A dozen more bills were deposited in the legislative hoppers during Scott's term. There was no committee action on any of them. The only alternative was a citizens' initiative, which became Amendment 4.

141. The sponsorship of 53 bills on the subject, largely by black state legislators, is merely one indication of the identification of the issue with racial discrimination. Article after article on the topic in newspapers, both before and after the campaign for Amendment 4, made explicit the connection between contemporary felon disfranchisement and Jim Crow Era franchise restrictions on black people or cited statistics of the disproportionate number of black people excluded from voting because they had once been convicted of felonies. Even though the sponsors of Amendment 4 sought to avoid an emphasis on race with their evangelical "second chance" appeals,[127] citizens who delved into the subject at all could hardly avoid being confronted with hard racial truths. By the time that the Amendment passed and the legislature prepared to consider whether it needed to take action implement it, the understanding that easing felon disfranchisement would disproportionately enfranchise black people and contrarily, that tightening the process of restoring rights would disproportionately harm black people, was firmly fixed in the consciousness of voters and, more importantly, of the policy experts in the Florida Legislature.

VI. The Threat of New Voters and the Passage of S.B. 7066

A. The Momentum of Amendment 4

142. During and after the 2018 election, newspaper articles suggested the threat to Republicans that the passage of Amendment 4 posed, because so many of the potential new voters were members of minority groups, particularly black people. The potential enfranchisement of approximately more than a million "disproportionately . . . minority voters who tend to

[127] The support of evangelicals was important in the campaign: "Amendment 4 is on the ballot because of a long-shot petition campaign that drew support not only from civil rights groups, but also a broad range of people. support Democrats . . .mean[s] a greatly reshaped Florida electorate for the 2020 presidential election," a news article in the South Florida Sun-Sentinel predicted.[128] Longtime ACLU leader Howard Simon felt that he could retire from his position "on the 'highest note' – restoring felons' voting rights," because he thought that "Amendment 4 is going to transform Florida forever."[129]

143. A news article in the Tallahassee Democrat noted that "The amendment will have an outsize effect on the black population, who are arrested and incarcerated at a higher rate than any other group. More than one in five black people in Florida can't vote because of a felony conviction, according to estimates by the Sentencing Project . . . . The effects of Amendment 4 will likely be felt during the 2020 election. Florida is a swing state, and if the ongoing tension over the close races for governor and senator are any indication, the 1.5 million additional voters could be an important factor in a 2020 contest."[130] And in an editorial that was in equal parts a lament about the immediate past and a prediction of the future, the Sun-Sentinel remarked "How different might other campaigns have turned out had they [returning citizens] already been allowed to vote, as they would have been in most other states? Given that most are black people, a demographic that votes heavily Democratic, Andrew Gillum would likely be the governor-elect and Bill Nelson would be returning to the Senate."[131]

144. Driven by a grass-roots campaign sparked by former felons seeking not just to change a policy, but to restore their own franchise, many new voters signed up as soon as they became eligible on January 8, 2019 and others followed in succeeding months, even after S.B. 7066 became effective on July 1, 2019.[132] They represented a political movement that seemed to have the capability of overcoming the usual disconnection of the formerly imprisoned from civic affairs.[133] As Polk County Supervisor of Elections Lori Edwards reported, "We're getting a lot of inquiries from our constituents, from the public. People are very aware of this and they're wanting to act."[134] "In the run-up to Tuesday [Jan. 8]," the Washington Post reported, "the organizations and volunteers who worked for the past decade to pass the amendment to the state constitution have been ramping up their efforts to encourage ex-felons to quickly follow through."[135]

to become S.B. 7066, former Democratic gubernatorial candidate Andrew Gillum, who had lost the 2018 election by less than 33,000 votes, announced a plan to register a million new voters. "I want us to send an unapologetic message to the legislature to get their hands off of Amendment 4. It is the law of the land," Gillam declared.[137]

146. As the legislature began to consider whether Amendment 4 needed any implementing legislation at all, and if it did, what the provisions of that law should be, it was clear that if large numbers of returning citizens were allowed to vote, the black percentage of Florida voters would rise, perhaps markedly. Consequently, the fragile Republican majorities in all statewide and many more localized elections would be in jeopardy. [138] These widely understood facts shaped S.B. 7066 from the outset.

B. The Recognition and Denial of Racial Motives in the S.B. 7066 Debate

147. The single most instructive statement about intent during the consideration of S.B. 7066 and the bills that were blended into it came as Rep. James Grant closed the debate before the State Affairs Committee on April 4, 2018. "I'm going to leave my beliefs at the door, and I gonna take the package that was sent to us. I'm going to take my beliefs, my priorities, my preferences, and that all stays out. I was asked have I done a study to know how many people are impacted by this. I said 'no'. [138] Although Mark Meredith and Michael Morse sought to downplay the partisan consequences of the possible passage of Amendment 4 in a pre-election-day news article by pointing to the usually low levels of registration and turnout of returned citizens who had received clemency previously in Florida, they did estimate that enfranchising all of the State's felons in 2016 would have added 102,00 additional votes for Democrats, but only 54,000 for Republicans, with 40,000 not choosing a party. As I argue in the text, the "movement" spirit that the Amendment 4 campaign embodied might have increased turnout among the new post-November 2018 registrants. In any event, 50,000 votes could be pivotal in a swing state. See Marc Meredith and Michael Morse, "Why letting ex-felons vote probably won't swing Florida/We analyzed ex-felons with voting rights. 148. Even without all the evidence, presented in Section IV of this report, that the "faithful steward" assertion about S.B. 7066 was fatally flawed, the notion that politicians could possibly ignore their own beliefs and disregard their preferences when considering bills should fill anyone with skepticism. Skepticism should turn to cynicism when the statement goes on to claim that the politician does not want to examine the consequences of a particular measure. Why not? The obvious answer, supported by considerable evidence quoted and cited above, is that Grant and everyone else knew what the impact of the law would be: It would disproportionately disfranchise black people and that impact would damage the electoral fortunes of the Democratic Party. Grant did not need a study because he knew the answer. In pleading a desire for ignorance, the chief sponsor of S.B. 7066 was actually exhibiting a guilty knowledge.

149. It should also be noted that H.B. 7089 originated in the Criminal Justice Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee. Rep. Grant chaired that subcommittee. The senate sponsor of S.B. 7086, Sen. Jeff Brandes, was Vice Chair of the Criminal Justice Committee. While it might be possible that other legislators were unaware of the approximate black and Latino percentage of Floridians who had been convicted of felonies, it is absolutely inconceivable that members of criminal justice committees were ignorant of the racial and socioeconomic disparities in the populations in the Florida and federal criminal justice systems. In the same 2019 legislative session that passed S.B. 7066, the legislature also held extensive hearings and passed the "First Step Act," which originated in the criminal justice committees on which Grant and Brandes served. Brandes was the principal sponsor of the First Step Act, a bill aimed at reducing spending on the criminal justice system by reducing the prison population.[140] It was a conservative bill patterned after Pres. Trump's "First Step Act" of 2018.[141] Witnesses at those hearings often commented on the demographics of the Florida prison population, and there was an obvious connection between the disproportionately black and poor population in the prisons and the disparate effects that S. B. 7066 would cause.

150. Just as Rep. Grant claimed not to care about the racial effect of S.B. 7066, he denied any interest in the related question of whether his bill was unfair to poorer returning citizens, since they would be less able to pay restitution, fines, fees, and costs, and thus less likely to be able to recover their rights to vote. In a colloquy on the last day of the session with Rep. Anna Eskamani (D-Orlando), Grant was asked "Is there a concern that when someone is in that economic situation [minimum wage worker] that we are still not granting them an appropriate pathway to have their rights restored under the context and intent of Amendment 4?" His reply: "No. That is not a concern."[142]

151. Even more revealing, Rep. Grant was asked by a black member, Rep. Geraldine F. Thompson (D-Orlando) "Do you have any statistics regarding individuals who have been required to make restitution and who have, in fact, made restitution?" Grant responded: "No, as I have addressed numerous times, I intentionally wanted to stay blind to the data." Thompson pressed him: "So, Representative, you have no information regarding the ability of people to make restitution and how many people we would expect to make restitution and then get their rights restored. Is that what you're saying?" Grant declined to respond.[143]

152. In the course of his answers to Rep. Thompson, Rep. Grant attempted to distinguish data about the criminal justice system from that on the disfranchisement of returning citizens. But in doing so, he admitted that he wished to seem to remain ignorant of—or willfully ignore— the effect of S.B. 7066 on any racial or economic group because he did not want to provide evidence of a discriminatory intent:

> I did not want to know the data, because the data is not relevant for this particular objective. The data is absolutely relevant to the criminal justice reform we work on, or the policies we work on. This isn't a policy bill. This is a taking of the Amendment 4 package in the totality sent to us. And so, as I have repeatedly stated, I did not want to know data, because I did not want anybody to be able to make the allegation that my work product was skewed by any data.[144]

153. As might be expected on a topic whose distant and immediately preceding history had been inextricably intertwined with racial concerns, the debate in the legislature sometimes turned from the specifics of the bills to charges that S.B. 7066 was racially discriminatory in intent and/or effect. These charges were almost never directly answered by the proponents of S.B. 7066, who instead sought to deflect them by offering the faithful steward defense, and to delay and diffuse them by continuing to negotiate with opposing legislators and the leaders of the Amendment 4 campaign until almost the last day of the legislative session.[145] On the day after S.B. 7066 passed, a news article in the Tallahassee Democrat revealed that the FRRC had "worked behind the scenes with Republicans and Democrats to craft a proposal they said they hoped would be closer to the amendment's intent."[146]

154. When all else failed, the sponsors of S.B. 7066 met the charges not with argument or contrary facts, but with disdain. For example, when Rep. Fentrice Driskell (D-Tampa), who is black, asked Rep. James Grant "[H]ow many African-Americans will be impacted by the legislation?" Grant replied, sternly, "I have no idea and it had no bearing on this legislation….I have intentionally not looked at the numbers."[147] This followed the suggestions of a memo setting out talking points for Republican legislators for dealing with the media during the debate over S.B. 7066. If asked "What is your reaction to people calling this bill discriminatory against minorities and the poor?" the memo suggested the following answer: "Our job is to follow the will of the voters and make sure that Floridians who have fully completed their sentence can easily get registered to vote. Name-calling is a sad distraction from the important work of implementing this amendment."[148] negotiations sometimes appeared even in the hearings. For example, when he appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee at an Apr. 8, 2019 hearing, Neil Volz testified that "Because of the civil lien language, we're not prepared to accept the bill or amendment, [but] we do think it is important to acknowledge the clarifying language on costs as well as provision taking 'attempted murder' out of the definition of 'murder', as a step in the right direction." http://www.flsenate.gov/media/videoplayer?EventID=2443575804_2019041108&Redirect=true. 156. There were also fewer direct charges of racially discriminatory intent by opponents of H.B. 7089, S.B. 7086, and S.B. 7066 inside the legislature than might be expected, and the legislators told us why. During debate in the Senate on May 2, 2019, State Senator Oscar Braynon (D-Miami Gardens), who is black, referred indirectly to the racial origins of felon disfranchisement: "I know why this original law was created." But then he pivoted away from the theme, confiding to senators that "I've been asked to not get deep into that by people who put [Amendment 4] on the ballot."[149] Just as they had shied away from emphasizing racial justice themes in the campaign for Amendment 4, some activists who had led the movement for it appear to have feared to endanger any chance at compromise in the Republican-dominated legislature if they or their allies too openly stressed the entanglement of the issue with racial discrimination.

155. This strategy of deflect, delay, diffuse, and disdain explains why there were so few statements by sponsors and other proponents of S.B. 7066 about issues of racial discrimination.

157. Nonetheless, the issue did arise during the legislative session. At the first hearing on H.B. 7089, Neil Volz, the political director of the FRRC, announced the group's opposition because the bill "will restrict the ability to vote for thousands of Floridians, especially people who are poor, especially people who are people of color."[150] In the same hearing, Rep. Adam Hattersley (D-Riverview) denounced the bill, saying "It's not only targeting the poor and…targeting minorities, but it's blatantly unconstitutional as a poll tax."[151] Rep. James Bush (D-Miami), who is black, invoked Martin Luther King, Jr., Rosa Parks, Coretta Scott King, and other civil rights leaders and stressed that Amendment 4 had been "a great cause for people of color." Stressing the opposition to H.B. 7089 by the NAACP and the Black Caucus, he recounted phone calls from constituents who asserted that the bill might be in violation of the Reconstruction Amendments and Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, as well as Article 11, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, which governs amendments by initiative.[152] More colloquially,

Michael Anderson of the FRRC, testifying before the House Committee on State Affairs on April 4, 2019, charged that "What y'all are doing with the poll tax is continuing to oppress poor Black and Brown communities."[153]

158. In response, Rep. James Grant called the charge that his bill constituted a poll tax "near arrogance . . . Members, to suggest that this is a poll tax inherently diminishes the atrocity of what a poll tax was."[154] He dismissed "lots of concern about this bill because it discriminates or disenfranchises" on the (false) grounds that the comments were not directed to any specific sections of the bill. Relying entirely on the faithful steward defense, he did not address explicit assertions that the bill would have a racially discriminatory effect or implicit assertions that that effect was intended.[155] Instead, in the April 4, 2019 meeting, Rep. Grant accused the opponents of his bill of lacking "truth and fact and intellectual honesty."[156]

159. As a matter of fact, Rep. Grant was quite wrong about the poll tax, which first entered Anglo-American law in 1377 as an English tax of 4 pence on each person over the age of 14 who was not a beggar to finance Edward III's war against France.[157] Many historians think it was a partial cause of the 1381 "Peasants' Revolt." The poll tax in England had nothing to do with qualifications for voting. In the American colonies and Early Republic, poll taxes were levied to expand the tax base as more people began to live in towns, where there was less taxable real property. After the American Revolution, poll tax receipts were used in Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, and North Carolina to allow men who were too poor to meet the property qualifications for suffrage to vote anyway – i.e., the poll tax at first expanded the suffrage. Other states adopted similar provisions from 1789 on. It was only after the Reconstruction governments in the South fell that the poll tax was employed to disfranchise African-Americans and poor whites – most notably the 1877 Georgia cumulative poll tax. Florida adopted a non-cumulative poll tax in 1889, which was quickly effective in disfranchising the vast majority of African-Americans in the state.[158] The point is that the poll tax was just a capitation or head tax which was often used purely to finance governments. It became a disfranchising device only when it was employed to differentiate between those who could afford to pay it and those who could not as a prerequisite to voting – exactly like the differentiation between returning citizens who cannot afford to pay LFOs and those who can. Just as there was nothing about a poll tax that necessarily had anything to do with voting, there is nothing about an LFO for a returning citizen that necessarily has anything to do with voting.

160. Even though Grant sought to avoid questions of who would be disadvantaged by S.B. 7066 or its predecessors, Rep. Shevrid D. Jones (D-West Park), who is black, tried to corner him with the statistic that "83 percent of the fines are never paid back… and over 60 percent of those fines that are never paid back are from African Americans. And so now we say that this is not political and no one is being disenfranchised, but I just want[ed] to let you know that those [i.e., African-Americans] are the individuals who are being disenfranchised." Representative Grant resorted as usual, to the faithful servant defense : to his usual circumlocution: "Nobody is being disfranchised by this bill . . . . nobody [is] losing anything in this bill. . . . To suggest that this bill is disenfranchising [anyone] is misguided. [We are passing what voters wanted.]"[159]

161. In the Senate, the crucial amendment and discussion came on the day before final passage, when State Sen. Perry E. Thurston, Jr. (D-Fort Lauderdale), who is black and had been the Democratic Minority Leader when he was in the lower house of the legislature, offered an amendment that would have allowed returning citizens to vote if any restitution, fines, fees, and court costs had been converted into civil liens. He explained both the racial connections of the issue and the reasons behind the campaign for Amendment 4 well enough to make his remarks worth quoting at length. His amendment, he remarked,

> Address[es] the simple, simple effort at voter suppression and disenfranchisement and the thwarting of the will of 5 million plus people of this State. And how do we know that?...All we have to do is to look at the timeline. We don't have to go back to Reconstruction or 1970, when the first African-American was elected to this legislature. That's [1970 is] when the effort to change this law began; and it's been going on ever since. But all we have to do is to go back to 2006, [when [Charlie] Crist was elected [governor], and 2007, when his executive order addressed this issue.]. . .The reason I want you to go back to 2006-07 is because then you can look at it through the eyes of that disenfranchised citizen who's coming back into society. . . .There was never…a big uproar about fines, costs, and restitution [during those 4 years] [2007-11]. How many people's rights were reinstated in four years based on that? 150,000 people got their rights reinstated without any reference to fines, fees, and restitution. What else happened? The legislature didn't fund the process. So what happened? 100,000 people were in a bottleneck, [having] completed all of their requirements, wanted to get their rights reinstated. And why couldn't they? Gov. Rick Scott was elected. The first order of business was to discontinue that process that was working; that's when this petition and drive [for Amendment 4] began.[160]

162. The Republican-majority made no effort to refute the charges of racial discrimination or to comment on Sen. Thurston's short history of the origins of Amendment 4, a history that entirely undercut the faithful steward theory of the intent of the voters. Even though Sen. Brandes admitted that he preferred a bill that would allow someone to vote if his fines and fees had been converted to civil liens, Sen. Brandes opposed restoring the right to vote to someone who still owed any restitution. The Thurston amendment failed on a voice vote (i.e., without a roll call), and S.B. 7066 – the Grant version that did not allow for restoration of the vote if any LFO had been converted to a lien – passed on a party-line vote.[161]

163. In the House on the last day of the session, with any hope of further amendments to the bill exhausted, more black legislators seem to have felt freer to address the racial nature of the legislation openly and directly. In the most comprehensive statement, Rep. Dotie Joseph (D-North Miami) reviewed the history of felon disfranchisement and other parts of what she referred to as the "Black Codes" in Florida.

> "The reality is that the policy decision to disenfranchise felons was one of the tools that was used by this legislature back in the 1800s to keep African-Americans from exercising their right to vote . . . . Enforcement of those Black Codes were so effective that by the 1870s and 1880s, more than 95% of the convicts in the state of Florida were Black. That was not the case before. Legislator William J. Purman reportedly bragged about the policies that had kept Florida from becoming 'nigger-ized.' Of those racially motivated disenfranchising laws, removing a felon's right to vote was one of the most effective of those. . . . Florida's felon population [tends to be] overrepresented by black and brown people who are, in many cases, the victims of a criminal justice system that disproportionally targets, arrests, charges, prosecutes, convicts, and sentences people of color at a higher rate based on no other factor, [other] than their race."[162]

C. The Provisions of S.B. 7066 and their Known Racially Discriminatory Effects

164. What was considered and rejected, and what was not even seriously considered during the process of developing the bill, may be as instructive about its motives as what was included in the final law. It was self-evident that the more restrictive the bill was, the greater the disfranchising effect on black potential voters would be, because everyone understood that since the First Reconstruction, African-Americans in the South and much of the non-South have been more likely to be convicted of felony crimes than whites were. So every layer of LFOs and every provision that made them more onerous would obviously have a greater racially discriminatory effect. If the payment of no LFOs was required to vote, that would enfranchise or re-enfranchise more African-Americans and Latino potential voters. If restitution had to be paid, fewer would enjoy the suffrage; if, in addition to restoration, fines and/or fees were required, even fewer could vote; if costs were added, still fewer. If returning citizens were able to vote so long as their LFOs, or some of them, were converted to civil liens, either at the original sentencing or after they emerged from prison, more would be able to vote.

165. It was this last provision, discussed above in Section IV, which was in Sen. Brandes's S.B. 7086, that especially gave the activists responsible for Amendment 4 hope, for if judges converted most LFOs to liens – nobody discussed any statistics on the percentages so converted during the debates – then most returning citizens would be eligible to vote. When Sen. Brandes's version of the legislation was still alive, the Miami Herald reported that "Creators of the amendment objected to lawmakers passing any bill, but after weeks of talks with Brandes, who has championed criminal justice reforms over the years, they eventually supported the Senate's bill."[163] But when the House refused to accept Sen. Brandes's position on civil liens, Amendment 4 supporters were dismayed. As Cecile Scoon, the chief lobbyist on this bill for the Florida League of Women Voters, remarked in her deposition, "there was another part of 7066 that was devastating; that together with the fines and fees made it a minefield, and that was the part that said, we don't care if the judge converted your legal financial obligations to a civil lien or judgment, you've still got to pay. . . . So when 7066 at the very last minute flipped that dime, that was a problem."[164]

166. The refusal of Rep. Grant and the House to accede to this provision of Sen. Brandes's bill is strong evidence of the legislators' intention to pass nearly the most restrictive bill they could, one that by the very nature of the ex-felon population had a more discriminatory effect than bills with more lenient treatments of the payment of LFOs did. The only important provisions of S.B. 7066 that made it less draconian than the original bills were one that allowed LFOs to be waived, either by a judge or by a victim owed restitution, and another that excluded post-sentence costs from the LFOs that had to be paid before a returning citizen could vote.[165] And the legislature knew that these waiving provisions could not be exercised by Florida residents with out-of-state or federal convictions, that judges might not be able to waive LFOs that had previously been converted to civil liens, that judges were not required to waive the LFOs of people who were too poor to pay, and that the bill set no standards at all for judges on waiving financial penalties.[166] So even the minor waiving amendments would likely have only the most minimal effects.

167. But there was another consideration that interacted with the necessity to pay LFOs that greatly increased the discriminatory effect of S.B. 7066, and the failure to alleviate that problem is an even stronger indication of discriminatory intent than the rejection of the civil lien provision. The most subtle issue in the felon disfranchisement debate in Florida and one which had been forcefully raised long before voters went to the polls in November, 2018, was that there was no central source of records on any of the LFOs. No one, not the Secretary of State, county elections supervisors, voter registration groups, or returning citizens themselves could easily discover who would be qualified to register or what was necessary for them to do to become qualified. Fines, fees, and costs had not had to be paid before a returning citizen could be granted executive clemency. By adding them into the process, the framers of S.B. 7066 added more bureaucratic hurdles, more confusion.

168. From the beginnings of the process in the workshops of the Financial Impact Estimating Conference in October, 2016, the lack of a central data repository on LFOs was recognized. For instance, in the Oct. 5, 2016 FIEC workshop, Jose Diez-Arguelles, of the Florida Senate professional staff, noted that there was not then any single office "saying yes, Jose, you have completed all your terms, so now you can vote – if [in the future] there's no one doing that, the Secretary of State will not know that that has happened, and I don't know how that is going to work. I mean that's just not going to work. I think the State is going to have an interest . . . if this passes and the State puts in place a process that takes five years to check these items, I think somebody is going to court and say that's unreasonable."[167]

169. When the FIEC sent out inquiries to various State agencies about how they determined the eligibility of former felons to vote, it received a variety of replies, which were summarized by Matt Hasbrouck, of the Office of Economic and Demographic Research, for the workshop on Oct. 17, 2016: "You can see there's a large list [of databases] coming from different areas, for instance [DOC] [Department of Corrections], and I believe, a variety of different information. I think there's one here that works with federal information. A lot of different databases that are used to determine eligibility."[168] Appendix A of the FIEC report listed 11 different databases that were used in the pre-Amendment 4 period to determine the eligibility of returning citizens to vote.[169] And information on restitution, for instance, was not on any database, but was kept in the offices of the local clerks of court.[170]

170. The FIEC workshops revealed some of the complexities of the process that would have to be set up to if Amendment 4 passed. As the chair of the FIEC, Amy Baker, of the Office of Economic and Demographic Research, noted, "there is still going to have to be somebody determining that in fact all terms of the sentence have been completed." Accordingly, Baker asked Julia McCall, the representative of the Office of Executive Clemency (OEC), which was part of the Department of Corrections (DOC), who appeared before the workshop, how the new process might work. McCall replied that "there are a lot of things that are unanswered with who would do what, who would verify, who would send correspondence to the applicants, who would send the final certificates . . . I think we're the agency who has the expertise to do all that, but this is still at this time, there's so many unanswered questions. And some of our inmates are on interstate compact in other states, some inmates are serving federal crimes in federal prisons, some are in local jails and specialized programs, and there's still a lot up in the air about who would monitor and who would double check."[171]

171. The legislature was well aware of the difficulty of finding out about LFOs. For example, at the first House hearing on H.B. 7089, Lee Adams of the Bureau of Admission and Release in the Department of Corrections

(DOC) testified that the DOC in "has no way of knowing" if someone has completed their LFO payments after they have finished probation. "There are enormous gaps in what we do know and what we don't know."[172] At the same hearing, Martin County Clerk of Court Carolyn Timmann stated that it was "most common for restitution to be handled outside of the clerk's office," that the Department of Corrections might have records of restitution payments if they were completed before the person completed probation, and that when courts ordered individuals to pay restitution directly to crime victims, clerks rarely received receipts or any sort of documentation.[173]

172. At the second floor hearing of H.B. 7089 on April 23, 2019, Rep. Mike Grieco (D-Miami Beach) asked Rep. Grant whether there was "somewhere somebody can go to find out if [they are] eligible?" Grant replied "One of the very troubling realizations… is that the state of Florida nowhere keeps a discrete data element that documents whether …somebody has completed the term of their sentence….I'm a bit embarrassed that I have not realized this before. . . There is no process. [T]here is no database in the state of Florida that contains the . . . [information]" on whether one is eligible. "[W]e will need to fund in future effort to ensure that the Secretary of State will have the ability to answer these questions .... This is a massively different and more complicated workflow that what we have done historically."[174] For anyone who missed this admission, Rep. Grant replayed it even more clearly in a colloquy with Rep. Fentrice Driskell, the same day:

> "Driskell: Do the clerks of court have a database showing those who've completed payment of all their monetary obligations? (7:04)
> "Grant: There is no stakeholder in the state of Florida that can serve as a source of truth that somebody completed all the terms of their sentence."

> "Grant: As I've described, you would have a process akin to the Florida Commission on Offender Review doing a case by case analysis to retrieve information from disparate sources – FDLE, DOC, clerks of court, DJJ, OSCA – the list goes on and on. So the answer to where the information is contained is all over the course of Florida's government."[175]

173. In other words, the legislature was quite cognizant of the fact when it passed S.B. 7066 that it was creating almost insuperable barriers to the broad re-enfranchisement of voters contemplated by Amendment 4. Not only was it going to be as complicated and ad hoc as the pre-Amendment 4 executive clemency process. It was specifically designed by Rep. Grant to be more complicated, because it required the payment of fines, fees, and costs, which were not mandated under the clemency process.[176] Unlike in Sen. Brandes's version of the legislation, S.B. 7066 did not enable someone to vote whose fines, fees, and costs had been converted to civil liens, which meant that there were more potential payments to check, more disparate sources to contact to determine whether someone had fully complied with the law. Although the legislature was aware of this Kafkaesque bureaucratic nightmare, it made no effort to simplify the process, to add staff to numerous departments, as the FIEC had suggested might need to be done, to create a single office with a single database to which the Secretary of State, local election supervisors, and returning citizens themselves might inquire to determine a person's eligibility to register and vote. It did not hold a single hearing about how S.B. 7066 would actually work. And despite a federal judicial decision recognizing the "administrative nightmare" that S.B. 7066 created, the legislature still refuses to take any actions to create a new, more rational process.[177]

174. Sociologists have a name for such actions, "bureaucratic disentitlement," taking away a right by purposefully creating such a complicated web of administrative rules that the right is practically extinguished.[178]

175. The evidence about this particular bureaucratic disentitlement amounts to a syllogism. First, the Florida Legislature knew that the process of determining whether someone had paid all restitution, fines, fees, and costs was so disorganized that S.B. 7066 would drastically restrict the number of returning citizens who would be able to vote. Even after being urged by a federal judge to simplify and systematize the process of re-enfranchisement, the Legislature declined to act.[179] Second, the legislators knew that a disproportionate percentage of felons in Florida were black people, because that fact had been stressed again and again during the public debate over Amendment 4 and during the discussions of S.B. 7066 in the Legislature. Therefore, third, the legislators must have intended that law would have that racially disproportionate effect.

D. In Summary: The "Sabotage of Amendment 4"

176. As what became S.B. 7066 was working its way through the legislature, the Orlando Sentinel, which had endorsed the Amendment in 2018, harshly criticized the proposed implementing legislation in an editorial titled "The unfolding sabotage of Amendment 4:"

> "Amendment 4 was supposed to give ex-felons, who have paid their debt to society, the right to vote. Floridians loved it, approving the amendment last year with nearly 65 percent of the vote.
> "But in the worst tradition of Florida voter suppression, some lawmakers want to take the harshest possible line on implementing a constitutional amendment that arguably doesn't even require the Legislature's involvement. . . .
> "Grant and Brandes are most likely angling for the harshest possible interpretation of Amendment 4 because they're worried the ex-felons now free to vote might weaken the Republican grip on power in Tallahassee. Or swing the state to Democrats in next year's presidential election. . . . the House is proposing rules that would make it difficult for the poor to regain voting rights."[180]

177. Unlike in other states that have recently lessened restrictions on voting by returning citizens, Florida's adamant blocking of change for so long energized a movement, necessary to circumvent the legislative logjam, which might have stimulated a larger percentage of returning citizens to register and vote than has usually been the case. Newspapers and other media recognized the potential partisan and racial implications of the victory. And it appeared at first that the registration surge might occur.

178. But then the legislature acted. It took a "serpentine" path, unsure at first whether there needed to be any implementing legislation, then successively including or excluding particular provisions – including, then excluding fines, fees, and costs that were not imposed at the time of the original sentence; allowing the enfranchisement of people whose fines, fees, and costs had been converted to civil liens, then disallowing their voting; extending the possibility of waivers of various parts of a sentence. These swerves in provisions gave the lie to the faithful steward argument because obviously the legislature did not believe that the instructions to the steward were clear.

179. Although black legislators were cautioned by the sponsors of Amendment 4 against exposing the racial overtones and effects of the legislation as the session proceeded, some legislators did speak in racial terms, particularly at the end of the session, when the possibility of compromises had ended. But their indictments of the bill as a continuation of the Jim Crow history of felon disfranchisement were perhaps less illuminating about the bill's racially discriminatory intent than the repeated statements of its principal sponsor, Rep. James Grant, that he didn't "want to know the impact" of the bill. This statement is effectively a "smoking gun," because as Chair of the Criminal Justice Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee, Rep. Grant unquestionably knew the racially disproportionate impact of the bill. Neither he nor any other proponent of S.B. 7066 directly or meaningfully answered charges by Democratic legislators, especially black legislators, that the bill had a discriminatory intent and would have a discriminatory effect, and that by making it more difficult for poorer than more affluent returning citizens to vote, it constituted a poll tax. Representative Grant's responses especially dripped with disdain, when he bothered to respond to the charges at all.

180. The amendments to the bill that failed, particularly Sen. Brandes's amendment allowing people to vote if their fines, fees, and court costs had been converted to civil liens, and the more far-reaching amendments by Sens. Bracy and Thurston, to exclude restitution that had been converted to civil liens from being disfranchising, are instructive about the intent of the framers of S.B. 7066. The legislature could have adopted other versions of the bill that would have been much less restrictive of the vote, and the proponents of S.B. 7066 were repeatedly and strenuously asked to do so. Legislators knew that since black people were disproportionately likely to have been convicted of felonies, they would be disproportionately disadvantaged as voters by stiffer restrictions on voting for returning citizens.

181. Legislators were also repeatedly made aware of the fact that there was no central repository of data on all of the aspects of disfranchising restrictions in S.B. 7066, and that there was no single authority in State or County governments that was tasked with pulling together all of the necessary information to determine whether someone had completed his sentence. If an implementing bill had required only proof that one had been released from custody and had completed parole and probation, it would have been relatively easy for the corrections and court system to determine.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But every added LFO made it more difficult to make the system work, and the longer the time after probation that it took to pay off LFOs, the more likely that the judicial and correctional systems would lose contact with the former prisoner. This could be called "bureaucratic disfranchisement," a variety of the more general "bureaucratic disentitlement" phenomenon identified by sociologists.

182. That the legislature, especially Rep. Grant, knew and publicly identified this phenomenon and did nothing about it, even after being urged to not only by other legislators, but also by the federal judge in this case, is an indication that legislators wanted to increase the vote-restrictive effect of the law. Since they knew that black people would be disproportionately affected by the restrictions, they must have realized the racially discriminatory effect. And making no effort to mitigate what they knew would be a racially discriminatory effect is indicative of a racially discriminatory intent.

VII. Was S.B. 7066 Adopted with a Racially Discriminatory Intent? A Summary of Ten Intent Factors

A. Models of Human Behavior

183. The scholarly literature on felon disfranchisement spotlights the connection of the practice to racial discrimination. As the best-known book on the contemporary practice, Manza and Uggen's Locked Out, puts it:

> ". . . the adoption and expansion of [felon disfranchisement] laws in the United States is closely tied to the divisive politics of race and the history of racial oppression. Concerns about the role of race are not limited to matters of historical interest. The extraordinarily high proportion of African American men in the criminal justice system today produces the shocking fact that more than one in seven black men is currently denied the right to vote, and in several states over one in four black men are disenfranchised. Just as felon disenfranchisement laws in several states can be traced to patterns of racial exclusion, their effect in diluting the African American vote is no less significant."[181]

[181] Jeff Manza and Christopher Uggen, Locked Out: Felon Disenfranchisement and American Democracy (New York: Oxford University Press, 2006), 9-10.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

184. Similarly, Brown and Clemons begin their chapter on felon disfranchisement by saying that "Since the turn of the [21st] century, felony disfranchisement has been used increasingly in combination with changes in voting regulations, which generally tend to make it more difficult to vote for many African Americans, Hispanics, and other nonwhites including immigrants, the homeless, and poor people."[182]

185. Historians and political scientists have long understood how political leaders have crafted election laws to promote their own and their groups' interests, and this is particularly well known to have been the case in the South. As soon as whites gained control of southern legislatures in the late 19th century, for example, they began to pass subtle and not so subtle election laws with the intent and effect of disadvantaging African-Americans and their white political allies – registration laws, "8-box" and secret ballot laws that were effectively literacy tests, poll taxes, laws setting high bonds for candidates, redistricting laws, felon disfranchisement laws – the list goes on.[183] Many of these laws were presented as nonpartisan, non-racial "reforms," but historians have unmasked them.[184]

186. The wide understanding among scholars that felon disfranchisement laws have racially discriminatory effects and that those who shape election laws, especially in the South, often use them to the disadvantage of racial and other out-groups points toward that there likely is a racial purpose behind a law that makes it much more difficult for disproportionately black returning citizens to vote.

B. Historical Context

187. Florida has a long history of racial discrimination in voting, disfranchising African-Americans until 1867 and after a generation of quite active black participation in politics, substantially disfranchising them again through a poll tax and an "8 box" law, a form of literacy test.[185] From 1888 until 1968, there no black legislators in the Florida State Legislature. From 1982 through 2005, there were numerous voting rights violations in the state, including preclearance denials under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, at-large elections found to be violations of Section 2 of that Act, and discrimination against language minorities under other sections of the Act.[186]

188. More recently, Florida has been adjudged to have manipulated several types of election laws, establishing a pattern of such manipulation against a variety of groups. In 2012, for instance, the District Court of the District of Columbia refused to preclear a law that cut back the number of early voting days from 12 to 8.[187] In 2017, a Florida District Court found that the State had allowed so little time for those who applied for absentee ballots, but whose applications were rejected because of alleged signature mismatches, as to constitute a violation of the equal protection clause.[188] And in 2018, a District Court enjoined the Florida Secretary of State from categorically barring early voting sites on any college or university campus as a violation of the first, fourteenth, and twenty-sixth amendments to the U.S. constitution.[189]

189. The history of felon disfranchisement in Florida from 1975 to 2018 provides a more specific historical context for S.B. 7066, and it points strongly in one direction.

C. Text of the Laws

190. A constitutional amendment with a few words and a lot of history and other context to help interpret it, was adopted in a statewide election in which the best sources – newspapers – did not express a consensus on the meaning of the crucial word "sentence," left the text open to interpretation. And the legislators, even the Republican majority legislators, did not agree on an interpretation. In a colloquy with Sen. Jason Pizzo (D-North Miami Beach) on the last day of consideration of S.B. 7066 in the Senate, for instance, Sen. Jeff Brandes was asked whether he thought each of three different versions of the bill comported with the "will of the electorate." Each time, Brandes said he agreed that it did, even though each version of the bill set different requirements for LFOs before a returning citizen could be re-enfranchised.[190] If someone would be allowed to vote if his fines, fees, and court costs had been converted into a civil lien, then the number of returning citizens who could be re-enfranchised would expand markedly. So according to a systematic analysis of the newspapers, the report of the FIEC, and statements by state legislators, even a sponsor of the final bill, Amendment 4 was ambiguous, and the legislators had discretion in framing the legislation, or even in not passing any implementing law at all.

191. The texts of the bills and amendments that went into the final S.B. 7066 is also instructive. The rejection of Sen. Brandes' civil lien amendment made the bill much more restrictive, and, by contrast, if the legislature had adopted the proposals of black Sens. Bracy or Thurston, the bill would have enfranchised many more people. The fact that the final bill was nearly as restrictive as it could have been suggests that the dominant powers in the legislature wanted to disfranchise almost as many people as possible. Since they knew that returning citizens were disproportionately black people, they therefore must have had a racial purpose in framing the bill as they did.

D. Basic Demographic Facts

192. It was widely known that a disproportionate number of people in Florida prisons were black, and that that resulted in a disproportionate number of black people getting disfranchised. For example, an Associated Press report on the oral argument in Johnson v. Bush in 2004 quoted a lawyer for the plaintiffs: "We are dealing with permanent political disenfranchisement of 10 percent of African-American voters in the state of Florida."[191] A news article about changes in executive clemency processes over the last few governors casually mentioned that "a disproportionate number" of the estimated 400,000-600,000 returning citizens whose rights had been restored by Gov. Reubin Askew "were black."[192] A 2011 editorial on Gov. Rick Scott's new clemency process in the Miami Herald incidentally noted that "A disproportionate number of Florida's felons are African American, and in this state, blacks overwhelmingly vote Democratic."[193] Speaking in favor of Amendment 4 in September, 2018, Miami-Dade County Public Defender Carlos Martinez told his audience that "About 1.4 million in the state of Florida do not have the right to vote that will be affected by this amendment. . . . About a third of that number is [sic] African Americans."[194] After the November, 2018 election, a news article on Amendment 4 in the New York Times included the fact that "African-Americans in the state have been disproportionately disenfranchised . . . "[195] Another article on the passage of Amendment 4, in the Tallahassee Democrat remarked that "The amendment will have an outsize effect on the African-American population, who are arrested and incarcerated at a higher rate than any other group." "More than one in five African-Americans in Florida can't vote because of a felony conviction, according to estimates by the Sentencing Project."[196]

193. These facts were repeated during the debates over S.B. 7066 and its predecessors in the legislature. Perhaps the most extensive discussion came on the last day of debate in the House. Rep. Dotie Joseph, a black legislator, cited a 2016 study that estimated that "1 in 5 of African Americans of voting age could not vote because of [felon disfranchisement]. . . . Given the demographics of Florida's felon population, excluding the sex offender registry, which tends to be predominantly white, Florida's felon population tends to be overrepresented by black and brown people who are, in many cases, the victims of a criminal justice system that disproportionally targets, arrests, charges, prosecutes, convicts, and sentences people of color at a higher rate based on no other factor than their race. . . . In closing, I'll say this. In 2010 in the entire United States, there were 5.85 million citizens that are disenfranchised. Over 26% of them live in Florida. 23% of the state's African American age voting population couldn't vote and of that 83% of them had completed their sentences."[197]

194. The legislature also knew about the demographics of the criminal justice system because that session spent a good deal of time on the First Step Act, sponsored by Sen. Jeff Brandes, which a former legislator called "a herculean task," "one of the most comprehensive [bills] since those discussions a decade ago" when she chaired the Criminal Justice Committee, "a bold start toward fixing part of our criminal justice system."[198] One could hardly spend time studying prisons without encountering racial issues.

195. The legislature and citizens following the legislative sessions or impacted by the criminal justice system were unquestionably aware of the basic demography of incarceration in Florida and of the consequent likely effect of increasing the barriers to vote for returning citizens. That they

E. Climate of Racial Politics

196. Florida politics is racially polarized, and the nomination of Andrew Gillum, the first black candidate for governor from a major party in the state's history in 2018 provoked extremely racist robocalls and what a Huffington Post article referred to as "racist comments and dog whistles throughout his [Gillum's] campaign.[199] One robocall, from an Idaho neo-Nazi, began "Well hello there. I is the Negro Andrew Gillum, and I be asking you to make me governor of this here state of Florida."[200] There were also public comments with racial overtones directly connected with the campaign of Gillum's opponent, Ron DeSantis. In what may have been unfortunate phraseology, DeSantis told Florida voters not to "monkey this up" by electing Gillum. In another revealing slip of the tongue, just days before the November 6, 2018 election at an event for DeSantis, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue described the race as "cotton-pickin'" important, pleading with voters not to "mess it up."[201] And Republican Congressman Matt Gaetz, speaking at a DeSantis rally, invoked a familiar racist trope connecting black people with crime when he falsely charged that Tallahassee, during the time when Gillum was mayor, had become "the murder capital of Florida. I don't know whether to call him Andrew Gillum or Andrew Kill'em."[202]

Board of Education*.[205] According to pre-election polls in 2018, 93% of black people, but also 66% of white people supported Amendment 4.[206] If voting on Amendment 4 had been as racially polarized as voting was for state and national office, Amendment 4 would never have received the requisite 60% of the votes cast in that ballot contest.

If voting on Amendment 4 had been as racially polarized as voting was for state and national office, Amendment 4 would never have received the requisite 60% of the votes cast in that ballot contest. Unless the standard errors in this poll were extraordinarily high, there was a statistically significant difference between the voting behavior of whites and African-Americans on Amendment 4. I have not seen any polling on S.B. 7066, but the statements and behavior of African-American state legislators and their reports of their constituents' remarks on the bill suggests that there is a striking racial division of opinion on S.B. 7066. See, e.g., Mar. 19, 2019 hearing of the Criminal Justice Subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee on H.B. 7089, https://www.myfloridahouse.gov/VideoPlayer.aspx?eventID=2443575804_2019031246, at 1:58-2:16 (remarks of Rep. AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

198. As described above, the combination of the large number of felon disfranchisement bills, largely by black state legislators, and the disproportionate impact of felon disfranchisement on the black community are additional indicators that felon disfranchisement have been suffused with racial concerns.

199. But private polling warned the organizers of the Amendment 4 campaign away from running a campaign based on appealing to a sense of racial justice. Racial resentment may not have any longer been so apparent among Florida whites, but it was not absent, either. Open hostility is not, however, required for an action to have been racially motivated. Florida voters were strongly racially polarized; African-Americans were increasingly prominent among Democratic nominees; S.B. 7066 made it markedly more difficult for returning citizens to vote than a rule that allowed returning citizen to vote if he had completed probation or even probation plus paid restitution or had LFOs converted to civil liens; returning citizens were disproportionately black; therefore, the racial climate combined with the demographic makeup of returning citizens supports the proposition that S.B. 7066 was adopted for a racially discriminatory purpose.

F. Background of Key Decisionmakers

200. As has been explained above, Rep. James Grant and Sen. Jeff Brandes, the chief sponsors of S.B. 7066 and its predecessors, also played prominent roles on the two chambers' criminal justice committees, insuring that they were aware of the racial consequences of their acts in sponsoring S.B. 7066 and amending it in the way that they did.

G. Other Actions of Key Decisionmakers

201. As with S.B. 7066, Sen. Brandes failed to win the somewhat less stringent version of the First Step Act. Aimed at saving money by allowing some non-violent prisoners to serve somewhat shorter terms, the Senate version of the bill was scaled back on the last day of the session because of House intransigence, just as S.B. 7066 was.[207] Senator Brandes's frustrations on these two bills show just how antipathetic the legislature as a whole was toward anything that might alleviate racial discrimination. As Rep. Carlos

Guillermo Smith (D-Orlando) summed up the legislative session, "'They did a decent job with the budget, but then they destroyed everything else,' including arming teachers, expanding voucher programs, creating hurdles for citizen-led ballot initiatives, and derailing voting rights. 'They're transforming Florida for the worst, and the bad outweighs the good.'"[208]

H. Statements by Important Participants

202. Rep. James Grant repeatedly exposed what he sought to obscure by insisting so vehemently that he did not want to know it. Closing the debate on S.B. 7066 before the State Affairs Committee on April 4, Rep. Grant declared: "I was asked have I done a study to know how many people are impacted by this. I said no. They said are you willing to take a study. I said no. And here's why. I am happy to review numbers when we're done, but I don't want to know the impact of this [bill]."[209] Asked by Rep. Geraldine Thompson whether he had any information on the proportion of returning citizens who were too poor to pay restitution, Rep. Grant replied

> "I did not want to know the data, because the data is not relevant for this particular objective. The data is absolutely relevant to the criminal justice reform we work on, or the policies we work on. This isn't a policy bill. This is a taking of the Amendment 4 package in the totality sent to us. And so, as I have repeatedly stated, I did not want to know data, because I did not want anybody to be able to make the allegation that my work product was skewed by any data."[210]

203. These two statements are smoking guns. Someone as knowledgeable about the criminal justice system as Rep. Grant was had to have known generally what the impact on different groups would be and that his bill would have more of an impact on people with fewer economic resources than on those who were more affluent. Rep. Grant explicitly realized that if he obtained the data before the bill was passed, the charges that were, in fact, made during the legislative debate about the bill's racial impact and that would no doubt be made in the future in court would be backed by more evidence. The data might, indeed, support a charge that S.B. 7066 was meant to "target African Americans with almost surgical precision," as the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals had declared when it learned that the 2013 North Carolina legislature had sought data on the racial incidence of various provisions of H.B. 589, that state's election law.[211] But so adamantly refusing to obtain the data that he must have known might lead a court to a conclusion similar to that of the Fourth Circuit has the same effect. Protesting too much is equally a sign of guilt – in this case, of having a racially discriminatory motive.

I. State Policies and Institutional Rules

204. Had the 2019 legislature sought to preserve as much of the status quo as was consonant with Amendment 4, they would have excluded fines and court fees from counting against the re-enfranchisement of returning citizens, because that is what Rule 9A3 did in the executive clemency process. Instead, Rep. Grant insisted, even over the protests of the State Senate, in treating fines and fees that had not been fully paid as absolute bars to the vote. He did so, he said, because he believed that "The clemency process is an individual applicant applying for executive grace, and I absolutely believe that should be a lower standard."[212] That meant a higher – more restrictive – standard for returning citizens under S.B. 7066. That is to say, current State policy instantiated in Rule 9A3 did not constrain the legislators to adopt the standards in S.B. 7066, but encouraged more leniency. History and numerous expressions of public opinion demonstrate that Amendment 4 was motivated by a desire to make it possible for more returning citizens to vote than under the executive clemency process of the Scott Administration. Instead, in some respects, S.B. 7066 was explicitly motivated by a desire to restrict the suffrage further than the status quo.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

205. Even though it is not unprecedented in limited-session legislatures for bills to be changed and even switched late in the session, the procedure adopted for S.B. 7066 of stuffing an earlier version into an entirely different bill at the last moment prevented amendments and deprived the public and interest group of another chance to organize, protest, or even speak out against a controversial bill. Many Amendment 4 activists had worked behind the scenes all session to obtain a bill that was relatively less objectionable to them – the Brandes version that at least let returning citizens vote if their fines, fees, and costs had been converted to civil liens. Their efforts were stifled, as were their voices, by the end-of-session maneuver. This sort of legislative stratagem raises suspicions about the motives for them.

J. Impact

206. Evidence about the basic demographic facts, reviewed in Section VII.D., above, largely establishes that the legislature had foreknowledge of the facts about the likely impact or effect of S.B. 7066. But there was more evidence available in a highly visible court case on felon disfranchisement, Hand v. Scott, which revealed that "More than one-tenth of Florida's voting population – nearly 1.7 million as of 2016 – cannot vote because they have been decimated from the body politic. More than one in five of Florida's African American voting-age population cannot vote."[213] A brief for the Sentencing Project in that case pointed out that prior to Amendment 4, Florida was one of only four states that permanently disfranchised its citizens for committing a single felony offense, that Florida disfranchised a higher percentage of its citizens than any other state in the United States, and that the state was responsible for more than 25 percent of all U.S. citizens disfranchised because of conviction for a felony in the country as a whole.[214] A 2016 study by the Brennan Center showed that while black people comprised 16% of Florida's population, they made up more than 32% of those disfranchised for a felony conviction.[215] And a 2018 study by the

ACLU found that black Floridians are more likely to be arrested, charged, convicted, and face harsher sentences than white Floridians.[216]

207. More systematic studies conducted since the passage of S.B. 7066 have established that the law, indeed, has had the foreseeable and foreseen racially discriminatory effect. As discussed in detail in his reports, Professor Daniel Smith compiled data from 58 of the 67 Florida counties and identified 542,207 qualifying individuals with felony convictions who had completed all terms of their sentence including, probation, or community control or supervision. He found that 436,266, or 80.5%, of these felons had outstanding LFOs.[217] In an update to be filed with the court, Smith extended his study to the remaining 9 counties, finding that across the whole state, 77.4% of persons with felony convictions, other than murder or a sexual offense, who have completed parole, probation, or community control or supervision still cannot qualify to vote under S.B. 7066 because of outstanding LFOs. In the state as a whole, there is a marked racial disparity in the proportion of people with felony convictions who have completed incarceration, parole, probation, or community control or supervision but who still have outstanding LFOs--only 17.8% of black, compared to 26% of white.

208. The racially discriminatory impact was foreseen, and Smith's study conclusively shows that it took place.

K. Alternative Hypotheses

209. In most cases of election laws, it is possible to come up with several more or less plausible alternatives or rationalizations of motives. For instance, in voter ID cases, proponents usually claim, as did proponents of secret ballots in the late 19th century South, that they are attempting to combat ballot fraud. As discussed at length in Section IV, above, the primary hypothesis articulated by the legislative sponsors in this case was what I have called the Faithful Steward Assertion, and as I showed in that Section, the evidence against that assertion is overwhelming.

210. During the debates, a few legislators made remarks that might be read as indicating that they had other, secondary motives, as well. But these purported secondary motives are so contradictory to the actual provisions of S.B. 7066 that they seem as pretextual as the Faithful Steward Assertion.

211. In the first legislative hearing on H.B. 7089, one of the predecessors of S.B. 7066, Rep. Grant contended that the bill was necessary to remove "subjectivity" and provide Floridians with objective guidelines and "truth," and at the same hearing, Rep. Paul Renner (R-Palm Coast) contended that in this bill, "We try to remove subjectivity and create objectivity."[218] On the last day of the session, Rep. Grant admitted that there had been many questions raised about "what happens if this is applied differently throughout the state" and asserted that S.B. 7066 would offer "clarity, transparency, and accuracy for the class of people covered by Amendment 4."[219] But as demonstrated in Section VI.C. above, the FIEC, election officials who testified before the legislature, legislative opponents of S.B. 7066, and Rep. Grant himself agreed that there was no central repository of data to which the Secretary of State, county election supervisors, or returning citizens could turn to find out whether someone had paid all of his LFOs. Because there was no uniform source of information, there could be no uniformity of action from county to county or even individual to individual. Eleven databases and no consistent process set out to coordinate the information represents not consistency and transparency, but arbitrariness and confusion. I understand that the expert report of Dr. Burch will demonstrate the lack of consistency in information across counties in more detail and with more rigor. Because the Florida Legislature was well aware of this bureaucratic morass and did nothing in S.B. 7066 or in any other law to build a path through it, the "desire for objectivity and uniformity" hypothesis should be rejected.

212. There is another possible hypothesis that was at least hinted at during one debate over H.B. 7089 on April 23, 2019. To help people who were "struggling financially," Rep. Evan Jenne (D-Hollywood) proposed to allow returning citizens to vote if they had set up a payment plan to satisfy restitution, fines, and fees. Rep. Jenne noted that courts in many areas of the state currently did set up such payment plans. In response, Rep. Ralph Masullo (R-Lecanto) opposed the Jenne amendment because "there is a big risk of default. And if they vote – if they exercise the right that this amendment is to give them before all those fees, fines, and restitution have been totally paid and eliminated, then we would then default on our responsibility to the people of Florida, to execute this amendment." Rep. Grant decried the Jenne amendment as "an affront to the Florida voters" who had supported Amendment 4 and Amendment 6, an amendment that sought to guarantee restitution to crime victims.[220]

213. Although the opposition to Rep. Jenne's amendment (which was rejected on a voice vote) appears to have rested largely on the Faithful Steward Assertion, it is conceivable that supporters of the unamended bill were implying that one of its purposes was to incentivize payments by withholding a right, the right to vote, until all of the payments were completed. But the Florida Legislature had been informed in the same debate by Rep. Shevrin D. Jones (D-West Park) that "83 percent of the fines are never paid back… and over 60 percent of those fines that are never paid back are from African Americans."[221] So the Legislature was aware that adding an incentive above and beyond the legal obligation to pay all LFOs, which existed independently of Amendment 4 or S.B. 7066, would have a disparate impact on those who were too poor to pay, in general, and black people, in particular. Therefore, the incentive argument, which in any event was never clearly stated, only strengthens the case for a racially discriminatory motive.

CURRENT RESEARCH

Separate But Not Equal: The Cumming Case and Race Relations in America (University of Kansas Press, under contract).

"The Supremacy of Equal Rights": School Desegregation in Nineteenth Century America (Cambridge University Press, under contract), a collection of three of my revised essays.

"The Onward March of Right Principles": School Segregation and Race Relations in the 19th Century United States (book) is an investigation of late nineteenth century state and federal court cases and the adoption of state laws on racial discrimination in schools in 22 states. The purposes are to throw new light upon black political power and the black social structure; to discover the identities and motivations of white supporters and opponents of black civil rights; to illuminate the murky history of the lower courts; and to integrate legislative and judicial history into a broader socio-political history.

Politics and the Distribution of Public Goods (book) is a primarily quantitative study of the effect of changes in institutional political rules on the incidence of taxation and the distribution of public schooling in the South from 1880 to 1910.

Here're two pretty standard orders from the Florida PSC and FERC that address pre-filed testimony. Please look to section IV of the PSC order and section III of the FERC Order. I also attach an example of pre-filed testimony.

As I stated on the call earlier today, the State is not asking for any extensions of any deadlines or any changes to the ordinary trial procedures; however, the State wishes to be mindful of the safety of witnesses, counsel, parties, and court staff. We would thus be open to discussing alternatives with Judge Hinkle.

And, as a follow-up to the call, I'm putting in writing the alternative we proposed:

- Pre-filing all direct testimony with proposed exhibits that a witness would sponsor.
- Requiring objections to be filed a few days after the pre-filing of testimony, and having the Court rule on the objections in a telephonic hearing (or on the papers).
- Approximately 5 minute telephonic summaries from each witness, followed by telephonic cross.

As I see it, pre-filing of direct testimony and objections is preferable to establishing video links with witnesses around the country (and possibly lawyers around the country responsible for direct examination), ensuring that everyone involved has the relevant exhibits in the appropriate order, and then stumbling through cross-examination with video lags etc. Pre-filing testimony and exhibits should make it possible for all of us to proceed with only a telephone.

With the record established, any appeals will take care of themselves; there is no need for anyone to be in close physical proximity for a week to resolve an appeal.

Best,
Mo

[External email]

Hello Tara-

On behalf of the plaintiffs, I'm seeking your and other lead counsel for the defendants' availability to meet and confer tomorrow at or after 4 p.m. ET to discuss the points you raise below, primarily:

1. The scheduling of outstanding depositions with respect to the dates, times, and locations;
2. Outstanding disputes and possible resolution related to those identified on the parties' "may call" lists;
3. Outstanding disputes and possible resolution regarding the exhibit lists; and
4. Any and all accommodations that should be considered in light of the growing concerns related to the coronavirus and the impact on existing pre-trial and other court deadlines.

Please let me know what works for your side and I'll send a calendar appointment with a dial-in number as soon as I hear back from.

Subject: RE: Jones v. DeSantis -- Deposition of Supervisor Lux

Dear Counsel:

Thank you for your emails regarding the 26(a)(3) disclosures. We have a number of objections and concerns that we would like to discuss with you regarding the Gruver, Raysor, and McCoy Plaintiff disclosures.

As we noted in our objections filed on March 9 (ECF No. 284), the Gruver, Raysor, and McCoy Plaintiffs have listed Ashley Davis, an attorney of record in this case. Ms. Davis also has never previously been disclosed by Plaintiffs on any disclosure list. We request that Plaintiffs withdraw her from their witness list.

We also request that Plaintiffs withdraw Secretary Lee from their disclosure list. Plaintiffs have never demonstrated a need for Secretary Lee's testimony—either in deposition or trial—and her inclusion is improper, burdensome, and a violation of the Apex doctrine.

Plaintiffs have included a "Kristopher Wright" on your 26(a)(3) disclosures. Please confirm that this designation should refer to Plaintiff Kristopher Wrench.

We also noted in our objections that the Gruver, Raysor, and McCoy Plaintiffs failed to identify a single fact witness as a "will call" witness for trial. Plaintiffs previously informed the Court that they expected Plaintiffs' case to last longer than 2 and as many as 4 days. Tr. of Feb. 14, 2020 Hearing 49:25-50:15. As Plaintiffs obviously plan to present testimony from fact witnesses, it is highly prejudicial and a violation of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure not to timely disclose the fact witnesses Plaintiffs know they will need to prove their case. Furthermore, the Court has already cautioned Plaintiffs about failing to properly designate "will call" witnesses as required under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. We request that you file an amended Rule 26a3 disclosure list by the end of the day Friday.

Next, Plaintiffs' exhibit list contains nearly 1100 documents, only approximately 32 of which have been designated as "will use." In addition, the exhibit list fails to include a bates number for the documents, or where the document was not bates numbered, a date and source of production. Many of the document descriptions are vague and could apply to any number of different versions of similar documents. We request that you provide an updated exhibit list with this information, or in the alternative, we can discuss exchanging actual copies of the premarked exhibits in advance of March 19.

Finally, we also believe it will be necessary for the Court to address the Coronavirus situation and its potential impact on trial.

All of the above items, as well as many others, should be discussed as a part of the parties getting together and beginning the pretrial stipulation discussions. We are hopeful that we will be able to work with you to resolve many of these issues by stipulation or in some other manner without the need for Court intervention. Please let us know what days and times work for you to begin these discussions.

Many thanks- Tara

Counsel –

The Gruver Plaintiffs seek Defendants' consent to depose Paul Lux, Supervisor of Elections for Okaloosa County. As we noted in our March 9 filing (ECF 283), Gruver Plaintiffs object to Defendants listing Supervisor Lux as a potential trial witness because he was not previously disclosed, meaning that Plaintiffs were unable to depose him before the close of discovery.

Please advise if you consent to Plaintiffs noticing Supervisor Lux's deposition. Thanks very much.

Best,
Jonathan

FILED 1/5/2018
DOCUMENT NO. 00148-2018
FPSC - COMMISSION CLERK

BEFORE THE FLORIDA PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

In re: Petition to determine need for Seminole combined cycle facility, by Seminole Electric Cooperative, Inc.	DOCKET NO. 20170266-EC

ORDER ESTABLISHING PROCEDURE AND CONSOLIDATING DOCKET NOS. 20170266-EC AND 20170267-EC FOR HEARING

I. Case Background

On December 21, 2017, pursuant to Section 403.519, Florida Statutes (F.S.), and Rule 25-22.081, Florida Administrative Code (F.A.C.), Seminole Electric Cooperative, Inc. (Seminole) filed two petitions: (1) a petition for determination of need for a Seminole combined cycle facility and (2) a joint petition with Shady Hills Energy Center, LLC (SHEC) for determination of need for a Shady Hills combined cycle facility.

In the first petition, filed in Docket No. 20170266-EC, Seminole proposes to construct a 1,050 megawatt (net-nominal) two-on-one ("2x1") natural gas-fired combined cycle electric generating unit adjacent to Seminole's existing power plant in Putman County, Florida. In the second petition, filed in Docket No. 20170267-EC, Seminole and SHEC propose to construct a new 573 megawatt (net-nominal) combined cycle generating facility located adjacent to the site of the existing Shady Hills power plant in Pasco County, Florida. According to both petitions, the inclusion of the new Shady Hills Combined Cycle Facility, in conjunction with the removal from service of an existing Seminole Generating Station (SGS) coal-fired unit, and the addition of a 1,050 megawatt (net-nominal) 2x1 natural gas-fired combined cycle electric generating unit, is the most-effective way to meet the capacity needs of Seminole and its members.

In both petitions, Seminole and SHEC requested that the two proceedings be consolidated for purposes of hearing since the petitions are interrelated. However, because the two proceedings will proceed separately under the Florida Electrical Power Plant Siting Act, Seminole and SHEC requested that the Commission issue two separate final orders pursuant to Section 403.519, F.S. The petitioners' request for consolidation is addressed in Section X of this Order.

An administrative hearing has been scheduled for both docketed matters from March 21 - 22, 2018. Jurisdiction over these matters is vested in the Commission by Chapter 366, F.S., and Section 403.519, F.S. This Order is issued pursuant to the authority granted by Rule 28-106.211,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

F.A.C., which provides that the presiding officer before whom a case is pending may issue any orders necessary to effectuate discovery, prevent delay, and promote the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of all aspects of the case.

II. General Filing Procedures

Filings pertaining to this docket must comply with Rule 28-106.104, F.A.C. Filing may be accomplished electronically as provided in the Commission's Statement of Agency Organization and Operation and the E-Filing Requirements link, posted on our website, www.floridapsc.com. If filing via mail, hand delivery, or courier service, the filing should be addressed to:

Office of Commission Clerk
Florida Public Service Commission
2540 Shumard Oak Boulevard
Tallahassee, Florida 32399-0850

The Commission strongly encourages electronic filing, which is available from the Commission's Home Page under the Clerk's Office menu and Electronic Filing web form. The filing party is responsible for ensuring that no information protected by privacy or confidentiality laws is contained in any electronic document. To the extent possible, when making an electronic filing, an electronic copy of all filings shall also be provided to parties and staff in Microsoft Word format, and all schedules shall be provided in Microsoft Excel format with formulas intact and unlocked.

III. Tentative List of Issues

A tentative list of the issues is set forth in Attachment A of this Order. The scope of this proceeding will be based upon these issues as well as other issues raised by the parties up to and during the Prehearing Conference, unless modified by the Commission.

IV. Prefiled Testimony and Exhibits

Each party shall file all testimony and exhibits that it intends to sponsor, pursuant to the schedule set forth in Section IX of this Order. Testimony and exhibits may be filed electronically. If filing paper copies, an original and 15 copies of all testimony and exhibits shall be filed with the Office of Commission Clerk, by 5:00 p.m. on the date due. A copy of all prefiled testimony and exhibits shall be served electronically or by regular mail, overnight mail, or hand delivery to all other parties and staff no later than the date filed with the Commission. Failure of a party to timely prefile exhibits and testimony from any witness in accordance with the foregoing requirements may bar admission of such exhibits and testimony.

The dimensions of each page of testimony shall be 8 ½ x 11 inches. Each page shall be consecutively numbered and double spaced, with 25 numbered lines per page and left margins of at least 1.25 inches. If filing paper copies of the testimony, all pages shall be filed on white, unglossed, three-holed paper and shall be unbound and without tabs.

Each exhibit sponsored by a witness in support of his or her prefiled testimony shall be:

(1) Attached to that witness' testimony when filed;
(2) If filing paper copies, on three-holed paper, unbound, and without tabs;
(3) Sequentially numbered beginning with 1 (any exhibits attached to subsequently filed testimony of the same witness shall continue the sequential numbering system);
(4) Identified in the upper right-hand corner of each page by the docket number, a brief title, and the witness' initials followed by the exhibit's number; and
(5) Paginated by showing in the upper right-hand corner of each page the page number followed by the total number of pages in the exhibit.

Docket No. 012345-EI
Foreign Coal Shipments to Port of Tampa

After an opportunity for opposing parties to object to introduction of the exhibits and to cross-examine the witness sponsoring them, exhibits may be offered into evidence at the hearing.

V. Discovery Procedures

A. General Requirements

Discovery shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 120, F.S., and the relevant provisions of Chapter 366, F.S., Rules 25-22, 25-40, and 28-106, F.A.C., and the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure (as applicable), as modified herein or as may be subsequently modified by the Prehearing Officer.

(1) Discovery shall be completed by March 9, 2018.
(2) Discovery requests and responses shall be served by e-mail, hand delivery, or overnight mail, and electronic service is encouraged. Discovery served via e-mail shall be limited to 5 MB per attachment, shall indicate how many e-mails are being sent related to the discovery (such as 1 of 6 e-mails), and shall be numbered sequentially. Documents provided in response to a document request may be provided via a CD, DVD, or flash drive if not served electronically.
(3) Each electronic discovery response shall be given a separate electronic file name that is no longer than 60 characters.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(4) Sets of interrogatories, requests for admissions, requests for production of documents, or other forms of discovery shall be numbered sequentially in order to facilitate identification.

(5) Within each set, discovery requests shall be numbered sequentially, and any discovery requests in subsequent sets shall continue the sequential numbering system.

(6) Discovery responses shall be served within 15 days (inclusive of mailing) of receipt of the discovery request. For discovery requests related to matters addressed in the utility's rebuttal testimony, discovery responses shall be served within 10 days of receipt of the discovery request.

(7) Each page of every document produced pursuant to requests for production of documents shall be identified individually through the use of a Bates Stamp or other equivalent method of sequential identification. Parties should number produced documents in an unbroken sequence through the final hearing.

(8) Copies, whether hard copies or electronic, of discovery requests and responses shall be served on all parties and staff. In addition, copies of all responses to requests for production of documents shall be provided to the Commission staff at its Tallahassee office unless otherwise agreed.

(9) Parties shall file in the Commission Clerk's Office a notice of service of any interrogatories or request for production of documents propounded and associated responses in this docket, giving the date of service and the name of the party to whom the discovery was directed.

Unless subsequently modified by the Prehearing Officer, the following shall apply:

(1) Interrogatories, including all subparts, shall be limited to 200.

(2) Requests for production of documents, including all subparts, shall be limited to 200.

(3) Requests for admissions, including all subparts, shall be limited to 100.

When a discovery request is served and the respondent intends to seek clarification of any portion of the discovery request, the respondent shall request such clarification within five (5) days of service of the discovery request. For discovery requests served after the utility's rebuttal testimony such clarification must be requested within five (5) days. This procedure is intended to reduce delay in resolving discovery disputes.

B. Confidential Information Provided Pursuant to Discovery

Any information provided to the Commission staff pursuant to a discovery request by the staff or any other person and for which proprietary confidential business information status is requested pursuant to Section 366.093, F.S., and Rule 25-22.006, F.A.C., shall be treated by the Commission as confidential. The information shall be exempt from Section 119.07(1), F.S., pending a formal ruling on such request by the Commission or pending return of the information to the person providing the information. If no determination of confidentiality has been made and the information has not been made a part of the evidentiary record in this proceeding, it shall be returned to the person providing the information. If a determination of confidentiality has been made and the information was not entered into the record of this proceeding, it shall be returned to the person providing the information within the time period set forth in Section 366.093, F.S. The Commission may determine that continued possession of the information is necessary for the Commission to conduct its business.

Redacted versions of confidential filings may be served electronically, but in no instance may confidential information be electronically submitted. If the redacted version is served electronically, the confidential information (which may be on a CD, DVD, or flash drive) shall be filed with the Commission Clerk via hand-delivery, U.S. Mail, or overnight mail on the day that the redacted version was served via e-mail.

When a person provides information that it maintains as proprietary confidential business information to the Office of Public Counsel pursuant to a discovery request by the Office of Public Counsel or any other party, that party may request a temporary protective order pursuant to Rule 25-22.006(6)(c), F.A.C., exempting the information from Section 119.07(1), F.S.

When a party other than the Commission staff or the Office of Public Counsel requests information through discovery that the respondent maintains as proprietary confidential business information, or when such a party would otherwise be entitled to copies of such information requested by other parties through discovery (e.g., interrogatory responses), that party and respondent shall endeavor in good faith to reach agreement that will allow for the exchange of such information on reasonable terms, as set forth in Rule 25-22.006(7)(b), F.A.C.

VI. Prehearing Procedures

A. Prehearing Statements

All parties in this docket and the Commission staff shall file a prehearing statement pursuant to the schedule set forth in Section IX of this Order. Each prehearing statement shall be filed with the Office of Commission Clerk by 5:00 p.m. on the date due. A copy, whether paper or electronic, of the prehearing statement shall be served on all other parties and staff no later than the date it is filed with the Commission.

Each party's prehearing statement shall set forth the following information in the sequence listed below:

(1) The name of all known witnesses whose testimony has been prefiled or who may be called by the party, along with subject matter of each such witness' testimony and the corresponding issue numbers in the following format:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

All Known Witnesses:

Witness	Subject Matter	Issues #
Direct
John Smith	Subject . . .	1, 3-5

(2) A description of all prefiled exhibits and other exhibits that may be used by the party in presenting its direct case (including individual components of a composite exhibit) and the witness sponsoring each in the following format:

All Known Exhibits:

Witness	Proffered By	Exhibit #	Description
Direct
John Smith	Party/Utility Name	ABC-1	Title . . .

(3) A statement of the party's basic position in the proceeding;

(4) A statement of each question of fact, question of law, and policy question that the party considers at issue, along with the party's position on each issue, and, where applicable, the names of the party's witness(es) who will address each issue. Parties who wish to maintain "no position at this time" on any particular issue or issues should refer to the requirements of subsection C, below;

(5) A statement of issues to which the parties have stipulated;

(6) A statement of all pending motions or other matters the party seeks action upon;

(7) A statement identifying the party's pending requests or claims for confidentiality;

(8) Any objections to a witness' qualifications as an expert. The objection shall identify each witness the party wishes to voir dire as well as state with specificity the portions of that witness' pre-filed testimony, by page and line number, and/or exhibits, by page and line number, to which the party objects. Failure to specifically identify the portions of the pre-filed testimony or exhibits to which the party objects will result in restriction of a party's ability to conduct voir dire absent a showing of good cause at the time the witness is offered for cross-examination at hearing.

(9) A request for sequestration of witnesses, so any such request may be resolved by the prehearing officer prior to the hearing. Failure to make such a request shall constitute a waiver of the right to request sequestration of witnesses absent a showing of good cause; and

(10) A statement as to any requirement set forth in this order that cannot be complied with, and the reasons therefore.

Failure of a party to timely file a prehearing statement shall be a waiver of any issue not raised by other parties or by the Commission. In addition, such failure shall preclude the party from presenting testimony in support of its position on each such issue.

B. Attendance at Prehearing Conference

Pursuant to Rule 28-106.209, F.A.C., a Prehearing Conference will be held March 12, 2018 at the Betty Easley Conference Center, 4075 Esplanade Way, Tallahassee, Florida. Unless excused by the Prehearing Officer for good cause shown, each party (or designated representative) shall personally appear at the prehearing conference. Failure of a party (or that party's representative) to appear shall constitute waiver of that party's issues and positions, and that party may be dismissed from the proceeding.

C. Waiver of Issues

Any issue not raised by a party either before or during the Prehearing Conference shall be waived by that party, except for good cause shown. A party seeking to raise a new issue after the Prehearing Conference shall address each of the following:

(1) Whether the party was unable to identify the issue because of the complexity of the matter;
(2) Whether discovery or other prehearing procedures were not adequate to fully develop the issue;
(3) Whether due diligence was exercised to obtain facts touching on the issue;
(4) Whether information obtained subsequent to the Prehearing Conference was not previously available to enable the party to identify the issue; and
(5) Whether introduction of the issue would not be to the prejudice or surprise of any party.

Specific reference shall be made to the information received and how it enabled the party to identify the issue.

Unless a matter is not at issue for that party, each party shall take a position on each issue by the time of the Prehearing Conference or by such later time as may be permitted by the Prehearing Officer. If a party is unable through diligence and good faith efforts to take a position on a matter at issue for that party, it shall explicitly state in its prehearing statement why it cannot take a position. If the Prehearing Officer finds that the party has acted diligently and in good faith to take a position, and further finds that the party's failure to take a position will not prejudice other parties or confuse the proceeding, the party may maintain "no position at this time" prior to hearing and thereafter identify its position in a post-hearing statement of issues. In the absence of such a finding by the Prehearing Officer, the party shall have waived the entire issue, and the party's position shall be shown as "no position" in the Prehearing Order. A party who takes no position on an issue by the time of the Prehearing Conference, or by such later time as may be permitted by the Prehearing Officer, waives its opportunity to conduct cross-examination on the issue as well as file a post-hearing brief on the issue. Commission staff may take "no position at this time" or a similar position on any issue without having to make the showing described above and without waiver of cross-examination.

D. Motions to Strike Prefiled Testimony and Exhibits

Motions to strike any portion of the prefiled testimony and related portions of exhibits of any witness shall be made in writing no later than the Prehearing Conference. Motions to strike any portion of prefiled testimony and related portions of exhibits at hearing shall be considered untimely, absent good cause shown.

E. Demonstrative Exhibits

If a party wishes to use a demonstrative exhibit or other demonstrative tools at hearing, such materials must be identified by the time of the Prehearing Conference.

F. Official Recognition

Parties seeking official recognition of materials pursuant to Section 120.569(2)(i), F.S., shall notify all other parties and staff in writing no later than two business days prior to the first scheduled hearing date. Such notification shall identify all materials for which the party seeks official recognition, and such materials shall be provided along with the notification.

G. Use of Depositions at Hearing

Absent agreement by all parties concerning the introduction of depositions into the record at the hearing, any party wishing to introduce all or part of a deposition at hearing for any purpose other than impeachment, must file a Notice of Intent to Use Deposition no later than the last day to conduct discovery in this docket as set forth in Section IX of this Order. The Notice shall include the following information for each deposition:

(1) Name of witness deposed;
(2) Date deposition was taken; and
(3) Page and line numbers of each deposition the party seeks to introduce, when available.

Objection(s) to the entry into the record of a deposition or portion thereof at hearing for purposes other than impeachment must be made in writing within three (3) days of filing a Notice of Intent to use Deposition for resolution by the Prehearing Officer.

VII. Hearing Procedures

A. Attendance at Hearing

Unless excused by the Presiding Officer for good cause shown, each party (or designated representative) shall personally appear at the hearing. Failure of a party, or that party's representative, to appear shall constitute waiver of that party's issues, and that party may be dismissed from the proceeding.

Likewise, all witnesses are expected to be present at the hearing unless excused by the Presiding Officer upon the staff attorney's confirmation prior to the hearing date of the following:

(1) All parties agree that the witness will not be needed for cross examination.
(2) All Commissioners assigned to the panel do not have questions for the witness.

In the event a witness is excused in this manner, his or her testimony may be entered into the record as though read following the Commission's approval of the proposed stipulation of that witness' testimony.

B. Cross-Examination

The parties shall avoid duplicative or repetitious cross-examination. Further, friendly cross-examination will not be allowed. Cross-examination shall be limited to witnesses whose testimony is adverse to the party desiring to cross-examine. Any party conducting what appears to be a friendly cross-examination of a witness should be prepared to indicate why that witness's direct testimony is adverse to its interests.

During cross-examination, if a witness (or their counsel) responds (or objects) to a relevant question by referring the question to another party witness, the counsel who is sponsoring the current witness shall confirm the identity of the appropriate party witness who can more fully address the question.

C. Use of Confidential Information at Hearing

It is the policy of this Commission that all Commission hearings be open to the public at all times. The Commission also recognizes its obligation pursuant to Section 366.093, F.S., to protect proprietary confidential business information from disclosure outside the proceeding. Therefore, any party wishing to use at the hearing any proprietary confidential business information, as that term is defined in Section 366.093, F.S., shall adhere to the following:

(1) When confidential information is used in the hearing that has not been filed as prefiled testimony or prefiled exhibits, parties must have copies for the Commissioners, necessary staff, and the court reporter, in red envelopes clearly marked with the nature of the contents. Any party wishing to examine the confidential material that is not subject to an order granting confidentiality shall be provided a copy in the same fashion as provided to the Commissioners, subject to execution of any appropriate protective agreement with the owner of the material.

(2) Counsel and witnesses are cautioned to avoid verbalizing confidential information in such a way that would compromise confidentiality. Therefore, confidential information should be presented by written exhibit when reasonably possible.

At the conclusion of that portion of the hearing that involves confidential information, all copies of confidential exhibits shall be returned to the proffering party. If a confidential exhibit has been admitted into evidence, the copy provided to the court reporter shall be retained in the Office of Commission Clerk's confidential files. If such information is admitted into the evidentiary record at hearing and is not otherwise subject to a request for confidentiality filed with the Commission, the source of the information must file a request for confidential classification of the information within 21 days of the conclusion of the hearing, as set forth in Rule 25-22.006(8)(b), F.A.C., if continued confidentiality of the information is to be maintained.

VIII. Post-Hearing Procedures

If the Commission (or assigned panel) does not render a bench decision at the hearing, it may allow each party to file a post-hearing statement of issues and positions pursuant to the schedule set forth in Section IX of this Order. In such event, a summary of each position of no more than 50 words, set off with asterisks, shall be included in that statement. If a party's position has not changed since the issuance of the prehearing order, the post-hearing statement may simply restate the prehearing position. However, the position must be reduced to no more than 50 words. If a post-hearing statement is required and a party fails to file in conformance with the rule, that party shall have waived all issues and may be dismissed from the proceeding.

Pursuant to Rule 28-106.215, F.A.C., a party's proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, if any, statement of issues and positions, and brief, shall together total no more than 40 pages and shall be filed at the same time, unless modified by the Presiding Officer.

IX. Controlling Dates

The following dates have been established to govern the key activities of this case:

(1)	Utility's testimony and exhibits	December 21, 2017
(2)	Intervenors' testimony and exhibits	January 25, 2018
(3)	Staff's testimony and exhibits, if any	February 1, 2018
(4)	Rebuttal testimony and exhibits	February 15, 2018
(5)	Prehearing Statements	March 5, 2018

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(6)	Discovery deadline	March 9, 2018
(7)	Prehearing Conference	March 12, 2018
(8)	Hearing	March 21-22, 2018
(9)	Briefs	April 4, 2018

In addition, all parties should be on notice that the Prehearing Officer may exercise the discretion to schedule additional prehearing conferences or meetings of the parties as deemed appropriate. Such meetings will be properly noticed to afford the parties an opportunity to attend.

X. Request to Consolidate Dockets

Because the issues in both proceedings are interrelated, Seminole and SHEC requested that the two proceedings be consolidated for purposes of hearing. However, because the two proceedings will proceed separately under the Florida Electrical Power Plant Siting Act, Seminole and SHEC requested that the Commission issue two separate final orders pursuant to Section 403.519, F.S.

Pursuant to Rule 28-106.211, F.A.C., the presiding officer before whom a case is pending may issue any orders necessary to effectuate discovery, to prevent delay, and to promote the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of all aspects of the case. Upon review, it appears that Docket Nos. 20170266-EC and 20170267-EC are interrelated and that consolidation would cause no undue prejudice; therefore, the standard for consolidation set out in Rule 28-106.108, F.A.C., has been met. Therefore, Docket Nos. 20170266-EC and 20170267-EC shall be consolidated for the purposes of hearing, except that two separate final orders shall be issued.

All parties to Docket No. 20170266-EC shall also be parties to Docket No. 20170267-EC. Accordingly, all procedures established by this Order Establishing Procedure shall govern this proceeding unless modified by the Prehearing Officer or the Commission. All filings made in Docket No. 20170267-EC shall be combined into Docket No. 20170266-EC, and all future filings shall be filed in Docket No. 20170266-EC.

Based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED by Commissioner Gary F. Clark, as Prehearing Officer, that the request submitted by Seminole Cooperative, Inc. and Shady Hills Energy Center, LLC to consolidate Docket Nos. 20170266-EC and 20170267-EC is hereby granted, as set forth in the body of this Order. It is further ORDERED that Docket Nos. 20170266-EC and 20170267-EC are hereby consolidated for purposes of hearing only, as set forth in the body of this Order. It is further

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

ORDERED that the provisions of this Order shall govern this proceeding unless modified by the Commission.

By ORDER of Commissioner Gary F. Clark, as Prehearing Officer, this 5th day of January, 2018.

This notice should not be construed to mean all requests for an administrative hearing or judicial review will be granted or result in the relief sought.

Mediation may be available on a case-by-case basis. If mediation is conducted, it does not affect a substantially interested person's right to a hearing.

Any party adversely affected by this order, which is preliminary, procedural or intermediate in nature, may request: (1) reconsideration within 10 days pursuant to Rule 25-22.0376, Florida Administrative Code; or (2) judicial review by the Florida Supreme Court, in the case of an electric, gas or telephone utility, or the First District Court of Appeal, in the case of a water or wastewater utility. A motion for reconsideration shall be filed with the Office of Commission Clerk, in the form prescribed by Rule 25-22.0376, Florida Administrative Code. Judicial review of a preliminary, procedural or intermediate ruling or order is available if review of the final action will not provide an adequate remedy. Such review may be requested from the appropriate court, as described above, pursuant to Rule 9.100, Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure.

Midcontinent Independent System Operator, Inc.	Docket Nos. ER14-1242-006 ER14-2860-000 ER14-2862-003 (Consolidated)

ORDER ESTABLISHING RULES FOR CONDUCT OF THE HEARING

(Issued July 21, 2015)

1. These Rules for Conduct incorporate by reference all Notices to the Public issued by the Chief Administrative Law Judge.[1]

I. DISCOVERY

2. Unless otherwise agreed by the participants and the Presiding Judge, the participants shall abide by the Discovery Time Standards posted at http://www.ferc.gov/legal/admin-lit/time-dis.asp.

3. Discovery requests, discovery responses, and any objections to discovery requests shall not be provided to the Presiding Judge.

4. Parties must make serious good-faith efforts to resolve discovery disputes prior to filing a motion to compel. Those efforts must be delineated in any discovery motion and answer thereto.

5. Parties are strongly discouraged from introducing discovery responses, including deposition transcripts, in lieu of cross-examination.

6. Objections to discovery requests must be made within five (5) business days of the date of service of the discovery request.

7. Non-disclosure certificates shall not be provided to the Presiding Judge.

[1] Notices to the Public are available at http://www.ferc.gov/legal/admin-lit.asp. On December 12, 2014, the Chief Judge issued a Notice to the Public detailing procedures for handling exhibits and developing an electronic hearing record. The procedures and rules detailed in that Notice are adopted in this proceeding.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

II. MOTIONS TO COMPEL

8. If a party determines negotiations regarding production of a document or other discovery are no longer fruitful, the withholding party shall promptly notify requesting party. Notification of withholding party's final decision not to produce the requested information shall be in writing. The time for filing a motion to compel under the Discovery Time Standards will begin to run only upon such written service.

9. A motion to compel shall attach the pertinent parts of the discovery request and objections. If a dispute is still unresolved by further negotiations after a motion to compel is filed, an answer to such motion shall be due. The answer and any oral argument shall be set in accordance with the Discovery Time Standards.

III. HANDLING OF EXHIBITS AND PRE-FILED TESTIMONY

10. All exhibits must have an alpha-numeric designation, indicating by no more than three (3) letters, the sponsor and the sequential number of that party's exhibits. All exhibits shall be marked with a permanent and party-specific designation (e.g., "S-1" for Staff Exhibit #1). Temporary exhibit numbers (referencing sponsoring witnesses' initials, etc.) shall not be used. The parties shall not "reserve" numbers, but instead shall assign all numbers in consecutive sequence. Intervenors should not identify their exhibits with the letter "I" since the proceeding may involve multiple intervenors. All pre-filed exhibits will conform to this numbering methodology.

11. The pre-filed testimony of each witness shall be marked as a separate exhibit and shall be prefaced with a summary of the main points and supporting exhibits. The summary will generally not become part of the evidentiary record. The offering party may, however, have it included with the evidentiary record by a statement to that effect. The correspondingly filed electronic versions of all documents must be searchable. See ¶ 64, infra.

12. Participants must pre-file testimony in electronic format through FERC's e-Filing system. Participants must include in their submission all supporting exhibits for the witness's pre-filed testimony. Additionally, one (1) hard courtesy copy of the pre-filed testimony, cross-examination exhibits, and other exhibits shall be provided. The courtesy copy must be individually tabbed on the right side and three-hole punched. The number of each exhibit must be marked on its tab. The pre-filed exhibits are to be submitted in three-ring binders that must be horizontally labeled on the spine and cover.[2] Labels must identify which exhibit numbers are contained within the binder.

[2] I.e., the wording should appear horizontally when the binder stands upright.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

13. Participants will provide the court reporter one (1) copy of pre-filed testimony in DVD or CD format at the beginning of the hearing. Cross-examination and other hearing exhibits must be emailed to the court reporter at the following address: info@acefederal.com. The court reporter will also have access to the Shared folder (discussed below in ¶ 25).

14. If minor corrections to pre-filed testimony must be made, the participants are encouraged to make such corrections at the hearing using an errata sheet. That sheet should also be e-filed. If an erratum to an exhibit is required, it must be filed as a new exhibit with a new exhibit number. If it is absolutely necessary to substitute pages for an entire exhibit already marked or admitted during the hearing, the following shall apply. The moving party must obtain the originally marked or admitted exhibit from the court reporter and replace it with the substitute exhibit. This will require prior recording of the moving party's intent to substitute the exhibit and the reason for the substitution. It will also require agreement by all parties for the substitution and approval from the Presiding Judge on the record. Errata must indicate all changes in red-line format. The party proffering the errata is responsible to see this procedure is followed.

15. Procedures where substantial changes have been made since the time testimony was originally pre-filed. All parties sponsoring such exhibits must provide the Presiding Judge and his clerk with copies of their final set of exhibits in loose-leaf form. Those copies shall be serially numbered, individually paginated, three-hole punched, and submitted in three-ring binders at least two (2) weeks prior to hearing's commencement. Additional copies need not be provided at the hearing, other than the e-copy required for the court reporter.

16. At least one (1) week prior to hearing commencement, parties sponsoring exhibits must submit an initial index of all exhibits to be offered through their own witnesses. They shall also provide copies to the other parties. The index should include seven columns. The first three columns should be filled in: (1) the exhibit number; (2) a brief description of the exhibit; and (3) the sponsoring party. The remaining four columns should be labelled as follows: (4) "Admitted, Rejected, or Withdrawn (& Transcript Page Reference)." (5) "Date Identified." (6) "Date Admitted or Rejected." and (7) "Privileged, Protected, CEII, or None." See Appendix A attached as an example. It is the responsibility of the parties to keep their exhibit lists current and accurate.

17. To ensure every exhibit will be identified in the transcript index, the identification must contain an appropriate title for the document. This may be accomplished either through an identification statement by sponsoring counsel or by the Presiding Judge's own identifying statement.

18. Under no circumstances will an exhibit be moved into evidence that is marked as follows: "protected," "privileged," "Critical Energy Infrastructure Information (CEII)," or any other restrictively-designated material, unless the exhibit is so designated on the record. [3] Once an exhibit is identified on the record as "protected," "privileged," "CEII," etc., it must be approved by the Presiding Judge and admitted or rejected as such. Caveat: I am of the opinion that any party wishing to proffer "protected," "privileged," "CEII," or any other restrictively-designated material has an EXTREMELY HEAVY BURDEN. Such burden extends not only to proving relevance and materiality, but showing an item is actually privileged or confidential, etc. (See e.g., 18 C.F.R. § 388.112 and Commission Order No. 630.) Instead, I suggest preparing a redacted version that makes your point without including restricted matter.

19. If restrictively-designated material must be admitted, every such exhibit shall indicate the restriction on the cover page and at the top of each individual page of the exhibit. Each instance of restrictively-designated material must be noted by surrounding the protected language with a red box. Furthermore, the following designations in upper-case, boldface type must occur before and after the restricted information. "START OF PROTECTED MATERIAL" and "END OF PROTECTED MATERIAL."

20. Exhibits containing "protected" or other restrictively-designated material shall also have a public, redacted version admitted that must be clearly marked as "PUBLIC." Some exhibits might be "protected" in their entirety, precluding production of a public, redacted version. In these instances, a sheet of paper indicating such must be admitted in place of a public version.

21. The following applies to the PUBLIC version of an exhibit previously marked as "protected," "privileged," "CEII," etc. in whole or in part. In such cases, every page of the exhibit that is so marked shall be stamped by the submitting party as "PRIVILEGE LIFTED."

22. For exhibits that have not been filed prior to the hearing, counsel shall provide an empty three-ring binder to the Presiding Judge. This will facilitate exhibits used by that party during the course of cross examination to be placed in the binder. The binder should include pre-numbered tabs sufficient to separate all exhibits. Each binder must be labeled horizontally on its cover and spine with the Party's name and docket number of the case. The label shall also identify the nature of the contents of the binder, e.g., "Cross-Examination Exhibits of Party X -Volume 1 of 1." All cross-examination exhibits shall be three-hole punched. At the conclusion of the examination of a witness, counsel shall provide a three-hole punched table of all exhibits used in the examination of each witness.

[3] The Commission's long-standing practice has been to refer to confidential materials, including confidential business trade secrets, as privileged. The Commission's use of the term privileged for these materials does not detract from a filing party's ability to assert a common law evidentiary privilege. See Filing of Privileged Materials and Answers to Motions, Order No. 769, FERC Stats. & Regs. ¶ 31,337, at 31,747 (2012).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

23. If an exhibit contains copyrighted material, the party sponsoring the exhibit is responsible for obtaining advanced permission of the copyright owner. If the copyright owner is a participant in this action, such permission shall be deemed granted. Permission shall include the right to use and reproduce that material in this proceeding. It shall also include permission to reproduce the material in all publications arising from this proceeding. These publications include the initial decision of the Presiding Judge and Orders of the Commission. In the event that such permission is restricted, the exhibit will include a legend at the bottom of the first page. The legend shall identify the copyright date, the copyright owner, and the nature of the restriction. In the absence of such legend, it is assumed that any use of such material in this proceeding is a "fair use." Such fair use shall be in accordance with 17 U.S.C. § 107 (2012) or permitted under an agreement the participant obtained with the copyright owner.

24. Participants will use a Commission-approved network for exhibits at the hearing. The network permits participants to upload exhibits during the hearing. It is separate from the Commission's network.

25. Participants will place the exhibits they plan to introduce into the record in their participant-specific folder on the network before the hearing. Once an exhibit is identified on the record, the identifying participant will "drag and drop" a copy of the exhibit from the participant's folder to the Shared folder. Participants will see only their respective, participant folder and the Shared folder. The Judge can see all folders.

26. Participants may project exhibits onto a screen during the hearing. Even so, privileged or other restricted versions of exhibits shall only be projected when the hearing is in closed session. Participants wishing to project such images must request the closed session.

27. When the Presiding Judge is to rule on late-filed exhibits presented after the hearing is concluded, the following procedures are to be followed. The proffering participants will provide one (1) hard copy to the judge. The copy for the court reporter will be filed electronically.

28. Provide Clarity in Pre-Filed Testimony and Other Documents.

(a) Acronyms. Generally, you should avoid acronyms. Where you must use acronyms, include an appendix of acronyms or other abbreviations at the back of each document. In the body of a document, list out the phrase that forms the basis of every acronym when you first use it. If you (the witness or attorney) use a term only a few times in a document, spell it out each time and omit the acronym.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(b) Short sentences and paragraphs. Sentences must be restricted to around 20 words. Paragraphs must be limited to no more than 8 sentences, ideally ranging between 3 and 8 sentences.

(c) Be concise. Your sentences should contain only one idea. Paragraphs should contain only one topic. Avoid double negatives. Avoid redundancy.

Anyone having difficulty following these guidelines should review my suggestions for persuasive-legal writing starting at page 7 of the following link: http://www.eba-net.org/sites/default/files/Summer%202014%20Newsletter_0.pdf.

IV. MOTIONS TO STRIKE

29. Parties must file any Motion to Strike pre-filed testimony and exhibits no later than ten (10) business days prior to submission of responsive testimony. For rebuttal testimony, Motions to Strike must occur no later than ten (10) business days prior to the start of the hearing.

V. EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES

30. No later than one (1) week prior to hearing commencement, participants shall provide the Presiding Judge with a Joint Witness List. That list will indicate the anticipated order witnesses will be called to testify.

31. Except in extraordinary circumstances, no telephone appearances regarding any matter to be captured or reflected in the record of the hearing will be permitted. Circumstances will be deemed “extraordinary” only with the prior approval of the Presiding Judge.

32. Examination shall be strictly limited to the scope of prior relevant testimony. Direct testimony includes any rebuttal testimony by the witness.

33. Redirect examination shall be strictly limited to matters brought out on cross-examination.

34. Succeeding cross-examiners will not engage in repetitive cross-examination. Thus, counsel who intend to cross-examine a witness must be present in the hearing room during the entire preceding cross-examination of that witness.

35. Friendly cross-examination may be permitted in those instances where the Presiding Judge would find it useful in fully developing the evidence.

36. Counsel will be permitted to further examine a witness, within the scope of questions asked of that witness by the Presiding Judge.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

37. Cross-examination shall not be used as a substitute for discovery. Questions during cross-examination used to educate a party about the substance of another party's pre-filed testimony are prohibited. Also prohibited are any other questions posed to elicit information that could have been obtained in discovery.

38. Requests for clarification of a question may only come from the witness or the Presiding Judge.

39. Regarding exhibits a party seeks to introduce during cross-examination, counsel must establish proper foundation with the witness before it will be admitted into the record.

VI. BRIEFS AND JOINT STATEMENTS

40. No later than two (2) weeks prior to the date scheduled for hearing, the participants shall provide the Presiding Judge with a Joint Statement of Issues. The Joint Statement of Issues shall include a synopsis of each participant's position as to each individual issue. The issues to be tried are limited to those included in the Joint Statement and any amendments thereto permitted by the Presiding Judge. At this time the participants shall also submit a Joint Statement of Stipulated Facts. Furthermore, they shall submit a Joint Statement of Contested Facts (with Explanations), if necessary. Every issue or fact in each of the respective Joint Statements shall be numbered seriatim (e.g., 1, 2, 3, etc.). For example, Joint Statement of Issues (JSI) 1 through 3; Joint Statement of Facts (JSF) 1 through 23, etc.

41. Also, no later than two (2) weeks prior to the date scheduled for hearing, each party will submit a pre-hearing brief. Pre-hearing briefs shall be a maximum of twenty (20) pages. All briefs should address each issue listed in the Joint Statement of Issues, unless otherwise noted by a specific statement to that effect. All issues should be appropriately numbered and titled, and addressed in sequential order, thereby allowing for comparison of the issues. I.e., briefing issues must mirror each of the stipulated issues. See also, guidelines for clarity in ¶ 28, supra.

42. Briefs will be filed in Microsoft® Word format on the due date (see ¶ 64) and use Times New Roman 13-point font. Participants should submit hyperlink-formatted briefs that include hyperlinks to exhibits, transcripts, and cases. Participants who submit hyperlinked briefs must do so within the two (2) weeks after reply briefs are due. Both the initial and the reply briefs can be included in one CD containing the hyperlinked briefs. Briefs may be served on other participants through e-Filing. In addition, a single-sided hard copy of each brief shall be provided to the Presiding Judge in accordance with ¶ 64, infra.

43. Footnotes and citations must be accurate and relevant and must support the proposition for which they are asserted. References to evidence must not be overly broad, such as: Direct Testimony of X at pages 27 through 39. Instead, provide exact page and line number(s) to support each point. References to evidence in post-hearing briefs must include exhibit number, page, line(s) or section(s), and descriptions. For instance, if referring to Exh. S-5 at 2(g), also include the description; e.g., X's Response to Y's Data Request #Y-X 4-19 of Oct. 12, 20--.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

VII. CONDUCT AT THE HEARING

44. Persons attending the hearing are free to come and go as they wish, provided the hearing is not disturbed.

45. No reading of extraneous material will be permitted.

46. Cell phones and other mobile devices must be turned off or set to silent notification. Persons answering cell-phone calls must do so outside of the hearing room. In some instances, mobile devices may interfere with the audio system in the hearing room. If this occurs, attendees will be asked to turn them off completely.

47. Guest wireless-internet access in the Commission's hearing rooms is available upon request for proceeding participants. Requests must be made at least two weeks before the proceeding and should be directed to the Presiding Judge's law clerk via email. The request must identify the duration of the requested access and include the requester's: (1) name, (2) affiliation, (3) phone number, and (4) email address. Upon approval, the requester will receive an email including the necessary password information.

48. The following should also occur through contact with my law clerk, at least two (2) weeks before hearing. Participants must provide MAC addressees for the two (2) laptops they plan to use during the hearing to access the network and their electronic exhibits. Only one (1) laptop will be required to upload exhibits, but the addresses for two (2) are needed in the event there are technical difficulties.

49. Participants will be required to read, sign, and submit an Interconnection Service Agreement two (2) weeks prior to the start of the hearing dependent upon the data transmission method request for use of electronic exhibits during the hearing. The Interconnection Service Agreement is necessary to allow participants access to the network during the hearing for cybersecurity purposes. Contact my legal assistant for details.

50. Participants should be prepared, in the event the technology fails, to continue the hearing without interruptions.

51. Food and drinks, other than water, are not permitted in the hearing room.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

52. No cross conversation between opposing counsel will be permitted. Rather, if counsel has anything to say to opposing counsel, such statement must be made through the Presiding Judge. Quiet consultation between co-counsel and assistants or their witnesses is allowed.

53. When a witness is sworn, everyone else in the hearing room must be seated and quiet.

54. Argument or objection may only be made by counsel prior to a ruling. Once a ruling is made, no further discussion of the matter will be permitted.

55. Requests for special accommodations, if necessary, should be made in advance of the hearing, when practically possible.

VIII. WAIVER

56. The hearing will be conducted in conformance with these rules. In the rare instance where inflexible adherence to the rules will result in an injustice, counsel may petition the Presiding Judge for relief. Alternatively, the Presiding Judge may grant relief sua sponte.

57. It is counsel's responsibility to make the Presiding Judge aware of infractions by making a timely objection. Failure to make a timely objection could result in waiver of the rule.

IX. FILING OF THE OFFICIAL RECORD

58. Within seven (7) days of the end of the hearing, participants will file (via e-Filing) a Joint Exhibit List in the format provided in Appendix A. SEMINOLE ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE, INC.

DIRECT TESTIMONY OF ALAN S. TAYLOR

DOCKET NO. _____

DECEMBER 21, 2017

I. INTRODUCTION AND QUALIFICATIONS.

Q. Please state your name and business address.

A. My name is Alan Taylor. My business address is 821 15th Street, Boulder, Colorado 80302.

Q. By whom are you employed and in what capacity?

A. I am President of Sedway Consulting, Inc. ("Sedway Consulting").

Q. Please describe your duties and responsibilities in that position.

A. I perform consulting engagements in which I assist utilities, regulators, and customers with the challenges that they may face in today's dynamic electricity marketplace. My area of specialization is in the provision of independent evaluation services in power supply solicitations and in the associated economic and financial analysis of power supply options.

Q. Please describe your education and professional experience.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

FL-GOV-20-0899-A-002740

A. I earned a Bachelor of Science Degree in energy engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a Masters of Business Administration from the Haas School of Business at the University of California, Berkeley, where I specialized in finance.

I have worked in the utility planning and power procurement consulting area for 30 years, predominantly specializing in integrated resource planning, competitive bidding analysis, utility industry restructuring, market price forecasting, and asset valuation. I have testified before state commissions in proceedings involving resource solicitations, environmental surcharges, and fuel adjustment clauses.

I began my career at Baltimore Gas & Electric Company (BG&E), where I performed efficiency and environmental compliance testing on the utility system's power plants. I subsequently worked for five years as a senior consultant at Energy Management Associates ("EMA", a firm that was later acquired by ABB), training and assisting over two dozen utilities in their use of EMA's operational and strategic planning models, PROMOD III and PROSCREEN II. During my graduate studies, I was employed by Pacific Gas & Electric Company ("PG&E"), where I analyzed the utility's proposed demand side management ("DSM") incentive ratemaking mechanism, and by Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory ("LBL"), where I evaluated utility regulatory policies surrounding the development of brownfield generation sites.

Subsequently, I worked at PHB Hagler Bailly (and its predecessor firms) for ten years, serving as a vice president in the firm's Global Economic Business Services practice and as a senior member of the Wholesale Energy Markets practice of PA Consulting Group, when that firm acquired PHB Hagler Bailly in 2000. In 2001, I founded Sedway Consulting, Inc. and have continued to specialize in economic analyses associated with electricity wholesale markets. Since the founding of Sedway Consulting, I have provided independent evaluation services in over four dozen electric utility conventional and renewable resource solicitations, several of them in Florida where I have testified before the Florida Public Service Commission ("FPSC") on a number of occasions.

II. PURPOSE AND SUMMARY OF TESTIMONY

Q. What is the purpose of your testimony?

A. Sedway Consulting was retained by Seminole Electric Cooperative, Inc. ("Seminole" or the "Company") to provide independent monitoring and evaluation services in the utility's 2016 solicitations for competitive power supplies to meet the Company's 2021 (and beyond) capacity needs. Sedway Consulting oversaw both the self-build and market alternative solicitation efforts. In the first instance, Sedway Consulting was involved with the monitoring and evaluation of proposals for power island equipment ("PIE"), long-term service agreements ("LTSA"), and engineering, procurement, and construction ("EPC") services that might be selected – if cost-competitive – in developing a resource that Seminole would own and operate. In the second instance, Sedway Consulting monitored Seminole's solicitation of market alternatives (i.e., resources that would be owned and operated by others, with capacity and energy being sold to Seminole under power purchase agreements ["PPAs"]). As the principal consultant on the project, I reviewed Seminole's solicitation processes, performed a parallel and independent economic evaluation of both sets of proposals – those PIE, LTSA, and EPC proposals associated with the self-build solicitation and those PPA proposals submitted in response to the utility's market alternative solicitation. Ultimately, I concluded that Seminole's best option for meeting its long-term capacity needs was a combination of resources from both solicitations:

1. a self-build new natural-gas-fired 1,122 MW (winter capacity) combined-cycle ("CC") facility at Seminole's existing Seminole Generating Station ("SGS") site with an expected in-service date of December 1, 2022 – hereafter referred to as the Seminole CC facility ("SCCF"),
2. a 30-year PPA for power supplies from a new natural-gas-fired 573 MW (winter capacity) CC facility to be developed, owned, and operated by Shady Hills Energy Center, LLC (a subsidiary of GE Energy Financial Services, Inc.) at a site in Spring Hill, Florida with an expected in-service date of December 1, 2021 – hereafter referred to as the Shady Hills CC facility ("SHCCF"),
3. a 15-year PPA for power supplies from two existing natural-gas-fired peaking combustion turbines ("CT") for 346 MW of winter capacity owned by Shady Hills Power Company LLC at essentially the same site where the new 573 MW CC facility will be developed, with a delivery start date of June 1, 2024,
4. a 20-year PPA for power supplies from a new solar photovoltaic ("PV") 40 MW (nameplate) facility to be developed, owned, and operated by Tillman

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Solar Center LLC (a subsidiary of Coronal Energy) in High Springs, Florida with an expected in-service date of June 1, 2021,

5. a 15-year PPA for a firm system sale from existing peaking and intermediate resources of Duke Energy Florida ("DEF") for up to 450 MW each year through 2030 and up to 300 MW each year thereafter, with a delivery start date of January 1, 2021,
6. a 5-year PPA for a firm system sale from existing resources of Southern Company Services, Inc. ("SCS") for up to 350 MW each year through May 31, 2024 and up to 100 MW for each year thereafter, with a delivery start date of June 1, 2021,
7. an amendment to an existing PPA with Oleander Power Project Limited Partnership (a subsidiary of Southern Power Company) to extend deliveries of peaking capacity through the end of 2021, and
8. a decision to remove from service one of the two existing coal-fired units at Seminole's Seminole Generating Station facility (with a reduction in winter capacity of 664 MW) at the end of 2022.

Only the first two resources in the above list (SCCF and SHCCF) require FPSC approval and are the primary focus of my Determination of Need testimony. However, the complete portfolio is provided and discussed in my testimony as the entire package of resources, agreements, and decisions were components of the least-cost portfolio and therefore provide necessary context for the selection of the two resources that require approval.

The purpose of my testimony is to describe my role as an independent monitor/evaluator and present my findings. I will discuss the process and tools that I used to conduct Sedway Consulting's independent economic evaluation. Based on the results of my independent evaluation, I concluded that Seminole's new self-build SCCF and the new SHCCF behind the 30-year Shady Hills Energy Center PPA are essential components of the least-cost portfolio in meeting Seminole's long-term capacity needs.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
FL-GOV-20-0899-A-002744

Q. Are you sponsoring any exhibits in this case?

A. Yes. I am sponsoring Exhibit No. __ (AST-1) consisting of two documents, which are attached to my direct testimony:

Document No. 1	Resume of Alan S. Taylor
Document No. 2	Sedway Consulting's Independent Evaluation Report

III. INDEPENDENT MONITOR/EVALUATOR ACTIVITIES.

Q. Please describe the role you performed as an independent monitor/evaluator in Seminole's 2021 RFPs.

A. As the independent monitor/evaluator in Seminole's 2021 RFPs, I reviewed Seminole's RFPs and associated materials and discussed with the utility the modeling tools and processes that it intended to use in its evaluation of proposals. I attended the bid opening processes in Tampa for both the self-build PIE/LTSA and EPC RFPs and was directly copied on the email submissions of proposals by bidders in the market alternative/PPA RFP. Throughout the process, I monitored all email exchanges and virtually all conference calls between Seminole and the bidders (for all three RFPs:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

PIE/LTSA, EPC, and market alternatives). Before receiving the market alternative proposals, I requested that Seminole run its detailed production cost model, ABB's Planning and Risk ("PaR") model, and provide production cost results that I could use to calibrate Sedway Consulting's resource evaluation model. I received emailed electronic copies of all market alternative proposals directly from the bidders on or about the Proposal Due Date (May 9, 2016) and evaluated the economic, operational, and pricing information from each proposal. Seminole conferred with me on a number of issues relating to proposal RFP-noncompliance decisions, interpretation of proposal information, clarification requests, and economic evaluation assumptions. Regarding RFP-noncompliance decisions, there were some proposals that did not meet all of the RFP's threshold requirements and were thus disqualified. I concurred with these disqualification decisions. In addition, Seminole provided estimates of self-build project costs and characteristics after the initial PIE/LTSA proposals (which were received on April 18, 2016) were evaluated. These estimates were updated periodically as the selection of the PIE/LTSA counterparty and contract were finalized/negotiated and as the EPC RFP was conducted (with initial proposals received on November 30, 2016, best-and-final-offers on June 22, 2017, and the negotiation of a final EPC contract through the summer and fall of 2017). As the evaluation progressed, Seminole and I discussed appropriate courses of action and modeling assumptions. Using Sedway Consulting's Response Surface Model ("RSM") and Revenue Requirements Model ("RRM"), I evaluated Seminole's evolving self-build resource and all qualified market alternative proposals and assessed their overall costs and benefits. I compared Sedway Consulting's ranking and results with those of

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Seminole to confirm consistency of assumptions and concurrence of conclusions. In addition, I was copied on all email communications between Seminole and the bidders in all three solicitations, monitored virtually all negotiation calls with shortlisted bidders to ensure consistent communication and fair treatment, and participated in Seminole internal discussions regarding qualitative issues and risk factors associated with specific proposals or portfolio combinations of proposals. I made presentations to Seminole's executive team and Board of Trustees regarding Sedway Consulting's independent evaluation process and conclusions, and I documented the evaluation process and results in an independent evaluation report that is attached to my testimony as Exhibit No. __ (AST-1), Document No. 2.

Q. Were you were involved in the development of the RFPs?

A. No. Sedway Consulting was retained after the RFPs had been released. However, I reviewed the RFP documents, suggested some minor process revisions (which were adopted by Seminole and communicated to the bidding community), and concluded that the RFPs were reasonable documents for soliciting proposals.

Q. Do you believe that Seminole's evaluation process was conducted fairly?

A. Yes. The market alternative proposals and Seminole's self-build resource were evaluated on an equal footing, with consistent assumptions applied to all resource options.

IV. DESCRIPTION OF SEDWAY CONSULTING MODELS.

Q. Please describe Sedway Consulting's RSM model and its use in Seminole's resource solicitation.

A. The RSM was the primary model used in Sedway Consulting's independent evaluation of Seminole's resource options and transactions. It is a spreadsheet model that I have used in dozens of solicitations around the country. It is a relatively straightforward tool that allows one to independently assess the cost impacts of different generating or purchase resources for a utility's supply portfolio. Most of the evaluation analytics in the RSM involve calculations that are based entirely on my input of proposal costs and characteristics. A small part of the model examines system production cost impacts and needs to be calibrated to simulate a specific utility's system. In the case of the Seminole market alternatives solicitation, in the weeks prior to the proposal opening, I requested that Seminole execute specific sets of runs with its detailed production cost model. With the results of these runs, I was able to calibrate the RSM to approximate the production cost results that Seminole's PaR detailed production cost model would produce in a subsequent evaluation of any proposals or self-build options that Seminole might receive. Thus, I would not have to rely on Seminole's modeling of a proposal or self-build option; instead, I would be able to insert my own inputs into Sedway Consulting's own model and independently evaluate the economic impact of any particular resource. In short, the RSM provides an independent assessment to help ensure against the inadvertent introduction of significant mistakes that could cause the evaluation team to reach the wrong conclusions.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Q. How is the RSM an independent analytical tool if it is based on initial PaR results?

A. As I noted above, most of the calculations performed by the RSM are not based on PaR results in any way. There are two main categories of costs that are evaluated in a resource solicitation: fixed costs and variable costs. The costs in the first category – the fixed costs of a proposal – are calculated entirely separately in the RSM, with no reliance on the PaR model for these calculations. The second category – variable costs – has two parts: (1) the calculation of a resource's variable dispatch rates and, (2) the impact that a resource with such variable rates is likely to have on Seminole's total system production costs. As with the fixed costs, a proposal's variable dispatch rates are calculated entirely separately in the RSM, with no basis or reliance on the PaR model. It is only in the final subcategory – the impact that a resource is likely to have on system production costs – that the RSM has any reliance on calibrated results from PaR.

Q. Please elaborate on that area of calculations where the RSM is affected by the PaR calibration runs.

A. This is the area of system production costs. These costs represent the total fuel, variable operation and maintenance ("O&M"), emission, and purchased power energy costs that Seminole incurs in serving its members' loads. Given Seminole's load forecast, the existing Seminole supply portfolio (i.e., all current generating facilities and purchase power contracts), and many specific assumptions about future resources and fuel costs, PaR simulates the dispatch of Seminole's system and forecasts total production costs for each month of each year of the study period. At the outset of the solicitation project, the RSM was populated with monthly system production cost results that were created by the PaR calibration runs.

Q. What did the RSM do with this production cost information?

A. Once incorporated into the RSM, the production cost information allowed the RSM to answer the question: How much money (in monthly total production costs) is Seminole likely to save if it acquires a proposed resource, relative to a reference resource? The use of a reference resource simply allowed a consistent point of comparison for evaluating all proposals and Seminole's self-build options. As a reference resource, I used a hypothetical gas-fired resource with a very high variable dispatch rate associated with a heat rate of 13,000 Btu/kWh. In fact, I could have picked any variable dispatch or heat rate for the reference resource and obtained the same relative ranking of proposals out of the RSM. The cost of the reference resource has no impact on the relative results – it is merely a consistent reference point.

Q. Can you provide a numerical example that shows how the RSM works?

A. Certainly. Assume that a utility has a one-year resource need of 500 MW and must select one of the two following proposals:

	Proposal A	Proposal B
Capacity:	500 MW	500 MW
Capacity Price:	$9.00/kW-month	$5.50/kW-month
Energy Price:	$30/MWh	$40/MWh

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

For both proposals, the RSM has already calculated the fixed costs (and represented them in the capacity price) and the variable costs (and represented them in the energy price). Proposal A is more expensive in terms of fixed costs, but Proposal B is more expensive on an energy cost basis. The RSM calculates the final piece of the economic analysis – the different impacts on system production costs – to determine which proposal is less expensive in a total sense for the utility system as a whole.

Assume that the 13,000 Btu/kWh reference unit has a variable cost of $50/MWh and that the RSM has been calibrated and populated with the following production cost information:

For a 500 MW proxy resource, the utility's one-year total system production costs are:

$900 million for a $50/MWh energy price reference resource $894 million for a $40/MWh energy price resource (Proposal B)
$876 million for a $30/MWh energy price resource (Proposal A)

Thus, the energy savings (relative to the selection of a $50/MWh reference resource) are $24 million for Proposal A with its $30/MWh energy price and $6 million for Proposal B with its $40/MWh energy price. In its proposal ranking process, the RSM converts all production cost savings into a $/kW-month equivalent value so that the savings can be deducted from the capacity price to yield a final net cost (in $/kW-month) for each proposal. Converting the energy savings in this numerical example into $/kW-month equivalent values yields the following:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

$24 million / (500 MW * 12 months) = $4.00/kW-month

$6 million / (500 MW * 12 months) = $1.00/kW-month

The RSM calculates the net cost of both proposals by subtracting the energy cost savings from the fixed costs:

	Proposal A	Proposal B
Capacity Price:	$9.00/kW-month	$5.50/kW-month
Energy Cost Savings:	$4.00/kW-month	$1.00/kW-month
Net Cost:	$5.00/kW-month	$4.50/kW-month

Proposal B is less expensive. This can be confirmed through a total cost analysis as well:

Proposal A will require total capacity payments of $54 million (= 500 MW x $9.00/kW-month x 12 months), and Proposal B will require $33 million (= 500 MW x $5.50/kW-month x 12 months). Thus, Proposal A has fixed costs that are $21 million more than Proposal B.

Proposal A will provide $18 million more in energy cost savings (= $24 million - $6 million); however, this is not enough to warrant paying $21 million more in fixed costs. Therefore, Proposal B is the less expensive alternative.

Note that the RSM is described in more detail in the independent evaluation report that is attached to my testimony as Document No. 2 of my Exhibit No. ___(AST-1).

Q. With that understanding of the RSM process, what did you do to calibrate the RSM to PaR?

A. I reviewed the production cost information that Seminole provided at the start of the project and confirmed that the production costs were, for the most part, exhibiting smooth, correct trends (i.e., they were increasing where they should be increasing and declining where they should be declining). Having verified that the RSM production cost values were "smooth," I was confident that inputting variable cost parameters into the models for similar proposals would yield similar production cost results. Although the RSM is not a detailed model and could not simulate Seminole's production costs with PaR's accuracy, in the end (after accounting for future portfolio composition and future unit revenue requirement methodology differences), the independent RSM evaluation results tracked PaR's results reasonably well.

Q. Once the RSM was calibrated, what was the next step?

A. I was ready to receive and evaluate proposals. Market alternative bidders had been instructed to cc me on the email submissions of their proposals that they were sending to Seminole, and indeed all participants in the RFP did. I read each proposal and participated in discussions with Seminole about interpreting the proposals, identifying areas requiring clarification, and assessing each proposal's compliance with the RFP's Minimum Requirements. Seminole communicated with proposers to seek clarification and corrections to uncertain areas of the proposals, copying me on all email correspondence and encouraging bidders to do the same.

I incorporated pricing and operational information from each proposal into the RSM. Such information included contract commencement and expiration dates, summer and winter capacity, capacity pricing, heat rates, fuel supply assumptions, variable O&M charges, start-up costs, start-up fuel requirements, expected forced outage hours, and expected planned outage hours. Most of this information was directly inputted into the RSM. After the initial part of the evaluation, Seminole provided Sedway Consulting with its own modeling results so that Sedway Consulting could cross-check all key modeling assumptions and outputs and ensure consistency with the information in the RSM.

Q. Were there any costs that were considered in Sedway Consulting's analysis that were not predefined through the PaR/RSM calibration process described above or were not part of the actual proposals' pricing?

A. Yes, as described in the attached Independent Evaluation Report, there were two categories of costs that could not be predicted prior to the receipt of proposals or appropriately characterized in the pricing structure of proposals – 1) cost estimates for transmission network upgrades that might be required to accommodate a proposed resource or combination of resources, and 2) cost estimates for firm gas transportation requirements for gas-fired resources. Both of these cost categories were highly dependent on the location of projects, their point of electrical interconnection, and their natural gas pipeline supply considerations.

Q. How were these cost estimates developed?

A. In both cases, Seminole's subject area experts provided these cost estimates after being provided pertinent details about the proposed resources.

Q. Were you in a position to independently verify these estimates?

A. No. Sedway Consulting does not have the transmission models or in-depth knowledge of Florida's current or future electric or natural gas infrastructure to develop or verify the estimates of Seminole's subject area experts. However, I found them to be fairly balanced and consistent from a $/kW standpoint and do not believe that any bidder was inappropriately advantaged or disadvantaged by these estimates. I studied the estimates to see if anything was out of line and concluded that they did not appear to be biased. In addition, I was free to use or modify the estimated costs in any way I deemed appropriate – and indeed did so, in line with evaluation processes that Sedway Consulting has employed in other resource solicitations.

Q. Were there any other Seminole estimates that were used in your analysis that were not locked down prior to the receipt of proposals?

A. Yes, in a sense. Sedway Consulting and Seminole had discussed and locked down assumptions about generic resources that Seminole would model as filler resources that would be added to its modeling simulations to address future capacity needs associated with load growth, project retirements, or the expiration of PPAs. Similarly, Sedway Consulting uses filler resource assumptions in the RSM. However, the costs and benefits for these resources were developed by blending the costs and benefits for the top three long-term resources that were received in the solicitations. This process is described more fully in Exhibit No.__(AST-1), Document No. 2, the Independent Evaluation Report.

Q. Please describe the RRM and how it was used.

A. Sedway Consulting's Revenue Requirements Model, or RRM, is another spreadsheet model that I have used in numerous solicitations across the country to calculate annual revenue requirements associate with project-related capital expenditures. It is a much simpler model than the RSM. In the case of Seminole's solicitations, I used the RRM to calculate my independent estimates of annual revenue requirements associated with Seminole's self-build construction costs and of levelized annual transmission costs associated with any resources that were likely to trigger transmission network upgrades (e.g., new resources such as the SCCF, SHCCF, and other new build market alternatives).

V. SEDWAY CONSULTING'S FINDINGS AND RESULTS.

Q. What were the results of Sedway Consulting's RSM and RRM analyses?

A. Using the RSM and RRM, Sedway Consulting was able to compare the economics of Seminole's self-build resource and each of the proposed resource options. That comparison entailed a calculation of the net present value of each option from 2021 through 2051 and accounted for 1) filler resources that would need to "fill in" behind options that expired before 2051 and 2) the cost or revenue valuation of small additional generic seasonal purchases or sales that would align all portfolios with the same projected capacity need. In the near-final results that I presented to Seminole's Board of Trustees on July 12, 2017, the final selected portfolio was found to be $282 million (cumulative present value of revenue requirements – "CPVRR") less expensive than the next best portfolio of alternatives. The Board of Trustees approved the plan to finish negotiations with the counterparties of the resources included in the final selected portfolio. The results and the ranking of resources and portfolios are described in Sedway Consulting's independent evaluation report that is attached as Document No. 2 of Exhibit No. __ (AST-1).

Q. What do you conclude about Seminole's solicitations?

A. I conclude that the resources depicted earlier in my testimony as components of the final selected portfolio represent the best, least-cost resources for meeting Seminole's 2021-and-beyond capacity needs and concur with Seminole's decision to move forward with those projects and PPAs. The solicitation process yielded the best results for Seminole's Members while treating bidders fairly. The RFP was sufficiently detailed to provide necessary information to bidders. The economic evaluation methodology and assumptions were appropriate and unbiased, and the independent evaluation procedures provided a cross-check of Seminole's proposal representation in PaR and confirmed Seminole's conclusions. I participated in Seminole's internal discussions about project and portfolio risks and believe that the final selected portfolio is well balanced from a risk perspective. I monitored the negotiation and communication process with the PIE/LTSA, EPC, and market alterative bidders and can confirm that Seminole conducted a fair and unbiased process. Finally, I conclude that Seminole's selected portfolio – which includes both the SCCF and SHCCF resources as essential components – is at least $282 million CPVRR less expensive than the next best portfolio of alternatives.

Q. Does this conclude your direct testimony?

A. Yes, it does.

2001 Wisconsin Testimony Concerning Competitive Bidding Solicitations
Client: MidWest Independent Power Suppliers

Provided testimony in a proceeding before the Wisconsin Public Service Commission on behalf of a consortium of independent power producers. Mr. Taylor testified on the benefits and timing of a competitive bidding solicitation that Wisconsin Electric Power Company (WEPCO) should be ordered to conduct prior to the utility's development of $2.8 billion in self-build generation facilities (embodied in a WEPCO proposal called Power the Future – 2). Without the benefits of a competitive solicitation, there would be no defensible means of ensuring that the utility's customers were being offered the best, most cost-effective resources.

2001 Negotiation of Full-Requirements Purchase Contract
Client: Georgia cooperative utility

Assisted in negotiation of a $2 billion power purchase contract. Mr. Taylor worked with a team of legal experts and other consultants to assist the client in negotiating a 15-year full-requirements contract with a large, national power supplier. Detailed modeling simulations were performed to compare the complex transaction to the utility's own self-build alternatives. Mr. Taylor helped investigate and negotiate detailed provisions in the power supply contract concerning ancillary services and other operational parameters.

2001 Evaluation of Resource Proposals
Client: North Carolina municipal utility

Reviewed responses to a utility resource solicitation and assisted the client in developing a short list of the best bidders. Mr. Taylor reviewed the results of the client's economic analysis of the proposals and provided insights on various nonprice factors related to each of the top-ranked proposals. Mr. Taylor helped the client in structuring and strategizing for the negotiation process.

2000-2001 Solicitation for New Resources
Client: Public Service of Colorado

Assisted in the evaluation of a large number of multi-option proposals for new power supplies in the 2002-2005 time frame. Mr. Taylor managed a team of a dozen individuals who performed economic and nonprice evaluations of conventional and renewable proposals. Mr. Taylor developed recommendations for a short list of the best resources and managed a supplemental evaluation of second-tier bidders when the client's capacity needs subsequently increased. Ultimately, over $2 billion of contracts were negotiated for over 1,700 MW of new power supplies under terms of up to 10 years. Mr. Taylor testified before the Colorado Public Utilities Commission on the processes and results of both the primary and supplemental evaluations.

INDEPENDENT EVALUATION REPORT FOR SEMINOLE ELECTRIC'S POWER SUPPLY SOLICITATIONS FOR 2021 CAPACITY NEEDS

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Introduction and Background

In early 2016, Seminole Electric Cooperative, Inc. (Seminole) launched three solicitations to seek resources or transactions that would help the cooperative meet its forecasted capacity needs in 2021 and beyond. Two of those solicitations were associated with Seminole's efforts to explore the development of a self-build resource at its Seminole Generating Station (SGS) site; they involved Requests for Proposals (RFP) for 1) power island equipment (PIE) and an associated long-term service agreement (LTSA), and 2) engineering, procurement and construction (EPC) services to install the selected power island equipment and construct the balance of the facility. The third solicitation was for market alternatives (i.e., new build facilities that would be owned and operated by others, sales of power from existing facilities, and system sales from a portfolio of resources). Sedway Consulting, Inc. (Sedway Consulting) was retained to provide independent monitoring and evaluation services over all of these RFPs and provide a parallel economic evaluation of responses that might address Seminole's capacity needs. The primary focus of this report is the market alternative RFP, with the results of the PIE/LTSA and EPC solicitations incorporated in the form of finalized self-build alternatives that competed with the market alternatives.

This independent evaluation report documents Sedway Consulting's evaluation process and presents the results of Sedway Consulting's economic analysis. It describes:

- the proposals that were received in response to Seminole's market alternatives 2021 RFP and the Seminole finalized self-build options,
- Sedway Consulting's proprietary Response Surface Model (RSM) and Revenue Requirements Model (RRM) which were used to conduct the parallel economic evaluation,
- fundamental assumptions that were applied,
- additional economic factors that affected the final cost of each resource, and
- the development and comparison of complete portfolios of resources that would meet Seminole's capacity needs.

Receipt of Market Alternative Proposals

In Seminole's market alternatives RFP, bidders were instructed to email their submission to Seminole (and cc Sedway Consulting) by May 9, 2016. On or before that date, Sedway Consulting received 265 proposals from 40 power suppliers. For organizational and ease of comparison purposes, Seminole segregated the submitted proposals into four categories (with offer count totals next to each label):

- solar photovoltaic (PV) – 127 offers,
- baseload – 16 offers,
- intermediate – 75 offers, and
- peaking – 47 offers.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
FL-GOV-20-0899-A-002767

These offer totals represent the overall numbers of proposals received, prior to any disqualification decisions or qualitative review that ultimately reduced the number of proposals that moved through the evaluation process. Sedway Consulting and Seminole reviewed their respective proposal counts and confirmed that any differences are due to some disqualifications and minor interpretation issues.

One rationale for segregating solar PV proposals into a separate category was the fact that Seminole is a winter-peaking entity, with its peak loads occurring during hours that solar resources provide little or no generation. Therefore, while these resources may provide some energy and fuel-diversity benefits throughout the year, they could not appreciably meet the need that Seminole was hoping to address with its RFPs.

Virtually all of the proposals in the last three categories could be modeled and evaluated on a side-by-side basis in Sedway Consulting's Response Surface Model (RSM). Therefore, the differentiation of proposals into baseload, intermediate, and peaking was less important from Sedway Consulting's perspective than another critical factor in the evaluation process – namely, the regional location of resources or power supplies. Essentially, Seminole's Member loads are electrically connected or located in either Duke Energy Florida's (DEF) balancing authority area (BAA) or Florida Power & Light's (FPL) BAA, with a third BAA as Seminole's north system (SSN). That third area has relatively little load; the majority of Seminole's load is in DEF's BAA. It was important to procure resources or transactions that would support Seminole's Members' needs in those areas and minimize the costs and reliance of inter-regional transfers. With its market alternatives RFP, Seminole provided historical load information for both of these load areas to provide bidders with important locational information. The FPL BAA has a long-term projected peak load of approximately 600 MW and an average load of approximately 400 MW. It was recognized that procuring more than those quantities in the FPL BAA would result in additional transmission wheeling/transfer costs to bring the power into the DEF BAA to serve Seminole's predominant needs there. Similarly, it was recognized that resources outside of Florida (e.g., in the Southeast Electric Reliability Council, SERC) would incur transmission-related costs – and potential reliability concerns, if Seminole relied too heavily on such resources. Thus, this report depicts and segregates much of the offer statistics into five different categories: solar PV, DEF BAA, FPL BAA, SSN BAA (which can reasonably provide capacity to either the FPL or DEF BAAs), and SERC.

Table A-1 depicts the number of non-solar offers by resource type and locations.

Table A-2 provides a summary of the solar PV proposals that Sedway Consulting received from each bidder. As has been Sedway Consulting's reporting approach in all solicitations, the identities of bidders and projects who were not selected for final contracts has been redacted as confidential. Thus, the actual bidder and project names in Tables A-2 through A-6 for these non-selected bidders and projects are redacted and the tables include a "Code" column that provides a counterparty letter and project number reference that is used throughout the remainder of the report.

	DEF BAA	FPL BAA	SSN BAA	SERC/Other	Total
Baseload	3	4	0	9	16
Intermediate	39	2	18	16	75
Peaking	21	7	12	7	47
Total	63	13	30	32	138

Note: One of the baseload offers in the DEF BAA column was actually a combination of small existing resources in both the DEF and FPL BAAs.

The tables include the number of proposals provided by each bidder. In many instances, bidders provided multiple mutually-exclusive proposals for the same resource (e.g., with flat or escalating pricing, different delivery period durations). Thus, the total number of offers was considerably more than the total number of projects.

The final column in Table A-2 provides the levelized solar PV energy price (in $/MWh) as calculated by Sedway Consulting for each project's best offer. Obviously, for offers with a flat, non-escalating price, the levelized price is that proposed price; but for offers with escalating prices, the levelized price is that flat, non-escalating price that would result in the same net present value over the term of the proposed agreement as the escalating price – and provides for a comparable metric for ranking the offers. In cases where there were multiple, mutually-exclusive offers for a project, the value in the final column represents the lowest levelized price among those offers. The ranking of the bidders in the table is based on each bidder's best project levelized price.

Table A-3 provides the number of proposals from each bidder for baseload, intermediate, and peaking resources that would provide power deliveries in the DEF BAA. Some of the proposals were for resources that would be connected to Tampa Electric Company's (TECO) system, where power could be transferred (with a wheeling cost) into the DEF system. Tables A-4 through A-6 provide similar summaries for the proposals offered in the FPL BAA, SSN BAA, and SERC regions, respectively. The tables include a "Type" column that identifies the proposed technology (CC=combined cycle, CT=combustion turbine, System=system sale, MSW=municipal solid waste). Similar to Table A-2, the identities of bidders and projects that were not selected for final contracts are confidential and hence redacted. The rankings of the bidders in the tables are roughly based on the economics of their best proposal in the initial evaluation phase.

Disqualification Decisions

Of the bidders/ proposals listed in Table A-2, bidders SolarU-1 and SolarV-1 were disqualified for lack of specificity (e.g., failure to provide specific prices).

Evaluation and Selection Process

As noted earlier, Seminole is winter peaking cooperative and solar PV projects are not in a position to address this need. At the times that the winter peak might occur, there is little or no sunshine. Thus, the evaluation process was bifurcated into a review of the solar PV proposals for potential selection for environmental and diversification benefits and a full analysis of the non-solar PV proposals that offered firm capacity that could meet Seminole's capacity needs.

Solar PV Proposal Analysis

In the case of the solar PV analysis, Seminole and Sedway reviewed the proposals (especially pricing and qualifications) and decided to shortlist five of the top six bidders (i.e., SolarA, SolarB, SolarC, SolarD [Coronal, the firm that was ultimately awarded a final contract], and SolarF). The SolarE and SolarF bidders were very close in pricing and thus on the cusp of either being included or excluded from the short list. Seminole opted to shortlist SolarF because of slightly better qualitative considerations. Seminole held meetings and calls with the shortlisted bidders in which Sedway Consulting participated. After learning more about the qualifications of these bidders and the status of their projects, Seminole asked all shortlisted bidders to review their proposed pricing and provide "best-and-final-offers" (BAFO) by September 9, 2016; also, Seminole let each bidder know which of each bidder's projects were of greatest interest to Seminole. These were the following: SolarA-1, SolarB-1, SolarB-2, SolarB-3, SolarC-1 (with guidance that Seminole was not interested in procuring more than 75 MW), SolarD-1, SolarD-2 (the Coronal Tillman project that was ultimately selected), SolarD-4, SolarF-1 and SolarF-2. In several cases, bidders provided multiple options for each project (e.g., different terms, fixed or escalating prices). Table A-7 shows the lowest levelized BAFO price for each project. Seminole reviewed the BAFOs and decided to select bidders SolarB and SolarD with whom to commence negotiations and perform further due diligence. Although bidder SolarA had the lowest pricing, the bidder did not yet have a site or any interconnection information. The two final shortlisted bidders were much further along with the development of their projects. Sedway Consulting concurred with the selection of the two bidders for negotiations.

Solar PV Proposal Final Selection

Negotiations and due diligence discussions continued into 2017 with both bidders. In late May 2017, given the passage of time and the recognition that solar PV panel prices had continued to decline, Seminole encouraged both bidders to sharpen their pencils and provide final lower pricing, if they so chose. Both did, with a range of sizes and terms. Bidder SolarD (Coronal) came in with the lowest prices, as depicted in Table A-8 as levelized prices for those bids that were in the same size range and term.

The Coronal Tillman project had the lowest price and was selected for final negotiations. On October 16, 2017, Seminole and Tillman Solar Center, LLC (a subsidiary of Coronal Energy) executed a 20-year PPA for solar PV generation from a new facility to be built in Alachua County, Florida with an expected commercial operation date of June 1, 2021.

Non-Solar PV Proposal Analysis

As noted earlier, solar PV capacity provides little or no contribution to meeting Seminole's winter peak. Thus, the cooperative's 2021 RFP was essentially soliciting proposals for other types of generation. The analysis of proposals for this other generation was the primary focus for Sedway Consulting's independent evaluation efforts. In this report, all references to proposals and proposal evaluation tasks from this point forward are entirely associated with Sedway Consulting's and Seminole's non-solar PV proposal analyses.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Through its review of the proposals that Sedway Consulting received during the bid submission process, Sedway Consulting extracted the following economic information for each proposal (including Seminole's self-build options):

- Capacity (winter and summer; base and duct-fired, where applicable)
- Commencement and expiration dates of contract
- Capacity pricing (or asset sales price, if applicable)
- Fixed O&M pricing or charges
- Firm fuel transportation assumptions
- Fuel pricing or indexing
- Heat rate (base and duct-fired, where applicable)
- Variable O&M pricing or charges
- Start-up costs and fuel requirements
- Expected forced outage and planned outage hours
- Third-party transmission costs.

The remainder of this report section addresses the following topics:

- a description of the RSM and its evaluation process,
- the use of a "back-fill" resource in evaluating proposed transactions that expire before the end of the study period,
- proposal/resource cost computation (and costs that were developed outside of the RSM),
- the use of surplus/deficit capacity assumptions to adjust for the slightly different annual or seasonal sizes of competing portfolios, and
- the process of developing final cost estimates for competing portfolios.

RSM Evaluation Process

The economic information for all outside proposals and Seminole's self-build option(s) was input into Sedway Consulting's RSM – a power supply evaluation tool that was calibrated to approximate the impact of each resource on Seminole's system production costs. The RSM calculated each proposal's annual fixed costs and variable dispatch costs, estimated the production cost impacts of each proposal, and accounted for capacity replacement costs for all proposed contracts that expired before the end of the study period.

A proposal's net cost was a combination of fixed and variable cost factors. On the fixed side, the RSM calculated annual fixed costs associated with capacity payments (or generation-related revenue requirements), fixed O&M costs, firm gas transportation costs, third-party transmission wheeling charges (where applicable), and transmission revenue requirements. These annual total fixed costs were discounted to mid-2017 dollars.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

On the variable cost side, the RSM first developed a variable dispatch charge (in $/MWh) for each proposal for each month. This charge was calculated by multiplying the proposal's heat rate by the specified monthly fuel index price and adding the variable O&M charge.

The RSM then estimated Seminole's system production costs for each month and each proposal by interpolating between production costs estimates that were extracted from a set of runs from EPM – Seminole's detailed production cost model. These runs were performed at the start of the project and were used to calibrate the RSM by varying the monthly variable dispatch charge for a proxy proposal and recording the resulting Seminole system production cost.

For the same capacity as the proposal under consideration, the RSM also estimated Seminole's system production costs for a natural-gas-fired reference unit that had a high variable dispatch charge based on a heat rate of 13,000 Btu/kWh. Thus, for each proposal, the RSM yielded estimates of the annual production cost savings that Seminole would be projected to experience if the utility selected the resource option, relative to acquiring the same sized transaction but at the high reference resource dispatch rate. The lower an proposal's variable dispatch charge, the greater the production cost savings.

Back-Fill Resource

As was mentioned earlier, the RSM accounted for the costs of replacing capacity for all proposed contracts that expired before the end of the study period (2051). This was done by "filling in" for the lost capacity at the end of each proposal's term of service. This allowed for a consistent and appropriate comparison of the value of proposals that had varying contract durations. In effect, by supplementing each short-term proposal with a back-fill resource for the later years, the RSM was simulating what Seminole would have to do when a proposed transaction expired – acquire or develop an amount of replacement capacity that was roughly equal to that expired resource.

As the basis for cost assumptions for the back-fill resource, Sedway Consulting use a blend of the cost and benefit streams associated with the three top-ranked individual proposals for long-term power supplies. By doing so, Sedway Consulting was using direct market information as guidance for what future capacity might cost. All capacity-related costs were escalated by a modest rate of 1.0%/year (which was assumed to be a reasonable assumption for the rate of inflation minus future potential for technology cost reductions). In addition, Sedway Consulting employed a methodological variation, whereby the RSM scaled the replacement capacity to exactly equal the size of the expiring proposal resource. Thus, all PPA proposals enjoyed the benefit of being replaced at the end of their terms with a resource that exhibited the operating efficiencies and economy-of-scale benefits of these three top-ranked offers (which were fairly large in capacity). In other words, if a 200 MW proposal ended in 2031, the RSM assumed that a 200 MW CC facility replaced it in 2032; however, the construction costs for the replacement facility were not those that would typically be associated with a 200 MW plant, but rather, they were a prorated portion of the construction costs of a larger facilities.

It is worth noting that this development of a smoothly escalating cost and benefit stream and the scaling process differed from the future generation expansion assumptions and methodologies employed by Seminole. In the end, however, the approaches probably did not significantly alter either evaluation team's results, as they accomplish the same general goal of continuing to meet Seminole's future capacity needs with generic replacement capacity. However, this is one of several reasons that Seminole's and Sedway Consulting's final portfolio cost differential are different. Sedway Consulting retains the right to evaluate utility solicitations with its own methodologies and believes that using two different approaches reinforces a solicitation's evaluation process when both approaches yield results that support the same conclusion(s).

As noted above, depending on the "in-service date" for the back-fill resource, the back-filler's capital costs were escalated from a 2021 base-year value by 1.0%/year. This escalation assumption represented Sedway Consulting's estimate of how construction costs were likely to increase for generation alternatives. Sedway Consulting decided to use this escalation value to trend the filler's annual capacity charges over time. Thus, instead of using Seminole's declining revenue requirements profile for the recovery of capacity costs of future generic resources, Sedway Consulting used an escalating pattern that yielded the same long-term present value of revenue requirements. A traditional revenue requirements profile results in the highest capital charges in a project's early years. Thereafter, the capital-related charges decline. This is the opposite from what is usually seen in most power purchase proposals in power supply solicitations. Most power purchase proposals tend to have flat or escalating capacity charges, presumably reflecting expectations that general inflation will increase the costs of constructing new facilities in the future. Sedway Consulting therefore restructured the filler's profile of capacity costs to match what is generally seen in the marketplace. This meant that the filler's first year's capacity costs were the lowest, with each year thereafter escalating at 1.0%. Figure A-1 displays the escalating capacity price profile used by Sedway Consulting as well as the component top-ranked project cost streams, which include the Seminole's 2x1H self-build resource and its traditional declining revenue requirements profile.

Over the full 30 years, the restructuring of the back-fill resource's capacity costs made no difference to the present value of the blended top-ranked proposals' cost streams. However, in the evaluation of outside proposals that did not extend through the end of the study period, it provided a more favorable basis for such proposals' evaluation. In effect, it assumed that, following the expiration of an outside proposal's term, Seminole would procure replacement power supplies at a trended price based on the best market resources. In reality, if a utility-build resource was determined to be most cost-effective at this future decision point, the declining revenue requirements profile would represent the actual annual costs that Seminole's customers would likely pay.

Proposal/Resource Cost Computation

Sedway Consulting used its own proprietary Revenue Requirements Model (RRM) to develop estimates of the annual revenue requirements for Seminole' self-build option(s) and cross-checked them with those provided by Seminole. Both sets of values compared quite closely, and Sedway Consulting relied on its RRM results for use in the RSM.

Most of the input assumptions for the proposals and other cost and operational parameters for Seminole's self-build option(s) were directly input into the RSM in a straightforward fashion from the proposal submissions. However, the following were some key additional external cost estimates that were developed outside of each proposal and input into the RSM:

- Firm gas transportation
- Third-party transmission costs
- Network upgrade-related transmission costs.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
FL-GOV-20-0899-A-002778

Firm gas transportation. Seminole's RFP required that bidders of gas-fired projects ensure that firm gas transportation would be available for their facilities. In the RFP bid forms/spreadsheets, bidders were asked to provide information that would allow Seminole to estimate the expected annual firm gas transportation (i.e., pipeline reservation) charges for each project. Sedway Consulting reviewed Seminole's calculations, compared Seminole's values to some of its own calculations and ultimately adopted the same or close approximations to Seminole's values for each applicable proposal.

In addition to the annual firm gas pipeline reservation charges, bidders provided and/or Seminole estimated fuel price adders for each project's natural gas supply, where applicable. These adders accounted for locational basis differentials and, in some cases, additional firm gas transportation variable charges.

Third-party transmission costs. As noted above, Seminole members have load in three balancing areas in Florida, and the cooperative sought to procure power supplies in locations that would minimize excessive transfers between those areas (or from out-of-state). That said, proposals that entailed such transfers were allowed; they simply needed to include the necessary third-party transmission wheeling costs associated with such transfers. In fact, bidders had to identify in their proposals any firm transmission wheeling charges (e.g., for point-to-point transmission service) that would be incurred and passed on to Seminole for such transfers or for wheeling across third-party transmission systems.

Network-update-related transmission costs. With the addition of new generation to a utility system (and sometimes even for redirected sales of power from existing resources), portions of the utility's transmission grid may need to be reinforced. This can entail the construction of new circuits or the reconductoring and upgrading of existing transmission lines. For proposals for new resources that would be located in the relevant balancing area authorities, bidders were responsible for recognizing that their resource might trigger the need for network upgrades on the DEF or FPL transmission systems. It was each bidder's responsibility to initiate, when appropriate, an interconnection request to study what those costs would be. Seminole, in turn, calculated what the effect would be on the DEF and FPL transmission rate tariffs and the costs that its members would need to pay on any on-going basis for its portion of such network upgrades. Where appropriate, estimates of such network upgrade investments were sought from bidders and/or calculated by Seminole's transmission subject matter experts for specific proposals. Sedway Consulting reviewed and adopted these annual cost estimates. However, Sedway Consulting employed a different methodology than Seminole for attributing these network-upgrade-related costs to projects. Sedway Consulting calculated Seminole's portion of the levelized annual transmission revenue requirements[1] for the applicable investment and applied those annual costs only during the term of the PPA (or economic life of the asset in the case of owned generation options). Seminole developed revenue requirements from the transmission investment estimates and applied them for all years of the study period for all bids. Neither approach was right or wrong;

[1] Assuming a 40-year transmission asset life.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

each was based on slightly different but defensible end-effects assumptions. In any case, as noted earlier, Sedway Consulting was free to employ its own evaluation methodologies that may differ from Seminole's; and although that contributed to somewhat different final quantitative results, the fact that different approaches supported the same final conclusions reinforces provides greater assurance in the results of the solicitation.

Surplus/Deficit Capacity Benefit/Cost – Portfolio Cost Computation

In Sedway Consulting's analysis, projects were initially evaluated on a stand-alone basis rather than in the context of a long-term generation expansion plan, as was the case with Seminole's detailed model. In its final analysis, Sedway Consulting accounted for the different capacity of each resource by developing portfolios of resources that relatively closely met Seminole's project seasonal (i.e., summer and winter) capacity needs in 2021-2025. In instances where there was a small surplus or deficit of capacity in a season, Sedway Consulting used short-term capacity valuation assumptions that Seminole provided at the start of the RFP project and periodically updated with the latest market information for small short-term capacity transactions. For long-term portfolio capacity differences (i.e., past 2025), Sedway Consulting used its filler resource assumptions to determine the benefits of surplus capacity or the costs of being slightly short.

The inclusion of these costs or benefits of marginal capacity in the RSM results placed those results on a more comparable footing with the Seminole detailed production costing and generation expansion results.

RSM Evaluation Results

The evaluation process for the non-solar PV resources went through a series of "shortlistings" over the course of the RFP process, with uncompetitive projects being set aside and released from further consideration at various stages. For the first cut, Sedway Consulting and Seminole identified proposals that had high risks and/or high prices that made them outliers and undesirable candidates for selection. The following Tables A-8 through A-11 depict the RSM levelized $/kW-month net cost results for the initial review of the qualified offers, segmented into the same delivery zones as was depicted in Tables A-3 through A-6. The proposal ranking in each table is based on the levelized net cost, from lowest to highest.

In Table A-8 (for the DEF BAA proposals), it was decided that the bottom five proposals (H-1, G-1, D-2, I-1, and J-1) had net costs that were too high to warrant continued evaluation. Also, as far as competing peaking CT resources, the least cost-effective CT proposal (D-1) was seen as unnecessary for continued evaluation, given that there were better CT/peaking proposals in the BAA to consider.

Later in the evaluation process, discussions with the bidder behind the Proposals A-1, A-2, A-3, and A-4 – all of which were associated with the same site – yielded the conclusion that the development efforts were in a rather early stage. Given that this translated into greater risks and uncertainty, these offers were removed from the later stages of the evaluation.

Proposal C-1 was for the purchase of an existing CT facility, with the proposed transfer to occur well before Seminole's 2021 need. More importantly, the CT's generation technology was an old non-standard, one-of-a-kind technology in the southeast U.S. that Seminole concluded would be hard to maintain and find spare parts. Sedway Consulting participated in several discussions with Seminole about the possible options if the cooperative were to buy this facility. However, both concluded that the technology risks were too high and the proposal was set aside.

Lastly, the Proposal B-2 was at the same site and mutually exclusive with a higher-ranked more attractive GE Shady Hills CC2 project, so that proposal was set aside. The remaining proposals continued to be included in the portfolio evaluation process, including Proposal F-1, which was sold by [redacted] to [redacted] during Seminole RFP process and is labeled as such in later tables.

For the Table A-9 proposals associated with resources in the FPL BAA, the last one in the table (Proposal A-7) was set aside because selecting it would cause Seminole to lose it ability to tap any other future power supply opportunities in the FPL BAA (e.g., short-term economic purchases). The bidder had two other proposals (A-5 and A-6) that did not have this drawback and included valuable optionality in the amount of capacity that Seminole could procure. That optionality value is not reflected in the RSM net cost metrics but was captured later in the portfolio development process. Thus, Seminole and Sedway Consulting agreed that those proposals should continue to be evaluated. The small Proposals M-1 and N-1 had net costs that were too high to warrant continued inclusion in the evaluation process and were set aside.

Table A-10 depicts the four SSN market alternative proposals as well as Seminole's two self-build options at the cooperative's SGS site in the SSN BAA – the 2x1H CC (SCF) and a smaller 1x1H CC. Seminole and Sedway Consulting had several calls/meetings with the bidder of the four market alternative proposals (which were all at the same proposed site) and concluded that gas supply constraints (and the associated costs of remedying those constraints) made the larger Proposals A-8 and A-9 too risky and expensive; thus, the self-build options and the smaller Proposals A-11 and A-10 continued to be evaluated.

Table A-11 depicts the proposals associated with resources in SERC. Because of transmission constraints and the potential for curtailments of power deliveries from SERC into peninsular Florida, Seminole recognized that it would be unwise to rely too heavily on resources in SERC to meet the cooperative's firm capacity needs. Thus, early in the evaluation process, it reviewed the supply portfolios of other peninsular Florida utilities to assess what percentage of their total capacity needs those utilities procured from SERC resources. Based on that review, Seminole concluded that it should set a maximum of 350 MW as the limit for SERC-based supplies.

11	[redacted]	CC	R-2	533	8.67
12	[redacted]	Wind	C-2	200	N/A

Given the 350 MW limit, two proposals were eliminated (L-2 and R-2) and one (Q-1), after discussions with Southern Company regarding its system sale proposal, was revised to have a maximum capacity of 350 MW.

One proposal (C-2) was for long-term energy deliveries from a wind facility in Kansas via point-to-point transmission service across a yet-to-be-developed transmission line to the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), then across the Southern Company system into Florida. The expected transmission costs resulted in a rather high $/MWh price for a non-firm, non-dispatchable product that would consume a majority of Seminole's 350 MW SERC limit. Thus, the proposal was set aside.

Low-ranked Proposals S-1, L-5, R-1, T-1, and R-2 were removed from further evaluation because of their poor quantitative metrics. The remaining proposals had net costs that were in a fairly tight range. Of the Projects L, O, and P, only Proposal O-1 was for deliveries from a full facility. The Proposals L-3, L-4, and P-1 were partial plant proposals and had the scheduling and settlement complications of dealing with other offtakers. Proposals O-1 and Q-1 (the Southern Company system sale) were seen as the best SERC proposals. Ultimately, the optionality associated with the Southern Company transaction (which could be set as low as 50 MW in a delivery year) made it the best fitting SERC resource in the final portfolio.

Final Proposal and Portfolio Analysis

Table A-12 depicts the final set of all of the resources that were modeled for the final selection decision in mid-2017. These were the results that Sedway Consulting presented to Seminole's Board of Trustees on July 12, 2017. The ranking is based on each resource's levelized and normalized $/kW-month net cost.

There are several important things to note in reviewing the RSM ranking. First, the results are based on a stand-alone analysis, are normalized for the size of each resource, and therefore, on an individual basis, do not necessary meet the capacity need. Total portfolio considerations and cost comparisons are addressed later.

Second, all of the resources have positive net costs because all of them have fixed costs that exceed their benefits. Thus, absent a reliability need, it would not make economic sense for Seminole to select any of the resources.

Third, as noted earlier, Sedway Consulting calibrated the RSM with proxy run information from Seminole's detailed production cost model prior to the receipt of proposals. Because Seminole was procuring resources to replace a rather significant percentage of its overall supply portfolio and because it received so many qualified proposals, the evaluation process took longer than expected. By the spring of 2017, Seminole had developed new load, fuel price, and other planning-related forecasts and incorporated this new information into its modeling systems. Sedway Consulting reviewed the new forecasts and believed them to be better than the previous 2016 forecasts. Thus, Seminole and Sedway Consulting coordinated on a new set of proxy runs to recalibrate Sedway Consulting's RSM for the 2017 forecasts. Given that this occurred well after Seminole had received and reviewed the proposals in its RFP process, Sedway Consulting reviewed the final rankings under both RSM vintages. Thus, in Table A-12, levelized net costs are shown for each final proposal under "Old" and "New" forecast assumptions, and the table is ranked on the "Old" metric. The rankings were essentially unchanged, with some minor flipping of some proposals in the ranking as indicated with italicized values in the "New" column.

It is important to note that both of the DEF System Sales and the Southern Company Services (SCS) System had significant optionality (with annual delivered capacities as low as 50 MW); this optionality is not reflected in the net cost statistics and rankings.

Portfolio Analysis

Seminole and Sedway Consulting reviewed their respective evaluation results and developed portfolios of proposals that would meet the cooperative's capacity needs. As this process was underway in early 2017, two important considerations came to light. First, Seminole began to explore potential savings that might be achieved by removing one of its SGS coal units from service and replacing that capacity with cost-effective resources and transactions that were available from its 2021 RFP. In the spring of 2017, Seminole retained an engineering firm to develop detailed estimates of the costs of the service removal process and the difference in the costs of continuing to operate one instead of two of its coal units. Second, it was recognized that each portfolio had certain expected portfolio transmission impacts that needed to be taken into consideration.

With these issues in mind, three specific optimal portfolios (i.e., optimal within the context of their purpose and constraints) rose to the top in terms of economic and strategic value and were labeled the following:

1. Clean Power Plan (CPP)
2. SGS 2x1
3. Limited Build

Tables A-13 through A-15 provide the component resources and additional economic factors of the three portfolios. Sedway Consulting found that the CPP portfolio was the least-cost option, yielding estimated total portfolio net costs that were $282 million less than the next best portfolio (which was the SGS 2x1 portfolio).

The first portfolio is depicted in Table A-13 and reflects the least-cost portfolio that entailed removing an SGS coal unit from service, achieving the cost savings associated with that removal, and replacing the coal unit's capacity with the most cost-effective resources that were available from Seminole's 2021 RFP.

Table A-15 depicts the least-cost portfolio that does not entail Seminole's development of any new self-build resources (nor the removal from service of any coal unit). Only one new build resource would be constructed if Seminole pursued this Limited Build portfolio – Shady Hill's CC (SHCCF).

Portfolio Net Cost – Limited Build

	Bidder/Project	Code	Winter Capacity (MW)	COD	Term (years)	Net Cost ($M)

Thus, on a CPVRR basis, the CPP Portfolio that Seminole selected was found to be $282 million less expensive than the next lowest-cost portfolio of alternatives. Sedway Consulting believes that this is a conservative cost differential because it is likely that the RSM results did not fully capture the production cost benefits associated with replacing coal generation with gas-fired generation.

Conclusions

Sedway Consulting performed an independent evaluation of Seminole's self-build option(s) and the market alternatives that were submitted in response to Seminole's 2021 RFP and concluded that the CPP portfolio represented the lowest-cost portfolio for meeting Seminole's 2021 resource need. That portfolio was found to be $282 million less expensive on a CPVRR basis than the next cheapest portfolio of alternatives.

COVID-19 Daily Talking Points
March 10, 2020

Yesterday, Governor Ron DeSantis issued Executive Order 20-52, declaring a State of Emergency. By declaring a State of Emergency, Governor DeSantis is ensuring that state and local governments have the resources and flex bility they need to prepare and respond.

The Governor and Florida Department of Health's highest priority at this time is slowing the spread of COVID-19 and ensuring anyone who is potentially infected is appropriately identified, cared for and isolated.

As a part of the statewide response, Governor DeSantis has ordered the following state agencies to take an active role in combatting this outbreak:

- Florida Department of Transportation - FDOT Secretary Th bault and staff from DOH will be hosting weekly conference calls with all passenger seaports and public use airports to provide updates related to COVID-19.
- Agency for Health Care Administration – AHCA is hosting calls with the Florida Health Care Association and Florida Hospital Association to facilitate conversations regarding facility transfers and the screening of facility visitors.
    - Additionally, AHCA is providing ongoing support through constant communication with hospitals and health care facilities to provide information on CDC infection prevention and control guidelines.
- Florida Department of Education – Commissioner Corcoran is working with schools, colleges and universities to provide support for alternate learning opportunities in the case that campuses need to be closed due to COVID-19.

The Department will be sending a press release update every morning, seven days per week, to keep the public informed.

The Florida Department of Health is advising all individuals who have traveled internationally to follow the CDC guidelines, summarized below:

- Level 3: CDC recommends 14-day self-isolation and social distancing upon return to the United States. Social distancing includes avoiding going out in public and close personal interactions. If you become symptomatic, immediately self-isolate and contact your county health department or health care provider.
- Level 2 and Cruises: Travelers should monitor their health and limit interactions with others for 14 days after returning to the United States. If you become symptomatic, immediately self-isolate and contact your county health department or health care provider.
- For more information regarding current CDC travel advisories related to COVID-19, visit: https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/travelers/index.html

Last night, the Department announced a new case of COVID-19 in Broward County. The Department, through an extensive epidemiological investigation, identified this new case as the third positive case of COVID-19 associated with Port Everglades in Broward County, Florida. Further, all three cases are connected to or employed by Metro Cruise Services – a company that operates at Port Everglades.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- The Florida Department of Health recommends all individuals experiencing symptoms who have recently travelled through Port Everglades to immediately contact their County Health Department or health care provider and self-isolate for 14 Days.
- The Department also recommends employees of Metro Cruise Services at Port Everglades with any association to these cases self-isolate at home.
- The Department is working to connect with all employees at Metro Cruise Services who may have come into contact with the three individuals who have tested positive for COVID-19 to provide the employees with the appropriate guidance and monitoring.
- The department is working in close consultation with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) on this investigation.
- CDC recommends that individuals with recent travel history on a cruise to monitor their health for 14 days and, if they develop symptoms, to immediately self-isolate and contact their County Health Department or health care provider.

The Department is urging residents to stay informed on how to protect themselves and their communities from COVID-19.

The Department encourages everyone to seek medical attention and diagnosis if they suspect they have contracted COVID-19 or come into contact with someone who has COVID-19.

The Department's dedicated COVID-19 webpage at www.FloridaHealth.gov/COVID-19 remains the best and most up-to-date resource for information and guidance regarding COVID-19 in Florida.

Governor DeSantis is working closely with state agencies and the Department to monitor, prepare and prevent the spread of this virus.

The Department of Health updates Florida's COVID-19 information page daily. Please visit FloridaHealth.gov/ COVID-19/ for the latest information.

Please visit floridahealth.gov/COVID19 to obtain the most recent information including state test results pending, the number of negative test results and positive cases of COVID-19.

The Florida Department of Health is actively involved in enhanced surveillance for respiratory illness that may be COVID-19. Epidemiologists will follow up on any suspected cases that meet criteria for COVID-19 to arrange for testing when needed and monitor contacts of any confirmed cases, if they occur.

The Department will communicate regularly with the public and health care providers with updates on COVID-19 and other respiratory illnesses.

Everyone plays a part in lowering the impact within our communities and workplaces – taking every day preventative actions helps to impede the spread of respiratory diseases such as COVID-19. Preventative actions include:

- Washing your hands frequently with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom, before eating, and after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing. If soap and water are not available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol.
- Avoiding close contact with people who are sick.
- Staying home when you are sick. This message cannot be emphasized enough.
- Employees who have symptoms of acute respiratory illness are recommended to stay home and not come to work until they are free of fever (100.4° F or greater using an oral thermometer), signs of a fever, and any other symptoms for at least 24 hours, without the use of fever-reducing or other symptom-altering medicines (e.g. cough suppressants). Employees should notify their supervisor and stay home if they are sick.
- Before traveling take certain steps:
  - Check CDC's Traveler's Health Notices for the latest guidance and recommendations for each country to which you will travel.
  - Employees who become sick while traveling must understand that they should notify their supervisor and should promptly call a healthcare provider for advice if needed.

The Department of Health has set up a dedicated COVID-19 Call Center for questions about this virus. Anyone with questions may call 1-(866) 779-6121 or email COVID-19@flhealth.gov. The Call Center is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

If Asked:

"What is the Department doing about the cruise ships near Florida that could be carrying individuals infected with COVID-19?"

-The Department of Health has been notified that one cruise ship off the coast of Miami may have cases of COVID-19, the Caribbean Princess.

- On Sunday, March 8th, the U.S. Coast Guard ordered the Regal Princess cruise ship to disembark following negative tests for COVID-19.

Commented [BMM2]: Please verify this language one final time.

Although this issue falls under federal jurisdiction, since being notified, the department has been working closely with the cruise industry, CDC, Coast Guard and other partners to ensure every effort is made to keep the Floridians on board safe, while also protecting Florida residents across the state. Over the coming days, we will continue to work with these partners to provide testing support and resolve this situation as quickly as possible.

"What is the number of patients tested in my county?"

-We appreciate the desire to understand how many Floridians in each community have been tested, received a negative test or are under public health monitoring as a result of suspicion they may have COVID-19 or has been in contact with someone who have COVID-19. Balancing the privacy of the individuals being tested and monitored and the confidentiality of the epidemiological investigations with the responsibility to Floridians to disclose information to protect the public is a vital role of the Florida Department of Health (DOH). The DOH strives to protect the identity of individuals tested or affected by COVID-19, while also ensuring information necessary for the public health is available.

As such, in order to protect personally identifiable health information (PHI) of Floridians, the Florida Department of Health is unable to break down the number of individuals who have received a negative test, have pending test results or are under public health monitoring by community.

Floridians can view the aggregate state level information at www.FLHealth.gov/COVID-19. This information is updated daily.

Additionally, the Florida Department of Health is encouraging all Floridians to be aware. Floridians should practice good hand hygiene and wash their hands with soap and water for a minimum of 20 seconds, use a tissue when they sneeze or cough and immediately dispose of it in the trash and stay home if they are sick."

What you Should Know

COVID-19 can spread from person to person through small droplets from the nose or mouth, including when an individual coughs or sneezes. These droplets may land on objects and surfaces. Other people may contract COVID-19 by touching these objects or surfaces, then touching their eyes, nose or mouth.

Symptoms of COVID-19 are fever, cough and shortness of breath. Symptoms may appear in as few as two days or as many as 14 days following exposure. Most people recover from COVID-19 without needing special treatment. The elderly and those with underlying medical problems like high blood pressure, heart problems and diabetes, are more likely to develop serious illness.

There is currently no vaccine to prevent COVID-19. The best way to prevent illness is to avoid being exposed to the virus. The Department recommends everyday preventive actions to help stop the spread of respiratory diseases, including:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Avoiding close contact with people who are sick;
- Staying home when you are sick and avoiding contact with persons in poor health;
- Avoiding touching your eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands;
- Covering your cough or sneeze with a tissue, then disposing of the tissue;
- Washing your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom, before eating, after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing;
- If soap and water are not readily available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol. Always wash hands with soap and water if hands are visibly dirty; and
- Cleaning and disinfecting frequently touched objects and surfaces using a regular household cleaning spray or wipe.

CDC does not recommend that asymptomatic, healthy people wear a facemask to protect themselves from respiratory diseases, including COVID-19. Facemasks should be used by people who show symptoms of COVID-19 to help prevent the spread of the disease to others. The use of facemasks is also crucial for health workers and people who are taking care of someone in close settings (at home or in a health care facility).

Alberto and DOH CO Team,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I assume you are all aware of this situation, but if you are not, in short, a women in Pennsylvania, confirmed with COVID-19, was displaying symptoms when she attended the ACTRIMS Conference (Americas Committee for Treatment and Research in Multiple Sclerosis) on 2/28 at the West Palm Beach Convention Center in Palm Beach County.

Obviously this is going to cause a great deal of panic, and a huge amount of media attention as everyone is going to want to know details about this woman, who she interacted with at the conference, what hotel she stayed at, what restaurants she ate at, etc, etc. Who should be concerned, what should people do, etc, etc.

Dr. Alonso is having a closed meeting with Discovery of the Palm Beaches & ACTRIMS tomorrow (Monday 3/9) at 1:30pm. She expects the media could be waiting for her after this meeting, and she wants to know what she should be allowed to say / talking points. I also would like to be as prepared as possible for any answers we need to give about this.

Because this now makes the situation more of a community spread, she would like to say that this is not a concern for the general population, and that the Department of Health is only focused on people who this woman may have interacted with at the convention center on 2/28, and that what people should do to monitor for symptoms etc, until the contagious period has passed, etc, and be prepared to say why we are not concerned with anywhere else she was, etc, etc.

Please see below for more info.

Dr. Alonso and I will both have our cells nearby today if you need to speak with me or her. Otherwise, please get back to me by sometime tomorrow morning.

Thanks

Alex

Ms. Patterson,

Below is suggested language for notification to their attendees. Thank you for your help.

Good Afternoon – We appreciate your attendance at the recent ACTRIMS Conference in West Palm Beach, Florida.

It has come to our attention that one of our conference attendees was diagnosed with COVID-19 after returning home and may have had symptoms while they were at the conference. In light, of the seriousness of this disease and the impact it has on individuals who are elderly and individuals with compromised immune systems, we felt it imperative that we inform you as soon as possible since many of work with this population. This individual was at the Biogen Booth on February 28 and would have been infected with COVID-19 while they were at the ACTRIMS Conference.

If you are experiencing fever, cough and/or shortness of breath you should contact your healthcare provider as soon as possible. You should call them before seeking care when possible.

For more information about COVID-19 in Florida, we recommend you visit www.FlHealth.gov/COVID-19.

We apologize for this inconvenience and wanted to provide you the most up-to-date information as soon as possible.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Everyone plays a part in lowering the impact within our communities and workplaces – taking every day preventative actions helps to ~~impede~~ prevent the spread of respiratory diseases such as COVID-19. Preventative actions include:

- Washing your hands frequently with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom, before eating, and after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing. If soap and water are not available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol.
- Staying home when you are sick. This message cannot be emphasized enough.
- Employees who have symptoms of acute respiratory illness are recommended to stay home and not come to work until they are free of fever (100.4° F or greater using an oral thermometer), signs of a fever, and any other symptoms for at least 24 hours, without the use of fever-reducing or other symptom-altering medicines (e.g. cough suppressants). If Asked:

"What is the number of patients tested in my county?"

-We appreciate the desire to understand how many Floridians in each community have been tested, received a negative test or are under public health monitoring as a result of suspicion they may have COVID-19 or has been in contact with someone who have COVID-19. Balancing the privacy of the individuals being tested and monitored and the confidentiality of the epidemiological investigations with the responsibility to Floridians to disclose information to protect the public is a vital role of the Florida Department of Health. Due to the nature of a unique virus, such as COVID-19, to share how many people in each community that have been tested or are under public health monitoring could potentially release identifying information, especially in Florida's smaller communities.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

As such, in order to protect personally identifiable health information (PHI) of Floridians, the Florida Department of Health is unable to ~~break down~~ disclose the number of individuals who have received a negative test, have pending test results or are under public health monitoring by community.

Floridians can view the aggregate, state level information at www.FLHealth.gov/COVID-19. This information is updated daily.

Additionally, the Florida Department of Health is encouraging all Floridians to be aware. Floridians should practice good hand hygiene and wash their hands with soap and water for a minimum of 20 seconds, use a tissue when they sneeze or cough and immediately dispose of it in the trash and stay home if they are sick."

All,

I know everyone has their plates full right now with coronavirus response. However, to ensure that we are all working in a way that not only helps our own states, but also the region, would it be helpful for us counsel and the chiefs of staff in our offices to jump on a quick call either later today or sometime tomorrow?

Personally, I have spent more time than I care to on the phone lately, but we thought it may be helpful to quickly trade ideas and get an update with you all in the southeast region.

Thanks, and please let me know if I can help any of you here in Georgia.

MEMORANDUM

FROM: Helen Aguirre Ferré, Director of Communications, Governor Ron DeSantis

DATE: March 9, 2020

RE: Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19)

Good afternoon:

Today, Governor Ron DeSantis issued Executive Order 20-52, declaring a State of Emergency in response to Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) in Florida. Declaring a State of Emergency establishes a unified command structure and designates the Director of the Division of Emergency Management as the State Coordinating Officer and the State Surgeon General as the Deputy State Coordinating Officer and State Incident Commander.

Additionally, the Executive Order allows the Governor to direct funds as necessary for critical supplies, equipment and personnel needs. The order allows out-of-state medical professionals to practice in Florida for the duration of the order and permits pharmacists to prescribe up to a 30-day emergency refill of prescription drugs as needed.

A PDF copy of the Executive Order is attached to this email and provided below.

Sincerely,

Helen Aguirre Ferré
Director of Communications
Governor Ron DeSantis

STATE OF FLORIDA

OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
EXECUTIVE ORDER NUMBER 20-52

(Emergency Management – COVID-19 Public Health Emergency)

WHEREAS, Novel Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is a severe acute respiratory illness that can spread among humans through respiratory transmission and presents with symptoms similar to those of influenza; and

WHEREAS, in late 2019, a new and significant outbreak of COVID-19 emerged in China; and

WHEREAS, the World Health Organization previously declared COVID-19 a Public Health Emergency of International Concern; and

WHEREAS, in response to the recent COVID-19 outbreak in China, Iran, Italy, Japan and South Korea, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention ("CDC") has deemed it necessary to prohibit or restrict non-essential travel to or from those countries; and

WHEREAS, on March 1, 2020, I issued Executive Order number 20-51 directing the Florida Department of Health to issue a Public Health Emergency; and

WHEREAS, on March 1, 2020, the State Surgeon General and State Health Officer declared a Public Health Emergency exists in the State of Florida as a result of COVID-19; and

WHEREAS, on March 7, 2020, I directed the Director of the Division of Emergency Management to activate the State Emergency Operations Center to Level 2 to provide coordination and response to the COVID-19 emergency; and

WHEREAS, as of March 9, 2020, eight counties in Florida have positive cases for COVID-19, and COVID-19 poses a risk to the entire state of Florida; and

WHEREAS, the CDC currently recommends community preparedness and everyday prevention measures be taken by all individuals and families in the United States, including voluntary home isolation when individuals are sick with respiratory symptoms, covering coughs and sneezes with a tissue and disposal of the tissue immediately thereafter, washing hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, using of alcohol-based hand sanitizers with 60%-95% alcohol if soap and water are not readily available and routinely cleaning frequently touched surfaces and objects to increase community resilience and readiness for responding to an outbreak; and

WHEREAS, the CDC currently recommends mitigation measures for communities experiencing an outbreak including staying at home when sick, keeping away from others who are sick, limiting face-to-face contact with others as much as possible, consulting with your healthcare provider if individuals or members of a household are at high risk for COVID-19 complications, wearing a facemask if advised to do so by a healthcare provider or by a public health official, staying home when a household member is sick with respiratory disease symptoms if instructed to do so by public health officials or a health care provider; and

WHEREAS, as Governor, I am responsible for meeting the dangers presented to this state and its people by this emergency.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, RON DESANTIS, as Governor of Florida, by virtue of the authority vested in me by Article IV, Section (1)(a) of the Florida Constitution, Chapter 252, Florida Statutes, and all other applicable laws, promulgate the following Executive Order to take immediate effect:

Section 1. Because of the foregoing conditions, I declare a state of emergency exists in the State of Florida.

Section 2. I designate the Director of the Division of Emergency Management ("Director") as the State Coordinating Officer for the duration of this emergency and direct him to execute the State's Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan and other response, recovery, and mitigation plans necessary to cope with the emergency. Additionally, I designate the State Health Officer and Surgeon General as a Deputy State Coordinating Officer and State Incident Commander.

Pursuant to section 252.36(1)(a), Florida Statutes, I delegate to the State Coordinating Officer the authority to exercise those powers delineated in sections 252.36(5)-(10), Florida Statutes, which he shall exercise as needed to meet this emergency, subject to the limitations of section 252.33, Florida Statutes. In exercising the powers delegated by this Order, the State Coordinating Officer shall confer with the Governor to the fullest extent practicable. The State Coordinating Officer shall also have the authority to:

A. Seek direct assistance and enter into agreements with any and all agencies of the United States Government as may be needed to meet the emergency.

B. Designate additional Deputy State Coordinating Officers, as necessary.

C. Suspend the effect of any statute, rule, or order that would in any way prevent, hinder, or delay any mitigation, response, or recovery action necessary to cope with this emergency.

D. Enter orders as may be needed to implement any of the foregoing powers; however, the requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54(4), Florida Statutes, do not apply to any such orders issued by the State Coordinating Officer; however, no such order shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extension.

Section 3. I order the Adjutant General to activate the Florida National Guard, as needed, to deal with this emergency.

Section 4. I find that the special duties and responsibilities resting upon some State, regional, and local agencies and other governmental bodies in responding to the emergency may require them to suspend the application of the statutes, rules, ordinances, and orders they administer. Therefore, I issue the following authorizations:

A. Pursuant to section 252.36(1)(a), Florida Statutes, the Executive Office of the Governor may suspend all statutes and rules affecting budgeting to the extent necessary to provide budget authority for state agencies to cope with this emergency. The requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54(4), Florida Statutes, do not apply to any such suspension issued by the Executive Office of the Governor; however, no such suspension shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extension.

B. Each State agency may suspend the provisions of any regulatory statute prescribing the procedures for conduct of state business or the orders or rules of that agency, if strict compliance with the provisions of any such statute, order, or rule would in any way prevent, hinder, or delay necessary action in coping with the emergency. This includes, but is not limited to, the authority to suspend any and all statutes, rules, ordinances, or orders which affect leasing, printing, purchasing, travel, and the condition of employment and the compensation of employees. For the purposes of this Executive Order, "necessary action in coping with the emergency" means any emergency mitigation, response, or recovery action: (1) prescribed in the State Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan ("CEMP"); or (2) ordered by the State Coordinating Officer. The requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54, Florida Statutes, shall not apply to any such suspension issued by a State agency; however, no such suspension shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extensions.

C. In accordance with section 465.0275, Florida Statutes, pharmacists may dispense up to a 30-day emergency prescription refill of maintenance medication to persons who reside in an area or county covered under this Executive Order and to emergency personnel who have been activated by their state and local agency but who do not reside in an area or county covered by this Executive Order.

D. In accordance with section 252.38, Florida Statutes, each political subdivision within the State of Florida may waive the procedures and formalities otherwise required of the political subdivision by law pertaining to:

1) Performance of public work and taking whatever prudent action is necessary to ensure the health, safety, and welfare of the community;

2) Entering into contracts; however, political subdivisions are cautioned against entering into time and materials contracts without ceiling as defined by 2 CFR 200.318(j) or cost plus percentage contracts as defined by 2 CFR 200.323(d);

3. Incurring obligations;

4. Employment of permanent and temporary workers;

5. Utilization of volunteer workers;

6. Rental of equipment;

7) Acquisition and distribution, with or without compensation, of supplies,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

materials, and facilities; and,

8. Appropriation and expenditure of public funds.

E. All State agencies responsible for the use of State buildings and facilities may close such buildings and facilities in those portions of the State affected by this emergency, to the extent necessary to meet this emergency. I direct each State agency to report the closure of any State building or facility to the Secretary of the Department of Management Services. Under the authority contained in section 252.36, Florida Statutes, I direct each County to report the closure of any building or facility operated or maintained by the County or any political subdivision therein to the Secretary of the Department of Management Services. Furthermore, I direct the Secretary of the Department of Management Services to:

1) Maintain an accurate and up-to-date list of all such closures; and,

2) Provide that list daily to the State Coordinating Officer.

Section 5. I find that the demands placed upon the funds appropriated to the agencies of the State of Florida and to local agencies are unreasonably great and the funds currently available may be inadequate to pay the costs of coping with this emergency. In accordance with section 252.37(2), Florida Statutes, I direct that sufficient funds be made available, as needed, by transferring and expending moneys appropriated for other purposes, moneys from unappropriated surplus funds, or from the Budget Stabilization Fund.

Section 6. All State agencies entering emergency final orders or other final actions in response to this emergency shall advise the State Coordinating Officer contemporaneously or as soon as practicable.

Section 7. Medical professionals and workers, social workers, and counselors with good and valid professional licenses issued by states other than the State of Florida may render such services in Florida during this emergency for persons affected by this emergency with the condition that such services be rendered to such persons free of charge, and with the further condition that such services be rendered under the auspices of the American Red Cross or the Florida Department of Health.

Section 8. All activities taken by the Director of the Division of Emergency

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Management and the State Health Officer and Surgeon General with respect to this emergency before the issuance of this Executive Order are ratified. This Executive Order shall expire sixty days from this date unless extended.

Governor Ron DeSantis Directs the Division of Emergency Management to Activate to Level II to Coordinate Statewide Response to COVID-19 in Florida

Tallahassee, Fla.— Today, Governor Ron DeSantis directed the Florida Division of Emergency Management to activate to Level II to coordinate the state's response to COVID-19 and provide critical support to the Florida Department of Health and county health departments.

The Governor's directive follows last night's announcement from the Florida Department of Health (DOH) that two individuals have died and two new presumptive positive cases were confirmed in Broward County. Additionally, today DOH announced a new presumptive positive case in Lee County. The individual is isolated and being appropriately cared for. For the total case count, visit http://FloridaHealth.gov/COVID-19.

"I have directed the Division of Emergency Management to activate to Level II to ensure our state has all the necessary resources engaged as we respond to COVID-19," said Governor DeSantis. "It is critical that we proactively coordinate all state resources to mitigate the threat and contain COVID-19. I urge all Floridians to take necessary precautions and follow hygiene guidelines issued by the Surgeon General and Florida Department of Health."

On March 1, Governor DeSantis issued Executive Order 20-51, which directed Surgeon General Rivkees to declare a public health emergency to better equip Florida with the resources needed to handle the public health threat. The Governor has requested $25 million from the Florida Legislature to be appropriated in this current year for the Florida Department of Health to be used immediately to assist with the COVID-19 response.

Guidance from the Florida Department of Health

The Florida Department of Health is working closely with the patients, potential close contacts of each case and health care providers to isolate and monitor persons who may have been exposed to COVID-19 and implement testing of anyone who may develop COVID-19 symptoms, including fever, cough or shortness of breath.

COVID-19 can spread from person to person through small droplets from the nose or mouth, including when an individual coughs or sneezes. These droplets may land on objects and surfaces. Other people may contract COVID-19 by touching these objects or surfaces, then touching their eyes, nose or mouth.

Symptoms of COVID-19 are fever, cough and shortness of breath. Symptoms may appear in as few as two days or as many as 14 days following exposure. Most people recover from the COVID-19 without needing special treatment. The elderly and those with underlying medical problems like high blood pressure, heart problems and diabetes, are more likely to develop serious illness.

There is currently no vaccine to prevent COVID-19. The best way to prevent illness is to avoid being exposed to this virus. As a reminder, the Department always recommends everyday preventive actions to help impede the spread of respiratory diseases, including:

- Avoiding close contact with people who are sick;
- Staying home when you are sick and avoiding contact with persons in poor health;
- Avoiding touching your eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands;
- Covering your cough or sneeze with a tissue, then disposing of the tissue;
- Washing your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom, before eating, after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing;
- If soap and water are not readily available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol. Always wash hands with soap and water if hands are visibly dirty; and
- Cleaning and disinfecting frequently touched objects and surfaces using a regular household cleaning spray or wipe.

The CDC does not recommend that asymptomatic, healthy people wear a facemask to protect themselves from respiratory diseases, including COVID-19. Facemasks should be used by people who show symptoms of COVID-19 to help prevent the spread of the disease to others. The use of facemasks is also crucial for health workers and people who are taking care of someone in close settings (at home or in a health care facility).

A person that experiences a fever and symptoms of respiratory illness, such as fever, cough or shortness of breath, within 14 days after travel from China, Italy, Iran, South Korea, Japan and any other destination under CDC travel advisory should call ahead to their health care provider and local county health department (CHD) and mention their recent travel or close contact.

If a person has had close contact with someone showing these symptoms who has recently traveled from this area or been in contact with a person with laboratory-confirmed COVID-19, they should call ahead to a health care professional and the county health department. The health care professional will work with the Department to determine if the person should be tested for COVID-19.

Governor Ron DeSantis Directs the Division of Emergency Management to Activate to Level II to Coordinate the Statewide Response to COVID-19 in Florida

Tallahassee, Fla.— Today, Governor Ron DeSantis directed the Florida Division of Emergency Management to activate to Level II to coordinate the state's response to COVID-19 and provide critical support to the Florida Department of Health and county health departments.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Governor's directive follows last night's announcement from the Florida Department of Health (DOH) that two individuals have died and two new presumptive positive cases were confirmed in Broward County. Additionally, today DOH announced a new presumptive positive case in Lee County. The individual is isolated and being appropriately cared for. For the total case count, visit http://FloridaHealth.gov/COVID-19.

"I have directed the Division of Emergency Management to activate to Level II to ensure our state has all the necessary resources engaged as we respond to COVID-19," said Governor DeSantis. "It is critical that we proactively coordinate all state resources to mitigate the threat and contain COVID-19. I urge all Floridians to take necessary precautions and follow hygiene guidelines issued by the Surgeon General and Florida Department of Health."

On March 1, Governor DeSantis issued Executive Order 20-51, which directed Surgeon General Rivkees to declare a public health emergency to better equip Florida with the resources needed to handle the public health threat. The Governor has requested $25 million from the Florida Legislature to be appropriated in this current year for the Florida Department of Health to be used immediately to assist with the COVID-19 response.

In addition to the state's response, President Donald Trump has signed into law an $8.3 billion emergency funding bill to address COVID-19. Florida will receive at least $27.2 million to boost the state's efforts in carrying out surveillance, epidemiology, laboratory capacity, infection control, mitigation, communications and other preparedness and response activities. Additional federal assistance was granted this week when the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services awarded Florida $500,000 for immediate assistance for response and preparedness activities —this includes lab equipment, supplies and staffing.

Guidance from the Florida Department of Health

The Florida Department of Health is working closely with the patients, potential close contacts of each case and health care providers to isolate and monitor persons who may have been exposed to COVID-19 and implement testing of anyone who may develop COVID-19 symptoms, including fever, cough or shortness of breath.

COVID-19 can spread from person to person through small droplets from the nose or mouth, including when an individual coughs or sneezes. These droplets may land on objects and surfaces. Other people may contract COVID-19 by touching these objects or surfaces, then touching their eyes, nose or mouth.

Symptoms of COVID-19 are fever, cough and shortness of breath. Symptoms may appear in as few as two days or as many as 14 days following exposure. Most people recover from the COVID-19 without needing special treatment. The elderly and those with underlying medical problems like high blood pressure, heart problems and diabetes, are more likely to develop serious illness.

There is currently no vaccine to prevent COVID-19. The best way to prevent illness is to avoid being exposed to this virus. As a reminder, the Department always recommends everyday preventive actions to help impede the spread of respiratory diseases, including:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

WHEREAS, as Governor, I am responsible to meet the dangers presented to this state and its people by this emergency; and,

NOW, THEREFORE, I RON DESANTIS, as Governor of Florida, by virtue of the authority vested in me by Article IV, Section (1)(a) of the Florida Constitution, chapter 252, Florida Statutes, and all other applicable laws, promulgate the following Executive Order to take immediate effect:

Section X. Because of the foregoing conditions, I declare that a state of emergency exists in the state of Florida.

Section X. I designate the Director of the Division of Emergency Management ("Director") as the State Coordinating Officer for the duration of this emergency and direct him to execute the State's Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan and other response, recovery, and mitigation plans necessary to cope with the emergency. Pursuant to section 252.36(1)(a), Florida Statutes, I delegate to the State Coordinating Officer the authority to exercise those powers delineated in section s252.36(5)-(10), Florida Statutes, which he shall exercise as needed to meet this emergency, subject to the limitations of section 252.33, Florida Statutes. In exercising the powers delegated by this Order, the State Coordinating Officer shall confer with the Governor to the fullest extent practicable. Additionally, I designate the State Health Officer and Surgeon General as the Deputy State Coordinating Officer and State Incident Commander. The State Coordinating Officer shall also have the authority to:

A. Seek direct assistance and enter into agreements with any and all agencies of the United States Government as may be needed to meet the emergency.

B. Designate additional Deputy State Coordinating Officers, as necessary.

DRAFT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

C. Suspend the effect of any statute, rule, or order that would in any way prevent, hinder, or delay any mitigation, response, or recovery action necessary to cope with this emergency.

D. Enter orders as may be needed to implement any of the foregoing powers; however, the requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54(4), Florida Statutes, do not apply to any such orders issued by the State Coordinating Officer; however, no such order shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extension.

Section X. I find that the special duties and responsibilities resting upon some State, regional, and local agencies and other governmental bodies in responding to the emergency may require them to suspend the application of the statutes, rules, ordinances, and orders they administer. Therefore, I issue the following authorizations:

A. Pursuant to section 252.36(1)(a), Florida Statutes, the Executive Office of the Governor may suspend all statutes and rules affecting budgeting to the extent necessary to provide budget authority for state agencies to cope with this emergency. The requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54(4), Florida Statutes, do not apply to any such suspension issued by the Executive Office of the Governor; however, no such suspension shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extension.

B. Each State agency may suspend the provisions of any regulatory statute prescribing the procedures for conduct of state business or the orders or rules of that agency, if strict compliance with the provisions of any such statute, order, or rule would in any way prevent, hinder, or delay necessary action in coping with the emergency. This includes, but is not limited to, the authority to suspend any and all statutes, rules, ordinance, or orders which affect leasing, printing, purchasing, travel, and the condition of employment and the compensation of employees. For the purposes of this Executive Order, "necessary action in coping with the emergency" means any emergency mitigation, response, or recovery action: (1) prescribed in the State Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan ("CEMP"); or (2) ordered by the State Coordinating Officer. The requirements of sections 252.46 and 120.54, Florida Statutes, shall not apply to any such suspension issued by a State agency; however, no such suspension shall remain in effect beyond the expiration of this Executive Order, to include any extensions of this Order.

C. In accordance with section 456.0275, Florida Statutes, pharmacists may dispense up to a 30-day emergency prescription refill of maintenance medication to persons who reside in an area or county covered under this Executive Order and to emergency personnel who have been activated by their state and local agency but who do not reside in an area or county covered by this Executive Order.

D. In accordance with section 252.38, Florida Statutes, each political subdivision within the State of Florida may waive the procedures and formalities otherwise required of the political subdivision by law pertaining to:

1) Performance of public work and taking whatever prudent action is necessary to ensure the health, safety, and welfare of the community;

2) Entering into contracts; however, political subdivisions are cautioned against entering into time and materials contracts without ceiling as defined by 2 CFR 200.318(j) or cost plus percentage contracts as defined by 2 CFR 200.323(d);

3) Incurring obligations;

4) Employment of permanent and temporary workers;

5) Utilization of volunteer workers;

6) Rental of equipment;

DRAFT

7) Acquisition and distribution, with or without compensation, of supplies, materials, and facilities; and,

8) Appropriation and expenditure of public funds.

E. All State agencies responsible for the use of State buildings and facilities may close such buildings and facilities in those portions of the State affected by this emergency, to the extent to meet this emergency. I direct each State agency to report the closure of any State building or facility to the Secretary of the Department of Management Services. Under the authority contained in section 252.36, Florida Statutes, I direct each County to report the closure of any building or facility operated or maintained by the County or any political subdivision therein to the Secretary of the Department of Management Services. Furthermore, I direct the Secretary of the Department of Management Services to:

1) Maintain an accurate and up-to-date list of all such closures; and,

2) Provide that list daily to the State Coordinating Officer.

Section X. I find that the demands placed upon the funds appropriated to the agencies of the State of Florida and to local agencies are unreasonably great and may be inadequate to pay the costs of coping with this disaster. In accordance with section 252.37(2), Florida Statutes, I direct that sufficient funds be made available, as needed, by transferring and expending moneys appropriated for other purposes, moneys from unappropriated surplus funds, or from the Budget Stabilization Fund.

Section X. All State agencies entering emergency final orders or other final actions in response to this emergency shall advise the State Coordinating Officer contemporaneously or as soon as practicable.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Section X. Medical professionals and workers, social workers, and counselors with good and valid professional licenses issued by states other than the State of Florida may render such services in Florida during this emergency for persons affected by this emergency with the condition that such services be rendered to such persons free of charge, and with the further condition that such services be rendered under the auspices of the American Red Cross or the Florida Department of Health.

Section X. All activities taken by the State Health Officer with respect to this emergency before the issuance of this Executive Order are ratified. This Executive Order shall expire sixty days from this date unless extended.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH ANNOUNCES IMPORTANT UPDATES REGARDING COVID-19 IN FLORIDA

TWO CONFIRMED DEATHS REGARDING COVID-19

Contact:
Communications Office
NewsMedia@flhealth.gov
(850) 245-4111

Tallahassee, Fla. — The Florida Department of Health has announced updates regarding the 2019 coronavirus disease (COVID-19) in Florida. Two individuals have died and two new presumptive positive cases have been identified in Broward County.

Deceased Individuals

- A previously announced COVID-19 patient in Santa Rosa County has died, following an international trip.
- A new case of a COVID-19 patient in her seventies in Lee County has died, following an international trip.

New Presumptive Positive Cases

- A 75-year old male in Broward County has been identified as a presumptive positive. This person is isolated and will continue to remain isolated until cleared by public health officials.
- A 65-year old male in Broward County has been identified as a presumptive positive. This person is isolated and will continue to remain isolated until cleared by public health officials.

The Florida Department of Health is working closely with the patients, potential close contacts of each case and health care providers to isolate and monitor persons who may have been exposed to COVID-19 and implement testing of anyone who may develop COVID-19 symptoms, including fever, cough or shortness of breath.

COVID-19 can spread from person to person through small droplets from the nose or mouth, including when an individual coughs or sneezes. These droplets may land on objects and surfaces. Other people may contract COVID-19 by touching these objects or surfaces, then touching their eyes, nose or mouth.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Symptoms of COVID-19 are fever, cough and shortness of breath. Symptoms may appear in as few as two days or as many as 14 days following exposure. Most people recover from the COVID-19 without needing special treatment. The elderly and those with underlying medical problems like high blood pressure, heart problems and diabetes, are more likely to develop serious illness.

There is currently no vaccine to prevent COVID-19. The best way to prevent illness is to avoid being exposed to this virus. As a reminder, the Department always recommends everyday preventive actions to help impede the spread of respiratory diseases, including:

- Avoiding close contact with people who are sick;
- Staying home when you are sick and avoiding contact with persons in poor health;
- Avoiding touching your eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands;
- Covering your cough or sneeze with a tissue, then disposing of the tissue;
- Washing your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom, before eating, after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing;
    - If soap and water are not readily available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol. Always wash hands with soap and water if hands are visibly dirty; and
- Cleaning and disinfecting frequently touched objects and surfaces using a regular household cleaning spray or wipe.

The CDC does not recommend that asymptomatic, healthy people wear a facemask to protect themselves from respiratory diseases, including COVID-19. Facemasks should be used by people who show symptoms of COVID-19 to help prevent the spread of the disease to others. The use of facemasks is also crucial for health workers and people who are taking care of someone in close settings (at home or in a health care facility).

A person that experiences a fever and symptoms of respiratory illness, such as fever, cough or shortness of breath, within 14 days after travel from China, Italy, Iran, South Korea, Japan and any other destination under CDC travel advisory should call ahead to their health care provider and local county health department (CHD) and mention their recent travel or close contact.

If a person has had close contact with someone showing these symptoms who has recently traveled from this area or been in contact with a person with laboratory-confirmed COVID-19, they should call ahead to a health care professional and the county health department. The health care professional will work with the Department to determine if the person should be tested for COVID-19.

Please visit the Department's dedicated COVID-19 webpage at www.FloridaHealth.gov/COVID-19. This remains the best and most up-to-date resource for information and guidance regarding COVID-19 in Florida.

Governor Ron DeSantis Leading Coordinated Response to Threat of COVID-19 in Florida

Tallahassee, Fla. – Since the emergence of COVID-19 in Florida, Governor Ron DeSantis has remained in constant communication with State Surgeon General Dr. Scott Rivkees, public health officials at the local, state and federal levels and executive agency leaders. On March 1, Governor DeSantis issued Executive Order 20-51 which directed Surgeon General Rivkees to declare a public health emergency to better equip Florida with the resources needed to handle this public health threat.

"The State of Florida is fully committed to leveraging all resources to prepare for and respond to COVID-19. Our state agencies and personnel have been monitoring COVID-19 since January and are focused on containment and prevention," said Governor DeSantis. "Dr. Rivkees, along with his staff of public health experts are working with our federal partners at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), in addition to our partners and stakeholders across the state."

"While the threat COVID-19 poses to Florida remains low, I applaud the Governor for his rapid response to coordinate the statewide response which will be required to successfully contain the spread of the virus in Florida," said Florida State Surgeon General Dr. Scott A. Rivkees. "As of today, we are only seeing isolated cases without any cases resulting from community transmission. Those who remain most at risk are elderly individuals and those with underlying medical conditions. I urge everyone to practice good hygiene including thorough handwashing after shaking hands or touching surfaces as one of the easiest and most effective measures to prevent illness from COVID-19 and other viral infections."

In addition to the state's response, President Donald Trump signed into law today an $8.3 billion emergency funding bill to address coronavirus. Florida will receive $27.2 million to boost the state's efforts in carrying out surveillance, epidemiology, laboratory capacity, infection control, mitigation, communications and other preparedness and response activities. More federal assistance was granted this week when the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services awarded Florida $500,000 for immediate assistance for response and preparedness activities—this

Forum Club of Southwest Florida, Inc.

Speaking Order

1. Governor DeSantis

Talking Points

[Introduction]

- Thank you for inviting me to speak at the Forum Club today.

- This organization provides a great service to the community by bringing in speakers from a wide range of backgrounds: Supreme Court justices, business leaders, former governors—the list is long and distinguished.

- As Governor, I am excited to share with you the great things we are doing in Florida to that will bring about a brighter future for all Floridians.

[COVID-19]

- Before I get into some of my initiatives and policy priorities, I will briefly address the state's response to COVID-19.

- On the first of this month, I issued an Executive Order directing the Department of Health to declare a public health emergency to better equip our state with the resources needed to handle this threat.

- I also asked the state legislature and federal government for additional funds to ensure the state has the means to test for COVID-19 as quickly as possible and ability to effectively communicate with the public about how to stay healthy.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Our state Surgeon General, Dr. Scott Rivkees and his public health team have been working with our local County Health Departments and the CDC to ensure we are doing all we can to mitigate any spread of the virus.

- I've also met with Vice President Pence and he has assured me that we have the full support of the federal government.

- While we're doing everything we can to prepare, the public should know that the virus still poses a low threat to the United States.

[Economy]

- Aside from the COVID-19 distraction, Florida is a state on the ascent.

- Florida's recent job reports give us a snapshot of a strong economy:

    - Our unemployment rate recently dropped to 3.0 percent – the lowest recorded unemployment in Florida's history; and

    - The state's annual private-sector job growth rate of 2.5 percent continues to outpace the national job growth rate of 1.5 percent.

[Business Recruitment]

- Florida is attracting people and companies from around the country and world.

- And my administration is assisting companies with their move.

- In particular, we are selling Florida to major companies dealing with the inhospitable politics and high taxes. So far, I've made three economic development trips--two to New York and one to Chicago—and look forward to more in the near future.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- For me, the sales pitch for Florida is easy, and for companies, the decision to relocate is even easier:
    - Low taxes vs high taxes;
    - Low cost of living vs high cost of living;
    - Good weather vs bad weather;
    - An education system focused on the student vs an education system focused on the administrator;
    - A healthy environment vs. a polluted environment.
- And they're taking us up on it. It seems like every day I am announcing a new company is relocating to or expanding in Florida.
- Two industries in particular are worth highlighting for their recent growth.

[Commercial Space]

- The first is the commercial space industry.
- Just recently, I announced that a company called "Made In Space," which is on the cutting edge of aerospace manufacturing and innovation, decided to relocate their corporate headquarters and satellite manufacturing operations from the highly-taxed, highly-regulated state of California, to the business friendly environment of Florida.
- Made In Space's move just builds on other exciting announcements in the aerospace industry I've been able to make since taking office.
- Last year:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Firefly Aerospace Inc. announced a multi-year, $52 million launch and development project that is expected to generate over 200 jobs;

- Boeing announced that it is moving its Space and Launch Headquarters from Arlington, Va. to Titusville;

- Lockheed Martin announced the establishment of its new Fleet Ballistic Missile Program Headquarters on the Space Coast; and

- One Web Satellites opened the doors to its new 105,500 square foot production facility, which has two production lines capable of producing two satellites a day, creating 250 new high-tech jobs and 3,000 indirect jobs through the supply chain.

- And mega companies like Space X and Blue Origin continue to grow their footprints in Florida.

- To assist the industry, I am constantly looking for areas to make infrastructure and workforce investments though my Job Growth Grant Fund. So far:

    - I made significant infrastructure investments in both the Melbourne Airport and Pensacola Airport.

    - Both airports will now be able to attract and support major new developments. The Pensacola airport will be the site of one of the biggest maintenance overhaul and repair operations in the world.

- I will continue to look for ways to support commercial space; I think Florida is just beginning to scratch the surface of our potential in this very exciting industry.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

[Financial Industry and FinTech]

- The second industry I'd like to highlight is the financial services industry.

- Banks and private equity funds, hedge funds and venture capital firms are all moving to Florida in droves to escape the high taxes and political demagoguery of the northeast.

- My administration has placed a priority on supporting the financial industry because it offers high paying jobs, fuels innovation and attracts growth.

- To that end, in 2019, I announced my initiative to grow and recruit the future of financial technology in Florida by creating a FinTech regulatory sandbox.

- In the past, state regulatory structures have impeded transformative and innovative technology development.

- The "regulatory sandbox" will ease regulatory burdens for innovators in the financial services technology sector in ways that are not contemplated in our current regulations and provide them with the ability to test a product's market viability without extensive regulatory hurdles.

- To complement that initiative, I also announced my objective to create "FinTech" academies at our state colleges and technical centers through the award of grants from the Florida Job Growth Grant Fund.

- FinTech academies will offer students the ability to grow with the continuously evolving world of technology and its intersection with finance.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- I was proud to announce the first Fin Tech academy in Jacksonville just a few weeks ago.

[Legislative session: Budget, Environment, Education]

- Beyond diversifying our economy and supporting new and exciting industries, we are nearing the end of our Legislative Session, where I think we will be able to put a lot of wins on the board for Floridians.

- Three areas in particular are worth noting.

[Budget]

- First, Florida is constitutionally required to pass a balanced budget. My Bolder, Brighter, Better Future budget called on the Legislature to place $5.6 billion be in reserves and provide Floridians with $300 million in tax relief.

- I'm confident the Legislature will deliver a fiscally sound product, but I look forward to closely reviewing each line with my veto pen to make sure of it.

[Environment]

- Second, I am hoping to build on my administration's efforts to protect and preserve Florida's environment.

- In my first year as Governor, with the help of the Florida Legislature, we were able to make significant progress for the environment.

    - In my first budget as Governor I secured well over $625 million for Everglades restoration and the protection of our water resources.

    - This $625 million not only gave us an encouraging start to achieve our goal of $2.5 billion over four years, it also included the largest investment in the Everglades in a single year in Florida's history.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

  - This session, I'm asking the Legislature to make the $625 million recurring for the next three years to ensure we meet the $2.5 billion goal.

- Additionally, I appointed the state's first Chief Science Officer, Dr. Thomas Frazer, to help ensure the state adheres to science when determining how to best utilize the state's limited resources on water quality and other initiatives.

- I created the Blue Green Algae Task Force and re-established the Red Tide Task Force to help address the terrible algal blooms that plagued communities around the state in 2017 and 2018, including the Indian River Lagoon.

- We also recently reached an agreement to purchase 20,000 acres of critical wetlands in the heart of the Everglades.

  - The purchase will permanently save the land from oil drilling, which was the landowner's plan. The purchase will also be the largest wetland acquisition in a decade.

- Further, we continue to work closely with the Army Corps of Engineers to limit harmful discharges from Lake Okeechobee to the east and west.

- So far, the Corps has significantly limited discharges compared to previous years, and estuaries are largely algae-free.

- I also worked with President Trump to confirm he would include $250 million for South Florida Ecosystem Restoration in his 2021 budget – one of the biggest requests for Everglades funding by any president.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- The $250 million follows his previous request of $200 million and would fulfill the Army Corps' maximum capacity for restoration projects.

- To complement all of these efforts, we're spending the last days of session pushing for two more major pieces of legislation in addition to my ask for continued funding:

    - comprehensive water quality legislation that incorporates recommendations from the Blue-Green Algae Task force;

    - and a bill that will increase fines associated with environmental penalties by 50 percent across the board.

- I feel confident on both fronts and hope to have them on my desk soon.

[Education]

- Lastly, like last session, I am pursuing a bold education agenda.

- In 2019 for K-12, my administration secured the highest ever per pupil spending at $7,672, and by creating the Family Empowerment Scholarship and securing $147 million for the Gardiner Scholarship, we accomplished more for school choice than has been accomplished in decades.

- This year on K-12:

    - We're seeking to increase the minimum salary for public school teachers to $47,500, bringing Florida from the bottom half to number 2 in the nation;

    - We're continuing record investments in educational choice programs so parents, particularly low-income parents, can place their child in a good school;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- We're measuring results through accountability by replacing Common Core with the B.E.S.T. Standards; and

- We're placing a renewed emphasis on American Civics education.

- On the higher education front, U.S. News and World Report has-- for the third year in the row-- ranked Florida as having the best public higher education system in the country:

  - UF is ranked 7th, heading for the top 5;

  - FSU is ranked 18th, heading for the top 15; and

  - USF is ranked 44th, heading for the top 25.

- I will continue to support our universities, but I am also leaning in on career and technical education.

- A four-year degree from a brick and ivy university is not for everyone. Some students are far better off learning a trade than incurring insurmountable debt for a useless degree.

- We are pursuing additional funds for workforce development to continue on our path to making Florida the number one state in the nation for career and technical training programs by 2030.

- There is a large and growing demand for jobs in education, health services, trade, transportation and technology, and Florida's education options should be able to match it.

[Close]

- From COVID-19 to education and everything in between, my administration will continue moving aggressively to serve the people of this great state.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Thank you all for having me here at the Forum Club.
- I look forward to returning to see you all again soon.
- Thank you.

Governor Ron DeSantis Directs the Division of Emergency Management to Activate to Level II to Coordinate the Statewide Response to COVID-19 in Florida

Tallahassee, Fla.— Today, Governor Ron DeSantis directed the Florida Division of Emergency Management to activate to Level II to coordinate the state's response to COVID-19 and provide critical support to the Florida Department of Health and county health departments.

The Governor's directive follows last night's announcement from the Florida Department of Health (DOH) that two individuals have died and two new presumptive positive cases were confirmed in Broward County. Additionally, today DOH announced a new presumptive positive case in Lee County. The individual is isolated and being appropriately cared for. For the total case count, visit http://FloridaHealth.gov/COVID-19.

"I have directed the Division of Emergency Management to activate to Level II to ensure our state has all the necessary resources engaged as we respond to COVID-19," said Governor DeSantis. "It is critical that we proactively coordinate all state resources to mitigate the threat and contain COVID-19. I urge all Floridians to take necessary precautions and follow hygiene guidelines issued by the Surgeon General and Florida Department of Health."

On March 1, Governor DeSantis issued Executive Order 20-51, which directed Surgeon General Rivkees to declare a public health emergency to better equip Florida with the resources needed to handle the public health threat. The Governor has requested $25 million from the Florida Legislature to be appropriated in this current year for the Florida Department of Health to be used immediately to assist with the COVID-19 response.

In addition to the state's response, President Donald Trump has signed into law an $8.3

billion emergency funding bill to address COVID-19. Florida will receive at least $27.2 million to boost the state's efforts in carrying out surveillance, epidemiology, laboratory capacity, infection control, mitigation, communications and other preparedness and response activities. Additional federal assistance was granted this week when the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services awarded Florida $500,000 for immediate assistance for response and preparedness activities—this includes lab equipment, supplies and staffing.

Guidance from the Florida Department of Health

The Florida Department of Health is working closely with the patients, potential close contacts of each case and health care providers to isolate and monitor persons who may have been exposed to COVID-19 and implement testing of anyone who may develop COVID-19 symptoms, including fever, cough or shortness of breath.

COVID-19 can spread from person to person through small droplets from the nose or mouth, including when an individual coughs or sneezes. These droplets may land on objects and surfaces. Other people may contract COVID-19 by touching these objects or surfaces, then touching their eyes, nose or mouth.

Symptoms of COVID-19 are fever, cough and shortness of breath. Symptoms may appear in as few as two days or as many as 14 days following exposure. Most people recover from the COVID-19 without needing special treatment. The elderly and those with underlying medical problems like high blood pressure, heart problems and diabetes, are more likely to develop serious illness.

There is currently no vaccine to prevent COVID-19. The best way to prevent illness is to avoid being exposed to this virus. As a reminder, the Department always recommends everyday preventive actions to help impede the spread of respiratory diseases, including:

- Avoiding close contact with people who are sick;
- Staying home when you are sick and avoiding contact with persons in poor health;
- Avoiding touching your eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands;
- Covering your cough or sneeze with a tissue, then disposing of the tissue;
- Washing your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom, before eating, after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing;
- If soap and water are not readily available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol. Always wash hands with soap and water if hands are visibly dirty; and
- Cleaning and disinfecting frequently touched objects and surfaces using a regular household cleaning spray or wipe.

The CDC does not recommend that asymptomatic, healthy people wear a facemask to protect themselves from respiratory diseases, including COVID-19. Facemasks should be used by people who show symptoms of COVID-19 to help prevent the spread of the disease to others. The use of facemasks is also crucial for health workers and people who are taking care of someone in close settings (at home or in a health care facility).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

A person that experiences a fever and symptoms of respiratory illness, such as fever, cough or shortness of breath, within 14 days after travel from China, Italy, Iran, South Korea, Japan and any other destination under CDC travel advisory should call ahead to their health care provider and local county health department (CHD) and mention their recent travel or close contact.

If a person has had close contact with someone showing these symptoms who has recently traveled from this area or been in contact with a person with laboratory-confirmed COVID-19, they should call ahead to a health care professional and the county health department. The health care professional will work with the Department to determine if the person should be tested for COVID-19.

Please visit the Department's dedicated COVID-19 webpage at www.FloridaHealth.gov/COVID-19. This remains the best and most up-to-date resource for information and guidance regarding COVID-19 in Florida.

For any other questions related to COVID-19 in Florida, please contact the Department's dedicated COVID-19 Call Center by calling 1-866-779-6121 or emailing COVID-19@flhealth.gov. The Call Center is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

In addition, please visit http://www.floridahealth.gov/all-county-locations.html to locate and obtain contact information for your local CHD.

The CDC also has a website with information related to COVID-19: https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/index.html.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH ANNOUNCES IMPORTANT UPDATES REGARDING COVID-19 IN FLORIDA -TWO CONFIRMED DEATHS REGARDING COVID-19

TALLAHASSEE— The Florida Department of Health has announced updates regarding the 2019 coronavirus disease (COVID-19) in Florida. Two individuals have died and two new presumptive positive cases have been identified in Broward County.

Deceased Individuals

- A previously announced COVID-19 patient in Santa Rosa County has died, following an international trip.

- A new individual in their seventies that tested presumptive positive for COVID-19 in Lee County has died, following an international trip.

New Presumptive Positive Cases

- A 75-year old male in Broward County has been identified as a presumptive positive. This person is isolated and will continue to remain isolated until cleared by public health officials.
- A 65-year old male in Broward County has been identified as a presumptive positive. This person is isolated and will continue to remain isolated until cleared by public health officials.

The Florida Department of Health is working closely with the patients, potential close contacts of each case and health care providers to isolate and monitor persons who may have been exposed to COVID-19 and implement testing of anyone who may develop COVID-19 symptoms, including fever, cough or shortness of breath.

COVID-19 can spread from person to person through small droplets from the nose or mouth, including when an individual coughs or sneezes. These droplets may land on objects and surfaces. Other people may contract COVID-19 by touching these objects or surfaces, then touching their eyes, nose or mouth.

Symptoms of COVID-19 are fever, cough and shortness of breath. Symptoms may appear in as few as two days or as many as 14 days following exposure. Most people recover from the COVID-19 without needing special treatment. The elderly and those with underlying medical problems like high blood pressure, heart problems and diabetes, are more likely to develop serious illness.

There is currently no vaccine to prevent COVID-19. The best way to prevent illness is to avoid being exposed to this virus. As a reminder, the Department always recommends everyday preventive actions to help impede the spread of respiratory diseases, including:

- Avoiding close contact with people who are sick;
- Staying home when you are sick and avoiding contact with persons in poor health;
- Avoiding touching your eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands;
- Covering your cough or sneeze with a tissue, then disposing of the tissue;
- Washing your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom, before eating, after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing;

- If soap and water are not readily available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol. Always wash hands with soap and water if hands are visibly dirty; and

- Cleaning and disinfecting frequently touched objects and surfaces using a regular household cleaning spray or wipe.

The CDC does not recommend that asymptomatic, healthy people wear a facemask to protect themselves from respiratory diseases, including COVID-19. Facemasks should be used by people who show symptoms of COVID-19 to help prevent the spread of the disease to others. The use of facemasks is also crucial for health workers and people who are taking care of someone in close settings (at home or in a health care facility).

A person that experiences a fever and symptoms of respiratory illness, such as fever, cough or shortness of breath, within 14 days after travel from China, Italy, Iran, South Korea, Japan and any other destination under CDC travel advisory should call ahead to their health care provider and local county health department (CHD) and mention their recent travel or close contact.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

If a person has had close contact with someone showing these symptoms who has recently traveled from this area or been in contact with a person with laboratory-confirmed COVID-19, they should call ahead to a health care professional and the county health department. The health care professional will work with the Department to determine if the person should be tested for COVID-19.

Please visit the Department's dedicated COVID-19 webpage at www.FloridaHealth.gov/COVID-19. This remains the best and most up-to-date resource for information and guidance regarding COVID-19 in Florida.

For any other questions related to COVID-19 in Florida, please contact the Department's dedicated COVID-19 Call Center by calling 1-866-779-6121 or emailing COVID-19@flhealth.gov. The Call Center is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

In addition, please visit http://www.floridahealth.gov/all-county-locations.html to locate and obtain contact information for your local CHD.

The CDC also has a website with information related to COVID-19: https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/index.html.

Subject:	definition of mass gathering
Date:	Thursday, March 12, 2020 10:15:03 AM

Mass gatherings are typically defined as large numbers of people (1,000 to >25,000) at a specific location, for a specific purpose. More practically speaking, a mass gathering can be thought of as any assembly of people large enough to strain local resources. Travelers to mass gatherings face unique risks because these events are associated with environmental hazards, increased infectious disease transmission due to the influx of attendees, crowding, poor hygiene from temporary food and sanitation facilities, and challenging security situations.

Mass gatherings can be described effectively in terms of their location, venue, purpose, size, participants, duration, timing, activities, and capacity.

- Location: Factors to consider include the host country, available infrastructure, the local environment, and the adequacy of security arrangements.
- Venue: Facilities vary widely, and events may be held indoors or outdoors. Food, water, and sanitation, may be of varying quality.
- Purpose: Mass gatherings can be political, religious, social, or athletic; the purpose of an event can affect the activities and mood of participants.
- Size: The density of crowds at a mass gathering, rather than just the specific number of attendees, can further increase health risks. More densely packed crowds can facilitate disease spread or induce riots or crowd crush disasters.
- Participants: Attendees may represent a unique demographic, such as a religious or political group, or may vary by features such as sex or age (for example, older adults attempting to complete a religious pilgrimage toward the end of their life).
- Duration: The longer an event lasts, the more likely it is that local resources will be depleted and become strained.
- Timing: Mass gatherings and local capacity are affected by the timing of an event. Weather, heavy tourism, and other factors can affect the ability of a host to organize a safe mass gathering.
- Activities: Understand the activities involved at the mass gathering. Some may be risky or strenuous (e.g., walking a long way in extreme temperatures) or may involve alcohol or drug use.
- Capacity: Hosts differ in terms of their ability to detect, respond to, and prevent public health emergencies. Understanding what health outcomes have been previously associated with recurring mass gatherings can help travelers prepare for future events.

COVID-19: Frequently Asked Questions
HR Practitioners (SPS Agencies Only)

*Updated 03-13-2020. Based on the evolving nature of this situation, this information is the most current and updated, and is subject to change.

Travel Restriction Related Questions

1. May an agency prohibit an employee who has traveled internationally, on a cruise, or to an area of the United States experiencing community spread of COVID-19 as identified by the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) from returning to the workplace for 14 days upon returning home?

   Yes, pursuant to Department of Management Services' March 12, 2020 directive.

2. What resources can agencies use to determine the areas of the United States experiencing community spread of COVID-19 as identified by the CDC or a state public health agency?

   - Florida Department of Health's COVID-19 Resources
   - Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's COVID-19 Resources
   - Department of Health's COVID-19 Call Center 1-(866) 779-6121 or COVID-19@flhealth.gov. The Call Center is available Monday through Friday, 8:00 am to 7:00 pm.
   - More information to assist in identifying these areas will be provided as it is made available.

3. What type of leave may an employee use when prohibited to return to work due to personal related travel?

   Employees will need to utilize their available sick, annual, or other personal leave during this 14-day period. Employees who can work remotely may do so in consultation with their supervisor. Employees without available leave or access to a sick leave pool and who are unable to work remotely may be subject to leave without pay.

4. If a spouse or anyone living with a state employee returns from international travel, a cruise, or an area of the United States experiencing community spread, is the state employee allowed to return to work?

   In an effort to contain the spread of COVID-19, employees should not return to work if a family member or anyone living in their home has returned from international travel, a cruise, or an area of the United States experiencing community spread. Under this scenario, the employee should use annual leave, compensatory leave, personal holiday, or leave without pay during the 14-day period which they are away from work. For information on areas experiencing community spread, consult the CDC's website or websites of state public health agencies.

5. If a state employee travels internationally, on a cruise, or to an area of the United States experiencing community spread of COVID-19, do the normal documentation requirements for a medical certification apply before an employee may use his/her personal sick leave hours during the 14-day period he or she is not allowed to return to work?

   No. Employees do not have to provide a medical certification as documentation to use their personal sick leave.

6. If a state employee travels internationally, on a cruise, or to an area of the United States experiencing community spread of COVID-19 as identified by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, do the normal documentation requirements (including medical certification) apply before an employee may receive sick leave pool or sick leave transfer hours during the 14-day period he or she is not allowed to return to work?

   Yes. Employees must follow the normal process of applying for sick leave pool or sick leave transfer hours including requirements for a medical certification.

7. May agencies require a medical release certification prior to allowing employees who have been absent from the workplace due to an illness from returning to work?

   While return to work authorizations may be required at an agency's discretion, agencies should look at the operational needs of the agency and the nature of the work being performed by employees when determining whether such authorizations are necessary. Requiring fitness for duty certifications for all types of illnesses can place an unnecessary burden on health care practitioners and employees may be unable to obtain such certifications during emergency conditions.

8. Is the travel policy issued on March 12, 2020 retroactive to employees who have traveled in the past 14 days?

   Yes. If an employee has traveled to any of destinations described, the employee should be sent home and must not return until 14 days have elapsed following the date of return from their travel.

9. All non-essential in-state and out-of-state business travel is prohibited for the next 30 days. What is considered essential travel?

   Essential travel is determined by each agency and its unique operations. Ultimately, each agency head determines what is considered essential travel for their agency.

10. If a state employee is traveling for business and should avoid, when possible, attending large gatherings, how is a large gathering defined?

    The Division of Emergency Management is defining a large gathering as 1,000 or more people. As a result, 1,000 people is the threshold the SPS will use for gatherings that occur during essential business travel.

General Leave Related Questions

1. What resources are available for more information about COVID-19?

   - Executive Order Number 20-51
   - Florida Department of Health's COVID-19 Resources
   - Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's COVID-19 Resources
   - Human Resources Pandemic Emergency Response Program Manual
   - Department of Health's COVID-19 Call Center 1-(866) 779-6121 or COVID-19@flhealth.gov. The Call Center is available Monday through Friday, 8:00am to 7:00pm.

2. If an employee is ordered by the Florida Department of Health (FDOH) or the U.S. Center for Disease Control (CDC) to mandatory isolation related to COVID-19, what leave should be used by an employee during this period?

   Since the employee would be under a mandatory isolation as ordered by either the FDOH or the CDC, the employee would be eligible to use his/her accrued sick leave, annual leave, personal leave, or leave without pay for work time missed while on an ordered isolation period, regardless of whether the employee has tested positive for COVID-19.

3. Are OPS employees eligible for paid hours off during an isolation period?

   No. The use of accrued leave is only available to employees filling salaried positions within the SPS. OPS employees are specifically excluded pursuant to Rule 60L-33.005, Florida Administrative Code (F.A.C.), Other Personal Services Employment. ~~However, employees may work~~

4. Are supervisors authorized to send sick employees home?

   As always, if the health of fellow employees is endangered by an employee exhibiting observable symptoms of an infectious disease, supervisors have the authority and obligation to require the employee to leave the workplace. Where practicable, supervisors should first seek the approval of their manager, division director, or human resources before sending a sick employee home. Symptoms of the COVID-19 virus include fever, cough, or shortness of breath.

5. Are leave requests under the Family and Medical Leave Act and the State's Family Supportive Work Program permitted for a qualifying personal illness or to care for sick family members during the response to COVID-19?

   Yes. Employer obligations under the federal FMLA and state FSWP continue. Agencies should support employees seeking medical assistance for themselves and their families including the approval of FMLA and FSWP for eligible employees, when appropriate.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

6. If a school or day care center closes in response to COVID-19 and employees request leave to be off with their children, may employees use sick leave to stay home with their children?

Sick leave is not authorized when the need for leave is solely related to childcare of a healthy child when schools or daycares have closed. Employees may only use sick leave to care for children who are sick. Agencies should follow normal policies and procedures including Rule 60L-34.0042, F.A.C., when determining if sick leave is appropriate. Agencies are encouraged to be flex ble, to the extent possible, when reviewing leave requests to care for children who are unable to attend school or day care centers that close in response to COVID-19. If everyone in the family is well, employees should use annual leave or compensatory leave.

Note: If schools and day care centers are closed in response to COVID-19, employees will not be allowed to bring their children to work.

7. Is management permitted to rescind approved annual and compensatory leave?

Yes, if an employee's absence would disrupt the State's business operations (e.g., significant staffing shortages). Before rescinding approved leave, management should seek staff to volunteer for work. Rescinding leave that is already in progress should be reasonably based on an employee's ability to return to work.

8. If an individual is under isolation and/or experiencing symptoms consistent with COVID-19, may agencies permit and/or encourage employees to telework as an option in order to minimize interactions between employees at the work facility (social distancing)?

If the nature of an employee's work responsibilities can be accomplished away from the assigned work facility and if any necessary technological/equipment needs can be satisfied, the agency may permit and encourage employees to telework as a way to reduce the face-to-face contacts between employees at the regular work location. Agencies should review their telework policies to ensure they are current and up-to-date and consider whether any component of their policies should be modified to allow broader use of telework as appropriate.

9. How should agencies manage their contingent workforce such as contractors, volunteers, and OPS employees?

Agencies should plan for the possibility that their contingent workforce may be impacted by COVID-19 and should plan accordingly. While the State Personnel System does not provide paid leave to individuals in these work arrangements, as with its own employees, agencies should also be flexible to the needs of the contingent workforce and plan for the possibility that the contingent workforce may be limited. Additionally, agencies may consider using contingent workers as a way to continue normal operations if a significant portion of the regular workforce is impacted by COVID-19.

10. What leave is available for an SPS employee if their office is closed?

If a building occupied by SPS employees is closed, non-essential Career Service, SES and SMS employees ~~that~~ who are released from duty will receive administrative leave. Essential employees should consult with their supervisors for further direction on how to report in accordance with their agency's continuity of operations plan. Employees below the bureau chief level ~~that~~ who are directed to work during office closures will earn special compensatory leave.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH ANNOUNCES IMPORTANT UPDATES REGARDING COVID-19 IN FLORIDA

Contact:
Communications Office
NewsMedia@flhealth.gov
(850) 245-4111

Tallahassee, Fla. — The Florida Department of Health has announced updates regarding the 2019 coronavirus disease (COVID-19) in Florida. Two individuals have died and two new presumptive positive cases have been identified in Broward County.

Deceased Individuals

- A previously announced COVID-19 patient in Santa Rosa County has died.
- A new case of a COVID-19 patient in her seventies in Lee County has died.

New Presumptive Positive Cases

- A 75-year old male in Broward County has been identified as a presumptive positive. This person is isolated and will continue to remain isolated until cleared by public health officials.
- A 65-year old male in Broward County has been identified as a presumptive positive. This person is isolated and will continue to remain isolated until cleared by public health officials.

The Florida Department of Health is working closely with the patients, potential close contacts of each case and health care providers to isolate and monitor persons who may have been exposed to COVID-19 and implement testing of anyone who may develop COVID-19 symptoms, including fever, cough or shortness of breath.

COVID-19 can spread from person to person through small droplets from the nose or mouth, including when an individual coughs or sneezes. These droplets may land on objects and surfaces. Other people may contract COVID-19 by touching these objects or surfaces, then touching their eyes, nose or mouth.

Symptoms of COVID-19 are fever, cough and shortness of breath. Symptoms may appear in as few as two days or as many as 14 days following exposure. Most people recover from the COVID-19 without needing special treatment. The elderly and those with underlying medical problems like high blood pressure, heart problems and diabetes, are more likely to develop serious illness.

There is currently no vaccine to prevent COVID-19. The best way to prevent illness is to avoid being exposed to this virus. As a reminder, the Department always recommends everyday preventive actions to help impede the spread of respiratory diseases, including:

- Avoiding close contact with people who are sick;
- Staying home when you are sick and avoiding contact with persons in poor health;
- Avoiding touching your eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands;
- Covering your cough or sneeze with a tissue, then disposing of the tissue;
- Washing your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom, before eating, after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing;
    - If soap and water are not readily available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol. Always wash hands with soap and water if hands are visibly dirty; and
- Cleaning and disinfecting frequently touched objects and surfaces using a regular household cleaning spray or wipe.

The CDC does not recommend that asymptomatic, healthy people wear a facemask to protect themselves from respiratory diseases, including COVID-19. Facemasks should be used by people who show symptoms of COVID-19 to help prevent the spread of the disease to others. The use of facemasks is also crucial for health workers and people who are taking care of someone in close settings (at home or in a health care facility).

A person that experiences a fever and symptoms of respiratory illness, such as fever, cough or shortness of breath, within 14 days after travel from China, Italy, Iran, South Korea, Japan and any other destination under CDC travel advisory should call ahead to their health care provider and local county health department (CHD) and mention their recent travel or close contact.

If a person has had close contact with someone showing these symptoms who has recently traveled from this area or been in contact with a person with laboratory-confirmed COVID-19, they should call ahead to a health care professional and the county health department. The health care professional will work with the Department to determine if the person should be tested for COVID-19.

Please visit the Department's dedicated COVID-19 webpage at www.FloridaHealth.gov/COVID-19. This remains the best and most up-to-date resource for information and guidance regarding COVID-19 in Florida.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE EIGHTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT, IN AND FOR BREVARD COUNTY, FLORIDA

Plaintiffs,

vs.

Defendants.

CASE NO. 05-2019-CA-050861

AMENDED AND RESTATED COMPLAINT AND DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL[1]

Plaintiffs, ROBIN L. FISHER ("Fisher"); HERMAN A. COLE ("Cole"); and ROBERT L. JORDAN, JR. ("Jordan") (collectively, "Plaintiffs"), sue Defendants, HEALTH FIRST, INC. ("Health First"); THREE 21 CREATIVE, LLC ("321"); MATTHEW GERRELL ("Gerrell"); and JOSEPH BOUTIN ("Boutin"), and allege:

INTRODUCTION

1. Plaintiffs, Robin Fisher, Herman Cole, and Robert Jordan, three of the most prominent and highly-respected African-American business and civic leaders in Brevard County, file this action to bring to justice the individuals and entities responsible for publishing heinous defamatory statements about the Plaintiffs. The Defendants, while hiding behind a fake online identity, conspired and falsely accused the Plaintiffs and North Brevard County Hospital District d/b/a Parrish Medical Center ("Parrish Hospital") of a number of frauds, crimes, and improprieties,

[1] Plaintiffs originally filed this action against various "John Doe" Defendants and thereafter issued and served subpoenas on the herein named Defendants, requesting documents, which, if nonexistent, could have exculpated the Defendants from the underlying allegations. However, in response to the subpoenas, each Defendant objected to the production of the requested documents, providing further support for the allegations set forth herein as to the liability of these Defendants.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

intending to inflict injury to the Plaintiffs' personal and business reputations. Although the Defendants may have intended Parrish Hospital as their primary target in the relentless healthcare war Health First rages against it, the Defendants' actions evidence a ready willingness to inflict "civilian casualties" on the Plaintiffs who merely served Parrish Hospital. Defendants, Health First and its cohorts, intentionally targeted the Plaintiffs because their prominence through the minority community, and far beyond, through the entire Space Coast region, reflected positively on Parrish Hospital.

JURISDICTION, PARTIES, AND VENUE

2. This is an action that includes claims for damages that exceed $30,000.00, exclusive of interest, costs, and attorneys' fees.

3. At all material times, Plaintiff Fisher has been a Florida resident. Fisher is a record-holding former University of Florida lineman who grew up in Brevard County and raised his own family there. Fisher has been dedicating himself to public service in Brevard County since 1987, when he became one of the first African-Americans to hold public office in Palm Bay. Fisher spent the next decades growing and running a successful insurance agency in Titusville and volunteering his time to numerous public causes. Fisher served as a Brevard County Commissioner until 2016. Plaintiffs Cole and Fisher jointly own Colefish Investments, Inc., which was also targeted by the Defendants. A complete biography of Mr. Fisher is attached hereto as Exhibit "A."

4. At all material times, Plaintiff Cole has been a Florida resident. Cole, a retired United States Air Force Colonel, has been serving on Parrish Hospital's Board of Directors since 2000 and currently serves as its Chairman. A complete biography of Mr. Cole is attached hereto as Exhibit "B."

5. At all material times, Plaintiff Jordan has been a Florida resident, since 1979, where he has raised his family. Jordan has been serving on Parrish Hospital's Board of Directors since

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

1998, and currently serves as its Vice Chairman. Jordan served as the Brevard County Schools Chairman or Vice-Chairman for eight years, and currently serves as a Titusville City Council Member and President, Chairman of Viera Charter Schools and CEO of his own logistics company, Genesis VII, Inc., which was also targeted by the Defendants. A complete biography of Mr. Jordan is attached hereto as Exhibit "C."

6. At all material times, Defendant Health First has been a Florida corporation with its principal place of business in Brevard County, Florida. For decades, Health First and Parrish have been embroiled in conflict which a federal Judge recently aptly described as a "long running, heavily litigated, 'scorched earth' turf war for Brevard County's healthcare business" (M.D. Fla. Case No. 6:18-cv-487-Orl-37DCI).

7. At all material times, Defendant 321 has been a Florida limited liability company with its principal place of business located in Orange County, Florida. 321 is an Orlando-based marketing agency which boasts Health First as one of its main clients.

8. At all material times, Defendant Matthew Gerrell has been a resident of Florida, and the Senior Vice President Strategy for Health First. Moreover, Gerrell was recently promoted to become the Chief Executive Officer for Health First Health Plans.

9. At all material times, Defendant Joseph Boutin has been the Chief Executive Officer for Defendant 321.

10. Under Section 47.011, Florida Statutes, venue is proper in Brevard County, Florida because the causes of action accrued in Brevard County.

11. Collectively, the Defendants acted in concert as partners, joint venturers, agents, alter egos, co-tortfeasors, aiders and abettors, or conspirators with one another to make and publish the false and defamatory statements concerning Plaintiffs.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

GENERAL ALLEGATIONS COMMON TO ALL COUNTS

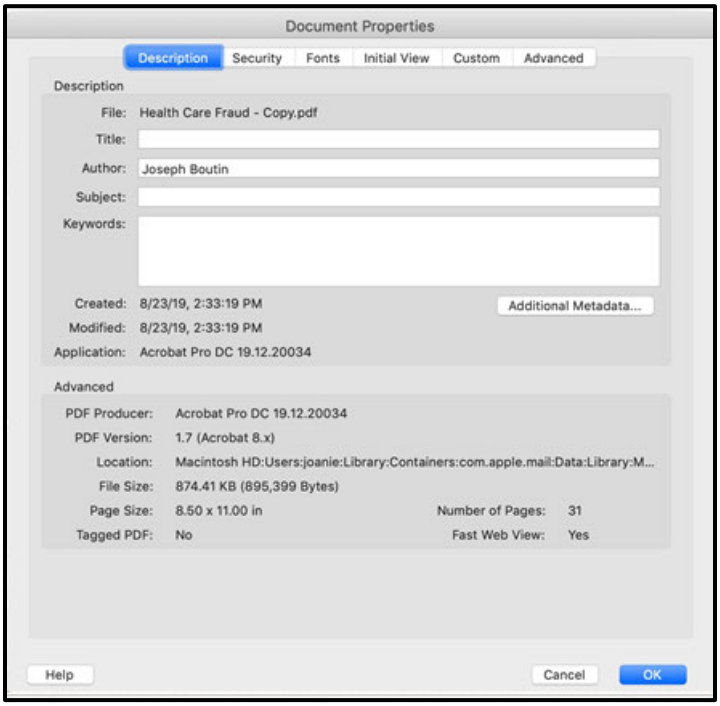
12. On or about August 19, 2019, the Defendants, adopting the fake identity of Dr. Craig Deligdish, an actual oncologist affiliated with Parrish Hospital, and posing as champions of "healthcare fraud," launched a campaign targeting the Plaintiffs and Parrish Hospital with outrageous allegations of fraud and abuse.

13. The Defendants sent a letter to the Florida Department of State (the "Defamatory Letter"), accusing the Plaintiffs of a number of frauds, crimes, and improprieties, and including such scurrilous allegations as:

> Through positions of influence, it is possible that Mr. Cole, Mr. Jordan, Mr. Fisher, and Mr. Mikitarian knowingly and willingly orchestrated a scheme to potentially use taxpayer resources for their personal benefit.

> Another allegation that we received is that Mr. Robert Jordan's construction company has been awarded numerous jobs throughout Parrish Medical Center without following the due process and diligence of Contractor Proposals. It is also believed that the jobs awarded to Mr. Robert Jordan and Genesis VII exceed the normal costs of construction in Brevard County. A specific rumor is that Genesis VII was awarded a job to replace a single water fountain with costs exceeding $7,000. The payments and documentation to Genesis VII cannot be obtained through standard public records requests.

> With the information available, one can assume the decisions made by these four men did use taxpayer resources to personally benefit.



14. Although attempting to insulate themselves from the viciousness of the aspersions in the Defamatory Letter with qualifiers such as, "it is possible that," "it is believed that," "one can assume," and "a rumor is that," the intent and meaning behind the Defendants' words was unmistakable—to injure the Plaintiffs' longstanding business and personal reputations.

15. The Defendants extended their swath of defamation by widely circulating the Defamatory Letter to numerous "person[s] of influence in Brevard County," as well as major media outlets, again posing as Dr. Deligdish through a fake email address LOTIGNOV7@GMAIL.COM they had created through Google. Dr. Deligdish immediately confirmed he had no involvement in the preparation or distribution of the Defamatory Letter.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

16. An analysis of the email address, a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit "D," revealed LOTIGNOV7@GMAIL.COM to be an IP address registered to Google, LLC.

17. An analysis of the properties of the Defamatory Letter provided the first piece of information when it identified an individual named "Joseph Boutin" as the "Author" of the Defamatory Letter. A true and correct copy of the Document Properties dialogue box is shown below:

18. The metadata of the Defamatory Letter again identifies a "Joseph Boutin" as its author. It also lists a "Gerrell, Matthew" as an author. Plaintiffs know of no "Matthew Gerrell," other than a person by that name who is the Chief Strategy Officer and a Senior Vice President of Health First. A true and correct excerpt from the metadata is shown below:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

19. Further investigation provided additional evidence of the source of the Defamatory Letter. Dr. Deligdish, whose name had been invoked to defame the Plaintiffs and Parrish Hospital, located an individual named Joseph Boutin who served as the Chief Executive Officer for a company called Three21 Creative, LLC ("321") in Orlando, Florida. 321 is a marketing agency which boasts Health First—a competing hospital and legal arch nemesis to Parrish Hospital—as one of its main clients.

20. Dr. Deligdish likewise confronted executives at Health First about any possible involvement with the Defamatory Letter and blast emails, and again was met with silence. As of the filing of the initial Complaint, the fake email account had been deactivated. Since then, no further defamatory messages have been sent.

21. The day before the Defamatory Letter and blast emails were sent, Parrish Hospital had prevailed in a high-profile lawsuit involving its arch nemesis, Health First, in the latest installment of what the United States District Court Judge described as a "long running, heavily litigated, 'scorched earth' turf war for Brevard County's healthcare business" (M.D. Fla. Case No. 6:18-cv-487-Orl-37DCI).

22. Faced with losing the upper hand in the court battles, Health First—whose unspoken, but obvious, objective had long been to take over Parrish Hospital—and its fixer, 321, resorted to a more deviant tactic by taking their crusade from the courtroom to cyberspace and launched an insidious attack, targeting community leaders associated with Parrish Hospital, and the hospital itself, through an email blast throughout the community.

23. At the time the Defendants published the Defamatory Letter to the state of Florida, Brevard County community leaders, and major media outlets, the Defendants knew the statements and defamatory implications of the Defamatory Letter were false.

24. The Defendants acted with a reckless disregard for the truth by publishing the Defamatory Letter and published the Defamatory Letter with actual malice.

25. Spreading false statements using a fake identity—quite literally telling a lie within a lie—the Defendants intended to injure the Plaintiffs.

26. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' actions, Plaintiffs have suffered, and will continue to suffer, damages, including, but not limited to, monetary damages, and injury to their reputations.

27. The false and defamatory statements in the Defamatory Letter are not privileged, and Plaintiffs did not consent to the publication or dissemination of the statements.

28. All general and statutory conditions precedent to bringing this action have been performed, have occurred, have been waived, or have otherwise been excused by the Defendants' actions.

COUNT I
ACTION FOR DEFAMATION
(As to all Defendants)

29. Plaintiffs sue the Defendants for damages that exceed $30,000.00 for defamation.

31. The Defendants made and published the false and defamatory statements concerning Plaintiffs via email to persons of influence in Brevard County and the media knowing the statements were false, with reckless disregard for the truth, and with actual malice and the intent to injure Plaintiffs' reputations.

32. Because the statements published by the Defendants have subjected, and will continue to subject the Plaintiffs to distrust in the community, casting them in a false and disparaged light, and will continue to injure the Plaintiffs in the conduct of their business, trade, profession, or office, the statements constitute defamation per se.

33. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' actions, Plaintiffs have suffered actual, direct, and consequential damages.

COUNT II
ACTION FOR TEMPORARY AND PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF
(As to all Defendants)

34. Plaintiffs sue the Defendants in equity for temporary and permanent injunctive relief.

35. Plaintiffs reallege, incorporate, and assert by reference the allegations set forth above in paragraphs 1 through 28.

36. The Defendants' campaign to publish the false and defamatory statements concerning Plaintiffs via email to persons of influence in Brevard County and the media, has caused, and will continue to cause, irreparable harm, for which Plaintiffs have no adequate legal remedy.

37. The public has an interest in protecting community leaders from malicious defamation of their character to achieve improper motives of hate or financial gain.

38. The Plaintiffs have a substantial likelihood of succeeding on the merits of this case.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
FL-GOV-20-0899-A-002928

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs demand temporary and permanent injunctive relief enjoining the Defendants from publishing defamatory statements concerning the Plaintiffs.

COUNT III
ACTION FOR VIOLATION OF THE LANHAM ACT (15 U.S.C. § 1051, et seq.)
(As to all Defendants)

39. Plaintiffs sue the Defendants for damages that exceed $30,000.00 for violation of Section 43(a) the Lanham Act (15 U.S.C. § 1125).

40. Plaintiffs reallege, incorporate, and assert by reference the allegations set forth above in paragraphs 1 through 28.

41. The Defendants, intentionally and in bad faith, made and published, in connection with their commercial activities, the false and defamatory statements concerning Plaintiffs via email to persons of influence in Brevard County and the media knowing the statements were false, with reckless disregard for the truth, and with actual malice and the intent to injure Plaintiffs' reputation, and, as a result, damage Health First's competitor, Parrish Hospital, and steer Brevard County's healthcare business to Health First.

42. The Defendants' defamatory statements, which were intended to diminish the competitive stature of Parrish Hospital in order to benefit Health First, constituted commercial advertising or promotion and misrepresented the nature of Plaintiffs' and Parrish Hospital's commercial activities.

43. The Defendants' defamatory statements have likely deceived Brevard County consumers and influenced their health care decision-making in favor of Health First. Moreover, Plaintiffs' reputations in the community have been disparaged, causing injury to Plaintiffs personally and in their businesses.

44. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' actions, Plaintiffs have suffered direct and consequential damages.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
FL-GOV-20-0899-A-002929

45. Plaintiffs are entitled to recover attorneys' fees under 15. U.S. Code § 1117(a) and have retained the law firm of Byrd Campbell, P.A., agreeing to pay a reasonable fee for its services.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs demand judgment against the Defendants for compensatory damages, attorneys' fees, prejudgment interest, and costs.

DECEPTIVE AND UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES ACT
(As to all Defendants)

46. Plaintiffs sue the Defendants for damages that exceed $30,000.00 for violation of Florida's Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act (Chapter 501, Florida Statutes).

47. Plaintiffs reallege, incorporate, and assert by reference the allegations set forth above in paragraphs 1 through 28.

48. The Defendants' publication of false and defamatory statements concerning Plaintiffs via email to persons of influence in Brevard County and the media knowing the statements were false, with reckless disregard for the truth, and with actual malice and the intent to injure Plaintiffs' reputation and, as a result, damage Health First's competitor, Parrish Hospital, constitute unfair methods of competition, unconscionable acts or practices, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of trade or commerce.

49. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' conduct, Plaintiffs have suffered and will continue to suffer actual damages and irreparable injury.

50. Plaintiffs have retained the law firm of Byrd Campbell, P.A., agreeing to pay a reasonable fee for its services, and Plaintiffs are entitled to recover attorneys' fees under Chapter 501, Florida Statutes.

Citizen of the Year Finalist, Volunteer Recognition Awards, FLORIDA TODAY

The creation of the North Brevard Economic Development Zone was proposed by Robin Fisher and required approval of the Brevard County Commission and Titusville City Council. Spanning from SR 520 north to the Volusia County line, this is the largest tax increment funding district in the State of Florida and possibly in the Nation. The "Zone" is providing millions of dollars in funding to help incentivize and recruit high-wage jobs and redevelopment in North Brevard.

Fisher formerly served as the Board Chair for the Brevard County Field of Dreams, a multi-sport park for individuals with special needs. Fisher has been instrumental in raising more than $3 million and celebrated the completion of the park with a grand opening game in January 2016.

Professionally, as an insurance agent with State Farm Insurance Company, his accomplishments have been numerous. Among them are awards for production and service. He has been awarded with the Legion of Honor Qualifier, the Crystal Excellence Award and is a distinguished member of the National Convention Qualifier President's Club.

In 1982 he graduated with a Bachelor's degree in Public Relations. Later, he was drafted by the Miami Dolphins and went on to play professional football in the USFL with the Chicago Blitz as well as the Arizona Wranglers.

Robin has been a resident of Titusville since 1989. He and his wife, Rhoda, have been married for 31 years and have two adult children, Cara and Cory.
