I interpret the email below as requiring us to telework; is that correct? The “due to preference” part, specifically. My question is, can we get JD the laptop that barb was using so I can require him to telework? He says he comes in because his laptop is old and unmanageable and he cannot complete his work.

Subject: *Updated--AGO Worksite Reporting Plan

We are changing our worksite reporting status to Phase 0, as of today. Although we have already greatly reduced our numbers, we need to further reduce the number of employees reporting to the AGO worksites. This includes directing employees to telework, who were reporting to the worksite due to preference. You should consider placing support staff, who may not otherwise be able to telework, on administrative leave. Let me know if you have any questions.

This plan may be shared with your Division leadership. We will remain in Phase 0, until further notice.
