Hi Shawna,

As I mentioned last week, we are planning to mail out a 4x6 postcard to 1.7 million registered voters in Nevada in early September. The artwork for our postcard is nearly complete, but we would like to have it reviewed by an MDA. How do we do this?

Thanks!

Hi Dan,

Crazy day today! I just wanted to share with you our response to the stories about the now infamous USPS letter. This is the statement we shared with the press:

"The characterization of the intent and language of the USPS letter by some press outlets, especially as it relates to Nevada, is incorrect. The truth is it is a routine letter that simply advised the Secretary of State of the USPS delivery standards for First-Class Mail and Marketing Mail. These delivery standards have not changed in many years, and our experience with USPS is they regularly exceed their delivery standards when it comes to official election mail. Election officials in Nevada have worked cooperatively with USPS over many years, and we believe USPS will be able to timely deliver ballots in Nevada for the upcoming general election."

We look forward to our continued relationship with USPS as we race toward the general election. Our local USPS representatives in Nevada have been excellent. We're confident things will go smoothly for the general election.

Clerks, Registrars, and Staff:

USPS recently sent you a calendar invite for a meeting to discuss election mail issues for the 2020 general election. The meeting will take place virtually (via Zoom) on Thursday, August 13, at 2:00 pm and will last about an hour. It is extremely important that you have at least one person from your staff attend this meeting. I know you are all super busy, but please make this meeting a priority.

You should come prepared to answer/discuss the following questions:

1. Are you using a Mail Service Provider (MSP) to prepare and mail ballots?
   a. Name of Provider?
   b. Location of Provider?
   c. Would it be possible to include USPS in discussions with your MSP?
2. Are you using old stock or newly printed?
3. Questions about Business Reply Mail (BRM) accounts.
4. Any issues or concerns.

If you did not get the calendar invite, please let me know.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of
STATE ELECTION DIRECTORS

September 11, 2020

The Honorable Louis DeJoy
Postmaster General
475 L'Enfant Plaza SW
Washington, D.C. 20260

SENT VIA EMAIL AND U.S. MAIL

Dear Postmaster DeJoy:

I am disappointed to learn that the United States Postal Service (USPS) mailed postcards to all residential addresses and post office boxes regarding voting by mail without consulting election officials on the mailing. While I am certain the postcards were well-intentioned, they were sent to all residential and post office box addresses, a list that includes eligible but unregistered citizens, noncitizens, or other ineligible voters. In all states but one, citizens must be registered to vote in order to request, receive, or vote a ballot. The integrity of the vote is a responsibility that state and local election officials take seriously, yet the USPS mailing does not mention the voter registration requirement at all.

We appreciate the effort to encourage voters to plan ahead, but rules and requirements for voting by mail vary by state. States whose residents have already received the postcard have been inundated by calls from confused voters because the recommendations do not align with their state law. These calls distract from the critical work that state and local election officials are doing right now, including preparing mail ballots for both domestic and overseas voters, which as you are aware, are required by federal law to be mailed no later than September 19, 2020.

Like the post office, we strongly encourage voters to follow the instructions on any written materials they receive from their election officials. We also agree that if a voter chooses to vote by mail, they should return their ballot well before Election Day and leverage other return options within seven days of the election. Voters can recognize mail from election offices because it has the official election mail logo.

NASED members across the country report productive working relationships with their regional and in-state USPS staff, from local postmasters to election mail coordinators. Those states with historically low percentages of votes cast by mail have worked hard to develop and strengthen those ties. Relationships, however, go both ways, and USPS's lack of engagement with election officials on this mailing is disconcerting and disappointing going into November's historic election.

Good afternoon Amy,

Thank you for the call this morning and letting me know about your member concerns. Please review and share the following message with your members.

September 11, 2020

Amy Cohen
Executive Director
National Association of State Election Directors

Dear Amy:

In August, the Postal Service began to roll out a national omni-channel public information campaign in order to educate the American public about the Postal Service's role and to inform voters what to expect if they choose to use the mail to participate in the electoral process.

This educational campaign neither encourages nor discourages mail-in voting; rather, it is designed to reach and inform voters across the country about the importance of planning ahead if they plan to vote using the mail. The campaign includes print, TV and radio ads, direct mail to residential customers, retail signage in Post Office lobbies, social media, and online resources, including the recently launched Election Mail website on usps.com.

The mail-piece – which has already been delivered to some households and will reach every American residential mailing and P.O. Box address in the coming week – is intended to provide general, common-sense information to voters throughout the nation. It was developed with generic recommendations recognizing that each state has specific rules, deadlines and requirements. The language is not meant as a commentary on any state's election laws or rules, but is instead intended to complement those laws and rules with general guidance on using the mail.

The main message of the mail-piece is that voters should plan ahead, educate themselves about voting options available in their jurisdiction, and, if they choose to vote by mail, to give themselves and election officials enough time to request, receive, complete and return their ballot.

We believe the mail-piece – and other elements of the campaign – supports the Postal Service's ongoing outreach and educational efforts on how to use of the U.S. mail to participate in the electoral process, and is consistent with the organization's longstanding recommendations regarding mailing timeframes. Earlier this month, our plans regarding campaign elements were discussed with the National Association of State Secretaries of State, and we continue to work with the nation's election officials to support their efforts to use the mail and fully educate the public on the vote-by-mail process.

We are always available to discuss these and related issues, and look forward to discussing further.
