OMB Letter excerpts: https://www.whitehouse.gov/wp-content/uploads/2019/06/DHS-Lowey.pdf

The Administration is especially concerned with the level of operational directives and attempts to limit ICE's ability to execute its statutory duties. For example, limiting the number of detention beds between interior enforcement and border apprehensions restricts ICE's ability to remove dangerous criminals from American communities. The bill also limits DHS' ability to transfer resources that may be necessary to manage record levels of border apprehensions and continues to prevent the full vetting of sponsors for unaccompanied alien children. In addition, the bill would restrict ICE's ability to procure detention space, which could lead to a lengthy and bureaucratic process and increase costs.

The bill also includes an objectionable provision that restricts DHS's use of the Migrant Protection Protocols (MPP), which govern DHS's program to return migrants to Mexico to await processing in the United States. Section 221 of the bill would require DHS to ensure access to legal counsel, address the safety of legal counsel traveling to Mexico, and provide a briefing to individuals on their legal rights and obligations. While the Administration appreciates that MPP should be implemented in a fair and efficient manner, this provision is unnecessarily burdensome and would constrain and reduce flexibility to pursue sensible efforts to address the crisis at the southern border.

The bill includes an objectionable provision on the DHS and Department of Health and Human Services Memorandum of Agreement that prohibits ICE from taking enforcement action against a sponsor, potential sponsor, or relevant household member unless a background check reveals a specified criminal history. This provision, section 223 of the bill, would restrict ICE's ability to investigate and combat human smuggling and fully vet sponsors to ensure the safety of unaccompanied alien children.

Another provision in the bill would prevent ICE from receiving transfers from or using mandatory fee funding deposited in the Immigration Examinations Fee Account for authorized purposes. This provision, section 407 of the bill, would reduce funding available to conduct immigration fraud investigations-a key component of immigration adjudication services-and sets a precedent for prohibiting the use of mandatory funding for authorized purposes.

July migrant apprehensions plummeting 25%, Mexico's help credited

Paul Bedard

Federal immigration officials, citing Mexico's help and new Trump administration initiatives, are seeing far fewer illegal immigrants at the southern border than expected and now believe that those seized this month will be 25% fewer than in June, far more than the historic average drop.

What's more, said Ken Cuccinelli, acting director of the Citizenship and Immigration Services, the number of illegals encountered at the border should continue to plummet as Mexico stretches its cooperation with the U.S. further across the southern border and changes to the asylum process kick in.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In an interview, Cuccinelli said that those caught at the border will likely be below 80,000 in July, a 25% drop from June when 104,344 were apprehended or turned away.

He said that the drop from June to July is typically 6%, which would result in 98,000 encountered at the border.

	OCT	NOV	DEC	JAN	FEB	MAR	APR	MAY	JUN	JUL	AUG	SEP	Total
FY19	60,776	62,461	60,773	58,288	76,533	103,723	109,462	144,278	104,344
FY18	34,871	39,051	40,519	35,905	36,751	50,347	51,168	51,862	43,180	40,149	46,719	50,568	521,090
FY17	66,842	63,218	58,379	42,359	23,557	16,794	15,798	19,966	21,673	25,069	30,582	31,280	415,517
FY16	45,516	45,755	48,742	33,657	38,311	46,118	48,511	55,386	45,671	46,909	46,909	51,893	553,378
FY15	35,903	33,032	34,243	30,180	32,550	39,162	38,296	40,683	38,619	38,611	42,415	41,165	444,859
FY14	41,828	38,685	36,695	35,181	42,399	57,405	59,119	68,804	66,541	48,819	39,758	34,003	509,237

"We're going to be way below that. If I had to guess we'd probably be below 80,000. A 25% drop is way beyond a seasonal drop," Cuccinelli told Secrets during an interview in his office.

He cited new changes to asylum rules, a push for "expedited removal" and the "Migrant Protection Protocols" in which Mexico has agreed to hold migrants as they await U.S. immigration court hearings.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Cuccinelli explained that the MPP program has not spread across the border yet and that Mexico is now expanding into the high illegal immigrant traffic area in southern Texas.

“If Mexico continues to cooperate I think the numbers are going to keep going down because part of what’s happening is we are still not all the way across the border with MPP. That’s what’s coming on-line now in the southern part of Texas, for instance, including the Rio Grande Valley, which is the No. 1 corridor. The effect that we’ve had so far is without hitting the No. 1 corridor. And that’s just now starting up and we’re very enthusiastic about that and the potential that has to stem the tide,” said the acting director, a former Virginia attorney general.

As more migrants are sent home without winning a ticket into the United States, he said that it will likely discourage the flow more from Central American nations.

“It does it in two ways. One, when people don’t just get released into the interior, it changes their calculus and of the people back home. And also some of those people are going home,” he said, citing the expedited removal process.

“So that means people are showing back up in neighborhoods who left not too long ago and couldn’t get in,” he added.

Even with the drop in migrants trying to enter the United States, USCIS and other immigration agencies are working to close it down further and Cuccinelli is working on rules and make that happen, especially since border facilities are full and are expected to stay full for months.

“We really should just turn them back right off the bat. When we are full up, the legal argument can be made, a legitimate argument can be made, that the proper solution is immediate turn around,” he said.

DHS acting chief predicts up to 25 percent drop in border crossings after new Mexico agreement (FOX News)

Fox News

https://www.foxnews.com/politics/acting-dhs-chief-predicts-25-percent-drop-in-border-numbers-after-agreement-with-mexico

The acting head of the Department of Homeland Security on Friday said that he expects the number of migrants apprehended at the border will be lower by up to 25 percent in June than in previous months after Mexico increased its enforcement measures.

"It's become clear that over the past three weeks since the administration reached a new agreement with Mexico that we've seen a substantial increase in the number of interdictions on the Mexican southern border, and a sincere effort to address the transportation networks coming through Mexico," Acting Secretary Kevin McAleenan told reporters.

The U.S. and Mexico reached agreement this month on a deal that sees Mexico take "unprecedented steps to increase enforcement to curb irregular migration" in exchange for the U.S. dropping proposed sanctions on Mexican imports.

McAleenan said the U.S. was looking to see Mexico increase its deployment of National Guard members to the border, and for the expansion of the Migrant Protection Protocols (MPP) -- which allow for illegal immigrants to be returned to Mexico while their immigration proceedings are held.

"These initiatives are making an impact and we are now anticipating a significant reduction in border crossing numbers from June, as much as 25 percent when compared to the record level in May," he said.

Customs and Border Protection said that it encountered more than 144,000 migrants at the border in May, a 30 percent increase from the prior month and double the influx recorded at the beginning of the year. NBC News reports that in 2018 there was a 17 percent decrease from May to June.

McAleenan also said the U.S. is working with Northern Triangle countries to deal with root causes of the migration crisis and increase efforts to tackle organized smuggling organizations in the region.

His remarks come a day after the House passed the Senate version of a $4.5 humanitarian aid bill. It passed after House Speaker Nancy Pelosi backed down from a push to include restrictions on immigration enforcement that could have scuttled the measure. Trump is expected to sign the bill early next week.

McAleenan thanked congressional leaders for getting the bill passed, and said that while it didn't include everything DHS wanted in it -- specifically Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) detention beds for single adults -- it "substantially addresses" the request for funding.

He also took issue with media reports that children at detention centers were not being given vital supplies while in detention, leading to an outcry from lawmakers on Capitol Hill about alleged conditions at the centers. He said that while he has testified for months about concerns over the ability of DHS to handle the vast number of migrants crossing the border, those calls received little attention. But he said that some reports were "missing the story."

"Contrary to the reporting, children in CBP custody at the border are receiving access to key supplies, including toothbrushes, appropriate meals, blankets, showers as soon as they can be provided, and medical screening," McAleenan said.

The Administration is especially concerned with the level of operational directives and attempts to limit ICE's ability to execute its statutory duties. For example, limiting the number of detention beds between interior enforcement and border apprehensions restricts ICE's ability to remove dangerous criminals from American communities. The bill also limits DHS' ability to transfer resources that may be necessary to manage record levels of border apprehensions and continues to prevent the full vetting of sponsors for unaccompanied alien children. In addition, the bill would restrict ICE's ability to procure detention space, which could lead to a lengthy and bureaucratic process and increase costs.

The bill also includes an objectionable provision that restricts DHS's use of the Migrant Protection Protocols (MPP), which govern DHS's program to return migrants to Mexico to await processing in the United States. Section 221 of the bill would require DHS to ensure access to legal counsel, address the safety of legal counsel traveling to Mexico, and provide a briefing to individuals on their legal rights and obligations. While the Administration appreciates that MPP should be implemented in a fair and efficient manner, this provision is unnecessarily burdensome and would constrain and reduce flexibility to pursue sensible efforts to address the crisis at the southern border.

The bill includes an objectionable provision on the DHS and Department of Health and Human Services Memorandum of Agreement that prohibits ICE from taking enforcement action against a sponsor, potential sponsor, or relevant household member unless a background check reveals a specified criminal history. This provision, section 223 of the bill, would restrict ICE's ability to investigate and combat human smuggling and fully vet sponsors to ensure the safety of unaccompanied alien children.

Another provision in the bill would prevent ICE from receiving transfers from or using mandatory fee funding deposited in the Immigration Examinations Fee Account for authorized purposes. This provision, section 407 of the bill, would reduce funding available to conduct immigration fraud investigations-a key component of immigration adjudication services-and sets a precedent for prohibiting the use of mandatory funding for authorized purposes.
