For the 2018-2019 school year, the most recent year for data on this metric, Woody reported that 75.1% of first-time students in corequisite math remediation passed their gateway course with a C or better, compared to 32.1% of students who took their gateway course after passing their prerequisite remedial math course. She said the effectiveness of the corequisite model over the prerequisite holds even taking sector into account. Woody suggested the most encouraging findings were at the two-year schools: Of the students that enrolled in a corequisite math course at a two-year school, 69.9 percent passed their gateway course with a C or better by the fall of that year, and 82.1 percent had passed by June of the following year. Woody said data for English corequisite remediation is less complete than that of math corequisites, but the data demonstrate positive trends. She said nearly 76 percent of first-time students successfully passed their gateway English course via corequisite remediation within one year during the 2018-2019 academic year, while only 56.6 percent of students in prerequisite models passed their gateway course.

Woody told the CBHE that DHWD will continue to administer the survey on College and Career Readiness for the 2021-22 academic year, and release a report of the findings in 2022. She said since there is less trend data regarding English remediation than math remediation, future reports will more adequately show data over time regarding the effectiveness of English remediation. In addition, future reports and surveys will resume focus on individual corequisite course offerings, as limitations from COVID-19 prevented the most recent report from gathering data in as much detail as past reports. Woody stated DHEWD plans to revisit the original Principles of Best Practices in Remedial Education to make updated suggestions and recommendations. While overall, changes in remediation are having a positive impact, there is still progress to be made from an equity perspective as Black Missourians and adult learners are overrepresented in the prerequisite model, often resulting in delayed educational outcomes.

v. Academic Program Actions Approved through Routine and Staff Review -- No oral presentation was offered for this item. The information for the following item is reproduced from CBHE Board Book

Section 173.005.2(1), RSMo, authorizes the Coordinating Board for Higher Education to approve new degree programs to be offered by state institutions of higher education. The Coordinating Board in June 2017 delegated to the commissioner of higher education the authority to approve proposals for new academic programs that meet the criteria for Routine review. Routine review applies to the proposals that are clearly within an institution's CBHE-approved mission and service region, do not unnecessarily duplicate an existing program in the geographically applicable area, will be offered at the institution's main campus or at a CBHE-approved offsite location, will build on existing programs and faculty expertise, and can be launched with minimal expense and within an institution's current operating budget. Staff review applies to minor program changes to existing academic programs such as deletion, inactivation, change of title or CIP code, or change of address notification.

This agenda item reports all Routine and Staff reviews (pages 3-22) by the Missouri Department of Higher Education staff from May – July 2021.

vi. Proprietary School Certification Actions and Reviews -- No oral presentation was offered for this item. The information for the following item is reproduced from CBHE Board Book.

The Missouri Department of Higher Education's Proprietary School Certification Program (§§ 173.600-618, RSMo) provides oversight of certain types of Missouri-based and out-of-state private, postsecondary education providers. This board item provides an update on current issues regarding the Proprietary School Certification Program as well as a summary of recent program actions.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

All program actions that have occurred since the June 16, 2021 (page 2), Coordinating Board for Higher Education meeting are reported in the attachment to this item. The report includes information concerning anticipated actions on applications to establish new postsecondary education institutions, exemptions from the department's certification requirements, and school closures.

i. Missouri Student Loan Program Identify Theft Prevention Program

DHEWD Deputy Commissioner Leroy Wade reported that according to the Federal Trade Commission, an estimated nine million Americans have their identities stolen each year. He said the Red Flags Rule was first issued in 2007 under Section 114 of the Fair and Accurate Credit Transaction Act of 2003, and it was amended in 2010 by the Red Flags Program Clarification Act of 2010. Wade said the rule requires creditors to identify risks that may indicate potentially fraudulent activity, and to implement a written identity theft prevention program. Wade told the CBHE that the Missouri Student Loan Program (MSLP) operated by the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development is considered a creditor subject to the rule requirements, and as such, all of the MSLP's guaranteed student loan accounts are covered by the rule.

Wade stated that the MSLP first developed an Identity Theft Prevention Program in 2008. He told the CBHE that the loan program did not have a staff person specifically responsible for information security at that time, so it appears the original program was developed by the Director of the MSLP. Wade said CBHE approved the Identity Theft Prevention Program, and it became effective on November 1, 2008. The program has not been updated since that time.

Wade said the DHEWD Information Security Senior Associate and the Director of the MSLP worked with other loan program staff to review and update the MSLP Identity Theft Prevention Program (pages 3-7). Wade stated the program was designed to meet the FTC's requirements for the "four basic elements that create a framework to deal with the threat of identity theft."

1. A program must include reasonable policies and procedures to identify the red flags of identity theft that may occur in your day-to-day operations.
2. A program must be designed to detect the red flags you've identified.
3. A program must spell out appropriate actions you'll take when you detect red flags.
4. A program must detail how you'll keep it current to reflect new threats.

The Red Flags Rule requires that an agency's board of directors approve the initial program. Based on federal guidelines, the board may oversee, develop, implement, and administer the program, or it may designate a senior employee to accomplish those tasks. Wade stated that because a senior employee was not previously designated, this item requests the CBHE approve the updated Identity Theft Prevention Program. In addition, it is recommended that the CBHE designate the DHEWD Information Security Senior Associate as the program administrator.

Motion. CBHE approve the Identify Theft Prevention Program. Staff also recommend that the Coordinating Board designate the DHEWD Information Security Senior Associate as the administrator for the program. Motion carried 9-0.

ii. FY 2023 Department and Student Financial Aid Budget Recommendations

During his presentation Leroy Wade, DHEWD Deputy Commissioner of Operations, offered an outline of the more detailed DHEWD FY 2023 Budget Request (pages 1-10).

- Multiple legislative earmarks

Wade indicated DHEWD will submit the budget request materials to Office of Administration by October 1 and meet with OA/Budget and Planning in Mid-October. He said the Governor's recommendations are announced in late January and DHEWD will update budget materials in early February.

Motion. CBHE approve the budget requests described for submission to the Governor and the General Assembly. Motion carried 9-0.

iii. FY 2023 Public College & University Operating Budget Recommendations

Leroy Wade, DHEWD Deputy Commissioner of Operations provided and overview of public college and university operating budget recommendations. He said Section 173.1540, RSMo, requires public universities to prepare annual budget requests and submit them to DHEWD. The department is required to review those requests and prepare unified appropriation recommendations.

Wade advised the following items are structured around the priorities established as part of the budget instruction document and for the consideration of the CBHE for inclusion in the department's formal FY 2023 budget request.

1) Institutional Operating Core: DHEWD staff recommend an increase to core operating appropriations based on a percent increase linked to the rate of inflation. Based on a fiscal year basis (July to June), the increase in the official Consumer Price Index for all urban consumers (CPI-U) from July 1, 2020 until June 30, 2021 is 5.4 percent. This inflationary factor is applied to each four-year institution and State Technical College of Missouri's base core appropriation in order to determine the amount of the new decision item. For community colleges, the inflationary factor would be applied to the total core state appropriation to the sector, with the result constituting the related new decision item.

Sector	Core	Requested Increase	FY 2023 Total
Community Colleges	$153,570,515	$8,292,808	$161,863,323
State Technical College	$8,030,371	$433,640	$8,464,011
Public Universities	$793,759,756	$42,863,026	$836,622,782
Total	$955,360,642	$51,589,474	$1,006,950,116

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2) Maintenance and Repair: Given the level of deferred maintenance on every public college and university campus, DHEWD staff recommends additional ongoing funding for all public institutions, distributed according to the historic pro rata model. The recommendation is for a three percent increase to the total general revenue and lottery appropriation to each institution, with the funds to be dedicated to addressing the institution's highest priority maintenance and repair needs. While these funds would be considered one-time and appropriated separately from the institutional core appropriation, staff would work with legislative leaders and the Governor's Office to establish this as an ongoing appropriation item.

Sector	Core	M&R Request
Community Colleges	$153,570,515	$4,607,115
State Technical College	$8,030,371	$240,911
Public Universities	$793,759,756	$23,812,793
Total	$955,360,642	$28,660,819

3) MoExcels: The MoExcels process solicits institutional proposals, developed in collaboration with business and industry, for one-time increases to establish or expand academic programs linked to high-demand occupations. The pandemic has further elevated this need as we recover from the resulting economic disruption. In previous requests for MoExcels funding, this agenda item included a request for a dollar amount based on specific projects proposed by public institutions. This year detailed project information will not be available in time for the October 1 submission deadline for our budget request. However, based on direction from the State Budget Director, staff is requesting approval of a $15 million placeholder for this item. Wade indicated Detailed information about proposed projects will be provided later this fall and action by the board on those projects is anticipated at or before the December CBHE meeting.

4) Missouri Returning Heroes: The statute that establishes the Missouri Returning Heroes Education Act allows the Coordinating Board to include in its appropriation recommendations the amount of tuition waived during the prior fiscal year by public colleges and universities pursuant to the act (amounts of tuition waived during FY 2021 in compliance with this statute, as reported by public colleges and universities (page 5)). The total requested is $1,169,151.

5) Institution-Specific Requests (pages 6-9): Institutions can submit requests for funding for new decision items. Institutional NDIs will not be formally entered into the budget process. The CBHE may opt to elevate some of those requests for inclusion in the formal budget request.

Wade said that administratively, the department's budget includes funding for the State Historical Society of Missouri. This state entity has its own governing board and the recommendation is to pass along their requests to the governor and the General Assembly. Wade said they have requested the following decision items:

1) $389,000 is requested to help cover employee salary and benefit cost increases.
2) SHSMO requests recurring funds of $92,100 to provide employees a 3% performance salary increase with associated benefits.
3) An additional $296,900 is needed to hire additional historians, communication support and a research assistant.

Motion. CBHE approve the budget requests described above for submission to the governor and General Assembly. Motion carried 9-0.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

iv. American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) Higher Education and Workforce Development Proposals

Gerren McHam, DHEWD Special Assistant for External Relations reported that On March 11, 2021, President Biden signed the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) into law. ARPA provides over $1.9 trillion in relief aid to respond to the COVID-19 pandemic, following nearly $4 trillion in COVID-19 relief in 2020. McHam stated that among other targeted relief provisions for individuals and businesses struggling due to the pandemic, ARPA provides critical funding directly to higher education institutions through the Higher Education Emergency Relief Fund (HEERF) as well as to state and local governments.

McHam told the CBHE that ARPA contains two funds that will create opportunities for Missouri to respond to the health and economic impacts of COVID-19 through investments in higher education and workforce development: the Coronavirus State Fiscal Recovery Fund and the Coronavirus Capital Projects Fund.

McHam reported that through the Coronavirus State Fiscal Recovery Fund, Missouri will receive about $2.8 billion to stabilize the state budget, make new investments, and fund key priorities in response to the pandemic. The fund will be administered by the U.S. Department of the Treasury and its allowable uses will be described by an administrative rule. He stated the administrative rule for the fund is not yet final, but the interim final rule outlines the following allowable uses:

1. Respond to COVID-19 and its negative economic impacts
2. Provide government services to the extent of the reduction in revenue (i.e., property or income tax) due to the public health emergency
3. Invest in water, sewer, or broadband infrastructure
4. Provide premium pay for eligible workers performing essential work during the pandemic

In addition to the $2.8 billion the state will receive, McHam said local governments will receive about $2.4 billion. This is also in addition to the money the state, local governments, and individual institutions received through the CARES Act, which includes $3 billion in Elementary & Secondary School Emergency Relief (ESSER) funds.

Coronavirus Capital Projects Fund. McHam told the CBHE that the state of Missouri will also receive an estimated $100 million to carry out critical capital projects directly enabling work, education, and health monitoring, including remote options, in response to COVID-19. He said states are awaiting guidance on how the U.S. Department of the Treasury will administer this programs because Treasury has not yet promulgated a rule or issued a frequently-asked-questions document.

McHam said Governor Parson's staff is considering needs that could potentially be addressed with ARPA funds and that DHEWD will work with the Governor's Office throughout the fall and early winter to identify opportunities to accelerate the state's response to COVID-19 through higher education and workforce development. McHam then shared the department's initial thoughts on potential investments. He suggested that based on information currently available, DHEWD plans to discuss the following with the Governor's Office:

Potential Investments in Public Colleges and Universities

1. COVID-necessitated capital improvements. ARPA funds can potentially be used to make capital improvements at public colleges and universities that will reduce the risk of COVID spread, including improving ventilation systems, expanding mental health and healthcare capacity, and pandemic operational needs. These projects will also reduce the institutions' deferred maintenance backlog and allow them to complete critical maintenance and repair projects. Currently identified upcoming maintenance and repair projects total just over $1 billion.

McHam said DHEWD plans to propose that up to $250 million be allocated a grant program that will address these needs. Institutions' maximum award amounts would be determined using a formula based on full-time student enrollment, with additional weighting for students who receive Pell Grant awards. All proposals that meet the grant criteria would be funded.

2. COVID recovery workforce and education initiatives. The interim final administrative rule allows funds to be used to address educational disparities, support students who have been affected by disruptions that resulted from COVID-19, and provide opportunities for those who experienced job loss or disruption as a result of COVID-19. ARPA also authorizes spending for activities that cannot be accomplished in Missouri with the state's current workforce.

McHam said DHEWD plans to propose that up to $250 million be allocated to a grant program that will address these needs. As with the capital improvements proposal, institutions' maximum award amounts would be determined using a formula based on full-time student enrollment, with additional weighting for students who receive Pell Grant awards. All proposals that meet the grant criteria would be funded. Funds would be used to:

- Support students who have been affected by COVID-19 disruptions
- Address educational disparities
- Provide opportunities to un- and under-employed Missourians
- Establish, expand, or enhance specific programs that will educate the workforce the state needs to respond to the short- and long-term impacts of COVID and the resulting economic impact, including:

i. Healthcare and public health
ii. Manufacturing, transportation, logistics, and supply chain management
iii. Mental healthcare
iv. Law enforcement and public safety programs that include evidence-based violence prevention programs
v. Education and education support services
vi. Data science
vii. Science and research viii. Construction trades, HVAC installation, and lead remediation
ix. Other areas clearly linked to activities in the ARPA rule in which Missouri or a local area faces ongoing workforce shortages

McHam said that although the Governor's Office is aware of these potential proposals, staff have not indicated whether they support the concepts or the dollar amounts suggested. McHam suggested the Governor might choose one category or another, recommend funding for one or both at a lower level, or take another approach.

Other Potential Investments in Higher Education

McHam stated that ost of the current discussion around ARPA funds is focused on state-funded entities, such as departments of state government and public higher education institutions. However, there may be an opportunity in the future to make proposals that include other kinds of organizations, such as private colleges and universities and non-profits. He told the CBHE that DHEWD staff will continue to engage the board and the Presidential Advisory Committee as the conversation continues to unfold.

McHam suggested that DHEWD may also propose that ARPA funds be allocated to several projects that will increase efficiency (pages 6-8) by automating manual processes, improve service to the public, and enhance the department's ability to accomplish its mission.

b. Information

i. FY 2023 Budget Request Summary

Leroy Wade, DHEWD Deputy Commissioner of Operations recounted that the CBHE submits requests for funding for DHEWD operations, state student financial aid programs administered by the department, and higher education institutions' operating budgets and initiatives each year. In addition, Wade stated the CBHE may request supplemental funding when additional funds are needed to continue to operate a program for the remainder of the current fiscal year.

Wade reported that The FY 2023 budget instructions cover letter from the State Budget Director, provided a state economic forecast. Of particular importance is the statement that: "Departments may request mandatory and high priority Fiscal Year 2023 new decision items. For priority items, departments need to look at existing resources as a funding source." Wade told the CBHE that the following is a summary of DHEWD staff recommendations for the FY 2023 department operations, student financial assistance programs, institutions' operating budgets and initiatives.

FY 2022 Supplemental Budget

- There are no supplemental FY 2022 budget needs anticipated at this time.

FY 2022 Proposed Eliminations/Reductions

The following items were passed as one-time appropriations in FY 2022 and would be eliminated in FY 2023 or reauthorized under a new appropriation.

- $12,000,000 million for GEER Excels
- $21,831,384 for MoExcels
- $2,000,000 million for a nursing simulation lab
- $600,000 for a workforce project for under-resourced individuals
- $1,212,759 for a workforce pandemic response grant; and
- $500,000 for an entrepreneurship and entrepreneurial skills program at Harris-Stowe State University

FY 2023 Proposed Increases

Office of General Counsel: A new decision items is requested in the amount of $90,490, not including fringe benefits that are include in HB 5. The workload of this office has continued to grow and additional responsibilities necessitate an additional new full-time employee.

Office of Operations: This new decision items for $423,258 would include 3 new full-time employees and related operational expenses. The student financial aid unit has taken on three new financial aid programs without additional staff and without the operational funds to ensure efficient and effective operations of the scholarship programs. Two of the most recent programs (Fast Track and A+ Dual Credit/Dual Enrollment) were funded with programmatic dollars and did not include the administrative funding requested as part of the fiscal notes that accompanied the legislation within the last few years.

Office of Performance and Strategy: A $310,000 new decision item is recommended to support the ongoing work of this office. This requested increase is needed to both grant funding reductions and because general revenue support used by the office was not transferred from the Department of Economic Development with the office during the merger. No new FTE are needed. This office is responsible to providing labor market data needed to help grow Missouri's economy.

Access Missouri Grant: Increase transfer authority by $9,000,000 and increase spending authority by $9,000,000 to fully fund the program per statute.

A+ Scholarship: Increase transfer authority by $6,000,000 and increase spending authority by $6,000,000 in order to maintain the funded needed to fully reimburse all eligible students.
A+ Dual Credit/Dual Enrollment Scholarship: Increase transfer authority by $18,000,000 and increase spending authority by $18,000,000 to fully fund the program per the legislative fiscal note.

Public Service Officer or Employee Survivor Grant Program: An additional $7,500 is needed to maintain funding of all eligible students for this program in FY 2023.

Returning Heroes: Per state statute, institutions are allowed to ask for the amount of tuition they have waived in complying with the Missouri Returning Heroes Act. For FY 2023, an appropriation of $1,169,151 is requested to reimburse the institutions.

Institutions' Core CPI Increase: Based upon a 5.4 percent increase in the CPI-U, a total of $8,292,808 is needed for community colleges; $42,863,026 for public universities; and $433,640 for the State Technical College of Missouri. The combined total for all three sectors is $51,589,474.

Institutional Maintenance and Repair: Based upon a 3 percent increase based on core institutional appropriations targeted to address deferred maintenance, a total of $4,607,115 is needed for community colleges; $23,812,793 for public universities; and $240,911 for the State Technical College of Missouri. The combined total for all three sectors is $28,660,819.

Other Institutional Requests: Institutions and other organizations funded by House Bill 3 were invited to submit specific new decision items for consideration.

Other Requests State Historical Society - $389,000 is requested to help cover employee salary and benefit cost increases. SHSMO requests recurring funds of $92,100 to provide employees a 3% performance salary increase with associated benefits. An additional $296,900 is needed to hire additional historians, communication support and a research assistant.

ii. Recertification of Institutions to Participate in State Student Financial Aid Programs -- No oral presentation was offered for this item. The information for the following item is reproduced from CBHE Board Book.

Every three years, in compliance with the regulations on institutional eligibility for participation in state student financial assistance programs, approved public, private and virtual institutions must be recertified by the Coordinating Board for Higher Education.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

All institutions currently participating in the state student financial assistance programs are certified through September 2022. In order for students at Missouri postsecondary education institutions to continue to receive state student financial assistance, the institution must complete the recertification process, including CBHE approval, by September 2022. The recertification process applies to institutions that satisfy the requirements specified in Section 173.1102, RSMo. Those provisions define three distinct categories of Missouri institutions (private institutions, public institutions and virtual institutions) as eligible to participate in these programs. Institutional eligibility to participate in the A+ Scholarship program is not included in the process as the authorizing statute for that program specifically defines institutional eligibility and does not require approval by the Coordinating Board. In addition, because the Advanced Placement Incentive Grant requires students to be eligible for either an Access Missouri or A+ award, separate institutional approval is not required. DHEWD staff are currently updating materials relating to the recertification process in anticipation of distribution of those materials early next year.

Institutional Maintenance and Repair: $4,607,115 for community colleges; $23,812,793 for public universities; and $240,911 for the State Technical College of Missouri. The combined total for all three sectors is $28,660,819. State Historical Society - $389,000 is requested to help cover employee salary and benefit cost increases.

Authorized the Commissioner to discuss potential investments through the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) Higher Education and Workforce Development Proposals -- ARPA provides over $1.9 trillion in relief aid to respond to the COVID-19 pandemic, following nearly $4 trillion in COVID-19 relief in 2020. ARPA provides funding directly to higher education institutions through the Higher Education Emergency Relief Fund (HEERF) as well as to state and local governments. ARPA contains two funds the Coronavirus State Fiscal Recovery Fund and the Coronavirus Capital Projects Fund. Coronavirus State Fiscal Recovery Fund: Missouri will receive about $2.8 billion to stabilize the state budget, make new investments, and fund key priorities in response to the pandemic. Coronavirus Capital Projects Fund: Missouri will also receive an estimated $100 million to carry out critical capital projects directly enabling work, education, and health monitoring, including remote options. States are awaiting guidance on how the U.S. Department of the Treasury will administer these programs. Governor's staff is considering needs that could potentially be addressed with ARPA funds.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

DHEWD will work with the Governor's Office to identify opportunities to accelerate the state's response to COVID-19.

Approved Statewide Mission Changes the General Assembly passed, and the Governor signed HB 297, which included statewide missions for three institutions: Harris-Stowe State University (page 2), Northwest Missouri State University (page 3), and Southeast Missouri State University (page 4). Statewide missions are part of each institution's CBHE-approved mission description reflecting the institution's appropriate role and scope within the state's higher education system.

Approved Higher Education Student Funding Act Rule Revision – HB 297 removed the statutory caps on tuition increase known as the Higher Education Student Funding Act (HESFA). The new legislation also added a provision allowing institutions to charge differential tuition.

Approved draft Fast Track Legislation (pages 8-12) – DHEWD believes that participation in the Fast Track program would be improved if the program were changed to remove the sunset and clawback provisions, and to allow apprenticeship expansion. Draft legislation removes the program's sunset provision, as well as the forgivable loan provision which creates a "clawback action" that requires Fast Track recipients to live and work in Missouri for at least three years after completing their training or repay some or all of the grant they received. The proposal also includes apprenticeship expansion. Apprenticeship program costs can be significant (e.g., supplies, equipment/tools, and fees). Expanding the Fast Track eligible entity list to include any entity that provides registered, approved apprenticeship programs, as defined by the U.S. Department of Labor, will expand the number of apprenticeship opportunities that will meet high-demand occupations.

INFORMATION/REPORTS

Final Report on Great River Community College District Petition -- CBHE received notice in October 2020, from the Committee for Affordable Technical Education, stating a Steering Committee had been formed to organize a new community college district that would encompass the Cape Girardeau 63, the Jackson R-2, and the Perry County 32 public school districts. Based on the results of the feasibility study, the Committee for Affordable Technical Education is formally withdrawing its petition (page 177-178) to form a new community college. DHEWD indicates it will convene stakeholders, including community and institutional representatives, to identify alternate solutions to help meet regional needs as identified in the feasibility study.

Overview on the State of Remedial Education – Available (fall 2020) shows remediation rates reduced by more than half of their 2012 levels (17.3% overall, 13.1% in math, 6.5% in English, and 3.7% in reading).

Table 1. Remedial Participation of Recent Missouri Public High School Graduates in Public Postsecondary Institutions

Math	30.8%	30.1%	26.2%	23.8%	21.5%	17.6%	17.5%	15.9%	13.1%
English	14.3%	15.5%	12.3%	10.0%	11.4%	10.1%	8.2%	7.2%	6.5%
Reading	9.1%	9.7%	7.6%	6.1%	6.6%	6.0%	5.2%	4.4%	3.7%

While Black Missourians are still overrepresented among students needing remediation, the remediation rate for this group of students has drastically improved as well, with the overall remediation rate for Black students at 28.2%. The use of multiple measures for placement is one of the best practices driving this positive change. Prior to implementation, placement in remedial education was based primarily on standardized test scores, particularly ACT subscores. Corequisite remedial models have shown great success. Rather than the traditional prerequisite model, which enrolls students in a non-credit bearing course that must be passed prior to taking the gateway course, the corequisite model enrolls students directly in the gateway

A HOLE IN ONE

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Cabel Nagel, Senior at Westran High School beams with delight as he holds ball that scored the hole in one at heritage Hills Gold Course in Moberly, Missouri.
Westran High School was playing Cairo High School in a duel meet when Cabel got a hole in one. The long shot, the Hail Mary pass, the hole in one bring us joy.

-From the Moberly Monitor Index-

Georgia Prohibition is shooting for a hole in one as it recommends to our governments and people to establish a Prohibition Amendment so that all the Calebs in the nation can score the hole in one that is life itself. The Moberly Monitor Index also reports that two men were arrested in a tavern for beating up somebody.

So we see a golf course that brings a teenage boy a moment of joy with a hole in one. And we see a tavern two drunken men digging two holes for themselves in a jailhouse and one hole of injury for somebody they were beating. The taverns, saloons, liquor stores, alcoholic drinks outlets causing undertakers to dig holes 6 feet deep to ;put people in that the alcoholic drinks kill. So the nation, the states, counties, and towns are killing the people in them for money and to appease the people who have addicted themselves to alcohol. We have a killing democracy of numbers of people dedicated to vices that kill people disguised as American democracy destroying our republic of life dedicated to the defense of each life.

We need to unite as one nation and one people and bring our democracy back under the Constitution, Declaration of Independence, and the defense of each life in the nation.

We must end the meaningless slaughter of millions of people by alcohol and abortion. Today people are playing lotteries, going to casinos, pitching drunks, getting divorces, aborting their children, betraying the Constitution in public office, while all around them in their towns, counties, and states their neighbors die with nobody caring.

Our republic with its democracy guided by a Constitution exists to give life to all is based on the Golden Rule of Christ-Love thy neighbor as thyself. Interstate groups use powers of numbers, wealth, referendums, and judge decrees to destroy lives all over the nation drowning the republic by force of numbers.

Dear Speaker Vescovo, Chair Eggleston, and Members of the Administrative Oversight Rules Committee,

I am the cofounder of the Missouri Coalition of Animal Care Organizations which works to support Missouri's companion animals and their communities. On National Animal Advocacy Day, I write to you to provide you with a letter from the Missouri Coalition of Animal Care Organizations and dozens of other animal welfare organizations across the state of Missouri urging you to please move H.B. 365, the bill to end breed bans in Missouri, forward in the Missouri House Of Representatives. It currently sits in the Administrative Oversight Rules Committee, and it is imperative that it move forward as soon as possible. The attached letter confirms the support of H.B. 365 from the groups in our state who truly understand the need for community support, protection, and wellness – for people and pets alike. Please let me know if you have any questions, and I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,
Abbie Knudsen

Administrative Oversight Rules Committee April 30, 2021

MO House of Representatives

Dear Speaker Vescovo, Chair Eggleston, and Members of the Administrative Oversight Rules Committee,

As a group of 35 animal welfare organizations that support people and pets across the state of Missouri, we are urging you to move H.B. 365, the bill to end dog breed-specific legislation, forward for a vote in the House Rules Administrative Oversight Committee. It is imperative that we end dog breed bans in Missouri so that effective animal welfare strategies can be supported and citizens effectively protected.

Nearly 50 municipalities across Missouri currently have breed-specific bans in place that discriminate against certain dog breeds, like pit bulls, based solely on their appearance. H.B 365 would prohibit municipalities from enacting breed-specific bans, and if passed, it would also overturn these local bans, which currently keep roughly 326,000 Missourians from choosing the dog they want for their family, while punishing otherwise friendly, well-socialized dogs. Discriminatory breed bans, based solely on a dog's appearance, are misguided and we know for a fact, that they do not reduce the number of dog bites and attacks. The Missouri Farm Bureau supports H.B. 365 and many well-respected institutions, including the American Veterinary Medical Association, the National Canine Research Council, and the Center for Disease Control, support the repeal of existing breed bans because they are not effective or scientifically founded.

Additionally, breed-specific legislation diverts attention away from more effective animal welfare and public safety strategies. Instead of forbidding dogs based on what may or may not be their breed, Missouri communities could protect their citizens better by adopting strong dangerous dog laws, which address individual animals and owners and protect people and pets effectively. As organizations that provide countless resources to the communities that surround us to improve human and animal welfare, we firmly support the allocation of funding to go towards effective strategies like leash laws, anti-tethering laws, laws facilitating spaying and neutering, and laws that require all owners to be responsible dog owners.

The Missouri cities of Springfield, Liberty, and Shrewsbury have recently repealed BSL and it's time to make a lasting change on the state level. Thank you for your time and leadership. Please move H.B. 365 forward, Speaker Vescovo and House Rules Administrative Oversight Committee – it's time to protect Missourian people and pets.

Sincerely,

Dear Representative Dogan,

I'm the midwest director of the R Street Institute which has been active with the Safety & Justice Challenge, the Clean Slate Initiative, Pew Trust and many other criminal justice reform organizations and coalitions. Somebody has pointed out to us that Missouri is apparently one of the few states that has no citation authority in its diversion toolkit except for traffic offenses. It has become an increasingly popular alternative to arrest. Most states have discovered the advantage of allowing this discretion to law enforcement authorities for many low-level crimes as well.

As Chair of the House Special Committee on Criminal Justice, we wondered if you are considering reform in this area, or might have a feeling about the current appetite for this kind of reform among your colleagues on the Joint Committee on the Justice System.

We have recently published a paper on the entire subject of alternatives to arrest which I am attaching. https://www.rstreet.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/10/Final-187.pdf

Thanks again for your time. I hope to hear back from you when you have some time to discuss.

INTRODUCTION

Handcuffs close about a person's wrists and the few, simple words "you are under arrest" are spoken as the individual is placed in the back of a police car. It is a scene that plays out once every three seconds in the United States and sets into motion a criminal process that exhibits at times all of the control and potential for damage of a runaway locomotive.[1] Indeed, regardless of whether a murder indictment or an ordinance violation spurred the arrest, the immediate aftermath is the same. The individual loses their freedom and gains a new entry in their criminal history, while the officer must spend hours transporting and processing the individual with the specter of additional court time hanging over the future. And, while arrest is warranted for many of the more serious transgressions, it is an ill-fitting and disproportionate response to myriad other situations. Yet, traditionally, the only other option officially available to officers is to do nothing.

The shortcomings of this approach have not been lost on many law enforcement leaders and other crisis first responders, and in recent years, police departments from Seattle, Washington to Gloucester, Massachusetts have instituted new strategies and initiatives meant to break this old paradigm and present their officers with options beyond the binary choice to arrest or take no action. Operating under a variety of labels that usually reference 'diversion' in some form,[2] these efforts have ranged from actively searching out vulnerable members of the community and connecting them with services to de-escalating potentially criminal encounters through citations or treatment opportunities. Often, it has meant law enforcement officers working in concert with other first responders; in some instances, non-law enforcement personnel may direct a response themselves—indeed, for crises without a criminal justice component, this can represent the optimal response. It has also involved turning to a set of independent crisis response procedures, such as protective custody or citations in lieu of arrest, that entail a noncriminal or deescalated enforcement response and can operate as part—or instead—of a more comprehensive diversion program.

Although these strategies are often locally designed and implemented, they do not operate in a legal or political vacuum. Instead, localities are subject to a web of state laws and regulations that directly bear on their ability to institute pre-arrest diversion and other crisis response strategies effectively. Laws that grant local officials noncriminal responses to crises can propel diversion efforts or provide alternative, supplemental crisis responses. Laws that require criminal responses or otherwise circumscribe when and how non-law enforcement responders are able to intervene can impede them.

In light of this, the present study dives into these problems by reviewing and analyzing the primary statewide barriers to and accelerants of pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies. It begins by providing an overview of pre-arrest diversion strategies. It then delves into five categories of law or regulation that most directly affect these strategies and often serve as the basis of fully-fledged crisis responses in their own right: emergency mental health hold laws, protective custody statutes, citation authority, substance abuse Good Samaritan laws and ambulance transport destination rules.

TABLE I: STATEWIDE POLICIES RELATING TO PRE-ARREST DIVERSION AND CRISIS RESPONSE

Emergency Mental Health Hold	Emergency mental health hold laws authorize certain first responders to take an individual experiencing a mental health crisis into a form of civil custody in order for them to be evaluated by appropriate mental health or medical personnel.
Protective Custody	Protective custody procedures operate as the substance abuse analog to emergency mental health holds by authorizing first responders to place an individual experiencing an acute substance abuse episode in temporary civil custody.
Citation Authority	Citation authority statutes permit or require law enforcement officers to issue a citation to individuals alleged to have committed certain specified offenses, instead of placing them under arrest, booking or detaining them.
Substance Abuse Good Samaritan	Substance abuse Good Samaritan laws offer immunity from arrest, criminal charges, prosecution or conviction for limited, drug-related offenses as an incentive for individuals to call for assistance for someone experiencing a suspected overdose.
Ambulance Transport Destination	Ambulance transport laws and regulations can influence where emergency medical services may take an individual experiencing a crisis, potentially by requiring transport to a hospital emergency department or otherwise discouraging the use of alternative destinations.

For each category, the report outlines the results of a fifty-state review of the current legal status quo and then uses recent legislative action to highlight the areas of the law advocates are attempting to alter.[3] Finally, it provides an analysis of these legal frameworks and legislative developments, and suggests avenues for future action.

3. Each survey also includes the District of Columbia.

PRE-ARREST DIVERSION AND CRISIS RESPONSE STRATEGIES

The primary purpose of pre-arrest diversion and related crisis response strategies is to address underlying problematic or troubling behavior—before it potentially causes serious harm—through noncriminal or deescalated criminal responses that are more effective and appropriate in certain situations.[4] At the preventative end of the crisis continuum, programs shield individuals from arrest so that they can seek out law enforcement or social service providers for treatment assistance or alternatively, so that those officers and providers can reach out to them. At the other end of the spectrum—during and immediately following an acute mental health, substance abuse or other crisis—officials work to resolve the crisis and start the process of addressing the underlying issues. If the crisis involves potentially criminal behavior, officials might hold off on filing charges, downgrade the criminal reaction involved or remove the individual from the auspices of the criminal system altogether in order to facilitate treatment.

Although the appetite for pre-arrest diversion programs that incorporate these strategies has grown in recent years, their more widespread adoption and implementation still represent a developing phenomenon. As late as 2014, a survey of municipal and county law enforcement agencies found that only 34 percent of responding agencies utilized police-led diversionary practices.[5] Further, of that group, a mere 27 percent determined an individual's eligibility for diversion prior to an arrest and 28 percent did so at the point of arrest, with the remainder doing so at booking or even later in the process.[6] While crisis intervention teams can trace their history to the late 1980s,[7] two of the other leading programs—Law Enforcement Assisted Diversion (LEAD) and the Police Assisted Addiction and Recovery Initiative (PAARI)—began in 2011[8] and 2015,[9] respectively. Notably, however, the LEAD and PAARI networks already boast hundreds of affiliated jurisdictions that are considering or actively utilizing ver-

4. Although an overreliance on law enforcement to handle even non-criminal crisis response in many situations leads many jurisdictions to merge pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies, theoretically the two are distinct. Indeed, greater investments in behavioral health systems may allow a jurisdiction to more effectively differentiate the two and permit law enforcement to scale-back its own crisis response role to a more traditional, criminal justice-oriented one.

sions of these strategies.[10] This is evidence of the rising popularity of these types of strategies more generally. Further, a host of local efforts, such as Tucson, Arizona's opioid deflection pilot program and Mental Health Support Teams,[11] often operate without garnering the same degree of national attention or following.

The relative novelty of many of the leading approaches has meant that research on these strategies is still in its infancy. Many of the early outcomes, however, have been positive. A review of Seattle, Washington's LEAD program, for example, found that compared to a control group, LEAD's participants were 60 percent less likely to be arrested during the six months following their entry into the program. Extending this comparison window out by a couple of years found similar results, with LEAD participants still 58 percent less likely to be arrested and 39 percent less likely to be charged with a felony during that period than the control group.[12] An analysis of Leon County, Florida's Pre-Arrest Diversion/ Adult Civil Citation program found even better outcomes: an 80 percent reduction in the re-arrest rate for individuals who successfully completed the program.[13] This is a promising early indicator, which additional research should examine further.

The contours of programs such as these can depend on a collection of noncriminal and deescalated criminal response authorities that jurisdictions vest to varying degrees in law enforcement officers and other first responders. It would be quite difficult, for example, for Leon County, Florida to run a successful Pre-Arrest Diversion/ Adult Civil Citation program if its officers did not have the relevant authority to issue citations. At the same time, the presence of tools, such as protective custody for substance abuse crises or emergency holds for acute mental health episodes, means that a response outside of the criminal justice system may be possible even without a formal pre-arrest diversion program. Indeed, these legal mechanisms are employed frequently as crisis responses in their own right, sometimes with the intent of providing additional separation from the criminal justice system in order to reduce stigma for those involved. As such, these legal tools serve as both components of and alternatives to pre-arrest diversion programs.

Whether law enforcement or other first responders are able to employ any of these tools may turn on a couple of other legal areas: substance abuse Good Samaritan laws and ambulance transport destination rules. By removing criminal liability for individuals at the scene of a suspected overdose, a substance abuse Good Samaritan law can make noncriminal responses a possibility in situations in which they might not otherwise be. Likewise, ambulance transport regulations that allow EMS personnel to transport an individual in crisis to a wider range of destinations, rather than solely to hospitals with an emergency department, can facilitate additional noncriminal pathways.

Systemic data revealing the extent to which law enforcement and other first responders rely on these tools does not exist, but studies examining particular jurisdictions hint at their prevalence. For example, in Alameda County, California, which has roughly 1.6 million residents, researchers found that 26,283 people had at least one emergency mental health hold placed on them over a five-year period.[14] Similarly, in Fairbanks, Alaska, a metropolitan area with just under 100,000 residents, the Community Service Patrol reported 4,464 protective custody transports in a single year.[15] Likewise, Maryland has one of the more limited citation authority statutes,[16] yet its law enforcement officers still issue about 20,000 criminal citations each year.[17] Finally, with over 70,000 drug overdoses[18] and 18 million patients receiving care from emergency medical services each year,[19] the potential for Good Samaritan laws and ambulance transport regulations to affect crisis responses remains enormous.

Emergency Mental Health Hold Laws

TABLE 2: CHARACTERISTICS OF EMERGENCY MENTAL HEALTH HOLD LAWS

Who can initiate?	Law enforcement officers and, in some jurisdictions, other first responders, behavioral health or medical professionals.
When can a hold be initiated?	The exact standard varies considerably, but usually an official can initiate a hold if an individual is experiencing an acute mental health episode and is a danger to themselves or others or, in some jurisdictions, is gravely disabled.
Discretion of Officials	A jurisdiction may require that officials take all qualifying individuals into custody or it may be up to their discretion.
Eligible Destinations	Eligible destinations frequently include hospital emergency departments, psychiatric facilities, crisis centers and, in some jurisdictions, jails.
Duration	The maximum period that a hold can persist without a court order can range from a handful of hours to over a week. Often regular medical evaluations are required during and to prolong this period.

Alongside, and often in tandem with, substance abuse crises, acute mental health episodes present one of the more frequent emergency situations encountered by law enforcement officers and other first responders. Intervention may be necessary in these scenarios to prevent harm to the individual in question or others. The criminal justice system, however, may be unavailable (if there is no criminal conduct involved) or unsuited to address the conduct (even if there is something potentially criminal about it). Forty-nine states and the District of Columbia have responded to this reality by authorizing certain officials to institute short, civil detentions outside of a hospital setting and without a court order to provide for the emergency evaluation and possible treatment of an individual.[20] Although these holds are often colloquially known as "72-hour holds," the actual maximum permitted duration can range from as little as six hours to as long as ten days without a court order.

While the existence of these emergency holds is practically universal, they do not have a uniform influence on local pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies. To begin with, jurisdictions authorize different groups of officials to initiate proceedings. For example, in 17 jurisdictions, only law enforcement officers can unilaterally begin these holds. In another 29, they share this power with a collection of medical and social service professionals, including physicians, social workers and mental health officers. The remaining four states require law enforcement and other crisis responders to work together; usually, a law enforcement officer initiates the proceedings but consultation with another professional with a mental health or medical background is required for the hold to proceed. Who is able to initiate a hold may determine whether an emergency hold is possible at all. It may also influence whether officials choose to utilize the process, since this decision will naturally be influenced by each official's own set of experiences and expertise.

Whether officials initiate an emergency hold may also turn on the discretion entrusted to them, specifically whether they have a choice in the matter at all. While 43 jurisdictions allow the officials on-scene to make the determination of whether it is appropriate in a particular case, the other seven require officials to take all qualifying individuals into custody. Such an absence of discretion is likely well intentioned—to ensure the well-being of all individuals in crisis—and will increase the use of this particular crisis response, but this may come at the cost of an alternative option that might be more appropriate. It likewise forfeits the judgment of the responder in the field to tailor the response to the individual and the situation at-hand.

The preconditions necessary to initiate a hold will, of course, have a strong bearing on its availability in a given situation, as will the manner in which officials interpret relevant statutory language. There is relatively little agreement among jurisdictions about what exactly these preconditions should be. The majority of statutes reference danger to oneself or others, with seven requiring that danger to be "imminent;" another 11 use terms suggesting it need only be "immediate" or in the "near future;" and a further 14 state that "immediate confinement" must be necessary to prevent some form of danger. The remaining 14 jurisdictions use thresholds of danger that are even lower or more vague, failing to specify just how impending these risks might be. Finally, in addition to these danger-related requirements, 15 states allow officials to initiate a hold in response to an individual who is gravely disabled.

Two other essentially procedural attributes of emergency hold laws are likely to have a strong bearing on pre-arrest diversion and crisis response. First, a significant number of jurisdictions state that a mental health hold can only be initiated based on the law enforcement officer's personal observations of the individual's conduct or condition. Presumably meant as a due process protection, this could unintentionally hamstring efforts in which a mental health provider on-scene has already made a careful professional judgment, yet crisis responders cannot proceed until an untrained law enforcement officer reaches the same conclusion. Second, the burden of proof on these officials ranges across language such as "reasonable cause" to "probable cause" to "reason to believe" that a hold is required. The height of this threshold will naturally affect the range of situations that potentially qualify for such a hold.

20. The remaining state, West Virginia, requires an initial court order to begin the emergency hold process.

The list of acceptable facilities may go a long way to determining the availability and effectiveness of an emergency hold. Depending on the jurisdiction, an individual might find himself or herself transported to a mental health facility, hospital or other treatment facility. In six states, the list of possible locations includes a jail or other correctional facility, albeit usually only either as a last resort or in other limited circumstances.[21] This final piece speaks to the impact that legally acceptable locations have on the use of emergency holds: if a particular jurisdiction lacks available beds in the prescribed facilities, then an emergency hold may not be possible. Then again, expanding the list of potential facilities to include those that lack adequate ability to evaluate or treat an individual in crisis may undermine the effectiveness of that hold. This creates a difficult balancing act for jurisdictions with limited budgets and treatment capacity.

Legislative Action—The need to provide meaningful access to appropriate treatment has animated recent legislative discussions about how to update mental health emergency hold laws to serve individuals in crisis better. This issue has largely manifested as a complex debate over where to take individuals experiencing acute mental health crises and how long a detention must be to facilitate treatment. It has also included questions surrounding the appropriate circumstances required to initiate a hold. The result has been a steady, albeit occasionally halting, move to broaden the scope and use of emergency holds.

Legislative deliberations on these topics have been remarkably free of partisan rancor, though not procedural drama. Sponsors and widespread support from both parties, for example, did not prevent a bill in Colorado from receiving the governor's veto in 2016 over policy concerns.[22] In an even more noteworthy display of bipartisanship, an updated version of that bill in 2017—which made the dramatic swing from potentially expanding jail-based mental health detention to eliminating it altogether in favor of other facilities—also received bipartisan sponsorship and deep support on its way to becoming law. Likewise, in neighboring Kansas, legislation altering the state's emergency hold law garnered bipartisan support in both 2016 and 2017, once again in spite of significant alterations to the underlying text in the interim.

In 2013, a bill adding "gravely disabled" as a possible basis for an emergency hold easily passed in Indiana with only a single senator voting against the measure.[23] A similar piece of legislation that year in Montana represents one of the more partisan votes on the topic. The bill passed both houses of the legislature by around a two-to-one margin, yet only garnered the support of roughly two in five Republicans.[24] However, even of those bills that failed to make it out of committee, let alone into law, most appear to have been consumed by policy rather than political opposition.[25]

Like most of the politicians involved, the law enforcement community has been largely supportive of legislation aiming to expand emergency mental health holds. This has included measures relating to the use of crisis centers in Kansas,[26] and sharing emergency hold authority with behavioral health professionals in Nebraska.[27] It has also meant participating in the debate surrounding both Colorado bills relating to jails. Sheriffs' concerns about treatment for rural emergency hold patients helped spur the original expansion of jail-based detention,[28] while sheriffs and other law enforcement members helped devise the recommendations that eliminated their use. These experiences suggest that law enforcement, as the individuals in the field handling these crises firsthand, is perhaps more results- than process-oriented when it comes to legislation to aid their efforts.

Organizations representing criminal defense lawyers and mental health advocates have not always shared law enforcement's enthusiasm for many of these suggested policy changes. In Kansas, the heartland chapter of Mental Health America vigorously opposed efforts to make it easier to hold individuals against their will based on mental illness.[29] The Kansas Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers likewise weighed in with their own concerns about a possible extension of mental health holds from 24 to 72 hours; three days without a court appearance struck them as too long.[30] The Kansas chapter of the National Alliance on Mental Illness took a more equivocal stance on the establishment of crisis centers for these holds, expressing concerns about the proposal drawing funding from voluntary treatments, but accepting that it could be a valuable last resort.[31] In Colorado, legislation that would have altered the standard for the initiation of an emergency hold split the mental health community. Mental health providers were favorably inclined toward the move to lower it from "imminent" to "immediate" danger, while those representing mental health services consumers expressed opposition.[32]

The ultimate success of the second iterations of expansion bills in Colorado and Kansas in 2017 is attributable, in part, to the establishment of committees with diverse membership to assess the problem. In Colorado, after vetoing the original emergency hold expansion bill, the governor directed the creation of a task force, which was composed of members of the executive branch and legislature, law enforcement representatives and individuals from various behavioral health, civil liberties and disability rights organizations.[33] Likewise, in Kansas, after legislative setbacks in 2016, supporters of the emergency hold expansion convened six meetings to discuss the proposal with stakeholders, including representatives from law enforcement, treatment providers and mental health advocates.[34]

In both states, the involvement of outside organizations representing various interested constituencies provided valuable perspective to lawmakers. This inclusive approach allowed for the development of more nuanced proposals able to survive the legislative process. The statement of Mike Burgess, director of policy and outreach for the Disability Rights Center of Kansas, exemplified the dramatic reversals made possible by the process: "To say I was opposed would not do it justice. Now, I return as a supporter."[35]

The experiences of these working groups highlight the fact that advancing crisis response strategies through emergency hold policies is not a straightforward endeavor. Even well intentioned measures—such as preventing time-consuming trips to far away detention sites by allowing for additional local ones—can have unintended consequences that have to be considered—for example, in the case of additional local sites, the fact that many would end up being correctional facilities.[36] At the same time, the dramatic legislative swings in Colorado and—to a lesser extent—Kansas suggest that a deliberate, inclusive policymaking process can help unravel many of these thornier issues.

Recommendations—One of the clearest areas of emergency hold laws in need of reform is the continued use of correctional facilities in a handful of states, though eliminating the use of correctional facilities is inevitably more complicated than simply writing their ineligibility into law. Jails are correctional environments not suited for a health-related crisis, and thus they are generally poor destinations for an individual experiencing a mental health emergency. Indeed, the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Agency itself has stated that no individual should be detained in a correctional setting pending commitment.[37] Yet, there may be no reasonably available alternatives, especially in jurisdictions that are more rural. This can force officials to either not seek treatment or detain individuals longer in order to transport them to facilities that are far away.

The issue is therefore inseparable from that of capacity and related problems around insufficient resources. Colorado suggests, however, that although increased funding may be an especially difficult political issue, it is surmountable with the right coalition behind it. The last six states still using jails should therefore convene their own stakeholder groups to evaluate an appropriate path forward. While drawing on a marijuana tax fund, as Colorado did, is not an option for these jurisdictions, cost-conscious legislators in these states could, for example, incorporate into their analysis the cost-savings that would accrue from officer hours recovered and future interventions averted by the use of appropriate care in the first instance. Advancing pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies in this manner may entail some up-front costs, but in the long term, the budget impact may be more positive.

The civil liberties implications of emergency holds mean that any potential expansion of these authorities must also attempt to mitigate the risks of their misuse or overuse. Kansas provides an interesting example of one way in which to safeguard individual rights while advancing this critical crisis response strategy. The Kansas bill gained the support necessary to become law in part because of a compromise that paired a longer period of detention—72 instead of 24 hours—with regular medical evaluations at four, 23 and 48 hours to determine whether an individual should be released.[38] Regardless of which aspect of emergency holds are addressed, policymakers should consider this kind of coupling of new authorities with additional protections; this will ensure that pre-arrest diversion is not just more popular, but fairer and more effective, as well.

Finally, states without a strong role for medical and behavioral health personnel during the initiation phase of these holds should consider how to include them. Whether an emergency hold is appropriate is ultimately a mental health question, which many members of law enforcement may not have adequate training to answer correctly and with consistency. Yet, in 17 states, law enforcement officers have sole discretion to initiate holds and in two of these, the law actually requires that officers take all eligible individuals into custody. This appears to be a recipe for ill-conceived holds and missed opportunities. At the same time, it may well be an unnecessary restriction, as research suggests that emergency medical services personnel can effectively screen patients in the field for potential diversion to psychiatric emergency services.[39] Although the direct, on-scene participation of behavioral health professionals should likely be an ultimate goal for jurisdictions, using technology to connect law enforcement officers with these individuals for live consultations could serve as a valuable interim step.

Protective Custody Statutes

TABLE 3: CHARACTERISTICS OF PROTECTIVE CUSTODY STATUTES

Who can initiate?	Law enforcement officers and, in some jurisdictions, certain other first responders or behavioral health personnel.
Substances Covered	Officials can initiate protective custody for individuals impaired or incapacitated by alcohol and, in some jurisdictions, other drugs.
Discretion of Officials	A jurisdiction may require that officials take all qualifying individuals into custody, it may be entirely up to the discretion of those officials, or it may condition the availability of discretion on whether the individual in question is impaired or incapacitated.
Eligible Destinations	Common eligible destinations include jails and police stations, hospital emergency rooms, behavioral health facilities and other crisis centers.
Duration	Protective custody can last anywhere from eight hours to five days, depending on the jurisdiction; generally, a person must also be released as soon as they are no longer impaired or incapacitated.
Criminal Charges	In most jurisdictions, no criminal charges related to the individual's intoxication are possible if the individual is placed in protective custody, however, a handful of jurisdictions still allow an individual in protective custody to be criminally charged.

One of the more common emergencies that law enforcement officers and other first responders encounter is an individual who is intoxicated or otherwise impaired by the use of substances. Officials faced with this scenario generally feel a strong imperative to act, given the propensity of these individuals to harm themselves or others, or for others to take advantage of them. Historically, the official response to such an individual in need was an arrest, a stint in jail and a possible misdemeanor conviction. In two states, this remains the only approach recognized at the state level, while another seven only supplement this option by allowing officials to begin a long-term, court-sanctioned involuntary commitment for substance abuse treatment. Neither response, however, is particularly well designed to deal with an acute substance use crisis. In fact, criminal charges can distract from and exacerbate health issues, while a potentially months-long commitment may be inappropriate for many individuals who only need temporary assistance.

In the remaining forty-one states and the District of Columbia, law enforcement officers have an alternative option available aimed specifically at acute crises: protective custody. Although the details of the authorizing statutes vary considerably, these laws generally authorize law enforcement officers and, in some places, other first responders to place an individual temporarily in a form of civil custody. Unlike involuntary commitment statutes, chronic substance abuse or dependence is not required. Instead, officials invoke these laws in response to a specific instance of intoxication, impairment or incapacitation due to substance use. Even though many offer potential pathways to further treatment, the overriding objective is to ensure that the individual is safe and attended to medically in the short term, if necessary. Depending on the jurisdiction, this temporary custody can last anywhere from eight hours to five days.[40]

Whether an official actually utilizes protective custody may depend, in part, on the level of discretion afforded to them. The elimination of official discretion for protective custody can push toward its increased use, though at the risk of requiring its use in situations for which an alternative pre-arrest diversion or crisis response strategy may be more appropriate. Six jurisdictions require that authorized officials utilize protective custody for all qualifying individuals, another six require its use for incapacitated individuals, but allow officers discretion in cases involving simple impairment. Thirty grant these officials complete discretion to determine whether to use it.

Thirty-five states further accentuate the health focus of protective custody by explicitly stating that it does not qualify as an arrest or serve to commence criminal process. In the remaining seven jurisdictions, criminal charges relating to public intoxication may still be possible despite the use of protective custody. Usually, however, these statutes still encourage officers to either use protective custody as a substitute for criminal process or at least to downgrade an arrest to a citation. The decriminalization of protective custody can decrease the officer time required to utilize the procedure, thereby incentivizing its use as part of a pre-arrest diversion and crisis response scheme.

The degree to which states have leaned into the idea of protective custody as primarily a public health tool is reflected in their treatment of who can initiate the procedure. All jurisdictions with a protective custody law authorize law enforcement officers to begin protective custody procedures. Only 10 extend this authority to other first responders which, in various jurisdictions, includes positions such as members of the emergency patrol, health officers and designated crisis responders. Given that research suggests non-law enforcement first responders can effectively triage intoxicated individuals,[41] failing to empower these personnel may represent an unnecessary restriction on the reach and utility of pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies.

The number and type of available custody locations can similarly affect the use and efficacy of protective custody. Nineteen jurisdictions allow an individual to be held in a jail or police station as a location of first resort; fourteen do so only after other health or crisis facilities have been determined to be unavailable. In the remaining 23, officials are required instead to take individuals to an assortment of non-correctional facilities, including detoxification centers, hospitals and other treatment facilities. While the availability of any facility will govern whether protective custody is possible at all, the existence of an appropriate facility may determine its usefulness. For example, a sobering center may offer referral to services, which can disrupt the cycle of substance abuse in a way not generally possible at a jail or emergency room.[42]

One of the more critical distinctions between protective custody statutes is their treatment of non-alcoholic intoxicating substances. All 41 protective custody statutes cover alcohol intoxication, yet only 27 open the door to other drugs. Most of these jurisdictions simply extend the same alcohol-related procedure to other drugs, but a handful have different procedures and protections for other substances, which include elements such as shorter periods of detention or the possibility of criminal charges. Although how protective custody procedures are adapted to non-alcoholic substances may prove important, jurisdictions that create some pathway for doing so will be able to use noncriminal responses to engage with a wider range of individuals in crisis.

A couple of other statutory quirks stand out as interesting approaches to protective custody, which could merit further examination by more jurisdictions. Minnesota, for example, attempts to demonstrate the noncriminal nature of protective custody even further through language stating that police, "as far as is practicable," should not wear a uniform or use a marked police car when transporting an individual under protective custody. In a handful of states, including North Carolina and Texas, officials can take an individual in protective custody to that person's home or place them under the supervision of another adult. Both approaches facilitate the wider use of protective custody by reducing the disruption that it causes. The latter method could be especially helpful for more marginal cases in which a person may not be safe on their own, yet transport to a hospital or other treatment facility may not be appropriate either.

Legislative Action—Long a backdrop to policing efforts, protective custody procedures have captured legislative attention in recent years in large part due to the ongoing opioid crisis. States have increasingly considered whether and how to apply protective custody tools to individuals who are impaired or incapacitated by non-alcoholic drugs. The extension of this tool to drugs, however, has proven more complicated than for alcohol. Whereas alcohol use is itself legal (at least without additional factors), the same is generally not true for many other drugs. Likewise, the necessity for and content of follow-up treatment for a potential substance use disorder can vary based on the substance or substances in question. As a result, states have considered two possible models to develop temporary civil detention for drugs: the relatively straightforward adaptation of existing procedures for alcohol and the extension of involuntary emergency mental health holds.

For the most part, those states embarking on the first of these approaches – looking to alcohol protective custody for guidance – have found broad, bipartisan support for the endeavor. In Massachusetts, for example, a Democratic legislature worked with a Republican governor to pass an extension in 2016 with overwhelming support on both sides of the aisle. Likewise, in Wisconsin, an updated protective custody law sailed through the Republican-controlled legislature with unanimous approval in 2017.

Many outside groups have been equally enthusiastic about expanding alcohol-based protective custody procedures to include other drugs. In Massachusetts, the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association was one of the leading organizations rallying behind the law, with individual police chiefs speaking in its favor.[43] Wisconsin similarly saw lobbying in favor of its bill by groups such as the City of Milwaukee and the Wisconsin Medical Society.[44]

The handful of interested parties that have expressed reservations about these bills generally have not allowed their concerns to rise to the level of outright opposition. In Massachusetts, for example, the Speaker of the House supported the new protective custody law, but also stated concerns that the law could overtax limited treatment capacity.[45] In Wisconsin, a couple of outside groups had similar hesitations. The Wisconsin Association for Marriage and Family Therapy and Mental Health America of Wisconsin both raised fears about treatment funding and the latter added that the expansion of outpatient service options would be more desirable than commitment.

In addition to the capacity issue, the role of treatment has served as the primary substantive point of disagreement in states considering whether to expand their protective custody law. In Massachusetts, this manifested as a veto of the original text of the protective custody bill over language that permitted officials to take the incapacitated individual to that person's residence.[46] Despite this section mirroring the procedure for alcohol incapacitation, with the notable difference that the police station had been removed as a possible destination, the governor pushed back against the inclusion of destinations without the capacity for medical treatment. He stated that with such language, the bill did "not reflect the urgency of the health risks associated with incapacitation resulting from a controlled substance or toxic vapor."[47] He ultimately only signed the bill after the legislature amended it to limit acceptable transport locations to those able to provide medical treatment.[48]

The utilization of the emergency mental health hold as the model for drug-related protective custody has proven significantly more controversial than the extension of the procedures governing individuals incapacitated by alcohol. In 2015, the Massachusetts governor floated the idea of permitting physicians, or police officers in the alternative, to authorize the detention and involuntary treatment of an individual experiencing a substance abuse crisis for up to 72 hours. The Speaker of the House and members of the medical community quickly rebuffed this proposal because of concerns about the due process implications and effectiveness of forced treatment.[49] The provision was eliminated from the 2016 bill and ultimately downgraded in 2018 from a new section of law to the subject of study by a special committee after Democrats in the legislature defeated unanimous, albeit limited, Republican support of the measure.

Similar setbacks initially beset legislators pushing for these kinds of changes in Washington State. As in Massachusetts, the issue became a partisan one, albeit with the roles reversed—Democrats led the charge with a portion of Republicans resisting.[50] Although the bill passed the House in 2015, budget concerns caused it to falter in the Senate.[51] Renewed efforts the following year proved more successful, and the measure became law, overcoming reduced Republican opposition.

A new debate in Washington State in 2019 focused on whether to extend the detention period from 72 hours to five days; whether to allow for the involuntary administration of medication similarly divided the policy community.[52] This proposal quickly drew opposition from Disability Rights Washington and the state public defenders' group, which stated that the 2016 law already held individuals for long periods and that these individuals should "see a judge in a timely manner."[53] On the other hand, two national groups, the National Alliance on Mental Illness and the Treatment Advocacy Center, lent their support for the measure, citing the treatment benefits of holding patients for longer periods of time.[54] Notably, the involvement of these two national groups represents some of the only national attention paid to legislation relating to protective custody procedures.

Recommendations—More research is necessary to parse out which protective custody procedures are most desirable, yet a handful of recommendations are already actionable. The first is the inclusion of all drugs, not just alcohol, within the ambit of protective custody laws. It is somewhat arbitrary and counterproductive to pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies to have protective custody apply to only one potential intoxicant rather than the dozens of others that regularly result in health emergencies—especially when multiple substances may be at the root of a given crisis. If jurisdictions are serious about protective custody serving as a noncriminal public health response, then the source of impairment should not serve as a bar to protective custody, even if it is an otherwise illicit one. Further, a debate about the best way to use protective custody to address drugs is one likely to find legislative enthusiasm as long as the opioid crisis remains front and center.

Another area of potential statutory improvement, just as pressing but practically more difficult, is the elimination of jails and other correctional institutions as possible detention sites whenever feasible. An individual in protective custody is suffering from a health crisis, not a criminal one; many jurisdictions already implicitly acknowledge this fact through statutory disclaimers about how protective custody does not qualify as an arrest. Placing those same individuals alongside alleged criminals is therefore illogical. It is also potentially harmful, given that most jail facilities and police stations are not well equipped to provide adequate medical treatment to an individual in crisis. Taking individuals to facilities that are more appropriate can reduce the odds that crisis responders will simply have to pick up the same individual repeatedly in quick succession.

Wider reforms in this regard are, of course, heavily dependent upon resources and raise the question: if not jail, then where? As such, any movement in this direction would likely require an accompanying increase in treatment capacity. This necessitates additional funding, which is why this likely amounts to a more difficult political task. For this reason, as an interim measure, jurisdictions could consider restricting the use of jails or other correctional locations to only those with medical facilities and capabilities that meet certain minimum standards.

Citation Authority

TABLE 4: CHARACTERISTICS OF CITATION AUTHORITY

Eligible Offenses	Citation eligible offenses vary considerably by jurisdiction. Most permit citations for at least some misdemeanors, though a couple limit this to traffic violations, while others include some felonies or even all offenses subject to warrantless arrest.
Exclusionary Conditions	Jurisdictions often include a list of exclusionary conditions that make an offense ineligible for a citation or remove the presumption one. This can include conditions such as a lack of sufficient identification, prior criminal history and a risk of continued criminal conduct.
Discretion of Officials	Law enforcement officers usually have the discretion to determine whether to cite, though some jurisdictions may make citations mandatory, particularly for traffic or especially low-level offenses.

While serious felonies may dominate many of the headlines, misdemeanors prevail in the arrest and court statistics.[55] At the same time, the moral opprobrium associated with many of these offenses—such as disturbing the peace, drug possession or shoplifting—is generally quite low, as is the risk to the public presented by the offender. Put simply, an arrest may be a disproportionate and unnecessary act that takes up a lot of officer time. This recognition has propelled every jurisdiction in the nation to permit citations in lieu of arrests in certain instances.[56]

The breadth of this citation authority and the discretion of officers to issue these citations, however, is quite varied. Although all but two states permit the issuance of citations for at least some non-traffic misdemeanors, only 12 states extend this citation authority to include at least one felony offense. The majority of jurisdictions—28 to be exact—grant officers the discretion whether to utilize citations in lieu of arrest in all instances, while 14 condition it on the type of offense at issue, and nine require citations for all eligible offenses.

While the expansion of eligible offenses and removal of officer discretion may both appear to favor the increased use of pre-arrest diversion, the actual impact of such moves may not be so straightforward. For example, an officer may believe that a particular situation does not merit a citation and, if one is required for low-level charges, may simply seek an enhanced charge. Certain procedural safety valves, which allow for arrest in limited circumstances otherwise requiring a citation, might thus be necessary for officer buy-in and successful implementation of expanded citation authority.

Many jurisdictions have sought to make their citation authority more nuanced and effective in this manner through exclusionary conditions that prohibit or discourage the use of citations in certain situations. Most places limit citation authority through blanket bars on certain subcategories of otherwise eligible offenses; usually this manifests as a disqualification of domestic violence-related offenses and potentially other types of assaultive behavior. Other conditions require an officer to make a judgment about the defendant rather than the conduct at issue. These include factors such as the prior issuance of a citation or a criminal record more generally, lack of identification, the individual's intoxication, the individual's ties to the jurisdiction, the risk that the offensive conduct would continue and the cooperativeness of the individual. Conditions that prohibit the issuance of a citation, rather than simply removing the presumption that one will issue, may impede pre-arrest diversion efforts by precluding this valuable deescalated criminal response. Likewise, conditions that are potentially applicable to too many individuals may quickly undercut the value of the citation authority itself.

While citation authority largely boils down to where a jurisdiction's law falls on the spectrum of restrained or expansive authority, a few statutory outliers provide a little more complexity, as well as additional potential benefits. One such approach is to provide for additional layers of review in order to reduce further the odds that a citation will lead to formal criminal proceedings. In California, this means that a prosecutor must file additional paperwork post-citation or the case never makes it to the docket,[57] while in Arkansas, police supervisors and prosecutors have the authority to override an arrest and issue a citation instead.[58] In addition, although a large number of states allow individuals to pay fines by mail in response to citations, this generally requires a guilty plea as well. In the District of Columbia, however, the "post-and-forfeit" procedure allows the record to remain clear in these instances.[59] Finally, Vermont and Nebraska reduce the number of warrants issued by granting prosecutors and, in the case of Nebraska, judges the authority to utilize citations instead of arrest warrants.

Legislative Action—In recent years, citation authority within law enforcement has been a relatively popular criminal justice reform topic. In particular, legislation has sought to either increase the types of eligible offenses or to reduce the breadth of exclusionary conditions. Support for these measures has often been widespread, but their advancement has not always represented a priority. Expanded citation authority has been included, relatively unremarkably, into more comprehensive criminal justice overhauls enacted into law, while standalone legislation has, at times, failed to advance, even without vocal opposition. The legislative struggle thus tends to be one of prioritization, not support.

As with protective custody and emergency hold legislation, it is hard to define partisan positions on citation authority. Much of the legislative action has occurred in conservative states under the leadership of Republican legislators. Nevertheless, Democrats have joined in these efforts in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and Alaska, ensuring bipartisan endeavors that could command overwhelming support across party lines. However, the developments have not all occurred in conservative locations. In 2013, Maryland Democrats led a successful bipartisan push to expand citation authority in their state.[60]

The advocacy community has been similarly united behind expansion efforts, often bringing together otherwise strange bedfellows. Both the American Civil Liberties Union[61] and Americans for Prosperity,[62] for example, endorsed Tennessee's 2019 downgrading of a couple of exclusionary conditions. Likewise, that bill earned the support of nonpartisan groups, including the Nashville Area Chamber of Commerce and the Tennessee Association of Goodwills.[63] In both Tennessee[64] and Alabama, law enforcement officers publicly supported bills to increase the use of citations.

This widespread support has not always translated into legislative success, however, as bills addressing citation authority often struggle to find legislative momentum on their own. Thus, while Georgia and Alaska[65] were able to pass citation authority reforms as part of comprehensive criminal justice bills in 2018 and 2016 respectively, Tennessee's 2019 update of its citation statute represents the rare recent success of a more limited bill.[66] More frequently, bills solely concerned with citation authority have stalled. In the recent 2018 legislative sessions, for example, citation legislation was introduced but never advanced in Kentucky[67] and Maryland,[68] and an effort in Alabama managed to pass the Senate unanimously before quietly receiving dust in the House.[69]

Although a handful of bills have made targeted restrictions to citation authority—usually relating to crimes of domestic violence—the majority attempt to increase its use. Most do so by expanding the list of eligible offenses by including additional categories—such as Alaska allowing citations for class C felonies[70] or Georgia enumerating a few additional eligible misdemeanors.[71] A couple of states, however, have taken a slightly different tack. Tennessee downgraded two exclusionary conditions—whether there was a reasonable likelihood the individual would appear in court and whether the prosecution of an offense might be jeopardized—that were hampering the ability of officers to use the citation authority they otherwise possessed effectively.[72] Instead of prohibiting citations in these instances, the law affords them the discretion to cite or arrest. In 2018, Florida likewise enacted a law to encourage jurisdictions to create programs that use the citation authority already available under current law.[73]

Recommendations—The recent hurdles to citation authority legislation appear to be more related to procedure or passion than they do policy. As such, one of the first recommendations for supportive lawmakers is to consider whether a standalone piece of legislation is the best vehicle for statutory changes. To the extent there is a wider criminal justice package under consideration, this may represent the best placement for new citation authorities. Especially if this is not possible, legislators would do well to harness the energy and advocacy of outside groups, such as in Tennessee, to support, lobby and otherwise raise the profile of the issue.

Although the most straightforward method of expanding citation authority may simply be to add to the list of citable offenses, legislators should also look at ways to make existing authorities more useful. In particular, jurisdictions should consider how exclusionary conditions might prove to be unintended and unnecessary barriers to implementation. For instance, although a prior failure to appear or other entry on a criminal history may serve as an indicator of that individual's likelihood of appearing in court, it may not always be the best one. Prohibiting the use of a citation and thereby curtailing an officer's judgment that the individual is otherwise appropriate for a citation in some of these instances can be costly and counterproductive.

Similarly, legislators should view citation authority as a possible complement to other pre-arrest diversion statutory authorities. For example, while in the abstract a bar to citations in cases involving an intoxicated individual may make sense—for example, in cases wherein an arrest prevents the individual from befalling harm while unattended—it is not necessary in places with a robust protective custody statute. Likewise, a prohibition on the citation and release of an individual who presents a danger to themselves or others is, on its face, logical. Yet, if that requires the arrest and jailing of an individual experiencing a mental health crisis, the condition becomes counterproductive. Ensuring that each of these different pre-arrest diversion authorities works together seamlessly should thus be a priority for jurisdictions. In many instances, altering exclusionary conditions from serving as mandatory bars to citations to mere potential bars to them—thereby preserving officer discretion—may be enough to achieve this goal.

Substance Abuse Good Samaritan Laws

TABLE 5: CHARACTERISTICS OF SUBSTANCE ABUSE GOOD SAMARITAN LAWS

Eligible Offenses	Immunity covers the use or possession of illegal substances and, in some jurisdictions, the possession of drug paraphernalia. It may also cover violations of community supervision.
When Immunity Commences	Depending on the jurisdiction, immunity may prevent an arrest, booking, the issuance of criminal charges or the conviction of an individual for a covered offense.
Immunity for the Individual Experiencing the Overdose	The individual experiencing an overdose may also be immune from prosecution. Depending on the jurisdiction, they may qualify if they were themselves the Good Samaritan caller, were the subject of a Good Samaritan call or irrespective of whether any call was placed at all.
Additional Conditions	Some jurisdictions place additional conditions on whether an individual can receive immunity, such as limiting it to the first caller or requiring cooperation with first responders.

A drug overdose represents an all-too-common crisis for crisis responders, as well as an especially dangerous one requiring a prompt response. Of course, a crisis response requires responders to know that there is an individual in crisis. Yet, the presence of illegal substances or paraphernalia can make the decision to call for help a complicated one in an overdose situation. For example, one study of substance users in Baltimore, Maryland found that only 23 percent called for an ambulance during the last overdose they witnessed, in large part due to a fear of police involvement.[74] Forty-seven states and the District of Columbia have responded to this fear by enacting a Good Samaritan law.

These laws provide some measure of immunity from criminal process as an incentive to call for help for an individual experiencing an overdose. Studies have suggested that these laws have been effective in this initial mission, increasing the likelihood that an individual who was aware of the law would call for assistance,[75] as well as the rate at which individuals who experience an overdose receive emergency room care.[76] Although research has not generally been able to show any significant relationship with overdose deaths,[77] this kind of outcome measurement fails to account for the incredible variation between these laws. Differences in who they cover, for which offenses and under which circumstances likely have a strong bearing on how individuals utilize these laws and what their overall effect is.

One of the more fundamental differences between Good Samaritan laws is which types of criminal offenses are covered. Although all laws apply some level of protection to the possession or use of a controlled substance, only 35 extend these protections to the possession of drug paraphernalia. Given the likelihood that paraphernalia will be present at the scene of an overdose, this disparity may undercut a Good Samaritan law. Likewise, while the dividing line between mere possession and possession with the intent to distribute may be a fine one for many substance users, the latter category of crimes is generally not included within the auspices of Good Samaritan laws. The notable exceptions are Vermont, which covers all potential violations of its chapter on controlled substances, and New York, which extends coverage to distribution of small quantities of marijuana. Finally, 23 states protect individuals from probation, parole or pretrial supervision violations. Fear of arrest on these grounds may similarly deter erstwhile Good Samaritans.

The nature of the immunity itself—where on the continuum of criminal process it arises—can likewise alter the options available at the scene of an overdose. Only immunity from arrest truly forecloses any criminal response on-scene, thereby freeing law enforcement to consider alternative interventions. In 27 jurisdictions, this is the law. In the other 21, however, immunity only prevents a charge from issuing, a prosecution from proceeding or a conviction from entering, meaning that an individual could still be arrested, booked and potentially compelled to attend a court date.

Jurisdictions have likewise diverged on which parties can qualify for Good Samaritan immunity. In particular, while all laws specify immunity for individuals who initiate assistance for another individual who is experiencing an overdose, the same is not true for that individual requiring assistance. In 15 jurisdictions, individuals experiencing an overdose only receive Good Samaritan protections if they placed the call for assistance. Another 18 grant them immunity as the subject of a call for assistance. Thirteen jurisdictions go further, however, with the individual experiencing an overdose receiving immunity by virtue of the overdose and need for medical attention itself, regardless of whether or not anyone even made a Good Samaritan call. Finally, Alabama and Indiana's statutes do not appear to contemplate protections for the individual experiencing the overdose at all.

In some jurisdictions, making a call for help or being the subject of one is not enough, on its own, to garner protection from criminal liability. Fifteen states require individuals to remain on-scene, 12 require some level of cooperation with law enforcement or medical authorities and four provide immunity only to the first person who calls for assistance. In addition, in Ohio and Wisconsin, individuals must enter substance abuse treatment to ensure immunity. Intended to increase the odds of a successful medical intervention, the actual impact of these conditions is less clear given that they may deter potential callers or otherwise alter the relationship between responders and substance users.

Two other statutory conditions appear especially unhelpful to diversionary efforts and Good Samaritan laws. The first restricts immunity to a onetime offer, a restriction embraced by four states. Likely stemming from a fear that a Good Samaritan law will encourage greater drug use, this requirement neglects research suggesting that these laws do not encourage drug use,[78] as well as the realities of substance abuse in which an individual may experience multiple relapses and overdoses on the road to recovery. The second problematic restriction limits Good Samaritan protections to situations in which the Good Samaritan used naloxone. This provision—only present in Indiana—essentially merges Good Samaritan call protections with those meant to facilitate the wider use of naloxone, but does so in a manner that undermines both.

Legislative Action—Since New Mexico enacted the first Good Samaritan law in 2007, the level of legislative action on the subject across the United States has been extraordinary. In little over a decade, forty-seven states and the District of Columbia have enacted a law, while the remaining three states have vigorously debated it. This represents a level of legislative attention far exceeding the other policy areas in this paper and, indeed, a good many other policy areas as well. The near universal adoption of these laws in so short a period, however, should not be confused with unanimity of support. An ardent resistance in many states has managed to delay or obstruct the passage of Good Samaritan laws or otherwise water them down.

The heart of this opposition movement has been a nucleus of conservative politicians who continue to espouse beliefs reminiscent of the tough-on-crime mantras and policies of prior decades. In Maine, for example, Republican Governor Paul LePage vetoed a Good Samaritan bill in 2013 and 2017,[79] stating that he believed it would encourage drug use. It was only after he left office in 2019 that Maine managed to enact a Good Samaritan law.[80] Similarly, Republican Governor Greg Abbott has unilaterally held up Good Samaritan efforts in Texas, despite bipartisan legislative support for the measures.[81] In 2015, for example, he vetoed a bill because he did not believe it did enough to prevent misuse by habitual drug users and drug dealers.[82] Similar vetoes from Republican governors in California and New Jersey delayed implementation in those states.[83] Recalcitrant governors have not been the only source of political opposition, however. In Wyoming, for example, conservative legislators have balked at Good Samaritan bills, helping ensure it is one of the three states without a law on the books.[84]

The concerns of some members of the law enforcement and prosecutorial communities are instructive not only for the procedural hurdles that they can raise, but also for their potential influence on the legislative text itself. For example, to some members of law enforcement, the ability to arrest an individual who experiences an overdose is preferable to potentially allowing them to walk away without any required interventions.[85] These concerns may help explain why Ohio and Wisconsin require treatment in order to receive Good Samaritan protections. Likewise, the requirement that individuals cooperate with law enforcement may represent an accommodation of another law enforcement concern that Good Samaritan laws could interfere with the prosecution of drug dealers by removing cooperation incentives for low-level substance users.[86]

In Washington State, better education about the intent and details of the law proved sufficient to overcome law enforcement and prosecutorial skepticism. The Washington Association of Sheriffs and Police Chiefs as well as the Washington Association of Prosecuting Attorneys originally opposed a Good Samaritan bill, helping lead to its initial demise.[87] Advocates, however, met with representatives from these organizations and after discussions about the intent and details of the bill were able to convince the Washington Association of Sheriffs and Police Chiefs to reverse their opposition and the Washington Association of Prosecuting Attorneys to alter their stance to neutrality. The bill became law shortly thereafter.[88]

As the case of Washington State highlights, the push for Good Samaritan laws has been fueled in large part by the advocacy of a diverse set of organizations. At the forefront, the Drug Policy Alliance has helped educate policymakers about these statutes, with local chapters getting involved at the state legislative level.[89] Similarly, the ACLU and its state chapters have advocated on behalf of Good Samaritan legislation.[90] The American Medical Association, the National Association of Drug Diversion Investigators, the U.S. Conference of Mayors and the American Public Health Association have likewise given Good Samaritan laws their endorsement.[91]

Policymakers looking to tackle the opioid epidemic have also shown an increasing appetite for laws that allow the prosecution of an individual who distributed a fatal dose of drugs.[92] These drug-induced homicide laws have the potential to undermine Good Samaritan laws by deterring individuals from calling for assistance. As such, the steady uptick in legislative attention for these laws has caused consternation among Good Samaritan advocates.[93] Future legislative updates to Good Samaritan laws may therefore have to also deal with these provisions and the political pressures they represent.

Recommendations—The two major benefits of a Good Samaritan law are the incentive to call for assistance during a suspected overdose and the fact that they free law enforcement to pursue non-criminal responses to those they find at the scene of the overdose. The most straightforward statutory way to pursue both is to ensure that Good Samaritan protections commence at the very beginning of the criminal justice process, prior to an arrest. Waiting until after law enforcement have already arrested, booked and potentially even charged an individual with a crime is an inefficient means to the same end: no prosecution. This approach wastes officer time and can fray an already fragile relationship between law enforcement and substance abusers. Only removing the specter of criminal justice involvement entirely allows both officers and substance abusers to focus their attention and energies on non-criminal methods of addressing the substance abuse issue.

This rationale similarly motivates the need to expand the coverage of most Good Samaritan laws. Failing to provide immunity for drug paraphernalia possession or other low-level, substance abuse-related offenses undermines these laws, while providing little conceivable benefit. Likewise, providing immunity for new criminal charges but not for potential violations of pretrial release, probation or parole creates a legal distinction that is largely unwarranted. While individuals under community supervision rightly have smaller margin for error, the transgressions forgiven under a Good Samaritan law remain relatively minor and pale in comparison to the potential consequences of an untreated overdose. Including some form of community supervision protections within the ambit of a Good Samaritan law is therefore entirely in keeping with the law's overarching purpose of placing harm reduction before punishment. Although some kind of response by supervisory authorities may be necessary and appropriate—such as placing a notation in an individual's file—at a minimum, immunity would likely need to protect against arrest and potential revocation in order to be effective.

Good Samaritan laws should likewise extend broader protections to individuals who experience an overdose. Providing immunity to these individuals eliminates the possibility of a criminal response and frees first responders to consider other, more suitable actions. As a possible half measure for jurisdictions unwilling to entirely forego the leverage that a criminal charge can provide, policymakers might consider ensuring that citations are used in overdose situations. While this would not remove the specter of justice system involvement entirely, it would at least ensure that no arrest is made, and that the individual who experienced an overdose does not have to recover in a jail cell.

Although every Good Samaritan law on the books has room for improvement, in most jurisdictions, one of the most pressing needs does not even require an alteration to the statute: education. Very few states dedicate funding to their Good Samaritan laws, even if they require official agencies to educate relevant portions of the public about their protections.[94] This, of course, undermines the effectiveness of the laws. After all, if individuals are unaware of or confused about their immunity from prosecution, they will be no more likely to call for assistance. Equally important, law enforcement must be aware of the exact contours of the law so that there are no unnecessary arrests and officers can effectively integrate Good Samaritan protections into their post-overdose response plans.

Ambulance Transport Destination Rules

TABLE 6: CHARACTERISTICS OF AMBULANCE TRANSPORT DESTINATION RULES

Alternative Destinations	"Alternative destinations" is a term that collectively refers to a host of facilities other than a hospital emergency department. It includes behavioral health facilities, crisis centers, detoxification centers and other community-based resources.
Source of Authority	Jurisdictions split on whether to permit alternative destinations, either expressly permitting or prohibiting them in statute or delegating that decision to executive agencies or local authorities.
Community Paramedicine	Community paramedicine programs permit Emergency Medical Services and other first responders or medical personnel to provide community-based health services in an attempt to increase access and reduce strain on hospital emergency departments. Many of these programs include transport to alternative destinations.

Individuals experiencing an acute mental health or substance abuse crisis frequently find themselves in a hospital emergency department. Indeed, roughly one in eight emergency department visits involves a diagnosis relating to a mental health or substance abuse condition,[95] and data from 2007-2011 showed the number of these behavioral health visits increasing by 15 percent during that period.[96] Further, wait times for acute substance abuse or mental health patients can last days, and are often longer for these patients than others.[97] Long wait times can exacerbate the symptoms of an individual experiencing a behavioral health issue, and some hospitals that lack available beds have to refer patients to other facilities, increasing this wait time even further. The opportunity costs of these visits are significant. Specialized treatment centers—such as sobering centers and mental health facilities—are more likely to accept these patients, offer shorter wait times and are often better suited to deal with the individual's needs in the first place.

Yet, in 14 jurisdictions, statutes nevertheless require Emergency Medical Services (EMS) to transport all patients to a hospital emergency department and forego alternative destinations.[98] Some states do so in relatively explicit terms by referring exclusively to hospital emergency departments in statutes defining acceptable EMS practices or eligible transport destinations. For example, the relevant California statute reads: "Any local EMS agency may authorize an advanced life support program [...] for the delivery of emergency medical care [...] during transport to a general acute care hospital, during interfacility transfer, or while in the emergency department of a general acute care hospital."[99] Other states are more circumspect, often appearing to allow for alternative transport initially, but precluding it in other parts of the law. For instance, Massachusetts law includes treatment during transport to "appropriate healthcare facilities" in its definition of EMS, but the Department of Public Health rules define "appropriate healthcare facility"[100] as "an emergency department, either physically located within an acute care hospital licensed by the Department [...] or in a satellite emergency facility approved by the Department."[101]

Another 14 jurisdictions take the opposite approach to ambulance transport destination policy, allowing in statute for ambulance transport to facilities other than hospital emergency departments. Of these jurisdictions, three—Louisiana, Hawaii and Washington State—specifically refer to and allow for "alternative destinations" in statute. The remaining states permit alternative destinations through the definitions of certain terms—similar to the model for restricting destinations. For example, Illinois, allows alternative destinations by permissively defining "appropriate destinations" as a hospital or "other fixed location at which medical and health care services are performed."[102] Arizona is more explicit in its legal provisions and defines "health care institutions" as "every place, institution, building or agency [...] with medical services, nursing services, behavioral health services, health screening services, other health-related services, supervisory care services, personal care services [...] outdoor behavioral health care programs and hospice service agencies."[103]

The remaining 23 jurisdictions, however, do not resolve the destination issue directly in statute. Instead, they opt to delegate authority on authorized destinations to state and local EMS boards or lack any clear language on the issue at all. Of these jurisdictions, eight explicitly delegate authority to state and local bodies in charge of EMS procedures. Oregon, as an example, grants EMS medical directors some discretion to determine where to transport a patient.[104] The State Health Authority works with these medical directors and local EMS personnel to set medical control protocols, which establish guidelines for appropriate locations.[105] The remaining 13 jurisdictions do not have any guiding language permitting or forbidding transport to alternative destinations, or even text directing state and local boards to make this determination. As a result, the potential use of alternative destinations may be under the de facto control of each local EMS board or provider.

The emergence of community paramedicine programs has provided another means by which local EMS providers can transport patients to alternative destinations, potentially despite state policies otherwise to the contrary. The term "community paramedicine"[106] encompasses a variety of innovative healthcare delivery programs, all of which aim to reduce unnecessary emergency calls for populations that lack access to specialized treatment or primary care and, as a result, call emergency services.[107] At least 33 states now operate at least one community paramedicine program,[108] with alternative destination programs comprising half of these programs. These include states that do not allow alternative destinations according to state law. In California, for example, the state has accepted 20 community paramedicine pilot projects since 2014—including multiple alternative destination projects, notwithstanding the state's statutory mandate to transport patients to emergency departments.[109]

These community paramedicine programs thus further muddy the waters on the statewide legal status of alternative destinations. Indeed, one survey found that roughly 10 percent of directors operating community paramedicine programs were uncertain of their program's legal status.[110] At the same time, however, these programs may also provide local communities with one more potential avenue to pursue a crisis response strategy that includes alternative destinations.

Legislative Action—Policy fights over alternative destinations are relatively rare and meaningful public attention to them even more so. This is partly due to the niche nature of the policy, but also because alternative destination provisions are frequently included in broader bills authorizing community paramedicine programs rather than serving as standalone pieces of legislation. Not all community paramedicine bills include language on alternative destinations, but generally legislation addressing alternative destinations also involves community paramedicine.

California's active legislature and robust media markets help it provide the most illuminating example of the forces that can get involved when alternative destinations capture legislative attention. In 2018, three bills emerged that would have allowed for alternative destinations.[111] The first bill exclusively addressed them, while the subsequent two bills authorized them as part of a broader package of community paramedicine legislation. Each received some measure of bipartisan support, with Democratic legislators nearly unanimously backing all three, and a significant minority of Republicans supporting each. Yet, despite each successive bill moving progressively further through the legislative process, none managed to make it into law. In fact, the additions and compromises made to ensure legislative passage appear to have helped doom the whole endeavor; in the face of unanimous Democratic support, the Democratic governor nevertheless vetoed the final bill, citing a handful of provisions.[112]

The shifting opinion of outside organizations on these successive bills, which moved from widespread to more mixed support, may explain some of the governor's reluctance to sign the final bill. The first bill received the backing of EMS stakeholders, such as the California Hospital Association, the California Ambulance Association, the Emergency Medical Services Administrators' Association of California, the California District Attorneys' Association, as well as multiple cities, counties and associations of fire and police chiefs.[113] It likewise drew support from an ideologically diverse group of civil society groups, including the California Chamber of Commerce, the ACLU of California, the Depression and Bipolar Support Alliance, the National Sobering Collaborative and the National Alliance on Mental Illness. The bill was

107. These programs use specially trained community paramedics to conduct out-of-hospital visits with frequent 9-1-1 callers and use emergency medical services for non-emergency issues because they lack access to appropriate care. Examples of these programs include: following up with patients after ER visits to connect them with appropriate services in the community, treating patients or administering medication at in-home visits, as well as assessing emergency callers on scene for possible referral to an alternative destination. The term "mobile integrated healthcare" is used interchangeably with community paramedicine.

so popular it even garnered the support of the Los Angeles Times editorial board.[114]

The incorporation of additional provisions into the two later bills, however, helped to swell the ranks of opposition. The California Nurses Association and California chapter of the American College of Emergency Physicians led the opposition to all three bills, claiming it would be dangerous to allow EMTs to make triage and destination assessments on the scene.[115] Even a handful of supporters of the first bill, including local jurisdictions, EMS groups and the California Hospital Association, joined the opposition for the two later bills.[116] These groups criticized a right-of-first-refusal provision for unfairly privileging public entities over private ones—such as private ambulance companies that service 71 percent of community paramedicine patients statewide[117]—and saw a state-level oversight committee as an unnecessary layer of review that would inhibit innovation. Additional opposition centered on the firefighter groups' attempt to gain additional seats on the state's EMS Commission, as well as the proposed requirement that alternative destinations be designated as federally qualified health centers, which one article claimed would be "cost-prohibitive."[118]

Successful legislation in Washington State and Louisiana also received bipartisan political support, though dramatically less media attention. In 2015, the Washington State legislature overwhelmingly passed a bill that authorized alternative destinations and Medicaid reimbursement for these transports; the measure received unanimous support in the House and only two votes in opposition by Republicans in the Senate.[119] In 2018, a Louisiana bill with similar provisions passed the Senate with only one vote against it and the House with over a two-thirds majority.[120] In a reversal of the California and Washington State political experiences, however, a Republican sponsored the measure in Louisiana and the majority of the opposition came from Democrats. Unlike in California, neither bill gained significant media coverage,[121] perhaps due to their seemingly technical and bipartisan nature.

Although the availability of alternative destinations has occasionally occupied legislative focus directly, community paramedicine consistently claims the lion's share of legislative attention. Many of the states where community paramedicine programs exist have passed specific authorizing legislation, while in others, such as Wyoming, EMS groups have worked with executive branch agencies to formulate rules for these programs.[122] States that have passed community paramedicine laws include reliably conservative ones such as Idaho and Tennessee,[123] as well as more liberal ones such as Colorado and Maine.[124] While not all of these programs involve alternative destinations, this trend demonstrates a widespread amenability to experimenting with innovative EMS models. Notably, the majority of these programs have only been implemented in the past few years,[125] which suggests a growing interest.

Recently, the federal government has also taken action that signals support for alternative destination transport. In 2019, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) announced the rollout of its Emergency Triage, Treat and Transport (ET3) Model.[126] This model will allow states to submit applications for its programs to receive reimbursement through Medicare for alternative destinations. The program is still in its infancy, but the Director of CMS' Innovation Center made a promising statement when he described his reaction to discovering Medicare has only reimbursed trips to hospital emergency departments: "I thought that was a joke. I had to verify it multiple times [...] What a ridiculous incentive."[127]

Recommendations—Alternative destinations will not always be the appropriate destination—often that will remain a hospital emergency room—but especially for situations involving simpler cases and non-medically emergent issues, they can represent a potentially valuable tool for crisis responders. In particular, policies that prohibit or discourage alternative destination transport by EMS can inhibit pre-arrest diversion and undercut crisis response by forcing law enforcement to serve as the only possible transporters to these alternative destinations. If law enforcement is unable or unwilling to take the time to transport an individual to an alternative destination, the only remaining options may be transport to an emergency department or a police station. In either instance, the effectiveness of the crisis response may suffer. As such, jurisdictions should adopt policies that allow for the considered and appropriate use of alternative destination transport by EMS.[128]

Although prescriptive language is the most straightforward way for policymakers to expand the availability of alternative destinations, additional clarity is also important. As this survey shows, a failure to address destinations clearly—or at all—in statute, as well as a delegation of the issue to local authorities, can leave the legal status of alternative destinations unclear. For example, one study that interviewed EMS directors and representatives in all fifty states on their perceptions of their legal prerogatives found only 40 percent concordance between the researchers' findings on EMS boards' ability to expand alternative destinations and what EMS representatives believed was permissible.[129] The remedy to this problem is twofold: legislators should work to ensure the law directly and clearly permits alternative destinations, and authorities should work to resolve ambiguities in current law and educate relevant stakeholders about the potential availability of alternative destinations.

Finally, ensuring that alternative destinations are not only legally permissible but also actually used requires addressing the collateral issue of costs. Ambulance providers are unlikely to utilize alternative destinations—at least with any degree of frequency—unless they receive reimbursement for the trip.[130] Yet, while alternative destination programs could result in significant healthcare cost reductions, these programs face their own set of financial obstacles. In many states, ambulances are reimbursed through specific grants from the state set aside for the purpose of keeping these programs afloat, but that model may not be scalable.[131] Likewise, many programs involving alternative destinations run through earmarked grants from the state for pilot programs available to select localities, and only a handful of states, such as Minnesota and Georgia, have extended Medicaid reimbursement. Although there are many ways in which jurisdictions could resolve these cost concerns, expanding reimbursement through federal programs may be an especially effective means of addressing the cost issue. Medicaid remains the most common payer type of all emergency department visits,[132] and private insurers often follow the lead of Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement policies.

CONCLUSION

For the five policies examined in this paper, there is no 'typical' statute. Each area exhibits a stunning variety of statutory permutations across a handful of key legislative lines. A protective custody procedure, for example, in one state may look wildly different from that of a neighboring one, and the complete package of protective custody, emergency holds, citation authority, Good Samaritan laws and ambulance regulations can result in a pre-arrest diversion and crisis response landscape that is fundamentally and critically different. At the same time, continued legislative attention in recent years that generally attempts to expand the reach of these policies means that they are only more likely to affect future pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies.

The depth of relevant research has generally not matched the complexity or popularity of these policy areas. For instance, while the mental health community has largely rallied behind the idea that jail is no place for the mentally ill, there is no similar consensus or research base on how to structure an emergency hold to facilitate productive outcomes. Likewise, research on Good Samaritan laws is relatively robust compared to some of the other policy areas, yet it still generally does not distinguish between—let alone investigate—the various versions of these laws. Thus, most of the assumptions and logical arguments about these policy areas remain untested.

128. These policies may also need to include some form of liability protection to ensure that the transport of an individual to an alternative destination that is reasonable under the circumstances, but ultimately results in complications, does not subject the first responder in question to undue legal action, which could have the further effect of disincentivizing future alternative destination use.

As such, future research should attempt to parse out the relative strengths of some of the more prevalent and compelling statutory configurations. This would have a twofold impact on pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies. In the short run, programs could take advantage of whatever flexibility exists in current law to accentuate the stronger aspects of these policies and educate law enforcement and other first responders on available legal authorities and best practices. With time, legislators could redesign the legal regimes themselves to reflect the research better.

Pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies are inherently local in nature. Yet, as this paper shows, state policymakers often get to dictate which tools are available to these programs and can influence the conditions under which they operate. This means that individuals seeking to maximize the potential of pre-arrest diversion and crisis response strategies cannot ignore developments at the state level. Further, the surveys within this study shatter any notion of any of these policy areas as some sort of monolith. Incredible variation occurs across each, and the survey contained herein should therefore be viewed as a map of areas of improvement as well as a source of inspiration. No state may have yet figured out how to create the most conducive environment possible for pre-arrest diversion and crisis response, but in their divergent approaches they present a wealth of promising options.

Good afternoon,

Did you know that 1 in 3 seniors dies with Alzheimer's or another dementia? There are more than 6 millions Americans living with the disease and, in 2020, 194,000 Missourians provided 292,000,000 hours of unpaid care for individuals with dementia. The Alzheimer's Association is here to help support all of those who are impacted by this disease... but we need your help.

Please help us raise awareness about the free services we provide by sharing information below with your constituents.

Understanding Alzheimer's and Dementia

Join us on March 28th at 2 PM for Understanding Alzheimer's and Dementia, a program presented by the Alzheimer's Association Greater Missouri Chapter that explores the relationship between Alzheimer's disease and dementia. This virtual program will be hosted through Zoom. We are thrilled to provide this free educational program and host Dr. Gayla Jackson, Dr. Joy Balls-Berry, and Dr. Lenise Cummings-Vaughn in a panel/Q&A discussion. The program is free, but registration is required here or by phone at 800-272-3900.

10 Warning Signs of Alzhimer's

Join us on March 29th at 10 AM as the Alzheimer's Association Greater Missouri Chapter presents the 10 Warning Signs! Learn how to recognize common signs of the disease; how to approach someone about memory concerns; the importance of early detection and benefits of a diagnosis; possible tests and assessments for the diagnostic process, and Alzheimer's Association resources. This virtual program will be hosted through Zoom. To register, click here.

Would you be willing to post this to your social pages or include in your newsletters to help spread the word? I have attached images that can be used for social media to this email. Thank you so much for your continued support and for helping to connect persons in need with our services!

Sincerely,

Jerry Dowell
Vice President of Public Policy
Alzheimer's Association Greater Missouri

Understanding Alzheimer's and Dementia

The Alzheimer's Association® has created an education program covering the basics of Alzheimer's and dementia to provide a general overview for people who are facing a diagnosis as well as those who wish to be informed.

The free one-hour Understanding Alzheimer's and Dementia program:

- Explores the relationship between Alzheimer's disease and dementia.
- Examines what happens in a brain affected by Alzheimer's.
- Details the risk factors for and three general stages of the disease.
- Identifies FDA-approved treatments available to treat some symptoms.
- Looks ahead to what's on the horizon for Alzheimer's research.
- Offers helpful Alzheimer's Association resources.

The Alzheimer's Association is thrilled to provide this free educational program and host Dr. Gayla Jackson, Dr. Joy Balls-Berry, and Dr. Lenise Cummings-Vaughn in a panel/Q&A discussion. The program will be held via Zoom on March 28th at 2 PM. For more information, contact the Alzheimer's Association at 800.272.3900 or click here to register.

SUMMARY OF BILLS TO BE HEARD BY

COMMITTEE: Rules - Administrative Oversight (H)
DATE: 3/30/2021
TIME: 4:00 PM or upon adjournment
HEARING ROOM: 4

HCS HBs 420 & 1066 -- DISCRIMINATORY PRACTICES

SPONSOR: Proudie

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Special Committee on Urban Issues by a vote of 9 to 0.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 420.

This bill establishes the "Missouri Creating a Respectful and Open World for Natural Hair (Missouri CROWN) Act".

The bill prohibits discrimination on the basis of hair texture and protective hairstyles in educational institutions that receive or benefit from state financial assistance or state student financial aid. The bill authorizes educational institutions to require hair nets and hair coverings for safety purposes in career and technical training courses.

This bill is similar to HB 2356 (2020).

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that many students across the country have been placed in humiliating discriminatory situations due to their hairstyles and Missouri should do better. Witnesses gave examples of their own experiences and others of people they know.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Proudie; Arnie Dienoff; Cheryl Adelstein, Jewish Community Relations Council; American Civil Liberties Union of Missouri; National Association of Social Workers-Missouri Chapter; and Dominique Thurman.

OPPONENTS: Those who oppose the bill say that they are against expanding the definition of "race" for purposes of the Missouri

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-000922

Human Rights Act to include hairstyles.

Testifying against the bill was the Associated Industries of Missouri.

Written testimony has been submitted for this bill. The full written testimony can be found under Testimony on the bill page on the House website.

HB 427 -- PROTECTIVE ORDERS

SPONSOR: Proudie

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass" by the Standing Committee on Crime Prevention by a vote of 8 to 0.

This bill adds definitions for "coercive control" and "disturbing the peace of the petitioner" to the Chapter on shelters and protective orders related to child and adult abuse.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that this puts a couple of definitions in the statutes for protective orders. It clarifies what "coercive control" is, and it adds this to the reasons a petitioner can seek a protective order. Approximately 80% of domestic abuse calls are missed if violence is a requirement. Often, domestic abuse involves coercive control, which does not always involve violence. A lot of times, people do not even realize they are being abused because the abuse is coercive control without violence.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Proudie; Missouri Coalition Against Domestic And Sexual Violence; and Arnie Dienoff.

OPPONENTS: There was no opposition voiced to the committee.

Written testimony has been submitted for this bill. The full written testimony can be found under Testimony on the bill page on the House website.

HCS HB 439 -- TEACHING PERMITS

SPONSOR: Davidson

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-000923

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Emerging Issues by a vote of 8 to 5.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 439.

The bill adds district teaching permits, described below, to a manner in which a teacher may receive a certificate of license from the State Board of Education (SBE).

This bill will allow school districts to issue a district teaching permit to any individual who does not currently hold a SBE issued teaching certificate. The district teaching permit allows the holder to teach only in the issuing school district unless another school district also issues permits and recognizes permits issued in this manner as part of their policy.

The bill requires districts to develop a policy listing the qualifications an individual shall meet to be eligible for the teaching permit, which include, at a minimum, an associates degree and background check. The number of teachers issued a teaching permit must not exceed 25% of the total number of teachers employed in the district. If an individual is issued a teaching permit and teaches for four years, the SBE may issue a teaching certificate as specified in the bill alternatively to receiving a certificate due to the permit alone.

Any individual who obtains a teaching permit as described within the bill shall be deemed a teacher for purposes of determining minimum salary, tenure, and retirement.

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that this bill helps immediately address teacher shortages by allowing individuals who may have knowledge and experience in an area to teach. The bill allows local school districts to determine how best to manage their teachers. This system benefits smaller school districts who may have higher turnover rate and who cannot readily fill positions.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Davidson; and Matt Teeter, Willard Public Schools.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-000924

OPPONENTS: Those who oppose the bill say that it lowers the standards for educators and therefore hurts students. Opponents do not think the solution to fewer teachers is to change the standards required to teach, but the state should address other issues. This bill could also further distance districts who may have varying standards for teachers under the bill. Teacher certification encompasses more than just knowledge and ability to teach, but an understanding of the student personally, life circumstances, and other factors that may affect education.

Testifying against the bill were Dr. Jennice McCafferty-Wright; Elizabeth King; Jim Kreider, Missouri Retired Teachers Association; Missouri State University; Arnie C. Dienoff; Missouri State Teachers Association; Public School Retirement System; Public Education Employee Retirement System ; and the Missouri National Education Association.

Written testimony has been submitted for this bill. The full written testimony can be found under Testimony on the bill page on the House website.

HCS HB 499 -- LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICER DISCIPLINARY ACTIONS

SPONSOR: Schroer

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Crime Prevention by a vote of 7 to 1, with 2 voting present.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 499.

This bill establishes the "Law Enforcement Officers' Bill of Rights".

The bill defines a "law enforcement officer" as any sworn peace officer, except the highest ranking officer in the law enforcement agency, who is employed by any unit of the state or any county, charter county, city, charter city, municipality, district, college, university, or any other political subdivision or by the Board of Police Commissioners, who possesses the power to arrest for violations of the criminal code.

The bill specifies certain rights a law enforcement officer has when he or she is the subject of an administrative investigation or is being questioned or interviewed. These rights include being informed of the violation, requiring the complaint to be supported by a sworn affidavit, and allowing the officer to have an attorney or any duly authorized representative.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The bill provides that any law enforcement officer who is suspended without pay, demoted, terminated, transferred, or placed on a status resulting in economic loss is entitled to a full due process hearing. The hearing requirements are specified in the bill.

The bill also establishes the "Police Use of Force Transparency Act of 2021", which provides that all law enforcement agencies must, at least annually, collect and report local data to the National Use of Force Data Collection through the Law Enforcement Enterprise portal administered by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on use-of-force incidents involving peace officers. Law enforcement agencies must also report such data to the Department of Public Safety. Information collected and reported must not include personally identifying information of individual officers. By June 30, 2022, the Department must develop standards and procedures governing the collecting and reporting of the data. The Department must publish the data reported by law enforcement agencies, and the data will be considered a public record, consistent with state law. The Department must analyze trends and disparities in the data and report the findings and make the report available to the public no later than January 1, 2025.

The provisions of this bill have a delayed effective date of January 1, 2022.

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that we should all agree that every Missourian should be entitled to the same basic level of Constitutional rights, and that should include law enforcement officers. Some blue states and some red states have passed legislation like this. The 90-day time-frame is important for the completion of the investigation. While the records of an investigation are closed, if there was an issue and it resulted in a civil or criminal complaint, that would be transparent and the public would find out about that. The intent is to maintain full transparency between agencies and departments. Law enforcement officers are compelled, up to and including termination, to make statements, whereas civilian defendants have a right to remain silent. Officers do not have that right. They do not have a right to remain silent, and they do not have a fundamental right to an attorney. This bill came about because some officers are being abused and bullied into complying with these investigations, and they are kind of held in limbo and cannot work anywhere else, even secondary employment, on which a lot of officers in rural departments rely, so they can't do anything and this is adversely affecting officers across the state. The Fifth Amendment should apply to officers, too, especially since the government is the employer. They can be compelled during the internal investigation and face termination if they do not comply, but they cannot be subject to additional charges.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Schroer; Arnie C. Dienoff; Brian Millikan , Millikan Law Office, LLC; Stephen "Jay" Schroeder, St. Louis Police Officers Association/Missouri Fraternal Order of Police; and Joseph A. Patterson, St. Louis County Police Association.

OPPONENTS: Those who oppose the bill submitted written testimony, which can be found online.

Testifying against the bill were Amy Axtell; JCRC; Elle Hollrah; Gail Wechsler; Gerald B Axelbaum; John Steffen; Jonathan Lindberg; Randee Steffen; Susan Gibson; Tara Bennett; Karen Rogers; American Civil Liberties Union of Missouri; Richard A. Egan; and Kristin Bowen.

HCS HB 712 -- DISCOVERY IN MUNICIPAL COURTS

SPONSOR: Ellebracht

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Judiciary by a vote of 10 to 0.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 712.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

This bill specifies that in a proceeding for a municipal ordinance violation or any other proceeding before a municipal court if the charge carries the possibility of 15 days or more in jail or confinement, a defendant must not be charged any fee for obtaining a police report or probable cause statement. Such police report or probable cause statement must be provided by the prosecutor upon written request for discovery by the defendant.

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that, often, in municipal court, the burden of discovery is shifted to the defendant or defendant's counsel, and defendant is required to produce evidence against him or her, and that is unconstitutional. Defendants should also not have to pay to purchase police reports so they can adequately defend themselves.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Ellebracht; Arnie Dienoff.

OPPONENTS: There was no opposition voiced to the committee.

Written testimony has been submitted for this bill. The full written testimony can be found under Testimony on the bill page on the House website.

HCS HB 718 -- PROPERTY ASSESSMENTS

SPONSOR: Rowland

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Local Government by a vote of 10 to 0.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 718.

This bill requires a County Board of Equalization to promptly issue a notification to a person lodging an appeal of a property assessment confirming that the appeal has been received. If the appeal is lodged in person, the notification must be issued immediately. If the appeal is lodged via mail or electronically, the notification must be issued within two business days.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that this is a convenience for the complainant.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Rowland; Associated Industries of Missouri; and Arnie C. Dienoff.

OPPONENTS: There was no opposition voiced to the committee.

This bill is similar to HB 2451 (2020).

Written testimony has been submitted for this bill. The full written testimony can be found under Testimony on the bill page on the House website.

HCS HB 804 -- COMMON SEWER DISTRICTS

SPONSOR: Hovis

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Local Government by a vote of 12 to 0.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 804.

Currently, the trustees of a common sewer district may be paid a reasonable compensation for their services, if approved by a resolution of the board of trustees; and the trustees of a 10-member board of trustees cannot receive any compensation. This bill allows the trustees to be paid up to $100 per meeting, but not more than two meetings per calendar month, by the district for their service.

Currently, the trustees of a Reorganized Common Sewer District receive no compensation for their services. This bill allows the trustees to be paid up to $100 per meeting, but not more than two meetings per calendar month, by the district for their service, plus the trustees will be reimbursed for their actual expenses.

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that there needs to be some incentive to get people to serve on these boards.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Hovis; Joe Tousignant, Cape Girardeau County Reorganized Common Sewer District; Jefferson County Public Sewer District; and Stephen A. Bubanovich.

OPPONENTS: Those who oppose the bill say that true and real community service and giving back to the community should be free of charge.

Testifying against the bill was Arnie C. Dienoff.

This bill is the same as HB 2549 (2020).

Written testimony has been submitted for this bill. The full written testimony can be found under Testimony on the bill page on the House website.

HCS HB 842 -- ELECTIONS

SPONSOR: Hill

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Elections and Elected Officials by a vote of 8 to 2.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 842.

Beginning on January 1, 2022 this bill requires the use of paper ballots marked by hand. Electronic touch screen machines may be used to assist disabled voters until January 1, 2024, and ballot marking devices may be used to assist disabled voters at any time.

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that bill will allow audit of ballots to ensure election integrity. There may only be one or two counties lacking the technology to implement the bill. Hand marked ballots provide a reliable record to guard against fraud and machine reading errors. All computer systems are subject to error or hacking and so it is important to maintain a physical record of votes. There is overwhelming public support for physical ballots and the bill would ensure public confidence in Missouri elections.

HCS HB 849 -- HISTORIC BUILDINGS

SPONSOR: Griffith

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Ways and Means by a vote of 11 to 0.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 849.

This bill creates the "Capitol Complex Tax Credit Act" and the "Capitol Complex Fund". The Capitol Complex Fund is authorized to receive any eligible monetary donation, as defined in the bill, and will be segregated into two accounts consisting of a rehabilitation and renovation account and a maintenance account. Of the revenues deposited into the Fund, 90% will be placed in the rehabilitation and renovation account and 7.5% of revenues deposited in the Fund will be placed in the maintenance account. The remaining 2.5% of the funds may be used for the purposes of fundraising, advertising, and administrative costs.

The choice of projects for which money is to be used, as well as the determination of the methods of carrying out the project and the procurement of goods and services, will be made by the Commissioner of Administration. No moneys will be released from the Fund for any expense without the approval of the Commissioner of Administration.

For all taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2021, any qualified donor, as defined in the bill, will be allowed a credit against any state income tax (except employer withheld taxes) or state taxes imposed on financial institutions for an amount equal to 50% of the monetary donation amount. Any amount of tax credit that exceeds the qualified donor's state income tax liability may be refunded or carried forward for the following four years.

For all taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2021, a qualified donor will be allowed a credit against any state income tax (except employer withheld taxes) or state taxes imposed on financial institutions for an amount equal to 30% of the value of the eligible artifact donation, as defined in the bill. Any amount of tax credit that exceeds the donor's tax liability will not be refunded for artifacts, but the credit may be carried forward for four subsequent years.

The Department of Economic Development will not issue tax credits for donations to the Capitol Complex Fund in excess of $10 million per year in the aggregate. Donations received in excess of the cap will be placed in line for tax credits the following year. Alternatively, a donor may donate without receiving the credit or may request that their donation is returned.

Tax credits issued for donations under this bill are not subject to any fee. Tax credits issued under this bill may be assigned, transferred, sold, or otherwise conveyed.

This bill will sunsets six years from the effective date.

This bill allows the Department to charge a fee in an amount not to exceed 1% of any tax credit issued to a recipient for the rehabilitation of historic structures under Chapter 253, RSMo. Any revenues generated by such a fee will be deposited in the Capitol Complex Fund.

This bill is similar to HB 1713 (2020).

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that there are projects that need to be completed within the Capitol Complex. Some of these projects include mold removal and making buildings in the Capitol Complex accessible to handicapped individuals.

These projects could cost anywhere between $250 million and $300 million. Current funding for these projects are provided by bonds. With this bill, the state would possibly reduce the cost of projects within the Capitol Complex by 50% since that amount could come from donors.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Testifying for the bill were Representative Griffith; Dana Rademan Miller, Missouri State Capitol Commission; and Randy Scherr.

OPPONENTS: Those who oppose the bill submitted online written testimony.

Testifying against the bill was Arnie Dienoff.

Written testimony has been submitted for this bill. The full written testimony can be found under Testimony on the bill page on the House website.

HCS HB 1139 -- INCOME TAX

SPONSOR: Eggleston

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Ways and Means by a vote of 7 to 0.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for HB 1139.

Currently, the top rate of income tax may be reduced over a period of years if certain triggers are met.

This bill replaces the current rates of tax on income based upon different levels of income of Missouri taxable income with a tax rate of 5.4%, or the top rate of tax as in effect on January 1, 2022, whichever is less, on all Missouri taxable income and has the current income tax cuts applied to this rate (Section 143.011, RSMo).

Currently, the Missouri combined taxable income on a combined return must include all of the income and deductions of the husband and wife, and Missouri taxable income of each spouse is an amount that is the same proportion of their Missouri combined taxable income as the Missouri adjusted gross income of that spouse bears to their Missouri combined adjusted gross income.

Beginning, January 1, 2022, the Missouri combined taxable income on a combined return must include all of the income and deductions of the husband and wife (Section 143.031).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-000935

Beginning January 1, 2022, this bill increases the Missouri standard deduction to the allowable federal standard deduction plus $4000 if filing single or married and filing separately, or plus $8000 if married and filing jointly (Section 143.131).

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that this bill replaces the current income tax rate structure which has ten brackets with a simple, single, tax rate. Additionally, this bill increases the Missouri standard deduction in order to offset tax increases to lower income earners.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Eggleston; and Arnie Dienoff.

OPPONENTS: There was no opposition voiced to the committee.

HB 1363 -- DAVID DORN MEMORIAL HIGHWAY

SPONSOR: Dogan

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass" by the Special Committee on Criminal Justice by a vote of 9 to 0.

This bill designates that portion of Interstate 70 from Shreve Road continuing to Kingshighway Boulevard as the "David Dorn Memorial Highway". The Department of Transportation will erect and maintain the signs, with the costs to be paid by private donations.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that this names a section of highway after the late Captain David Dorn, who was murdered on June 2, 2020, while protecting his friend's pawn shop in St. Louis. They want to show him and his family that his decades of service are appreciated. He was a mentor and a role model to everyone he met. They want his legacy remembered, because he died doing what he loved and he died a hero. He built bridges culturally and he built bridges between law enforcement and the community.

HB 1416 -- FUNDAMENTAL FREEDOM

SPONSOR: Black (137)

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass" by the Standing Committee on Judiciary by a vote of 8 to 4.

The bill creates the "Fundamental Freedom From Government Act".

Under the provisions of this bill, at all times, including during declared emergencies, religious services or activities are to be considered essential services. Neither the state nor any political subdivision shall treat any religious organization less favorably or more strictly than any other similarly situated organization in terms of function, service, assembly, size, or conduct as outlined in the bill. The state or any political subdivision must obtain a declaratory court order establishing by clear and convincing evidence that the intended action does not unnecessarily violate any citizen's fundamental individual rights and is necessary to protect public safety before ordering or requiring any citizen or religious organization to cease, limit, or suspend any religious services, assembly, or function or imposing a fine or penalty for failure to comply with such an order.

Any restriction by the state or any political subdivision thereof to the right of personal privacy to use sex-specific restrooms, spas, baths, showers, dressing rooms, locker rooms, or other intimate facilities or settings and the fundamental right to the free exercise of religious beliefs by any person, business, religious organization, or other organization in establishing sex-specific standards or policies shall be subject to strict scrutiny. This shall not prevent the establishment of gender-neutral facilities that respect the fundamental rights of personal privacy and free exercise of religious beliefs. The state or any political subdivision must obtain a declaratory court order establishing by clear and convincing evidence that the intended action does not unnecessarily violate such fundamental rights before ordering or requiring any person, business, organization, or religious organization to provide gender-neutral access to restrooms, spas, baths, showers, dressing rooms, locker rooms, or other intimate facilities or settings.

The bill further states that no law enforcement officer can be ordered to take any action that he or she reasonably believes to be in violation of law protecting the fundamental right of any citizen to keep and bear arms, ammunition, and accessories absent a declaratory court order establishing by clear and convincing evidence that the intended action does not unnecessarily violate any fundamental rights.

Any suits brought under the provisions of the bill shall be advanced on the court docket and heard and decided by the court as quickly as possible.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that Congress is limited by the Bill of Rights, and this bill is consistent with the concept that government is established in three branches, and this bill respects those branches. It identifies certain rights that are protected and subject to strict scrutiny. It respects the right of the judiciary to play its role in the three-part government process. It specifies that religious organizations are considered essential and a church shall be considered no differently than another organization in similar size and purpose. The right to have sex-specific restrooms is also under the standard of strict scrutiny. It also applies to the second amendment. This statutorily implements procedures to protect fundamental rights but it also respects the court's ability to make decisions on the matter if it sees fit.

Testifying for the bill were Representative Black; and Arnie C. Dienoff.

HB 1069 -- OFFENSES AGAINST GENERAL ASSEMBLY

SPONSOR: Evans

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass" by the Standing Committee on Judiciary by a vote of 10 to 1.

This bill specifies that, when a person is subpoenaed to testify or provide information at a proceeding before a body of the General Assembly, a court must issue, upon request from the President Pro Tem or the Speaker of the body that subpoenaed the person, an order requiring the person to testify or provide information if the person refuses to do so on the basis of the person's privilege against self-incrimination. Before issuing such an order, a court must find that the request for the order has been approved by a vote of a three-fifths majority of the members of the body requesting the order. If a witness refuses, on the basis of the privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or provide information and the person presiding over the proceeding informs the witness that an order requiring the testimony or production of information was issued, the witness must not refuse to comply with the order on the basis of the asserted privilege. However, no testimony or information compelled under the order may be used against the witness in any criminal proceeding other than perjury, giving a false statement, or otherwise failing to comply with the order.

If a witness summoned by a body of the General Assembly willfully fails to appear, refuses to answer any pertinent questions, or fails to produce required documents, a statement of facts regarding such failure may be reported to and filed with the President Pro Tem of the Senate or the Speaker of the House. Either the President Pro Tem or the Speaker may certify the statement of facts to the prosecuting or other attorney having jurisdiction to prosecute. The Attorney General will have concurrent original jurisdiction to commence a criminal action throughout the state. Upon request by the President Pro Tem or the Speaker of the originating body, the court must, within 15 days of the request, appoint independent counsel, who will have jurisdiction to prosecute under Section 575.330, RSMo. If independent counsel is appointed, such independent counsel will have sole jurisdiction to prosecute under such section.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The bill also specifies that:

(1) The offense of perjury is a class D felony if it is committed in any proceeding before a body of the General Assembly;

(2) The offense of making a false affidavit is a class A misdemeanor when it is done in any proceeding before a body of the General Assembly;

(3) The offense of tampering with a witness or victim is a class E felony when the witness is a witness in a proceeding before a body of the General Assembly;

(4) The offense of acceding to corruption when the person is a witness or prospective witness in a proceeding before a body of the General Assembly is a class D felony;

(5) A person commits the offense of obstructing government operations if he or she purposely obstructs, impairs, hinders, or perverts the performance of a governmental function by the use or threat of harm, intimidation, or coercion. The offense of obstructing government operations is a class A misdemeanor. However, if committed against a body of the General Assembly, it is a class E felony.

This bill is the same as HCS HB 2374 (2020).

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that this bill has been around for a couple of years and it has been a bipartisan effort to address offenses before the General Assembly. There is a privilege that protects people from criminal prosecution for what they say before the General Assembly.

Testifying for the bill was Representative Evans.

OPPONENTS: Those who oppose the bill submitted written testimony, which can be found online.

Testifying against the bill was Arnie C. Dienoff.

SCS SCR 3 -- DRED SCOTT

SPONSOR: Roberts

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass" by the Special Committee on Urban Issues by a vote of 6 to 0.

This resolution calls upon the General Assembly to condemn the March 22, 1852, Dred Scott decision issued by the Missouri Supreme Court.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that this resolution will put on the record that the Dred Scott decision is wrong and that it was based on the "political wind" at the time. That "wind" has shifted.

Testifying for the bill were Senator Roberts; Arnie C. Dienoff; Missouri Catholic Conference; American Civil Liberities Union of Missouri; and Lois Hogan, Dred Scott Heritage Foundation.

HCS SS SB 176 -- ELECTRONIC DEVICES

SPONSOR: Hough

COMMITTEE ACTION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Emerging Issues by a vote of 11 to 0.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for SB 176.

FOOD DELIVERY PLATFORM (Section 196.276, RSMo)

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-000943

This bill requires a food delivery platform in Missouri to file a certificate of formation or registration with the Secretary of State prior to delivering or picking up an order from a restaurant. The food delivery platform must have the restaurant's consent and a written agreement that specifies any fee that the restaurant is required to pay prior to picking up or delivering an order.

A food delivery platform is prohibited from appearing to sponsor or endorse a restaurant and the food delivery platform may not alter any pricing or change the fee charged to a restaurant for using the delivery service without a written agreement.

The bill requires a food delivery service to remove a restaurant from their platform upon the restaurants request within 10 days, except as specified in the bill, and a consumer must be provided with a way to express concerns regarding his or her order directly to the food delivery platform.

A restaurant may bring an action to enjoin a violation of these provisions and if the violation is proven the court shall issue an injunction requiring the food delivery platform to pay all profits derived from or damages caused by the wrongful bill and order the wrongful bill to be terminated. If the court finds that the food delivery platform committed a wrongful bill by not having an agreement or written consent with the restaurant then the court may enter a judgment in an amount not to exceed three times the amount of the profits and damages; and award reasonable attorney's fees to the restaurant.

This provision has a delayed effective date of January 1, 2022.

These provisions are similar to SB 574 and HB 1280 (2021).

ELECTRIC BICYCLES (Sections 300.010, 301.010, 302.010, 303.020, 304.001, 307.025, 307.180, 307.188, 307.193, 307.194, 365.020, 407.560, 407.815, 407.1025, and 578.120)

As used in Chapters 300 and 301, RSMo, the bill defines "electric bicycle" as a bicycle with fully operable pedals, a seat for the rider, and an electric motor of less than 750 watts that meets the requirements of one of three classes:

(1) "Class 1 electric bicycle", an electric bicycle equipped with a motor that provides assistance only when the rider is pedaling and that ceases to provide assistance when the bicycle

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

reaches the speed of 20 miles per hour;

(2) "Class 2 electric bicycle", an electric bicycle equipped with a motor that may be used exclusively to propel the bicycle and that is not capable of providing assistance when the bicycle reaches the speed of 20 miles per hour; or

(3) "Class 3 electric bicycle", an electric bicycle equipped with a motor that provides assistance only when the rider is pedaling and that ceases to provide assistance when the bicycle reaches the speed of 28 miles per hour.

Other definitions within those chapters are changed to either specifically include or exclude "electric bicycle".

As used in Chapters 302, 303, 307, 365 and 407 "electric bicycle" is defined in reference to its definition in Chapter 301, and other definitions within those chapters are changed to either specifically include or exclude "electric bicycle".

In Section 578.120, "electric bicycle" is specifically excepted from the prohibition on Sunday sales.

The bill also provides that every person riding an electric bicycle upon a street or highway shall be granted all of the rights and shall be subject to all of the duties applicable to the operator of a bicycle, or the driver of a vehicle as provided by Chapter 304, except as to special regulations in Sections 307.180 to 307.193 and except as to those provisions of Chapter 304 which by their nature can have no application.

Operation of an electric bicycle is not subject to provisions of law that are applicable to motor vehicles, all-terrain vehicles, off-road vehicles, off-highway vehicles, motor vehicle rentals, motor vehicle dealers or franchises, or motorcycle dealers or franchises, including vehicle registration, certificates of title, drivers' licenses, and financial responsibility.

Beginning August 28, 2021, manufacturers and distributors of electric bicycles are required to apply a permanent label to each electric bicycle in a prominent location, which must contain the classification number, top assisted speed, and motor wattage of the electric bicycle. The text on the label must be Arial font and in at least nine-point type. A person is prohibited from tampering with or modifying an electric bicycle in such a way that changes the motor-powered speed capability or engagement of the electric bicycle unless he or she replaces the required label with a new label indicating the new classification.

An electric bicycle must comply with the equipment and manufacturing requirements for bicycles adopted by the United States Consumer Product Safety Commission, 16 CFR 1512. An electric bicycle must be operated so that the electric motor is disengaged or ceases to function when the rider stops pedaling or when the brakes are applied.

Electric bicycles can be ridden where bicycles are permitted, subject to certain provisions set out in the bill. The use of a class 3 electric bicycle is subject to certain provisions set out in the bill, including the operator must be 16 years old, and be equipped with a speedometer.

These provisions are similar to HB 307 and SB 38 (2021).

PERSONAL DELIVERY DEVICES (Section 304.900)

This bill enacts provisions relating to personal delivery devices ("PDDs"), as defined in the bill.

PDDs may operate on sidewalks and crosswalks, and may operate on county or municipal roadways provided they do not unreasonably interfere with motor vehicles or traffic.

PDDs shall not block public rights of way, shall obey traffic and pedestrian control signals, shall not exceed 10 miles per hour on a sidewalk, shall display a unique identification number, shall include a means of identifying the operator of the device, and shall be equipped with a system allowing the device to come to a controlled stop.

PDDs operating on sidewalks shall have the same responsibilities as pedestrians. PDDs shall be exempt from motor vehicle registration requirements, and shall maintain a general liability insurance policy of at least $100,000. PDDs operated at night shall be equipped with lighting as provided in the bill. PDDs shall not be used to transport hazardous materials regulated by federal law as specified in the bill.

Nothing in this bill shall prohibit a political subdivision from regulating the operation of PDDs on highways or pedestrian areas to insure the welfare and safety of its residents. However, political subdivisions shall not regulate the design, manufacture and maintenance of PDDs or the types of property they may transport. No political subdivision shall treat PDDs differently than other similar personal property for assessment or taxation purposes, or for other charges.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The bill prohibits PDD operators from selling or disclosing a personally identifiable likeness, as described in the bill, to a third party in exchange for monetary compensation. Use of personally identifiable likenesses by PDD operators to improve their products or services is specifically allowed under the bill, and information that would otherwise be protected under the bill shall only be provided to a law enforcement entity by subpoena.

These provisions are similar to HCS HB 592 (2021) and similar to HCS HB 2290 (2020).

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that this bill helps modernize components of daily life. The bill also maintains local control by giving communities the ability to choose how to regulate these devices and how to continually update regulations. There are multiple provisions addressing safety so that technology and people can interact.

Testifying for the bill were Senator Hough; Arnie C. Dienoff; Fedex Corporation and Missouri Retailers Association; Missouri Chamber of Commerce and Industry; and Amazon.com Services.

OPPONENTS: There was no opposition voiced to the committee.

This bill modifies provisions relating to sales taxes.

SALES TAX FILING PERIODS (Section 144.080, RSMo)

Current law provides statutory sales tax collection thresholds to determine the frequency at which sellers shall file and remit sales taxes collected, with such periods being quarter-monthly, monthly, quarterly, and annually. Current law also allows the Department of Revenue to increase, but not decrease, such thresholds through rule. This bill modifies the statutory thresholds for the monthly, quarterly, and annual filing periods.

For monthly filing, the threshold is changed from at least $250 in the first or second month of a calendar quarter to at least $500 per calendar month for the prior year.

For quarterly filing, the threshold is changed from at least $45 in a calendar quarter, but not subject to monthly filing to less than $500 per calendar month, but at least $200 in a calendar quarter.

For annual filing, the threshold is changed from less than $45 per calendar quarter to less than $200 per calendar quarter.

This provision is the same as SB 741 (2020) and SB 141 (2019).

SALES TAX RETENTION (Section 144.142)

Beginning August 28, 2021, and ending June 30, 2023, this bill authorizes sellers to deduct and retain 100% of the state portion of sales tax levied on purchases of admission tickets to movies, films, and musical performances, as well as on sales of concessions sold onsite at such seller's place of business.

This provision is similar to HB 1307 and SB 529 (2021).

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that the current thresholds for filing periods have not been updated in decades and this update needs to happen.

Testifying for the bill were Senator Koenig; Missouri Society of Certified Public Accountants; and Associated Industries of Missouri.

OPPONENTS: Those who oppose the bill submitted online written testimony.

HCS SS SCS SB 71 -- ORDERS OF PROTECTION

SPONSOR: Gannon

COMMITTEE billION: Voted "Do Pass with HCS" by the Standing Committee on Crime Prevention by a vote of 9 to 1.

The following is a summary of the House Committee Substitute for SB 71.
This bill specifies that, adult protection orders and child protection orders, full or ex parte, may be granted to restrain or enjoin an individual from committing or threatening to commit abuse against a pet. A protection order may include an order of possession of the pet where appropriate, as well as any funds needed to cover the medical costs resulting from abuse of the pet. "Pet" is defined in this bill as a living creature maintained by a household member for companionship and not for commercial purposes.
Currently, a court may issue a full adult order of protection, after a hearing, for at least 180 days and not exceeding one year. This bill specifies that, if the court finds, after an evidentiary hearing, that the respondent poses a serious danger to the physical or mental health of the petitioner or a minor household member, the protective order shall be valid for at least two years and not more than 10 years. The full order may be renewed annually for a period of at least 180 days and not more than one year from the expiration date of the previously issued order; except, in cases where the court finds the respondent poses a serious danger to the petitioner or a minor household member, then the order may be renewed periodically and shall be valid for at least two years and up to the life of the respondent. The court may include a provision that any full order of protection shall be automatically renewed for any term of renewal as set forth in this bill.

If a court finds that the respondent poses a serious risk to the petitioner or a minor household member, the court shall not modify the order until a period of at least two years from the date of the original full order of protection was issued and only after a hearing and making written findings that the respondent has shown proof of treatment and rehabilitation and no longer poses a serious danger.
Currently, the clerk issues a copy of any order of protection to the local law enforcement agency responsible for maintaining the Missouri Uniform Law Enforcement System (MULES) the same day the order is granted and the local law enforcement agency enters the information contained in the order into MULES. This bill specifies that, the court shall provide all the necessary information regarding the order of protection for entry into MULES and the National Crime Information Center (NCIC). The sheriff shall enter the information into MULES within 24 hours and MULES shall forward that information to NCIC, thus making the order viewable in the National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS).
The bill also specifies the sections of statute under which joint custody or visitation orders may be modified.

The following is a summary of the public testimony from the committee hearing. The testimony was based on the introduced version of the bill.

PROPONENTS: Supporters say that adult and child protection orders can apply to pets (animals for companionship only) under this bill, while currently in Missouri there's no way to do that. The orders are not allowed for pets alone. The substitute also allows for appeals by respondents on protection orders and the petitioner does not have to reapply. Lots of foster children have witnessed the abuse of a pet and suffer trauma as a result. People who are abusers and commit domestic violence use the relationship with a pet to manipulate a person or child, so the animal is used as a pawn. Sometimes they will do things like say "I will kill your dog if you leave me again" or they will kill the dog and say 'this is what will happen to you if you leave me again." Most of the time pet abuse is happening in the home, children witness it. And there was data populated about what happened with kids who witnessed animal cruelty on top of domestic violence. They are put in a category called "severe maladjustment." It's really helpful to put in protection orders that the person cannot abuse the pet. Up to 40% of women will not leave an abusive situation if the pet is still in the home. Twenty-eight states have already adopted this legislation. This is a bipartisan issue.

Testifying for the bill were Senator Gannon; Arnie C. Dienoff; Missouri Coalition Against Domestic And Sexual Violence (MCADSV); Missouri Alliance for Animal Legislation; American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

OPPONENTS: There was no opposition voiced to the committee.

Written testimony has been submitted for this bill. The full written testimony can be found under Testimony on the bill page on the House website.

[~~except that~~] b. Notwithstanding the exemption provided in subparagraph a. of this paragraph, any such payment to any person shall be subject to attachment or execution pursuant to a qualified domestic relations order, as defined by Section 414(p) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. Section 414(p)), as amended, issued by a court in any proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation or a proceeding for disposition of property following dissolution of marriage by a court which lacked personal jurisdiction over the absent spouse or lacked jurisdiction to dispose of marital property at the time of the original judgment of dissolution;

(f) Any money or assets, payable to a participant or beneficiary from, or any interest of any participant or beneficiary in, a retirement plan, profit-sharing plan, health savings plan, or similar plan, including an inherited account or plan, that is qualified under Section 401(a), 403(a), 403(b), 408, 408A or 409 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. Section 401(a), 403(a), 403(b), 408, 408A, or 409), as amended, whether such participant's or beneficiary's interest arises by inheritance, designation, appointment, or otherwise, except as provided in this paragraph. Any plan or arrangement described in this paragraph shall not be exempt from the claim of an alternate payee under a qualified domestic relations order; however, the interest of any and all alternate payees under a qualified domestic relations order shall be exempt from any and all claims of any creditor, other than the state of Missouri through its department of social services. As used in this paragraph, the terms "alternate payee" and "qualified domestic relations order" have the meaning given to them in Section 414(p) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. Section 414(p)), as amended. If proceedings under Title 11 of the United States Code are commenced by or against such person, no amount of funds shall be exempt in such proceedings under any such plan, contract, or trust which is fraudulent as defined in subsection 2 of section 428.024 and for the period such person participated within three years prior to the commencement of such proceedings. For the purposes of this section, when the fraudulently conveyed funds are recovered and after, such funds shall be deducted and then treated as though the funds had never been contributed to the plan, contract, or trust;

(11) The debtor's right to receive, or property that is traceable to, a payment on account of the wrongful death of an individual of whom the debtor was a dependent, to the extent reasonably necessary for the support of the debtor and any dependent of the debtor;

(12) Firearms, firearm accessories, and ammunition, not to exceed one thousand five

(a) This subdivision shall apply to any proceeding that:

a. Is filed on or after January 1, 2021; or

b. Was filed before January 1, 2021, and is pending on or on appeal after January 1, 2021;

(b) Except as provided by paragraph (c) of this subdivision, if the designated beneficiary of an individual savings account or individual deposit account established under sections 166.400 to 166.456 or sections 166.500 to 166.529 or of an ABLE account established under sections 209.600 to 209.645 is a lineal descendant of the account owner, all moneys in the account shall be exempt from any claims of creditors of the account owner or designated beneficiary;

(c) The provisions of paragraph (b) of this subdivision shall not apply to:

a. Claims of any creditor of an account owner as to amounts contributed within a two-year period preceding the date of the filing of a bankruptcy petition under 11 U.S.C. Section 101 et seq., as amended; or

b. Claims of any creditor of an account owner as to amounts contributed within a one-year period preceding an execution on judgment for such claims against the account owner.

2. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted to exempt from attachment or execution for a valid judicial or administrative order for the payment of child support or maintenance any money or assets, payable to a participant or beneficiary from, or any interest of any participant or beneficiary in, a retirement plan which is qualified pursuant to Sections 408 and 408A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. Sections 408 and 408A), as amended."; and

Dear State Representative and State Senator,

In support of the enclosed proposed legislation I would like for you for this legislative body to take note of the science and findings that also acknowledge that men are also victims of domestic violence.Therefore men can also end up lashing out and committing crimes due to Battered Husband Syndrome.Many other states have acknowledge this and passed legislation whereby men who were convicted of crimes related to domestic violence can now apply for parole under the Battered Husband Syndrome because at the time they went to trial the state was not acknowledging Battered Husband Syndrome.
Missouri has never acknowledged such defense.It was around 2000 that Missouri passed legislation acknowledged Battered Women Syndrome and allowed abused women to apply for parole because their defense of Battered Wife Syndrome was not acknowledge during their criminal trial.Therefore in all fairness Missouri should pass similar legislation for men.I hope that you will present this legislation for the 2022 legislative session.
Thank you I look forward to hearing back from you so can get a better understanding about me and my situation.You can contact me at

SECOND REGULAR SESSION

HOUSE BILL NO. _____

101ST GENERAL ASSEMBLY

INTRODUCED BY REPRESENTATIVE _____

DANA RADEMAN MILLER, Chief Clerk

AN ACT

To repeal Section 217.692 RSMo, by replacing subsection 1 relating to parole or release of certain offenders.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, as follows:

1. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law to the contrary, any offender incarcerated in a correctional institution serving sentence of life with no parole for fifty years or life without parole, and or consecutive terms of imprisonment exceeding thirty years and who:

(1) Pleaded guilty to or was found guilty of a homicide of a spouse or domestic partner;

(2) Has no prior violent felony convictions;

(3) No longer has a cognizable legal claim or legal recourse;

(4) Has a history of being a victim of continual and substantial physical or sexual domestic violence that was not presented as an affirmative defense at trial or sentencing and such history can be corroborated with evidence of facts or circumstances which existed at the time of the alleged physical or sexual domestic violence of the offender, including but not limited to witness statements, hospital records, social services records, and law enforcement records;

Shall be eligible for parole after having served fifteen years of such sentence when the board determines by using the guidelines established by this section that there is a strong and reasonable probability that the person will not thereafter violate the law.

2. The board of probation and parole shall give a thorough review of the case history and prison record of any offender described in subsection 1 of this section. At the end of the board's review, the board shall provide the offender with a copy of a statement of reasons for its parole decision.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3. Any offender released under the provisions this section shall be under the supervision of the parole board for an amount of time to be determined by the board.

4. The parole board shall consider, but not limited to the following criteria when making its parole decision:

(1) Length of time served;

(2) Prison record and self-rehabilitation efforts;

(3) Whether the history of thecase included corroborative material of physical, sexual, mental, or emotional abuse of the offender, including but not limited to witness statements, hospital records, social services records, and law enforcement records;

(4) If an offer of a plea bargain was made and if so, why the offender rejected or accepted the offer;

(5) Any victim information outlined in subsection 7 of section 217.690 and section 595.209;

(6) The Offender's continued claim of innocence;

(7) The age and maturity of the offender at the time of the board's decision;

(8) The age and maturity of the offender at the time of the crime and any contributing influence affecting the offender's judgment;

(9) the presence of a workable parole plan; and

(10) Community and family support.

5. Nothing in this section shall limit the review of any offender's case who is eligible for parole prior to fifteen years, nor shall it limit in any way the parole board's power to grant parole prior to fifteen years.

6. Noting in this section shall limit the review of any offender's case who has applied for executive clemency, nor shall it limit in any was the governor's power to grant clemency. (It shall be the responsibility of the offender to petition the board for a hearing under this section shall be a class C felony.

9. In cases where witness statements alleging physical or sexual domestic violence are in conflict as to whether such violence occurred or was continual and substantial in nature, the history of such alleged violence shall be established by other corroborative evidence in addition to witness statements, as provided by subsection 1 of this section. A contradictory statement of the victim shall not be deemed a conflicting statement for purposes of this section.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

"The greatest tragedy in life is not death, but rather living without purpose. Without a purpose a life has no meaning, no significance, no hope."

The reasons I am reaching out to you is due to the fact that there is Senate Bill Number 529 which helps certain offenders who have pleaded guilty to or been found guilty of homicide of a spouse or domestic partner and are serving a life without parole sentence and shall be eligible for parole after having served fifteen years if the board of probation and parole determines that there is a strong possibility that the person will not violate the law again. My case fit the criteria of this Bill, the only thing which doesn't make me eligible is the Bill Statute. It states...."This bills helps anybody who case happened prior to December 31, 1990. My problem is that my case took place in 2008. The goal that I am trying to achieve with you is if you could assist me with any help that God allows you to give. I need you to help me get the legislator in Missouri to amend this law so it will allow certain offenders who case happened after 1990 to be eligible for parole after serving 15 years on a life without parole sentence. Please try to help me get this done. I pray that you will ponder on this before making your decision.

Thank you,

Subject: Ameren Missouri Update: Ameren's New Sustainability Reports; Habitat for Humanity and Neighborhood Solar; New Video for SEMO Smart Energy Plan Project!

Dear Legislator,

Here's the latest news from Ameren Missouri. Please take a few minutes to read the articles below. If you have questions or concerns, don't hesitate to reach out.

New sustainability reports demonstrate Ameren's commitment to a cleaner energy future

In early May, Ameren Corporation announced the publication of fivedata-driven reports showing the company's commitment to a cleaner, more sustainable energy future, including its plans to achieve net-zero carbon emissions by 2050. The reports, utilizing the frameworks most sought after by investors and other stakeholders, quantify and provide further insight into Ameren's approach to important environmental, social and governance (ESG) issues.

"We've made significant progress in the last year on our transformational changes toward clean energy, helping customers control their energy use, increasing adoption of electric vehicles and taking impactful steps to make our communities better and more inclusive," said Gwen Mizell, vice president of sustainability and electrification at Ameren. "These accomplishments all occurred amid the great challenges of the pandemic. The reports are just one of the ways we're demonstrating Ameren's vision, Leading the Way to a Sustainable Energy Future, for the customers and communities we serve."

"While much has changed in our world, Ameren's focus on putting our customers at the center of everything we do has remained constant," said Warner Baxter, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Ameren. "We are steadfast in our commitment to achieve our mission, To Power the Quality of Life, for the more than six million people we serve in Missouri and Illinois. Our ability to deliver superior long-term, sustainable value for our customers, communities and shareholders is directly linked to successfully executing our four key sustainability pillars: environmental stewardship, social impact, governance and sustainable growth."

The reports, which address varying topics, issues and reporting needs are available atAmerenInvestors.com. They include:

2021 Sustainability Report: Ameren’s latest sustainability report covers Ameren's progress in 2020, including establishing a net-zero carbon emissions goal and substantial investments in clean energy. The report details how funding from AmerenCares and programs supported by Ameren's Illinois and Missouri regulators resulted in Ameren providing more than $23 million to help those in need in the communities it serves in both Missouri and Illinois during the pandemic. The report also updates the company’s diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives; ESG governance practices; and plans for sustainable growth.

Committed to Clean: Transformational Changes Toward Net-Zero: Ameren's 2021 climate risk report is based on recommendations from the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures (TCFD). This report provides information about the company’s management of climate-related risks and opportunities, including its expansive plan to add 5,400 MW of clean energy in the coming decades. It also details how that plan is consistent with meeting the 1.5° Celsius goal, the target established by the Paris Agreement.

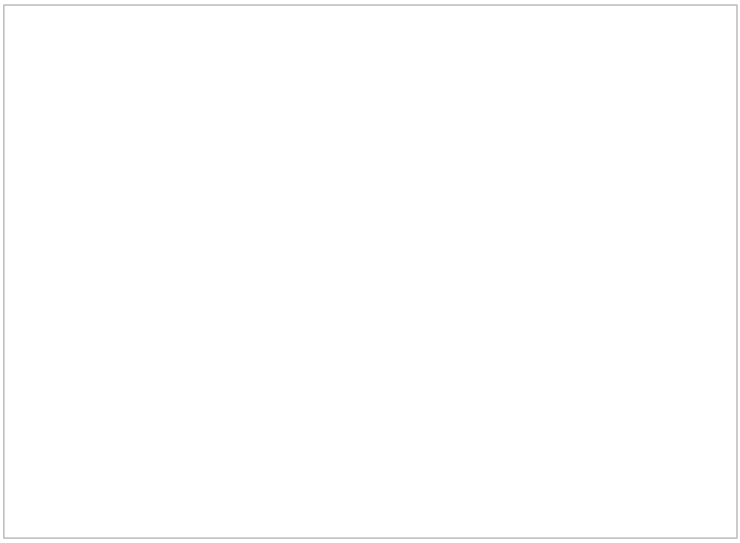
2021 EEI-AGA ESG/Sustainability Report: This report is based on the Edison Electric Institute (EEI) and American Gas Association (AGA) ESG and sustainability reporting template. Ameren is a pilot member of this initiative, and uses this report annually to provide quantitative data related to a number of topics, including energy generation, capital expenditures and environmental impact.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Sustainability Accounting Standards Board (SASB): This is Ameren's first SASB report, which provides investors with a better understanding of how ESG topics are guiding Ameren's business strategies and performance.

United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDG): Ameren's business activities are mapped to the SDGs, which address the global challenges society faces. This inaugural effort also reflects Ameren's collaboration with the Electric Power Research Institute to identify the sustainability issues most important to the company and its stakeholders.

Additional information about how Ameren manages sustainability topics, such as biodiversity and diversity, equity and inclusion, is also available at Ameren.com/Sustainability.



Habitat for Humanity Saint Louis partners with Ameren Missouri to grow solar generation in south St. Louis

First-ever 'Neighborhood Solar' facility is part of larger plan to boost clean energy throughout Missouri

Missouri communities will have increased access to clean energy thanks to the installation of Ameren Missouri solar panels at new locations across the state as part of its Neighborhood Solar program. The first location selected is at the Habitat for Humanity Saint Louis Headquarters and ReStore, where solar panel canopies are under construction in the organization's parking lot. Habitat for Humanity Saint Louis is offering the use of the space so the energy produced there can benefit all Ameren Missouri customers. Other locations are in development across the state.

“In addition to supporting our mission of providing affordable housing, our ReStore is also dedicated to lessening our impact on the environment, and we see growing solar energy generation at our store as another way that we can contribute to a more sustainable environment and further our mission,” said Kimberly McKinney, CEO at Habitat for Humanity Saint Louis.

The newly named South St. Louis Renewable Energy Center is scheduled to begin producing clean energy in August.

The project also brought jobs to the area. There were more than 50 construction workers engaged with the project. Ameren Missouri, Habitat for Humanity and project partners, Aschinger Electric and Azimuth Energy, worked together to ensure inclusive workforce development and education opportunities. On this project, Aschinger Electric and IBEW Local 1 hired a pre-apprentice electrician from a pool of candidates recommended by Habitat for Humanity.

"Developing a diverse, inclusive workforce is part of our DNA," said Emily Martin, president and CEO at Aschinger Electric. "The experiences on a job site can't be recreated in the classroom or a virtual environment, and are a fundamental part of our apprenticeship program. It’s exciting to provide this career opportunity in the growing green energy industry.”

Solar Generation Growing Across Missouri

Ameren Missouri’s Neighborhood Solar program helps organizations such as Habitat for Humanity and other nonresidential customers, host solar generation in parking lots, open land and rooftops. These large open areas are a perfect location for solar panels, which are installed at no cost to the hosting organization.

“We’re excited to collaborate with organizations throughout our community to bring more renewable energy to all of our customers and jobs to neighborhoods that need them," said Matt Forck, vice president of community, economic development and energy solutions at Ameren Missouri. “Expanding solar generation with projects such as these will help transform the energy grid with more clean energy and contribute toward Ameren Missouri's goal of net-zero carbon emissions by 2050.”

A second Neighborhood Solar installation at Southeast Missouri State University is in the design stages. That location is expected to be in service by early next year. Its construction will also include inclusive workforce development and education opportunities.

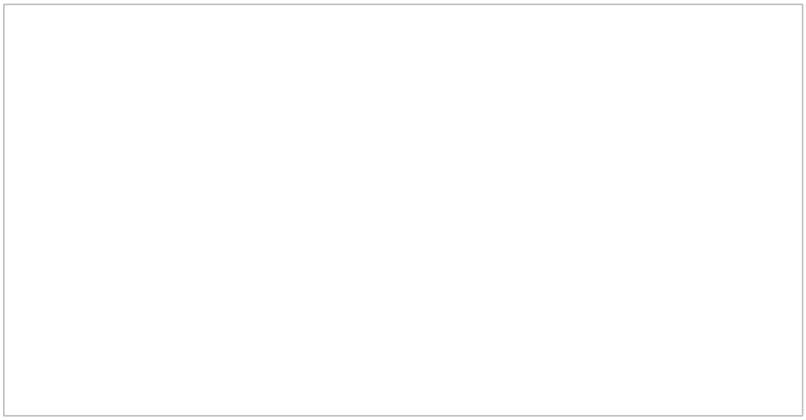
The Neighborhood Solar program is part of Ameren Missouri's $8.4 billion Smart Energy Plan, which includes investments for clean, reliable and resilient energy. It also includes installation of more than one million new smart meters, more renewable and clean generation, and infrastructure upgrades that bolster reliability while working to grow and keep jobs in Missouri.



UPDATE: Smart Energy Plan project success story in southeast Missouri

New video features Rep. Don Rone's visit to site of new Hayti to Steele power line project

A new video has been produced about how service reliability is being improved for Ameren Missouri customers in southeast Missouri as the result of a recently-completed Smart Energy Plan project.

A brand new power line, which uses a different type of overhead wire (T2 conductor), is now serving customers. Hayti-73 is a 34kV sub-transmission line that runs south from Hayti to Steele, MO. The video shows how the T2 conductor for this 14-mile project works. It features Missouri State Representative Don Rone (R-149, Portageville), Russ Burger, SEMO division director at Ameren Missouri, and Kurt Rakers, Ameren Missouri's T2 wire expert and engineer.

Here are the key facts regarding the new Hayti to Steele T2 project:

- $9.2 million construction project.
- Benefits/serves 1,600 Ameren Missouri customers.
- The new Steele substation replaces a substation that was more than 50 years old.
- Local suppliers, WEG Transformers from Washington, MO provided the transformer and AZZ, from Fulton, MO provided the switchgear for the Steele substation.
- There were 379 poles installed on this 14-mile project; both wood and composite poles were utilized, which is typically the case for Smart Energy Plan storm hardening projects.
- When the Hayti-73 project was first being planned, it called for a standard single conductor line; but, due to recent history of galloping and cascading events occurring on this circuit, the project team determined T2 conductor was more appropriate for this project.

T2 conductors can be installed with relatively the same methods and equipment used for round conductors. In rural areas, where spans may be 250 ft. or longer, terrain, historical weather conditions, and historical line performance should be taken into account to see if the line is a good candidate for the T2 conductors. Prairie regions tend to have higher velocity winds during weather events, leading to increased galloping and power outages.

In addition, Steele substation was completely upgraded simultaneously with this line. Combined, these projects are helping to improve reliability while also hardening the energy grid against future weather events in Missouri's bootheel region. The projects took about six months to complete and began serving customers at the end of 2020.

Until next time, I hope you are safe and well!

Subject: Ameren Missouri Update: Energy Saving Tips for Earth Day; Smart Energy Plan Improves Reliability for MO Bootheel; Get a Free Fleet Electrification Analysis!

Dear Legislator,

Here's the latest update regarding Ameren Missouri's ongoing response to the COVID-19 pandemic and other important news. Please take a few minutes to read the articles below. If you have questions or concerns, don't hesitate to reach out.

Ameren Missouri provides energy-saving tips in support of Earth Day

While Earth Day was officially celebrated April 22, it also serves as a reminder to think about the impact you have on the environment throughout the year. As such, you are encouraged to pause and think about how you use energy, especially at home.

Watch a special Earth Day video, featuring Marty Lyons, president of Ameren Missouri, which aired on KMOV-TV in St. Louis.

Ameren Missouri also provides the following tips to help customers save energy at home. With so many people working and educating their children at home for more than a year now, here are three simple ways to cut down energy use—benefitting the planet and keeping more money in your pocket!

1. Take inventory of your energy usage. As you're going through your home, complete Ameren Missouri's 45-minute Home Energy Self-Assessment to gain a better understanding of your energy consumption. Turn in your results, and Ameren Missouri will mail you a $50 check along with custom recommendations for improving your home's energy efficiency.

2. Get your kids involved! Ameren Missouri created a fun, interactive worksheet for kids so they can learn about energy and how to be more energy efficient.

3. Supercharge your spring cleaning with these energy efficiency tips:

    - Replace your air filters. This will prevent dirt, pet dander and pollen from circulating throughout your home. Aside from being unhealthy, dirty air can lead to inadequate airflow, causing your HVAC system to work harder.
    - Check the outdoor AC unit. Over time, the unit can begin to shift and get clogged with grass and leaves causing it to malfunction. In addition to clearing debris, now is an ideal time to schedule an HVAC technician to perform preventative maintenance, ensure proper fluid levels and take other steps to optimize energy efficiency and prevent sudden breakdowns. If you discover it's time to replace your unit, upgrading to a higher-efficiency model ultimately can reduce a home's energy bills up to 40%. Visit AmerenMissouriSavings.com to learn about rebates available.
    - Rearrange the room for efficiency. Avoid placing lamps or TV sets near your room air-conditioning thermostat. The thermostat senses heat from these appliances, which can cause the air conditioner to run longer than necessary.
    - Put off certain chores. Heat-producing tasks, such as laundry, running the dishwasher and cooking, can make your air conditioner work harder. Delay these until the cooler morning or evening hours to help keep energy costs down and your living space comfortable.
    - Replace incandescent bulbs with LEDs. LED bulbs use five times less energy and last much longer. Upgrading just five of your most-used lamps or overhead lights to LEDs can save you $75 per year in energy costs.
    - Declutter your power strips. Unplugging chargers and other power cords for devices when they're not in use can save the average household $100 per year.

Smart Energy Plan improves reliability for Missouri bootheel

Rep. Don Rone visits site of new Hayti to Steele power line project

There's a brand new power line that is improving reliability for Ameren Missouri customers in southeast Missouri. Hayti-73 is a 34kV sub-transmission line that runs south from Hayti to Steele, MO. In addition, a substation was completely upgraded simultaneously with this line. Combined, these projects are helping to improve reliability while also hardening the energy grid against future weather events in Missouri's bootheel region. The projects took about six months to complete and began serving customers at the end of 2020.

"The new 14-mile line uses a newer type of wire, called T2 conductor," said Russell Burger, SEMO division director for Ameren Missouri. "T2 conductor is two standard, round conductors twisted around each other at 9-foot intervals. By twisting the conductors together, the surface becomes irregular, which reduces ice buildup during winter storms."

The twisting design also resists wind-induced motion in two ways. First, the varying diameter reduces vibration in the line. Second, the twists absorb and dissipate motion-causing wind forces to have much less of an effect on the conductors.

"In other words, this new T2 wire reduces the vertical galloping motion of power lines, during ice and wind storms, that can cause the conductors to slap together and produce flashovers or outages," said Kurt Rakers, career engineer, distribution standards for Ameren Missouri. "The same vertical movement of the conductor exerts higher loading stress on the attachment points, such as insulators and cross-arms, which can lead to mechanical failures or even cascading events."

Missouri State Representative Don Rone (R-149, Portageville) recently visited the site of the newly-completed Smart Energy Plan project. He remembers the ice storm of Jan. 2009 that left much of the bootheel without power for several days, after more than 12,000 utility poles were pulled to the ground under the weight of the ice. He was returning from a trip to Georgia when he got word from his sons to purchase as many portable generators as his pickup truck could hold on his drive home to ensure their family could have some electricity until the energy grid could be restored to service.

Rep. Rone was a supporter of SB 564 and voted for its passage in 2018 because he knew the legislation would support even more investments in hardening the energy grid, which would help it better withstand storms like the one that hit southeast Missouri in 2009. He praised Ameren Missouri for the Smart Energy Plan, rebuilding the line from Hayti to Steele and for installing composite poles and the new T2 twisted conductor on the line.

"This is what can happen when you do the right thing," said Rep. Rone. "We had seen what needed to be done down here after the big freeze, and we needed to see that we had to have an upgrade. And the way you all presented that bill to us, it was a no-brainer but to support that at the level that we did."

T2 conductors can be installed with relatively the same methods and equipment used for round conductors. In rural areas, where spans may be 250 ft. or longer, terrain, historical weather conditions, and historical line performance should be taken into account to see if the line is a good candidate for the T2 conductors. Prairie regions tend to have higher velocity winds during weather events, leading to increased galloping and power outages.

Here are the key facts regarding the new Hayti to Steele T2 project:

- $9.2 million construction project.
- Benefits/serves 1,600 Ameren Missouri customers.

- When the Hayti-73 project was first being planned, it called for a standard single conductor line; but, due to recent history of galloping and cascading events occurring on this circuit, the project team determined T2 conductor was more appropriate for this project.

A new video is being produced about the success of the T2 conductor for this 14-mile project and how it works. It will feature Rep. Rone; SEMO division director, Russ Burger; and Ameren Missouri's T2 wire expert and engineer, Kurt Rakers. The video will be featured in Ameren Missouri's next update.

Thinking about electrifying your vehicle fleet? Start your planning with Ameren Missouri to learn how making the switch to electric fleet vehicles can benefit your business.

Ameren Missouri is offering a pilot program designed to help its business customers plan for the coming wave of vehicle electrification. If a business owns and operates a fleet of vehicles, electrification of that fleet could provide savings to the company's bottom line.

To help businesses with the electrification of their vehicle fleets, Ameren Missouri is seeking partnerships with customers to participate in a limited number of free fleet operation studies.

Ameren Missouri has contracted with the leading national fleet solutions provider eIQ Mobility to provide a select group of key customers a free fleet analysis. The process has been designed to be as simple as possible, using a company fleet's data to provide a detailed analysis of technically and financially viable opportunities.

The study will provide information on:

- Electric Vehicles (EVs): Lowest cost vehicle recommendations to meet a company's needs.
- EV Chargers: Lowest cost charging recommendations based on a company's specific location and needs.
- Total Cost: Estimate EV to Internal Combustion Engine (ICE) equivalent total cost of ownership.
- Sustainability: Compare EV to ICE total emissions.

The national trend for fleet vehicle electrification is gaining momentum. No matter where you are in the planning process, Ameren Missouri is here to help business customers prepare for the future.

Electrification Benefits:

- Establish your organization as a leader in innovation.
- Realize your commitment to sustainability.
- Foster employee satisfaction and pride.
- Electrified fleets SAVE MONEY.

Ameren Missouri is your energy advisor and is here to helpthroughout the electrification process. Early engagement with Ameren Missouri is your key to cost-effective implementation of electric fleet vehicles.

Subject: Ameren Missouri Update: Smart Energy Plan Helps Attract New Jobs to O'Fallon; Ameren Missouri Donates Special Fire Truck and Helps Train Local Firefighters!

Dear Legislator,

Here's the latest news from Ameren Missouri. Please take a few minutes to read the articles below. If you have questions or concerns, don't hesitate to reach out.

Ameren Missouri's Smart Energy Plan helps attract new semiconductor wafer jobs to Missouri

GLOBALFOUNDRIES (GF) and GlobalWafers (GWC) are partnering to expand the semiconductor wafer supply through a long-term $800 million supply agreement. The deal, which includes a $210 million capital expansion, creates more than 75 new jobs in O'Fallon and will provide specialized wafers for GF's manufacturing facilities in New York and Vermont. One key enabler for this expansion is Ameren Missouri's Economic Development Incentive, that provides price discounts on energy to new or expanding businesses which meet the program requirements contained in the Smart Energy Plan.

"Missouri is a great place to work and we are encouraged by the GLOBALFOUNDRIES and Global Wafers announcement to expand operations in O'Fallon," said Matt Forck, vice president, community, economic development and energy solutions for Ameren Missouri. "With the Ameren Missouri Smart Energy Plan, we are able to help businesses grow, bringing new jobs to the area while ensuring smart, reliable energy is always available to power the grid of the future."

The announcement comes at a time when the United States is seeking to fortify and expand its semiconductor supply chain, which enables the $91 trillion world economy. Only 12 percent of the world's semiconductor manufacturing capacity is in the United States. Critical to increasing the number of chips manufactured in the U.S., and making U.S. chip manufacturing more globally competitive, are federal investments like those enabled by the bipartisan-supported U.S. Innovation and Competition Act and the already passed CHIPS for America Act.

"Semiconductors are critical to our national security and economic competitiveness," said U.S. Sen. Roy Blunt of Missouri, an instrumental supporter of the U.S. Innovation and Competition Act. "The supply chain of these computer chips is highly complex and largely dominated by other countries. We need to begin making more chips at home to protect U.S. industries from chip shortages like we have seen in recent months. This announcement is good news for semiconductor manufacturing and will create steady, good-paying, high-tech jobs for Missourians."

The silicon wafers produced by GWC are key input materials for semiconductors and an integral part of GF's supply chain. In particular, the 300mm wafers made at GWC's MEMC site in Missouri will be used at GF's most advanced manufacturing facility in Malta, New York, and the 200mm wafers made at the Missouri site will be used at GF's facility in Essex Junction, Vermont. These wafers will support a wide-range of applications including 5G smartphones, wireless connectivity, automotive radar, and aerospace.

"We're proud to see a Missouri business step up to address the critical semiconductor need we are seeing in countless industries all across our state and nation," said Missouri Governor Mike Parson. "MEMC's expansion will strengthen the global semiconductor supply chain, promote American manufacturing, and support good-paying jobs right here in Missouri."

"For more than six decades, we have been the home of MEMC and its manufacturing of world class silicon wafers," said O'Fallon Mayor Bill Hennessy. "O'Fallon takes pride in providing a business and family-friendly environment with a high quality of life that supports MEMC's success. We are thrilled by this new partnership between GlobalWafers and GLOBALFOUNDRIES and the positive impact it will have on our city, state and nation."

The new long-term agreement to expand GWC's MEMC facility in Missouri is strengthened by $9.4 million in investments and support from the State of Missouri, as well as support from the City of O'Fallon, Ameren Missouri, Spire, and Greater St.

Ameren Missouri donates first-of-its-kind fire truck to St. Louis Fire Department

Specialized truck designed to extinguish electrical fires faster and safer

The St. Louis Fire Department has welcomed to its fleet a unique, state-of-the-art fire truck designed to help fight underground electrical fires. Ameren Missouri donated the fire truck to help fight these uncommon but challenging fires that are especially hazardous to firefighters.

The specialized fire truck cuts down the time it takes to fight these fires from hours to minutes, speeding service restoration time for Ameren Missouri customers. Crews have already used the fire truck to battle complex underground fires in downtown St. Louis and a recent chemical fire in Affton.

St. Louis is the first city in the nation to have a fire truck designed specifically for this purpose, thanks to this donation from Ameren Missouri.

"This piece of equipment has already been a game changer for us. The donated fire truck has proven to be instrumental in multiple fires and we appreciate Ameren Missouri's generous donation," said Dennis Jenkerson, chief of the St. Louis Fire Department.

The new truck uses carbon dioxide, which is safer and more effective at extinguishing underground fires, along with a specialized nozzle to quickly extinguish underground fires making it safer and faster for firefighters. As a result, Ameren Missouri customers will experience fewer and shorter service interruptions.

"In the event of an underground fire, we typically can’t address it until the flames burn themselves out," Jenkerson said. “The longer these fires burn, the more damage they can cause to major electrical infrastructure that powers the city.”

WATCH THE NEW FIRE TRUCK IN ACTION

The new St. Louis Fire Department truck includes:
A 4,000-gallon low pressure carbon dioxide (CO_2) tank
A foam agent system
A specially designed nozzle to fit Ameren Missouri equipment
A high pressure pump for high-rise firefighting
A large dry chemical system

Firefighters can use these tools on various fires involving electrical equipment.

"We all want to protect the infrastructure that keeps downtown running. Our fire truck donation will help firefighters better handle unique situations like underground fires," said Marty Lyons, chairman and president of Ameren Missouri. "All of us at Ameren Missouri appreciate the brave members of the St. Louis Fire Department, and what they do every day to keep us safe."

Ameren Fire School partners with St. Louis Fire Department to train local firefighters Training facility in Wellston provides hands-on practice extinguishing complex fires

Keeping the community safe from fires starts with thorough firefighter training. Recently, Ameren welcomed 20 of the newest recruits from the St. Louis Fire Department to complete part of their required training at the Ameren Fire School in Wellston. In fact, the firefighters got to practice using the new fire truck that Ameren Missouri recently donated to the St. Louis Fire Department.

“In order to receive firefighter certification, new recruits must participate in live fire training, which requires a unique facility that can simulate several types of burns,” said Captain Garon Mosby of the St. Louis Fire Department. “Ameren Fire School is the only location in the region that is equipped for certain scenarios, like combustible liquid fires, so we appreciate that they continue to let us bring our recruits to get the hands-on practice needed to complete certification and protect the community.”

Ameren Fire School features several stations where trainees can practice extinguishing different types of fires, including a $1.8 million six-story tower, which was completed in 2020. These facilities were designed to mimic conditions at Ameren’s energy generation plants, but also are highly relevant to the types of fires that might be encountered by local fire districts.

Created in the 1930s, Ameren Fire School’s primary purpose is to prepare the company’s emergency response teams to handle any fires at the energy generation plants before they escalate, keeping co-workers safe and power reliable for Missouri customers.

Nearly 200 Ameren Missouri co-workers are stationed throughout energy centers as part of the fire brigade and emergency response team, and each of them undergoes quarterly refresher trainings at the Ameren Fire School. On average, the school hosts approximately 300 trainings every year for Ameren’s own emergency response teams, as well as area fire departments.

“Ameren is proud to do our part to keep the communities we serve safe and secure by partnering with fire departments to train thousands of firefighters through the years,” said Tim Frankenberg, fire protection engineer at Ameren Fire School. “Our local firefighters and other first responders willingly put themselves in danger every day to protect others, and we hope the skills they gain at the school will help prepare them to handle similar fires safely and successfully.”

Subject: American Audit

Hello everyone.

My name is Christopher Stow. I want Missouri to run a forensic audit of our election. I do not believe there is someone alive who can remember when they believed they vote mattered; I want to live in that sort of nation.Follow Arizona's lead, and clean house. Find the legal voters, and the dead people, and the over stuffed houses. Find it all, and use tax money to help the taxpayer!

This need is greater than normal politics. We have a chance to clean America from unjust, hypocrisy. From Monopoly's on the internet, to the safety of your children, the left wings need to go. They are wanting us to accept pedo's as members of our society. They are pushing for gun control. They are pushing to open the boarders. They want us under the thumb of those overseas.

I am a globalist, but I will not be for my lifetime, because it is dangerous to give power to those who believe themselves above others!

FUCK THE SLAVE HOLDERS! AMERICA IS INDEPENDENT!

So WE THE RAILROAD BITCHES are to fork out $10,850,000 this year in the name of Amtrak which the PRIVATE railroad (Union Pacific) gets funneled MILLIONS for so-called rental (THAT PART LEFT OUT!!).
Millions that the PRIVATE railroads make in POLITICAL contributions back to the politicians so WE get smoke blown up the old hershey highway. Kinda like getting screwed without a kiss.

But wait --This is only like a 1/3rd of Amtrak routes so how much for the Southwest Chief andTexas Eagle state runs.

Then one would have to wonder how it is even possible to have 59 pages of changes on a 40 day old State Transportation Improvement Plan. According to the plan our engineers make millions and scopers whatever the hell scoping means make more millions.

$520,000 for a parking lot at a FOOD PANTRY on private property. Geez, who is running the MoDot circus?

Subject: APPLICATIONS OPEN - Youth Diplomats Institute
Attachment(s): "Youth Diplomats Institute Packet.pdf"

Good afternoon,

It is not too late for students to apply for the 2020-2021 Youth Diplomats Institute! Do you know a student interested in connecting with the globe? The Youth Diplomats Institute is free for students and applications are closing soon! This nine-month long experiential learning program prepares high school students to engage in international diplomacy now. More information attached.

Students will:

- Work at the table with diplomats and international leaders

- Collaborate and exchange cultural experiences with diverse people

- Learn to value and critically reflect on the impact of culture in their lives

- Apply the skills they learn to serve global connections and Citizen Diplomacy within their local communities

- Engage in MVA worthy Real World Learning projects and experiences

Applications are due September 10!

- Applications and more information can be found here
- Click this link to send your students a personal message

Here what our Youth Diplomats have to say about the experience

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PS5WKBzKMGc

We would love to speak more with you about our programs, opportunities and how to be involved. If you have any questions, please email Devon Teran at dteran@globaltieskc.org or Sarah Martin at smartin@globaltieskc.org.

All the best,

Caleb

YOUTH DIPLOMATS

The Global Ties KC Youth Diplomats Institute is a nine-month experiential learning program to equip teens in Kansas and Missouri with the tools necessary for success in a global society. Selected participants meet once a month to explore the themes of public affairs and diplomacy. This includes one-on-one meetings with international diplomats, international visitors, and local Kansas City business leaders. Additionally, students participate in workshops and seminars to expand their academic and professional toolboxes.

Program Objectives:

- Expose students to different cultures to develop a higher understanding of diversity and inclusion.
- Develop students' professional skills through networking and career tool discovery and personalization.
- Create opportunity for students to learn about different global career paths.
- Prepare the next generation for a global society, creating a successful bourgeoning workforce for employers.
- Connect students with their peers from different communities and facilitate interactions to develop better understanding of their own surroundings.

Youth Diplomats:

- Are high-school-age students who have an interest in community leadership and global affairs
- Will attend 6 out of 8 required sessions
- Will present a community action project, worked on during monthly sessions
- Will complete a minimum of 10 hours of community service

Youth Diplomat Reflections

WHY IS IT IMPORTANT FOR HUMANS TO BE CONNECTED?

The YD program has helped me support and become more involved in my community. From volunteering to supporting local businesses and learning new cultures around me.

- Ashinedu

I met people I never would have met otherwise, listened to people with careers I didn't even know existed, and was given opportunities to grow as a person and a leader.

- Nevaeh

Through the Youth Diplomats Program, I have gained more pride in where I come from - KC - and had experiences in diplomacy that made me more passionate about sharing my story and learning others'.

BREAKING NEWS - Lt. Gov Mike Kehoe forgoes a run for U.S. Senate to be a candidate for Governor in 2024

Statement from Lt. Gov. Kehoe:

"Senator Roy Blunt's lifetime of service to the citizens of this state has benefited every family, community and institution in Missouri.

I am humbled to know so many Missourians see an even greater leadership role for me in Missouri. I will continue to use my years of job-creating business experience, what I have learned on the farm, in leading for conservative views and values in the state senate, and now as Lieutenant Governor to increase opportunity, freedom and security for all Missourians.

I will work to unify the party behind a strong nominee committed to representing Missouri's conservative, common-sense views and values in the United States Senate.

While Claudia and I have been honored by the encouragement and offers of support for me to serve as Missouri's next US Senator, my true calling remains to work on behalf of Missourians in Missouri as Lieutenant Governor and as a candidate for Governor in 2024."

Subject: Canceled: Policy Development Committee Informational Presentation

Fellow Caucus Members,

Policy Development will be holding another informational presentation on Wednesday night, March 24, in the Joint Committee Room (Room 117). We will begin at 7:00 p.m.

Our first round of speakers will join us by Zoom from Worldwide Technology in St. Louis to discuss State-wide uses of Cloud Computing and other technologies to bring government IT into the 21st century.

Since we were overtaken by events on March 8, we will also welcome back Dottie Bailey, Rick Francis and Alex Riley to walk us through the topics of censorship, State review of Federal mandates, and 10th Amendment protections in the second part of the program. Discussion will follow the presentations.

The Policy Development Committee will provide educational opportunities for the Caucus throughout this Session. We will also provide educational material on various policy topics if you are interested. Your ideas for presenters are most welcome.

Cracking Down on Copper Thieves (HB 69)

A bill approved by the General Assembly and recently signed into law by Gov. Parson will close a loophole in Missouri's laws regarding the theft of copper and precious metals.

Missouri currently tracks every time a business purchases scrap metal, junk, or other materials that include copper, but an exemption leaves such transactions unrecorded if the material is valued at less than $50. Legislation now set to become law repeals that exception so that all such sales will be recorded.

The bill's sponsor said it will deter copper theft, which is a problem statewide. He's heard of thieves stripping copper from vacant houses in his district and doing tens of thousands of dollars of damage.

"By doing this then they can track who's been stealing copper and who's been selling it, and if you can't sell it, why break in and steal it?" he said.

The bill also aims to address a dramatic increase in recent years in the theft of catalytic converters. It makes such thefts a Class-E felony, punishable by up to four years in prison.

The bill sponsor said, "Thieves get a battery-powered saw and cut a catalytic converter out and probably in 2 or 3 minutes, and they'll be gone. That's happened again to my town just the other day. They went to an auto dealer place and the guy had already cut out five or six catalytic converters."

Under the bill a detached catalytic converter also cannot be altered or destroyed for five days after it is bought. Another provision increases from five days to ten the time a pawn shop owner must wait before melting down precious metals, in case they've bought stolen items. The legislation also increases the length of time records on the sales of certain metals must be maintained from two years to three.

The provisions in the bill take effect August 28.

Back-to-School Sales Tax Holiday Begins August 6

Missourians interested in saving some of their hard-earned dollars as they purchase school supplies for their kids should plan to participate in the upcoming back-to-school sales tax holiday. The holiday begins at 12:01 a.m. on Friday, Aug. 6, and runs through midnight on Sunday, Aug. 8. During this time, certain back-to-school purchases such as school supplies, computers, clothing, and other qualifying items as defined by statute are exempt from state sales tax.

Approved by the legislature in 2003, the three-day period allows parents to buy school-related items such as clothing, school supplies and computers without having to pay the state sales tax of 4.225 percent. In some cases, local municipalities have also chosen to honor the holiday, which means parents in these areas will be able to forego local sales tax as well. For a complete list of the cities and counties that have chosen not to participate, please use the following link: dor.mo.gov/taxation/business/tax-types/sales-use/holidays/back-to-school/.

During the sales tax holiday, state sales tax will not be charged on the following items:

- Clothing that does not have a taxable value of more than $100. Eligible clothing items include any article of apparel intended to be worn on or about the body, including footwear and disposable diapers for infants or adults. Cloth and other material used to make school uniforms or other school clothing are also included. Not included are watches, watchbands, jewelry, handbags, handkerchiefs, umbrellas, scarves, ties, headbands, or belt buckles;
- School supplies, not exceeding $50 per purchase, that are used in a standard classroom for educational purposes. School supplies include, but are not limited to, textbooks, notebooks, paper, writing instruments, crayons, art supplies, rulers, book bags, backpacks, chalk, maps, globes, handheld calculators, graphing calculators that do not have a taxable value of more than $150, and computer software that does not have a taxable value of more than $350. Not included are watches, radios, CD players, headphones, sporting equipment, portable or desktop telephones, copiers or other office equipment, furniture, or fixtures; and
- Personal computers that do not cost more than $1,500 and computer peripheral devices that do not cost more than $1,500. A personal computer can be a laptop, desktop, or tower computer system which consists of a central processing unit, random access memory, a storage drive, a display monitor, and a keyboard. Peripheral devices include items such as a disk drive, memory module, compact disk drive, daughterboard, digitizer, microphone, modem, motherboard, mouse, multimedia speaker, printer, scanner, single-user hardware, single-user operating system, soundcard, or video card.

Anyone who makes a qualified purchase may participate in the holiday.

Celebrating Missouri's Bicentennial

Missouri officials are holding a number of events to celebrate the state's bicentennial, and the public is invited to attend the upcoming Missouri Statehood Day on August 10. The formal ceremony will take place that day at 9 a.m. on the South Lawn of the Missouri

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Capitol. Governor Mike Parson will be joined by past governors and other dignitaries to recognize Missouri's 200 years of statehood. The public can attend in person or view the ceremony online by visiting Missouri2021.org.

In addition to the day's festivities, the U.S. Postal Service will unveil the Missouri Statehood stamp in recognition of the bicentennial. Remarks will be made by Governor Parson, U.S. Senator Roy Blunt, and other officials. Missouri's Poet Laureate Maryfrances Wagner will read a poem for the bicentennial and music will be performed by Missouri Choral Directors Association All-State Festival Choir and the Missouri National Guard 135th Army Band.

Following the formal ceremony, the public is invited to a Naturalization ceremony that begins at 11 a.m. in the first floor Rotunda of the Missouri State Capitol. Special bicentennial-themed exhibits will be on display inside the Capitol, including the Missouri Bicentennial Quilt, the Missouri Bicentennial Mural, My Missouri 2021 Photo exhibit, and a Missouri Timeline display.

The Missouri bicentennial is also the theme for the Missouri State Fair, Aug. 12-22 in Sedalia. Our Missouri Celebration features special bicentennial events and exhibits, including Missouri on Mic, a project sponsored by the State Historical Society of Missouri and KBIA operated by the Missouri School of Journalism, to record stories of Missourians during the bicentennial year. In addition, there will be livestock shows and competitive exhibits, entertainment, motor sports and other regular State Fair offerings.

Missouri Statehood Day, Aug. 10, 2021, marks an important milestone of 200 years since the Missouri Territory became the 24th state to enter the Union. More than 200 bicentennial events are taking place this year, statewide, with major public events scheduled in August. Events are being developed with COVID-19 safety measures during the pandemic and in-person activities will adhere to local and state health guidelines at the time of the event.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Members,

Attached is a presentation that conveys your list of priorities we were able to accomplish this session. Please feel free to use this as you talk to constituents and local groups about our work this year in Jefferson City.

This past session was a great session on many fronts for the people of Missouri. They elected a conservative majority in the General Assembly and in many issue areas we were able to deliver meaningful conservative change to state government.

From further protecting our second amendment rights to pushing back on out-of-control local government mandates on small businesses, the House has led the way. The successes we achieved for the people of Missouri are because of your hard work and dedication. We finished this session as a team, and we look forward to continuing working together as a team as we enter the next session.

We have a lot of unfinished business, and your priorities remain important to us and the entire leadership team. In the coming months we will again be visiting with you to talk about what issues you hope to have the House concentrate on next session.

Please feel free to reach out to us or anyone on our staff if you have any questions.

Regards,

Rob Vescovo

John Wiemann

Weekly Update

February 12, 2021

It's safe to go back into the.....classroom

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released a much-anticipated report today that provides a road map for putting kids back in the classroom, citing strong evidence that schools can safely reopen, especially for elementary students.

According to a story published by the Associated Press, "CDC officials emphasized that in-person learning has not been identified as a substantial driver of coronavirus spread in U.S. communities, and that transmission among students is now considered relatively rare."

The story also reported that, "The safest way to open schools is by making sure there is as little disease in a community as possible. The agency urged local officials to assess whether a bad outbreak is occurring in a community when making decisions about sending adults and children into schools."

In Kansas and Missouri, in-person instruction decisions are currently being made on a local level, with states only providing guidelines or recommendations.

Aligned Priorities

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Aligned Priorities

This week we appeared in front of the House Committee on Emerging Issues to support HB 973 (Shields). This bill would provide more funding in the state foundation formula for early childhood education and deliver up to $53 million to districts and charters annually. This bill is similar to SB 167.

Representative Brenda Shields told committee members that although we include early childhood in the foundation formula, we only fund a small portion of Pre-K in school districts. "Expanding the foundation to include 10 percent of the free- and reduced-lunch population is imperative to Missouri's future - 85% of a child's brain is developed in the first 1,000 days of a child's life and 95% of a child's brain is developed by the age of 5. Knowing this, it is evident that our greatest return on investment is to provide these services to low-income children at a very early age."

In 2014, Aligned worked with legislators to put Pre-K funding in the formula; Linda Rallo testified that this was a significant first step, and HB 973 will build upon that work and provide more funding, especially to rural communities.

She added that this bill would "have a great economic effect on the two-generation workforce, where you give parents the ability to have options for their kids while they work, but you're also giving those kids a great start."

Representative Scott Cupps thanked Rallo for her testimony and said that this bill would help bring equity to families in his rural district.

We also expect the Committee on Children and Families to take a vote on HB 865 (Shields) next week. This bill would give counties the ability to create local early childhood boards and seek voter-approved funding through a property tax.

Aligned has been working diligently with committee members this past week to educate them on the benefits of this legislation.

And finally, HB 1071, which makes the early learning quality assurance report program (QAR) permanent, was referred to the House Committee on Elementary and Secondary Education.

Aligned Priority Tracking Report

General Legislative Update

Here are a few toplines from activity under both the federal and state domes this week.

- U.S. House Energy and Commerce Committee released its part of the COVID relief package, and Missouri stands to receive an extra $1.7 billion in Medicaid funding.
- Senate Transportation, Infrastructure, and Public Safety Committee approved a funding bill to incrementally increase the gas tax by 2.5 cents per year for six years for a total of 15 cents by 2022.
- House Elections and Elected Officials Committee heard two bills and nine constitutional amendments aimed at overhauling the initiative petition process.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001060

- Former Missouri Senator Scott Sifton announced plans to challenge incumbent U.S. Senator Roy Blunt in the 2022 election.

General Education Update

This week the House Committee on Budget passed HB 137 - the Charter Funding Equity Bill - by a vote of 14-13. This bill requires charter schools and each school district to include an annual independent audit to verify pupil residency.

The bill also mandates that school districts pay for each pupil attending a charter school in that district based on the formula established in the bill which includes all state aid and local aid received by the school district divided by the total weighted average daily attendance of the school district and all charter schools within the school district.

In the legislation, "local aid" is defined to include all local and county revenue received by the school district and charter schools within the school district, with specific examples and exclusions specified in the bill.

The Committee on Rules must approve HB 137 before the bill moves to the House floor for a full debate. We expect action in the next week.

Download our full Missouri Capitol Report including our Education Update for the week of February 1st here.

Budget Update

The Missouri Senate sent the FY 2021 supplemental budget bill to Governor Mike Parson's desk, which contains $324 million in federal stimulus for rental relief for landlords and tenants.

The House Budget Committee received a budget presentation by officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education this week.

The FY22 budget proposes $6.7 billion for public education, which includes $3.56 billion for the PK-12 foundation formula, $661 million for the Office of Childhood, and $38 million for career education.

Dr. Margie Vandeven and newly-named Office of Childhood Director Dr. Pam Thomas answered questions around the new Office of Childhood and discussed the impetus for its creation.

"It's a conversation that's been had for a long time, more recently in 2018. The governor selected our department to be the lead administrator of the preschool development grant. And the focus of that grant is really to make more formal coordination across agencies put formal relationships between our agencies," said Thomas.

She also explained that there was a task force in place through a Zero-to-Three grant to focus on early childhood governance and assess the strengths of each state agency and where locating an Office of Childhood made the most sense.

Aligned was honored to serve on this task force to make a recommendation and has confidence in the governor's decision to house these programs and services within the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

Kansas News

Legislative Update

It feels like session is moving faster than usual this year. Today marked the last day to for non-exempt committees to introduce bills in their respective chambers. Lawmakers will work bills for the next two weeks before the February 26th deadline. Each full chamber will work bills March 1st through the 4th before all non-exempt bills must be passed out of their house of origin on the 5th (Turnaround). We are almost halfway there!

Scholarship Bill Clears Senate
Last week, the Senate Education Committee also advanced SB 61 to the full chamber. This week, after a long full Senate debate, SB 61 was passed 23-14. This bill expands the $8,000 private school annual scholarship to any Kansas student eligible for free and reduced lunch. Lawmakers anticipate that close to 1,200 students will utilize the program in 2021/22, up from 630 in 2020/21. Last week, the K-12 Budget Committee passed its sister bill, HB 2068.

Much of the debate on the bill involves the tax credits offered to donors to this scholarship fund. Donors who contribute can get a 70% income tax deduction of their total contribution. The program is capped at $10 million for $8,000 scholarships or 1,250 students. Roughly $2 million of the fund was used in 2020/21 for 630 students. Additionally, opponents pointed out the program mostly supports urban/suburban students, as private options are often not available in rural areas.

Navigating Next
The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) presented its plan to lead schools out of the pandemic this week to the State Board of Education (SBOE) and the House K-12 Education Budget Committee. KSDE Commissioner Randy Watson shared the NAVIGATING NEXT document with the groups. The agency will use the plan to outline how all schools will return to in-person classes, how assessments will be administered and used to address learning gaps. Watson said that Navigating Next will help districts begin to plan for summer school, offering after school and special tutoring programs, and extending the school year the next couple of years to fill the gaps.

Kansas has received two CARES ACT payments to help support this process of getting kids back to school. Craig Neuenswander, KSDE Deputy Commissioner of Fiscal and Administrative Services, shared a breakdown of the funds to date.

- Title 1 (90%); COVID-19 Supplies (10%)
  - Spring 2020 - $84 million
  - Fall 2020 - $333 million
- Special Education - $24 million
- Private Schools - $26.7 million available for those who apply for COVID related service expenses.

Other education-related activity

The House K-12 Education Budget Committee passed HB 2119 this week

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001062

after extensive debate. The Student Empowerment Program will direct State General Funds into education savings accounts for students to use for private instruction.

HB 2119 includes stipulations that are targeted specifically at students who spent a large amount of time in virtual or hybrid learning. At-risk includes those who underwent four consecutive weeks of remote learning in the current or immediately preceding school year or six weeks within a calendar year.

"When we watch some schools go remote, some for over a year, that puts kids at risk," said Representative Kristey Williams. "We need to give parents a chance to let their kids go in person to school."

This bill outlines a transfer of base aid, about $4,500 could be used by students for tuition, fees, textbooks and other supplies charged by a private school. With much of the state's students in virtual or hybrid learning at least part of the last year, it is estimated that it could cost the state about $217 million if just 10% of the state's 476,000 public-school students participated in the program.

The funds also could be used for "educational therapies or services" provided by a licensed or accredited education provider, certified tutoring services as well as tuition and fees charged by an accredited private online learning program.

The legislation defines a "qualified" private school as one that's accredited or a nonaccredited school that's registered with the Kansas State Board of Education.
The accounts would be administered by the state treasurer, who estimates that it would cost about $600,000 to set up a new division to run the program. State Treasurer Lynn Rogers, whose office would have to administer the accounts under the bill, released an article citing numerous problems that he found with the proposal.

Kansas Promise Scholarship Act

The Committee on Commerce, Labor and Economic Development will hear HB 2287 this Wednesday, February 17th. This bill establishes the Kansas Promise Scholarship Act to provide scholarships to students who attend postsecondary educational programs that correspond to high-need career fields. Like its sister bill, SB 43, HB 2287 directs to the Kansas Board of Regents and Department of Commerce to identify up to 10 fields with the highest demand for skilled workers. and requires recipients to perform community service while enrolled in the qualified programs.

Civics Requirement Moving

The House Education Committee passed HB 2039, a bill that would require all Kansas students to pass a civics test as a requirement to graduate high school, without recommendation this week.

Children Violated, Innocence Perverted: Nationwide State Child Abuse:

Proverbs 24:11 "Rescue - children - being led away to death; hold back those staggering toward slaughter."

State and public school - Child Abuse and Hate Crime: Indoctrinating children to Honor Sexual Perversion! Why? Devil Media Demands: Sexual Perverts must be honored. Congress, Judges, Educators, Politicians, and many church leader - Bow the Knee and Sacrifice the minds and hearts of children to be harvested by the Devil. Showing Honor on what God proclaimed is evil and vile is Devil Worship. The vulgarity of LGBT sexual depravity is being forced fed to children. Devil Media Muzzled: Mom and Dad and Preachers "Close their Eyes."

Public school teachers are preaching the Devil gospel: Reject God's Word, believe the Devil and Do not "discriminate" against sexual perverts Parading their sin. Those who believes God and refuses to close, the eyes of their heart, to evil, are accused of "discriminating." The Devil's Faithful Scream: Close your Eyes do Not Discriminate! With hearts open to "Truth" those who believe God - will call on sexual perverts, and those who Honor Depravity to repent. The Devils Faithful Would Accuse: Jesus Christ of "discriminating." For Christ preached "Repent or Perish" Luke 13:1-5.

Minnesota News Report: Year 2018 - officials in St. Louis County, Minnesota, conspired to give a 16-year-old boy hormone therapy and narcotic drugs to start transitioning him to become a girl. The government began the sex change process for the young boy to become a girl WITHOUT notifying his mother. Sadly, too late to stop government Demons from giving Annmarie's son sex change treatment. But hope we can stop another mother from living through this nightmare. Public School Sex education is: LGBT - Indoctrination, and how to be sexual promiscuous without consequences.

Madness prevails in education in today. Teachers go on strike formoney and benefits instead of defending the minds and hearts of children from being infused with Sexual Depravity and Fraud. Teachers have become, prostitutes of the State. They will teach anything as long as the state pays them Teachers who "parade their sin" and identify themselves to children - with their sexual perversion, are committing a hate crime against Children and attempting to recruit them. Personal Sexual Preferences should Not be Evangelized by educators to students and Must be kept private to protect children. Some Teachers: Disapprove of what happens in sex Ed but will Not speak out: Leviticus 19:17.

Should those who believe God, be compelled to keep their mouth shut and Not share what they believe - or Sexual Perverts be compelled to keep their sexual practices to themselves? And Not parade their depravity to children? Teachers defend the innocence of children: Stop pandering to Devil Media and sexual perverts.

Dr Frankenstein is so willing to, drug, mutilate and desecrate the God given distinction between male and female. Instead, a young boy or girl should be counseled: Your imaginations do not match reality. Teachers encourage them in their madness instead, why? Devil Media and Money: The State pays Frankenstein to drug and mutilate the Sexually Deceived; but Not to counsel them regarding their Reality Denying Delusions. Hell is the destiny of unrepentant Teachers, politicians, and Judges!

Romans 1:28 "Since they did NOT think it worthwhile to - retain the knowledge of God: He gave them over to a - Depraved Mind." State Leaders Exchanged: The "knowledge of God" for the Madness of Devil Media - Educators and Dr Frankenstein. Teachers: Stop the madness of sexually brainwashing and indoctrinating our children. Go on Strike until sex education is banned from Public and Private school. America Understand: Devil Media, Sexual Perverts and - Love your Black Criminal, Hate your white neighbor, Black Racist - are Driving - Federal and State Leaders - as if they were Dumb Mules!

Children would be Blessed if they were learning: "The Creator made them male and female and said: For this reason, a man shall leave his father and mother and be united to his wife." The two become one flesh in their children. Matthew 19:4-5. Instead, they are being sexually deceived: Teaching the "Two Moms and two Dads" Depravity to children is a FRAUD and "Child Abuse" that - Captures young minds - for the Devil.

Instead in Court all should be consider the Same Race and Male or Female. No one should be Rewarded or condemned based on Race or believing God. The FRAUD of Dr Frankenstein changing a man into a woman must be rejected or madness and tyranny will prevail. National Leaders:

Devil Worship: Left, Right and Religious - Honor what God Proclaimed Evil. Hearts are beingTested and weighed on - Scales of Time and Truth. God's Word is Truth. Isaiah 37:26 "In days of old I planned it." Today's Evil Time: Is a time of God's Testing. All Power: Has been given to Jesus Christ, Matthew 28:18. 1. Opening Remarks: Director Marsh welcomed the group and provided a brief update about the St. Louis VARO response to the COVID-19 national emergency.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

A. Director Marsh briefed the Congressional Staff members regarding the St. Louis VA Regional Office (VARO) Phase 2 plans to reopen the Charles F. Prevedel Federal Building.

- Since February, the St. Louis VARO has been in Phase 2. During Phase 2, Public Contact and Veteran Readiness and Employment are meeting with Veterans by appointment and walk-in basis (when available interview slots are available). Veteran Service Organizations can return to the building at a 50 percent staffing level. Veteran Benefits Administration (VBA) have and will continue to serve Veterans through work-at-home activities, National Call Centers, and Inquiry Routing and Information System inquiries. Additionally, the St. Louis VARO is following the Center for Disease Control (CDC) guidance on masking, and social distancing.

- New COVID-19 guidance will be released from the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) which will replace the phased opening guidance. The Director will provide information once it becomes available.

2. Business Line Information:

A. Centralized Support Division (CSD), Chief Kathy Austin

- The COVID-19 epidemic requiring telework continues to impact the Congressional process. However, the Congressional mailbox inventory has reduced the average pending time in the Congressional mailbox. A 100 percent review is conducted of all final response letters for accuracy and completeness prior to release.

- Congressional Statistics FY21
  - Pending: 565
  - ADP: 143.0
  - Average Daily Receipts: 5.8
  - Average Daily emails 15
  - Average Daily Completions: 8.6

- The Congressional mailbox inventory has been reduced to an average pending of 15 a day.

- The CSD has 2,727 cases completed for FY20, averaging 227.3 cases monthly. At the end of FY20 average days to completion (ADC) is 62.3 with control time of 12.9. 3,177 cases received for FY20.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Director Marsh is meeting with the National Personnel Records Center (NPRC) Director regularly. NPRC has different criteria for opening and moving through phases of reopening. Since December 2020, the St. Louis Regional Office CSD have 48 employees reporting to NPRC to assist with records requests.

- CSD has an authorized staffing level of 415 employees and has 397 on staff. As of December 2020, CSD has gained 12 Program Support Assistant (PSA), five Sr. PSAs, one Supervisors, one Management Assistant; and lost 14 PSAs, one Mail Analyzer and one Program Support Clerk (PSC) due to retirement, resignation, or transfer to other agencies.

B. Veteran Service Center (VSC), VSC Manager Garry Moore

- The pandemic impacted VSC's performance, but VSC was still able to have a very successful year. FY21 VSC End Product Completions are 111 percent of the target.

- The nationwide VBA claims inventory is 60 percent in the exam pending status. However, Veterans Affairs (VA) has resumed Compensation and Pension examinations at most VA Medical Center Locations. Contract examinations are being scheduled and conducted across the nation. Examinations are increasingly being scheduled. As more exams are completed, more claims can be completed.

- The VSC quality was below the national average, and below target. This is an area of focus. Training plans are focusing on areas which need improvement and there is an increase in quality from 92.3 percent to 94.7 percent since last quarter.

- The VSC now has 485 of 524 authorized full-time employees. The division is hiring for Veterans Service Representatives (VSRs), Assistant Coaches, and Assistant Veterans Service Center Managers (AVSCM).

- Appeals inventory is down to 507 claims. By mid-April, the Appeals VSRs are transitioning to the VSC as VRS.

- Blue Water Navy (BWN) claims have been an active area of work for the St. Louis VARO. Nationally, 39,779 BWN claims have been completed, paying a total of $731.76 million in retroactive awards.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

C. National Call Center (NCC), Acting Manager Michelle Lacy-Rush

- The St. Louis National Call Center (NCC) is one of eight National Call Centers participating in the Solid Start program, and the program has just passed the one-year mark. VA is calling every newly separated service member three times during their first year of separation. While all three calls are important, the first call is the one during which the agents discuss benefit programs, including some time-sensitive programs. Follow-up calls ensure the Veteran continues to have assistance and information they need. It is very important that VA have accurate information, so the agents can reach the Veterans before those time limits expire. VA asks that Veteran's Service Organizations (VSOs) emphasize the importance to Veterans of keeping their contact information with VA current. The program has been very successful. St. Louis agents alone have completed over 57,853 of these calls.

- The NCC's speed to answer for FY21 was 10 second; the goal is 60 seconds, and quality is 89.89 percent the goal is 91 percent.

- NCC has an authorized staffing level of 196 employees and has 187 on staff. There are 10 new hires in training. The NCC is currently using the direct hiring authority recruitment to announce and fill any potential vacancies for the Legal Administrative Specialist (LAS) position. The St. Louis NCC is currently in the process of hiring additional agents. The NCC ended FY20 fully staffed. FY21 the NCC RAM was increased.

D. Veteran Readiness and Employment, Officer (VR&E) Heather Shade

- In FY21 the St. Louis VR&E Accuracy is 97 percent for fiscal actions; 100 percent for outcomes; and 91 percent for case management. Completed entitlement decisions in 37 days on average and developed 132 new plans.

- VR&E offices located at the St. Louis, Springfield, Lee's Summit and Fort Leonard Wood and on the Webster University of St. Louis campus are open.

- VR&E has an authorized staffing level of 20 employees and has 18 employees on staff.

- VR&E has seen an increase in applications due to summer semester starting soon. The GI Bill has changed how they determine entitlement remaining. The GI Bill will no longer deduct any Chapter 31 entitlement used when establishing how much entitlement remains with the GI Bill. However, VR&E's rules for entitlement remain unchanged and will deduct any entitlement used by any VA education program to determine how much entitlement remains with VR&E.

E. Support Services Division (SSD) Acting Chief Fran Goss

- SSD has an authorization of 38 Full-time Employees (FTE) in which they are responsible for the purchasing of supplies, facilitates travel authorizations, assist with facilitating custodial and maintenance issues, support reasonable accommodation requests, ensure that various benefits are paid, to include compensation benefits, issue Personal Identity Verification (PIV) cards, maintains Personally identifiable information (PII) by processing shred, distributes mail, and process payroll. Composed of 34 FTE at this time, the three departments are Administration, Finance and the Records Management Officers in which they serve over 1200 employees, Human Resources Center (HRC) Detroit and the Northeastern District Office.

- The Administrative Support Services Specialist are teleworking at a 50 percent capacity and in office 50 percent to assist with PIV cards and receipt of supplies; the mailroom is in 100 percent full capacity at the Regional Officer (RO), Monday through Friday. The SSD Finance Team is currently teleworking at 98 percent capacity with two employees volunteering for return to office duties.

- One Supervisor and Two Records Management Officers are responsible for ensuring all records and sensitive information are processed via policy and guidelines within the VBA guidelines.

- SSD is currently hiring for one GS 11 Record Management Officers (RMO), one Accountant GS9, one Support Services Specialist GS 9, and one Program Support Assistance GS 5.

- SSD services include facilities and space management, contracting for services which include all construction planning projects throughout the RO, supplies and equipment, publications, records management, GSA fleet, transit benefits program, COOP, building security, PIV cards, mail processing, travel management and credit card management. The mailroom issues approximately 90,000+ pieces of outgoing mail monthly.

F. Questions:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Robin Cromer from Senator Duckworth's Office requested the number of record requests pending at the NPRC. Director Marsh recommended contacting NPRC directly for specific information and provided the NPRC Director's name.

- Debbie Colyott from Congressman Jason Smith's Office asked if Blue Water Navy Veterans who were previously denied need to reapply? The Veterans Service Center Manager (VSCM) Garry Moore stated cases are being reviewed. However, the Veteran is encouraged to reapply for Blue Water Navy compensation benefits.

G. Closing Remarks: Director Marsh assured the attendees she will let them know as soon as additional information is available related to expanded office operations. Also, the Director request Veterans who make a claim for benefits to wait for the VARO to request records from the NPRC. The duplicate request for records to the NPRC may cause delay in the claim. She closed the meeting encouraging the Congressional Staff to contact her if they have questions or concerns.

Dear County Prosecutors of Missouri,

Please see the following Press Release: https://www.pr.com/press-release/810216 exposing what some Missouri Legislators and Judicial Officials continue to cover up and ignore… A former State Judge Michael Manners & Federal Judge Carlos Murgia resigned!

In the coming weeks I will share this information with Federal & State Prosecutors and Federal & State Legislators throughout our country and allow Missouri Officials & Missouri's Supreme Court to explain how this lawless carnage continued for the past 20 years… But more importantly why no one did anything about the judicial theft of business & personal property not to mention endless Missouri Constitutional Rights violations…

I will also be providing continuous updates during this election year to Missouri's candidates & prosecutors running for office…

The first legislators to ask about this are Sheila Solons & Lynn Morris who were emailed several times… The first Judge to ask is the The Honorable Missouri Judge and former Jackson County Prosecutor Mr. Jeff Keal… Will the Cover Up Continue?

Dear Legislators,

DESE-Related Coronavirus (COVID-19) Information is being updated regularly as is the DHEWD web page Coronavirus (COVID-19) Resources to help you with constituent questions. I. April 30, 2020: Local Education Agency (LEA) Allocations under the CARES Act Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief Fund (ESSER)

DESE will notify Local Education Agencies (LEAs) as soon as ESSER Funds are made available by USED. At that time, DESE will invite LEAs to a webinar where information regarding the LEA ESSER Fund application will be discussed and technical assistance on completing the application will be provided. In the meantime, DESE Deputy Commissioner, Roger Dorson, invited LEAs to review DESE's newly updated CARES Act guidance document. The content of Dr. Dorson's guidance document for LEA leaders is reproduced below.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The ESSER fund will provide DESE with $208,443,000. This funding stream is allocated to DESE and must be appropriated as follows:

o $187,598,700 or 90% must be distributed based on the Title I formula (FY19), with equitable services provided to non-public schools.
o DESE may set aside up an estimated $20,844,300 or 10% for the following allowances:

 "…for administrative costs and the remainder for emergency needs as determined by the state educational agency to address issues responding to coronavirus, which may be addressed through the use of grants or contracts."

The funds must be allocated by DESE within one year of receipt or the funds must be returned to the federal government.

LOCAL EDUCATION AGENCY (LEA) ALLOCATIONS

Under the CARES Act, ESSER allocations to LEAs are based on the proportion of Title I, Part A funds each LEA received in the most recent fiscal year. (Please note some adjustments may be necessary to comply with Section 1122(c)(3) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA), which prohibits consideration of Title I, Part A hold harmless amounts in calculating State or local allocations for any other United Sates Department of Education (USED) program, including ESSER Funds.)

Although ESSER funds are distributed to LEAs based on Title I, Part A allocations, they are not Title I, Part A funds. Therefore, ESSER funds are not required to be allocated to specific schools because school and student eligibility, supplement not supplant, and other Title I requirements do not apply to ESSER. ESSER is its own separate, flexible program intended to help with the response to COVID-19.

LEAs may spend their ESSER funds on any allowable activity listed below, but please consider:

- The purpose of the ESSER fund is to provide LEAs with emergency relief funds to address the impact COVID-19 has had, and continues to have, on elementary and secondary schools. This includes both continuing to provide educational services while schools are closed and developing plans for the return to normal operations.
- USED expects LEAs will exercise every effort to spend funds quickly to address pressing student needs
- USED encourages LEAs to focus on their most important educational needs as a result of COVID-19, including remote learning and assessing and addressing learning gaps resulting from disruptions in educational services.
- DESE encourages LEAs to use ESSER funds in ways that meet the needs of low-income students, students with disabilities, English learners, migrant students, students experiencing homelessness, children in foster care and other vulnerable populations.

ALLOWABLE USES

In light of these considerations, LEAs that receive ESSER funds may spend them on:

- Any activity authorized by ESEA, IDEA, AEFLA, Perkins or McKinney Vento,
- Coordination of preparedness and response efforts to COVID-19,
- Providing principals and other school leaders with resources to address individual school needs,
- Activities to address the unique needs of low-income children, children with disabilities, English learners, racial and ethnic minorities, students experiencing homelessness, and foster care youth, including outreach and service delivery,
- Procedures and systems to improve LEA preparedness and response efforts,
- Training and professional development for LEA staff on sanitation and minimizing the spread of infectious disease,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Purchasing supplies to sanitize and clean LEA facilities,
- Planning for and coordinating during long-term closures, including how to provide the following: meals, technology for online learning, guidance for carrying out IDEA requirements, and educational services consistent with applicable requirements,
- Purchasing educational technology (including hardware, software and connectivity) for the LEA's students,
- Providing mental health services and supports,
- Planning and implementing summer learning and supplemental afterschool programs, and
- Other activities necessary to maintain LEA operations and services and employ existing LEA staff.

For a full description of allowable activities, please see Section 18003(d) of the CARES Act.

UNALLOWABLE ACTIVITIES

- Bonuses, merit pay or similar expenditures, unless related to disruptions or closures related to COVID-19,
- Subsidizing or offsetting executive salaries and benefits of individuals who are not LEA employees, or
- Expenditures related to state or local teacher or faculty unions or associations.

OBLIGATION OF FUNDS

ESSER funds will remain available for obligation through September 30, 2022 and will be available for pre-award costs back to March 13, 2020.

EQUITABLE SERVICES UNDER THE CARES ACT

- LEAs must provide services to eligible students and teachers in non-public schools. Public funds may not be sent to the non-public school directly from DESE or from the public school district. ESEA requires an LEA to maintain control of funds, materials, equipment and property.
- Additional information about these equitable services requirements is expected from USED soon.

FUNDS RECEIVED

- An LEA, state, institution of higher education or other entity that receives funds under the ''Education Stabilization Fund'' shall, to the greatest extent practicable, continue to pay its employees and contractors during the period of any disruptions or closures related to coronavirus (Sec.18006).

LEA DOCUMENTATION

- LEAs will be required to keep documentation of expenditures (receipts, purchase orders, etc.).

SEA APPLICATION

USED released the application for ESSER funds on April 23, 2020. Once a State applies for ESSER funds, USED has 30 days to approve or deny the application. DESE submitted this application on April 30, 2020.

LEA REPORTING

The CARES Act requires entities that receive more than $150,000 in CARES Act funds to report certain information about their spending quarterly (including how much they received, what projects they supported with CARES Act funds, how much they spent on each project and information about subgrants and contracts). In addition, USED may impose additional reporting requirements. More information about these requirements is expected.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

WAIVERS OF CERTAIN FISCAL REQUIREMENTS

On April 6, DESE applied for and received approval for a waiver pursuant to CARES Act. DESE applied for this waiver to allow our agency and LEAs to better respond to emerging issues resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic. The waiver provides the following flexibilities:

1) Title I, Part A Carryover Limitation
   a. DESE may waive the 15% carryover limitation for LEAs with a Title I.A allocation of $50,000 or more.
   b. LEAs may request this waiver even if they have done so in one of the last two years.
   c. LEAs are still required to submit the 9/30 Report (Report of Expenditures and Obligations as of September 30) if they have Title I.A funds in excess of the 15% carryover rule in section 1127(a) of the ESEA

LEA Impact: DESE may waive the 15% carryover limitation for LEAs with a Title I.A allocation of $50,000 or more in the 2020-21 school year even if a waiver has been granted once in the last two preceding years. LEAs are still required to submit the 9/30 Report (Report of Expenditures and Obligations as of September 30) if they have Title I.A funds in excess of the 15% carryover rule in section 1127(a) of the ESEA.

2) Availability of Funds
   a. FY18 ESEA Funds, those carried over from last year, will be available through September 2021. This extension applies to the following programs:

      i. Title I, Part A (Improving Basic Programs including 1003(a) school improvement, section 1003A direct student services, if applicable, and Title I, Part D, Subpart 2)
      ii. Title I, Part B (State Assessment Grants)
      iii. Title I, Part C (Education of Migratory Children)
      iv. Title I, Part D, Subpart 1 (Neglected, Delinquent, and At Risk)
      v. Title II, Part A (Supporting Effective Instruction)
      vi. Title III, Part A (English Language Acquisition)
      vii. Title IV, Part A (Student Support and Academic Enrichment)
      viii. Title IV, Part B (21st Century Community Learning Centers)
      ix. Title V, Part B (Rural and Low-Income Schools)
      x. McKinney-Vento Education of Homeless Children and Youth

LEA Impact: This waiver provision allows DESE an additional year to expend FY18 funds that would have normally expired in the fall of 2020. In the event that there is any remaining funds, DESE will be able to distribute funds that may have expired for one additional year. For 2019-20, Title I School Improvement (a) will have carryover available.

3) Title IV, Part A Requirements

   a. The Needs Assessment requirements for 2019-20 are waived. This includes tying expenses to findings from any 2019-20 needs assessment already performed.
   b. LEAs are no longer required to spend the minimum percentages in each of the Title IV.A areas: Well-Rounded Education, Safe and Healthy Schools, and Effective Use of Technology.
   c. LEAs are not limited to spending no more than 15% for technology infrastructure. Schools may spend all of their Title IV.A money on technology if need be.

LEA Impact: This waiver provision allows LEAs who receive more than $30,000 in Title IV, Part A funding to spend funds without regard to the 2019-20 Needs Assessment. LEAs are no longer required to spend the minimum percentages in each of the Title IV.A areas: Well-Rounded Education, Safe and Healthy Schools, and Effective Use of Technology. LEAs may spend more than 15% for technology infrastructure. Schools may spend all of their Title IV.A. funds on technology, if needed.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

4) Professional Development

a. The definition of professional development (PD), as it applies to ESEA, has been waived.

LEA Impact: LEAs are no longer required to spend federal funds only on PD that is on-going, job embedded and tied to needs assessments and plans. PD that is single offering, determined to meet the current needs of teachers and students, and is not job embedded is now allowable. PD can also be provided to all staff, not just educators.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT

- When DESE receives an award, LEAs will receive further information regarding the process for LEAs to receive funds.
- DESE is developing a process for LEAs to receive these funds.

TO BE DETERMINED

- How will LEAs need to track expenditures?
- How will the nonpublic proportionate equitable share be determined?
- Will the bypass provision apply to the CARES Act?

The Governor's Emergency Education Relief Fund is anticipated to provide an estimated $54,620,000 (figure provided by Congressional Research Service).

- This funding stream is allocated to the Governor's Office for both K-12 and higher education.
- Guidance related to this section will follow.

These funds can be used to:

> (1) provide emergency support through grants to LEAs that the state educational agency deems have been most significantly impacted by coronavirus to support the ability of such LEAs to continue to provide educational services to their students and to support the ongoing functionality of the LEA;
> (2) provide emergency support through grants to institutions of higher education serving students within the state that the Governor determines have been most significantly impacted by coronavirus to support the ability of such institutions to continue to provide educational services and support the ongoing functionality of the institution; and
> (3) provide support to any other institution of higher education, LEA or education-related entity within the state that the Governor deems essential for carrying out emergency educational services to students for authorized activities described in section 18003(d)(1) of this title or the Higher Education Act, the provision of child care and early childhood education, social and emotional support, and the protection of education-related jobs."

Subject: Critical race theory and voter integrity and Second Amendment

Dear Representative,

Please reject critical race theory and the teachings of the 1619 project in our public school system. This is a racist and Marxist ideology! Our tax dollars should not be supporting this horrific racist teaching in our public schools.

We need voter integrity here in Missouri. Please support the use of paper ballots & voter ID cards.

Please maintain our constitutional rights to bear arms. Our Second Amendment rights are very important to combat Tyranny in Missouri and in the United States of America.

Thank you,

Subject: Critical race theory

Dear Representative,

I support a ban of critical race theory in the MO public schools. Critical race theory is racist! Critical race theory does not support a free society. It erases individualism, reasoning,& logic. It support the fallacy that all systems in our society are based on white supremacy and oppression.
We need to prevent federal intervention and make decisions for our schools at the state and local levels.
Local school board members do not have the right to allow discrimination in their district classrooms.
Please BAN Critical race theory in Missouri!!

Thank you,

Subject: Data asked for by Chairperson Basye during today's hearing

Good evening. I am responding to the request by Chairperson Basye for the data to follow-up my testimony at the hearing. For those of you who were there, thank you for your time today. For some of you, I left with the impression you believe Ozark is not passionate about our students achieving at high levels. If I somehow gave that impression, then I did not hit my mark. We have dedicated teachers and administrators who work their tails off for student improvement, engagement, and learning. We are not perfect, but we strive every single day to get better at our craft. Hence, I gladly left my house at 4:30 AM this morning because our students need you to know how this bill can adversely impact them and the successes we are seeing with our current instructional and assessment design.

My written testimony based on today's hearing is revised to answer some of your questions including data questions. Someone mentioned MAP scores as a way to measure reading proficiency. I would push back on that assumption and remind all of us that the MAP measures ELA which is a combination of reading and writing. It does not measure reading. The 65.4% average proficient or advanced of Ozark students on 2019 MAP does not mean that only 65.4% of our students are proficient readers. Our local data, for the first week of April 2021, show 80% of our K - 5 students are at the proficient or above level of reading. We are working diligently every day to raise that percentage one precious student at a time over these next 6 weeks. We believe in Ozark that EACH student is important and the averages will work themselves out in the end.

You don't need one more thing to do, but I ask you take the time to read the email in its entirety. It represents what we do and gives you sample data. The two attachments have great information in regard to data.

Testimony:
Ladies and Gentlemen,

After participating in the hearing today, please accept this additional input. I approach this with passion for student successes and the desire to see those not be impacted by this bill. This testimony is about the preponderance of school districts involved in the Southwest Missouri Curriculum Directors Association. I cannot guarantee each school district does these practices, but based on conversations with curriculum directors and administrators from SWMO districts, they talk through student achievement, assessment, and screener results of their students. And each district in the state turns in dyslexia screener information per student kindergarten through third grade at the end of each school year following the current law of 45 days.

Regarding assessment and intervention:
School districts in SWMO do begin the year with reading assessments and universal screeners (like the dyslexia ones we use). Assessment results are available immediately to be shared with parents, administrators, and school board members. It immediately gives teachers direction regarding next steps for student instruction.

Growth Data:
Districts use beginning of year data, middle of year, and end of year data to measure student growth. I will send examples of some data to you from some SWMO districts.

General Reading Verses Dyslexia:
This bill is about reading success plans for students who are having difficulties in reading. However, the majority of the bill is around how to help students with dyslexia. There are a sundry of difficulties, yet this bill is solely focused on how to treat students who are dyslexic or who show the potential for being dyslexic. Restricting this bill to only structured literacy is too prescriptive.

Evidenced-Based Reading Instruction and Interventions:
SW Missouri schools use evidenced-based reading instruction and interventions. In Ozark we have personnel trained in structured literacy (OG) and in other methods. Without using structured literacy as our instructional system, we still systematically and explicitly teach phonology, sound-symbol association, syllable instruction, morphology, syntax, semantics, and comprehension/thinking skills. We have assessments that show where students are in the progression. Our neighboring districts use a combination of instructional systems as well, but they are not only based around SL (some of them only use SL). They are based around multiple researched-based initiatives and approaches. This bill restricts us and will make us take time away from our main goal - students and their instruction/intervention - to learn a new set of techniques that are not necessarily better in meeting the needs of the majority of students since we are already meeting diverse and unique needs.

One-size-fits-all Approach:
I spent Easter weekend planting almost 200 trees and bushes on my small farm. I will mulch around each of these in the upcoming week. I do not use the same type of shovel for each of these tasks. I used a nursery shovel for the unique need of planting and will use a garden spade for the mulch. Both are shovels, but depending on the task, I need to use a different tool. Structured literacy is good for those students who have been diagnosed medically with dyslexia; however, I have multiple other tools that are not CERI certified to meet the other unique reading difficulties. This bill forces all districts in Missouri to use one tool for intervention. I am asking you for the sake of all districts like ours and my SWMO colleagues to allow us the liberty to use evidenced-based literacy instruction not just structured literacy.

Special Services:
This bill will force IEP teams to use structured literacy. I do not believe that fits within federal IDEA legislation.

Data has a Face:
I appreciate Mrs. Fugate today sharing with you some of the stories of students who we have been successful. Students who completely failed the dyslexia screener at the beginning of the year were proficient by the end of the year. We intervened with each student according to his/her specific needs. It was heartbreaking to hear of the student who was in 4 different placements within this school year while Mrs. Fugate is trying to help intervene in her reading. No matter the instructional method we use, she will not make the gains we know she needs to make to be successful in second grade and in life. We will keep trying to help her, but her data, despite the work we do, may not be 2nd grade proficient. Hers is not the only story or situation. Data has faces, and we do not want to make excuses, but we need to realize the fact that some students' lack of achievement has nothing to do with the educational quality they are receiving.

Changes Due to Dyslexia Taskforce and Legislation:
We currently pay much more attention to specific data points due to the last dyslexia law. For that, we are grateful. The law highlighted some holes we had in our own system, and we have worked to fix those holes. We celebrate the growth we see in students due to our changes. The taskforce did not force us to use one type of intervention. In fact, the majority of the taskforce decided against recommending using structured literacy in the final findings.

I will send an email to the committee regarding this testimony with some links to data in response to the Chairperson. We were questioned as to how many of our students were proficient in their reading abilities. We know MAP does not measure reading even though those numbers were used during the hearing. As of today, 4/7/21, 1989 of the 2466 (80.6%) K - 5 students in Ozark are at proficient or above. We still have more weeks to go to build on that data and see additional growth of our students.

I respect that you want to force districts into compliance and you cannot go from district to district to do it. We all realize we must do better. Seeing those needs, you desire to legislate a solution. Unfortunately, as you try to fix one problem you are creating problems for many other good districts throughout the state who are finding success with students. I believe you can set up a system of guarantees from a district to DESE to qualify the types of instruction they are using without violating Republican values: local control and less governmental oversight.

Thank you for allowing me to testify in front of you today. I am grateful when you approach hearings with an open mind and heart for solutions and productive dialogue.

Important transportation update

Missouri Chamber is ready to defend transportation investment bill

Missouri's economic recovery is set to receive a major boost as legislation championed by the Missouri Chamber of Commerce and Industry will trigger the investment of billions into our transportation infrastructure in coming years.

Given the importance of our transportation system to our economic future, the Missouri Chamber is already working to defend this critically-needed funding against efforts to overturn the legislation.

As opponents file paperwork to challenge the bill at the ballot box, the Missouri Chamber is continuing to promote the transformative impact this legislation will have in our state.

A recent economic impact study found that when we modernize our transportation system through this legislation, we are creating a $1.8 billion positive impact on Missouri's economy. This would also create $722 million in additional earnings across the state and generate more than 17,000 jobs.

Furthermore, the legislation is written to give Missouri drivers a choice. Anyone who doesn't want to see transportation improvements in Missouri can use the rebate provision and get their dollars back — this legislation will cost them nothing.

However, the Missouri Chamber believes that most drivers won't mind paying a little more at the pump to make needed investments in our transportation system. The bill would phase in an increase in the gas tax by 2.5 cents each year over five years. The legislation also phases in increased fees on electric vehicles.

This will lead to roughly $500 million per year in additional funding for critical projects at the state, county and local level.

This transportation funding package was backed by a strong, bi-partisan coalition in the Missouri General Assembly — with support from the broad Missouri Can't Wait coalition spearheaded by the Missouri Chamber.

Subject: Demand a safe reopening for ALL Missouri schools!

Dear Missouri leader,

As you are aware, school decisions are data-driven, and cases of COVID-19 in our community are continuously rising with no expectation for a decline in sight.

On July 22, Dr. Deborah Birx, leader of the White House Coronavirus Task Force, privately contacted St. Louis officials to warn them of increasing COVID-19 infections and urge them to take aggressive action to mitigate the spread of the virus. Opening schools as planned is in direct conflict with these advised measures and will result in suffering and casualties.

I am asking for your help advocating for a safe return to school in Missouri through an online-only start to the school year followed by phased return as COVID-19 cases and spread in our area decline. Per the American Academy of Pediatrics, as of August 9, 97,000 children have tested positive for COVID-19 in just the last 2 weeks of July. Please take special notice of the 80% increase in child cases in the state of Missouri.

Several school districts in our region with a variety of demographics have decided to start the school in the same fashion: Ritenour School District, Hazelwood School District and Ferguson-Florissant School District. Additionally, the East St. Louis School District, Maplewood Richmond Heights District, and Affton School District are committing to a similar re-entry plan and the superintendent of Kansas City Public Schools has announced that under the guidance of their city's health department, they will roll out a new plan for virtual re-entry throughout the next week. I have provided links to several of these re-entry plans for you to view at your convenience. All of these plans start school with all or nearly-all virtual learning with phased in re-entry benchmarks based on data.

On July 30, Missouri NEA released the results from its survey of more than 24,000 Missouri educators from MNEA, MSTA, AFT, and non-union members here. Few of the educators surveyed indicated comfort with existing reopening plans, and shared concerns ranging from opening on an arbitrary date, lack of staff voice, unclear plans, and both the ongoing lack and personal cost of PPE and cleaning supplies.

Making a decision to pivot to a primarily-virtual instruction model will give teachers time to train and prepare their online instruction — a luxury that we simply did not have in the spring.

A coalition of Missouri educators and stakeholders collaborated on a plan we believe is a great starting point for keeping everyone safe while meeting urgent needs and meaningful academic experiences. Our plan is published here.

For the health and safety of all district stakeholders — students, teachers, administrators, instructional aides, cafeteria workers, bus drivers, custodians, third-party vendors, parents and grandparents — and ultimately the community at large, I implore you to REJECT any plans for reopening schools for face-to-face instruction and insist on a better, safer, data-driven plan.

With hope and determination,

Subject: Democracy is Vulnerable

Voter suppression is rampant in Jefferson City. Democracy is vulnerable and in jeopardy in Missouri. No matter whether it is a Republic, a Democracy, a Republic Democracy, or a Democratic Republic it is still suppose to be furthered by the "Will of The People". Not those of the Imperial Tyrannical Senate of Caesars in Jefferson City or those that would equate themselves as "Caesars"who have denied those tenets of "Self Government" by the People. Our Governor and our Representatives flaunt their disdain for the "People" they are suppose to represent. Choosing instead to foster a government whose Tenets reflect those of World War II Italy's Fascism and the rise of the Brown Shirted thugs of Benito Mussolini and his "Fascist Party". Remember Benito Mussolini was finally executed and hung upside down by the masses in Milan Italy. A fitting end to anyone willing to deny a "Representative Democracy". It now appears the People of Missouri live under a form of Government that is characterized by authoritarian ultra-nationalism, GOP; characterized by dictatorial power, forcible suppression of the opposition and strong regimentation of society and of the economy by denying the popular vote, a core tenet of Democracy. As the Kansas City Star points out Republican Justin Hill of Lake St. Louis says "proud to stand against the will of the people who were lied to", while other point our that Missouri is a Republic, not a Democracy, while failing to understand or admit that both are guided by the "Will of The People". This is not a State of Mussolini it is Missouri. The "People" do have a voice.

Subject: Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) Tech, Medical Student x2, Chiropractor - Moving to Montana
Attachment(s): "Pfizer Vaccine 6-Month study WITH Supplementary (data) Tables and Adolescent Study.pdf"

Senator/Representative,

Sir/Ma'am, I am a Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) Tech in the Air Force Reserve, 3rd year Medical Student (removed due to inability to receive COVID-19 vaccine) and owner of a small business. My wife, Jamie Carter, is also a 3rd year Medical Student (removed due to inability to receive COVID-19 vaccine) and a Doctor of Chiropractic. We are leaving everything to move to Montana if Missouri does not follow in Montana's footsteps to fight against all forms of discrimination by January 1st, 2022. My wife and I are saddened by the weakness of our leaders to protect the people of this country.

I have attached all that would have been needed in honest times.

Below is a picture of page 33 of the attached study. This study clearly shows that pure Evil is the only thing behind vaccine mandates. The methods and design of this study, paid for by Pfizer, and the table below is truly all that is needed in honest times to make laws against COVID-19 vaccine mandates. If you add this study to the studies from Israel to the mountain of superior alternative treatment options currently being used around the world a very clear picture is unquestionably painted…

ABSTRACT

Background: BNT162b2 is a lipid nanoparticle-formulated, nucleoside-modified RNA vaccine encoding a prefusion-stabilized, membrane-anchored SARS-CoV-2 full-length spike protein. BNT162b2 is highly efficacious against COVID-19 and is currently authorized for emergency use or conditional approval worldwide. At the time of authorization, data beyond 2 months post-vaccination were unavailable.

Methods: In an ongoing, placebo-controlled, observer-blinded, multinational, pivotal efficacy study, 44,165 ≥16-year-old participants and 2,264 12-15-year-old participants were randomized to receive 2 doses, 21 days apart, of 30 µg BNT162b2 or placebo. Study endpoints reported here are vaccine efficacy (VE) against laboratory-confirmed COVID-19 and safety data, both up to 6 months post-vaccination.

Results: BNT162b2 continued to be safe and well tolerated. Few participants had adverse events leading to study withdrawal. VE against COVID-19 was 91% (95% CI 89.0–93.2) through up to 6 months of follow-up, among evaluable participants and irrespective of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection. VE of 86%–100% was seen across countries and in populations with diverse characteristics of age, sex, race/ethnicity, and COVID-19 risk factors in participants without evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection. VE against severe disease was 97% (95% CI 80.3–99.9). In South Africa, where the SARS-CoV-2 variant of concern, B.1.351 (beta), was predominant, 100% (95% CI 53.5, 100.0) VE was observed.

Conclusion: With up to 6 months of follow-up and despite a gradually declining trend in vaccine efficacy, BNT162b2 had a favorable safety profile and was highly efficacious in preventing COVID-19. (ClinicalTrials.gov number, NCT04368728)

INTRODUCTION

The COVID-19 pandemic continues, with recent estimates of >187 million cases diagnosed and >4 million deaths.[1] Vaccines are currently available via emergency use authorization or conditional marketing approval pathways.[2-5] BNT162b2 is a lipid nanoparticle-formulated,[6] nucleoside-modified RNA[7] encoding the SARS-CoV-2 full-length spike glycoprotein in a prefusion stabilized conformation.[8] To date, >350 million BNT162b2 doses have been administered.

We previously reported safety and efficacy data obtained through a median 2 months of post-immunization follow-up from a global phase 1/2/3 trial of BNT162b2 in ≥16-year-olds. Vaccine efficacy (VE) against COVID-19 was 95%. BNT162b2 had a favorable safety profile in diverse populations.[9] These data formed the basis for BNT162b2 emergency/conditional authorizations globally.[10] Safety, efficacy, and immunogenicity data from 12-15-year-old participants in this trial have been reported.[11]

Here, we report safety and efficacy findings from a prespecified analysis of the phase 2/3 portion of the trial up to ~6 months of follow-up.

METHODS

Objectives, Participants, Oversight

This randomized, placebo-controlled, observer-blind phase 1/2/3 study assessed BNT162b2 safety, tolerability, efficacy, and immunogenicity in adolescents and adults (NCT04368728). The current report focuses on phase 2/3 safety assessments in ≥16-year-old and prespecified VE assessments in ≥12-year-old participants through up to 6 months post-immunization. Because enrolment of 12-15-year-olds began on October 15, 2020, 6-month post-immunization data are currently unavailable for this age cohort. Shorter duration safety, immunogenicity, and efficacy data for 12-15-year-olds are reported separately;[11] however, data for this cohort are included in overall VE analyses reported here.

Participants who were healthy or had stable chronic medical conditions were eligible. An active immunocompromising condition or recent immunosuppressive therapy were exclusion criteria. Participants with a COVID-19 medical history were excluded, though evidence of current or prior SARS-CoV-2 infection on laboratory testing of study-obtained samples was not an exclusion. Study responsibilities and ethical conduct are summarized in the Supplementary Appendix. Institutional Review Board or Ethics Committee approval was obtained for each site prior to enrollment of any study participant.

Procedures

Participants were randomized 1:1 by an interactive web-based system to receive 2 intramuscular injections 21 days apart of 30 μg BNT162b2 (0.3-mL volume/dose) or saline placebo. Starting in December 2020, following availability of BNT162b2 under emergency/conditional use authorizations, ≥16-year-old participants who became eligible for COVID-19 vaccination by national/local recommendations were given the option of unblinding. Those who had been randomized to placebo were offered BNT162b2. After unblinding, participants were followed in an open-label study period.

Safety

Safety endpoints included solicited, prespecified local reactions, systemic events, and antipyretic/pain medication use ≤7 days after receipt of each vaccine or placebo dose (electronic diary reported) and unsolicited adverse events from dose 1 through 1 month after each dose and serious adverse events from dose 1 through 1 and 6 months post-dose 2. Safety data are presented for blinded follow-up and open-label periods.

Efficacy

BNT162b2 efficacy against laboratory-confirmed COVID-19 with onset ≥7 days post-dose 2 was assessed descriptively in participants without serological or virological evidence of SARS-CoV-2 infection ≤7 days post-dose 2, and in participants with and without evidence of prior infection. Efficacy against severe COVID-19 was also assessed. Lineages of SARS-CoV-2 detected in midturbinate specimens are reported here for COVID-19 cases occurring ≥7 days post-dose 2 in South African participants without evidence of prior infection. Methods for determining SARS-CoV-2 lineages and case definitions for confirmed and severe COVID-19 are summarized. See Supplementary Appendix.

Statistics

Study populations are summarized in Table S1. Safety analyses are presented for ≥16-year-olds without known HIV infection who provided informed consent and received ≥1 BNT162b2 or placebo dose. Safety analyses, which are descriptive and not based on formal hypothesis testing, are presented as counts, percentages and associated Clopper-Pearson 95% CIs for adverse events (according to MedDRA terms) and reactogenicity events for each vaccine group. Safety data reported up to March 13, 2021 are summarized here. CIs in this report are not adjusted for multiplicity.

VE analyses during the blinded period are presented for all randomized ≥12-year-olds without known HIV infection who received ≥1 BNT162b2 or placebo dose. VE was estimated by 100×(1–IRR). IRR is the ratio of the rate of confirmed COVID-19 illness per 1000 person-years follow-up in the BNT162b2 group to that in the placebo group. Descriptive analyses of VE and associated 95% CIs used the Clopper and Pearson method, adjusted for surveillance time, which accounts for potential differential follow-up between the 2 groups. Because the percentage of participants who reported symptoms but were missing a valid polymerase-chain-reaction test result was small and slightly higher in the placebo arm, data for these participants were not imputed in the analysis.

The previously reported primary efficacy objective was achieved based on analysis of 170 accrued, evaluable COVID-19 cases (data cut-off: November 14, 2020).[9] The current report provides updated efficacy analyses conducted on cases accrued up to March 13, 2021.

RESULTS

Participants

Between July 27, 2020 and October 29, 2020, 45,441 ≥16-year-olds were screened, and 44,165 randomized at 152 sites (US [n=130], Argentina [n=1], Brazil [n=2], South Africa [n=4], Germany [n=6], Turkey [n=9]) in the phase 2/3 portion of the study. Of these participants, 44,060 were vaccinated with ≥1 dose (BNT162b2, n=22,030; placebo, n=22,030), and 98% received dose 2 (Fig.1). During the blinded period, 51% of participants in each group had 4 to <6 months of follow-up post dose 2; 8% of BNT162b2 recipients and 6% of placebo recipients had ≥6 months follow-up post-dose 2. During blinded and open-label periods combined, 55% of BNT162b2 recipients had ≥6 months follow-up post-dose 2. Participants were 49% female, 82% White, 10% Black/African American, and 26% Hispanic/Latinx; median age was 51 years. Thirty-four percent had BMI ≥30.0 kg/m^2, 21% had ≥1 underlying comorbidity, and 3% had baseline evidence of prior/current SARS-CoV-2 infection (Tables 1, S2).

Between October 15, 2020 and January 12, 2021, 2306 12-15-year-olds were screened, 2264 were randomized across 29 US sites, 2260 were vaccinated with ≥1 dose (BNT162b2, n=1131; placebo, n=1129), and 99% received dose 2.[11] Of vaccinated participants, 58% had ≥2 months follow-up post-dose 2, 49% were female, 86% were White, 4.6% were Black/African American, and 12% were Hispanic/Latinx. Full demographic characteristics are reported elsewhere.[11]

Safety

Reactogenicity

The reactogenicity subset of participants reported here (those using electronic diary for reporting events) includes 9839 ≥16-year-olds. Of this subset, 8183 were included in the previous analysis, and 1656 were enrolled after the data cut-off for that analysis.[9] The reactogenicity profile for this expanded subset did not differ substantially from that described previously.[9] The reactogenicity subset included 364 participants with evidence of prior SARS-CoV-2 infection, 9426 without, and 49 who lacked data required to determine prior infection status.

More BNT162b2 than placebo recipients reported local reactions, most commonly mild-to-moderate injection site pain (Fig. S1A). Participants with or without evidence of prior SARS-CoV-2 infection reported local reactions with similar frequency and of similar severity. No Grade 4 local reactions were reported.

More BNT162b2 than placebo recipients reported systemic events, most commonly fatigue (Fig. S1B). Systemic events were mostly mild-to-moderate, but occasionally severe. Systemic reactogenicity was similar in those with and without evidence of prior SARS-CoV-2 infection, although BNT162b2 recipients with evidence of prior infection reported systemic events more often post-dose 1, and those without evidence reported systemic events more often post-dose 2. For example, 12% of recipients with evidence of prior SARS-CoV-2 infection and 3% of those without reported fever post-dose 1; 8% of those with evidence of prior infection and 15% of those without reported fever post-dose 2. The highest temperature reported was a transient fever >40.0°C on day 2 post-dose 2 in a BNT162b2 recipient without evidence of prior infection.

Adverse events

Adverse event analyses during the blinded period are provided for 43,847 ≥16-year-olds (Table S3). Reactogenicity events among participants not in the reactogenicity subset are reported as adverse events, resulting in imbalances in adverse events (30% vs 14%), related adverse events (24% vs 6%), and severe adverse events (1.2% vs 0.7%) between BNT162b2 and placebo groups. Decreased appetite, lethargy, asthenia, malaise, night sweats, and hyperhidrosis were new adverse events attributable to BNT162b2 not previously identified in earlier reports. Few participants had serious adverse events or adverse events leading to study withdrawal. No new serious adverse events assessed as related by investigators were reported after data cut-off for the previous report.[9]

Cumulative safety follow-up was available up to 6 months post-dose 2 from combined blinded and open-label periods for 12,006 participants originally randomized to BNT162b2. The longer follow-up for this report, including open-label observation of original BNT162b2 recipients and placebo recipients who received BNT162b2 after unblinding, revealed no new safety signals relative to the previous report.[9]

During the blinded, controlled period, 15 BNT162b2 and 14 placebo recipients died; during the open-label period, 3 BNT162b2 and 2 original placebo recipients who received BNT162b2 after unblinding died. None of these deaths were considered related to BNT162b2 by investigators. Causes of death were balanced between BNT162b2 and placebo groups (Table S4).

Safety monitoring will continue per protocol for 2 years post-dose 2 for participants who originally received BNT162b2 and for 18 months after the second BNT162b2 dose for placebo recipients who received BNT162b2 after unblinding.

Efficacy

Among 42,094 evaluable ≥12-year-olds without evidence of prior SARS-CoV-2 infection, 77 COVID-19 cases with onset ≥7 days post-dose 2 were observed through the data cut-off (March 13, 2021) among vaccine recipients and 850 among placebo recipients, corresponding to 91.3% VE (95% CI [89.0-93.2]; Table 2). Among 44,486 evaluable participants, irrespective of prior SARS-CoV-2 infection, 81 COVID-19 cases were observed among vaccine and 873 among placebo recipients, corresponding to 91.1% VE (95% CI [88.8-93.0]).

In the all-available population with evidence of prior SARS-CoV-2 infection based on positive baseline N-binding antibody test, 2 COVID-19 cases were observed post-dose 1 among vaccine and 7 among placebo recipients. In participants with evidence of SARS-CoV-2 infection by positive nucleic acid amplification test at baseline, no difference in COVID-19 cases was observed between vaccine (n=10) and placebo (n=9) recipients (Table S5). COVID-19 was less frequent among placebo recipients with positive N-binding antibodies at study entry (7/542; ~1.3% attack rate) than among those without evidence of infection at study entry (1015/21,521; ~4.7% attack rate), indicating ~72.6% protection by previous infection.

From dose 1 to before dose 2, 46 COVID-19 cases were observed in BNT162b2 and 110 in placebo recipients (with or without evidence of prior infection), corresponding to 58.4% VE (95% CI [40.8-71.2]) (Fig. 2). During the interval from the approximate start of observed protection at 11 days post-dose 1 to before dose 2, VE increased to 91.7% (95% CI 79.6-97.4).

From its peak post-dose 2, observed VE declined. From 7 days to <2 months post-dose 2, VE was 96.2% (95% CI [93.3-98.1]); from 2 months to <4 months, VE was 90.1% (95% CI [86.6-92.9]); and from 4 months to the data cut-off, VE was 83.7% (95% CI [74.7-89.9]).

Of 31 cases of severe, FDA-defined COVID-19,[12] with onset post-dose 1, 30 occurred in placebo recipients, corresponding to 96.7% VE (95% CI 80.3-99.9) against severe COVID-19 (Fig. 2, Table S6).

Although the study was not powered to definitively assess efficacy by subgroup, supplemental analyses indicated that VE post-dose 2 among subgroups defined by age, sex, race, ethnicity, presence of comorbid conditions, and country was generally consistent with that observed in the overall population (Tables 3, S7).

Given concern about SARS-CoV-2 lineage B.1.351 (beta), which appears less efficiently neutralized by BNT162b2 immune sera than many other lineages,[13] whole viral genome sequencing was performed on midturbinate samples from COVID-19 cases observed in South Africa, where this lineage is prevalent. Nine COVID-19 cases were observed in South African participants without evidence of prior SARS-CoV-2 infection, all in placebo recipients, corresponding to 100% VE (95% CI 53.5-100.0; Table 3). Midturbinate specimens from 8/9 cases contained sufficient viral RNA for whole genome sequencing. All viral genomes were of the B.1.351 lineage (GISAID accession codes in Supplementary Appendix).

DISCUSSION

In this update to the preliminary safety and efficacy report of a 2-dose regimen of 30 μg BNT162b2 given 21 days apart, 91.1% VE against COVID-19 was observed from 7 days to 6 months post-dose 2 in ≥12-year-old participants. VE against severe disease with onset post-dose 1 was ~97%. This finding, combined with the totality of available evidence, including real-world effectiveness data,[14-17] alleviates theoretical concerns over potential vaccine-mediated disease enhancement.[18]

The benefit of BNT162b2 immunization started ~11 days post-dose 1, with 91.7% VE from 11 days post-dose 1 until dose 2. The study cannot provide information on persistence of protection after a single dose, as 98.5% of participants received dose 2 as scheduled during the blinded study period. As recently reported, although non-neutralizing viral antigen-binding antibody levels rise between the first and second BNT162b2 dose, serum neutralizing titers are low or undetectable during this interval.[19] Early protection against COVID-19 without robust serum neutralization indicates that neutralizing titers alone do not appear to explain early BNT162b2-mediated protection from COVID-19. Other immune mechanisms (e.g., innate immune responses, $CD4^+$ or $CD8^+$ T-cell responses, B-cell memory responses, antibody-dependent cytotoxicity) may contribute to protection.[20-25]

Efficacy peaked at 96.2% during the interval from 7 days to <2 months post-dose 2, and declined gradually to 83.7% from 4 months post-dose 2 to the data cut-off, an average decline of ~6% every 2 months. Ongoing follow-up is needed to understand persistence of the vaccine effect over time, the need for booster dosing, and timing of such a dose. Most participants who initially received placebo have now been immunized with BNT162b2, ending the placebo-controlled part of the study. Nevertheless, ongoing observation of participants through up to 2 years in this study, together with real-world effectiveness data,[14-17] will determine whether a booster is likely to be beneficial after a longer interval. Booster trials to evaluate safety and immunogenicity of BNT162b2 are underway to prepare for this possibility.

From 7 days post-dose 2, 86%-100% efficacy was observed across diverse demographic profiles, including age, sex, race/ethnicity and factors increasing risk of COVID-19, such as high BMI, and other comorbidities. BNT162b2 was also highly efficacious in various geographic regions including North America, Europe, South Africa and Latin America. Although VE was slightly lower in Latin American countries, BNT162b2 had high efficacy of ~86% in Argentina and Brazil. Circulation of SARS-CoV-2 variants, some of which are associated with more rapid transmission, and potentially, greater pathogenicity,[26] has raised concerns that such variants could evade vaccine-mediated protection. Our studies of in vitro neutralization of a variety of SARS-CoV-2 variants have, to date, found that all tested BNT162b2-immune sera neutralize all tested variants.[13,27-31] The variant with the greatest reduction in neutralization, B.1.351, which has been the dominant South African strain, is still neutralized at serum titers higher than those observed at the onset of protection against COVID-19 after the first vaccine dose.[9,13,19] Consistent with this finding, BNT162b2 had 100% (95% CI 53.5, 100.0) observed efficacy against COVID-19 in South Africa (placebo recipients, 9 cases; BNT162b2 recipients, 0 cases), and 8/9 cases for which sequence information could be obtained were B.1.351 lineage SARS-CoV-2.

Safety data are now available for ~44,000 ≥16-year-old participants; 12,006 individuals have ≥6 months of safety follow-up data after a second BNT162b2 dose. The safety profile observed at a median of 2 months post-immunization was confirmed up to 6 months post-immunization in this analysis. No cases of myocarditis were noted.

Before immunization, 3% of ≥16-year-olds had evidence of SARS-CoV-2 infection. Although this group experienced slightly higher systemic reactogenicity events post-dose 1 than those without evidence of prior infection, the group experienced slightly less reactogenicity post-dose 2 than those without prior infection. Thus, there was minimal observed difference in the overall reactogenicity profile based on baseline infection status. Nine COVID-19 cases were observed among individuals with previous serologically defined natural infection: 2 cases in vaccine and 7 in placebo recipients. These data support the current practice of immunizing without screening for evidence of prior infection.

This report has several limitations. Duration of protection and safety data that could be collected in a blinded, placebo-controlled manner were limited by the ethical and practical need to immunize eligible initial placebo recipients under EUA and according to public health authority recommendations. Data presented here do not address whether vaccination prevents asymptomatic infection, but evaluation of that question is ongoing in this study, and real-world data suggest that BNT162b2 prevents asymptomatic infection.[32,33] Preliminary analyses of breakthrough cases have not yet identified a correlate of protection, as vaccine protection rates remain high. This report does not address VE and safety in pregnant women and in children younger than 12 years. Studies evaluating BNT162b2 in these populations are ongoing.

The data in this report demonstrate that BNT162b2 prevents COVID-19 effectively for up to 6 months post-dose 2 across diverse populations, despite the emergence of SARS-CoV-2 variants, including the B.1.351 lineage, and the vaccine continues to show a favorable safety profile.

VE=vaccine efficacy. Participants who had no serological or virological evidence (prior to 7 days after receipt of the last dose) of past SARS-CoV-2 infection (ie, N-binding antibody [serum] negative at Visit 1 and SARS-CoV-2 not detected by NAAT [nasal swab] at Visits 1 and 2), and had negative NAAT (nasal swab) at any unscheduled visit prior to 7 days post-dose 2 were included in the analysis. a. n1=number of participants meeting the endpoint definition. b. Total surveillance time in 1000 person-years for the given endpoint across all participants within each group at risk for the endpoint. Time period for COVID-19 case accrual is from 7 days after dose 2 to the end of the surveillance period. c. n2=number of participants at risk for the endpoint. d. CI for VE was derived based on the Clopper and Pearson method adjusted for surveillance time. e. Posterior probability was calculated using a beta-binomial model with prior beta (0.700102, 1) adjusted for surveillance time. f. N=number of participants in the specified group; total population without prior baseline infection N=42,094; total population with and without prior infection N=44,486.

Ethical Conduct of the Study

The trial was conducted in accordance with the protocol, the ethical principles derived from international guidelines including the International Council for Harmonisation Good Clinical Practice Guidelines, the Declaration of Helsinki and Council for International Organizations of Medical Sciences International Ethical Guidelines, and applicable laws and regulations (including applicable privacy laws). An independent data monitoring committee reviewed efficacy and unblinded safety data. Institutional Review Board or Ethics Committee approval was obtained for each site prior to enrollment of any study participant.

The list of Institutional Review Board Committees is summarized at the end of this Supplementary Appendix.

Study Responsibilities

Pfizer was responsible for the design, study conduct, data collection, data analysis, data interpretation, and writing of this manuscript. Both Pfizer and BioNTech manufactured clinical trial material. BioNTech was the sponsor of the study and contributed to data interpretation and writing of the manuscript. All study data were available to all authors who vouch for its accuracy and adherence of the study to the protocol.

Testing for SARS-CoV-2 Virus and Antibodies

Testing for SARS-CoV-2 virus was conducted using the Cepheid Xpert Xpress SARS-CoV-2 RT-PCR test. Testing for SARS-CoV-2 antibodies was conducted using the Roche Elecsys® Anti-SARS-CoV-2 antibody test.

Determination of SARS-CoV-2 Lineage

For determination of SARS-CoV-2 lineage, nucleic acid extraction of midturbinate swab specimens was performed using the MagMAX™ Viral/Pathogen Ultra Nucleic Acid Isolation Kit processed on a KingFisher™ Presto.

SARS-CoV-2 viral genome sequencing was performed using the Ion Torrent and Illumina NextSeq platforms. For the Ion Torrent sequencing platform, the Ion AmpliSeq™ SARS-CoV-2 Research Panel was used, which consists of 2 primer pools targeting a total of 237 PCR amplicons specific to SARS-CoV-2 and 5 human expression controls in each pool. Oligonucleotide primers based on available SARS-CoV-2 nucleotide sequences direct the amplification of the viral genome with amplicon lengths of 125–275 bp. The panel provides >99% coverage of the SARS-CoV-2 genome (~30 kb). To determine the optimal number of target amplification cycles, SARS-CoV-2 viral RNA content in the nucleic acid purified from the midturbinate specimens was quantified using the TaqMan™ 2019-nCoV Assay Kit v1, the TaqMan™ 2019-nCoV Control Kit v1, and TaqPath™ 1-Step RT-qPCR Master Mix, CG. cDNA was synthesized with the SuperScript VILO cDNA synthesis kit. Libraries were prepared using the Ion AmpliSeq™ Library Kit plus the Ion AmpliSeq™ SARS-CoV-2 Research Panel according to the manufacturer's instructions (ThermoFisher. Ion AmpliSeq™ Library Kit Plus USER GUIDE. Publication MAN0017003 version C.0.). Libraries underwent template preparation with Ion Chef according to the manufacturer's instructions. Prepared templates were loaded onto an Ion 530 chip for semiconductor sequencing on the Ion GeneStudio™ S5 plus sequencer according to the manufacturer's instructions. Raw sequencing reads generated by the Ion Torrent sequencer were quality and adaptor trimmed by Ion Torrent Suite and the resulting reads were then mapped to the complete genome of the SARS-CoV-2 Wuhan-Hu-1 isolate (GenBank accession number MN908947.3) using TMAP 5.14.0. Variant calling was carried out with the Torrent Variant Caller using the BAM file from the mapping of the cleaned sequence reads onto the reference sequence of SARS-CoV-2.

SARS-CoV-2 viral genome sequencing performed using the Illumina NextSeq platform used the AmpliSeq for Illumina SARS-CoV-2 panel of PCR primers to enrich for SARS-CoV-2 in the biological specimen. This was a 2-pool design, containing a total of 237 SARS-CoV-2 amplicon/primer pairs plus 5 human expression controls in each pool. Oligonucleotide primers based on available SARS-CoV-2 nucleotide sequences directed the amplification of overlapping amplicons with lengths of 125–275 bp that cover >99% of the viral genome. Nucleic acid extracted from the midturbinate specimens was digested initially with DNase (Invitrogen TURBO DNA-free™ Kit, AM1907), and RNA was purified using MagMAX™ beads before cDNA synthesis. Synthesis of cDNA using random sequence primers and downstream steps were as described by the manufacturer. SARS-CoV-2 amplicons were generated from the cDNA, followed by ligation of Universal Next Generation Sequencing Adaptors to the ends of the amplicons. Amplicon libraries were purified with magnetic beads and loaded onto a flow cell for sequence determination using the Illumina NextSeq instrument, according to the manufacturer's instructions. Sequences with ≥30-fold coverage across the entire spike gene were advanced for viral lineage assignment. Single nucleotide variants were called using the "Low Frequency Variant Detection" function with the cut-off for sequence heterogeneity set at >10%.

SARS-CoV-2 lineage assignment was based on Pangolin 2.0 software, which runs a multinomial logistic regression model trained against lineage assignments based on isolate data from the Global Initiative on Sharing All Influenza Data (GISAID), a global science initiative established in 2008 that provides open-access to genomics data of influenza virus and SARS-CoV-2.

Definitions of Confirmed and Severe COVID-19 Cases

The definition of SARS-CoV-2-related cases was the presence of ≥1 of the following symptoms and SARS-CoV-2-NAAT positivity during or within 4 days before or after the symptomatic period: fever, new or increased cough, new or increased shortness of breath, chills, new or increased muscle pain, new loss of taste or smell, sore throat, diarrhea, and/or vomiting. The onset date of the case was the date that symptoms were first experienced by the participant. If new symptoms were reported ≤4 days after resolution of all previous symptoms, they were considered part of a single illness.

Confirmed severe COVID-19 required confirmation of COVID-19 and the presence of ≥1 of the following: clinical signs at rest indicative of severe systemic illness (respiratory rate ≥30 breaths per minute, heart rate ≥125 beats per minute, SpO_2 ≤93% on room air at sea level, or PaO_2/FiO_2 <300 mmHg); respiratory failure (defined as needing high-flow oxygen, non-invasive ventilation, mechanical ventilation, or extracorporeal membrane oxygenation); evidence of shock (systolic blood pressure <90 mmHg, diastolic blood pressure <60 mmHg, or requiring vasopressors); significant acute renal, hepatic, or neurologic dysfunction; intensive care unit admission; and/or death (https://www.fda.gov/media/137926/download).

Table S2 | Baseline Comorbidities in Participants ≥16 Years of Age. Baseline comorbid conditions are classified according to the Charlson Comorbidity Index (Charlson M, Szatrowski TP, Peterson J, Gold J. Validation of a combined comorbidity index. J Clin Epidemiol 1994;47:1245-51.). a. N=number of participants in the specified group. This value is the denominator for the percentage calculations. b. n=number of participants with the specified characteristic. Participants with multiple occurrences within each category are counted only once. For 'Participants with any Charlson comorbidity', n=number of participants reporting ≥1 occurrence of any Charlson comorbidity.

BACKGROUND

Until very recently, vaccines against severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) had not been authorized for emergency use in persons younger than 16 years of age. Safe, effective vaccines are needed to protect this population, facilitate in-person learning and socialization, and contribute to herd immunity.

METHODS

In this ongoing multinational, placebo-controlled, observer-blinded trial, we randomly assigned participants in a 1:1 ratio to receive two injections, 21 days apart, of 30 μg of BNT162b2 or placebo. Noninferiority of the immune response to BNT162b2 in 12-to-15-year-old participants as compared with that in 16-to-25-year-old participants was an immunogenicity objective. Safety (reactogenicity and adverse events) and efficacy against confirmed coronavirus disease 2019 (Covid-19; onset, ≥7 days after dose 2) in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort were assessed.

RESULTS

Overall, 2260 adolescents 12 to 15 years of age received injections; 1131 received BNT162b2, and 1129 received placebo. As has been found in other age groups, BNT162b2 had a favorable safety and side-effect profile, with mainly transient mild-to-moderate reactogenicity (predominantly injection-site pain [in 79 to 86% of participants], fatigue [in 60 to 66%], and headache [in 55 to 65%]); there were no vaccine-related serious adverse events and few overall severe adverse events. The geometric mean ratio of SARS-CoV-2 50% neutralizing titers after dose 2 in 12-to-15-year-old participants relative to 16-to-25-year-old participants was 1.76 (95% confidence interval [CI], 1.47 to 2.10), which met the noninferiority criterion of a lower boundary of the two-sided 95% confidence interval greater than 0.67 and indicated a greater response in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort. Among participants without evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection, no Covid-19 cases with an onset of 7 or more days after dose 2 were noted among BNT162b2 recipients, and 16 cases occurred among placebo recipients. The observed vaccine efficacy was 100% (95% CI, 75.3 to 100).

CONCLUSIONS

The BNT162b2 vaccine in 12-to-15-year-old recipients had a favorable safety profile, produced a greater immune response than in young adults, and was highly effective against Covid-19. (Funded by BioNTech and Pfizer; C4591001 ClinicalTrials.gov number, NCT04368728.)

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

As of May 21, 2021, the coronavirus disease 2019 (Covid-19) pandemic has caused more than 165 million infections across all ages globally, as well as more than 3.4 million deaths.[1] BNT162b2 (Pfizer–BioNTech) is a Covid-19 vaccine containing nucleoside-modified messenger RNA encoding the severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) spike glycoprotein.[2] In healthy adults, two 30-μg doses of BNT162b2 elicited high neutralizing titers and robust, antigen-specific CD4+ and CD8+ T-cell responses against SARS-CoV-2.[3,4] In the phase 2–3 part of an ongoing global, phase 1–2–3 randomized, controlled trial involving participants 16 years of age or older, BNT162b2 had a favorable safety profile characterized by transient mild-to-moderate injection-site pain, fatigue, and headache and was 95% effective in preventing Covid-19 from 7 days after dose 2.[5] On the basis of these findings, BNT162b2 received emergency use authorization from the Food and Drug Administration on December 11, 2020, for Covid-19 prevention in persons 16 years of age or older.[6] On May 10, 2021, the emergency use authorization was expanded to include persons 12 years of age or older on the basis of data presented in this report.[7] Other vaccines against SARS-CoV-2 are authorized for emergency use[1,8-10]; however, BNT162b2 is the only one currently authorized for use in persons younger than 16 years of age.

Although children and adolescents generally have milder Covid-19 than adults, severe illness can occur in this population, especially in those with underlying medical conditions.[11] Adolescents may play an important role in SARS-CoV-2 transmission.[12,13] Thus, their vaccination may prevent disease and contribute to herd immunity. Furthermore, with immunization of older persons, younger persons account for an increased proportion of Covid-19 infections.[14,15] The pandemic has interrupted the education and social development of students and has simultaneously burdened caregivers.[16-18] Safe, efficacious vaccines for younger populations are therefore paramount.

Methods

Objectives, Participants, and Oversight

We conducted a randomized, placebo-controlled, observer-blinded, phase 3 trial as part of a phase 1–2–3 trial assessing BNT162b2 safety, immunogenicity, and efficacy in healthy persons 12 years of age or older. This report presents findings from 12-to-15-year-old participants enrolled in the United States, including descriptive comparisons of safety between participants in that age cohort and those who were 16 to 25 years of age and an evaluation of the noninferiority of immunogenicity in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort to that in the 16-to-25-year-old cohort. Data were collected through the cutoff date of March 13, 2021.

Eligible participants were healthy or had stable preexisting disease (including hepatitis B, hepatitis C, or human immunodeficiency virus infection). Persons with a previous clinical or virologic Covid-19 diagnosis or SARS-CoV-2 infection, previous coronavirus vaccination, diagnosis of an immunocompromising or immunodeficiency disorder, or treatment with immunosuppressive therapy (including cytotoxic agents and systemic glucocorticoids) were excluded.

The ethical conduct of the trial is summarized in the Supplementary Appendix, available with the full text of this article at NEJM.org. Additional details of the trial are provided in the protocol, available at NEJM.org. Pfizer was responsible for the trial design and conduct, data collection, data analysis, data interpretation, and writing of the manuscript that was submitted. Both Pfizer and BioNTech manufactured the vaccine and placebo. BioNTech was the regulatory sponsor of the trial and contributed to data interpretation and writing of the manuscript. All data were available to the authors, who vouch for their accuracy and completeness and for the adherence of the trial to the protocol.

Procedures

Randomization was conducted with the use of an interactive Web-based response system. Participants were assigned in a 1:1 ratio to receive two intramuscular injections of 30 μg of BNT162b2 or placebo (saline) 21 days apart. For evaluation of immediate vaccine-associated reactions, participants were observed in the clinic for 30 minutes after vaccination.

Safety

Safety objectives included the assessment of local or systemic reactogenicity events, which were recorded by the participants in an electronic diary (e-diary) for 7 days after each dose. Unsolicited adverse events (i.e., those reported by the participant without e-diary prompting) and serious adverse events were also recorded from receipt of the first dose through 1 month and 6 months after dose 2, respectively.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

IMMUNOGENICITY

Immunogenicity assessments (SARS-CoV-2 serum neutralization assay and receptor-binding domain [RBD]–binding or S1-binding IgG direct Luminex immunoassays) were performed before vaccination and 1 month after dose 2, as described previously.[3] The immunogenicity objective was to show noninferiority of the immune response to BNT162b2 in 12-to-15-year-old participants as compared with that in 16-to-25-year-old participants. Noninferiority was assessed among participants who had no evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection with the use of the two-sided 95% confidence interval for the geometric mean ratio of SARS-CoV-2 50% neutralizing titers in 12-to-15-year-old participants as compared with 16-to-25-year-old participants 1 month after dose 2. BNT162b2 immunogenicity was evaluated in participants with and those without serologic or virologic evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection. Corresponding end points were the geometric mean SARS-CoV-2 neutralizing titers at baseline (i.e., immediately before receipt of the first injection) and 1 month after dose 2 and geometric mean fold rises (GMFRs) in titers from baseline to 1 month after dose 2.

EFFICACY

The efficacy of BNT162b2 against confirmed Covid-19 with an onset 7 or more days after dose 2 was summarized in participants who did not have evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection, as well as in all vaccinated participants. Surveillance for potential Covid-19 cases was undertaken throughout the trial; if acute respiratory illness developed in a participant, the participant was tested for SARS-CoV-2. Methods for identifying SARS-CoV-2 infections and Covid-19 diagnoses are summarized in the Supplementary Appendix.

STATISTICAL ANALYSIS

The safety population included all participants who received at least one dose of BNT162b2 or placebo. The reactogenicity subset included all 12-to-15-year-old participants and a subset of 16-to-25-year-old participants (those who received an e-diary to record reactogenicity events). Safety end points are presented descriptively as counts, percentages, and associated Clopper–Pearson two-sided 95% confidence intervals, with adverse events and serious adverse events described according to terms in the Medical Dictionary for Regulatory Activities, version 23.1, for each group.

Immunogenicity was assessed in a random subset of participants in each age cohort with the use of a simple random-sample selection procedure. For immunogenicity assessments, all participants in both age cohorts were from U.S. sites. The dose 2 immunogenicity population that could be evaluated included participants who underwent randomization and received two BNT162b2 doses in accordance with the protocol, received dose 2 within the prespecified window (19 to 42 days after dose 1), had at least one valid and determinate immunogenicity result from a blood sample obtained within 28 to 42 days after dose 2, and had no major protocol deviations. Noninferiority of the immune response to BNT162b2 in 12-to-15-year-old participants as compared with that in 16-to-25-year-old participants was assessed on the basis of the geometric mean ratio of SARS-CoV-2 50% neutralizing titers. A sample of 225 BNT162b2 recipients who could be evaluated (or 280 BNT162b2 recipients overall) in each age cohort was estimated to provide 90.8% power for declaring noninferiority (defined as a lower limit of the 95% confidence interval for the geometric mean ratio of >0.67). A testing laboratory supply limitation of the qualified viral lot used for assay validation and clinical testing resulted in the trial having fewer participants than anticipated for the immunogenicity analyses. Calculations of the geometric mean ratios, geometric mean titers, and GMFRs are described in the Supplementary Appendix.

Although the formal evaluation of efficacy was to be based on the overall results obtained across all age cohorts, the statistical analysis plan specified that descriptive efficacy summaries would be provided for each age cohort (the stratification factor). The efficacy analysis for the 12-to-15-year-old cohort was planned as a descriptive analysis because the number of cases that would occur in the age subgroups was unknown. The efficacy population that could be evaluated included all eligible 12-to-15-year-old participants who underwent randomization and Participants who received dose 1 but not dose 2 could continue to be evaluated for safety. Participants were considered to have completed the vaccination period if they had completed the follow-up visit 1 month after dose 2 as of the data-cutoff date. As of the data-cutoff date, some participants had not yet completed their 1-month follow-up visit after dose 2. Some participants became eligible for a vaccine according to local or national recommendations before the 1-month follow-up visit after dose 2. These participants could choose to be made aware of their randomly assigned injection, and those who had received placebo could then choose to receive BNT162b2. Participants who had originally received placebo and chose to receive BNT162b2 as part of the trial would then follow a different visit schedule.

received two doses of BNT162b2 or placebo, received dose 2 within the prespecified window (19 to 42 days after dose 1), and had no major protocol deviations. The all-available efficacy population included all participants who received one or two doses. Vaccine efficacy was defined as $100 \times (1 - \text{IRR})$, where IRR is the ratio of the rate of a first confirmed Covid-19 illness in the BNT162b2 group to the corresponding rate in the placebo group. Two-sided Clopper–Pearson 95% confidence intervals were calculated (not adjusted for multiple comparisons). Because the number of participants who reported symptoms but were missing a valid polymerase-chain-reaction test result was small, data for these participants were not imputed in the analysis.

RESULTS

PARTICIPANTS

Between October 15, 2020, and January 12, 2021, a total of 2306 adolescents 12 to 15 years of age were screened for inclusion, and 2264 underwent randomization across 29 U.S. sites; 2260 participants received injections, with 1131 receiving BNT162b2 and 1129 receiving placebo (Fig. 1). More than 97% of the BNT162b2 recipients received dose 2. In the reactogenicity subset, all the 12-to-15-year-old participants were from the United States and the 16-to-25-year-old participants were recruited globally (Table 1). Although documented previous Covid-19 was an exclusion criterion, approximately 5% of the participants were SARS-CoV-2–positive at baseline, possibly because of previous asymptomatic infection. In the immunogenicity subset, all the participants in both age cohorts were from the United States. Among the 2260 participants who were 12 to 15 years of age, 51% were male, 86% were White, and 12% were Hispanic or Latinx. Overall, 1308 participants (58%) had at least 2 months of follow-up after their second vaccine dose. The trial populations are summarized in Table S1 in the Supplementary Appendix.

SAFETY

Reactogenicity

In both age cohorts, BNT162b2 recipients reported more local and systemic events than placebo recipients (Fig. 2). Local and systemic events were generally mild to moderate in severity, reported at similar frequencies in both age cohorts, and typically resolved within 1 or 2 days. In both age cohorts, injection-site pain was the most common local reaction. Severe injection-site pain after any BNT162b2 dose was reported in 1.5% of 12-to-15-year-old participants and in 3.4% of 16-to-25-year-old participants; no severe pain was reported after placebo administration.

In both age cohorts, headache and fatigue were the most frequently reported systemic events. After BNT162b2 injection, severe headache and severe fatigue were reported in a lower percentage of 12-to-15-year-old participants than of 16-to-25-year-old participants. Fever (oral body temperature, ≥38°C) occurred after dose 2 of BNT162b2 in 20% of 12-to-15-year-old recipients and in 17% of 16-to-25-year-old recipients. The use of antipyretic agents was slightly more frequent among BNT162b2 recipients who were 12 to 15 years of age than among those who were 16 to 25 years of age (37% vs. 32% after dose 1, and 51% vs. 46% after dose 2). Fever with a temperature higher than 40°C occurred in 1 (0.1%) of the 12-to-15-year-old participants 1 day after BNT162b2 dose 1. In general, systemic events were reported more often after BNT162b2 dose 2 than after dose 1. No differences in reactogenicity were noted between participants who were SARS-CoV-2–positive at baseline and those who were SARS-CoV-2–negative at baseline (Fig. S1).

Adverse Events

Among 12-to-15-year-old participants, adverse events occurring from dose 1 through 1 month after dose 2 were reported by 6% of BNT162b2 old cohort discontinued vaccination because of a vaccine-related adverse event: a temperature greater than 40°C (described above) in a 14-year-old boy who was SARS-CoV-2–negative at baseline, had no reported medical history, and had no other symptoms. He received BNT162b2 dose 1 and had fever (temperature, 40.4°C) 1 day after vaccination, which resolved 2 days later. The participant did not receive dose 2 but remained in the trial for safety follow-up. One BNT162b2 recipient in the 16-to-25-year-old cohort discontinued vaccination because of severe vaccine-related injection-site pain and headache, both of which were reported 1 day after dose 1 and resolved within 1 day. Lymphadenopathy was reported in 9 of 1131 BNT162b2 recipients (0.8%) and in 2 of 1129 placebo recipients (0.2%) who were 12 to 15 years of age, as compared with in 1 of 536 BNT162b2 recipients (0.2%) and in no placebo recipients who were 16 to 25 years of age. Appendicitis was reported in 2 participants: 1 BNT162b2 recipient in the 16-to-25-year-old cohort and 1 placebo recipient in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort. No thromboses or hypersensitivity adverse events or vaccine-related anaphylaxis was seen. Few participants in any cohort (≤0.4% through 1 month after dose 2) had serious adverse events, and none were considered by the investigators to have been vaccine-related. No deaths were reported.

IMMUNOGENICITY

The immune response to BNT162b2 in 12-to-15-year-old adolescents was noninferior to that observed in 16-to-25-year-old young adults. The geometric mean ratio of the BNT162b2 neutralizing geometric mean titer in 12-to-15-year-old participants to that in 16-to-25-year-old participants 1 month after dose 2 was 1.76 (95% confidence interval [CI], 1.47 to 2.10) (Table 2), which met the noninferiority criterion (i.e., a lower boundary of the two-sided 95% confidence interval of >0.67). The lower boundary of the two-sided 95% confidence interval for the geometric mean ratio was greater than 1, indicating a greater response in adolescents than in young adults.

Among all participants regardless of serologic evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection, the serum-neutralizing geometric mean titer 1 month after BNT162b2 dose 2 was 1283.0 in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort and 730.8 in the 16-to-25-year-old cohort (Fig. S2). The corresponding geometric mean titers at 1 month among placebo recipients were 15.1 and 10.7. Substantial increases in the 50% neutralizing titer from baseline were observed, with GMFRs from baseline to 1 month after dose 2 of 118.3 among 12-to-15-year-old participants and 71.2 among 16-to-25-year-old participants. The corresponding GMFRs among placebo recipients were 1.4 and 1.1.

EFFICACY

Among the 1983 participants in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort who could be evaluated and did not have evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection, no cases of Covid-19 with an onset of 7 or more days after dose 2 were observed among BNT162b2 recipients and 16 cases were observed among placebo recipients, which corresponded to an observed vaccine efficacy of 100% (95% CI, 75.3 to 100) (Table 3). Similarly, in the group that included all 2229 participants in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort who could be evaluated, regardless of whether they had evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection, vaccine efficacy from 7 days after dose 2 was 100% (95% CI, 78.1 to 100), with no Covid-19 cases observed among BNT162b2 recipients and 18 cases observed among placebo recipients. After dose 1 and before dose 2, there were 3 Covid-19 cases noted (within 11 days after dose 1) among BNT162b2 recipients, as compared with 12 cases among placebo recipients (vaccine efficacy, 75%; 95% CI, 7.6 to 95.5) (Table S3). No cases of severe Covid-19 were observed in this age cohort.

DISCUSSION

A two-dose regimen of 30 μg of BNT162b2 administered 21 days apart to adolescents 12 to 15 years of age was safe and immunogenic and resulted in an observed vaccine efficacy of 100% against Covid-19 from 7 days after dose 2. BNT162b2 elicited a high immune response in adults,[3] which translated to a 95% vaccine efficacy among participants in the phase 2–3 trial who were 16 years of age or older.[5] Noninferiority of immunogenicity in 12-to-15-year-old adolescents, as shown in our trial, was initially planned as the primary assessment of vaccine effectiveness through "immunobridging," an approach in which the effectiveness of a vaccine is inferred from immunogenicity data. The efficacy analysis was descriptive because a sufficient number of Covid-19 cases was not anticipated. However,

The results shown are for the reactogenicity subset of the safety population, which included all participants in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort and the subset of participants in the 16-to-25-year-old cohort who had electronic diary data available. Pain at the injection site was graded as mild (does not interfere with activity), moderate (interferes with activity), severe (prevents daily activity), or grade 4 (led to an emergency department visit or hospitalization). Redness and swelling were graded as mild (>2.0 to 5.0 cm in diameter), moderate (>5.0 to 10.0 cm in diameter), severe (>10.0 cm in diameter), or grade 4 (necrosis or exfoliative dermatitis for redness and necrosis for swelling). Fever categories are designated in the key. Fatigue, headache, chills, new or worsened muscle pain, and new or worsened joint pain were graded as mild (does not interfere with activity), moderate (some interference with activity), or severe (prevents daily routine activity). Vomiting was graded as mild (one or two times in 24 hours), moderate (more than two times in 24 hours), or severe (requires intravenous hydration), and diarrhea as mild (two or three loose stools in 24 hours), moderate (four or five loose stools in 24 hours), or severe (six or more loose stools in 24 hours). Grade 4 for all systemic events indicated an emergency department visit or hospitalization. I bars indicate 95% confidence intervals. The numbers above the I bars are the overall percentages of the participants in each group who reported the specified local reaction or systemic event. No participant had a grade 4 local reaction. With regard to systemic events, there was one incident of fever with a temperature higher than 40°C in a 12-to-15-year-old participant after dose 1 of BNT162b2.

given the number of cases and the precision of vaccine efficacy estimates, the vaccine efficacy in this trial provides a high level of certainty about the efficacy results. The lower limit of the 95% confidence interval for vaccine efficacy, which was greater than 75%, provides substantial evidence of efficacy in this age group and is consistent with the high efficacy previously reported in participants 16 years of age or older.[5] Although BNT162b2 is a two-dose regimen, early protection after a single dose has been reported in clinical trials and on the basis of real-world data.[5,19,20] It is reassuring that early protection is also observed in this age group, given the important public health implications for pandemic control.

Evaluation of BNT162b2 in younger adolescents was undertaken for several reasons. The incidence of Covid-19 is reported to be higher among 12-to-17-year-old adolescents than among younger children.[21] In addition, children, especially from low-income families, have been negatively affected by the lack of in-person learning during the pandemic.[17,18] Therefore, a demonstration of efficacy and safety in 12-to-15-year-old adolescents is important in order to expand the emergency use authorization to include children 12 years of age or older and make a critical step toward achieving herd immunity. Finally, the favorable safety and side-effect profile and high efficacy, along with the acceptable risk-to-benefit ratio in ado-

* Results are for the subset of participants in the dose 2 immunogenicity population that could be evaluated (i.e., participants who underwent randomization and received two BNT162b2 doses in accordance with the protocol, received dose 2 within the prespecified window, had at least one valid and determinate immunogenicity result from a blood sample obtained within 28 to 42 days after dose 2, and had no major protocol deviations) who had no evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection. Participants without evidence of previous infection were those who had no serologic or virologic evidence (up to 1 month after receipt of the last dose) of past SARS-CoV-2 infection (i.e., N-binding antibody [serum] negative at vaccination visit 1 and SARS-CoV-2 not detected by NAAT [nasal swab] at vaccination visits 1 and 2) and had negative NAAT results (nasal swab) at any unscheduled visit up to 1 month after dose 2.

† Geometric mean titers and two-sided 95% confidence intervals were calculated by exponentiating the mean logarithm of the titers and the corresponding confidence intervals (based on the Student's t distribution). Assay results below the lower limit of quantitation were set to 0.5 times the lower limit of quantitation.

‡ The geometric mean ratio and two-sided 95% confidence intervals were calculated by exponentiating the mean difference of the logarithms of the titers (the 12-to-15-year-old cohort minus the 16-to-25-year-old cohort) and the corresponding confidence intervals (based on the Student's t distribution). The noninferiority criterion was met, since the lower boundary of the two-sided confidence interval for the geometric mean ratio was greater than 0.67.

lescents, now justify vaccine evaluation in younger age groups.[22]

The favorable safety profile of BNT162b2, which was seen in adults in the pivotal trial and through ongoing pharmacovigilance after vaccine introduction, was also observed in 12-to-15-year-old recipients.[5,23] Adherence was high, with more than 97% of BNT162b2 recipients receiving dose 2. As previously reported for vaccine recipients 16 years of age or older, systemic events in 12-to-15-year-old BNT162b2 recipients were reported more often after dose 2 than after dose 1.[5] Antipyretic use after both doses was slightly higher in the 12-to-15-year-old cohort than in the 16-to-25-year-old cohort. This favorable safety profile is important, because a precedent exists for vaccines being increasingly reactogenic when administered to younger people. In the small percentage of participants who were SARS-CoV-2–positive at baseline, no differences in reactogenicity from those who were SARS-CoV-2–negative at baseline were noted, which supports immunization without screening for evidence of previous SARS-CoV-2 infection.

These results have several implications. Vaccination of adolescents is likely to confer the direct benefit of preventing disease along with indirect benefits, including community protection.[24] Although children generally have a lower burden of symptomatic Covid-19 than adults, schools, youth sports, and other community gatherings may represent important sources of ongoing outbreaks and transmission, despite high rates of adult immunization.[13,14,25] Vaccination of adolescents will allow them to reintegrate into society and resume in-person learning safely, which are especially important outcomes given the severe mental health effects of the Covid-19 pandemic on this group.[18,22,26] Recent real-world data suggest that BNT162b2 prevents asymptomatic infection.[19,27] Given the observed immunogenicity and efficacy, it is likely that vaccination will also prevent asymptomatic infection in children, thereby broadening community protection.

This analysis has some limitations. The efficacy analysis was prespecified as descriptive because an accurate sample size to assess vaccine efficacy could not be calculated before the start of the trial, given uncertainties about the incidence of SARS-CoV-2 infection. Therefore, the primary basis for the establishment of efficacy in 12-to-15-year-old adolescents was a neutralizing antibody response that was found to be noninferior to that in vaccine recipients 16 years of age or older, for whom efficacy had been shown.[5] This report includes safety data through 1 month of follow-up after dose 2 for some participants. Data on longer-term safety and the duration of efficacy and antibody responses in children are not yet available.

Although racial and ethnic diversity was lower among the 12-to-15-year-old participants than among those who were 16 years of age or older, vaccine efficacy in the latter age cohort is consistent among racial and ethnic subgroups,[5] and a similar pattern is likely in the younger cohort. All 12-to-15-year-old participants in this trial were enrolled at U.S. sites, whereas the 16-to-25-year-old participants were recruited globally. In the immunogenicity subset, however, all participants in both age cohorts were from the United States. The testing laboratory supply limitation resulted in fewer than anticipated participants in the immunogenicity analyses; however, even with the smaller sample size and lower power, the trial still established noninferiority of the immune response. Although some participants received other vaccinations during the trial period, we did not formally examine concomitant vaccination with BNT162b2 and other vaccines received during adolescence. These results do not determine whether BNT162b2 vaccination prevents asymptomatic infection or transmission of SARS-CoV-2; asymptomatic surveillance is ongoing in this age group.

Given the safety, immune response, and efficacy of the BNT162b2 vaccine in adolescents 12 to 15 years of age reported in this analysis, studies are ongoing to evaluate these measures in younger children and in other special populations, such as pregnant women.

Pfizer and Moderna could score $32 billion in Covid-19 vaccine sales — in 2021 alone

By Matt Egan, CNN Business
Updated 9:36 AM ET, Fri December 11, 2020

New York (CNN Business) – The imminent authorization of Pfizer's Covid-19 vaccine in the United States is a momentous occasion for science, the economy and humanity. The milestone is also a major moneymaker for the companies that developed the vaccines.

Wall Street analysts are projecting Pfizer and Moderna will generate $32 billion in Covid-19 vaccine revenue -- next year alone.

That doesn't take into account the goodwill boost these companies will receive by helping to end the worst pandemic in a century. That boost is magnified for Moderna (MRNA), a young biotech company that few people had heard of before 2020 that could now be on the cusp of getting its own FDA authorization.

Pfizer (PFE) by itself is projected to haul in $19 billion in Covid-19 vaccine revenue in 2021, according to Morgan Stanley. That's on top of an estimated $975 million in 2020 vaccine revenue.

Pfizer will split its revenues with BioNTech (BNTX), the German company it partnered with to develop the vaccine. A panel of FDA advisers recommended Thursday that the agency grant emergency use authorization to the vaccine candidate the pair developed. US officials have said they are working "rapidly" to give the vaccine the green light.

The Pfizer vaccine was already authorized by the United Kingdom earlier this month.

Pfizer is expected to take in $9.3 billion more in combined Covid-19 vaccine revenue in 2022 and 2023 as the world continues to get vaccinated, Morgan Stanley projected.

The vaccine breakthrough has not set off a boom in Pfizer's share price because the drug maker is already a huge company. Pfizer's shares are up just 12% this year, narrowly trailing the S&P 500's 13.5% overall gain.

Still, Pfizer's expected take of the revenue in 2021 would vastly surpass the company's bestselling product from last year: a pneumonia vaccine that generated $5.8 billion in sales.

Moderna had just $60 million in revenue last year

Meanwhile, Moderna's Covid-19 vaccine candidate has already transformed a virtually unknown company into a $62 billion powerhouse. Shares have skyrocketed nearly 700% this year and Morgan Stanley estimates that around half of the company's market value is attached to the vaccine.

Moderna is expected to rake in $13.2 billion in Covid-19 vaccine revenue next year, according to Goldman Sachs. Others are more bullish. Morgan Stanley said Moderna's skyrocketing share price implies investors expect the company will make $10 billion to $15 billion off Covid-19 vaccine sales in both 2021 and 2022, followed by billions more in booster sales.

These are staggering sums for a company that generated just $60 million in sales in 2019 and has never previously licensed a product.

"It's epic," said Alan Carr, a biotech analyst at Needham. "It's an historic achievement in drug development. To take a new technology in such a young company and have it ready just in time for the worst pandemic in a century is hard to imagine."

Wall Street is very bullish on Moderna's pipeline

Both Pfizer and Moderna have released data indicating their vaccine candidates are highly effective at preventing Covid-19 -- more so than analysts had been anticipating.

Investors believe that achievement validates Moderna's mRNA technology, which seeks to take advantage of normal biological processes to create a desired therapeutic effect. Wall Street now has much more confidence in Moderna's entire pipeline, betting that this won't be the company's only blockbuster.

Related Article: Worldwide distribution of Covid-19 vaccines is crucial for the economy, Melinda Gates says

Moderna's coronavirus vaccine "demonstrated that the technology is safe and effective, which unlocks the potential of other vaccines in the pipeline," Morgan Stanley analyst Matthew Harrison wrote in a recent note to clients.

More than one-quarter of Moderna's market value is now assigned to its other mRNA vaccines, Morgan Stanley estimates.

Now the big debate on Wall Street is how long the Covid-19 vaccines will be a revenue stream for these companies. It's still unknown how long the treatments will provide protection and how often individuals will need to get booster shots.

Harrison said it will take at least a few years of follow-up data to understand how effective boosters are. During that time, public health officials are likely to encourage high-risk and elderly populations to be boosted, he said.

The debate over profiting during a health crisis

The medical breakthroughs are likely to be game-changers for the hurting world economy, paving the way for recoveries of airlines, hotels, casinos, restaurants and other sectors decimated by the pandemic. The vaccines

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Still, the tens of billions of dollars Pfizer and Moderna stand to make on the vaccines has drawn criticism given the human suffering. The pandemic has killed nearly 300,000 people in the United States alone.

Rival drug makers Johnson & Johnson (JNJ) and AstraZeneca (AZN) have promised to make their vaccines available on a not-for-profit basis during the pandemic.

"It is absolutely wrong for drug companies like Pfizer and Moderna to profiteer, and for their executives to make egregious personal fortunes, off of Covid-19 vaccines that have been so heavily subsidized and supported by American taxpayers," said Eli Zupnick, a spokesman for Accountable.US, a progressive watchdog and patient advocacy group.

Neither Pfizer nor Moderna responded to requests for comment.

Related Article: This extremely intense gym is expanding even as Covid cases soar

In a statement last month, Pfizer said its Covid-19 vaccine development and manufacturing costs "have been entirely self-funded, with billions of dollars already invested at risk."

"The company will continue bearing all the costs of development and manufacturing in an effort to help find a solution to this pandemic as fast as possible," Pfizer said at the time.

The role of the federal government

Although Pfizer did not accept money from Operation Warp Speed, the Trump administration's vaccine initiative, the federal government did agree to pay $1.95 billion for the first 100 million doses. That agreement served as a safety net of sorts for Pfizer, providing the company with a lucrative guaranteed market if the FDA gave the vaccine its blessing.

Moderna tapped the capital markets for some funding. In May, the company raised $1.3 billion through a share sale. Some Moderna executives cashed out tens of millions of dollars in stock through pre-scheduled transactions that nonetheless raised eyebrows from former SEC officials.

Moderna also took a chunk of taxpayer money to develop its vaccine candidate. The federal government awarded Moderna about $955 million in grants designed to support the development of the drug. Moderna also worked closely with government scientists on testing its vaccine.

Carr, the Needham analyst, said the coming revenue hauls for Moderna and Pfizer were motivating factors that helped make the medical breakthroughs possible.

"There is nothing like a revenue stream to incentivize them," he said.

Subject: Fatal Flaw in SB 51 undermines religion --- Partial retraction

Representative Dogan,

Phil Christofanelli pointed out an error in my interpretation of the definition of "Religious organization."

I agree with his contention that even if a church, synagogue, or mosque loses its 501(c) status, it still enjoys whatever tort protection that SB 51 provides those entities. The 501(c) qualifier only applies to "any entity."

That does not diminish my concerns about the actual exempting clause:

SS#2 SCS SBs 51 & 42 -- Page 5
11 2. No religious organization shall be liable in any 13 COVID-19 exposure action unless the plaintiff can prove 14 intentional misconduct.

Many in church leadership will view "misconduct" as any non-compliance with the mainstream narrative -- that will affect their willingness to not comply.

Juries will also be easily swayed to believe the same thing -- and that's all that really matters in tort cases.

If for instance, a local ordinance places limits on assembly, ignoring those limits could easily be considered "misconduct"

As an example, from 42 USC § 1791(b)(8): The term “intentional misconduct” means conduct by a person with knowledge (at the time of the conduct) that the conduct is harmful to the health or well-being of another person.

We can do better than that....

- Ron

====== Original Message Below ========

Among the things wrong with SB 51 is what I think is a fatal flaw that must be fixed.

In these times of "wokeness," "cancel culture," and the "critical race" movement we would be foolish to not realize that Christianity is a major target.

As is the case in places like Canada, every tool will be used against traditional religion -- including the tax code.

Churches will be faced with either altering their message and practices or giving up 501(c)3 status. As written, SB 51 ties its protections, for what they are worth, to that 501(C) status, and thereby somewhat coerces "acceptable" messaging from churches.

113 mosque, or any entity that has or would qualify for federal 114 tax-exempt status as a nonprofit religious organization

The actual exemption for religious organizations is also problematic.

"Intentional misconduct" is not defined, but what's worse is that it also channels churches into compliance with whatever is the government or mainstream narrative. There have been numerous times in history, including times recorded in the Bible, when the church had to choose between obeying government edicts and their duty to God. When proper "conduct" as defined by health "authorities" militates against duty to God and Christians choose God, SB 51 leaves them in the lurch.

These problems with SB 51 should be fixed before the bill advances.

On August 4, 2020 Missourians approved Missouri Amendment 2, the Medicaid Expansion Initiative by a vote of 676,687 Yes to 593,491. In a democracy that should represent clearly the will of the majority of Missourians who voted on this amendment. Now the Missouri House Budget Committee has taken steps to undermine the vote of the people of Missouri by blocking funds for the enactment of this initiative. If you are on the Budget Committee you have wronged the people of Missouri with this action. If you are not on this committee but will be voting on this issue later you have a chance to honor the will of the people of Missouri in this matter. Good morning,

I am following up on an email that I sent in early June concerning the much needed reform of Informant usage policies in our State. Wrongful convictions are serious issues that need to be addressed in Missouri, as it has been in several other states. After that initial email, I was contacted by House Rep Unsicker who was gracious enough to schedule a Dem Caucus meeting with me and other stakeholders for next Thursday, July 22nd. I hope that you will be able to attend the meeting next week, and if not, I am more than happy to connect with you to discuss at another day and time. I am including the original email and attachments for quicker access.

My name is Michelle Smith, I am a criminal/social justice advocate in St. Louis, in my official capacity I am the Racial Justice Coordinator at MADP (Missourians for Alternatives to the Death Penalty). I am also an advocate in other areas of the criminal legal system, one area that I am very passionate about is wrongful convictions, which is a serious issue in Missouri. Recently in the news we have heard about the injustices occurring to Kevin Strickland and Lamar Johnson, though there are so many more wrongfully convicted individuals in our state.

One of the wrongfully convicted in Missouri is Maurice Davis Sr, who is housed in Jefferson City Correctional Center. Maurice has excelled in the study of law and serves as a leader of the other incarcerated men. He has been the President of the prison chapter of the NAACP for several years and before that served as the Vice President and the Chairman of the Legal Redress Committee. Maurice has written several legislative proposals, one of which I am attaching here along with supporting information concerning informant testimony. According to the National Registry of Exonerations, which has tracked exonerations since 1989, there have been 54 total exonerations in Missouri, 50 from State courts and 4 from federal courts. Of these 54 exonerations, 33 of the individuals had Perjury/False Accusations as a primary contributing factor in their convictions. Which is 61% of the exonerations in Missouri, and nationally the figure stands at 60%.

During the past few years, several states have taken steps to reduce these atrocities by studying and implementing new legislation concerning informant testimony. I have attached several documents to his email and I will describe them here:

* This article was written by journalists at ProPublica in March 2020, discussing several egregious cases of wrongful convictions, it includes one case from Missouri, that of David Robinson. In the years since then Ricky Kidd and Johnathan Irons have both been exonerated after over two decades of wrongful incarceration and fighting for their freedoms.

BEYOND UNRELIABLE:

HOW SNITCHES CONTRIBUTE TO WRONGFUL CONVICTIONS

ALEXANDRA NATAPOFF*

INTRODUCTION

Thanks to new DNA technologies and the heroic efforts of innocence advocates, there is increasing public recognition that our criminal justice system often convicts the wrong people. Criminal informants, or "snitches,"[1] play a prominent role in this wrongful conviction phenomenon. According to Northwestern University Law School's Center on Wrongful Convictions, 45.9 percent of documented wrongful capital convictions have been traced to false informant testimony, making "snitches the leading cause of wrongful convictions in U.S. capital cases."[2] Horror stories abound of lying jailhouse

* Associate Professor, Loyola Law School, Los Angeles. This piece is based in part on my earlier article, Snitching: The Institutional and Communal Consequences, 73 U. CIN. L. REV. 645 (2004), which offers a global analysis of the role of snitches in the criminal system and their impact on high crime communities.

[1] By "snitches" I mean criminals who provide information in exchange for lenience for their own crimes or other benefits. The term "informant" therefore does not include law-abiding citizens who provide information to the police with no benefit to themselves.

snitches and paid informants who frame innocent people in pursuit of cash or lenience for their own crimes.[3] In recognition of the dangers of informants who lie, capital reform proposals often contain provisions designed to restrain the use of informant testimony.[4]

But informants do not generate wrongful convictions merely because they lie. After all, lying hardly distinguishes informants from other sorts of witnesses. Rather, it is how and why they lie, and how the government depends on lying informants, that makes snitching a troubling distortion of the truth-seeking process. Informants lie primarily in exchange for lenience for their own crimes, although sometimes they lie for money.[5] In order to obtain the benefit of these lies, informants must persuade the government that their lies are true. Police and prosecutors, in turn, often do not and cannot check these lies because the snitch's information may be all the government has. Additionally, police and prosecutors are heavily invested in using informants to conduct investigations and to make their cases.[6] As a result, they often lack the objectivity and the information that would permit them to discern when informants are lying.[7] This gives rise to a disturbing marriage of convenience: both snitches and the government benefit from inculpatory information while neither has a strong incentive to challenge it.[8] The usual protections against false evidence, particularly prosecutorial ethics and discovery, may thus be unavailing to protect the system from informant falsehoods precisely because prosecutors themselves have limited means and incentives to ferret out the truth.[9] snitch-generated wrongful convictions.[10] In Part II, it describes in more detail the institutional relationships among snitches, police, and prosecutors that make snitch falsehoods so pervasive and difficult to discern using the traditional tools of the adversarial process.[11] Part III concludes with a litigation suggestion for a judicial check on the use of informant witnesses, namely, a Daubert-style[12] pre-trial reliability hearing.[13] The Appendix in Part IV contains a sample motion requesting and justifying such a hearing.[14]

I. WRONGFUL CONVICTION DATA

In 2000, the groundbreaking book Actual Innocence estimated that twenty-one percent of wrongful capital convictions are influenced by snitch testimony.[15] Four years later, a study by the Center on Wrongful Convictions doubled that number.[16] Another recent report estimates that twenty percent of all California wrongful convictions, capital or otherwise, result from false snitch testimony.[17] The Illinois Commission on Capital Punishment, in reviewing that state's wrongfully convicted capital defendants, identified "a number of cases where it appeared that the prosecution relied unduly on the uncorroborated testimony of a witness with something to gain. In some cases, this was an accomplice, while in other cases it was an in-custody informant."[18] Professor Samuel Gross's study on exonerations likewise reports that nearly fifty percent of wrongful murder convictions involved perjury by someone such as a "jailhouse snitch or another witness who stood to gain from the false testimony."[19]

Behind these general statistics lie numerous stories of informant crime, deceit, secret deals and government duplicity.[20] In Texas, in the so-called "sheetrock scandal," a group of police officers and informants set up dozens of individuals with fake drugs, which were actually gypsum, the main, non-narcotic component of sheetrock.[21] The suspects were typically Mexican workers, and many pleaded guilty or were deported before the scandal was uncovered.[22] In Los Angeles, DEA informant Essam Magid not only avoided jail for his many crimes but earned hundreds of thousands of dollars by serving as an informant.[23] During this time, he framed dozens of innocent people before one person he targeted finally refused to plead guilty and revealed the arrangement.[24] The now-infamous Leslie White, the prototypical jailhouse snitch, sent dozens of suspects to prison by fabricating confessions and evidence, reducing his own sentences by years.[25]

Although such horror stories provoke outcry, little has been done to cabin the law enforcement discretion that makes such informant operations possible, or to impose greater transparency and oversight onto the process in order to curtail such abuses.

II. INEXTRICABLY INTERTWINED: LAW ENFORCEMENT DEPENDENCE ON SNITCHES

Informants have become law enforcement's investigative tool of choice, particularly in the ever-expanding world of drug enforcement.[26] Informants are part of a thriving market for information.[27] In this market, snitches trade information with police and prosecutors in exchange for lenience, the dismissal of charges, reduced sentences, or even the avoidance of arrest.[28] It is a highly informal, robust market that is rarely scrutinized by courts or the public.[29] And it is growing.[30] While data is hard to come by, federal statistics indicate that sixty percent of drug defendants cooperate in some fashion.[31] Informants permeate all aspects of law enforcement, from investigations to plea-bargaining to trial.[32]

The growth in the sheer number of informants reflects the increasing dependence of police and prosecutors on informants.[33] Professor Ellen Yaroshefsky describes prosecutors' own complaints: "These [drug] cases are not very well investigated. . . . [O]ur cases are developed through cooperators and their recitation of the facts. Often, in DEA, you have agents who do little or no follow up so when a cooperator comes and begins to give you information outside of the particular incident, you have no clue if what he says is true."[34] Another prosecutor revealed that "the biggest surprise is the amount of time you spend with criminals. You spend most of your time with cooperators. It's bizarre."[35] Another prosecutor describes the phenomenon of "falling in love with your rat"[36]:

> You are not supposed to, of course. . . . But you spend time with this guy, you get to know him and his family. You like him. . . . [T]he reality is that the cooperator's information often becomes your mind set. . . . It's a phenomenon and the danger is that because you feel all warm and fuzzy about your cooperator, you come to believe that you do not have to > spend much time or energy investigating the case and you don't. Once you become chummy with your cooperator, there is a real danger that you lose your objectivity. . . . [37]

Because investigations and cases rely so heavily on informants, protecting and rewarding informants has become an important part of law enforcement.[38] Police and prosecutors are well known for protecting their snitches: all too often, when defendants or courts seek the identity of informants, cases are dismissed or warrant applications are dropped.[39] More fundamentally, police and prosecutors become invested in their informants' stories, and therefore may lack the objectivity to know when their sources are lying.[40]

Informants are thus punished for silence and rewarded for producing inculpatory information, even when that information is inaccurate. The system protects them from the consequences of their inaccuracies by guarding their identities and making their information the centerpiece of the government's cases. The front line officials who handle informants – police and prosecutors – are ill equipped to screen that information, and once they incorporate it into their cases, they acquire a stake in its validity. This phenomenon explains in part why snitch testimony generates so many wrongful convictions: it permeates the criminal system and there are few safeguards against it.

III. LITIGATING SNITCHES: A DAUBERT-INSPIRED APPROACH

While the impact of informants on the criminal system goes far beyond their role as witnesses, an important part of the wrongful conviction phenomenon turns on the role of snitches at trial. Many wrongful convictions represent instances where an innocent defendant refuses to plead guilty and goes to trial, but is nonetheless convicted because the jury accepts a snitch's testimony as credible and true. When this happens, the integrity of the system is at stake. This section proposes a limited remedy for this problem in the form of pre-trial reliability hearings. Illinois has adopted this procedure for in-custody informants (so-called "jailhouse snitches"), and at least two U.S. jurisdictions as well as Canada have contemplated variations of it.[41]

The theory behind pre-trial reliability hearings mirrors the reasoning in Daubert v. Merrell Dow,[42] in which the Supreme Court established the necessity for reliability hearings for expert witnesses. As Professor George Harris points out, there are many similarities between snitches and expert witnesses.[43] Like experts, informants are "paid" by one party.[44] This makes them more one-sided than typical witnesses.[45] Informants' testimony is coached and prepared by government lawyers, making them challenging to cross-examine.[46] Moreover, informants' stories are hard to corroborate or contradict in cases where their testimony is the central evidence against the defendant.[47] Finally, like experts, informants may have an air of "inside knowledge" about the crime that may sway the jury, an air that is not easily dispelled by cautionary instructions.[48] Indeed, the prevalence of wrongful convictions based on snitch testimony demonstrates that juries often believe informants.[49]

For these types of reasons, the Supreme Court has recognized that discovery, cross-examination and jury instructions – the traditional adversarial protections against false testimony – do not guarantee a rigorous jury evaluation of expert testimony.[50] The court must act as a preliminary "gatekeeper" and evaluate the reliability of experts before the jury hears them.[51] For these same reasons, courts should act as gatekeepers and evaluate the reliability of informants before they can testify at trial. This would permit fuller disclosure of the deals that informants make with the government,[52] allow more thorough testing of the truthfulness of informants, and reduce opportunities for abuse. It would also acknowledge that even well-meaning police and prosecutors may need help in ascertaining the reliability of their criminal sources.

Illinois has enacted a statute that provides a potential blueprint for the type of reliability inquiry that a trial court should conduct in evaluating informant testimony.[53] This statute places the burden on the government to prove reliability by a preponderance of the evidence, and requires the court to consider the following factors:

> (1) the complete criminal history of the informant;
> (2) any deal, promise, inducement, or benefit that the offering party has made or will make in the future to the informant;
> (3) the statements made by the accused;
> (4) the time and place of the statements, the time and place of their disclosure to law enforcement officials, and the names of all persons who were present when the statements were made;
> (5) whether at any time the informant recanted that testimony or statement and, if so, the time and place of the recantation, the nature of the recantation, and the names of the persons who were present at the recantation;
> (6) other cases in which the informant testified, provided that the existence of such testimony can be ascertained through reasonable inquiry and whether the informant received any promise, inducement, or benefit in exchange for or subsequent to that testimony or statement; and
> (7) any other information relevant to the informant's credibility.[54]

In effect, this model permits the court to examine the informant's incentives to lie, his history of escaping punishment through snitching, the existence, or lack, of corroboration, and the government's efforts to check the informant's story.[55] Such reliability determinations will be more efficient and effective in avoiding wrongful convictions because the court can evaluate the informant in the same way that it evaluates all preliminary questions of admissibility, without the constraints of the rules of evidence or the presence of the jury.[56]

Although Illinois limits reliability hearings to in-custody informants, all informant testimony in which a criminal witness receives compensation for inculpating someone else is potentially infected by the same unreliability.[57] Accordingly, reliability hearings should be available in any case, pre-plea as well as pre-trial, in which a compensated informant is the source of inculpatory evidence.[58] Given the prevalence of informant falsehoods in wrongful capital convictions, such hearings should be mandatory in capital cases, even where the defense intends to concede guilt and move directly to the sentencing phase. If the government's information is based on informant testimony, the defense in turn will rely on such testimony in assessing the likelihood of success at trial. Given the stakes, such evaluations should not be left to the vagaries of informant truthfulness.

The Appendix to this Comment contains a motion and memorandum of law in support of the motion, requesting a reliability hearing in a capital case in which the main evidence against the defendant was supplied by three informant-accomplices. While the factual scenario is not universal, the legal analysis could form a basis for similar requests.

* * * * * * * * *

MOTION TO EXCLUDE COOPERATING WITNESS TESTIMONY AND REQUEST FOR A RELIABILITY HEARING

John Doe, by and through his attorneys, respectfully moves, pursuant to Federal Rules of Evidence 104, 403, and 701, to exclude the testimony of cooperating witnesses John Smith, John Jones and John Johnson, because their testimony is unreliable and its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Mr. Doe further requests that the Court hold a pre-trial hearing to determine the reliability of these witnesses. In support of this motion Mr. Doe alleges as follows:

1. Mr. Doe has been charged by indictment with use of a handgun in the commission of a crime of violence that results in death, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 924(j), carjacking in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2119, conspiracy in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 371, and related counts.

2. In addition to Mr. Doe, three other men were arrested in connection with this case. Those men are John Smith, John Jones, and John Johnson. Information provided by the government indicates that, shortly after their arrests, these three men gave statements to the police. Eventually each man exonerated himself and implicated Mr. Doe in the victim's murder. The men also portrayed Mr. Doe as the leader in the carjacking. All three are now cooperating with the government against Mr. Doe.

3. In exchange for having incriminated Mr. Doe, the cooperators have all received compensation from the government in the form of charging and sentencing consideration. In particular, as a result of their statements implicating Mr. Doe, they have been permitted to plead guilty in state court to paroleable sentences of forty-five years for Smith and Jones, and thirty-five years for Johnson. Family members of the men have advised counsel that if Mr. Doe is convicted, their sentences may be further reduced. In light of the compensation that the cooperating witnesses have received (and may expect to receive) in exchange for implicating Mr. Doe, their testimony is biased and inherently unreliable.

4. Their testimony also will be extremely difficult to disprove because they are the only witnesses to the crime, and the police have recovered very little physical evidence. Cross-examination may be an insufficient tool to establish the veracity of these unverifiable statements.

5. For these reasons, Mr. Doe moves to exclude the testimony of the three cooperating witnesses based on its unreliability, its lack of probative value, its prejudicial nature, and its imperviousness to cross-examination at trial.

6. Several courts have held that pre-trial reliability hearings are appropriate where unreliable cooperating witnesses are propounded as witnesses. The Illinois Governor's Commission on Capital Punishment recently has recommended that reliability hearings be held whenever an in-custody informant is a potential witness in a capital case. In this case, a hearing is especially important, because the government's entire case for guilt and for the death penalty rests on cooperating informant testimony.

WHEREFORE, Mr. Doe requests that the Court hold a pre-trial reliability hearing at which the cooperators shall be made available for examination by counsel, to permit the Court to decide whether their testimony is sufficiently reliable, and therefore sufficiently probative, to be admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 403. A separate memorandum of law is submitted in support of this motion.

Respectfully submitted,

* * * * * * * * *

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE COOPERATING WITNESS TESTIMONY AND REQUEST FOR A RELIABILITY HEARING

SUMMARY

"It is difficult to imagine a greater motivation to lie than the inducement of a reduced sentence . . . ." United States v. Cervantes-Pacheco, 826 F.2d 310, 315 (5th Cir. 1987). In this case, the government's case for Mr. Doe's guilt, and potentially for the death penalty, will be based primarily on the testimony of three compensated, interested, biased witnesses whose eventual freedom depends on their ability to obtain Mr. Doe's conviction. Under the circumstances, their reliability is so compromised that their testimony lacks probative value, thereby failing the test of Federal Rule of Evidence 403. The Fourth and Ninth Circuits have called for increased judicial scrutiny of compensated informant witnesses, and several courts have mandated pre-trial reliability hearings to permit courts to evaluate the reliability of compensated witnesses such as the cooperators in this case. Mr. Doe thus requests that the Court hold a reliability hearing to require the government to establish the reliability of its cooperating witnesses, to exclude some or all of those witnesses if the Court deems it appropriate, and to preserve Mr. Doe's right to a fair trial.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

* * *

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

ARGUMENT

I. COURTS HAVE DEEMED COMPENSATED WITNESSES UNRELIABLE AND SUBJECT TO ADDITIONAL JUDICIAL SCRUTINY

The Fourth Circuit has recently expressed its deep concern over the use of compensated informant testimony and its reluctance to admit such testimony absent stringent judicial controls. United States v. Levenite, 277 F.3d 454, 459-62 (4th Cir. 2002). Compensated testimony "create[s] fertile fields from which truth-bending or even perjury could grow, threatening the core of a trial's legitimacy." Id. at 462. Such testimony "may be approved only rarely and under the highest scrutiny." Id. [60]

The Fourth Circuit has prescribed additional procedural guarantees that the government must adhere to where the use of compensated informant witnesses is contemplated. Before such testimony will be permitted: (1) the compensation arrangement must be disclosed to the defendant, (2) the defendant must have the opportunity to cross-examine the witness, and (3) the jury must be instructed to engage in heightened scrutiny of the witness. Finally, where the compensation is:

> contingent on the content or nature of the testimony given, the court must ascertain (1) that the government has independent means, such as corroborating evidence, by which to measure the truthfulness of the witness's testimony and (2) that the contingency is expressly linked to the witness testifying truthfully. Moreover, when a witness is testifying under such a contingent payment arrangement, the government has a duty to inform the court and opposing counsel when the witness' testimony is inconsistent with the government's expectation.

[60] Although Levenite concerned a witness who was testifying in exchange for money, the same concerns arise when the compensation consists of reduced criminal sanctions. Indeed, the promise of a reduced sentence or the elimination of the capital sentencing option may be far more valuable to a defendant than cash. See Cervantes-Pacheco, 826 F.2d at 315 (the same analysis is applied by analogy when lenience is provided as compensation for information).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Similarly the Ninth Circuit has called for increased judicial scrutiny of deals between informants and the government, holding that "where the prosecution fails to disclose evidence such as the existence of a leniency deal or promise that would be valuable in impeaching a witness whose testimony is central to the prosecution's case, it violates the due process rights of the accused and undermines confidence in the outcome of the trial," Horton v. Mayle, 408 F.3d 570, 581 (9th Cir. 2005), and calling such lack of disclosure "unscrupulous." Silva v. Brown, 416 F.3d 980, 991 (9th Cir. 2005).

In this case, the three cooperators are being compensated specifically for testimony adverse to Mr. Doe. They have already received the benefit of reduced charges and have been promised low, agreed-upon sentences, and may have their sentences further reduced if Mr. Doe is convicted. Their testimony is thus compensated, contingent testimony precisely of the sort that so troubled the Fourth Circuit in Levenite. The Court therefore has an obligation to ascertain whether the government can corroborate the cooperators' truthfulness, the nature of the contingency arrangement, and the means the government intends to use to assure that the cooperators testify truthfully. Because of the difficulty ascertaining these matters in the heat of trial in the presence of the jury, a pre-trial reliability hearing is warranted.

II. COMPENSATED WITNESSES ARE INHERENTLY UNRELIABLE

A growing body of literature documents the inherent unreliability of compensated witnesses, cooperating co-conspirators, "jailhouse snitches," and other types of informants. Numerous horror stories of wrongful convictions based on perjurious informant testimony have emerged, and they have prompted official review of the practice of permitting compensated informant testimony. The following list contains just a few of the efforts to document and control informant unreliability:

1. The founders of the Innocence Project discovered that twenty-one percent of the innocent defendants on death row

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

were placed there by false informant testimony.[61]

2. The Illinois Governor's Commission on Capital Punishment unanimously concluded that "[t]estimony from in-custody witnesses has often been shown to have been false, and several of the thirteen cases of men released from death row involved, at least in part, testimony from an in-custody informant."[62] The Commission recommended the holding of reliability hearings to mitigate the chances of perjury.

3. In their comprehensive historical study, Bedau and Radelet discovered that one-third of the 350 erroneous convictions they studied were due to "perjury by prosecution witnesses." This was twice as many as the next leading source – erroneous eyewitness identification – and stemmed in large part from the prevalence of co-conspirator testimony.[63]

Courts likewise have recognized the inherent unreliability of compensated informants, going so far as to take judicial notice of their tendency to lie. "The use of informants to investigate and prosecute persons engaged in clandestine criminal activity is fraught with peril. This hazard is a matter 'capable of accurate and ready determination by resort to sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned' and thus of which we can take judicial notice." United States v. Bernal-Obeso, 989 F.2d 331, 333 (9th Cir. 1993). "Our judicial history is speckled with cases where informants falsely pointed the finger of guilt at suspects and defendants, creating the risk of sending innocent persons to prison." Id. Another court has noted that "[n]ever has it been more true that a criminal charged with a serious crime understands that a fast and easy way out of trouble with the law is . . . to cut a deal at someone else's expense and to purchase leniency from the government by offering testimony in return for immunity, or in return for reduced incarceration." Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands v. Bowie, 243 F.3d 1109, 1123 (9th Cir. 2001). Indeed, long before snitching became a pervasive aspect of the criminal justice system, the Supreme Court recognized that "[t]he use of informers, accessories, accomplices, false friends, or any of the other betrayals which are 'dirty business' may raise serious questions of credibility." On Lee v. United States, 343 U.S. 747, 755 (1952).

Where the unreliability of a particular type of witness is so well-established, it is appropriate for the court to take protective steps to guarantee the integrity of the process. Cf. Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, 509 U.S. 579, 595 (1993) (court to act as "gatekeeper" to ensure reliability of scientific evidence).

III. CROSS EXAMINATION IS AN INSUFFICIENT GUARANTEE OF RELIABILITY IN THIS CASE

Despite the recognized unreliability of compensated informant witnesses, courts have traditionally permitted them to testify on the assumption that cross-examination will adequately test an informant's truthfulness. See, e.g., Hoffa v. United States, 385 U.S. 293, 311 (1966). In Hoffa, the Supreme Court upheld the use of a compensated informant, holding that his testimony did not violate the defendant's right to due process, in large part because of the availability of cross-examination, reasoning that "[t]he established safeguards of the Anglo-American legal system leave the veracity of a witness to be tested by cross-examination, and the credibility of his testimony to be determined by a properly instructed jury." Id. at 311; see also Cervantes-Pacheco, 826 F.2d at 315 (procedural protections of discovery, cross-examination, and jury instructions regarding informants satisfy due process).

The cooperators' testimony in this case, however, will be nearly impossible for defense counsel to penetrate on cross-examination. The cooperators are the only witnesses to the crime, and their stories can be neither independently confirmed nor disproved. The assertion that Mr. Doe was the shooter–the most important single disputed fact in the entire case–rests entirely upon the self-serving, unverifiable statements of the cooperating witnesses. Their mere ipse dixit, if maintained, could suffice to persuade a jury to impose the death penalty on Mr. Doe.

Cross-examination will be further hampered because the defense lacks pre-trial access to the cooperators. At this stage in the proceedings, the defense has not yet seen the cooperators' plea agreements. The cooperators, on the other hand, have had multiple opportunities to hone their version of events in preparation for court, both in the state proceedings and in connection with this federal case. This combination of one-sided access and government preparation will render these witnesses overly prepared and difficult to examine at trial.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Finally, unlike uncharged lay witnesses, the cooperators have compelling incentives to pin responsibility on Mr. Doe. Their future literally hangs in the balance, based on their ability to maintain a consistent story. For all these reasons, in-trial cross-examination may be insufficient to determine whether the cooperators are being truthful.

Professor George Harris has analyzed the difficulty of cross-examining informants whose compensation depends on their usefulness to the prosecutor. As Professor Harris explains:

> Paradoxically, the more a witness's fate depends on the success of the prosecution, the more resistant the witness will be to cross-examination. A witness whose future depends on currying the government's favor will formulate a consistent and credible story calculated to procure an agreement with the government and will adhere religiously at trial to her prior statements.[64]

In this case, the motivations of the cooperators are precisely those described by Professor Harris. Years of their lives literally depend on the success of this prosecution, and therefore they will be more resistant to cross-examination than the typical witness.

For these reasons, the Court should not rely on defense counsel's eventual cross-examination of these witnesses to establish their truthfulness, but rather should have the opportunity, unfettered by the rules of evidence and the presence of the jury, to determine for itself whether the testimony of these witnesses bears sufficient indicia of reliability to permit its presentation at trial.

IV. THE GOVERNMENT HAS AN OBLIGATION TO ESTABLISH THE RELIABILITY OF ITS COOPERATING WITNESSES

The government has special obligations when it comes to their cooperating informants. Courts have established that a "prosecutor who does not appreciate the perils of using rewarded criminals as witnesses risks compromising the truth-seeking mission of our criminal justice system [and courts] expect prosecutors and investigators to take all reasonable measures to safeguard the system against treachery." Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands v. Bowie, 236 F.3d 1083, 1089 (9th Cir. 2001); see also Levenite, 277 F.3d at 459-62. This obligation stems from two sources: first, the government enlists and controls and rewards its informants and is therefore in a unique position to evaluate their reliability. The second is that the prosecutor, as the representative of the sovereign, has an ethical obligation to ensure that the defendant is given a fair trial. See Bowie, 236 F.3d at 1089 (citing Berger v. United States, 295 U.S. 78, 88 (1935)).

Unfortunately, because of the dynamics of this case, the government is in a weak position to guarantee the reliability of the cooperators' testimony. From the inception of this case, the cooperators have been well aware that any hope of lenience rested on their ability to provide the government with useful information. The government is thus the primary target of the cooperators' efforts to escape punishment, and if the cooperators are lying, they will presumably be particularly careful not to reveal it to the government.

The Ninth Circuit addressed these issues of reliability and government obligations in a case with facts startlingly similar to the instant case. In Bowie, three co-conspirators were charged with murder and kidnapping. There was some evidence that two of the three conspired to pin the murder on the third. The government's failure to fully investigate the possibility of collaborative perjury caused the Court to reverse the conviction. In its decision, the Court noted that when the government makes a deal with an informant, "each contract for testimony is fraught with the real peril that the proffered testimony will not be truthful, but simply factually contrived to 'get' a target of sufficient interest to induce concessions from the government." Bowie, 236 F.3d at 1095. The Court concluded that "rewarded criminals represent a great threat to the mission of the criminal justice system." Id.

Barry Tarlow has likewise documented the significant difficulties that prosecutors experience in holding their criminal informants accountable.[65] Tarlow, a former prosecutor, explains how prosecutors may be drawn in by informants who have strong motivations to pin responsibility on others, and notes the heavy pressures on prosecutors to rely on unreliable compensated witnesses when others are unavailable.

Given the inherent "peril" of rewarded testimony and the government's heavy reliance on it in this case, the government should not be permitted merely to proffer its good faith belief in the reliability of its witnesses. Rather, it is appropriate to hold a hearing to establish the reliability of the witnesses through adversarial questioning and a neutral evaluation by the Court.

V. A PRETRIAL RELIABILITY HEARING IS REQUIRED TO TEST THE INFORMANT'S RELIABILITY OUTSIDE THE PRESENCE OF THE JURY

A. The Court has the Authority and Obligation to Conduct a Reliability Hearing Under the Federal Rules of Evidence

In this case, the interests of justice and a fair trial require a pretrial reliability hearing to permit the Court to ascertain the reliability and probative value of the cooperators' testimony. The Court has clear authority to hold such a hearing pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 104(c), which provides: "Hearings on the admissibility of confessions shall in all cases be conducted out of the hearing of the jury. Hearings on other preliminary matters shall be so conducted when the interests of justice require . . . ."

The rules of evidence likewise obligate the Court to screen out unfairly prejudicial, harmful, confusing or otherwise unhelpful evidence. Federal Rule of Evidence 403 provides that "evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence." Likewise, Federal Rule of Evidence 701, limits lay witness testimony to testimony that is "helpful" to the trier of fact.

[65] See Barry Tarlow, Perjuring Informants Brought to the Bar, RICO Report, CHAMPION, at 33-40 (July 2000).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

At least two courts and one state legislature have mandated reliability hearings whenever incarcerated informants ("jailhouse snitches") are proposed witnesses. See Dodd v. State, 993 P.2d 778, 784 (Ok. Ct. of Crim. App. Jan. 6, 2000) (Strubhar, J., concurring) (approving lower court imposition of "reliability hearing" comparable to Daubert hearing); D'Agostino v. State, 107 Nev. 1001, 823 P.2d 283 (Nev. 1992) (holding that before "jailhouse incrimination" testimony is admissible the "trial judge [must] first determine[] that the details of the admissions supply a sufficient indicia of reliability"). Illinois mandates such hearings by law. See ILL. COMP. STAT., ch. 725, § 5/115-21(c) (2003). Illinois's statutory requirement is based on the recommendations of the Governor's Commission on Capital Punishment, which concluded that reliability hearings are necessary whenever incarcerated informants are offered as witnesses.[66] Such conclusions apply here with equal force. Jailhouse snitches are incarcerated defendants who provide information to law enforcement in exchange for charging and sentencing benefits. The ability of such snitches to fabricate confessions and other evidence has become infamous.[67] Precisely the same concerns are present where, as here, the informant is in custody, subject to criminal penalties, and is offering unique, unverifiable information in exchange for lenience.

B. The Principles of Daubert Support the Holding of a Reliability Hearing

The law's treatment of expert witnesses further supports the holding of a reliability hearing in this instance. In Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmceuticals Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993), the [66] See ILLINOIS GOVERNOR'S COMMISSION ON CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, at 30, 122.

[67] See id. at 122-123 (detailing the Los Angeles Grand Jury investigation of jailhouse snitch testimony).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Supreme Court determined the need for a special mechanism to evaluate the reliability of expert witnesses because experts pose thorny problems of cross-examination and persuasion. Experts, for example, rely on specialized information that is not directly available to the jury. Daubert, 509 U.S. at 592. The court held that the concerns underlying Rule 403 are preeminent because expert witnesses can have such a potent effect on juries:

> Expert evidence can be both powerful and quite misleading because of the difficulty in evaluating it. Because of this risk, the judge in weighing possible prejudice against probative force under Rule 403 [] exercises more control over experts than over lay witnesses.

Daubert, 509 U.S. at 595. Moreover, as Professor Harris has noted, expert witnesses are compensated, violating the usual presumption against the use of paid testimony.[68] The suitability of compensated expert testimony is thus determined in part by pre-trial judicial examinations of reliability.

Informants pose many of the same special concerns that expert witnesses do. Unlike typical lay witnesses, they are compensated, they have personal interests in the outcome of the case, their testimony is difficult to test on cross-examination, and they are selected and controlled by the propounding party.[69] Like experts, moreover, informant testimony can be "powerful and quite misleading." Daubert, 509 U.S. at 595. At least one court has expressly extended the principles of Daubert to cover informants, imposing a "reliability hearing" requirement whenever the testimony of a so-called "jailhouse snitch" is involved. Dodd v. State, 993 P.2d 778, 784 (Ok. Ct. of Crim. App. Jan. 6, 2000) (Strubhar, J., concurring) (approving lower court imposition of "reliability hearing" comparable to Daubert hearing).

In this case, the cooperators are the sole witnesses to the crime and their version of the story will carry heavy weight with the jury. In the same way that courts act as "gatekeepers" with respect to experts, it is appropriate for this Court to ensure that unreliable informant testimony does not taint the jury.

C. A Reliability Hearing is Warranted on the Facts of this Case

In this case, the cooperators' testimony presents a substantial danger of "unfair prejudice" because it is the government's primary evidence against Mr. Doe, because it is highly unreliable, because the cooperators have overwhelming motivations to lie, and because their testimony cannot be disproved. Their testimony may not be helpful to the trier of fact if it is so biased and unverifiable that no trier of fact can conclusively determine it is truthful or not.

It is particularly important that the cooperators' reliability be tested prior to trial outside the presence of the jury. The cooperators' reliability, their incentives to fabricate, the details of the crime, and their relationship to the defendant are matters which may only be susceptible to penetration through the more informal inquiries permitted under Rule 104, where the rules of evidence do not apply. Moreover, the Court is better suited to recognize reliability and credibility concerns that may elude the jury. The inquiry into such matters also could be highly prejudicial if heard by a jury and incurable by subsequent jury instruction.

Finally, as noted above, the procedural requirements set forth in Levenite can best be met at a preliminary hearing. At such a hearing, the informant will be subject to cross-examination, and the government can provide to the Court and counsel any corroboration it might have and provide assurances that the arrangement with the witnesses indeed protects against perjurious testimony.

For all these reasons, Mr. Doe moves to exclude the testimony of the cooperators, and for a pretrial reliability hearing to evaluate the reliability and probative value of the cooperators' testimony.

Texas Governor Signs Landmark Comprehensive Legislation to Prevent Wrongful Convictions

Law marks most comprehensive protections in the nation against unreliable jailhouse informants

Contact: Julia Lucivero, jlucivero@innocenceproject.org (mailto:jlucivero@innocenceproject.org), 212-364-5173

(June 15, 2017 – Austin, Texas) Governor Greg Abbott has signed critical legislation into law (House Bill 34) that implements many of the recommendations of the Timothy Cole Exoneration Review Commission- a commission created by the legislature in 2015 to review causes of wrongful convictions and propose suggestions on how the state of Texas can prevent future wrongful convictions. These changes will enhance transparency and accuracy in the criminal justice system by regulating the use of jailhouse informants, requiring police to record all custodial interrogations for suspects in serious felony cases, strengthening the use of eyewitness identification best practices and tasking the Texas Forensic Science Commission to study drug field test kits and crime scene investigations. The bill was sponsored by Rep. John Smithee (R-Amarillo) who chaired the Commission and Senator Charles Perry (R-Lubbock), who represents Lubbock County where Timothy Cole was wrongfully convicted of rape in 1986. The Innocence Project and the Innocence Project of Texas worked together in support of this bill throughout the legislative process.

Texas now has the most comprehensive statute in the nation to regulate the use of jailhouse informants, which played a role in nine wrongful convictions in the state and is a leading contributor to wrongful convictions nationally. Jailhouse informants are detained or incarcerated individuals who provide testimony or information—usually on how a defendant confessed to a crime—in exchange for benefits. The promise of benefits such as money, leniency and special privileges creates a strong incentive to lie, and the secretive nature of the jailhouse informant system makes cross-examination and other legal safeguards against unreliable testimony ineffective.

House Bill 34 will improve transparency and accountability in the jailhouse informant system by requiring county and district attorney offices to track information, including benefits provided to jailhouse informants, in exchange for testimony, previous cases in which they provided testimony and benefits provides in those cases, and their complete criminal history. The information must be disclosed to defense attorneys, which will allow them to raise issues of credibility in court so that judges and juries can more accurately assess jailhouse informant testimony. In addition, the law will ensure that prosecutors have accurate information on jailhouse informants so they can better assess whether to use them as witnesses.

Alexandra Natapoff, Loyola Law School professor and a leading legal scholar on informants in the criminal justice system stated, "This legislation is an important step in pulling back the curtain of secrecy and unreliability that has long surrounded the use of criminal informants. It will help reduce wrongful convictions, and it will strengthen the integrity of the Texas criminal process. Other states should take careful note."

Cory Session, Tim Cole's brother, and Board member of the Innocence Project of Texas, based in Fort Worth, Texas home of Tim Cole's family, enthusiastically supported the bill, "Our entire family is pleased that with the passage and signing of this historic legislation, the State of Texas continues to lead the nation on criminal justice reform in seeking EQUAL JUSTICE UNDER LAW for all"

Michael Morton, who was wrongfully convicted of his wife's murder in Austin, Texas and spent nearly 25 years in prison for a crime he did not commit added, "Thank you, Governor Abbott, for signing HB34 into law. Now, certain serious felony interrogations must be recorded. This protects our citizens, and it protects law enforcement. Requiring the recording of interrogations will remove the burdensome, unfair, and understandable temptation law enforcement may have to bend a rule or cut a corner to get people they believe are guilty convicted. . It will also provide solid evidence to prove all of the times law enforcement has followed the rules during custodial interrogations."

Texas now has the most comprehensive law in the nation when it comes to regulating unreliable jailhouse informant testimony, and has also enacted important safeguards concerning eyewitness misidentification, recording interrogations and more. This new law stemming from the Commission's recommendations includes the following requirements:

Jailhouse Informants

Tracking use of and benefits provided to jailhouse informants: An attorney for the state shall track: (1) the use of testimony of an in-custody informant, regardless of whether the testimony is presented at trial and (2) any benefits offered or provided to a jailhouse informant in exchange for testimony.

Admissibility of prior offenses committed by a jailhouse informant: Evidence of prior offenses committed by jailhouse informant who received a benefit may be admissible for purposes of impeachment, regardless of whether the person was convicted of the offense. Previously only crimes that resulted in convictions were admissible, meaning that previous charges dismissed against a jailhouse informant in exchange for testimony were inadmissible.

Enhanced disclosure of impeaching information: If the state plans to use jailhouse informant testimony, it shall disclose to the defendant any information that is relevant to the person's credibility including: (1) the person's complete criminal history, including any charges that were dismissed or reduced as part of a plea bargain). (2) any grant, promise or offer of immunity from prosecution, reduction of sentence, leniency or special treatment given by the state in exchange for testimony and (3) information concerning other criminal cases in which the person has testified, or offered testimony against a defendant with whom the person was imprisoned or confined.

Recording Interrogations

Electronic recording of custodial interrogations of suspects must be recorded in their entirety for serious felonies, unless good cause is shown. Electronic recording means audiovisual or audio-only if audiovisual is unavailable.

Crime categories range from murder, capital murder, kidnapping, aggravated kidnapping, trafficking of persons, continuous sexual abuse of young child/children, indecency with a child, improper relationship between educator and student, sexual assault, aggravated sexual assault, sexual performance by a child.

Eyewitness Identification

A model policy adopted by a law enforcement agency must include procedures for selecting photograph and live lineup fillers to ensure consistency in appearance with the suspect, instructions given to the witness prior to the procedure must include a statement that the alleged perpetrator may or may not be present; and a confidence statement must be taken from the witness after the procedure.

The Texas Commission on Law Enforcement shall establish a comprehensive education and training program on eyewitness identification including material regarding variables that affect a witness's vision and memory, practices for minimizing contamination and effective eyewitness identification protocols. Each law enforcement agency shall require their peace officer who performs eyewitness identification procedures to complete the program.

Drug Field Test & Crime Scene Investigation Study

The Texas Forensic Science Commission shall conduct a study on the use of drug field test kits by law enforcement agencies and develop legislative recommendations to be submitted to the governor, lieutenant governor and legislature. Additionally, they shall conduct a study on crime scene investigations and shall evaluate the standard procedures used in processing a crime scene and evaluate the quality of crime scene investigations.

The Commission was composed of a broad range of criminal justice stakeholders including lawmakers, judges, prosecutors, defense attorneys and law enforcement officials.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Section 1: BACKGROUND

Our criminal law authorizes law enforcement to confer leniency and other benefits on criminal suspects in exchange for information. This public policy is an enormously important yet risky and underregulated aspect of the criminal justice system. Informant use can be a valuable tool in prosecuting group crimes, institutional corruption, and other serious offenses that are otherwise difficult for law enforcement to investigate. However, informant use also imposes serious costs on the integrity of the legal system and poses significant risks to the public. The main costs of informant use include (1) unreliable evidence and the risk of wrongful conviction; (2) the tolerance of serious crimes committed by informants themselves and the resulting threat to victims and communities; (3) pressures on vulnerable individuals, including children and students, to become informants at great risk to themselves and without full understanding of their rights; and (4) lack of transparency and accountability. This legislation is designed to mitigate these known costs and risks while permitting law enforcement to continue to deploy informants where appropriate in a fair and accountable way.

Section 2: DEFINITIONS

A. "Informant" means any criminal suspect, whether or not detained or incarcerated, who provides information in exchange for a benefit, the promise of a benefit, or an expectation thereof.

B. "Criminal suspect" means any person under investigation by law enforcement for a crime, any person for whom law enforcement has probable cause that they have committed a crime, arrestee, detainee, defendant, inmate, probationer, parolee, or other individual subject to potential criminal charges or punishment. It does not include victims of the crime being investigated or prosecuted, or experts.

C. "Benefit" means leniency in any criminal case, probation or parole matter, including but not limited to the decision not to arrest for or charge an offense, or to limit the number or severity of charges; sentence reduction of any kind or amount; money; change of immigration status; witness protection; in-kind benefits such as food, rent, or travel; in-custody benefits such as visiting privileges, transfer to better living conditions, enhanced access to food, entertainment, and other amenities; and any of these conferred on a third party.

D. "Serious crime"[1] means:
    a. any serious violent felony as that term is defined in section [];
    b. any serious drug offense as that term is defined in section []; or
    c. an offense consisting of racketeering, bribery, child pornography, obstruction of justice, or perjury;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

d. that an agent or employee of the relevant law enforcement agency, including any prosecutor, has reasonable grounds to believe that an informant has committed.

Section 3: RELIABILITY

A. Reliability Factors[2]

Reliability factors under this section include, but are not limited to:

a. All statements made by the informant that relate to the offense, including inconsistent statements, modifications, and recantations.
b. The informant's complete criminal history.
c. All criminal cases in which the informant provided information, cooperation, or testimony.
d. All benefits the informant received or was promised in connection with cooperation or testimony in any criminal case.
e. Any relationships between the informant and the accused, including personal relationships, gang memberships, or connections in other criminal cases.
f. The extent to which the informant had or could obtain access to information related to the defendant's case, and the nature of that access.
g. Mental health or substance abuse history or diagnoses of the informant.
h. Any other evidence relevant to the informant's reliability or credibility.

B. Discovery

a. The prosecution shall disclose in a timely manner and prior to any evidentiary hearing, guilty plea, or trial, its intent to rely on evidence provided by an informant. The prosecution shall also disclose at that time all information pertaining to the reliability factors in subsection (A).

C. Corroboration[3]

a. Evidence obtained from an informant shall be inadmissible unless it is independently corroborated by strong evidence connecting the defendant to the commission of the crime.[4] Corroboration is not sufficient if it only shows the commission of the offense or if it is provided by another informant.

[4] If informants remain permissible in capital cases, in contravention of section H, then corroboration should also be required to show special circumstances and aggravating factors.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

D. Reliability Hearings[5]

a. Pre-Conviction. Prior to trial or the entry of any guilty or nolo plea, the court shall hold a hearing to assess the reliability of the informant. At the hearing, the court shall evaluate (1) whether strong evidence of corroboration exists as provided in subsection (C), and (2) the overall reliability of the informant in light of all of the reliability factors enumerated in subsection (A). If the government does not demonstrate both corroboration and reliability by a preponderance of the evidence, the court shall exclude all evidence obtained from the informant, including any testimony.

b. Post-Conviction. If after conviction, a defendant produces colorable evidence that an informant provided false information that might have affected the outcome of the plea or trial, the court shall hold a reliability hearing as provided in subsection (a). A recantation by the informant shall presumptively provide sufficient evidence to require a hearing. If the court concludes by a preponderance of the evidence [need to think about standard of proof here] that the informant provided false evidence, the court shall vacate the conviction and order a new trial.

a. At a reliability hearing and at trial, the defendant shall have the opportunity to call an expert witness to testify regarding any of the following subjects, including but not limited to: the general unreliability of informants, the prevalence of informant-generated wrongful convictions, techniques that informants are known to use to generate credible yet false evidence, academic research on the subject, available information regarding practices in that jail and/or jurisdiction, and any other information that might be helpful to the fact finder.

F. Electronic Recordings of Informant Statements[6]

a. The following statements shall be electronically recorded:
   i. All statements made by an informant relating to serious crimes as defined by Section 2(D).
   ii. All statements made by law enforcement or representatives of the state to an informant under subsection (i) in eliciting or receiving those informant statements or in establishing the terms of the informant's cooperation or benefits.

b. If an audio and visual recording is not practicable, an audio recording is an acceptable alternative to audio and visual recording.

c. Every electronic recording of a statement by an informant shall be clearly identified and catalogued by law enforcement personnel.
d. Every electronic recording shall be preserved by law enforcement personnel until all appeals, post-conviction and habeas corpus proceedings connected to that testimony are final and concluded, or the time within which such proceedings must be brought has expired.
e. Upon motion by the defendant, the court may order that a copy of the recording be preserved for any period beyond the expiration of all appeals.
f. Any informant statements not recorded in accordance with this section are per se inadmissible.
g. The government may not use as a witness any informant whose statements were not recorded in accordance with this section.

G. Jury Instructions.

Should the court determine that the informant is admissible pursuant to subsection (D)(a), it shall provide the jury with a cautionary instruction regarding:

a. the general unreliability of informant testimony;
b. that informants may expect, and in practice often receive, benefits that have not been formally promised to them prior to trial;
c. that as an empirical matter juries have had difficulty assessing the reliability of compensated criminal witnesses; and
d. the specific factors that may have influenced the testimony in the present case.

H. Ban in Capital Cases[7]
a. Regardless of whether evidence obtained from an informant satisfies the other provisions of this title, testimony of an informant is not admissible at any stage of a capital case, including the pre-trial, guilt, and sentencing phases.

Section 4: INFORMANT CRIME

A. Serious Crime Reporting Obligations[8]
a. Timing and Contents. Not later than March 1 of each year, the head of each department that contains a law enforcement agency shall, with respect to each law enforcement agency within that Department, fully report to the [appropriate legislative oversight committees]:
i. all serious crimes, authorized and unauthorized, committed by informants maintained by the law enforcement agency; and

ii. all benefits conferred by the law enforcement agency on such informants.

b. Required. Each report under subsection (a) shall include a description of the total number of each type and category of crime; the amount of drugs involved if the crime is a drug crime; the amount of money involved if the crime is a theft or bribery crime; whether the crime was authorized or unauthorized; the zip code in which each crime took place; and all amounts expended on benefits, including from assets seized through forfeiture.

c. Prohibited. The report shall not contain individual informant names, informant control numbers, or other personal identification information that could reveal the identity of an individual informant.

d. Arrest or Charge of Informant Not to Affect Duty to Report. The duty to report crimes under this section exists regardless of whether the informant has or has not been arrested or charged with the reportable crime in any jurisdiction.

e. Disclaimer. Nothing in this section limits the authority and responsibility of the appropriate committees of each legislative house to obtain such information as they may need to carry out their respective functions and duties.

B. Limit on Serious Crime Leniency for Informants[9]

a. No prosecutor shall offer a dismissal of or decline to bring charges against an informant for the crimes of murder, manslaughter, rape, or kidnapping in exchange for the testimony of that informant.

b. If the informant has committed a serious crime not enumerated in subsection (a), law enforcement officers or the prosecutor must receive judicial consent before dismissing or reducing such a charge in a plea bargain in exchange for the informant's testimony. Judicial consent must be obtained whether the plea takes place before or after the testimony occurs.

Section 5: VULNERABLE INFORMANTS

A. Children[10]

a. No law enforcement official shall use a person who is 15 years of age or younger as an informant.

b. No law enforcement official shall use a person under the age of 18 years as an informant, unless that official has obtained an order from the court authorizing the minor's cooperation.

c. Notwithstanding any order issued pursuant to subsection (b), no person under the age of 18 shall participate in a controlled buy or sale of contraband or other such activities.

d. Prior to issuing any order pursuant to subsection (b), the court shall find, after consideration of (1) the age and maturity of the minor, (2) the gravity of the minor's alleged offense, (3) the safety of the public, and (4) the interests of justice, that the agreement to act as an informant is voluntary and is being entered into knowingly and intelligently.
e. Prior to the court making the finding required in subsection (c), all of the following conditions shall be satisfied:
    i. The court has found probable cause that the minor committed the alleged offense. The finding of probable cause shall only be for the purpose of issuing the order pursuant to subsection (b), and shall not prejudice the minor in any future proceedings.
    ii. The court has advised the minor of the mandatory minimum and maximum sentence for the alleged offense.
    iii. The court shall determine on the record what benefits the minor may obtain by cooperating with the law enforcement, the certainty of those benefits, and whether they are substantial in light of the minor's likely punishment for the offense in that jurisdiction.
    iv. The minor's parent or guardian has consented to the agreement by the minor unless the parent or guardian is a suspect in the criminal investigation.
    v. The minor has had the opportunity to consult with appointed counsel, or with private counsel if the minor's family has provided such counsel.
    vi. For purposes of this section, the term "benefit" includes all of the benefits in section 2(C), as well as the reduction or dismissal of a pending or potential juvenile petition against the minor.

B. College Students[11]
    a. No college or university police shall recruit or engage students enrolled on campus to become informants. In addition, no student shall be recruited to participate in a controlled buy or sale of contraband or other such activities, whether or not the student is offered or receives a benefit. Nothing in this section shall preclude a student from providing confidential information to university police.

C. Substance Abuse and Mental Health[12]
    a. No law enforcement official or prosecutor shall authorize or permit an informant to engage in a controlled buy or sale of contraband or other such activities if that informant is receiving in-patient or out-patient treatment administered by a licensed service provider for substance abuse, or is in a treatment-based drug court program, or has experienced a drug overdose within the past year.

b. No law enforcement official or prosecutor shall use an informant who has a mental health diagnosis of [?—need to check with mental health professional on this].

D. Racial Profiling

a. No law enforcement official or prosecutor shall intentionally select an informant based on the informant's race, religion, ethnicity, country of national origin, or immigration status.[13]

Section 6: LAW ENFORCEMENT GUIDELINES

A. Informant Assessment and Selection[14]

a. Law enforcement agencies shall assess the suitability of using a person as an informant by considering the minimum following factors:

i. The person's criminal history, their history of violence, and any indication of unreliability or of furnishing false information;
ii. The person's age and maturity;
iii. Whether the person is a current substance abuser or has a history of substance abuse, or is receiving treatment as described in Section (C);
iv. Whether the person has a mental health disease, diagnosis, or history of mental health disabilities;
v. The risk of harm to the person, his or her immediate family, or close associates as a result of providing information or assistance, or upon the disclosure of the person's assistance to the community;
vi. Whether the magnitude of the person's alleged offense is proportionate to the crimes to be investigated, the risks to be incurred by the informant, and the benefits to be conferred on the informant;
vii. The risk the person poses to adversely affect a present or potential investigation or prosecution;
viii. The effect upon agency efforts that the disclosure of the person's cooperation in the community may have;

[13] Note: With the exception of immigration status, this section does no more than codify the Equal Protection Clause's ban on government action motivated by a person's membership in a suspect class.

ix. Whether this individual has unique or important access to information or can otherwise make a special contribution to the success of an investigation.

B. Warnings[15]

a. Each potential informant shall be provided the following:

i. A warning that only a prosecutor, and not a police officer or investigator, can promise benefits such as a grant of immunity, dropped or reduced charges, or reduced sentences or placement on probation in exchange for serving as an informant.

ii. A written contract enumerating all the activities required of the informant, the promised benefits, and the time period for which the informant is obligated to cooperate.

iii. An opportunity to consult with legal counsel before the person agrees to perform any activities as an informant. If the person cannot afford counsel, the public defender's office or other appointed counsel must be provided.

C. Policies and Procedures[16]

a. General. Each law enforcement agency shall establish policies and procedures addressing the recruitment, control, and use of informants. The policies and procedures must address the following:

i. General guidelines for handling informants, including policies and procedures for implementing and complying with sections (A) and (B);

ii. Designated supervisory or command-level review and oversight in the selection and use of an informant;

iii. Restrictions on off-duty association or social relationships by agency personnel with informants;

iv. Guidelines to deactivate informants, including guidelines for deactivating communications with informants; and

v. Level of enhanced supervisory approval required before a minor is used as an informant, consistent with section 5(A).

vi. Policies and procedures that assign the highest priority in operational decisions and actions to the preservation of the safety of informants, law enforcement personnel, target offenders, and the public.

vii. Ensure that all personnel who are involved in the use or recruitment of informants are trained in the law enforcement agency's policies and procedures. The agency shall keep documentation demonstrating the date and content of such training.

b. Record Keeping. Law enforcement agencies shall establish record-keeping procedures that, at a minimum:
    i. Create a separate file for every informant;
    ii. For every informant, collect and record their name, age, gender, race, ethnicity, and residential zip code;
    iii. For every informant, collect and record all types of information required by Section 4 and Section 7(A), including any leniency-related benefits.
    iv. Provide for the secure maintenance of records related to informants to protect their identities from public disclosure or other inappropriate access;
    v. Provide for the gathering and disclosure of information as required by Section 3(B) (Discovery) and all constitutional disclosure obligations;
    vi. Define the process by which records concerning informants may be lawfully destroyed.

c. Law enforcement agencies shall perform a periodic review of actual agency informant practices to ensure conformity with the agency's policies and procedures and this title.

Section 7: TRANSPARENCY AND ACCOUNTABILITY

A. Informant Data Collection[17]
    a. The Attorney General [or other appropriate law enforcement official] shall collect and publicly disseminate the following annual aggregate data from all state law enforcement agencies:
        i. The number of informants created and used, by age, gender, race, ethnicity, and residential zip code.
        ii. The number of warrants issued based on information from an informant, by zip code of the target search.
        iii. The number of crimes prosecuted based on informant evidence, by name of crime and severity.
        iv. The number of crimes committed by informants, by name of crime and severity.
        v. The total value of all non-leniency-related benefits conferred on informants.

vi. The number of informants injured or killed in connection with their service as informants, by race, gender, age, and zip code.

B. Informant Supervisory Committee[18]
   a. The Attorney General shall constitute an Informant Supervisory Committee to oversee the use of the following types of informants as witnesses:
      i. Informants who are in-custody at the time they provide information to the state;
      ii. Informants who are chargeable with a serious crime as defined in Section 2(D).
   b. Any prosecutor seeking to use such an informant as a trial witness must obtain the prior approval of the Committee by submitting a written request.
   c. A request to use an informant shall contain at least the following:
      i. Analysis of the reliability factors in section 3(A) including any benefits promised in connection with the instant case;
      ii. Existence of strong corroboration pursuant to section 3(C); and
      iii. Names, ages, and current location of any victims of the informant's serious crimes.

C. Defense Informants
   a. The Attorney General's Office shall designate an independent unit to receive petitions regarding potential defense informants.
   b. A criminal suspect who has exculpatory information regarding another criminal suspect may petition the unit for a leniency recommendation in exchange for providing evidence or testimony on behalf of the other criminal suspect. An attorney may also petition on behalf of a criminal suspect who possesses exculpatory information regarding the attorney's client.
   c. The unit shall consider the value of the exculpatory information and the reliability of the defense informant, and make a recommendation for leniency to be conveyed to the appropriate prosecutorial authority. The leniency awarded to a defense informant shall be comparable to the leniency that would be awarded to a government sponsored informant who provides comparable inculpatory evidence to the government.
   d. Defense informants shall be subject to the same regulations, including reliability hearings, as provided in this title for government sponsored informants.

D. Innocence Reporting

a. Law enforcement officials and prosecutors shall have an affirmative duty to report when they have reason to believe, based on information obtained from an informant, that an innocent person has been convicted of a crime. Reports shall include the name and location of the informant, and the nature and substance of the exculpatory evidence. Reports shall be provided within 60 days directly to the defendant, the defense attorney who represented the defendant in that case, and the presiding judge for that case.

§ 2002. Disclosure of evidence--Continuing duty to disclose--Time of discovery--Regulation of discovery--Reasonable cost of copying, duplicating, and videotaping

Effective: November 1, 2020
Currentness

A. Disclosure of Evidence by the State.

1. Upon request of the defense, the state shall disclose the following:

a. the names and addresses of witnesses which the state intends to call at trial, together with their relevant, written or recorded statement, if any, or if none, significant summaries of any oral statement,

b. law enforcement reports made in connection with the particular case,

c. any written or recorded statements and the substance of any oral statements made by the accused or made by a codefendant,

d. any reports or statements made by experts in connection with the particular case, including results of physical or mental examinations and of scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons,

e. any books, papers, documents, photographs, tangible objects, buildings or places which the prosecuting attorney intends to use in the hearing or trial or which were obtained from or belong to the accused,

f. any record of prior criminal convictions of the defendant, or of any codefendant, and

g. Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation (OSBI) rap sheet/records check on any witness listed by the state or the defense as a witness who will testify at trial, as well as any convictions of any witness revealed through additional record checks if the defense has furnished social security numbers or date of birth for their witnesses, except OSBI rap sheet/record checks shall not provide date of birth, social security number, home phone number or address.

2. The state shall provide the defendant any evidence favorable to the defendant if such evidence is material to either guilt or punishment.

3. The prosecuting attorney's obligations under this standard extend to:

a. material and information in the possession or control of members of the prosecutor's staff,

b. any information in the possession of law enforcement agencies that regularly report to the prosecutor of which the prosecutor should reasonably know, and

c. any information in the possession of law enforcement agencies who have reported to the prosecutor with reference to the particular case of which the prosecutor should reasonably know.

4. a. If the state intends to introduce testimony of a jailhouse informant, the state shall disclose at least ten (10) days prior to trial:

(1) the complete criminal history of such informant, including any dismissed charges,

(2) any deal, promise, inducement or benefit that the state or law enforcement agency has made or may make in the future to the jailhouse informant in connection with the testimony of such informant,

(3) the specific statements or recordings made by the suspect or defendant and the time, place and manner of the disclosure to the jailhouse informant,

(4) all other filed cases in which the state intended to introduce the testimony of the jailhouse informant in connection with a deal, promise, inducement or benefit, the nature of the deal, promise, inducement or benefit, and whether the testimony was admitted in the case,

(5) whether at any time the jailhouse informant recanted the testimony or statement, and if so, a transcript or copy of such recantation, if any, and

(6) any other information relevant to the credibility of the informant.

b. Each district attorney's office shall maintain a central record that tracks each case in which the state intended to introduce the testimony of the jailhouse informant against a suspect or defendant in connection with a deal, promise, inducement or benefit, the nature of the deal, promise, inducement or benefit and whether such testimony or statements were admitted in the case. Such record shall be sent to the District Attorneys Council which shall maintain a statewide record of such information. Records maintained pursuant to this paragraph shall only be accessible to prosecutors and shall not be subject to the Oklahoma Open Records Act.[1] By September 15 of each year, the District Attorneys Council shall publish an annual report of aggregate, de-identified data regarding the total number of cases tracked pursuant to this section, and the number of cases added during the previous fiscal year pursuant to this section by each district attorney's office. A copy of the report shall be distributed to the Governor, the President Pro Tempore of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the chairs of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

c. For purposes of this paragraph, "jailhouse informant" means a person who provides, or who the prosecutor intends to provide, testimony about admissions or other relevant information made to him or her by the suspect or defendant while both persons were detained or incarcerated in a penal institution.

B. Disclosure of Evidence by the Defendant.

1. Upon request of the state, the defense shall be required to disclose the following:

a. the names and addresses of witnesses which the defense intends to call at trial, together with their relevant, written or recorded statement, if any, or if none, significant summaries of any oral statement,

b. the name and address of any witness, other than the defendant, who will be called to show that the defendant was not present at the time and place specified in the information or indictment, together with the witness' statement to that fact,

c. the names and addresses of any witness the defendant will call, other than himself, for testimony relating to any mental disease, mental defect, or other condition bearing upon his mental state at the time the offense was allegedly committed, together with the witness' statement of that fact, if the statement is redacted by the court to preclude disclosure of privileged communication.

2. A statement filed under subparagraph a, b or c of paragraph 1 of subsection A or B of this section is not admissible in evidence at trial. Information obtained as a result of a statement filed under subsection A or B of this section is not admissible in evidence at trial except to refute the testimony of a witness whose identity subsection A of this section requires to be disclosed.

3. Upon the prosecuting attorney's request after the time set by the court, the defendant shall allow him access at any reasonable times and in any reasonable manner to inspect, photograph, copy, or have reasonable tests made upon any book, paper, document, photograph, or tangible object which is within the defendant's possession or control and which:

a. the defendant intends to offer in evidence, except to the extent that it contains any communication of the defendant, or

b. is a report or statement as to a physical or mental examination or scientific test or experiment made in connection with the particular case prepared by and relating to the anticipated testimony of a person whom the defendant intends to call as a witness, provided the report or statement is redacted by the court to preclude disclosure of privileged communication.

WESTLAW © 2020 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

C. Continuing Duty to Disclose.

If, prior to or during trial, a party discovers additional evidence or material previously requested or ordered, which is subject to discovery or inspection under the Oklahoma Criminal Discovery Code, such party shall promptly notify the other party, the attorney of the other party, or the court of the existence of the additional evidence or material.

D. Time of Discovery.

Motions for discovery may be made at the time of the district court arraignment or thereafter; provided that requests for police reports may be made subject to the provisions of Section 258 of this title. However, a request pursuant to Section 258 of this title shall be subject to the discretion of the district attorney. All issues relating to discovery, except as otherwise provided, will be completed at least ten (10) days prior to trial. The court may specify the time, place and manner of making the discovery and may prescribe such terms and conditions as are just.

E. Regulation of Discovery.

1. Protective and Modifying Orders. Upon motion of the state or defendant, the court may at any time order that specified disclosures be restricted, or make any other protective order. If the court enters an order restricting specified disclosures, the entire text of the material restricted shall be sealed and preserved in the records of the court to be made available to the appellate court in the event of an appeal.

2. Failure to Comply with a Request. If at any time during the course of the proceedings it is brought to the attention of the court that a party has failed to comply with this rule, the court may order such party to permit the discovery or inspection, grant continuance, or prohibit the party from introducing evidence not disclosed, or it may enter such other order as it deems just under the circumstances.

3. The discovery order shall not include discovery of legal work product of either attorney which is deemed to include legal research or those portions of records, correspondence, reports, or memoranda which are only the opinions, theories, or conclusions of the attorney or the attorney's legal staff.

F. Reasonable cost of copying, duplicating, videotaping, developing or any other cost associated with this Code for items requested shall be paid by the party so requesting; however, any item which was obtained from the defendant by the state of which copies are requested by the defendant shall be paid by the state. Provided, if the court determines the defendant is indigent and without funds to pay the cost of reproduction of the required items, the cost shall be paid by the Indigent Defender System, unless otherwise provided by law.

H.B. No. 34

relating to measures to prevent wrongful convictions.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF TEXAS:

SECTION 1. Chapter 2, Code of Criminal Procedure, is amended by adding Articles 2.023 and 2.32 to read as follows:

Art. 2.023. TRACKING USE OF CERTAIN TESTIMONY. (a) In this article:

(1) "Attorney representing the state" means a district attorney, a criminal district attorney, or a county attorney with criminal jurisdiction.

(2) "Correctional facility" has the meaning assigned by Section 1.07, Penal Code.

(b) An attorney representing the state shall track:

(1) the use of testimony of a person to whom a defendant made a statement against the defendant's interest while the person was imprisoned or confined in the same correctional facility as the defendant, if known by the attorney representing the state, regardless of whether the testimony is presented at trial; and

(2) any benefits offered or provided to a person in exchange for testimony described by Subdivision (1).

Art. 2.32. ELECTRONIC RECORDING OF CUSTODIAL INTERROGATIONS. (a) In this article:

(1) "Electronic recording" means an audiovisual electronic recording, or an audio recording if an audiovisual electronic recording is unavailable, that is authentic, accurate, and unaltered.

(2) "Law enforcement agency" means an agency of the state, or of a county, municipality, or other political subdivision of this state, that employs peace officers who, in the routine performance of the officers' duties, conduct custodial interrogations of persons suspected of committing criminal offenses.

(3) "Place of detention" means a police station or other building that is a place of operation for a law enforcement agency, including a municipal police department or county sheriff's department, and is owned or operated by the law enforcement agency for the purpose of detaining persons in connection with the suspected violation of a penal law. The term does not include a courthouse.

(b) Unless good cause exists that makes electronic recording infeasible, a law enforcement agency shall make a complete and contemporaneous electronic recording of any custodial interrogation that occurs in a place of detention and is of a person suspected of committing or charged with the commission of an offense under:

(1) Section 19.02, Penal Code (murder);

(2) Section 19.03, Penal Code (capital murder);

(3) Section 20.03, Penal Code (kidnapping);

(4) Section 20.04, Penal Code (aggravated kidnapping);

(5) Section 20A.02, Penal Code (trafficking of persons);

(6) Section 20A.03, Penal Code (continuous trafficking of persons);

(7) Section 21.02, Penal Code (continuous sexual abuse of young child or children);

(8) Section 21.11, Penal Code (indecency with a child);

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT MO-REP-21-1608-F-001319

(9) Section 21.12, Penal Code (improper relationship between educator and student);

(10) Section 22.011, Penal Code (sexual assault);

(11) Section 22.021, Penal Code (aggravated sexual assault); or

(12) Section 43.25, Penal Code (sexual performance by a child).

(c) For purposes of Subsection (b), an electronic recording of a custodial interrogation is complete only if the recording:

(1) begins at or before the time the person being interrogated enters the area of the place of detention in which the custodial interrogation will take place or receives a warning described by Section 2(a), Article 38.22, whichever is earlier; and

(2) continues until the time the interrogation ceases.

(d) For purposes of Subsection (b), good cause that makes electronic recording infeasible includes the following:

(1) the person being interrogated refused to respond or cooperate in a custodial interrogation at which an electronic recording was being made, provided that:

(A) a contemporaneous recording of the refusal was made; or

(B) the peace officer or agent of the law enforcement agency conducting the interrogation attempted, in good faith, to record the person's refusal but the person was unwilling to have the refusal recorded, and the peace officer or agent contemporaneously, in writing, documented the refusal;

(2) the statement was not made as the result of a custodial interrogation, including a statement that was made spontaneously by the accused and not in response to a question by a peace officer;

(3) the peace officer or agent of the law enforcement agency conducting the interrogation attempted, in good faith, to record the interrogation but the recording equipment did not function, the officer or agent inadvertently operated the equipment incorrectly, or the equipment malfunctioned or stopped operating without the knowledge of the officer or agent;

(4) exigent public safety concerns prevented or rendered infeasible the making of an electronic recording of the statement; or

(5) the peace officer or agent of the law enforcement agency conducting the interrogation reasonably believed at the time the interrogation commenced that the person being interrogated was not taken into custody for or being interrogated concerning the commission of an offense listed in Subsection (b).

(e) A recording of a custodial interrogation that complies with this article is exempt from public disclosure as provided by Section 552.108, Government Code.

SECTION 2. Chapter 2, Code of Criminal Procedure, is amended by adding Article 2.1386 to read as follows:

Art. 2.1386. EYEWITNESS IDENTIFICATION PROTOCOLS. (a) In this article, "law enforcement agency" means an agency of the state or an agency of a political subdivision of the state authorized by law to employ peace officers.

(b) The Texas Commission on Law Enforcement shall establish a comprehensive education and training program on eyewitness identification, including material regarding variables that affect a witness's vision and memory, practices for minimizing contamination, and effective eyewitness identification protocols.

(c) Each law enforcement agency shall require each peace officer who is employed by the agency and who performs eyewitness identification procedures to complete the education and training described by Subsection (b).

SECTION 3. Article 38.075, Code of Criminal Procedure, is amended by adding Subsection (c) to read as follows:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT MO-REP-21-1608-F-001320

(c) Evidence of a prior offense committed by a person who gives testimony described by Subsection (a) may be admitted for the purpose of impeachment if the person received a benefit described by Article 39.14(h-1)(2) with respect to the offense, regardless of whether the person was convicted of the offense.

SECTION 4. Section 3, Article 38.20, Code of Criminal Procedure, is amended by amending Subsection (c) and adding Subsection (d) to read as follows:

(c) The model policy or any other policy adopted by a law enforcement agency under Subsection (a) must:

(1) be based on:

(A) credible field, academic, or laboratory research on eyewitness memory;

(B) relevant policies, guidelines, and best practices designed to reduce erroneous eyewitness identifications and to enhance the reliability and objectivity of eyewitness identifications; and

(C) other relevant information as appropriate; and

(2) include [~~address~~] the following information regarding evidence-based practices [~~topics~~]:

(A) procedures for selecting [~~the selection of~~] photograph and live lineup filler photographs or participants to ensure that the photographs or participants:

(i) are consistent in appearance with the description of the alleged perpetrator; and

(ii) do not make the suspect noticeably stand out;

(B) instructions given to a witness before conducting a photograph or live lineup identification procedure that must include a statement that the person who committed the offense may or may not be present in the procedure;

(C) procedures for documenting and preserving the [~~documentation and preservation of~~] results of a photograph or live lineup identification procedure, including the documentation of witness statements, regardless of the outcome of the procedure;

(D) procedures for administering a photograph or live lineup identification procedure to an illiterate person or a person with limited English language proficiency;

(E) for a live lineup identification procedure, if practicable, procedures for assigning an administrator who is unaware of which member of the live lineup is the suspect in the case or alternative procedures designed to prevent opportunities to influence the witness;

(F) for a photograph identification procedure, procedures for assigning an administrator who is capable of administering a photograph array in a blind manner or in a manner consistent with other proven or supported best practices designed to prevent opportunities to influence the witness; and

(G) any other procedures or best practices supported by credible research or commonly accepted as a means to reduce erroneous eyewitness identifications and to enhance the objectivity and reliability of eyewitness identifications.

(d) A witness who makes an identification based on a photograph or live lineup identification procedure shall be asked immediately after the procedure to state, in the witness's own words, how confident the witness is in making the identification. A law enforcement agency shall document in accordance with Subsection (c)(2)(C) any statement made under this subsection.

SECTION 5. Section 5, Article 38.20, Code of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read as follows:

Sec. 5. (a) Any evidence or expert testimony presented by the state or the defendant on the subject of eyewitness identification is admissible only subject to compliance with the Texas Rules of Evidence. Except as provided by Subsection (c), evidence [~~Evidence~~] of compliance with the model policy or any other policy adopted under this article [~~or with the minimum requirements of this article~~] is not a condition precedent to the admissibility of an out-of-court eyewitness identification.

(b) Notwithstanding Article 38.23 as that article relates to a violation of a state statute and except as provided by Subsection (c), a failure to conduct a photograph or live lineup identification procedure in substantial compliance with the model policy or any other policy adopted under this article [~~or with the minimum requirements of this article~~] does not bar the admission of eyewitness identification testimony in the courts of this state.

(c) If a witness who has previously made an out-of-court photograph or live lineup identification of the accused makes an in-court identification of the accused, the eyewitness identification is admissible into evidence against the accused only if the evidence is accompanied by the details of each prior photograph or live lineup identification made of the accused by the witness, including the manner in which the identification procedure was conducted.

SECTION 6. Article 38.22, Code of Criminal Procedure, is amended by adding Section 9 to read as follows:

Sec. 9. Notwithstanding any other provision of this article, no oral, sign language, or written statement that is made by a person accused of an offense listed in Article 2.32(b) and made as a result of a custodial interrogation occurring in a place of detention, as that term is defined by Article 2.32, is admissible against the accused in a criminal proceeding unless:

(1) an electronic recording was made of the statement, as required by Article 2.32(b); or

(2) the attorney representing the state offers proof satisfactory to the court that good cause, as described by Article 2.32(d), existed that made electronic recording of the custodial interrogation infeasible.

SECTION 7. Article 39.14, Code of Criminal Procedure, is amended by adding Subsection (h-1) to read as follows:

(h-1) In this subsection, "correctional facility" has the meaning assigned by Section 1.07, Penal Code. Notwithstanding any other provision of this article, if the state intends to use at a defendant's trial testimony of a person to whom the defendant made a statement against the defendant's interest while the person was imprisoned or confined in the same correctional facility as the defendant, the state shall disclose to the defendant any information in the possession, custody, or control of the state that is relevant to the person's credibility, including:

(1) the person's complete criminal history, including any charges that were dismissed or reduced as part of a plea bargain;

(2) any grant, promise, or offer of immunity from prosecution, reduction of sentence, or other leniency or special treatment, given by the state in exchange for the person's testimony; and

(3) information concerning other criminal cases in which the person has testified, or offered to testify, against a defendant with whom the person was imprisoned or confined, including any grant, promise, or offer as described by Subdivision (2) given by the state in exchange for the testimony.

SECTION 8. STUDY REGARDING USE OF DRUG FIELD TEST KITS. (a) The Texas Forensic Science Commission shall conduct a study regarding the use of drug field test kits by law enforcement agencies in this state. The commission shall:

(1) evaluate the quality, accuracy, and reliability of drug field test kits;

(2) identify any common problems with drug field test kits;

(3) evaluate the availability and adequacy of training for law enforcement officers regarding the use of drug field test kits and the interpretation of the test results; and

(4) develop legislative recommendations regarding the use of drug field test kits by law enforcement agencies and regarding related training for law enforcement officers.

(b) Not later than December 1, 2018, the Texas Forensic Science Commission shall submit to the governor, the lieutenant governor, and each member of the legislature a written report that summarizes the results of the study conducted under this section and includes any legislative recommendations.

SECTION 9. CRIME SCENE INVESTIGATION STUDY. (a) The Texas Forensic Science Commission shall conduct a study regarding the manner in which crime scene investigations are conducted in this state. The commission shall:

(1) evaluate the standard procedures used in processing a crime scene and evaluate the quality of crime scene investigations;

(2) evaluate the availability and adequacy of the training or continuing education provided to crime scene investigators; and

(3) develop legislative recommendations regarding improvements to crime scene investigation procedures and training.

(b) Not later than December 1, 2018, the Texas Forensic Science Commission shall submit to the governor, the lieutenant governor, and each member of the legislature a written report that summarizes the results of the study conducted under this section and includes any legislative recommendations.

SECTION 10. Not later than January 1, 2018, the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement shall adopt the comprehensive education and training program required by Article 2.1386, Code of Criminal Procedure, as added by this Act.

SECTION 11. Article 2.32 and Section 9, Article 38.22, Code of Criminal Procedure, as added by this Act, apply to the use of a statement resulting from a custodial interrogation that occurs on or after March 1, 2018, regardless of whether the criminal offense giving rise to that interrogation is committed before, on, or after that date.

SECTION 12. Article 38.075(c), Code of Criminal Procedure, as added by this Act, applies to the admissibility of evidence in a criminal proceeding that commences on or after the effective date of this Act. The admissibility of evidence in a criminal proceeding that commences before the effective date of this Act is governed by the law in effect on the date the proceeding commenced, and the former law is continued in effect for that purpose.

SECTION 13. (a) Section 3(d), Article 38.20, Code of Criminal Procedure, as added by this Act, applies only to a photograph or live lineup identification procedure conducted on or after the effective date of this Act, regardless of whether the offense to which the procedure is related was committed before, on, or after the effective date of this Act.

(b) Section 5, Article 38.20, Code of Criminal Procedure, as amended by this Act, applies only to the trial of an offense with respect to which a prior photograph or live lineup identification of the accused occurred on or after the effective date of this Act, regardless of whether the offense that is the subject of the trial was committed before, on, or after the effective date of this Act.

SECTION 14. Article 39.14(h-1), Code of Criminal Procedure, as added by this Act, applies to the prosecution of an offense committed on or after the effective date of this Act. The prosecution of an offense committed before the effective date of this Act is governed by the law in effect on the date the offense was committed, and the former law is continued in effect for that purpose. For purposes of this section, an offense is committed before the effective date of this Act if any element of the offense occurs before the effective date.

BRADY AND JAILHOUSE INFORMANTS: RESPONDING TO INJUSTICE

Peter A. Joy[†]

Two well-known mystery writers, Michael Connelly and John Grisham, recently wrote books in which uncorroborated jailhouse informant (snitch) testimony figures prominently. In Connelly's book, The Lincoln Lawyer,[1] an ambitious young prosecutor uses fabricated jailhouse snitch testimony to prosecute a man who is factually guilty. In Grisham's book, The Innocent Man,[2] an ambitious young prosecutor uses fabricated jailhouse snitch testimony to prosecute a man who is factually innocent. The Lincoln Lawyer, in which defense counsel exposes the false snitch testimony at trial and wins acquittal of a guilty man, is a work of fiction. The Innocent Man, in which the false snitch testimony helps to convict an innocent man, is a work of nonfiction. In both books, the prosecutors not only use false snitch testimony, they also conceal exculpatory evidence required to be disclosed to the accused by both Brady v. Maryland[3] and prevailing ethical rules.[4] Both books help to illustrate how jailhouse snitch

Since Brady, the Supreme Court has decided a number of cases that have helped to define the disclosure obligation. Prosecutors must disclose materials that could impeach a witness' credibility, such as plea agreements with witnesses or other incentives to testify. Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972); United States v. Bagley, 473 U.S. 667 (1985). In addition, a promise made by one prosecutor to a witness is imputed to the trial prosecutor, Giglio 405 U.S. at 154, and the trial prosecutor has an obligation to learn of Brady material known to other prosecutors in the office or to the police. Kyles v. testimony and Brady violations sidetrack procedural justice, and Grisham's first book of nonfiction demonstrates how snitch testimony and Brady violations can combine to deny substantive justice by convicting the innocent. In this article, I analyze the pervasiveness of false snitch testimony and Brady violations as contributing causes of wrongful convictions and I recommend concrete steps that head prosecutors, defense lawyers, and trial and appellate judges can take to prevent and to respond effectively to these causes of wrongful convictions.

Throughout this article, I use the pejorative term "snitch" rather than "informant" due to the high rate of unreliability of uncorroborated jailhouse informant testimony. The untrustworthiness of such witnesses is well documented, and even some prosecutors who use jailhouse informants refer to them as "snitches." The pernicious effects of snitch testimony, especially when combined with a prosecutor's failure to disclose exculpatory information to the defense as required by Brady, are illustrated in Ron Williamson's case.

Ron Williamson, the subject of Grisham's book The Innocent Man, spent twelve years on Oklahoma's death row for a crime he did not commit before DNA evidence exonerated him. The prosecutor waited until after the death of Williamson's mother, a well respected member of the community and Williamson's alibi witness,[5] before bringing charges against Williamson.[6] The prosecutor then built his

The American Bar Association (ABA) adopted the Model Rules in 1983 and has amended them frequently, most recently in 2002. The Model Rules replaced the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility (Model Code), which the ABA adopted in 1969. Nearly every state and the District of Columbia have adopted most of the language of the Model Rules for their ethics rules. See STEPHEN GILLERS & ROY D. case around the uncorroborated testimony of a jailhouse snitch with three prior felony convictions who, while facing more charges, claimed that two years earlier she overheard a jailhouse phone call in which Williamson admitted to committing murder.[7] Next, the prosecutor and police withheld exculpatory evidence, including the video of a polygraph of Williamson, administered shortly after the murder in which Williamson denied any involvement,[8] and a report of a video of an interview with Williamson's mother taken shortly before her death in which Williamson's mother provided evidence that she was with Williamson at her home the night of the murder.[9]

Stories like Williamson's are hard to align with the concept of justice in the United States. Yet, hardly a month goes by when there is not news about some other defendant who, after a lengthy incarceration, is exonerated based on DNA evidence. Since the first post-conviction DNA exoneration in 1989, there have been 194 post-conviction DNA exonerations in the United States, and those wrongfully convicted spent an average of twelve years in prison before being set free.[10] Combined, this represents more than two millennia—2,328 years—of confining the innocent in prison. Not only does this represent the loss of potentially productive lives for those convicted, but it also represents over $52 million in taxpayer money spent on state prison costs for the wrongfully convicted,[11] unknown expenditures for prosecuting, defending and providing trials that convict the wrong people,[12] and an indeterminate amount of tax dollars paid to the wrongfully convicted as reparations either

[7] The witness, Terri Holland, claimed that she heard Williamson make a full confession over the phone in the front office of the jail, even though the jail personnel working the front desk never reported hearing anything inculpatory. See GRISHAM, supra note 2, at 152–53; see also Williamson v. Based on prison costs in 2001, the state prison costs for 2328 years of imprisonment are $52,729,200, using the average cost per year of imprisonment of $22,650. Grisham estimates that the cost to imprison Williamson, excluding extra cost of death row and treatment in state mental hospitals, "was at least $250,000." GRISHAM, supra note 2, at 357.

voluntarily, by statute, or as a result of litigation settlements and judgments.[13]

In addition to the loss of liberty and the costs of convicting the innocent, there are three additional dimensions to wrongful convictions that are sometimes neglected. First, more than half of those exonerated by DNA—112 of 194—are African American,[14] a rate higher than the racial disparities in arrests and convictions.[15] Commentators note that this racial disparity is likely the result of one of the causes of wrongful convictions, cross-racial misidentifications,[16] and "subtle problems of racism and stereotyping on the part of jurors, judges, prosecutors and defense lawyers."[17] Second, while the innocent are convicted and confined in prison, the guilty persons are often free to commit more crimes.[18] Third, the DNA exonerations represent a fraction of the wrongfully convicted because there is no DNA evidence in most cases. For example, one study identified 196 additional persons who had been exonerated by [13] There is no uniform method for compensating the wrongfully convicted. Approximately two thirds of the states do not have compensation or indemnification statutes. See Adele Bernhard, Table: When Justice Fails: Indemnification for Unjust Conviction, 7 U. CHI. L. SCH. ROUNDTABLE 345 (2000). In some instances, private bills are enacted to provide relief in particular cases. See Adele Bernhard, Justice Still Fails: A Review of Recent Efforts to Compensate Individuals Who Have Been Unjustly Convicted and Later Exonerated, 52 DRAKE L. REV. 703, 709 (2004). When successful, law suits can yield generous compensation. For example, the local government that convicted Williamson paid over $500,000 and the total settlement for wrongfully convicting Williamson was "believed to be in the $5 million range." GRISHAM, supra note 2, at 343. However, compensation is difficult to obtain through litigation, because prosecutors and law enforcement officers are usually protected from lawsuits by governmental immunity. See Imbler v. Pachtman, 424 U.S. 409, 410 (1976) (holding that a state prosecutor acting within the scope of prosecutorial duties may not be sued); Hunter v. Bryant, 502 U.S. 224, 229 (holding that law enforcement officers are entitled to immunity). In Williamson's case, he overcame claims of immunity by demonstrating that the prosecutor stepped out of his role as prosecutor to run the criminal investigation, and there was sufficient evidence demonstrating that a genuine question of fact existed as to whether prosecutor and police engaged in fabrication of evidence and withheld exculpatory evidence to convict Williamson. See GRISHAM, supra note 2, at 341–42.

[14] See Innocence Project, supra note 10.

[15] African Americans comprise 57.7 percent of those exonerated by DNA evidence. See id. In 1999, African Americans were approximately 12.9 percent of the population but were 49.4 percent of those in jails and prisons. Karen F. means other than DNA evidence from 1989 through 2003.[19] The authors of this more comprehensive study acknowledge that their list of exonerations is not exhaustive because of the lack of a national registry of exonerations and fragmented record keeping at the local, state, and federal levels.[20] The researchers also exclude from their study mass exonerations, such as the 100 to 150 defendants convicted on the basis of police perjury in Los Angeles as part of the Rampart scandal.[21] After compiling the data on exonerations, the researchers of this more expansive study conclude "that many defendants who are not on this list, no doubt thousands, have been falsely convicted of serious crimes but have not been exonerated."[22]

Although it may not be possible to estimate accurately the number of wrongfully convicted, whatever the number, the most obvious question for anyone interested in justice is: What steps can be taken to address the underlying causes of wrongful convictions? Even those who may view the number of wrongful convictions as insignificant in light of the large number of persons convicted each year should be interested in taking steps to limit wrongful convictions if they care about procedural and substantive justice.[23] As a result of this interest in improving the criminal justice system, there have been a number of books, dozens of law review articles, a host of law school symposia, such as the one held by Case Western Reserve Law Review, and other efforts exploring the issue of wrongful convictions.

In this study, the authors use "exoneration" whenever there "is an official act declaring a defendant not guilty of a crime for which he or she had previously been convicted." Id. at 524. The methods of exoneration included pardons based on evidence of innocence, court dismissal of charges based on new evidence of innocence, acquittals at a retrial on the basis of evidence that the accused had no role in the crimes for which they had been originally convicted, and posthumous acknowledgements of innocence by state governments. See id. Given this broader definition of "exoneration," the authors state that "we are in no position to reach an independent judgment on the factual innocence of each defendant in our data." Id. at 526. Among the efforts considering how to address the causes of wrongful convictions is the work of the Ad Hoc Innocence Committee of the American Bar Association (ABA) Criminal Justice Section. The Ad Hoc Innocence Committee studied many of the causes of wrongful conviction and issued a report directed at systemic reforms—including reforms addressing snitch testimony and prosecutorial practices.[24] Professor Paul Giannelli wrote portions of the report dealing with jailhouse snitches,[25] and the committee recommended a resolution, which the ABA House of Delegates passed, urging federal, state, and local governments to adopt measures so "no prosecution should occur based solely upon the uncorroborated jailhouse informant testimony."[26] With regard to prosecutorial practices directed at Brady disclosures, the committee recommended, and the ABA House of Delegates passed, a resolution that advocates federal, state and local governments to implement procedures so that law enforcement agencies and others working with prosecutors have a better understanding of their obligation to disclose exculpatory and mitigating evidence to prosecutors.[27]

The reforms the Ad Hoc Innocence Committee and ABA House of Delegates recommend are laudable and should be pursued. If implemented, these systemic reforms will go a long way toward ensuring more procedural and substantive justice. But systemic reforms take time and may be less likely to occur than the pragmatic measures I urge local prosecutors, defense lawyers, and individual judges to start taking immediately to respond to the injustice of false snitch testimony and Brady violations that contribute to wrongful convictions.

I begin with a short discussion of the problem of wrongful convictions and the roles that false snitch testimony and prosecutorial misconduct play in convicting the innocent in Part I. In order to shape effective remedies to prevent wrongful convictions, it is necessary to understand the scope of the problem and the nature of causes of wrongful convictions. In Part II, I outline a number of realistic measures that head prosecutors, trial and appellate judges, and defense lawyer should take to prevent false snitch testimony and Brady violations. My goal in outlining these practical, low cost or no-cost recommendations to counter the prejudicial effects of snitch testimony and Brady violations is to generate interest by the countless good prosecutors, defense lawyers, and judges who could prevent wrongful convictions through their daily work.

I. WRONGFUL CONVICTIONS AND THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN SNITCH TESTIMONY AND BRADY VIOLATIONS

Snitch testimony and prosecutorial misconduct, including failure to disclose exculpatory evidence as required by Brady, are major contributing causes to wrongful convictions. Fifty-one of the first 111 death row exonerations involved convictions based upon false snitch testimony.[28] Of the first sixty-two DNA exonerations, fifteen cases involved snitch testimony and twenty-six cases involved prosecutorial misconduct.[29] Of the cases involving prosecutorial misconduct, the suppression of exculpatory evidence—Brady violations—occurred forty-three percent of the time.[30]

Some of the other factors leading to wrongful convictions, such as mistaken identification, are more prevalent,[31] but false snitch testimony and suppression of exculpatory evidence are especially troubling because both serve to derail the truth seeking process of the criminal justice system. Rather than the adversarial process working as intended,[32] the use of false evidence (whether knowingly or unintentionally by prosecutors) and the suppression of exculpatory evidence either lead some innocent defendants to plead guilty or deny the fact finders the ability to reach just verdicts in cases that go to trial.

At the plea stage, efforts to eliminate false snitch testimony and to guarantee the defendant access to exculpatory evidence are necessary in order for there to be confidence in the accuracy of guilty pleas. This is especially true because some innocent defendants plead guilty in order to secure a certain shorter sentence or avoid the possibility of a death sentence. There is no question that this type of risk benefit analysis occurs, and our system of justice acknowledges the right of an individual to maintain innocence while entering a plea of guilty.[33]

The issue of false guilty pleas is accentuated by the extremely high number of criminal cases resolved by guilty pleas. Government studies show that ninety-five percent of state felony cases are resolved through guilty pleas.[34] In the federal system, over ninety percent of those facing felony charges were convicted and ninety-six percent of those convictions rested on guilty pleas.[35] These studies confirm, and in some situations exceed, commentators' estimates of guilty plea rates at approximately eighty to ninety percent.[36]

It is impossible to know how many defendants plead guilty to avoid more serious sentences, but there are examples. Recently, James Ochoa was exonerated by DNA evidence after serving ten months in prison for a crime he did not commit.[37] James Ochoa originally rejected a prosecutor's offer of two years in prison in exchange for pleading guilty because he knew he was innocent. But, after the trial judge threatened to impose a life sentence if convicted, James Ochoa entered a guilty plea during his trial over the advice of his defense lawyer rather than risk conviction.[38] In another case, Christopher Ochoa pled guilty to murder to avoid the possibility of the death penalty; DNA testing exonerated him after he spent twelve years in prison.[39] In the study of exonerations from 1989 to 2003, the researchers found that six percent of the exonerees had pled guilty.[40]

In a more recent study, researchers documented fourteen false guilty pleas out of 125 proven false confessions—eleven percent of their sample.[41]

In these and other instances of false guilty pleas, some innocent defendants plead guilty rather than face a harsher penalty, sometimes the death penalty. Because most felony cases result in guilty verdicts, and nearly all guilty verdicts are the result of defendants pleading guilty, the use of false snitch testimony or withholding exculpatory evidence become powerful levers to convince innocent persons that the trial process is stacked against them. As the James Ochoa case indicates, this can occur even over the advice of defense counsel.[42] These cases illustrate the importance of Brady disclosures to the proper functioning of the guilty plea process.

In addition to guilty pleas where the defendants are insincere and enter pleas to avoid the possibility of harsher punishment, Professor Kevin McMunigal notes that without disclosure of exculpatory information prior to a guilty plea there are problems of factually inaccurate guilty pleas due to faulty assumptions on the part of defendants.[43] McMunigal points out that some defendants enter guilty pleas because of their mistaken belief that they were guilty. A defendant can be mistaken and have imperfect knowledge of events when the prosecutor does not disclose exculpatory statements of witnesses who know critical information that the defendant does not,[44] or when the prosecutor does not disclose investigatory reports, [44] One of the examples Professor McMunigal uses is State v. Gardner, 885 P.2d 1144 (Idaho Ct. App. 1994). Danny Gardner was charged with vehicular manslaughter as the result of a collision when the automobile he was driving crossed the center line into the path of an oncoming pick-up truck, killing the driver of the truck and seriously injuring three passengers in the truck. Gardner tested positive for marijuana and his nephew, a passenger in Gardner's automobile at the time of the accident, gave a statement that Gardner had smoked marijuana right before the accident. See id. at 1147. Tests indicated that Gardner was under the influence of marijuana and was sleep deprived. Gardner pled guilty, stating at the hearing that "he could not remember anything about the accident and believed that he might have fallen asleep while driving because he had not slept the previous night." Id. Unknown to Gardner at the time he entered his plea was that a witness, traveling behind Gardner's vehicle at the time of the accident, gave a written statement to the Idaho State Police that "when the blue car [Gardner's vehicle] was about ten feet in front of the truck I believe the driver's front tire blew. The whole [sic] jumped into the oncoming lane like it was on rails." Id. In a deposition given in a subsequent civil case over the accident, "the witness further explained that he observed the left-front tire blowing out. He saw a puff of dust and rock chunks that appeared to have been caused by the tire blowing, and then the car immediately jerked to the left." Id. The trial court denied Gardner's motion to withdraw his guilty pleas, but the Idaho Court of Appeals vacated such as accident reconstruction reports, that withdraw initial conclusions incorrectly blaming the defendant.[45]

False snitch testimony and Brady violations clash with the generally accepted notion that our criminal justice system protects the innocent and convicts the guilty. The presumption of innocence,[46] the right to remain silent,[47] the right to a public trial by an impartial jury,[48] and the requirement of proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt are all procedural safeguards meant to the protect the innocent. These safeguards reinforce the public's belief that our criminal justice system operates on the precautionary principle that "better that ten guilty persons escape than that one innocent suffer."[49] When false testimony is introduced into evidence, or exculpatory evidence is withheld from the defendant for possible use at trial, the justice system is derailed.

In many ways, the prosecutor is the key actor in the criminal justice system with both the overarching duty and the means to [45] In Carroll v. State, 474 S.E.2d 737 (Ga.App. 1996), Jessica Carroll entered a guilty plea based on the incorrect conclusions of an inexperienced investigating officer, who had not completed his first course in accident reconstruction. The investigating officer's conclusions, both about Carroll's speed and the role of road conditions in causing a accident that killed one person, turned out to be unsupported by the evidence collected at the scene of the accident. In preparing for trial, a more experienced accident reconstruction expert working for the state advised the prosecutor that the speed could not be calculated and that "the newly paved highway and the shoulder, which dropped-off, contributed to the accident." Id. at 738. The state did not disclose this new information and Carroll entered a guilty plea. Id. at 739. On appeal, the Georgia Court of Appeals granted Carroll's motion to withdraw her guilty plea, finding a Brady violation, and remanded the case for trial. Id. at 739–40.

[46] The U.S. Constitution does not expressly contain language about a presumption of innocence, but this principle has long been held as fundamental to our criminal justice system. See, e.g., Coffin v. United States, 156 U.S. 432, 453 (1895) ("The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law, axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our criminal law."); Estelle v. protect the innocent. As the Supreme Court explained, the prosecutor "is in a peculiar and very definite sense the servant of the law, the twofold aim of which is that guilt shall not escape or innocence suffer."[50] Ethics rules reinforce this notion by requiring a prosecutor to be a "minister of justice" and to seek justice.[51] As a minister of justice, the prosecutor has the responsibility "not simply . . . of an advocate," but to adopt a somewhat neutral stance "to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice and that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence."[52]

The prosecutor's duty to seek justice may conflict with the prevailing norm of zealous representation by lawyers in the United States, however.[53] The norm of zealous representation is deeply rooted in the way that prosecutors approach their work, both historically and ethically. Victims initiated and prosecuted their own cases from colonial times until the mid-1800s in some states,[54] and public prosecutors would sometimes hire private lawyers to assist with prosecutions as late as the 1890s.[55] Even today, many prosecutors in the United States are part-time prosecutors who also engage in private practice, sometimes doing criminal defense.[56]

[53] The concept of zealous representation is perhaps best captured by the words of Henry Brougham in his defense of Queen Caroline before England's House of Lords in 1820. Brougham threatened to take every step necessary to advance his client's interests, even if the defense of Queen Caroline would cause damage to King George IV. He explained:

> [A]n advocate, in the discharge of his duty, knows but one person in all the world, and that person is his client. To save that client by all means and expedients, and at all hazards and costs to other persons, and, among them, to himself, is his first and only duty; and in performing this duty he must not regard the alarm, the torments, the destruction which he may bring upon others. Separating the duty of a patriot from that of an advocate, he must go on reckless of consequences, though it should be his unhappy fate to involve his country in confusion.

Part-time prosecutors may ethically represent defendants provided the same office in which the part-time prosecutor works is not prosecuting the defendant and the charges do not involve the same jurisdiction's laws that the part-time

Prosecutors, whether part-time or full-time, receive the same legal education and are governed by the same ethics rules—with only one ethics rule directed solely to prosecutors—that apply to other lawyers.

In deciding whether to rely on jailhouse snitch testimony, the prosecutor likely feels the possibly conflicting pull of the duty to do justice against the norm of zealous representation. Jailhouse snitch testimony is notoriously unreliable, with inmates often manufacturing supposed confessions from others—such as the snitch in Williamson's case—in return for lenient treatment or other benefit.[57] Court decisions and former prosecutors warn about the danger of jailhouse snitches who "purchase leniency from the government by offering testimony in return for immunity, or in return for reduced incarceration."[58] Yet, as in the Williamson's case, sometimes snitch testimony is the key to prosecuting the person the prosecutor believes is culpable. When the suspect is in fact innocent, either the prosecutor is duped by the snitch or the prosecutor relies on what she may suspect is manufactured testimony because such testimony is the means to what the prosecutor believes is the desired ends of convicting a defendant the prosecutor presumes to be factually guilty.

Similarly, the prosecutor is conflicted when determining what material is exculpatory and must be given to the defendant pursuant to Brady. Under Brady and most state criminal discovery rules, the prosecutor has the discretion to determine what constitutes exculpatory evidence and when to disclose it. This has led to inconsistent decisions with some prosecutors turning over to defendants material other prosecutors fail to disclose, and some prosecutors waiting until the eve of trial or even during trial before turning over material.[59] prosecutor must enforce. See, e.g., ABA Comm. on Ethics and Prof'l Responsibility, Informal Op. 1285, at 160 (1974) (stating that prosecutors who only prosecute violations of municipal ordinances may represent criminal defendants facing violations of state law provided the municipality is not directly or indirectly involved or affected); Supreme Court of Ohio, Bd. of Comm'rs on Grievances & Discipline, Op. 88-008 (1988), available at http://www.sconet.state.oh.us/BOC/Advisory_Opinions/ (stating that a municipal prosecutor may "represent a criminal defendant in cases not involving the city or its ordinances").

[59] The prosecutor's duty to disclose evidence favorable to the defense is triggered when the evidence is material. "[E]vidence is material only if there is a reasonable probability that,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

MO-REP-21-1608-F-001337

The prosecutor makes these decisions secretly, usually based on personal judgment, and those decisions are not subject to any established oversight mechanisms. The decision making process first requires the prosecutor to determine if the evidence is exculpatory and then if it is "material." Under existing law, the prosecutor knows that a Brady violation will not occur unless "there is a reasonable probability that, had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, the result of the proceeding would have been different."[60] Essentially, this means that the prosecutor who is convinced of the guilt of the accused is placed in the conflicting position of deciding if there is evidence strong enough to prevent a finding of guilt by the jury.

Even when Brady violations are found,[61] the prosecutor knows that there is little fear of professional discipline because, as one commentator researching professional discipline against prosecutors for Brady violations concluded, "punishment is virtually nonexistent."[62]

Until systemic reforms, such as those the ABA Ad Hoc Innocence Committee recommended, occur, the responsibility falls upon the prosecutors, defense lawyers, and judges at the trial and appellate levels to take measures that curtail the use of false snitch testimony and lead to better compliance with Brady disclosures. In the following part of this article, I will briefly outline what can be done.

II. ACTION PLAN FOR PROSECUTORS, DEFENSE ATTORNEYS, AND JUDGES TO COMBAT FALSE SNITCH TESTIMONY AND BRADY VIOLATIONS

Prosecutors, defense attorneys, and judges at the trial and appellate levels can and should do more to combat false snitch testimony and Brady violations. The growing number of exonerations demonstrates how snitch testimony and Brady violations can combine to convict the innocent, and anyone interested in avoiding future wrongful convictions should be interested in exploring what can be done immediately, without waiting for the possible reforms discussed above. Because prosecutors have the most control over snitch testimony and the disclosure of Brady material, I begin by discussing measures that head prosecutors should implement.

A. What Head Prosecutors Can Do

Commentators offer a number of reasons to explain why prosecutors commit errors in judgment, such as failing to make required Brady disclosures. Some commentators attribute fault to prosecutors and contend that prosecutors make these errors to gain advantage in the trial process or because they are overzealous.[63] More recently, other commentators have argued that faulty judgment is more likely due to various unintentional cognitive biases that prosecutors have rather than assessing blame against the prosecutors.[64] I have argued previously that prosecutorial misconduct is likely the result of three institutional conditions: "vague ethics rules that provide ambiguous guidance to prosecutors; vast discretionary authority with little or no transparency; and inadequate remedies for prosecutorial misconduct, which create perverse incentives for prosecutors to engage in, rather than refrain from, prosecutorial misconduct."[65] Whether the use of false snitch testimony and Brady violations are largely the result of conscious actions, unconscious psychological motivations, or institutional conditions, we are left with the results that such conduct always violates the rights of the accused and sometimes contributes to convicting the innocent.

No matter what causes prosecutorial errors, such as the use of false snitch testimony and Brady violations, the head prosecutor in a particular jurisdiction is in the best position to implement policies to prevent these problems. More than the state legislature, the federal government, or the United States Supreme Court, the head of a particular prosecutor's office has the ability to create and, if necessary, enforce polices that every prosecutor in that office must follow. The following policies, some of which already exist in some jurisdictions, are policies head prosecutors should implement to help prevent the use of false snitch testimony and Brady violations.

1. Adopt a Prosecutor's Handbook for the Office

Prosecutors have extensive power, and often exercise discretion in exercising this power, with few controls. Prosecutors decide whom to prosecute, what crimes to charge, how much leniency to give informants in exchange for information and testimony, sentence recommendations for the accused, and the nature of plea-bargains, if any, the accused may be offered. At each step, the individual prosecutors involved make these decisions in secret, subject only to the controls imposed by the head prosecutors in their offices. To provide concrete guidance to prosecutors and to introduce some transparency into how their offices work, head prosecutors should implement the recommendations of well established criminal justice standards and the National District Attorneys Association (NDAA) and follow the example of the U.S. Department of Justice by adopting prosecutor manuals for their offices.

The ABA Criminal Justice Standards on the Prosecution Function (ABA Prosecution Function Standards) recommend that each prosecutor's office adopt a "prosecutor's handbook" containing "a statement of (i) general policies to guide the exercise of prosecutorial discretion and (ii) procedures for the office. The objectives of these policies as to discretion and procedures should be to achieve a fair, efficient, and effective enforcement of the criminal law."[66] The ABA Prosecution Function Standards recommend that the public have access to the handbook "except for subject matters declared 'confidential,' when it is reasonably believed that public access to their contents would adversely affect the prosecution function."[67]

The NDAA, the leading national organization for state prosecutors, similarly recommends the creation of a written policy manual for each office explaining: "The policies and procedures should give guidance in the exercise of prosecutorial discretion and should provide information necessary for the performance of the duties of the staff."[68] Similar to the ABA Criminal Justice Standards' rationale, the NDAA states: "The objectives of these policies and procedures are to establish the office as a place for the fair, efficient, and effective enforcement of the criminal law."[69] The NDAA also recommends that each prosecutor's manual "should be subject to access by the general public and/or law enforcement agencies or the defense bar."[70]

In addition to the recommendations of the ABA Criminal Justice Standards and the NDAA, the U.S. Department of Justice has set a national example by publishing the U.S. Attorney's Manual (USAM),[71] which is available to the public. The USAM sets out the general principles for commencing or recommending federal prosecution,[72] and the USAM lists factors prosecutors should consider in exercising discretion whether to prosecute.[73] The USAM also [72] The USAM states that a prosecutor "should commence or recommend Federal prosecution if he/she believes that the person's conduct constitutes a Federal offense and that the admissible evidence will probably be sufficient to obtain and sustain a conviction" unless the prosecutor believes: "1. No substantial Federal purpose would be served by prosecution; 2. The person is subject to effective prosecution in another jurisdiction; or 3. There exists an adequate non-criminal alternative to prosecution." Id. at § 9-27.220(A).

[73] The USAM lists the following seven factors for federal prosecutors to consider in exercising discretion to pursue a prosecution:

(1) Federal law enforcement priorities;
(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense;
(3) The deterrent effect of prosecution;
(4) The person's culpability in connection with the offense;

identifies impermissible considerations, which are: "1. The person's race, religion, sex, national origin, or political association, activities, or beliefs; 2. The attorney's own personal feelings concerning the person, the person's associates, or the victim; or 3. The possible affect of the decision on the attorney's own professional or personal circumstances."[74]

Despite the recommendations of the ABA Criminal Justice Standards and the NDAA and the example of the U.S. Department of Justice, relatively few of the more than 2300 prosecutors' offices that pursue felony cases in state courts have manuals or written guidelines for exercising discretion, and whatever manuals or guidelines that may exist do not appear to be available to the public.[75] The lack of written policies for exercising discretion and the lack of transparency in the process are breeding grounds for inconsistency and potential arbitrariness in the way prosecutors in an office approach their work.

The head prosecutor of an office without a written manual or guidelines for exercising discretion could help prevent the use of false snitch testimony and Brady violations by creating written guidelines covering these two areas and making those guidelines available to the public. Such action would establish procedures in the office that are clear and definite, and each prosecutor's actions pursuant to these

In my own experience practicing criminal law in several different cities and counties in two states, I have never found a state or local prosecutor's office with a manual or written guidelines addressing the exercise of discretion made available to the public. Prosecutors in state courts routinely tell me that no such manual or written guidelines exist in their offices. It appears that Minnesota is the only state with a law addressing this issue, and the law requires every prosecutor's office to adopt "written guidelines governing the county attorney's charging and plea negotiation policies and practices." MINN. STAT. § 338.051(3)(a) (1997). Minnesota requires the guidelines to set out "the circumstances under which plea negotiation agreements are permissible," "the factors that are considered in making charging decisions and formulating plea agreements," and "the extent to which input from other persons concerned with a prosecution, such as victims and law enforcement officers, is considered in formulating plea agreements." Id. I have been unable to locate any other information concerning the number of state and local prosecutors' offices that have manuals or written polices outlining the exercise of discretion. More research and data in this area are needed.

written procedures could be subject to internal review and, if necessary, enforcement.

Although no one has done an in depth study into prosecutor integrity, a Department of Justice's National Institute of Justice study of police integrity found that a "culture of integrity, as defined by clearly understood and implemented policies and rules, may be more important in shaping the ethics . . . than hiring the 'right' people."[76] In addition, the study recommended that to enhance integrity two other measures should be taken: "consistently address relatively minor offenses with the appropriate discipline" so that one "may infer that major offenses, too, are likely to be disciplined," and "disclose the disciplinary process and resulting discipline to public scrutiny."[77]

The findings concerning steps to enhance police integrity are consistent with studies of lawyer ethics that demonstrate that the ethical culture in a law office is critical to the ethical behavior of the lawyers in that office.[78] This all points to the need for head prosecutors to implement written policies that describe proper conduct in dealing with informants, especially jailhouse snitches, and Brady material, and to utilize internal discipline procedures when those policies are violated. Without written policies, the prosecutors making these decisions are left to determine, on their own, the proper way of handling a situation, or must rely on the advice of others in their offices who may have widely varying views of what is proper. In the following sections, I will discuss specific policies head prosecutors should consider implementing for dealing with informant, especially snitch, testimony and Brady disclosures.

2. Impose Controls on the Use of Informant (Snitch) Testimony

A head prosecutor could prohibit the use of informant testimony, especially jailhouse snitch testimony, altogether, but many prosecutors might view that approach as too drastic a cure for the problem of potential unreliability of informants. In some instances, the testimony of a jailhouse snitch may appear to be reliable and may be important to prosecuting a defendant successfully. Instead of banning the use of jailhouse informant testimony altogether, a more balanced approach to the problem would consider reasonable measures that could effectively address the reliability issue.

The reliability issue should be approached with clear guidelines because the unreliability of informant testimony has been recognized by courts and prosecutors—anyone remotely associated with the criminal justice system recognizes that there are problems using witnesses who trade testimony for leniency.[79] Nearly one hundred years ago, the United States Supreme Court warned that the testimony of accomplice informants should be viewed "with suspicion, and with the very greatest care and caution,"[80] and more than fifty years ago the Court stated that "informers, accessories, accomplices, false friends, or any of the other betrayals which are 'dirty business' may [79] Judge Stephen Trott, a former prosecutor, used to train federal prosecutors about the problems of using informant testimony, especially jailhouse snitch testimony. He later used his training materials in writing a law review article in which he stated: "The most dangerous informer of all is the jailhouse snitch who claims another prisoner confessed to him." Trott, supra note 58, at 1394. Judge Trott currently sits on the Ninth Circuit, and in a decision he authored he explained:

> Never has it been more true than it is now that a criminal charged with a serious crime understands that a fast and easy way out of trouble with the law is . . . to cut a deal at someone else's expense and to purchase leniency from the government by offering testimony in return for immunity, or in return for reduced incarceration. . . .

Professor Bennett Gershman, a former prosecutor, has warned that a cooperating witness not only has "extraordinary incentives to lie" but also has the "capacity to manipulate, mislead, and deceive his investigative and prosecutorial handlers." Despite these risks, Gershman explains: "For the prosecutor, the cooperating witness provides the most damaging evidence against a defendant, is capable of lying convincingly, and typically is believed by the jury." Id.

The ABA's Ad Hoc Innocence Committee's report also notes that among the official studies documenting "problems associated with the use of jailhouse informants" are "a grand jury report," "two Canadian public inquiries," "numerous books, articles, and news reports." raise serious questions of credibility."[81] More recently, Judge Stephen Trott, a former prosecutor sitting on the Ninth Circuit, explained:

> [E]ach contract for testimony is fraught with real peril that the proffered testimony will not be truthful, but simply factually contrived to "get" a target of sufficient interest to induce concessions from the government. Defendants or suspects with nothing to sell sometimes embark on a methodical journey to manufacture evidence and to create something of value, setting up and betraying friends, relatives, and cellmates alike. Frequently, and because they are aware of the low value of their credibility, criminals will even go so far as to create corroboration for their lies by recruiting others into the plot . . . .[82]

Given the problems with credibility, head prosecutors should ensure that their offices have clear guidelines controlling the use of cooperating witnesses, especially jailhouse snitches. Perhaps the single most important policy would be to require the corroboration of jailhouse informant testimony, so that, as the ABA recommends, "no person should lose liberty or life based solely on the testimony of such a [jailhouse informant] witness."[83] Some states currently require corroboration for accomplice testimony,[84] and the same motivation of a lighter sentence or other benefit that motivates an accomplice to testify against the accused motivates jailhouse snitches.

If a head prosecutor is not willing to require corroboration of jailhouse snitch testimony before using it against the accused, at the very least the head prosecutor should put written guidelines in place for how and when to use jailhouse informants. Psychology experiments consistently demonstrate that "as a general rule people are poor lie detectors."[85] For example, one study showed that college students had only a 52.8 percent accuracy rate in detecting true and false stories, federal polygraph examiners were slightly better at 55.7 percent, robbery investigators had a 55.8 percent accuracy rate, trial judges had a 56.7 percent accuracy rate, psychiatrists were at a 57.6 percent accuracy rate, and U.S. Secret Service agents did the best with a 64 percent accuracy rate in detecting true and false stories.[86] With the general human tendency to be only slightly better than chance in sorting out truth from lies, and even trained law enforcement personnel not doing much better, reasonable measures to determine the reliability of jailhouse informants are needed.

A head prosecutor who wants to establish procedures to counterbalance the human inability to be good lie detectors should use the ABA Ad Hoc Innocence Committee's Report list of factors, developed by a Canadian commission report investigating the wrongful conviction of Guy Paul Morin.[87] Among these factors are recommendations that the informant's statements be corroborated by evidence other than the testimony of other informants, that the statement contain "details or leads to the discovery of evidence known only to the perpetrator," that the prosecutor consider the past record of the informant in giving reliable testimony, whether the informant's report of alleged statements made by the accused was given immediately after the statement was made and given to more than one officer, and the techniques used in obtaining the report of the statement such as "use of non-leading questions, thorough report of words spoken by the accused, thorough investigation of the circumstances which might suggest opportunity or lack of opportunity to fabricate a statement."[88]

In addition, police and prosecutors should videotape or audio record all conversations with the jailhouse informant so that there is the ability, after the fact, to determine if the witness has been coached into inculpating the accused, or if the witness has manipulated the police or prosecutor into disclosing details of the crime known only to the victim, the real perpetrator, and involved law enforcement officials.[89] A prosecutor not involved in the case should review these recordings so that there is an internal check on reliability. If the jailhouse informant is going to be used as a prosecution witness at trial, the recordings should be turned over to the defense as part of Brady disclosure for possible impeachment of the witness.[90]

Finally, if an agreement is reached with a jailhouse snitch, all promises and benefits to the witness should be in writing and subject to full disclosure under Brady.[91] The next section will discuss other policies a head prosecutor should create with regard to Brady disclosure obligations.

3. Create Clear Discovery Rules for the Prosecutor's Office

A head prosecutor can help avoid Brady violations by adopting clearer disclosure rules than those required by the courts or state law. As discussed previously, a prosecutor evaluating evidence for disclosure to the defendant may be conflicted when determining what is exculpatory pursuant to Brady.[92] The standard for disclosure under Brady has focused on the "materiality" of the evidence and requires that the "evidence is material only if there is a reasonable probability that, had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, the results of the proceeding would have been different."[93] In exploring this standard, the Supreme Court has ruled that even when the withheld evidence creates a reasonable possibility of a different outcome if the prosecution had turned over the evidence there is not a Brady violation because the defendant fails to meet the burden of establishing a reasonable probability of a different outcome.[94] One commentator explains "what 'material' means; under what circumstances exculpatory evidence must be disclosed—by whom—and when it must be disclosed; have been the subject of much [89] Professor Bennett Gershman discusses the various ways prosecutors engage in witness coaching, and how cooperating witnesses can deceive and manipulate police and prosecutors. See Gershman, supra note 79, at 829–44, 847–50. Gershman notes however, that even with documentation of the encounters with a cooperating witness there are some psychological components such as "a witness's own 'suggestibility,' 'confabulation,' and 'memory hardening,'" that may escape detection and still lead to false or misleading testimony. Id. at 852.

[90] Contemporaneous records of interactions between the government and the jailhouse are necessary "to ascertain the extent to which prosecutors or police may have improperly influenced witnesses overtly, covertly, or even unwittingly to give false or misleading testimony." Id. at 833.

[91] The Supreme Court has held: "When the 'reliability of a given witness may well be determinative of the guilt or innocence,' nondisclosure of evidence affecting credibility falls within this [Brady] rule." Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150, 155 (1963).

confusion, revision, and debate among courts, lawyers, and academics."[95] Rather than letting prosecutors in an office attempt to assess disclosure under a confusing set of rules, a head prosecutor should provide clearer guidance that ensures complete compliance with Brady.

The surest way to meet and exceed Brady disclosure obligations is to adopt an "open file" discovery policy—essentially making available to the defense all of the information in the prosecutor's possession. Many individual prosecutors have open file discovery policies,[96] though this is generally left to the discretion of individual prosecutors and is not an office-wide policy.[97] This means that without a policy requiring open file discovery in a particular office, whether a defendant receives the benefit "of an open file policy may depend on the particular prosecutor, the relationship between defense counsel and the prosecutor, the identity of the defendant, and the nature of the case."[98] Without guidelines on the exercise of discretion in discovery, there is the potential for some prosecutors to use factors such as the race or social standing of the defendant or the defendant's lawyer in determining who receives open file discovery.

An open file discovery policy not only removes the guessing and doubt on whether prosecutors in the office are following Brady, but a head prosecutor who implements an open file discovery policy will eliminate potential grounds for appeal and second guessing of the judgment of prosecutors.[99] An open file discovery policy also removes the problem of a prosecutor trying to evaluate evidence under the vague and indefinite standards of Brady.

[99] Provided the material in the prosecutor's file is complete and contains information compiled by all of the law enforcement personnel related to the case, there cannot be any Brady material not disclosed if the prosecutor has an open file discovery policy. And, a prosecutor with open file discovery has an obligation to ensure that the materials in the file are complete and accurate. See Robinson v. State, 879 S.W.2d 419, 421–22 (Ark. 994). An open file discovery policy could also provide that if there is anything in the file that the prosecutor believes is privileged or would be embarrassing or intrusive into the privacy rights of a witness, the prosecutor would provide notice to the defense attorney that certain material, such as medical records of a potential witness, are being withheld for privacy reasons. Such a claim by the prosecution would shift the burden to the defense to seek a court order to obtain the evidence. In some instances, a trial judge may engage in an ex ante, in camera review to determine if the evidence in question is Brady material rather than in an appellate post hoc evaluation of withheld evidence on appeal.

If a head prosecutor is reluctant to implement an open file discovery for an office, at the very least the head prosecutor could create a policy that all exculpatory evidence be disclosed to the defendant. As a result of a study of wrongful convictions in Illinois, the Illinois Supreme Court adopted a rule that "the State shall disclose to defense counsel any material or information within its possession or control which tends to negate the guilt of the accused as to the offense charged or which would tend to reduce his punishment thereof."[100] By adopting such a policy, a head prosecutor would remove the confusion over the "materiality" component currently present under Brady, and, like implementing an open file discovery policy, should prevent Brady violations in the prosecutor's office.

In addition to whatever policy a head prosecutor implements concerning disclosure obligations, the policy should require timely disclosure of material when it will be most useful to the defense. This means that disclosure of favorable material should take place prior to plea bargains, as Professor McMunigal has argued.[101] For cases going to trial, disclosure should take place weeks or at least days prior to trial, instead of the first day of trial or during trial, as sometimes occurs.

B. What Defense Attorneys Can Do

Defense attorneys also should do more to combat possible false snitch testimony. For example, two former public defenders have created "The Rat Manual," in which they outline steps to take when dealing with informants, including jailhouse snitches.[102] The manual provides an excellent step-by-step approach to all aspects of dealing with informants and it provides case and statutory support for every subject. The issues covered include early discovery of the informant's identity and background, collecting impeachment information from public records and investigation techniques, investigating the prosecutor's conduct with the informant and other informants, filing pretrial motions to exclude the informant as unreliable, implementing a strategy to impeach the informant on cross-examination, using expert witnesses for impeachment, drafting cautionary jury instructions addressing the issue of credibility for snitch testimony, and post conviction motions.[103]

In a similar vein, some public defender offices have offered training on dealing with informants and have made materials available via the internet. The District of Columbia's Public Defender Service (PDS) has posted materials from a program entitled "The ABCs of Cross-Examining 'Cooperating' Witnesses."[104] The PDS training materials contain internet links to materials that include a sample motion to preclude the creation of snitch testimony, a sample motion to exclude cooperating witness testimony and a request for a reliability hearing, and three sample cross-examinations.[105] The Florida Public Defender Conference presented a program entitled "Snitches, Rats and Songbirds,"[106] and the material for the conference, available over the internet, includes suggestions for introducing the issue of informant credibility during jury voir dire, language for describing the snitch during closing, and a sample cautionary letter to send to clients advising them not to speak to anyone about their cases.[107] The materials demonstrate the variety of approaches defense counsel should employ to prevent the creation of and to combat false jailhouse snitch testimony.

If there is jailhouse snitch testimony, defense lawyers who seek to exclude the informant's testimony will face obstacles. The criminal justice system relies primarily on the availability of cross-examination and jury instructions to address issues of reliability when the government uses informants.[108] Yet, jailhouse snitches trading [108] In addressing the use of compensated informants, the Supreme Court reasoned that the government does not violate a defendant's due process rights stating: "The established safeguards of the Anglo-American legal system leave the veracity of a witness to be tested by cross-examination, and the credibility of his testimony to be determined by a properly instructed testimony for leniency have significant incentives to fabricate testimony because their own fate depends upon them presenting credible and consistent testimony against the accused.[109] Once a jailhouse snitch formulates a story, the prosecutor handling the case will very likely coach the informant to be consistent and convincing.[110] This type of practiced testimony is especially resistant to cross-examination, so defense lawyers must press the issue of jailhouse informant unreliability through the types of investigations, pretrial motions and hearings, and trial strategies, discussed in a growing number of resources, to combat false snitch testimony.

Defense attorneys should also push trial courts to require prosecutors to provide early and complete disclosure of exculpatory evidence concerning the informant. In every case in which the prosecutor designates a jailhouse informant as a witness, the defense attorney should file a discovery motion that specifically asks for the following: a complete criminal history of the informant; a list of all cases in which the informant has testified or offered to testify against another; whether the informant has ever recanted testimony or a statement in the past and a copy of such recantation; the specific statements of the defendant that the informant will testify about and the time, place, and manner in which the statements were allegedly made; all written or oral deals, promises, inducements, or benefits made by the government to the informant or planned to be made by the government, and any other information concerning the informant's credibility.[111] If the trial judge requires this type of jury." Hoffa v. United States, 385 U.S. 293, 311 (1966).

[109] As one commentator explains:

> Paradoxically, the more a witness's fate depends on the success of the prosecution, the more resistant the witness will be to cross-examination. A witness whose future depends on currying the government's favor will formulate a consistent and credible story calculated to procure an agreement with the government and will adhere religiously at trial to her prior statements.

[110] See Gershman, supra note 79, at 834–38.

[111] This recommendation is based on the following specific discovery required by the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals whenever the government uses an informant:

> At least ten days before trial, the state is required to disclose in discovery: (1) the complete criminal history of the informant; (2) any deal, promise, inducement, or benefit that the offering party has made or may make in the future to the informant (emphasis added); (3) the specific statements made by the defendant and the time, place, and manner of their disclosure; (4) all other cases in which the informant testified or offered statements against an individual but was not called, whether the statements were admitted in the case, and whether the informant received any deal, promise, inducement, or benefit in exchange for or subsequent to that testimony or statement; (5) whether at any time the informant recanted that testimony or discovery, and if the prosecutor fully complies with such a discovery order, the requirements of Brady will be met.

More detailed discovery motions, practice aids such as "The Rat Manual," and the public defender training materials provide defense attorneys with steps that they can take to preclude the creation of snitch testimony, possibly exclude such testimony when it exists, and creatively attack the testimony if it is introduced at trial. The overarching message of these strategies is that defense lawyers should be more proactive to attempt to combat the use of false snitch testimony and to obtain compliance with Brady.

C. What Trial and Appellate Judges Can Do

Judges at the trial and appellate levels should also do more to guard against the use of false snitch testimony and Brady violations. The adversary system depends on trial judges monitoring the conduct of prosecutors and defense lawyers in discovery, pretrial, and trial proceedings. In reviewing cases, appellate judges should fashion clearer legal rules to govern the disclosure obligations of prosecutors and the conduct of trials.

A trial judge presented with a motion to exclude jailhouse informant testimony should grant a reliability hearing on the matter and appellate judges should approve of such hearings as within the sound discretion of the trial judge. There are grounds for a trial judge exercising such authority to ascertain the reliability and probative value of jailhouse snitch's testimony in both federal and state courts. The Federal Rules of Evidence provide: "Preliminary questions concerning the qualification of a person to be a witness . . . or the admissibility of evidence shall be determined by the court . . . ."[112] In addition, the Federal Rules of Evidence provide: "Hearings on the admissibility of confessions shall in all cases be conducted out of the hearing of the jury. Hearings on other preliminary matters shall be so conducted [out of the hearing of the jury] when the interests of justice require."[113] Most states, including Ohio, have adopted this same or similar language.[114] These evidentiary rules recognize a trial judge's statement, and if so, a transcript or copy of such recantation; and (6) any other information relevant to the informant's credibility.

authority and obligation to conduct an admissibility hearing to determine whether jailhouse snitch testimony of an alleged confession by the accused did occur and is sufficiently reliable to be permitted at trial against the accused. Federal Rule of Evidence 403 also provides that "evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury."[115]

As discussed previously, courts have long recognized the unreliability of informants,[116] and at least one court has stated that the use of informant testimony is "creating the risk of sending innocent persons to prison."[117] In Dodd v. State,[118] the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals warned: "Courts should be exceedingly leery of jailhouse informants, especially if there is a hint that the informant received some sort of benefit for his or her testimony."[119]

Given the historical unreliability of jailhouse informants, some judges have recommended or required reliability hearings when a prosecutor plans to use the testimony of a jailhouse informant against the accused. In a concurrence in Dodd v. State, one of the appellate judges stated that "to ensure the utmost reliability in the admission of jailhouse informant testimony, I would also mandate the reliability hearing."[120] In D'Agostino v. State,[121] the Nevada Supreme Court held that in the penalty phase of a capital case the "supposed admissions" by a defendant "may not be heard by the jury unless the trial judge first determines that the details of the admissions supply a sufficient indicia of reliability or there is some credible evidence other than the admission itself to justify the conclusion that the convict committed the crimes which are the subject of the admission."[122]

As the foregoing discussion indicates, both the rules of evidence and case authority provide support for the trial judge to exercise a gate keeping function before admitting jailhouse informant testimony.[123] When the record of a reliability hearing supports a finding of unreliability, the trial judge should exclude the testimony reasoning that the probative value of the testimony is outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice to the accused and that the testimony may mislead the jury. A trial judge's decision on this preliminary matter should be found to be within the judge's sound discretion, and should not be disturbed on appeal unless the record demonstrates an abuse of discretion.[124]

In addition to requiring reliability hearings before permitting jailhouse informants to testify, trial and appellate judges can do more to require more detailed discovery concerning jailhouse informants and timely disclosure. Two models for more extensive discovery when there are jailhouse informants are found in Oklahoma case law[125] and in an Illinois statute.[126] Trial judges should impose such [122] Id. at 285.

[123] Professor George Harris has argued that the law's treatment of expert witnesses also supports holding reliability hearings when a jailhouse informant is used. See Harris, supra note 109, at 1–5. Harris notes that jailhouse informants are compensated by one party, as are expert witnesses, and this makes them more one-sided and violates the usual prohibition on paid testimony. See id. Harris also contends that like experts, informants may appear to have special knowledge of the crime that can sway the jury. See id. 54–56, 59–61. See also Daubert v. Merrell Dow, 509 U.S. 579 (1993) (requiring courts to hold reliability hearings before admitting expert testimony).

[124] See, e.g., Pina v. State, 38 S.W.3d 730, 736 (Tex. App. 2001) (holding that preliminary questions concerning the admissibility of evidence are within the trial court's discretion).

[125] See supra note 111.

[126] Whenever the prosecution intends to use an informant to testify against the accused in a death penalty cases, Illinois law requires the prosecutor to provide the following to the defense:

> (1) the complete criminal history of the informant;
> (2) any deal, promise, inducement, or benefit that the offering party has made or will make in the future to the informant;
> (3) the statements made by the accused;
> (4) the time and place of the statements, the time and place of their disclosure to law enforcement officials, and the names of all persons who were present when the statements were made;
> (5) whether at any time the informant recanted that testimony or statement and, if so, the time and place of the recantation, the nature of the recantation, and the names of the persons who were present at the recantation;

requirements by instituting standing discovery orders in criminal cases that require more detailed discovery concerning the background of informants and possible impeachment material. If a trial judge is reluctant to impose a standing order for more extensive and timely discovery concerning informants, the trial judge should grant a defense motion for more extensive discovery.[127] By enforcing a standing discovery order or by granting a defense motion for more extensive discovery concerning informants, the trial judge would help to ensure complete and timely disclosure of all Brady material to the defense.

Appellate judges can also take a more practical approach by establishing more workable standards for Brady disclosures. Some courts have held that the prosecutor has an obligation to disclose to the defendant all favorable evidence "without regard to whether the failure to disclose it likely would affect the outcome of the upcoming trial."[128] By separating the duty to disclose all favorable evidence from the issues of materiality and the probability of reversal if the material is withheld, these courts are sending a clearer message to prosecutors that Brady disclosures must be complete. Some courts also caution prosecutors that "[w]here doubt exists as to the usefulness of the evidence to the defendant, the government must received any promise, inducement, or benefit in exchange for or subsequent to that testimony or statement; and,

(7) any other information relevant to the informant's credibility.

§ 725 ILL. COMP. STAT. ANN. 5/115-21(c) (2007). The statute defines an informant as "someone who is purporting to testify about admissions made to him or her by the accused while incarcerated in a penal institution contemporaneously." Id. at 5/115-21(a).

In addition, the prosecutor in a death penalty case must disclose to the defense the following for every witness whose testimony the government plans to introduce:

(1) whether the witness has received or been promised anything,including pay, immunity from prosecution, leniency in prosecution, or personal advantage, in exchange for testimony;

(2) any other case in which the witness testified or offered statements against an individual but was not called, and whether the statements were admitted in the case, and whether the witness received any deal, promise, inducement, or benefit in exchange for that testimony or statement; provided that the existence of such testimony can be ascertained through reasonable inquiry;

(3) whether the witness has ever changed his or her testimony;

(4) the criminal history of the witness; and,

(5) any other evidence relevant to the credibility of the witness.

resolve all such doubts in favor of full disclosure."[129] As the District of Columbia Court of Appeals recently held:

> In arguable cases, the prosecutor should provide the potentially exculpatory information to the defense or, at the very least, make it available to the trial court for in camera inspection. Further, when the issue appears to be a close one, the trial court should insist upon reviewing such material, and should direct disclosure to the defense . . . ."[130]

When a defendant demonstrates on appeal that a prosecutor did not turn over Brady material, state appellate courts should also consider shifting the burden to the prosecution to show lack of prejudice to the defendant. This approach was recently adopted by the Minnesota Supreme Court for prosecutorial trial misconduct,[131] and at least two other states require the government to demonstrate that prosecutorial trial misconduct has not affected a defendant's rights.[132] Although these cases apply to trial misconduct, the reasoning is equally applicable to pretrial disclosure obligations calculated to provide the defendant access to favorable evidence for use at trial. As the Minnesota Supreme Court reasoned, "placing the burden on the prosecution to show lack of prejudice will allow for more effective regulation of impermissible practices" and courts "retain the authority in the appropriate case to reverse under our supervisory powers, without regard to whether the defendant was prejudiced."[133] By shifting the burden to the prosecution to prove lack of prejudice when the prosecution does not turn over favorable evidence to the defendant, state appellate courts would encourage greater disclosure and better safeguard the due process rights of the accused.

CONCLUSION

Reducing the incidence of false snitch testimony and Brady violations is a shared responsibility of prosecutors, defense counsel, and the judiciary. Rather than hoping and waiting for systemic change to occur from above in the form of legislation or the possible development of better case law by the United States Supreme Court to

Jailhouse Witness Bill Summary

1) Tracking use and benefits provided to jailhouse witness. The bill requires each circuit attorney's office to maintain a central record that tracks each case in which a jailhouse witness is endorsed by the state to testify against a suspect of defendant's interest. Each circuit attorney's office shall send the information to the Missouri Department of Public Safety, which shall maintain a statewide record of the information.

2) Discovery. A circuit attorney shall disclose all jailhouse witnesses who have been endorsed by the state and specified information pursuant to Rule 25 of the Missouri Criminal Procedures.

3) Pre-Trial Reliability Hearing. In all felony cases in which the state intends to introduce the testimony of a jailhouse witness, and upon motion of the defendant, the court shall conduct a pre-trial hearing to determine whether the testimony of the jailhouse witness is reliable, and unless the circuit attorney shows by a preponderance of the evidence that the jailhouse witness is reliable, the court shall not allow the testimony to be heard at trial.

4) Jury Instruction. If the testimony of the jailhouse witness is admitted into evidence at trial, the court shall instruct the jurors to consider specific facts when assessing the testimony of the jailhouse witness.

5) Victim Notification. If a jailhouse witness receives leniency related to a pending charge, conviction, or sentence for a crime against a victim, in connection with offering or providing testimony against a suspect or defendant, the prosecutor shall notify the victim.

_____ BILL NO. _____
_____ GENERAL ASSEMBLY

INTRODUCED BY _____

AN ACT

To repeal section 491.050 and 491.060, RSMo., and to enact in lieu thereof six new sections relating to jailhouse witnesses.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, AS FOLLOWS:

Section A. Section 491.050 and 491.060 RSMo., are repealed and six new sections are enacted in lieu thereof, to be known as section 491.050 and 491.606, to read as follows:

491.050. Definitions. As used in sections 491.060, unless the context otherwise requires:

1. "Benefit" means any plea bargain, bail consideration, reduction or modification of sentence, or any other leniency, immunity, financial payment, reward, or amelioration of current or future conditions of incarceration that has been requested, or that has been or may, in the future, be offered or provided in connection with, or in exchange for, the testimony of a jailhouse witness who was endorsed by the state.

2. "Jailhouse Witness" means a witness who offers or provides testimony concerning statements made to such a person by another person with whom he or she was incarcerated, or an incarcerated person who offers or provides testimony concerning statements made to such a person by another person who is suspected of or charged with committing a criminal offense.

3. Jailhouse witness does not mean a co-defendant or victim in the case.

Section 491.060. A. Tracking Use of and Benefits Provided to Jailhouse Witnesses.

1. Each circuit attorney's office shall maintain a central record that is searchable and tracks:

(a) Each case in which a jailhouse witness has been endorsed by the state to testify against a defendant's interest.

(b) The substance of the testimony; and

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(c) Any benefit that has been requested by, or has been offered to, the jailhouse witness, and any benefit that may be provided in the future in connection with such testimony.

2. Each circuit attorney's office shall send the information described in subsection 1, of this section to the Division of Criminal Justice in the Department of Public Safety on a monthly basis to be maintained in a centralized statewide record that is available to circuit attorney's throughout the state.

3. The information described in this section is only accessible by the circuit attorney's and is not subject to the provisions of section 610 RSMo.

B. Discovery.

1. If a circuit attorney endorses a person to testify as a jailhouse witness, the following material and information shall be disclosed within the time frame in Rule 25 of the Missouri Rules of Criminal Procedure.

(a) The complete criminal history of the jailhouse witness, including any charges that are Pending or were reduced or dismissed as part of a plea bargain.

(b) The jailhouse witness cooperation agreement and any deal, promise, inducement, or benefit that has been requested, or that has been or may, in the future, be offered or provided to the jailhouse witness in connection with testimony against the defendant's interest.

(c) The substance, time, and place of any statement allegedly given by the defendant to the jailhouse witness and the substance, time, and place of any statement given by the jailhouse witness to law enforcement implicating the defendant in the crime charged.

(d) Whether at any time, the jailhouse witness recanted that testimony or statement, and, if so, the time and place of the recantation, the nature of the recantation, and the names of the persons who were present at the recantation.

(e) Information concerning other criminal cases in any county in which the jailhouse witness was endorsed by the state to testify against a defendant with whom the jailhouse witness was imprisoned or confined, including:

(i) The case name and number.

(ii) The substance of the testimony.

(iii) Any cooperation agreement, deal, promise, inducement, or benefit that was Requested, offered, or provided to the jailhouse witness in connection with their testimony; and

(iv) Any other information that is requested to be disclosed pursuant to the United States and Missouri Constitutions and the Missouri Rules of Criminal Procedures.

C. Pre-Trial Reliability Hearings.

1. In any criminal prosecution in which the circuit attorney's office intends to introduce the testimony of a jailhouse witness, upon the motion of the defendant, the court shall conduct a pre-trial hearing to determine whether the jailhouse witness testimony is reliable and therefore admissible based upon the material and information disclosed pursuant to section B, as well as the following factors:

(a) The extent to which the jailhouse witness testimony is confirmed by other evidence.

(b) The specificity of the testimony.

(c) The extent to which the testimony contains details known only by the perpetrator.

(d) The extent to which the details of the testimony could be obtained from a source Other than the defendant; and

(e) The circumstances under which the jailhouse witness initially provided the information to the police or the prosecutor, including whether the jailhouse witness was responding to leading questions.

2. The circuit attorney must show by a preponderance of the evidence that the jailhouse witness' testimony is reliable in order for the court to allow the testimony to be heard at trial based on the factors in subsection B of this section.

D. Jury Instruction. If a jailhouse witness' testimony is admitted into evidence, the court may instruct jurors to consider the material and information disclosed pursuant to Subsection B, and the factors enumerated in that section when assessing the jailhouse witness' testimony.

E. Victim Notification. If a jailhouse witness receives a benefit related to a pending charge, a conviction, or a sentence for a crime committed by the jailhouse witness that involved a victim, the prosecutor shall notify the victim in accordance with provisions under section 595 RSMo.

COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS

The Timothy Cole Exoneration Review Commission recommends that the Legislature consider the following proposals:

ELECTRONIC RECORDING OF INTERROGATIONS

I. Require either audio or audiovisual electronic recording of interrogations by law enforcement agencies when investigating all felony cases.
II. Require recording to begin when the suspect enters the interrogation room.
III. Enforce compliance with new recording requirements by permitting the admission of an unrecorded statement only if the judge finds good cause for the failure to electronically record the statement, and establishing a presumption that an unrecorded statement is inadmissible as evidence if the judge finds that no good cause exception applies.

FALSE ACCUSATION/INFORMANT REGULATION

I. Require prosecutor offices to have written policies on tracking and disclosure of impeaching information on jailhouse informants.
II. Permit the admissibility of jailhouse informants' complete criminal history, including criminal charges that were dismissed or reduced as part of a plea bargain.
III. Require prosecutor offices to establish an internal system to track the use of jailhouse informants including, but not limited to, cases in which the jailhouse informant offered testimony and the benefits provided in those cases.

FAULTY EYEWITNESS IDENTIFICATION

I. Require training for law enforcement officers on eyewitness identification procedures.
II. Require making juries aware of prior identifications of the suspect by the witness when an in-court identification is made.
III. Require law enforcement agencies to adopt the Bill Blackwood Law Enforcement Management Institute of Texas Model Policy.

FORENSIC SCIENCE PRACTICES

I. Encourage the Texas Forensic Science Commission to investigate and consider promulgating policies regarding the use of drug field tests used by law enforcement agencies.
II. Encourage the Texas Forensic Science Commission to investigate and consider promulgating policies regarding the process of crime scene investigations.
III. Recommend that crime labs in all cases moving forward complete testing of substances in all drug cases regardless of the results of a drug field test, and that crime labs go back through previous cases in which the collected substance was not confirmed by lab testing.

LETTER FROM PRESIDING OFFICER

The Timothy Cole Exoneration Review Commission was created by the 84th Texas Legislature to review and consider various matters related to wrongful convictions within the Texas criminal justice system. The Legislation was authored by Representative Ruth Jones McClendon and sponsored by Senator Rodney Ellis, who were instrumental in its passage. Commission members and advisory members understand and appreciate the importance of this issue, and have tried to address the issue with the diligence it deserves. We have attempted to fulfill the responsibilities assigned to us by the Legislature. Pursuant to House Bill 48, we have compiled and now issue this report of our findings and recommendations.

Commission members and advisory members come from broad and diverse backgrounds. The expertise of each was instrumental in developing the findings and recommendations included in this report. Each member dedicated significant time and effort to complete the Commission's important assignment of identifying measures to prevent the causes and occurrence of wrongful convictions.

H.B. 48 requires concurrence of seven of the eleven members to issue a report. The Commission realized from the start that not every member would agree to every proposed finding or recommendation. In fact, few of the findings or recommendations included in this report are supported by all Commission members. However, because of the Commission's determination to submit a report in accordance with H.B. 48, Commission members wish to make clear that, by concurring in the whole of this report, they are not necessarily endorsing any specific finding or recommendation herein. Members have been provided the opportunity to include an explanatory, concurring, or dissenting statement regarding their individual positions on matters within the report.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Commission acknowledges the work of Representative Ruth Jones McClendon and Senator Rodney Ellis in securing passage of H.B. 48 in the 84th Legislature.

Commission members express their appreciation to the staff members who made this endeavor possible – David Slayton, Wesley Shackelford, Alejandra I. Pena, and Terri Peirce. The Commission also acknowledges the important contributions from its advisory members. The Commission expresses gratitude to those men and women previously exonerated, who assisted the Commission by sharing their stories, together with their valuable insights into these critical issues. Finally, the Commission has valued the support and encouragement from the family of Timothy Cole.

TIMOTHY COLE EXONERATION REVIEW COMMISSION

The Timothy Cole Exoneration Review Commission (Commission) was created in 2015 by the 84th Legislature with the passage of House Bill 48. The Commission was created under, but independent from, the Texas Judicial Council and is administratively attached to the Office of Court Administration.

The Commission's charge is to (1) review cases in the State of Texas in which an innocent defendant was convicted of a crime and then, on or after January 1, 2010, was exonerated; (2) to consider potential implementation plans, costs, cost savings, and the impact on the criminal justice system for each potential solution identified through the work of the commission; and (3) to review and update the research, report, and recommendations of the Timothy Cole Advisory Panel (TCAP) on Wrongful Convictions established by the 81st Legislature in 2009.

The Commission's first public meeting was held on October 27, 2015. The Commission held six meetings, all with a quorum of members participating either in person or via teleconference.

TIMOTHY COLE

The Commission is named after Timothy Cole, the first Texan to be posthumously exonerated of a crime through DNA testing.

Timothy Cole was a U.S. Army veteran and student at Texas Tech University. At the age of 26, he was accused of a rape.

On March 24, 1985, a Texas Tech female student was abducted and raped by a perpetrator believed to have been the "Tech Rapist," an unknown serial rapist at that time. The victim reported the crime to the police and provided details about her perpetrator's appearance, which included the fact that he had smoked cigarettes throughout the attack.

Approximately two weeks later, Mr. Cole went to pick up a friend who worked at a pizza restaurant near the location of the victim's abduction. As he was leaving, Mr. Cole interacted with a female undercover officer and offered her a ride. The woman declined the ride and informed her superiors that Mr. Cole resembled the description the victim had provided.

The next day officers arrived at Mr. Cole's apartment and took a picture of him. His picture was provided in a photo lineup along with five others to the victim of the rape. Mr. Cole's photograph was the only Polaroid picture, the rest were mugshots; additionally, Mr. Cole was the only individual facing the camera while the others were facing the side. The victim identified Mr. Cole as her attacker.

Mr. Cole was arrested and tried by a jury in Lubbock. His defense team presented evidence of his severe asthma and the fact that he did not smoke. They also presented alibi evidence for the night of the crime tending to prove that Mr. Cole had been at home studying where his brother had been socializing with some friends. Similar criminal assaults continued to take place after Mr.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Cole's arrest. His attorneys attempted to present this evidence but were denied by the judge. Mr. Cole was ultimately convicted of the crime on September 17, 1986, and sentenced by the jury to 25 years in prison.

While in prison, Mr. Cole was offered parole if he would admit guilt, but he refused to confess to a crime he did not commit. In 1995, Texas prisoner Jerry Wayne Johnson had begun writing letters confessing to the crime for which Mr. Cole had been convicted. At the time, Mr. Johnson was serving life in prison for two other 1985 sexual assault charges. Mr. Cole passed away in 1999 of asthma complications while serving his sentence. In 2007, Mr. Johnson confessed again to the sexual assault. DNA testing of biological evidence collected from the crime scene implicated that Mr. Johnson was the actual perpetrator, and that Mr. Cole was, in fact, innocent.

On April 7, 2009, nearly 10 years after his death, Timothy Cole became the first posthumous DNA exoneration in Texas history. On March 1, 2010, Mr. Cole was pardoned by Texas Governor Rick Perry.

RESEARCH OVERVIEW

For purposes of this report, the Commission defines exoneration as a situation in which a defendant who was convicted of a crime was later relieved of all legal consequences of that conviction through a decision by a prosecutor, a governor, or a court, after new evidence of his or her innocence was discovered.[1] The Commission gathered data and information on Texas exonerations from January 1, 2010, to December 1, 2016, in order to determine the areas within the criminal justice process that were in most need of further research and reform proposals. Through this analysis, the Commission found that Texas has had 204 exonerations during this timeframe. Of the exonerations reviewed, 148 were for drug-related offenses. Fifty-six were for non-drug related offenses. The non-drug related exoneration offenses are detailed by offense in Figure 1.

Following an initial review of exonerations since 2010, the Commission prioritized the review of non-drug related cases given the nature of the crimes and time served for these offenses, followed by drug-related cases which accounted for the majority of the exoneration as shown in Figure 2. The Commission identified the following five research topic areas: (1) electronic recording of interrogations, (2) false accusations, (3) jailhouse informant regulations, (4) faulty eyewitness identification, and (5) forensic practices. The Commission makes recommendations related to each area based on research performed and provided to the Commission. Recommendations that may result in additional costs are noted so that the 85th Legislature may take such costs into consideration.

TIMOTHY COLE ADVISORY PANEL ON WRONGFUL CONVICTIONS (2010)

Pursuant to H.B. 48, the Commission reviewed and updated the research, report, and recommendations of the Timothy Cole Advisory Panel (TCAP) on Wrongful Convictions established by the 81st Legislature in 2009. Table 1 presents the recommendations from the 2010 TCAP report with their implementation status.

TABLE 1: Timothy Cole Advisory Panel Recommendations and Implementation Status Eyewitness Identification Procedures
1. Require the Bill Blackwood Law Enforcement Management Institute of Texas (LEMIT) to work with scientific experts in eyewitness memory research and law enforcement agencies to develop, adopt, disseminate to all law enforcement agencies, and annually review a model policy and training materials regarding the administration of photo and live lineups. The model policy should comport with science in the areas of cautionary instructions, filler selection, double-blind administration, documentation of identification procedures, and other procedures or best practices.	Implemented during the 82nd legislative session via HB 215. The LEMIT model policy was released in December 2011.
2. Require all law enforcement agencies to adopt eyewitness identification procedures that comply with the model policy promulgated by LEMIT.	Implemented during the 82nd legislative session via HB 215. Law enforcement agencies were required to either adopt the LEMIT model policy or one of their own that conformed to certain specified requirements of the bill no later than September 1, 2012.
3. Integrate training on eyewitness procedures into the required curricula of the LEMIT model policy and the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education.	Implemented via training curricula changes.
4. Permit evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the LEMIT model policy to be admissible in court.	Implemented during the 82nd legislative session via HB 215.
5. Allow law enforcement agencies discretion on the adoption of sequential procedures.	Implemented during the 82nd legislative session via HB 215. Sequential presentation is recommended in the model policy, but was not required in the statute.
Recording Custodial Interrogations
6. Adopt a mandatory electronic recording policy, from delivery of Miranda warnings to the end of interrogations, for custodial interrogations in certain felony crimes. The policy should include a list of exceptions to recording and the judicial	Not implemented.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

discretion to issue a jury instruction in the case of an unexcused failure to record.
Discovery Procedures
7. Adopt a discovery policy that is mandatory, automatic, and reciprocal, and requires either electronic access to or photocopies of materials subject to discovery.	Partially implemented during the 83rd Legislative session via SB 1611, the Michael Morton Act. The Act requires prosecutors to produce for and permit photocopying by the defense of witness statements, offense reports, and other relevant evidence. Reciprocal discovery, however, was not included in the Act.
Post-Conviction Proceedings
8. Amend the Chapter 64 motion for post-conviction DNA testing to allow testing of any previously untested biological evidence, regardless of the reason the evidence was not previously tested, or evidence previously using older, less accurate methods.	Implemented during the 82nd Legislative session via SB 122 to modify the requirements for granting motions for post-conviction DNA testing by removing certain conditions regarding the reasons why biological evidence was not tested previously, so that testing of any previously untested biological evidence may be granted.
9. Amend the Chapter 11 writs of habeas corpus to include a writ based on changing scientific evidence.	Implemented during the 83rd Legislative session via SB 344 to permit a convicted individual to file an application for a writ of habeas corpus to challenge a conviction based on scientific evidence that is now outdated or discredited by advances since the trial.
Innocence Commission
10. Formalize the current work of the Innocence Projects that receive state funding to provide further detail in the project's annual reports and distribute those reports to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Speaker of the House, and Chairs of the Senate Jurisprudence, House Corrections, House Criminal Jurisprudence, and Senate Criminal Justice Committees. Report input should be solicited from other innocence projects, interested bar associations, judicial entities, law enforcement agencies, prosecutor associations, and advocacy organizations.	Implemented during the 82nd Legislative session via HB 1754 dealing with requiring exoneration reports.
11. Provide a full-time equivalent staff position for the Task Force using the current appropriation or other grant funding to administer these responsibilities; contracts between the innocence projects and the Task Force on Indigent Defense should be amended to reflect the new administrator and additional responsibilities.	Implemented in 2011 via the Texas Office of Court Administration/Texas Indigent Defense Commission budget rider.

ELECTRONIC RECORDING OF INTERROGATIONS

The sole recommendation of the 2010 Timothy Cole Advisory Panel (TCAP) that was not implemented was the adoption of a statewide policy to record interrogations. The Commission continued the analysis of contributing factors to wrongful convictions in cases where individuals have been exonerated since January 1, 2010. The Commission found that false confessions continue to contribute to wrongful convictions. In cases where false confessions have resulted in wrongful convictions, electronic recording of the interrogation process can assist all interested parties in determining whether or not the interrogation was carried out in an appropriate manner and if it resulted in an accurate statement.

Currently the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure allows written statements of an accused as a result of a custodial interrogation to be admitted as evidence, provided the written statement contains the statutory warnings listed in Article 38.22. The statute also requires that oral and sign language statements be recorded in certain situations. However, audio and/or video recording under the existing statute is only required for a "statement" - not a custodial interrogation. No recording is required of interrogations where the suspect gives a written statement and Article 38.22, Section 3(c), dispenses with the recording requirement altogether if the oral or sign language "statement" contains assertions of facts or circumstances that are found to be true and which conduce to establish the guilt of the accused.

Research Highlights

Twenty-one states, plus the District of Columbia, have either a statute or rule requiring electronic recording of interrogations. Of the states with electronic recording requirements, 14 require recording for felony-related offenses. Figure 3 shows electronic recording requirements in each state.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Information on recording practices in Texas was collected through surveys of law enforcement agencies to collect law enforcement opinions and practices, criminal court judges, prosecutors, and defense attorneys to collect information on opinions and experience with cases in which an electronic recording of an interrogation was introduced as evidence. Appendix 1 provides the surveys and responses.

The majority of survey respondents in all categories responded that electronic recording of interrogations reduces the risk of false confessions. The majority also responded that electronic recordings will lead to better practices by law enforcement departments and provide training opportunities. Figure 4 shows the percentages and actual number ("n" value) of judges, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and law enforcement departments who do not currently record interrogations but responded that electronic recording is beneficial. Additionally, 92 percent of responding law enforcement departments who record reported that they already record interrogations for felony-related offenses.

TCERC Electronic Recording Judicial and Law Enforcement Surveys

The majority of judges, prosecutors, and defense attorneys responded that electronic recording of interrogations allows the defense to provide better client representation, allows the prosecution to build stronger cases, and allows judges and juries to have a better understanding of statements that were made by the individual during the interrogation. Additionally, these respondents agreed that electronic recording can assist in determining if an individual's statement was made freely and voluntarily.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

As shown in Figure 5, sixty-eight percent (n=580) of the 850 law enforcement agencies responding to the survey reported that they electronically record interrogations in some capacity. Of the respondents who indicated that they record, 267 (46%) were from departments with 10 or fewer sworn officers, and 313 (54%) were from departments with 11 or more sworn officers. These survey findings indicate that recording practices are already implemented by many departments of varying sizes in the state.

TCERC Electronic Recording Law Enforcement Survey

The survey responses show that the cost for recording equipment was relatively inexpensive depending on the type of equipment used by the department. The median cost reported by the departments was $5,000, and 79 percent of respondents reported that they were purchased using their department's general funds.

The majority of all respondents, including the departments who do not currently record, agreed that electronically recording custodial interrogations will increase the public's trust in the justice system. Recording interrogations allows for more transparent communication between law enforcement and the public. Furthermore, 64 percent of all respondents indicated they believe that electronically recording interrogations reduces the risk of false confessions and, ultimately, the number of convictions of innocent individuals.

Recommendations

The Commission recommends that the Legislature consider the following proposals regarding electronic recording of interrogations:

I. Require either audio or audiovisual electronic recording of interrogations by law enforcement agencies when investigating all felony cases.
II. Require recording to begin when the suspect enters the interrogation room.
III. Enforce compliance with new recording requirements by permitting the admission of an unrecorded statement only if the judge finds good cause for the failure to electronically record the statement, and establishing a presumption that an unrecorded statement is inadmissible as evidence if the judge finds that no good cause exception applies.

FALSE ACCUSATIONS AND JAILHOUSE INFORMANT REGULATION

In its 2010 report, The Timothy Cole Advisory Panel (TCAP) did not make recommendations on the topic of false accusations; however, it did include specific recommendations for future research pertaining to jailhouse informant testimony. The TCAP emphasized the lack of safeguards for defendants when a jailhouse informant testifies against them. The TCAP also identified a need for more specific guidelines and policies.

Texas became one of the first states to regulate jailhouse informant testimony with the passage of Senate Bill 1681, in 2009, which amended Chapter 38 of the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure. The law prohibits convicting a defendant based on testimony of an individual incarcerated in the same correctional facility with the defendant unless the testimony is corroborated by other evidence connecting the defendant to the offense. In the seven years that SB 1681 has been in effect, there have not been any reported cases of wrongful convictions based on false jailhouse informant testimony.

Research Highlights

The Commission found that 11 states, including Texas, have reforms in place regulating informant procedures. Figure 6 shows informant regulation reforms by state.

Innocence Project: Informant regulation recommendations & National Landscape and Relevant State Statutes and Rules

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Several states have taken action on pretrial discovery practices related to informants. In addition to the corroboration of an informant's testimony, the State Bar of Texas recently published "Texas Criminal Jury Charges," which is a resource that contains a form jury instruction on the corroboration requirement mandated by Article 38.075. The form jury instruction can be found under Appendix 2. This form instruction tracks the statute by informing the jury that a defendant cannot be convicted solely on the testimony of an in-custody informant. To support a conviction, the jury is instructed that the in-custody informant's testimony must be corroborated with evidence that tends to connect the defendant with commission of the crime. While this instruction calls the jury's attention to the informant's testimony, it does not provide any specific information regarding the circumstances surrounding the informant's situation.

Illinois imposes a special disclosure procedure related to informants that includes: the complete criminal history of the informant; any promise, deal or benefit that has been offered and has been made or will be made in the future; other cases in which the informant has testified and the incentives he/she received in exchange for that testimony (if any); and any other information relevant to the informant's credibility. Oklahoma and Nebraska have enacted similar statutes.

Of the Texas exoneration cases reviewed by the Commission, 33 percent of the 51 non-drug related exonerations had false accusation as a contributing factor to the wrongful conviction of the individual. The majority of these exonerations were child sex abuse and murder cases. Two of the exoneration cases involved jailhouse informant testimony.

Dr. Alexandra Natapoff, Associate Dean for Research at Loyola Law School in Los Angeles, informed the Commission that it is her belief that jailhouse informants are incentivized witnesses, which she believes makes them potentially highly unreliable. To ensure that the judge, jury, and defense have an accurate representation of the jailhouse informant's situation and to properly weigh the credibility of their testimony, Dr. Natapoff stated that it is important for all relevant information pertaining to the informant be shared with the judge, jury, and defense.

Given the nature of jailhouse informants, the Commission finds it important that information about the informant be shared with the judge, jury, and defense, including his or her criminal history as well as criminal charges that were dismissed or reduced as part of a plea bargain. Currently, jurors are not required to be informed about the informant's previous charges that may have been dismissed or modified as part of a plea bargain in unrelated cases. Permitting the admissibility of the informant's complete history would not result in an expense to either party and would likely increase transparency.

Jailhouse Informant Tracking Procedures

According to Dr. Natapoff, the majority of jurisdictions do not have a process to track the number of informants used or the benefits that are offered in exchange for testimony.[2] She stated that this information is important to the proper evaluation of the validity of the testimony being provided. A clear picture of an informant's testimony history would provide information to all parties in the case.

Two district attorney offices with written policies and procedures related to the tracking of jailhouse informant information have been identified: Los Angeles County District Attorney and Tarrant County Criminal District Attorney. The Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office has a legal policies manual that includes a chapter on jailhouse informant procedures, which explains the official process to request to use a jailhouse informant through a written application. See Appendix 3 for the manual's chapter on jailhouse informant information tracking.

The Tarrant County Criminal District Attorney's (TCCDA) Office implemented a jailhouse informant procedure effective June 10, 2016. Tarrant County established a central index of jailhouse informants, which is regularly maintained and stored in an existing case management system. TCCDA's procedure outlines a list of items that the Assistant District Attorney (ADA) should consider as part of the determination of whether or not to use the informant. Disclosure requirements, such as requiring the prosecutor to make a written disclosure to the defense attorney if a jailhouse informant is to be used, are included. Specific disclosures the ADA is mandated to make to the defense include the informant's criminal history and proposed offers and benefits sought by the informant. If the jailhouse informant testifies, this information is to be sent to the ADA responsible for the maintenance of the Jailhouse Informant index and database. See Appendix 4 for the complete TCCDA Jailhouse Informant Procedure.

While Tarrant County uses an existing case management system, an alternative could be the use of a spreadsheet as a tracking system. Depending on the resources available, the procedures and information tracking system used can vary to meet the needs of each prosecutor's office. Additional staff time would be required for the implementation and maintenance of a jailhouse informant database tracking system; however, no extensive cost has been identified to implement this procedure. The goal of implementing a jailhouse informant tracking system would be to provide transparency.

Recommendations

The Commission recommends that the Legislature consider the following proposals regarding false accusations and jailhouse informant regulation:

I. Require prosecutor offices to have written policies on tracking and disclosure of impeaching information on jailhouse informants.
    - This requirement would clarify the types of information that must be disclosed under the Michael Morton Act including: benefits provided in exchange for jailhouse testimony, complete criminal history, other cases in which the jailhouse informant testified, the benefits provided in those cases, and other evidence related to credibility.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

II. Permit the admissibility of jailhouse informants' complete criminal history, including criminal charges that were dismissed or reduced as part of a plea bargain.
    - Currently, only final felony convictions or crimes of moral turpitude are admissible to impeach a jailhouse informant, and jurors do not hear about previous charges that may have been dismissed or modified in as part of a plea bargain.

III. Require prosecutor offices to establish an internal system to track the use of jailhouse informants including, but not limited to, cases in which the jailhouse informant offered testimony and the benefits provided in those cases.

FAULTY EYEWITNESS IDENTIFICATION

The 2010 Timothy Cole Advisory Panel (TCAP) produced five recommendations directly related to eyewitness identification procedures. All five recommendations have since been adopted and implemented to some extent. (Please refer to the TCAP Review section of this report for more detail.) House Bill 215, 82nd Legislature, implemented four of the five recommendations by adding Article 38.20 to the Code of Criminal Procedure. Article 38.20 requires Texas law enforcement agencies to adopt written eyewitness identification policies based on best practices. A law enforcement agency may adopt the model policy developed by the Bill Blackwood Law Enforcement Management Institute of Texas (LEMIT) which was released in December 2011. An overview of the LEMIT model policy can be found in Appendix 5. Although the TCAP made progress in studying faulty eyewitness identification procedure reforms, the Commission believes that additional reforms are necessary.

Research Highlights

The Commission found that 19 states, including Texas, regulate eyewitness identification procedures in some capacity. Figure 7 shows which states currently provide regulation of eyewitness identification procedures.

Innocence Project: States that Achieved Eyewitness Identification Reform, and Relevant State Statutes and Rules

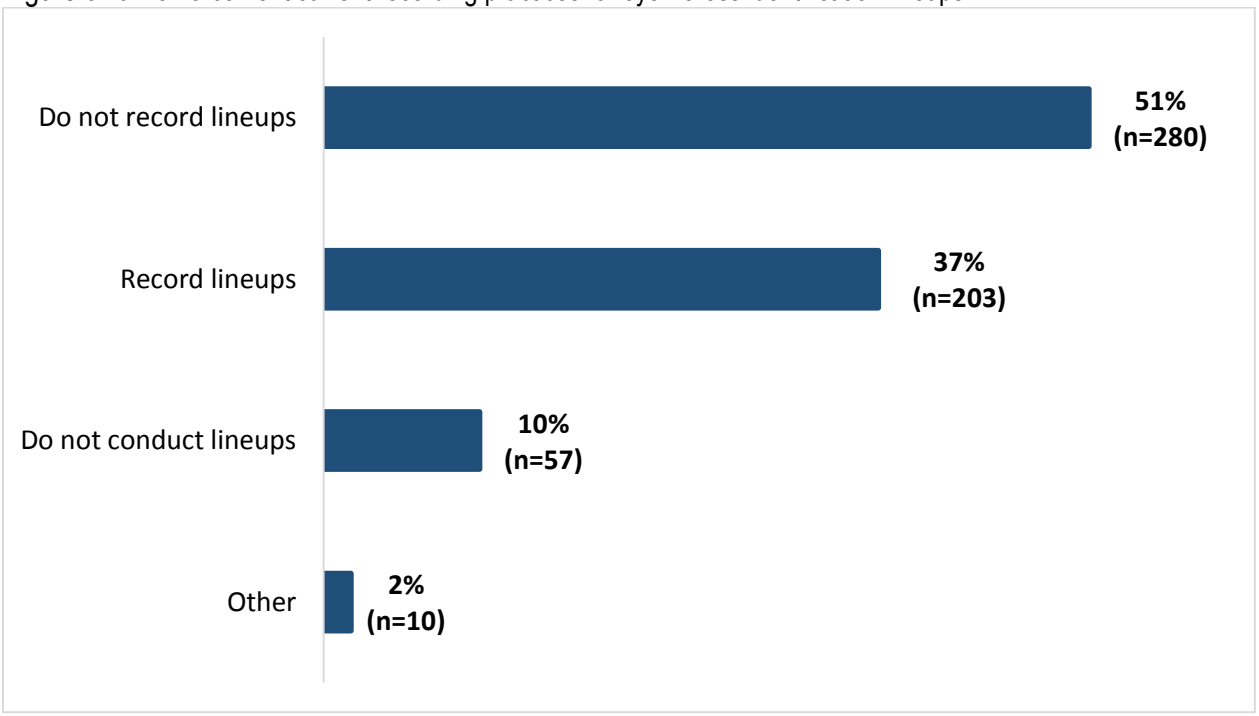
AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Commission's review of Texas exoneration cases found that 39 percent of the 56 non-drug related cases had faulty eyewitness identification as a contributing factor, making it the leading contributing factor for wrongful convictions since January 1, 2010. Robbery and sexual assault are the top two offense types in the exoneration cases for which faulty eyewitness identification is a contributing factor.

Texas law enforcement agencies are required by statute to adopt either the LEMIT model policy or their own policy. The LEMIT model policy recommends that the identification procedure be documented in full. Video documentation is preferred; however, an audio recording is an alternative option. The LEMIT model policy has the benefit of being reviewed and potentially updated annually, which ensures that the policy and related training materials incorporate current best practices and research findings. The Commission does not anticipate that the LEMIT model policy would generate additional expenses to law enforcement and should contribute to the criminal justice system's continuing efforts to provide relevant continuing education and enhanced best practices in the area of eyewitness identification.

The Commission polled Texas law enforcement agencies on their current recording practices of lineups for eyewitness identifications. Of the 550 respondents who record, 37 percent record the lineup identification process. Figure 8 shows the survey responses on law enforcement practices for eyewitness identification lineups.

Figure 8 Law enforcement current recording practices for eyewitness identification lineups



TCERC Electronic Recording Law Enforcement Survey

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The TCAP recommended that training on eyewitness procedures be integrated into the curricula of the LEMIT and the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement (TCOLE). After Texas' law was enacted in 2011, the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) completed a comprehensive review of eyewitness identification research and produced a list of recommendations on how courts and law enforcement can increase the accuracy and utility of eyewitness identifications. The first recommendation of the NAS report is to train all law enforcement officers in eyewitness identification. The recommendation suggests that all law enforcement agencies provide their officers with training that covers the variables that affect vision and memory, practices for minimizing contamination, and effective eyewitness identification protocols.

Given recent findings and the research that helped produce the NAS's report recommendations, the Commission strongly agrees that training for officers on eyewitness identification procedures should be required. Per Texas Occupations Code §1701.351, peace officers are required to complete at least 40 hours of continuing education every 24-month unit of a training cycle. Up to eight hours of continuing education under this section covers recent changes to laws of this state and the United States related to peace officers. Because of the existing training requirement for peace officers, the Commission does not anticipate a substantial cost to implement training for officers on eyewitness identification procedures. Educating officers will not only better prepare them to serve their community, but also positively impact the criminal justice system by continuously improving law enforcement practices.

The NAS report states that the level of confidence at the time the witness makes a selection may be more accurate than at the time the witness makes an identification at trial. The report also indicates that confidence levels articulated after an initial identification is made are subject to bias. Dr. Sandra Guerra Thompson, Alumnae College Professor of Law and Criminal Justice Institute Director at the University of Houston Law Center, informed the Commission of the importance of accurate and precise documentation of the identification of a suspect by the witness at the time the identification happens. This is referred to as the witness' confidence level. Dr. Thompson spoke about how an identification expressed at trial could appear to have been made at a stronger confidence level, because the witness had previously identified the suspect; however, this does not mean that the initial identification was made at a strong confidence level. Therefore, the judge and jury must be informed about the level at which the first identification was articulated.

Documenting a witness's initial confidence level and contemporaneous statements made at the time of the initial identification are already a part of the LEMIT model policy. The LEMIT model policy instructs the officer conducting the photograph or live lineup that if the witness responds that an individual is the person they saw, then the officer should immediately ask the witness to explain in their own words how certain they are.

The Commission agrees it is important to provide jurors with the details of prior identifications made of the suspect by the witness when an in-court identification is made. Jurors should be aware of the manner the procedure was conducted, as well as the witness' confidence level. Documenting this additional information and providing it at trial is not expected to result in extensive additional costs. The disclosure of this information will not only allow for better judgment on the jurors' part, but provide law enforcement officials and our courts with more accurate information regarding eyewitness identification.

Recommendations

The Commission recommends that the Legislature consider the following proposals regarding faulty eyewitness identification:

I. Require training for law enforcement officers on eyewitness identification procedures.
II. Require making juries aware of prior identifications of the suspect by the witness when an in-court identification is made. This includes:
    a. The manner in which the procedure was conducted; and
    b. The witness' confidence level.
III. Require law enforcement agencies to adopt the Bill Blackwood Law Enforcement Management Institute of Texas Model Policy.

FORENSIC SCIENCE PRACTICES

The Commission identified the significant increase in drug-related exonerations from 2014 to 2016 as a topic for research. The Commission worked with the Texas Forensic Science Commission (TFSC) to identify issues and develop recommendations in the area of forensic science practices.

The Texas Legislature created the Texas Forensic Science Commission in May 2005 through Article 38.01 of the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure to investigate professional negligence and misconduct that would affect the results of a forensic analysis completed by an accredited laboratory. In 2013, the 83rd Legislature clarified the scope of TFSC's jurisdiction by passing Senate Bill 1238, which allowed the TFSC to investigate complaints regarding forensic disciplines that were not subject to accreditation under Texas law. In 2015, the 84th Legislature again expanded the scope of TFSC's responsibilities by transferring the Texas' Crime Laboratory Accreditation Program oversight from the Texas Department of Public Safety through Senate Bill 1287.

Research Highlights

Figure 9 shows the increase in drug-related exonerations since 2010. Of the drug-related exonerations, 89 percent came from Harris County. The primary contributing factor to the wrongful convictions was false and/or misleading forensic evidence.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The National Registry of Exonerations

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In 2014, the Harris County District Attorney's Office's Conviction Integrity Unit identified a problem with drug-related cases. When an individual was detained and suspected of having an alleged illegal substance in their position, officers would test the substance with a drug field test kit. If the result showed that a controlled substance was present, the suspect would be detained and taken into custody. This substance would be collected and handed over to the crime laboratory. Due to the length of time needed for the evidence to be processed, many individuals accepted plea bargains prior to testing of the substance by a crime laboratory. Testing in these cases was a lower priority for the laboratories and further delayed once a guilty plea had been made. Consequently, notifications regarding the inaccurate field test results were sent out after the individual had accepted a plea bargain—often after the sentence had been completed. After the problem was identified, these cases began to be reviewed by a contract attorney for the State, and the Harris County Public Defender's Office began to locate and inform individuals who had been convicted for an offense based on the incorrect field test.

One of the primary issues regarding forensic science practices identified in drug-related exonerations is the inaccuracy of drug field tests. Because of the questionable reliability of these kits and the arrests made based on their results, it is considered a best practice for crime labs to complete testing of substances in all drug cases, regardless of the field test results. Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) crime laboratories report that they already test substances collected for all cases, including those in which the individual entered a plea before the laboratory results were available. The estimated cost of requiring all crime labs to test substances on pled cases is unknown; however, most laboratories reported that the jurisdictions for which they perform testing do not accept pleas for drug cases based on field tests administered by officers. A confirmatory laboratory report is needed. Despite potential additional costs in implementing this practice, requiring laboratory testing of all drug field tests will reduce the risk of wrongfully arresting and convicting an individual of being in possession of a controlled substance.

In addition to testing all substances that come from drug field tests, it is also necessary to determine the reliability of drug field tests. Additionally, any individual involved in the collection and processing of evidence should be properly trained. From law enforcement officers to crime scene investigators, proper collection and testing of evidence procedures should be followed. A review of these practices is needed to assure the reliability of the evidence used in our courts to prosecute individuals. Although the cost of determining the reliability of drug field tests and providing training to law enforcement officers and crime scene investigators is unknown, implementing these practice improvements would reduce the risk for error.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Recommendations

The Commission makes the following recommendations regarding forensic science practices:

I. Encourage the Texas Forensic Science Commission to investigate and consider promulgating policies regarding the use of drug field tests used by law enforcement agencies. This includes the following:
    a. Evaluate the kits' quality, accuracy and reliability.
    b. Identify any problem with the kits.
    c. Investigate if officers are trained on how to use and interpret the kits.
        i. If officers are trained, determine the adequacy of the training.
        ii. If officers are not trained, require training on how to use and interpret the kits.

II. Encourage the Texas Forensic Science Commission to investigate and consider promulgating policies regarding the process of crime scene investigations. This includes the following:
    a. Evaluate standard procedures followed when processing a scene.
    b. Evaluate how crime scenes are processed and the quality of the work.
    c. Investigate what training is provided to crime scene investigators.
    d. Investigate if continuing education is required and/or provided and if so:
        i. Evaluate the capacity of the training; and
        ii. Evaluate the quality of the training.

IV. Recommend that crime labs in all cases moving forward complete testing of substances in all drug cases regardless of the results of a drug field test, and that crime labs go back through previous cases in which the collected substance was not confirmed by lab testing.

CASE STUDY: Christopher Scott and Claude Simmons' Exoneration

The Crime

On the night of April 6, 1997, Alonzo Aguilar and his wife Celia Escobedo were at a duplex in Dallas, Texas. While at the duplex, Escobedo fell asleep watching television. In the early morning hours of April 7, 1997, Escobedo was awakened by a loud noise. When she woke up, Escobedo saw a male intruder she did not know standing in front of her, pointing a gun at her and demanding money. During this encounter, Escobedo moved a pager that was clipped to the collar of her T-shirt to her waistband. In response, the intruder reacted immediately by frisking Escobedo and grabbing her pager. The intruder then began searching other rooms in the duplex.

Meanwhile, another unknown armed man had also entered the duplex and demanded money from Aguilar. This second intruder searched Aguilar's pockets and stole an unknown amount of cash. Shortly thereafter, the first intruder shot and killed Aguilar. Although not originally reported to the police during the initial investigation, Escobedo later claimed that Aguilar was shot and killed when the first intruder became startled while sexually assaulting her.

The Investigation

During the early stages of the investigation, law enforcement obtained descriptions of the suspects from Escobedo, then immediately broadcast the descriptions on the police radio. A short time later, a police officer driving in an unmarked car a couple of blocks away from the crime scene heard the broadcast. That officer then noticed a parked car with two black male occupants who fit the descriptions of the two suspects. The two suspects, later identified as Christopher Scott and Claude Simmons, got out of the car and entered a nearby house. The officer reported this sighting to other investigating officers and requested assistance.

Several backup officers arrived at the house and attempted to contact the people inside. Approximately 45 minutes later, Simmons opened the door and came outside. Eventually, everyone inside the house came out. Police questioned everyone including Scott. Scott and two other suspects were handcuffed and transported to the Dallas Police Department's Crimes Against Persons Division (CAPERS) for additional questioning.

Scott claims that once he was brought to CAPERS, he was told that an eyewitness to the Aguilar murder was being brought to the unit to look at him. Investigative reports conflict with this claim, instead describing the "Escobedo - Scott" encounter at CAPERS as a sheer coincidence. While Scott was sitting in the waiting room, Escobedo entered and immediately identified Scott as the person who shot Aguilar. However, Escobedo never identified Scott in a photo lineup.

Scott was arrested for an outstanding warrant and for the capital murder of Aguilar and transported to jail. On the way to the jail, Scott informed officers that he believed Don Michael Anderson had committed the murder and that he had heard that Anderson had robbed the same place two nights before the murder. This information was included in the officer's investigative report as an admission by Scott as to the identity of his accomplice.

During the arrest, Scott's clothes were confiscated as evidence and his hands were tested for gunshot residue. No blood was discovered and all testing conducted revealed negative results for gunshot residue.

During the three weeks following the murder, Simmons voluntarily went to the police department on three separate occasions and cooperated by answering questions. On his last visit, Simmons agreed to have his photograph taken for inclusion in a photo lineup. Escobedo was shown the photo lineup. When she examined the photo lineup, which included photos of both Simmons and Anderson, Escobedo spent approximately two hours looking at it before she concluded she was unable to identify either individual. Then, Escobedo met with a victim's liaison for approximately 15 minutes; shortly thereafter, she identified Simmons in the photos presented. It was at that time that Escobedo told police officers that Simmons was the man that sexually assaulted her during the murder. Simmons was then arrested.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

During the investigation, several witnesses—including law enforcement agents—identified Anderson and another male, Alonzo Hardy, as the individuals who murdered Aguilar. Police officers attempted to interview Anderson several times. After Anderson refused to cooperate, he was no longer considered a suspect.

The Trial

Scott's jury trial was held first, followed by Simmons' jury trial a week later. The only substantive evidence presented at Scott's trial was Escobedo's eyewitness identification. No mention of Anderson and Hardy was made by the defense. Scott was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to life in prison.

During Simmons' jury trial, the defense requested a continuance based on a recently disclosed hand written note from a police officer that implicated Anderson and Hardy in the crime. The trial court judge—the same judge who presided over Scott's trial—denied the request and proceeded with trial. During the trial, Escobedo provided eyewitness testimony identifying Simmons as the person who sexually assaulted her and killed her husband.

The defense then sought to introduce evidence to prove Anderson and Hardy were the men who killed Aguilar. Among the evidence proffered was testimony from Anderson's ex-girlfriend, Ellen Ellison, regarding inculpatory statements Anderson made to her establishing that he shot and killed Aguilar. According to Ellison, Anderson had tears in his eyes when he confessed to her. He also told her that he never meant to do it—instead he only shot at Aguilar after Aguilar shot his accomplice Hardy in the arm and turned to shoot at Anderson. Finding Ellison's testimony to be inadmissible hearsay, the trial court refused to admit it before the jury. After six minutes of deliberation, the jury found Simmons guilty of capital murder. Since the State did not seek the death penalty, Simmons was sentenced to life in prison.

The Post-Conviction Innocence Investigation

Post-conviction innocence claims for both Simmons and Scott were investigated by students at The University of Texas at Arlington Innocence Network, students at The University of Texas School of Law Actual Innocence Clinic, the Dallas County District Attorney's Office Conviction Integrity Unit, the Dallas County Public Defender's Office, and the Dallas Police Department. While being interviewed by students and attorneys, Hardy confessed to his involvement in Aguilar's murder. Hardy also took a polygraph examination which showed no deception. During a deposition, Hardy corroborated his confession by providing information pertaining to physical evidence found at the crime scene. Meanwhile, both Scott and Simmons agreed to take polygraph examinations; neither result showed deception.

Additional witnesses that supported Scott's and Simmons' claims of innocence included Ellen Ellison, who the trial court judge did not allow to testify during Simmons' trial, and Blanchard (a/k/a "Blinky") Haggerty. Ellison stated that Anderson confessed to her what happened on the night of the murder. Specifically, Anderson told Ellison he went into the duplex and robbed a man and a woman. Anderson also told her that he shot Aguilar with a pistol he had taken from under Escobedo's bed. Finally, Ellison confirmed what Scott originally told the police—that she was in the car with Anderson two nights before Aguilar's murder, when Anderson robbed the people in the duplex where the murder subsequently occurred. "Blinky" Haggerty independently corroborated Anderson's confession. When he was interviewed by Dallas Police detectives, Haggerty admitted that he drove the car for Anderson and Hardy on the night of Aguilar's murder.

On March 3, 2010, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals granted relief to both Scott and Simmons on the grounds of actual innocence. On March 6, 2012, Anderson pled guilty and was sentenced to prison for his role in the crime.

CONCLUSION

Timothy Cole was one of many individuals who have served time in prison for crimes they did not commit. This Commission was comprised of experienced stakeholders devoted to preventing the incarceration of innocent people such as Mr. Cole. The time taken from innocent individuals and their families cannot be returned, but preventing such an event from happening to others is an important goal of our justice system. And it must be acknowledged that, if an innocent person is incarcerated, it means that the actual criminal remains at large, unpunished, and of continuing threat to society.

In this way, the incarceration of an innocent person deeply affects not only the individual, along with his or her family and loved ones, but also Texans and their communities as a whole. It is for this reason that the Timothy Cole Exoneration Review Commission submits these recommendations and urges their consideration by the 85th Legislature.

MEMBERS' ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

Samuel Bassett

Electronic recording of interrogations

Recommendation II: Electronic recording should be required when investigating all felony cases.

- Dissenting statement:
    - All criminal offenses, Class B Misdemeanor or above, should be recorded with audiovisual equipment absent a showing of good cause. The recommendation should not be limited to felonies as some misdemeanors have serious consequences (i.e. DWI, offenses involving findings of family violence).

Recommendation V: Recordings should be either audio or audiovisual formats.

- Dissenting statement:
    - Technology has advanced to a point where the cost differential between audio recordings and audiovisual recordings is negligible; therefore, audiovisual recording equipment should be used when recording all interrogations.

False Accusations and Jailhouse Informant Regulation

Senate bill 1681 has been in effect for seven years. This law requires some corroboration to convict an individual based on the jailhouse informant testimony. Though there have not been any new reported cases of wrongful convictions based on false jailhouse informant testimony since its passage, it should be noted that it takes many years to legally identify and remedy wrongful convictions and that the absence of reported cases at this time is not indicative of whether article 38.075 has sufficiently safeguarded defendants from false testimony from jailhouse informants.

Regarding the recommendations under this section of the report; all recommendations listed should remain as they are. An additional recommendation should be included under this topic area as well.

Concurring statement:

- The testimony of an informant who provides evidence against a defendant must be examined and weighed by the juror with greater caution and care than the testimony of an ordinary witness. Whether the informer's testimony has been affected by interest or prejudice against the defendant is for the juror to determine. Although Texas does not have uniform jury charges, the State Bar of Texas recently published "Texas Criminal Jury Charges," which is a resource that contains a form jury instruction on the corroboration requirement mandated by article 38.075. This instruction, however, does not provide any specific information regarding the circumstances surrounding the informant's situation nor does it provide information regarding how to properly weigh the credibility of the testimony.
- The suggested recommendation is as follows:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- The Commission recommends that all necessary information be provided in an instruction to the jury in order for them to consider the following: (1) whether the witness has received or hopes to receive anything (including pay, immunity from prosecution, leniency in prosecution, personal advantage, or vindication) in exchange for testimony; (2) the extent to which the informant's testimony is corroborated by other evidence; (3) the extent to which the details of the testimony could be obtained from a source other than the defendant; (4) any other case in which the informant testified or offered statements against an individual but was not called, and whether the statements were admitted in the case, and whether the informant received any deal, promise, inducement, or benefit in exchange for that testimony or statement; (5) whether the informant has ever changed his or her testimony; (6) the criminal history of the informant; and (7) any other evidence relevant to the informant's credibility. Reciprocal discovery was not an issue considered by this Commission. However, reciprocal discovery can play an important role in preventing wrongful convictions. According to the Texas Defender Service, 98% of states and the federal government require some form of reciprocal discovery in criminal cases.[4] In its 2010 report, the Timothy Cole Advisory Panel on Wrongful Convictions (TCAP) recommended that, "[t]he State of Texas should adopt a statewide discovery policy that is mandatory, automatic, and reciprocal, and requires either electronic access to or photocopies of materials subject to discovery." This recommendation was partially implemented by the legislature in 2013 with the passage of SB 1611, the Michael Morton Act. The Act, which passed with the support of Texas prosecutors, creates one of the most progressive discovery regimes in the United States. The Act, however, did not mandate reciprocal discovery. Thus, Texas remains the only state in the United States of America without reciprocal discovery.

In 2013, Texas Appleseed and the Texas Defender Service issued a report entitled Improving Discovery in Criminal Cases in Texas. These two non-profit agencies, dedicated to increasing fairness in the Texas criminal justice system, recommended in their report that Texas implement a discovery regime that provides for "reciprocal or mutual discovery obligations for the defense, within the boundaries of the defendant's constitutional rights." The recommendations of TCAP, Texas Appleseed, and Texas Defender Service are in line with the American Bar Association's Standards for Criminal Justice: Discovery and Trial by Jury, which also recommends reciprocal discovery.

Generally, through reciprocal discovery, a defendant is required to provide any books, papers, witness statements, or physical evidence in the defendant's possession that he intends to introduce as evidence at trial. Most jurisdictions also require the defendant to provide a witness list and provide advance notice if the defendant plans to introduce an alibi defense. The significance of this kind of information is obvious. If a prosecutor can verify a defendant's alibi or evidence prior to trial, there may be no need for a trial to take place. Under current Texas law, a defendant can spring evidence or an alibi defense in the middle of trial that the prosecution and law enforcement have no opportunity to verify. If the evidence or alibi is not believed by the jury, an innocent person could be convicted. For this very reason, reciprocal discovery is generally the law of the land throughout the United States.

The goal of the criminal justice system is to find the truth. By implementing a reciprocal discovery system and ending the current system of "trial by ambush," Texas will take a big step forward in preventing wrongful convictions and ensuring justice for all.

Dear Commission Members,

Thank you to my fellow Timothy Cole Exoneration Review Commission members and staff for your hard work during the interim.

Because no innocent person should be incarcerated, the Commission's recommendations deserve further consideration during the 85th Legislative Session. Since it is imperitive that we keep the process moving forward, I support the submission of these recommendations.

As the 85th Legislative Session approaches, I look forward to working with fellow legislators, the public and stakeholders to help end the incarceration of innocent people.

Sincerely,

2. Sample Jury Charge on Jailhouse Informant Testimony

Sample Jury Charge on Jailhouse Informant Testimony

Under Current Texas Law – Art. 38.075 Texas Code of Criminal Procedure

"Correctional facility" means a place designated by law for the confinement of a person arrested for, charged with, or convicted of a criminal offense. The term includes a municipal or county jail; a confinement facility operated by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice; a confinement facility operated under contract with any division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice; and a community corrections facility operated by a community supervision and corrections department.

You are the exclusive judges of the facts proved, of the credibility of the witnesses and of the weight to be given to the testimony, but you are bound to receive the law from the Court which is herein given to you and be governed thereby.

You are instructed that under our law a conviction cannot be had upon the testimony of a witness to whom the defendant made a statement against the defendant's interest during a time when the defendant was imprisoned or confined in the same correctional facility as the witness unless the jury first believes that the witness's testimony is true and that it shows the defendant is guilty of the offense charged against him, and even then you cannot convict unless the witness's testimony is corroborated by other evidence tending to connect the defendant with the offense charged, and the corroboration is not sufficient if it merely shows the commission of the offense, but it must tend to connect the defendant with its commission.

You are instructed that WITNESS A is a person who was imprisoned or confined in the same correctional facility as the defendant. With this in mind, you are further instructed that you cannot convict the Defendant upon the testimony of WITNESS A, unless you first believe that her testimony is true and shows the guilt of the Defendant as charged in the indictment, and then you cannot convict the Defendant unless WITNESS A's testimony is corroborated by other evidence tending to connect the Defendant with the offense charged. The corroboration is not sufficient if it merely shows the commission of an offense, but it must tend to connect the Defendant with its commission, and then from all the evidence, you must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the Defendant is guilty of the offense charged against him.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Now, if you find from the evidence that WITNESS A's testimony is true and shows the guilt of the Defendant as charged in the indictment, and that Witness A's testimony is not corroborated by other evidence tending to connect the Defendant with the offense charged, or that WITNESS A's testimony is untrue and does not show the guilt of the Defendant as charged in the indictment, and that Witness A's testimony is corroborated by other evidence tending to connect the Defendant with the offense charged, then in either case, or if you have a reasonable doubt thereof, you will acquit the Defendant.

You are instructed that one or more witnesses who were imprisoned or confined in the same correctional facility as the defendant cannot corroborate each other. Such corroborative evidence, if any, must be from some source other than said witnesses.

CHAPTER 19

JAILHOUSE INFORMANTS

19.01 INTRODUCTION

There is a critical need for consistency in the handling of jailhouse informants; the integrity of this office and the integrity of our system of justice depends upon it.

It is the policy of this office to strictly control the use of jailhouse informants as witnesses. Before a jailhouse informant may be used as a witness, strong corroborative evidence is required. This corroborating evidence must consist of more than the fact that the informant appears to know details about the crime thought to be known only to law enforcement.

Commentary

It has been the longstanding practice of the deputies in this office to view skeptically and with caution the proposed testimony of any county jail prisoner. No deputy has ever supposed that such testimony springs from the prisoner's sense of good citizenship or moral duty. On the contrary, a deputy district attorney is by virtue of training and experience altogether conscious of the self-interest of the jailhouse informant and actively mindful of the source, his background and his character. Further, since we are unalterably committed to obtaining the truth and seeking justice, the informant's information is viewed through the prism of our ethical mandate.

19.02 OFFICE POLICY

A jailhouse informant is a person in custody who receives a communication from another person in custody about a crime committed by the latter and who chooses to convey this information to authorities.

No jailhouse informant shall be called to testify to a defendant's oral statement, admission or confession unless strong evidence exists which corroborates the truthfulness of the informant.

A deputy wishing to use a jailhouse informant as a prosecution witness must obtain the prior approval of the Jailhouse Informant Committee. The Committee is comprised of the Chief Deputy, the Assistant District Attorneys and Bureau Directors. All requests to use a jailhouse informant must be submitted, in writing, to the Chief Deputy through the chain of command.

A written request to use a jailhouse informant must include:

- A brief description of the crime and the name and criminal history of the informant;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

MO-REP-21-1608-F-001410

- The evidence being offered by the informant;
- A description of the corroborating evidence;
- An analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of the case if the informant is not used; and
- Any benefit promised to the informant by any member of law enforcement or any employee of the District Attorney's Office for the information offered on the pending case.

The Habeas Corpus Litigation Team maintains a Central Index of jailhouse informants who have offered to be, or who have been used as witnesses. The trial deputy must contact the Deputy-in-Charge of the Habeas Corpus Litigation Team (HABLIT) and determine whether the informant has offered to be a witness in the past or has testified in any prior case. The information shall be included in the deputy's written memorandum.

The Head Deputy will forward the memorandum with his/her recommendation to the appropriate Bureau Director. If the Bureau Director agrees with a recommendation to use a jailhouse informant as a witness, the Bureau Director will forward the request to the Chief Deputy for consideration by the Jailhouse Informant Committee. The trial deputy may be asked to appear before the committee to explain his/her reasons why the request should be approved.

19.02.01 Trial Deputy Responsibilities if Approval is Granted

If the Committee approves the use of a jailhouse informant, the trial deputy must comply with the requirements of Penal Code §§ 1127a, 1191.25, and 4001.1.

If the informant testifies, the trial deputy must notify HABLIT.

Although Penal Code § 4001.1, if strictly applied, pertains only to "in custody informants" held within a "correctional institution," it is office policy that its provisions apply to any custodial setting (i.e., jail or prison).

19.02.02 Prohibition of Monetary Payments

Penal Code § 4001.1 prohibits law enforcement from making monetary payments to in custody informants in excess of $50 in exchange for testimony. This limitation does not apply to funds expended for witness protection, relocation, or travel expenses.

19.03 FABRICATION OF EVIDENCE BY JAILHOUSE INFORMANTS

Should any deputy acquire any information that a jailhouse informant is attempting to fabricate or has fabricated evidence, the deputy shall immediately forward a memorandum setting forth all pertinent details to HABLIT. E-mail or fax transmission is acceptable. This information will be included in the Central Index maintained by HABLIT. It is a continuing responsibility of all deputy district attorneys to ensure that any attempt to falsify evidence is readily known to any of our deputies considering the use of the jailhouse informant involved.

19.04 CRIMINAL CASE INFORMATION SECURITY

The flow of confidential information is critical to operating successfully day to day. Any policy on the disclosure of information must balance the need for security and the need for the efficient exchange of information among the people in this office, from this office to other law enforcement agencies, and to the members of the public. To that end, information on criminal cases being handled by this office shall be disclosed, over the telephone, only as follows:

- If the caller is a deputy district attorney, member of law enforcement, or probation officer personally known to the employee possessing the requested information, and the caller has a need to know the information, the information should be disclosed;
- If the caller is not personally known to the employee possessing the requested information, and claims to be a deputy district attorney, member of law enforcement, or probation officer, the employee possessing the information must request and receive a call-back verification number from the caller. If the number is verified, and there is a need to know the information, the information should be disclosed;
- If the caller is seeking information which is generally available to the public (e.g., time and location of a court appearance), that information should be given;
- Under no circumstances should the names, addresses or telephone numbers of witnesses be disclosed over the telephone; and
- Detailed information or prosecution strategy on a case should never be discussed over the telephone. Only the bare minimum facts, on a verified need-to-know basis, should be disclosed telephonically.

19.04.01 File Notations

Any employee who, in compliance with these guidelines, telephonically discloses information of a non-public nature must make a notation of what was disclosed and to whom it was disclosed. This notation should be placed in the case file or, if the file is not accessible, sent in written form to the deputy district attorney handling the case.

If an employee has any doubt about the identity of the caller, the validity of the call-back number, or whether the caller has a need to know, the employee should immediately contact the Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Investigation.

Commentary

It is essential that we prevent breaches of office security through the inadvertent disclosure of confidential information to persons not authorized to receive such information. Strict compliance with this policy should ensure that such breaches do not occur.

19.05 PRESERVATION OF JAILHOUSE INFORMANT RECORDS

The following Superior Court order, issued on December 16, 1988, remains in effect:

TO [THE] DISTRICT ATTORNEY OF LOS ANGELES COUNTY:

You are hereby ordered to preserve all records of jailhouse informants who have been used or consulted by you or your agents while incarcerated from November 1, 1978 to the present until the further order of this court. This order includes, but is not limited to, all notes, memoranda, computer printouts, or any records of promises made, payments made, or rewards given to each such jailhouse informant. The order shall further include all records of the last known location of said informants, all records relating to the cell assignments of such informants within the Los Angeles County jail system and all memoranda describing in whole or in part such informants.

Dated: 12/16/88

Signed:
Judge of the Superior Court

4. Tarrant County Criminal District Attorney's Office Jailhouse Informant Procedures

Tarrant County Criminal District Attorney's Office
Jailhouse Informant Procedure

Effective June 10, 2016, the Tarrant County Criminal District Attorney's Office implements this Jailhouse Informant Procedure. As part of this procedure, the TCCDA will establish and maintain a central index of jailhouse informants. The central index will track jailhouse informant (JI) testimony as well as JI formal offers to give testimony or other information. The index will be maintained by the designated Informant ACDA who will be responsible for the JI database as well as any associated documents. This index/JI database is the confidential work product of the TCCDA.

For purposes of this procedure, a JI is defined as an incarcerated witness who claims to have been the recipient of an admission made by another inmate and who agrees to testify against that inmate, usually, although not necessarily, in exchange for some benefit.

Prior to using a JI's testimony or information at any stage in a criminal prosecution and regardless of any consideration or lack of consideration given to that JI, an ACDA must 1) request all information known about the JI from the designated ACDA and 2) consult with his or her court chief about the use of the JI.

As part of the determination whether to use the JI, the ACDA should consider the following non-exhaustive list:

a. The facts of the case in which the testimony is being contemplated for use;
b. The JI's criminal history;
c. Relevant information regarding the JI's current case;
d. Any known, or readily available, information about the JI's past cooperation with law enforcement or previous testimony;
e. Any JI information conveyed and maintained by the designated ACDA;
f. Asking the JI detailed questions regarding his previous offers of cooperation or testimony. If the JI is represented by counsel,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

these inquiries should be made in the presence of JI's counsel, or with counsel's permission;

g. Any known, or readily available, information about the JI's mental health;
h. The specific evidence to be offered by the JI;
i. How evidence corroborates the JI's statement;
j. What verification exists that the JI and the defendant were housed in the same part of the jail, at the same time, or were otherwise capable of communicating with one another while in custody and how the JI came to be in the same location as the defendant and;
k. The strengths and weaknesses of the case if the informant is not used;
l. The proposed offer and benefit being sought by the JI; and
m. How the agreement impacts justice due the victim in the JI's case;
n. Results of any polygraph examination about the JI's statement(s).

Disclosure Requirements:

If the ACDA decides to use the JI, the ACDA must make a written disclosure to the defense attorney in the instant case and must also upload that information into the JI's pending case(s), if any. Disclosure to the defense is mandatory as soon as an agreement in principle is made with the JI.

That disclosure should include:

1. Any benefit the JI is receiving, including plea deals, letters to parole, offers to contact other law enforcement agencies, and anything else that could conceivably be interpreted as a benefit or consideration, including benefits provided to third parties in consideration of the JI's cooperation;
2. A summary of the JI's expected testimony or, when available, a copy of the record/transcript made of any sworn proffers or statements;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

MO-REP-21-1608-F-001415

3. A detailed summary of the JI's criminal history, or a copy of the informant's TCIC/NCIC* (*if disclosed pursuant to a protective order);
4. The exact nature of any deal reached with the JI for his/her testimony or, if no benefit has been, or will be conveyed to the witness, a written recitation of that fact;
5. Information regarding any prior testimony given by the JI on behalf of law enforcement and/or any known prior offers to testify on behalf of law enforcement. If a confirmed Tarrant County case exists where the JI testified on behalf of the State, the ACDA should also make reasonable efforts to obtain, and turn over to the defense, a copy of the relevant portion of that transcript;
6. Any discussions with federal or out-of-county prosecutors or the JI's defense attorney and relating to the agreement, when a JI's pending case originates from another county or the federal system.
7. Gang affiliation, if any;
8. Any information regarding the mental health status or history of the JI (only under a protective order);
9. All known information about the JI's current case, including offense reports, digital media, or anything else in the State's possession; and
10. A copy of the JI's Tarrant County Sheriff's Office jail records.

All agreements shall be entered into prior to the JI's testimony. In the unusual event that it may become necessary to deviate from this policy, any agreement reached after the JI testimony must be approved by the Criminal Division Chief. Any post-testimony agreement or deviation must be provided to the defendant's attorney in writing when the agreement or benefit is reached.

If, at any time, the ACDA received information that the JI has or is attempting to fabricate any evidence, the ACDA must fulfill all ethical obligations regarding disclosure of these facts.

JI Index and Database

If the JI testifies, the fact of his testifying along with any other relevant information regarding that testimony should be forwarded to the Informant ACDA responsible for the JI index and database, along with a copy of the disclosure and supporting documents given to defense counsel. Formal offers to testify should also be forwarded to the Informant ACDA for inclusion in the database regardless of whether the JI ultimately testifies.

Best Practices

ACDA's are encouraged to use the "5 P's" which constitute the best practices in using jailhouse informant testimony:

- Polygraph: Prior to entering into any agreement with a JI have him/her submit to a polygraph examination.
- Produce: Give immediate disclosure of the agreement to the defense counsel.
- Plea: Dispose of the JI's case prior to his or her testimony at trial.
- Proffer: Have the JI make a recorded, sworn proffer at the time of the disposition of the JI's case.
- Provide: Forward the details of the plea and contents of the sworn proffer to defense counsel.

5. Bill Blackwood Law Enforcement Management Institute of Texas (LEMIT) Model Policy

Model Policy on Eyewitness Identification

I. Purpose

The purpose of this model policy is to outline proper protocol for eyewitness identification procedures for photographic, show-up, and live lineup identifications which maximize the reliability of identifications, protect innocent persons, and establish evidence that is reliable and conforms to established legal requirements.

II. Policy

Eyewitness identifications are a significant component of many criminal investigations. The identification process must be carefully administered to minimize the likelihood of misidentifications. Moreover, constitutional safeguards must be observed in the process. The goal of reducing erroneous convictions can be furthered in many ways. Employing the most rigorous eyewitness identification methods is one way of doing this, but there are others. The eyewitness identification process is only one step in the criminal investigative process, albeit an important one. Corroborative evidence, for example, will lessen the impact of an erroneous eyewitness identification. The more other evidence that is available, the less risk there is of conviction based solely on erroneous eyewitness identification. There is no substitute for a competent and thorough criminal investigation.

This model policy was written to provide guidance on eyewitness identification procedures based on credible research on eyewitness memory and best practices designed not only to reduce erroneous eyewitness identification but also to enhance the reliability and objectivity of eyewitness identifications.

Evidence-based and best practices surrounding the collection and preservation of eyewitness evidence are addressed as are procedures to be employed where witnesses or victims are unable to read or write, are non-English speaking, or possess limited English language proficiency.

III. Procedural Guidelines

A. Definitions

1. Blind Procedure – A procedure wherein the person administering the live lineup or photo array does not know who the suspect is.
2. Blinded Photo Array Procedure – A procedure wherein the person who administers the photo array knows who the suspect is, but each photo is presented so that the administrator cannot see or track which photograph is being presented to the witness.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3. Folder Shuffle Method – A method of administering a photo array such that the administrator cannot see or track which photograph is being presented to the witness until after the procedure is completed. This method is employed when a blind procedure is not possible.

4. Fillers – Non-suspect photographs or persons. Fillers are selected to both fit the description of the perpetrator provided by the witness and to ensure that no individual or photo stands out.

5. Illiterate Person – An individual who speaks and understands English but cannot read and write in English.

6. Interpreter – An interpreter is a person who is fluent in English and the language of the witness or victim and who facilitates communication between two parties in two different languages. The term includes persons who facilitate communication with persons who are deaf, hearing impaired, or speaking impaired.

7. Live lineup – An identification procedure in which a group of persons is displayed to the witness or victim in order to identify or exclude the suspect.

8. Person with Limited English Proficiency – An individual who is unable to communicate effectively in English with a level of fluency that is typical of native English speakers. Such a person may have difficulty speaking, reading, or writing in English and includes persons who can comprehend English, but are physically unable to talk or write.

9. Photo Array – An identification procedure in which a series of photographs is displayed to the witness or victim in order to identify or exclude the suspect.

10. Sequential Live Lineup or Photo Array – An identification procedure in which the persons in the live lineup or the photographs in the photo array are displayed one by one (sequentially).

11. Show-up – An identification procedure in which a single suspect is shown to a victim or witness soon after the commission of a crime for the purpose of identifying or eliminating the suspect as the perpetrator.

12. Witness Certification Statement – A written statement that is read out loud to the witness or victim describing the procedures of the identification process.

B. Selecting the Best Identification Method

1. Photo arrays are preferred over other techniques because: (a) they can be controlled better, (b) nervousness can be minimized, and (c) they are easier to manage logistically.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

MO-REP-21-1608-F-001419

2. Because they involve multiple persons under relatively controlled circumstances, a properly conducted live lineup, like a properly conducted photo array, is preferable to a show-up.

3. Because they are highly suggestive, show-ups are vulnerable to challenges to their validity. Consequently, a show-up should be employed only where other indicia of guilt are present (e.g., suspect located relatively close in time and place to the crime).

4. Because witnesses may be influenced, however unintentionally, by cues from the person administering the procedure, a blind administrator should be used. This can be achieved through the use of a blind procedure or a blinded photo array procedure (e.g. the folder shuffle method).

5. Because research shows the sequential presentation of live lineups and photo arrays is less likely to result in misidentification and carry very little risk of increasing the likelihood of failure to identify the suspect, a sequential presentation should be used.

C. Selecting Fillers

All persons in the photo array or live lineup should be of the same sex and race and should be reasonably similar in age, height, weight, and general appearance. Ideally, the characteristics of the filler should be consistent with the description of the perpetrator provided by the witness(es). Where there is a limited or inadequate description of the perpetrator provided by the witness(es), where the description of the perpetrator differs significantly from the appearance of the suspect, where a witness has provided a highly detailed description, or where the witness's description of the perpetrator or the suspect has a highly distinctive feature, fillers should be chosen so that no person stands out in the live lineup or photo array.

D. Explaining that the Perpetrator May or May Not Be Present

Because witnesses may be under pressure to identify a suspect, they should be informed that the suspect may or may not be present in a live lineup or photo array and that the person presented in a show-up may or may not be the perpetrator.

E. Explaining that the Investigation will Continue

The administrator should also explain to the witness that the investigation will continue, regardless of whether an identification is made, as another way of alleviating pressure on the witness to identify a suspect.

F. Witness Contamination

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

MO-REP-21-1608-F-001420

Precautions must be taken to ensure that witnesses do not encounter suspects or fillers at any time before or after the identification procedure. Avoid multiple identification procedures in which the same witness views the same suspect more than once. When showing a different suspect to the same witness, do not reuse the same fillers from a previous live lineup or photo array shown to that witness. Witnesses should not be allowed to confer with each other before, during, or after the identification procedure. Ensure that no one who knows the suspect's identity is present during live lineup or photo array procedure. In some live lineups, exceptions must be made to allow for the presence of defense counsel.

G. Documenting the Procedure

In order to strengthen the evidentiary value of the identification procedure, it should be documented in full. Video documentation is the preferred method. Audio recording is the preferred alternative. If neither method is employed, then the reason for not video or audio recording should be documented.

IV. Sample Standard Operating Procedures

The procedures which follow have been designed to: (a) reduce erroneous eyewitness identifications, (b) enhance the reliability and objectivity of eyewitness identifications, (c) collect and preserve eyewitness evidence properly, (d) respect the needs and wishes of victims and witnesses, and (d) address the needs of witnesses with limited English proficiency, where applicable.

In order to choose among the various identification methods, a brief description of each method follows in order of most preferred method to least preferred. Once the appropriate method is selected, the administrator should go directly to the Sample Standard Operating Procedures for that particular method. In any given situation only set of Sample Standard Operating Procedures applies.

A. Descriptions of Eyewitness Identification Methods

1. Sequential, Blind Photo Array – photo arrays where the photographs are presented one at a time to the witness or victim by a person who does not know who the suspect is. This method requires a preparer who may be familiar with the case and an administrator who does not know the identity of the suspect.

2. Sequential, Blinded Photo Array – photo arrays where the photographs are presented one at a time to the witness or victim by a person who knows who the suspect is, but who takes steps (putting the photographs in folders and shuffling them) to avoid knowledge of which person the witness or victim is looking at. This method typically involves an administrator who is familiar with the case and knows who the suspect is.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3. Sequential Live Lineup – live lineups where the persons in the live lineup are presented one at a time to the witness or victim. This method requires a preparer who may be familiar with the case and an administrator who does not know the identity of the suspect.

4. Show-up – procedure where the witness or victim is presented with a single suspect and asked to identify whether that suspect is the perpetrator. This procedure can be carried out by any officer.

Tarrant County Criminal District Attorney's Office
Jailhouse Informant Procedure

Effective June 10, 2016,[1] the Tarrant County Criminal District Attorney's Office implements this Jailhouse Informant Procedure. As part of this procedure, the TCCDA will establish and maintain a central index of jailhouse informants. The central index will track jailhouse informant (JI) testimony as well as JI formal offers to give testimony or other information as required by Article 2.023 of the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure. The index will be maintained by the designated Informant ACDA who will be responsible for the JI database as well as any associated documents. This index/JI database is the confidential work product of the TCCDA.

For purposes of this procedure, a JI is defined as an incarcerated witness who claims to have been the recipient of an admission made by another inmate and who agrees to testify against that inmate, usually, although not necessarily, in exchange for some benefit.

Prior to using a JI's testimony or information at any stage in a criminal prosecution and regardless of any consideration or lack of consideration given to that JI, an ACDA must 1) request all information known about the JI from the Informant ACDA and 2) consult with his or her court chief about the use of the JI. If an ACDA receives an "Inquiry" from a JI offering to provide testimony or information but the ACDA decides not to contact the JI, the ACDA is not required to investigate the JI as outlined below. The ACDA is, however, still required to report such offer to the Informant ACDA for tracking of such offers and to make any appropriate disclosures to the defense.

As part of the determination whether to use the JI, the ACDA should consider the following non-exhaustive list:

a. The facts of the case in which the testimony is being contemplated for use;
b. The JI's criminal history;

Subject: FRA Program impacting critical funding

Members of the Missouri General Assembly,

On behalf of FosterAdopt Connect and the 13,000 children and families across the state that we serve, I ask that you support an agreement to extend Missouri's FRA program prior to the ending of this fiscal year.

Funding provided in Missouri's FY 2022 budget is vital to the health and safety of Missouri's children. Aspects of this critical funding will be restricted, withheld, or potential vetoed should the FRA program not be extended by July 1.

The funding you provided in the budget would us to provide, expand and enhance services that prevent children from entering care, help children in foster care find permanency, ensure that the families caring for these children are equipped with the training and resources to help children grow and thrive, and support youth as they transition out of foster care.

We are incredibly grateful for the support and commitment to Missouri's most vulnerable families and children that you demonstrated through the passage of the FY2022 budget. We ask that you continue your commitment by supporting an agreement to the FRA program.

So #4 of the 102 crossing projects listed for the next 5 years THE $1,000,000 IN BARRY COUNTY HAS NO $1,000,000 UNDER WHAT SAFETY FUNDS ARE TO BE USED FOR BEING MOST DANGEROUS FIRST. WHERE ARE THE 5 CROSSING NUMBERS TO BE DONE WHICH SHOULD BE A GIVEN?
BESIDES THE TWO TRAINS A DAY NEED 49 MPH SPEED LIMITS LIKE TURTLES NEED RUNNING SHOES. WHO CLOSES OUR ROADS FOR 2 TRAINS A DAY? $1,000,000 IS FIVE SETS OF GATES WITH $150,000 IN CHANGE OVER WITH PROPER OVERSIGHT.
NEW PLAN -- PUT GATES ON THE TWO TRAINS A DAY AND THE RAILROAD STOPS AND DROPS AT CROSSINGS.
THE BUBBLING IDIOTS JUST TOOK A SELIGMAN CROSSING THAT HAD BEEN INVENTORIED WRONG FOR OVER 50 YEARS AS A PRIVATE CROSSING ---PUT IN GATES ---LEFT THE ZERO VEHICLES A DAY TRAFFIC COUNT SO THE SAFETY RATING IS NOW 3,300 OF 3,306 PUBLIC CROSSINGS. WHERE'S THE PRICE TAG?

So #3 of the 102 crossing projects listed for the next 5 years has less than $30,000 (SOME CAN BE REUSED AND BOUGHT CHEAPER) parts needed. So the $250,000 estimate would be $220,000 installation costs. Pull up old crossing lights and masts which should be in the MANUAL OF UNIFORM TRAFFIC DEVICES PROPER PLACE TO START-- AUGER TWO HOLES FOR LARGER BASES-- PUT IN CANTILEVER BASES--SIT ON THE CANTILEVER ARMS-- REWIRE. OH, AND INSTALL THE TWO GUARDRAILS TO KEEP VEHICLES FROM HITTING THE LIGHT POLES THAT ARE MISSING NOW. Plus ROADGUARDS. Maybe another $20,000 for installation costs. $150,000 FREE.

Subject: FREE $150,000 RAILROAD SAFETY PLAN

Statewide Statewide NA 2021 Rail Complete a Statewide Highway-Railroad Grade Crossing Action Plan to meet FAST Act legislation requirements $150,000
Reason: To add a project to meet the federal requirement of completing the study.
Funding Source: FHWA Section 130 program funds $135,000; State Grade Crossing Safety Account funds, $15,000

SO WHO GETS THE $150,000 THAT WASTES A SET OF CROSSING GATES AT A DEATH TRAP RAILROAD CROSSING SOMEWHERE IN MISSOURI? JOEBOB AND CLEM FROM MODOT RAILROAD SAFETY WHO CAN'T EVEN KEEP 3,306 RECORDS BUT SHOW THEY ARE PAYING THEMSELVES $75,000 A YEAR IN THE STIP TO KEEP THE RECORDS? WHY IS THE STUDY (STUDIED TO FREAKING DEATH) NOT A FEDERAL OBLIGATION AND WHERE DOES THE LIABILITY GO?

MISSOURI RAILROAD SAFETY PLAN
1. DITCH THE OBVIOUSLY RAOLROAD BOUGHT FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION THAT IS TOO DUMB TO MAKE THEIR OWN RAILROAD SAFETY PLAN AND ONLY DOES FREE TRACK/TRAIN INSPECTIONS FOR THEIR RAILROAD BUDS. WHY DO WE HAVE TO PAY FOR VEHICLE INSPECTIONS AND RAILROADS DON'T?
2. OUTLAW OPERATION LIFESAVER AND THEIR JURY TAMPERING "LOOK AT STUPID KILLED/INJURED BY TRAIN" HIDDEN MESSAGE THAT IS ALWAYS GIVEN RIGHT AFTER THE RAILROAD PREVENTABLE DEATHS/INJURIES AND RIGHT BEFORE THE TRIALS. PRETTY OBVIOUS SINCE THAT IS THE ONLY TIME THEY CRAWL OUT.
3. HAVE RAILROADS HAVE SIGNALS AT ALL CROSSINGS SINCE IT IS THEIR TRAINS WITH SUCKY BRAKES AND NO STEERING GOING FASTER THAN THE NEEDED STOP SIGHT DISTANCE. DEFENSIVE DRIVING 101.
4. HAVE RAILROADS HAVE TRACK VIDEO MONITORS TO SEE PROBLEMS AHEAD AND GET THE TRAINS STOPPED IN TIME. PRETTY STUPID TO HAVE TRAIN VIDEO IN THE CABS WHERE IT IS TOO LATE ONE WOULD THINK.
5. REQUIRE THE RAILROAD CROSSING FLATNESS OF 30 FEET BOTH SIDES OF TRACKS +/- 3 INCHES AS DESIGN CALLS FOR.
6. WIDEN CROSSING SURFACES FOR SLICK ROAD FISH TAILS.
7. REQUIRE HIGH VISIBILITY LIGHT BARS ON ALL TRAIN CABS. LOOK AND SEE.
8. REQUIRE AIRBAGS ON FRONT OF TRAINS.
9. REQUIRE BETTER TRAIN BRAKING SYSTEMS. THOUSANDS OF SQUARE FEET UNDER TRAINS TO ADD MORE BRAKES.
10. RECOVER MILLIONS FROM THE RAILROADS FROM THE UNCONSTITUTIONAL NO BID PROCESS REQUIRED SYSTEM ALLOWED FOR DECADES.
11. NO TRAIN MOVEMENT IN FOG /HEAVY RAIN/HEAVY SNOW.
12. REQUIRE RAILROADS TO LIGHT UP THE RAILCARS SIDES OR HAVE PARKING LOT QUALITY STREET LIGHTS AT ALL THEIR CROSSING OF OUR ROADS.
13. REQUIRE RAILROADS TO CINDER CROSSING APPROACHES DURING PERIODS OF ICE/SNOW BEFORE THE TRAIN BOMBS ROLL..
14. REQUIRE RAILROADS TO STAGGER TRAINS AT MULTIPLE TRACK CROSSINGS WHERE ONE TRAIN DOESN'T HIDE THE OTHER.
15. REQUIRE DRUG/ALCOHOL TESTS ON TRAIN CREWS AFTER ALL COLLISIONS LIKE ALL CDL DRIVERS.
16. HAVE OUR POLICE SEIZE THE TRAIN VIDEO -- TRAIN BLACK BOX --SIGNAL BLACK BOX--AFTER COLLISIONS INSTEAD OF ALLOWING THE KILLER RAILROAD TO SEND THE EVIDENCE TO THE DUB STUDIO WHICH HAPPENS NOW.
17. HAVE OUR OWN VIDEO MONITORING OF CROSSINGS.
18. CHANGE THE MISSOURI SIGHT DISTANCE LAW FROM 50 FEET BEFORE TRACKS--250 FEET DOWN TRACKS WHICH IS LIKE 2 SECONDS REACTION TIME ON A 30 MPH ROAD AND 90 MPH TRAIN. MAKES THE MICKEY MOUSE SIGNS WRONG FOR THE MUTCD AND A DEATH TRAP. THERE ARE SIGHT CHARTS FOR NEEDED VISION/STOPPING DISTANCE (IN MISSOURI DRIVER'S LICENSE MANUAL). IF THE SIGHT LINES ARE GOOD FOR A 2 MPH TRAIN--SO BE A 2 MPH TRAIN SPEED.

So #3 of the 102 crossing projects listed for the next 5 years has less than $30,000 (SOME parts Could BE REUSED or BOUGHT CHEAPER)parts needed. So the $250,000 estimate would be $220,000 installation costs. Pull up old crossing lights and masts which should be in the MANUAL OF UNIFORM TRAFFIC DEVICES PROPER PLACE TO START--AUGER TWO HOLES FOR LARGER BASES-- PUT IN CANTILEVER BASES--SIT ON THE CANTILEVER ARMS--REWIRE. OH, AND INSTALL THE TWO GUARDRAILS TO KEEP VEHICLES FROM HITTING THE LIGHT POLES THAT ARE MISSING NOW. Plus ROADGUARDS. Maybe another $20,000. $200,000 FREE.

WITHOUT GATES ADDED THE #85 MOST DANGEROUS STAYS THE SAME.

So #6 of the 102 crossing projects listed for the next 5 years CAN BE VOIDED FOR YEARS UNTIL THE 842 CROSSINGS AHEAD OF IT GET CAUGHT UP. SAFETY FUNDS AREN'T SUPPOSED TO BE CHARITY FOR MOM AND POP RAILROADS. BESIDES ALL THAT IS NEEDED IS A TIMING CARD AND SET OF GATES WHICH WOULD BE LIKE $50,000. THE SURFACE IS THE RAILROADS BABY TO ROCK UNDER STATE STATUTES.
TWO TRAINS A DAY NEED 49 MPH SPEED LIMITS LIKE MR. CLEAN NEEDS A HAIRCUT.

Subject: FREE WEBSTER CO. CROSSING SAFETY FUNDS $770,000 TO $14,670,000

#2 AND #74 ARE THE SAME PROJECT SO IT IS $2,300,000 OR IS IT IS $16,200,000 (WEBSTER COUNTY $13,000,000) OR IS IT IS $10,357,239 (GRANT)? ROAD ALIGNMENTS AND GRADE SEPARATIONS ARE ROAD SAFETY/TRAFFIC FLOW NOT RAILROAD SAFETY. THE 9 CROSSING GATE UPGRADES NEEDED WOULD BE LIKE $1.530,000 LEAVING. $770,000 TO $14,670,000 FREE.

So there are 26 public crossings in the Federal Railroad (BOUGHT) Administration database listed for BNSF Thayer North IN WEBSTER COUNTY. THE THIEVERY BEGAN IN 2016 WHEN WE PAID BNSF $7,500 TO STEAL A PERFECTLY GOOD CROSSING GATE SYSTEM AND THREE SETS OF PERFECTLY GOOD CONCRETE CROSSING PANELS. BILLING DISAPPEARS IN 2017 FOR OUR FINAL COSTS. THEN DING BAT LAW CHANGES PREVENT US TAXPAYERS FROM SEEING THE THIEVERY CHARGES SINCE 2018. WHAT DOES MODOT HAVE TO HIDE?

Subject: Fw: 230,000 Denied Healthcare

When will the Television Stations and other Newspapers hold our State Government accountable? Areas of Missouri are devastated by the lack of "Adequate Healthcare", the boot-hill, the Ozarks, and lots of communities in rural Missouri. Healthcare being a prime premise of our "Rights as Citizens of Missouri". 53 Percent is what the People of Missouri indicated was important to the Majority when passing the additional "Healthcare Coverage" for the most destitute among our Citizens, and yet our "Elected Official" refuse to defer to the "Will of The People".

Kansas City Star headline, "Funds to Expand Missouri Medicaid Blocked", why if it is the will of the People of Missouri?
Democracy no longer exists in Missouri. Once again the Government of Missouri defies the "Will Of The People" by a voter approved plan. How can we govern ourselves if our elected officials repeatedly and consistently overturn the tenets of our Democracy and the majority of the will of the People. We cannot exist as a Democracy. Democracy has failed the Will of the Electorate does not exist in Missouri. We live in a "Failed State".

The Constitution of the United States begins with the phrase, "promote the general Welfare". The definition of "Welfare" is a noun meaning "Health, Happiness, and Good Fortune" with the emphasis on "Health" being first in the list. The Declaration of Independence indicates that citizens are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness_____that to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed,____That whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute New Government.

Rep. Justus,

Expedia Group appreciates your efforts to find a compromise that is intended to enable the city of Branson to properly apply their tourism tax on admission tickets while not imposing a new tax on travel agency services. I will communicate our position to the entire House via email. Thanks again for your efforts, Jeff, you are a strong advocate for your district. Expedia Group looks forward to working with you on the recovery of Missouri's tourism industry. I have shared the language with Sen. Sater and Sen. Burlison.

Good afternoon,

Thank you for speaking with me this afternoon. As per our discussion, I have attached FIRE's written testimony in support of HB 480.

Thank you again for agreeing to circulate it to the other members of the committee. If you need me to send it to them directly, please let me know. We are available to answer any questions the committee might have.

Thanks again!

Respectfully,

Re: FIRE's support for HB 480

Dear Chairman Basye and distinguished members of the Elementary and Secondary Education Committee,

My name is Joshua Smith, and I am the Legislative Fellow at the Foundation for Individual Rights in Education, FIRE, a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization dedicated to protecting civil liberties on America's college campuses. Though FIRE takes no position on provisions addressing K-12 education, we submit our written testimony today in support of House Bill 480's protections of the rights of student journalists and their advisors in higher education.

Student newspapers investigate and expose corruption, harassment, and other ills. They educate students and often serve as a major source of local news, too. But student press often suffers threats or instances of impermissible, and even unconstitutional suppression or punishment just for practicing good journalism. HB 480 would address many of the worst forms of campus censorship.

This legislation would establish that university administrators may not subject campus journalism to prior restraints, a practice the Supreme Court of the United States has declared, "the most serious and the least tolerable infringement on First Amendment rights."[1] Prior restraints on collegiate student journalists happen across the country. For example, the University of California, Davis created a "media board" reporting to its own chancellor with the authority to regulate campus journalism and even investigate complaints by outside parties.[2]

The Supreme Court has allowed prior restraint of high school student journalism.[3] Troublingly, one federal circuit, the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, has extended that authority to the journalism of adults in higher education.[4] HB 480 would prevent Missouri universities and colleges from adopting the K-12 style prior restraint.

Additionally, this legislation would protect an advisor to a campus newspaper from retaliation, including termination, simply for defending the integrity of that newspaper's reporting. Diablo Valley College in California fired an advisor after he defended student journalists who reported on and criticized the university's response to racist graffiti scrawled on the campus.[5] This bill prevents institutions from using this tactic to control campus press.

FIRE has opposed the recent, nationwide spikes in censorship of campus press.[6] I urge you to join the eleven states that have already passed legislation codifying the rights of student journalists by voting in support of HB 480.[7]

Thank you for your attention to FIRE's support for HB 480. Please let me know if I can be of any additional assistance.

Joshua Smith

Dear Representative Basye and Representative Shields:

I spoke with Dylan Robinson in Rep. Bayse's office today who was kind enough to give me a little more information about tomorrow's hearing. I will be there with my son Russell, who is a braille student in the first grade.

I am attaching our testimony. I expect only to read the first two pages, which should run about 2 minutes, but we would both be very happy to answer questions to help clarify the impact this Bill could have on children across the state. We understand that the hearing will have its own dynamics, and are grateful for the opportunity to participate.

I am attaching for your reference DESE's 2020 Blind Literacy Survey and a map developed by DESE of the distribution of children with IEPs for Visual Impairment in Missouri compared to the availability of Teachers of the Visually Impaired (TVI) and Orientation & Mobility professionals (O&M). The final attachment is a research study that forms the basis for national recommendations on braille instruction.

Many thanks to both of you for your support of our children!
I look forward to meeting you tomorrow.

Sincerely,
Carla Keirns-Dorn, Kansas City, Missouri

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I am here to speak in support of HB 1360 and HB 1381 the BRITE Act.

My name is Carla Keirns and I live in Kansas City with my husband Michael and our son Russell, who is here with me today. Russell is 7 years old. He was 14 weeks old when his eye doctor told us he was legally blind due to albinism, a condition he was born with.

Russell was blessed to attend the Children's Center for the Visually Impaired (CCVI) in Kansas City, Missouri from age 2 to 6, where he first learned to use his fingers to do some of the work his eyes could not. Even the vision he has degrades over the course of the day, going from 20/200 to 20/1000 – meaning that by the time he would need to start his homework, he sees at 20 feet what someone with normal vision can see at 1000 feet.

Children like Russell may do okay in early grades when the print is big and books have only a few words on each page, but by third or fourth grade, at the transition from learning to read to reading to learn, the letters get smaller, reading loads increase, and Russell will not be able to keep up using his eyes. We are grateful, therefore, that starting at CCVI and continuing in our local school, Russell has been learning Braille. This will allow him to continue to learn with his peers. He will be able to read with his fingers when his eyes get tired.

The current statute supporting Braille education in Missouri mirrors the Braille provision in the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) 2004, Section 614 (d)(3)(B)(iii)(B) Consideration of Special Factors.--The IEP Team shall-- > (iii) in the case of a child who is blind or visually impaired, provide for instruction in Braille and the use of Braille unless the IEP Team determines, after an evaluation of the child's reading and writing skills, needs, and appropriate reading and writing media (including an evaluation of the child's future needs for instruction in Braille or the use of Braille), that instruction in Braille or the use of Braille is not appropriate for the child.

When Russell was ready for kindergarten, we transitioned to our local elementary school. Our district is full of dedicated educators, but because blindness in children is rare, they have little experience with children like him. They recognized that the law required them to teach him braille because he is legally blind and individual testing found that he would need it.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But the law does not specify how much instruction children should receive, or what outcomes they should achieve. This is why we consider the BRITE Act's provision calling for grade-level achievement crucial for children like Russell.

> Section A (2) 3. "Instruction in braille reading and writing shall be sufficient to enable each student to communicate effectively and efficiently at a level commensurate with the student's sighted peers of comparable grade level and intellectual functioning."

At an IEP meeting in February, my son's Teacher of the Visually Impaired tried to convince our IEP team that while "print readers learn all of their letter sounds to read at grade level, Braille readers don't learn everything they need to read at grade level until the end of third grade." This is only true of braille readers who have other disabilities and those who receive inadequate instruction in braille.

Russell's braille teacher works for multiple school districts across Kanas City, and over the past two years when she has worked with him, she has had 24 to 32 blind children on her caseload, across as many as 10 school districts. As a result, it has been difficult for her to provide more than 3 hours per week of Braille instruction, 30% of what is called for in the seminal study by Koenig and Holbrook that forms the basis for braille instruction recommendations at the national level, including those incorporated by the American Printing House for the Blind in their widely used Braille reading curriculum, Building on Patterns.

Alan J. Koenig and M. Cay Holbrook, Ensuring High-Quality Instruction for Students in Braille Literacy Programs, Journal of Visual Impairment & Blindness, November 2000; 94(11): 677-694.

My son has above average intelligence and spoken language, and I was shocked and disappointed to learn that his braille teacher did not share a goal of grade level reading. Clarifying the existing braille standards for

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001473

Missouri would be extremely helpful for our family, our school, and to set a standard that will ensure that blind children like my son will be able to learn with their peers instead of falling behind starting in the first grade.

The provisions about assistive technology are also critically important. We asked our school to start to consider technology needs when my son started kindergarten in 2019. We were advised that the school didn't have the children use computers until 3rd grade, and so that is when they would consider our son's need for access technologies, other than a digital magnifier. That is not what state and national-level experts in the education of blind children told me.

The experts explained to me that blind children need to learn keyboarding early because their handwriting will never keep up, that they need to be able to use keyboard commands rather than a mouse to control their computers because it is difficult to see and control a cursor when you are blind, and that screen reading software and refreshable braille displays should be introduced as soon as kindergarten so students will be ready to use them when they and their peers start using computers for learning in second and third grade.

By the end of that school year, of course, the pandemic had closed our school, and my son had no training or experience with the kind of screen reading and magnification software that is used to make a PC or tablet accessible to the blind. He struggled for months in virtual learning, unable to see what was being shown on the screen, unable even to mute and unmute his microphone or raise and lower his hand. Testing in November showed he had learned no braille since schools closed in March. My son was finally placed at the School for the Blind at the end of the third quarter, where he is thriving. But he lost a full year of learning due to lack of access and inadequate training in assistive and access technology.

Finally, the focus on Orientation and Mobility and qualified instructors in the bill is a pressing need. According to DESE there are 50 counties in Missouri with at least one blind child and no Teacher of the Visually Impaired and 57 counties with at least one blind child and no Certified

Orientation & Mobility Specialist (COMS). We went a full year with our district in Kansas City unable to find a COMS to provide instruction to my son in critical skills like safe street crossing and knowing when traffic is coming--I think of these as the "don't get run over by a car" lessons.

All of these legislative provisions will help my son and so many children like him in Missouri. Thank you for having faith in them and helping us to ensure he learns what he needs to complete school and be ready for higher education, work and independent living, just as the federal and state special education laws offer as their goal.

Ensuring High-Quality Instruction for Students in Braille Literacy Programs

Alan J. Koenig and M. Cay Holbrook

Abstract: This study used the Delphi research method to gain a consensus among 40 professionals on the appropriate levels of instructional service to address the needs of students with visual impairments in 12 areas of braille literacy skills. These resulting recommendations are general guidelines for educational teams to follow in designing braille literacy programs, but must be tailored to address the individual needs of each student.

Over the past 10 years, greater attention has been paid to providing high-quality instruction for students in braille literacy programs. Noted authorities have expressed concerns about the low level of literacy skills among students who read, or should read, braille and about the assessment and instructional practices used to address braille literacy skills (Foulke, 1996; Mangold, 1997; Mullen, 1990; Rex, 1989; Ryles, 1996; Schroeder, 1989, 1996, 1997; Spungin, 1990; Stephens, 1989). In the late 1980s, states began to address these concerns by passing braille legislation that mandated special assessments or instruction in braille. Legislative measures to improve braille instruction culminated in 1997 with an amendment to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) that requires an Individualized Education Program (IEP) team to consider the following "in the case of a child who is blind or visually impaired":

> providing for instruction in Braille and use of Braille unless the IEP Team determines, after an evaluation of the child's reading and writing skills, needs, and appropriate reading and writing media (including an evaluation of the child's future needs for instruction in Braille or the use of Braille), that instruction in Braille or the use of Braille is not appropriate for the child. (IDEA, Section 1414[d][3][B][iii])

As a part of the effort to establish and implement the National Agenda for the Education of Children and Youths with Visual Impairments, Corn, Hatlen, Huebner, Ryan, and Siller (1995) defined the expanded core curriculum as eight areas unique to students who are visually impaired (that is, those who are blind or have low vision). Compensatory academic skills, including communication modes, is one of these areas and is the focus of this article.

In his discussion of the expanded core curriculum for students with visual impairments, Hatlen (1996, pp. 31–32) stated:

Accepted October 12, 1999.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001476

> The additional learning experiences contained in the expanded core curriculum are not easy to implement. They require time to teach, and the need for them does not diminish with age or competency. The professionally prepared teacher of visually impaired students must be responsible for assessment, instruction, and evaluation in unique and specialized curricular areas.#.#.#. The competencies that result in an expanded core curriculum require that educational time be allocated to teach these skills. Programming that appropriately addresses all the educational needs of blind and visually impaired students must assume that most students will need sizable periods of time in order to master the competencies required in the expended core curriculum. If the profession does not demand that this time be made available, it has done a disservice to students with visual impairments, and may disable them in their efforts to successfully transition from school to adulthood.

Hatlen's (1998) national survey identified the following barriers to providing the core curriculum:

- caseloads were too large,
- academic needs were considered more important than specialized needs,
- adequate assessment materials were not available, and
- specialized needs were not recognized by administrators.

In addition to these barriers, Hatlen (1998) recognized that no data-based estimates were available on the amount of time needed for specialized instruction. Teachers of students with visual impairments who have extensive experience in teaching braille reading may have a notion of the amount of time needed for direct instruction in core curriculum areas, but the experience of many teachers in this area may be so limited that it is difficult to estimate the amount of time needed.

Rex, Koenig, Wormsley, and Baker (1994) argued that students in braille literacy programs should receive at least 1 1/2 to 2 hours of literacy instruction each day, since this is the amount of time typically provided for sighted students in the primary grades. The need for daily instruction in braille literacy skills was supported by the results of a landmark study by Ryles (1997), who found that students who were legally blind and received braille literacy instruction four or five times per week had better literacy skills than did those who received instruction in print or received infrequent instruction in braille. The recommendation by Rex et al. and the empirical findings by Ryles are a valuable starting point for the furthering the examination of needed levels of instructional support for students in braille literacy programs.

As used in this article, the term braille literacy skills includes a range of communication options that people who are visually impaired use to gain or convey information. At the most fundamental level, this definition includes the use of braille as a primary literacy medium for reading and writing, especially during the period in which literacy skills are first being learned (from preschool through the third grade). It also encompasses the use of braille as a secondary literacy medium to supplement or support the use of print, either as a complementary medium or as an eventual substitute for print. Within the total context of the communication skills that an individual uses to supplement braille skills, other options may include aural-reading skills, live-reader skills, keyboarding and word-processing skills, technology skills, and signature-writing skills.

The purpose of the study presented here was to gain professional consensus on the levels of instructional services that are needed to ensure that students receive high-quality braille literacy instruction. It was anticipated that the findings would represent a set of recommended guidelines that would conform to the best educational practices in designing braille literacy instructional programs. The researchers recognized from the outset that students' needs are unique and varied and that the results of the study could be used only as guidelines. Educational teams will benefit by having a reasonable starting point from which they can tailor programs to address each student's needs.

Method

The Delphi method—the primary research tool used in the study—is used "whenever a consensus is needed from persons who are knowledgeable about a particular subject" (Borg & Gall, 1983, p. 413). In this method, a survey is sent repeatedly to respondents for input and comments. As subsequent surveys are sent, the respondents have the opportunity to see the compiled results and comments from each other from the previous round and to make further responses and comments. The process continues until a predetermined level of consensus is reached.

The Delphi method has definite advantages over a one-time questionnaire. As Borg and Gall (1983, p. 414) noted, "Issues are clarified, and the final result is likely to reflect much more careful thought than would be obtained from a single questionnaire. Since each respondent is called upon to reexamine his position at least three times, the method tends to build consensus." The primary disadvantages of the method are that it requires several months to complete a survey and imposes extensive time demands on the respondents.

Respondents

Forty respondents were carefully selected to participate in the study according to preestablished criteria: five or more years of teaching experience with students who were visually impaired and recognition by the researchers or peers of their expertise in teaching braille literacy skills. The goal was to assemble a panel of experts who were highly skilled in teaching braille literacy skills and who were knowledgeable of the issues involved in this type of instruction. The researchers did not intend to gather a random or representative sample of professionals in the field, but to select knowledgeable individuals from a variety of service delivery options and job roles to provide recommendations that would constitute best practices. To assemble the panel, the researchers sought 10 teachers from each of the three major service delivery models: resource room, itinerant, and residential school. In addition, 10 respondents were chosen who were "other recognized experts" in braille literacy (that is, those with leadership roles in the field who had expertise in braille literacy for children, but were not directly engaged in teaching).

©2000 AFB, All Rights Reserved

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001478

The researchers compiled a list of known individuals who met the criteria on the basis of their knowledge of professionals in the field. Also, a national expert (who later agreed to be part of the study) helped to identify other potential respondents. This expert was responsible for national projects related to braille literacy; her knowledge of teachers with expertise in braille literacy was especially helpful in identifying those in resource room programs, since relatively few such programs exist today. The researchers telephoned potential respondents, described the demands of the research to them, and asked them to participate.

Of the 40 respondents who agreed to participate, 9 were resource room teachers, 11 were itinerant teachers, 10 were residential school teachers, and 10 were in other roles (such as administration, university teaching, and private consultation); 3 of the respondents had recently retired from long-term positions in the field. As a group, the respondents had a mean of 21 years of experience, ranging from 7 to 42 years, in providing educational services to students with visual impairments, having taught braille literacy skills to a median of 21 students and print literacy skills to a median of 25 students. They represented rural and urban settings, as well as 26 states from all regions of the United States (both those with and without personnel preparation programs) and one Canadian province.

All the respondents had bachelor's degrees, 88% had master's degrees, and 30% had doctoral degrees. The percentage of respondents with doctoral degrees was high, since almost one-fourth of the respondents were engaged in university teaching. All the respondents also had current or past certification as teachers of students with visual impairments. Those with "past" certification were employed in roles that did not require teacher certification (such as university teaching and administration).

Procedures

Round 1

The major part of the Round 1 survey presented 11 areas of braille literacy skills, developed by Koenig and Rex (1996), and asked the respondents to recommend the appropriate level of instructional service to address each area. The respondents were sent written descriptions of each skill area so they would have clear knowledge of what each area encompassed before they made their recommendations. They were asked to revise the skill-area descriptions, if necessary, by deleting, modifying, and adding information.

In each skill area, the respondents were asked for recommendations on four factors: consistency, length of session (later renamed total time per day), time span, and duration. Definitions of these factors are presented in Table 1. To provide a starting point, Koenig and Rex's (1996) original recommendations were offered as a "proposed level of service." The respondents could check "same as proposed level" or offer an alternative and were asked to comment on their recommendations. Surveys were sent to the respondents, along with a letter of introduction, directions, a brief demographic information form, and a return envelope.

As the completed surveys were returned, data were analyzed numerically to determine the percentage of respondents who recommended a given level of service, and all the comments from Round 1 were compiled by skill area and factor. Three factors received 100% agreement, so it was determined that a consensus had been reached on those items. Also, the researchers used the feedback on the descriptions of the skill areas to make nonsubstantial revisions to the descriptions; substantive changes were sent to the respondents for feedback in Round 2 of the survey. Finally, several important decisions were made at the end of Round 1 to address issues raised by the respondents:

- Time span was defined in subsequent rounds by specific grade levels to avoid such terms as primary school and junior high school.
- Length of session was clarified to mean the total amount of time devoted to teaching a skill in one or more sessions during a given day.
- The focus of the study was clarified to mean "direct teaching time with some time spent in consultation," not activities, such as preparing materials.
- A proposal was included in Round 2 to eliminate a skill area called "application of literacy skills in authentic contexts" and to infuse information on this area throughout the other areas.

In addition to these changes, two respondents noted the need for additional levels of braille literacy skills beyond beginning braille literacy. One respondent contributed descriptions and proposed recommendations for two new skill areas: intermediate braille literacy skills and advanced braille literacy skills (D. Wormsley, personal communication, February 1998). These new areas were included in Round 2.

Round 2

The Round 2 survey contained (1) proposed revisions of the descriptions of skill areas and response boxes to indicate "agree" or "disagree," (2) compiled numerical data and all comments on each factor for each skill level and response boxes to indicate the Round 2 recommendations, and (3) the new skill areas and proposed recommendations for intermediate and advanced braille literacy skills. The survey was sent with an explanatory letter, a list of "points of clarification," directions, and a return envelope.

The researchers compiled the responses from Round 2 in the same manner as for Round 1, reviewed the numerical data and comments on the proposed revisions in the descriptions of skill areas, and decided on the final revisions. Two decisions were of particular note. The researchers decided to eliminate "application of literacy skills in authentic contexts" as a separate area and to infuse these skills throughout the other skill areas—a suggestion that 84% of the respondents supported. Second, they decided not to include the Nemeth Code as part of beginning braille literacy skills, since 83% of the respondents did not support this proposal. Although the respondents thought that teaching the Nemeth Code was important, they were concerned that the inclusion of the Nemeth Code in beginning braille literacy skills would indicate a shift from literacy to mathematics and that the original recommendations did not allot a sufficient amount of time to teach the Nemeth Code and mathematics concepts. Therefore, the researchers included the Nemeth Code in advanced literacy skills, since that would be the point at which the teacher of students with visual impairments would be likely to focus on code skills, rather than mathematics concepts.

The revised descriptions of the 12 skill areas, presented in Box 1, are general descriptions of the subskills in each skill area. Through the Delphi process, the descriptions were revised and refined and thus represent the consensus of the 40 respondents. The descriptions do not necessarily include all the subskills in each skill area, and the information in Box 1 should not be construed as a curriculum.

The researchers determined that a consensus would be achieved if 85% of the respondents agreed to a particular level of service. When the 85% agreement was for a range of levels (for example, moderate to long sessions), it was determined that a consensus had been reached on that range. For factors in the Round 3 survey for which a consensus had not been achieved in Round 2, a statement was included about the most significant trend in the responses from Round 1 to Round 2. This statement highlighted the trend for the respondents, who did not have access to the data from Round 1. In several areas, there was a considerable change in the responses from Round 1 to Round 2, but a pattern or trend was not readily discernible.

Round 3

The Round 3 survey contained the revised descriptions of skill areas, the compiled numerical data, all comments on each factor on which a consensus was not attained, and response boxes to indicate agreement or disagreement with the Round 3 recommendations. Since this was the final round of the survey, written comments were not requested. The survey was sent with an explanatory letter, directions, and a return envelope. After the numerical data were analyzed, the final decisions were made using the 85% cut-off point for a consensus. As in Round 2, when no single level of service achieved a 85% response, adjacent categories were combined to provide a recommended range of service.

Emergent braille literacy skills

Supporting early literacy development in early childhood settings, including the home, day care, and preschool; teaching early literacy skills and modeling techniques for fostering the development of those skills in the home and preschool, such as reading aloud to the child, developing book concepts, encouraging early reading and writing skills (like pretend reading and scribbling); working with parents and others to expand the child's experiential base and general concepts; developing hand-finger skills; helping parents and others acquire books, labels, and other materials in accessible media; helping parents acquire a knowledge of braille and resources for learning the braille code; ensuring models of proficient braille readers; bridging emergent literacy to early formal braille literacy.

Early formal literacy skills ("prebraille")

Teaching hand-finger skills, tactile discrimination and perception skills, and hand movements; fostering early letter- and simple word-recognition skills; increasing the student's conceptual knowledge and vocabulary skills; increasing listening skills; expanding the student's experiential base; fostering early reading and writing skills; fostering the motivation for, and enjoyment of, reading; applying braille in authentic contexts; bridging early literacy and beginning braille literacy.

Beginning braille literacy skills

Teaching formal reading skills in braille, including decoding and word-analysis skills, vocabulary development, comprehension skills, and reading for specific purposes; teaching formal writing skills with the braillewriter; providing an ongoing assessment of braille literacy skills and literacy media needs; continuing to develop mechanical skills in braille reading; building reading fluency; building the motivation for, and enjoyment of, reading; encouraging leisure reading; applying literacy skills throughout the day and in authentic contexts; bridging beginning braille literacy skills and intermediate braille literacy skills.

Beginning braille literacy skills in dual media (print and braille)

Teaching formal reading skills concurrently in both print and braille, including decoding and word-analysis skills, vocabulary development, comprehension skills, and reading for specific purposes; teaching formal writing skills in both print and braille; providing an ongoing assessment of literacy skills and literacy media needs; continuing to develop mechanical skills in braille reading; building reading fluency in both media; building a motivation for, and enjoyment of, reading; encouraging leisure reading; applying literacy skills in print and braille throughout the day and in authentic contexts; bridging beginning literacy skills and intermediate literacy skills.

Intermediate braille literacy skills

Teaching the use of reading as a tool for learning; teaching flexibility skills (such as studying and skimming); teaching and applying reading skills in content areas; teaching the use of reference books (like dictionaries and encyclopedias); continued teaching of editing marks in refining writing drafts; continued work on fluency and, as needed, on accurate recognition of contractions in the braille code; continued work on interpreting and reading various formats; teaching strategies for using a variety of literacy tools; incorporating technology into literacy tasks; applying literacy tasks in authentic contexts; bridging intermediate literacy skills and advanced literacy skills.

Advanced braille literacy skills

Teaching specialized codes, such as computer braille and foreign-language braille; continuing the use of Nemeth Code in more advanced science and mathematical contexts; continuing to expand experience with textbook formats; offering Grade 3 braille as an option for college-bound students; teaching strategies for balancing emphases among literacy tools (such as braille and recorded material); continuing to incorporate the use of technology into literacy tasks; continuing to apply literacy tasks in authentic contexts.

Braille literacy skills for students with print literacy skills

Teaching tactile perception, hand movements, and letter/symbol-recognition skills in braille; introducing braille contractions and rules in meaningful contexts; teaching braille writing skills; integrating the use of braille in practical activities; providing instruction in contracted and uncontracted braille to address an individual student's present and future needs; providing an ongoing assessment; applying literacy skills throughout the day and in authentic contexts; bridging beginning literacy skills and intermediate literacy skills.

Listening, aural-reading, and live-reader skills

Fostering the development of auditory skills (such as auditory awareness and attention, sound localization, auditory memory, and auditory clozure); teaching and reinforcing the use of listening to gather information; teaching the mechanics of using recorded textbooks; teaching strategies for gathering information from recorded textbooks; teaching strategies for obtaining and purposefully directing the activities of, and gathering information from, live readers; applying listening, aural-reader, and live-reader skills in authentic contexts.

Technology skills

Teaching technology skills to facilitate literacy tasks and to gain access to print information, including the use of braille note-taking devices, refreshable braille displays, synthesized speech, accessible software (such as database and telecommunications programs), scanners (to convert print to an accessible medium), and braille and inkprint printers; gaining access to, and information from, the Internet; applying technology skills throughout the day and in authentic contexts.

Keyboarding and word-processing skills

Teaching touch-typing techniques via a computer with speech synthesis or a typewriter with verbal feedback from the teacher; teaching strategies for using word processing, including creating, editing, saving, and printing text files; building fluency and accuracy in keyboarding skills; applying keyboarding and word-processing skills in daily activities.

Slate-and-stylus skills

Modeling the appropriate and effective use of the slate and stylus, teaching the use of the slate and stylus, exposing students to the various types of slates and styli and the purposes for which each may be used, building fluency in the use of the slate and stylus, applying the use of slate-and-stylus skills in practical literacy activities.

Signature-writing skills

Teaching skills in signature writing for legal purposes; exposing students to a variety of writing implements and writing guides, developing fluency and consistency in signature writing, teaching strategies for knowing when and why one's signature is required, assessing a student's need for further instruction in handwriting (beyond a signature), applying the use of signature writing skills in authentic contexts.

Response rate

For each of the three rounds, the respondents were asked to submit their surveys by a given date. Before the deadline date, a reminder letter was sent and, when needed, telephone calls were made as a follow-up. The response rate was 95% (38 of 40 respondents) in each of the three rounds. The two nonresponders in Round 1 were from residential school programs; both responded in Rounds 2 and 3. The two nonresponders in Round 2 (one from a resource room program and the other from a residential school) did not respond to Round 3.

the recommended level. For example, in the area of beginning braille literacy skills, 100% of the respondents indicated that the consistency of instructional service should be "high" (that is, daily contact), and 89% agreed that the total time per day devoted to instruction should be "long" (one to two hours).

If a range of service was recommended, the individual percentages are presented, along with the total percentage. For example, the recommendation for consistency of service in the area of emergent braille literacy skills was moderate to moderate–high. The parenthetical information following this recommended level (67 + 28 = 95%) indicates that 67% of the respondents recommended a moderate level of consistency (one to three days per week) and 28% recommended a moderate to high level (one to five days per week) which totals 95% agreement overall. To interpret such ranges, one may consider the recommendation supported by the largest percentage of respondents (in this case, moderate consistency, or one to three days per week) as a starting point for most students; the recommended level supported by other respondents identifies the end of the continuum for students who have more intense or less intense needs. The researchers considered such ranges in recommended levels of service to be advantageous in that they provide flexibility in addressing individual needs.

Discussion

Emergent braille literacy skills

The respondents agreed that moderate to short sessions are the most appropriate for fostering emergent braille literacy skills in infants and preschoolers. However, there was less agreement on the level of consistency. In Round 1, some respondents thought that moderate to periodic consistency was appropriate, since the primary role of the teacher of students with visual impairments is to consult with parents and model ways to foster early literacy activities, whereas others thought that more direct contact is desirable. In subsequent rounds, the respondents came to a consensus that a moderate or slightly higher level of consistency is desirable, with increasing consistency as students progress through toddlerhood.

The respondents were unanimous in supporting the need for and importance of fostering emergent literacy skills for infants and preschoolers. The following are two representative comments:

> I think early intervention is essential to literacy acquisition. The more we work with young kids at this age, the better. Also, parents need to learn how to provide similar experiences when the professional isn't there.

> Children need daily stimulation to develop concepts and prepare them for literacy skills. A teacher can provide ideas [and] suggestions and model activities anywhere from twice a week to twice a month. Parents and other family members can follow the teacher's example on a daily basis.

Early formal literacy skills ("prebraille")

The respondents agreed that as students enter the prebraille phase of instruction, daily instruction from a qualified teacher for 30 minutes to 1 hour a day is necessary. Although individual needs could extend the overall time span of this phase, the respondents agreed that early formal braille literacy skills typically encompass the preschool through kindergarten years. It is interesting that the most controversial aspect of this area was the use of the term prebraille, even as a parenthetical descriptor. Some respondents suggested that this term is outdated, given the current understanding of early literacy development. However, the researchers decided that until the field agrees on a consistent term or phrase to describe this definable period in braille literacy instruction, prebraille is the best and most accurate term for identifying this phase.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

As a group, the respondents strongly supported the consistent involvement of the teacher of students with visual impairments in teaching early formal braille literacy skills. One respondent staunchly supported daily involvement:

> Absolutely—daily. We are working on building a firm foundation. Paraprofessionals and regular teachers do wonders, but they don't replace the observation and skills of a [teacher of students with visual impairments]. Daily contact wards off potential problems.

Another respondent noted:

> Children need to be motivated by daily exposure to their names in braille, names of their peers, tactile labels, books, writing experiences, etc. Daily exposure to reading and writing experiences helps to make this a real part of their experience.

Beginning braille literacy skills

All the respondents agreed on the instructional needs of young children who are starting braille literacy instruction in kindergarten through third grade. In Round 1 of the survey, they all indicated that high consistency (daily contact) by a teacher of students with visual impairments is essential to ensure the development of braille literacy and that one to two hours of instruction is needed each day. These findings supported Ryles's (1997) findings that students who received early braille literacy instruction four to five days per week had the same level of achievement as their same-age sighted peers and far exceeded the achievement of students with visual impairments in print literacy programs or those with infrequent braille literacy instruction.

The respondents' written comments illustrated and supported the need for high consistency in beginning braille literacy instruction. The following are three representative comments:

> In my opinion, this is the most critical factor in early braille reading—daily practice is needed.

> Daily contact is what "normal" sighted children receive, and visually impaired/blind children certainly need no less.

> Reading and writing are a necessary part of education, communication, daily living skills, and leisure activities and require daily involvement to make them a natural part of life.

Beginning braille literacy skills in dual media

When a decision is made to teach a student to read in both print and braille, the respondents supported high consistency and long sessions. One respondent noted, "Braille literacy skills require daily contact; literacy skills in dual media would have to require the same or more." Another cautioned, "This is a difficult challenge and care must be taken. It is a big load for the child, and one must not overburden the child. He or she must have fun while learning both. Keep a balance." A few respondents questioned the practice of initiating instruction concurrently in both media and supported instead the practice of selecting one medium and making it primary. For example, one respondent stated: "At any given time, one reading mode should be primary. Trying to make them 'always equal' will not succeed." This is an issue that needs to be addressed by the field at large.

Intermediate and advanced braille literacy skills

The respondents agreed that the development of braille literacy skills must continue throughout the middle school and high school years. One respondent noted:

> I agree with adding these two areas. We should be doing things like this from the beginning of a child's school career. However, listing these areas will keep up an awareness level on our parts, which is very important since there are so many things to teach today and often so little time in which to get things done.

The recommendations regarding consistency and total time per day reflected wide ranges that are required to address individual needs at these levels. The respondents' comments often reflected their desire to match instructional time to specific needs, such as the following: "It seems that there are many times that various skills need to be addressed that may take more contact time for the student and the teacher."

Braille literacy skills for students with print literacy skills

Nearly all the respondents agreed that when a student is introduced to a braille literacy program after some level of instruction in print literacy, regardless of the period in the child's school career, daily contact (97% agreement) and long sessions (95% agreement) are necessary. One respondent noted, "If the student is currently established in print literacy skills and there is a need for him [or her] to learn braille, then daily instruction is needed to help [the student] achieve the necessary skills at the quickest rate possible." Another respondent supported daily contact "to develop skills and good reading habits."

The only disagreement in this area was related to the wording of the title for the skill area and the time span. The original wording of the title included the expression "with established print literacy skills." Some respondents were concerned that this phrase would not include students who had minimal or marginal levels of print literacy skills, so the word established was removed. In addition, the respondents wanted this recommendation to be stated in such a way that the decision will be made by the educational team and would ensure that instruction is initiated before the "crisis point." The phrase "introduced at an appropriate time as determined by the educational team" was added to address these concerns.

©2000 AFB, All Rights Reserved

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001488

Listening, aural-reading, and live-reader skills

The respondents agreed that it is critical to teach listening skills, including aural-reading and live-reader skills, to students in braille literacy programs. These skills should be taught throughout the school years on a moderate to periodic basis and in moderate to short sessions. The respondents also agreed that the configuration of instructional service needs to be tailored to the specific skill being taught. For example, teaching a student to use a four-track audiotape player may require just a few short sessions for direct instruction, with extra time for practice and application.

One respondent noted that listening skills, including aural-reading and live-reader skills, are "too often assumed and therefore overlooked. Listening to gather and sort information is too valuable a skill to be minimized as it currently frequently is." On the other hand, a number of comments noted the need to maintain a balance between braille literacy skills and listening skills, as did the following:

> The art of listening is a valuable and necessary skill for children to learn. The early emphasis, however, must be placed on reading. Too many children become dependent on listening to recorded materials and live readers and do not develop their reading skills to their full potential.

Technology skills and keyboarding and word-processing skills

The respondents highly agreed that technology skills, in general, and the use of keyboarding and word-processing skills, in particular, are essential. One respondent stated: "Technology is a key to independence, and consistent instruction and guided practice help facilitate the reaching of that goal." Although a number of respondents noted the obvious overlap between these two areas, the researchers decided to keep them separate, since technology skills are taught throughout the school years, whereas keyboarding and word-processing skills are typically taught in the early grades.

Almost all the respondents (97%) agreed that formal keyboarding instruction should begin in grades 1, 2, or 3, with 46% recommending the second grade, 32% recommending the third grade, and 19% recommending the first grade. The respondents also agreed that teaching keyboarding and word-processing skills requires high to moderate consistency, generally with a moderate amount of time devoted to instruction. The consistency and time needed to teach technology skills, on the other hand, may differ according to the specific device or application being taught.

Slate-and-stylus skills

The respondents expressed clear support and enthusiasm for teaching the braille slate and stylus, as these two comments illustrate:

> I've never had a student dislike the slate. I always have started them on it in the upper elementary grades, and they love it! It's like a newfound

 ©2000 AFB, All Rights Reserved

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001489

adventure, not a dreaded "another thing to learn."

> Learning to use the slate is one of the best gifts we can give our kids. It's cheap, portable, easy to use, quiet, and always available when batteries die or the electricity goes off.

The respondents agreed that several days per week, coupled with moderate to short sessions, are needed to teach braille slate skills. Although two respondents advocated the early introduction of the slate and stylus, most (93%) recommended beginning formal instruction in grade 3 (61%) or grade 4 (32%). This recommendation does not prevent the early exposure of the slate and stylus to young children who are blind, as the following comment indicates: "Begin formal instruction at grade 3. This does not mean that the child cannot scribble with the slate earlier." In terms of the duration of instruction, the respondents supported both a long duration (throughout at least one school year) and a short duration (concentrated study during one quarter or semester), depending on a student's needs. Instruction of short duration, of course, would necessitate higher consistency.

Signature-writing skills

The respondents supported the importance of teaching students who are blind to write their signatures. Most (89%) recommended that one to three days per week of instruction should be allotted, with a moderate to short amount of time spent throughout the day. As with slate-and-stylus skills, the respondents thought that the duration of instruction could be either long or short, depending on a student's needs.

There was a diversity of opinions about when signature-writing skills should be introduced. Most respondents (63%) supported its introduction sometime between grades 5 and 7, whereas 16% recommended grade 3 and 11% recommended grade 4. Some respondents supported the introduction of signature-writing skills in grade 3, since that is the time when sighted students are introduced to cursive writing. However, others suggested starting in the upper elementary grades, since students at that age have more opportunities to apply the skills. This was the only area in the survey for which a precise recommendation could not be made. Therefore, the educational team should consider the student's individual needs in determining when to introduce signature-writing skills.

Recommendations

The impetus for completing this study was to help students receive appropriate levels of instructional support and service to ensure their progress in braille literacy programs. To maintain this focus on high-quality literacy instruction, the researchers offer the following recommendations:

1. Focus solely on the needs of students when designing literacy instruction. When planning IEPs, the educational team should focus solely on the identified needs of each student, as determined by the learning media assessment and other specialized assessments. The team should consider each identified need, determine the amount and type of instructional service that will address it, and implement a high-quality literacy program based on this plan. Logistical and administrative matters must be handled separately from the development of the literacy instructional program and cannot be allowed to influence the configuration of services that a student receives.

©2000 AFB, All Rights Reserved

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2. Use these recommendations as a starting point, tailoring them to the individual needs of each student. The respondents were asked to base their recommendations on the needs of "typical" students, acknowledging that these needs vary widely. The goal was to provide educational teams with a starting point that they can modify and tailor to meet the individual needs, strengths, and abilities of each student as identified in specialized assessments. Therefore, the educational team should use these recommendations as a baseline for guiding the planning process, not as directives.
3. Advocate for an appropriate service delivery model to address students' needs. IDEA requires schools to provide a continuum of service delivery options to meet the needs of students. Needs in the area of literacy skills are a primary factor in selecting an appropriate service delivery option. Students in beginning braille literacy programs typically require daily contact with lengthy instructional sessions throughout the day, usually provided in resource room programs. If there is no resource room program in a school district, teachers and others should advocate for its establishment, and administrators should take direct action to make it a reality. For an itinerant teaching program to address the needs of beginning braille readers, the teacher of students with visual impairments would need to spend one to two hours per day, five days per week, at a school and structure his or her schedule to accommodate more than one visit to the school as needed to provide literacy skills instruction.
4. Share the findings of the study and these recommendations with parents and others on the educational team in planning IEPs. Teachers of students with visual impairments should educate all members of educational teams about the needs of students in braille literacy programs, so all team members will be prepared to contribute to developing a high-quality instructional program in braille literacy skills.
5. Share the findings of this study and these recommendations with administrators during program evaluations and before IEP meetings, making clear that the recommendations do not include time for preparing materials, driving from school to school, and so forth. Special education administrators, especially those who are not specialists in visual impairments, will benefit from studying these recommendations as they plan for expanded and improved services for students who are blind. Furthermore, these recommendations will assist them in participating fully in IEP planning meetings and in addressing needed instructional services.
6. Ensure that a properly qualified and certified teacher of students with visual impairments provides direct instruction in braille literacy skills. The importance of this point cannot be overstated. Although paraprofessionals may provide assistance to a teacher of students with visual impairments, they do not have the training or knowledge of the development of literacy skills needed to provide direct instruction. Thus, the time spent by paraprofessionals in supporting literacy instruction should be considered over and above—not as part of—the instructional time recommended in this article.

 ©2000 AFB, All Rights Reserved

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001491

Conclusion

This study relied on the perceptions and experiences of a panel of professionals to gain a consensus on recommendations for providing appropriate braille literacy instruction. Future research should validate these recommendations by exploring the relationship between the amount of instructional time provided to students and the level of literacy skills that result from that instruction. The research by Ryles (1997) provides a model for replication to gain this type of necessary information. Additional research is needed to explore the impact on literacy outcomes of other variables, such as the service delivery model, teacher's qualifications, teacher's level of experience, instructional approach (such as a standard basal reader, whole-language approach, and Patterns), and instruction in dual media (teaching reading in both print and braille). Using such a line of research as a guide, further studies should examine other areas of the expanded core curriculum and generate similar recommendations on instructional services.

The findings of this study revealed that the level of braille literacy instruction will vary in consistency and intensity, depending on the skill area being addressed. Young children who are receiving initial braille literacy instruction will need lengthy amounts of instruction daily for several school years. As students progress through school, the amount of instructional time will vary according to the specific skill that is being taught. The recommendations presented here represent a beginning point from which educational teams may begin the instructional planning process, but they must be tailored to address the identified, individual needs of each student.

PURPOSE

The Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE), per Section 162.1136, RSMo, conducts an annual study of the educational status of eligible blind/visually impaired students and reports the findings to the Missouri Legislature on the first day of December each year. Additional copies of this report may be obtained at http://dese.mo.gov/special-education/blindness-literacy-reports.

BACKGROUND

The information contained in this report pertains to the twelve data elements identified by statute (Section 162.1136, RSMo). An "eligible student" is statutorily defined as "any blind or visually impaired child, including any student who has a visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye with conventional correction, or has a limited field of vision such that the widest diameter of the visual field subtends an angular distance not greater than 20 degrees, and who is eligible for special education services for the visually impaired as defined in the DESE State Plan" (Section 162.1130, RSMo). For the purposes of this report, "eligible student" is any student meeting the eligibility requirements for visual impairment/blindness in the Missouri State Plan for Special Education - Part B which includes the category of students previously reported as "partially sighted" (see Appendix A for the eligibility definition of visual impairment/blindness).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

DATA ELEMENTS

Data Element 1: The methodology of the study.

Data provided in this study were collected from three sources – American Printing House, Inc. (APH) which collects data for the Federal Quota Registration; DESE which collects data on all students, including students with disabilities; and Missouri Department of Social Services (DSS), Rehabilitation Services for the Blind (RSB) which provides a variety of services to Missourians with visual impairments.

American Printing House, Inc. (APH)

Data collected from APH for the Federal Quota Registration include students who are eligible to receive materials provided by the Federal Act to Promote the Education of the Blind (e.g., braille, large print, audio). To be eligible for the Federal Quota Registration, students must meet the definition of blindness, i.e. "central visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye with best correction; a peripheral field so contracted that the widest diameter of such field subtends an angular distance no greater than 20 degrees; or visual performance reduced by a brain injury or dysfunction when visual function meets the definition of blindness as determined by an eye care specialist or neurologist."

Data from APH includes counts of students of less than college level enrolled in any formally organized public, private, or non-profit educational program. The data are by grade placement, i.e. preschool and school-age categories, and by primary reading medium. The Federal Quota Registration categories considered for this literacy study include preschool and kindergarten through grade twelve. Further descriptive information beyond the scope of this report may be found at https://www.aph.org/about-federal-quota/.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education

DESE collects student level data from Local Education Agencies (LEAs) through the Missouri Student Information System (MOSIS). MOSIS includes data regarding students ages three to twenty-one with disabilities including students meeting the eligibility requirements for visually impaired/blindness, i.e. impairment in vision that, even with correction, adversely affects a child's educational performance. This definition includes both partial sight (visual acuity of 20/70 to 20/200 in the better eye with best correction by glasses) and blindness (visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye after best correction by glasses or a visual field measuring 20 degrees or less). Note that many preschool children are reported as Young Child with a Developmental Delay (YCDD) regardless of disability type, and therefore, would not be included in these counts.

Other required data are collected by DESE via survey. The Blind Literacy Survey (BLS) collects information annually in January concerning students recorded by APH on the Federal Quota Registration. This survey yields counts of blind students (ages three to twenty-one) who

- receive materials in braille and braille-related services;
- receive materials in braille and braille-related services but no longer receive braille instruction; and
- use a slate and stylus or other braille writing device.

In 2019-20, a total of 330 LEAs and other agencies returned a survey.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Missouri Department of Social Services, Rehabilitation Services for the Blind

RSB provided data regarding the counts of blind/visually impaired students who

- received transition planning services from RSB and
- were referred to RSB by an LEA.

For further information, see http://www.dss.mo.gov/fsd/rsb/.

Calculations

The eligibility definition for the Federal Quota Registration contains similar language as the Missouri statutory definition (Section 162.1130, RSMo) and the Missouri State Plan for Special Education – Part B (see Appendix A and Appendix B). However, the varying reporting requirements for APH and MOSIS yield different counts. The primary variances are as follows:

- APH Federal Quota Registration counts are collected annually on the first Monday in January on the basis of blindness alone or with other disabilities with no primary disability designated.
- MOSIS counts are collected annually on December 1 on the basis of visual impairment which includes partial sight as well as blindness as the primary disability. Therefore, the visual impairment/blindness category includes students who would not be counted on the APH Federal Quota Registration, i.e. partially sighted, but on the other hand, would not include some students reported on APH because the primary disability designated is not partially sighted or blindness, including early childhood special education (ECSE) students in the YCDD category used by many LEAs for all ECSE children.

In order to ensure validity given these variances, data from APH and MOSIS are not combined for calculations or comparative analyses, and data sources are noted on all tables and charts.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Primary Reading Medium Definitions (APH)

- Braille Readers – Students primarily using braille in their studies.
- Visual Readers – Students primarily using optical devices, screen enlargement, large print/type hardcopy, or regular print in their studies.
- Auditory Readers – Students primarily using a reader or auditory materials in their studies.
- Pre-readers – Students working on or toward a readiness level; older students with reading potential.
- Non-readers – Non-reading students; students who show no reading potential; students who do not fall into any of the above categories.

Findings for Data Element 2

- Non-readers comprise 32.9 percent of total blind or visually impaired students, which is higher than the national average of 30.4 percent.
- The trends of primary reading medium remain consistent over the past five years.
- The total number of registered blind or visually impaired students ages three through twenty-one increased by 1.7 percent (n=18) from 2018-19.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Data Element 3: The number of students who have a visual impairment sufficient to meet the definition of "eligible student" as defined in Section 162.1130, RSMo.

Note: Data reporting requirements differ between APH and MOSIS counts. See "Calculations" on page 7 for the different requirements. Other LEAs are all Missouri public schools except Missouri School for the Blind (MSB).

Findings for Data Element 3

Based on MOSIS data:

- The number of blind/visually impaired students, ages three to five (pre-kindergarten) and kindergarten (kindergarten eligible five years old) to twenty-one in LEAs other than MSB, has increased 1.5 percent from 2018-19.
- The total number of blind/visually impaired students ages three to twenty-one has increased 1.6 percent (n=8) from 2018-19.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- The number of blind/visually impaired students, ages three to five (pre-kindergarten) increased from 32 children reported by 24 LEAs in 2015-16 to 57 children reported by 31 LEAs in 2019-20.

Based on data from APH:

- The number of blind/visually impaired students, ages three to twenty-one in LEAs other than MSB, has increased 1.7 percent (n=17) from 2018-19.
- The total number of blind/visually impaired students ages three to twenty-one has increased by 1.7 percent (n=18) for 2019-20. The total number of blind/visually impaired students ages three to twenty-one has decreased by 6.2 percent (n=70) from five years ago.

Primary Reading Medium Definitions APH

The primary reading medium definitions may be found in Data Element 2.

Findings for Data Element 4

- Approximately 6.5 percent (n=78) of students ages birth to twenty-one use braille as their primary reading medium.
- Pre-readers (students working on or toward a readiness level or older students with reading potential) and non-readers (students who show no reading potential or students who do not fall into any of the above categories) are the most common categories at 35.6 percent (n=427) and 28.9 percent (n=347), respectively.
- Less than three percent of students used regular print (2.7 percent), optical devices (2.2 percent) and auditory (2.2 percent), respectively.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Data Element 5: The number of braille-reading students who no longer receive any instruction in braille reading and writing but do receive materials in braille and braille-related services.

Percentage of Total Braille Readers = (Number of Non-Instructional Recipients/Total Braille Readers) x 100.

Findings for Data Element 5

- The number of non-instructional recipients is 26 in 2019-20, an increase of five from 2018-19.
- The non-instructional recipients as a percent of total braille readers increased from 11.6 percent in 2018-19 to 14.2 percent in 2019-20.

Data Source: DESE MOSIS and Educator Certification data as of September 14, 2020. Counts are of teachers certificated in Blind/Partially Sighted (kindergarten through grade twelve), employed in any Missouri LEA, and teaching any special education class. MSB teacher counts includes all teachers at MSB regardless of certification area.

* Fifty LEAs in 2018-19 and fifty-two LEAs in 2019-20 reported at least one teacher of the visually impaired.

Findings for Data Element 6

- While the number of teachers certificated in blind/partially sighted employed in LEAs to provide special education services has increased 10.1 percent (n=8) from 2018-19, the number of MSB teachers decreased from 16 in 2018-19 to 15 in 2019-20.
- The total number of teachers certificated in blind/partially sighted and employed in LEAs to provide special education services and MSB teachers decreased in 2017-18 and 2018-19 but increased in 2019-20 to totals similar to four and five years ago.

Data Sources: Number of Braille Writers from Blind Literacy Survey as of August 25, 2020, (reflects January 6, 2020, count date).

Findings for Data Element 7

- The number of braille writers decreased by 24.2 percent (n=31) from 2018-19. In 2019-20, 20 fewer LEAs reported students for this survey item and MSB reported 14 fewer students than the previous year.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Data Element 8: The number of eligible students educated in the general classroom (Inside Regular Class greater than 79 percent), in an itinerant or resource classroom (Inside Regular Class 40 to 79 percent), in a self-contained classroom (Inside Regular Class less than 40 percent), or in a separate educational facility.

Formulas: Adjusted cohort graduation rates: Percent of students graduating within four, five, six, or seven years.

Findings for Data Element 9

- The four-year graduation rate for blind/visually impaired students increased from 75.9 percent in 2018-19 to 78.4 percent in 2019-20. The four-year graduation rate for students with visual impairments has been significantly lower than the graduation rate for all students for the last several years, but their graduation rates generally increase dramatically by the seventh year.
- For the last five years, the four-year graduation rate for blind/visually impaired students shows a generally increasing trend.
- On average, the gap of graduation rates between blind/visually impaired students and all students has narrowed over the years. Average four-year graduation rates for the past five years were 77.5 percent in blind/visually impaired students and 89.2 percent in all students (11.6 percent gap), whereas average seven-year graduation rates were 87.5 percent and 91.4 percent between two groups, respectively (3.9 percent gap).

Findings for Data Element 10

In the 2019-20 school year, three blind/visually impaired students dropped out. In the same school year, no blind/visually impaired students reached age 21 and were terminated from formal education without attaining a high school diploma.

Data Element 11: The number of eligible students who received transition planning services with the cooperation of Rehabilitation Services for the Blind or Vocational Rehabilitation as part of their Individualized Education Program (IEP).

Note: Vocational Rehabilitation (VR) services to the blind are provided by RSB rather than by VR. RSB delivers VR services to eligible blind/visually impaired students ages fourteen and over and to their families statewide (further information may be found at https://dese.mo.gov/rehabilitation-services-blind and http://www.dss.mo.gov/fsd/rsb/).

Data Source: Number of Student Recipients from RSB as of August 24, 2020.

Findings for Data Element 11

- The number of students who received transition planning services with the cooperation of RSB as part of their IEP has decreased 11.6 percent (n=32) from 2018-19.
- The number of student recipients from RSB has gradually increased and there is a 26.3 percent (n=51) increase of the student recipients from RSB from five years ago.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Data Element 12: The number of eligible students referred to RSB or VR.

Note: Vocational Rehabilitation Services to the Blind are provided by RSB rather than by VR. All children ages birth to twenty-one or older identified as visually impaired upon parental consent or consent of the student (if the student is at least age eighteen) are to be referred by the LEA to RSB. Additional information concerning the referral process may be found at https://dese.mo.gov/rehabilitation-services-blind.

Data Source: RSB data as of August 24, 2020.

Findings for Data Element 12

- The number of blind/visually impaired students referred to RSB remained the same as 2018-19.
- The number of referred students has increased by 63.6 percent (n=35) from five years ago.

APPENDICES

APPENDIX A - Missouri State Plan for Special Education (Part B) – Visual Impairment/Blindness Definition

Visual Impairment/Blindness Definition

Visual Impairment, including blindness, means impairment in vision that, even with correction, adversely affects a child's educational performance. The term includes both partial sight and blindness.

Criteria for Initial Determination of Eligibility

A child displays a Visual Impairment when:

A. a visual impairment or a progressive vision loss has been diagnosed by an optometrist or ophthalmologist.

B. visual acuity has been determined to be:

1) for visual impairment, of 20/70 to 20/200 in the better eye with best correction by glasses

2) for blindness, of 20/200 or less in the better eye after best correction by glasses or a visual field measuring 20 degrees or less

C. the visual impairment adversely affects the child's educational performance.

APPENDIX B - Federal Quota Registration

The Federal Quota Registration is the census that records students who are eligible to receive materials provided by the federal Act to Promote the Education of the Blind. These Federal Quota accounts are maintained and administered by the APH and its Ex Officio Trustees. Instructions are distributed statewide to schools by MSB for the APH Federal Quota Registration as outlined by APH per federal requirements (see http://www.aph.org/federal-quota/).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

ELIGIBILITY

To be eligible for registration in the Federal Quota Program, students MUST meet the following criteria, as outlined in the Act to Promote the Education of the Blind:

- Meet the definition of legal blindness: "central visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye with best correction; a peripheral field so contracted that the widest diameter of such field subtends an angular distance no greater than 20 degrees; or visual performance reduced by a brain injury or dysfunction when visual function meets the definition of blindness as determined by an eye care specialist or neurologist."
- Be enrolled in a formally organized public or private, nonprofit educational program of less than college level. Note: The educational programs providing services to these students can include public, private, and parochial schools.
- Be enrolled with the registering school or agency on the first Monday in January.

Eligibility of Infants, Preschool Children, and Homebound Students: Eligible infants, preschool children, and homebound students can be registered if they are enrolled in a formally organized, regularly scheduled educational or training program and have a written education plan.

Eligibility of Students Who Are Home Schooled: In order for blind students enrolled in home school programs to prove eligibility for registration in the Federal Quota Program, the home school program should meet guidelines and/or procedures in effect within the state.

Eligibility of Adults: There is no chronological age limit for eligibility. The federal law limits registration to persons working at less than college level, but places no restriction on the age of eligible students. Legally blind adult students in education programs must “have a written instruction plan and be enrolled in and attend, on a regular basis, an instructional program of at least 20 hours of instruction per week. Social and leisure programs do not qualify as instructional programs."

INFORMATION TO BE REPORTED

For each eligible student, the following data must be reported (see reporting codes and definitions below):

- name of the LEA, private school, or agency enrolling the student
- name of student
- date of birth
- grade placement
- measurement of vision in the right eye, measurement of vision in the left eye
- primary reading medium
- secondary reading medium
- any additional reading medium
- written education plan (indication that one exists)

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

DEFINITIONS OF REQUIRED INFORMATION AND REPORTING CODES

Preschool and School-Age Students: This is not to include any eligible participants over school age.

Reporting Code	Definition
IP	Infants: Children of preschool age served by infant programs
PS	Preschool Students: Children of preschool age served by preschool programs
KG	Kindergarten Students: Children enrolled in kindergarten classes
01-12	Students of School Age: Determined by state law, in regular academic grades 1 through 12. Please indicate grade placement by using numerals 01 through 12
AN	Academic Non-graded: Students of school age, as determined by state law, who are working to acquire skills necessary for placement in a regular grade
VO	Vocational Students: Students of school age who are in vocational training (e.g., students enrolled in a program that leads to independent employment). This does not include students with multiple disabilities in pre-vocational programs or classes
PG	Post-graduate Students: Students of school age, as determined by state law, in a post-graduate high school program, studying at less than college level
OR	Other Registrants: Students of school age, as determined by state law, who do not fall into any of the above placements (e.g., students enrolled in classes for nonacademic students)
AD	Adult Students: Adults above school age (over 21 years of age) in educational programs of less than college level

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Vision Measurements and Reporting Codes

Reporting Code	Visual Measurement
20/200	Distance Vision: 20/200 or less with maximum correction using the Snellen Chart (example: 20/200 or 20/400)
VF	Visual Field: Restricted field of 20 degrees or less (add the degree of restriction after the VF code, for example: VF20, VF10, VF6)
CF	Counts Fingers: Should be used only when an eye specialist finds it is not possible to obtain an acuity using the Snellen Chart
FDB	Functions at the Definition of Blindness: Use when visual functioning is reduced by a brain injury or dysfunction and visual acuity is not possible to determine using the Snellen Chart; includes cortical visual impairment (CVI)
HM	Hand Movements: Should be used only when an eye specialist finds it is not possible to obtain an acuity using the Snellen Chart
OP	Object Perception: Should be used only when an eye specialist finds it is not possible to use the Snellen Chart. This may be noted on the eye report as CSM (central steady maintained if an object is used in testing) or some variation of this descriptor
LP	Light Perception only or perceives and localizes light: This may be noted on eye report as LPP (light perception with projection), BTL (blinks to light), or CSM (central steady maintained if light is used in testing). If CSM is reported but the stimulus used in testing is not indicated, use Light Perception as the eye measurement
NIL	Totally Blind with no light perception

Reading Media

Primary Reading Media and Reporting Codes: The primary reading medium is to be reported for each student using the following reporting codes. Only these codes will be accepted. Note: Infants and preschoolers identified as visual, Braille, or auditory readers should be reported using the appropriate media code.

Reporting Code	Primary Reading Medium
B	Braille Readers: Students primarily using Braille in their studies
A	Auditory Readers: Students primarily using a reader or auditory materials in their studies
P	Pre-readers: Students working on or toward a readiness level; infants, preschoolers, or older students with reading potential
S-R	Symbolic/Non-readers: Non-reading students; students who show no reading potential; students who do not fall into any of the above categories (this code was formerly N-R but was changed for the 2018 registration for improved clarity)
DV	Optical Devices: Students using optical devices that may be used with standard print as an aid to reading print
EL	Screen Enlargement: Students using large print via electronic screen enlargement software or a video magnifier as an aid to read print
LT	Large Type/Large Print Hardcopy: Students using large print hardcopy
RP	Regular Print

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Secondary and Additional Reading Medium

- Secondary Reading Medium is the reading format used to some extent as a second choice.
- Additional Reading Medium is a reading format beyond the primary and secondary mediums that is used some of the time.

Reporting Code	Secondary/Additional Reading Medium
B	Braille Readers: Students using Braille in their studies
A	Auditory Readers: Students using a reader or auditory materials in their studies
DV	Optical Devices: Students using optical devices that may be used with standard print as an aid to reading print
EL	Screen Enlargement: Students using large print via electronic screen enlargement software or a video magnifier as an aid to read print
LT	Large Type/Large Print Hardcopy: Students using large print hardcopy
RP	Regular Print: Students using standard print with no enlargement
NA	Not Applicable: Student with no additional reading media

Written Education Plans/Assessments and Reporting Codes

Reporting Code	Written Plan/Assessment
IEP	Individualized Education Program
504 Plan	A legal document falling under the provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. It is designed to plan a program of instructional services to assist students with special needs who are in a regular education setting. It is not an IEP as is required for special education students. However, a student moving from a special education to a regular education placement could be placed under a 504 plan.
Other	Any other written education plan
LVA	Clinical Low Vision Evaluation: an assessment of visual functioning that is conducted by an optometrist or ophthalmologist who specializes in low vision and includes tasks to identify whether an individual could benefit from the use of optical devices (reading glasses, magnifiers) or services (instruction in the use of devices)
LMA	Learning Media Assessment: an objective process of systematically selecting learning and literacy media for students with visual impairments

APPENDIX C - DESE Special Education Educational Environments and Dropout Categories

SPECIAL EDUCATION EDUCATIONAL ENVIRONMENT CATEGORIES

School-Age Educational Environment Categories (Ages Five and in Kindergarten to Twenty-One)

Inside regular class 80 percent or more of the day: Students with disabilities who are inside the regular classroom for 80 percent or more of the school day. This may apply to students with disabilities placed in

- regular class with special education/related services provided within regular classes.
- regular class with special education/related services provided outside regular classes.
- regular class with special education services provided in resource rooms.

This could include students with disabilities placed in an alternative school program with non-disabled peers. Do not include students with disabilities who are parentally placed in private schools to whom the LEA is providing special education and related services.

Inside regular class no more than 79 percent of the day and no less than 40 percent of the day: Students with disabilities who are inside the regular classroom between 40 and 79 percent of the day. This does not apply to students who are receiving education programs in public or private separate school or residential facilities. This may apply to students placed in

- resource rooms with special education/related services provided within the resource room.
- resource rooms with part-time instruction in a regular class.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

This could include students with disabilities placed in an alternative school program with non-disabled peers. Do not include students with disabilities who are parentally placed in private schools to whom the LEA is providing special education and related services.

Inside regular class less than 40 percent of the day: Students with disabilities who are inside the regular classroom less than 40 percent of the school day. This does not apply to students who are receiving education programs in public or private separate school or residential facilities. This category may apply to students placed in

- self-contained special classrooms with part-time instruction in a regular class.
- self-contained special classrooms with full-time special education instruction on a regular school campus.

This could include students with disabilities placed in an alternative school program with non-disabled peers. Do not include students with disabilities who are parentally placed in private schools to whom the LEA is providing special education and related services.

State Operated Separate School: This category should only be used by MSB, Missouri School for the Deaf (MSD), and Missouri Schools for the Severely Disabled (MSSD). Other LEAs should not report resident students who are attending these state operated programs.

Private Separate (Day) Facility: Students with disabilities who receive all of their special education and related services, at public expense, for greater than 50 percent of the school day in private separate facilities. This includes students with disabilities who are served by a private educational agency other than a parochial school. This includes those approved private agencies with whom LEAs contract to provide special education services to resident students.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Public Separate (Day) Facility: Students with disabilities who receive all of their special education and related services for greater than 50 percent of the school day in public separate facilities. This includes those students with disabilities placed by the IEP team in a segregated facility operated by an LEA. This does not include residential facilities and does not encompass facilities that include non-disabled students such as alternative school programs.

Homebound/Hospital: Due to student's illness, medically fragile condition, or a disciplinary suspension, the student receives special education at home or in a hospital via a visiting teacher or telephone instruction based on the student's IEP.

Private Residential Facility: Children with disabilities who receive all of their special education and related services, at public expense, for greater than 50 percent of the school day in private residential facilities, who are placed by the LEA IEP team. This does not include students living in private residential facilities but attending LEAs.

Parentally Placed Private School Children: Students with disabilities who are parentally placed in private schools, including home schools, and are receiving special education and related services from the LEA.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

SPECIAL EDUCATION DROPOUT CATEGORIES

Dropout Categories (Ages Fourteen to Twenty-One)

Received a Certificate: Students with disabilities who exited an educational program through the receipt of a certificate of attendance. This includes students who reached age twenty-one or otherwise terminated their education and who have met the LEA's attendance requirements.

Reached Maximum Age: Students with disabilities who exited an educational program because they reached the maximum age for receipt of educational services and did not receive a diploma or certificate of attendance.

Moved, Not Known to be Continuing: Students with disabilities who have moved out of the LEA and are not known to be continuing in any type of educational program (i.e. no records request from another educational program).

Dropped Out: Students with disabilities who are enrolled during the year and were not enrolled at the end of the year and did not exit through any of the other categories. This includes dropouts, runaways, expulsions, GED recipients, and status unknown.

TESTIMONY BEFORE MISSOURI HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CONGRESSIONAL REAPPORTIONMENT COMMITTEE

Presented by:
Rochelle Walton Gray
Chair, First Congressional Democratic Committee of Missouri
Member, St Louis County Democratic Central Committee, Ferguson Township
Former Missouri State Representative, District 75
Former, St Louis County Councilwoman, District 4

INTRODUCTION

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee.

I want to first thank you for the opportunity to address the House Committee on Reapportionment of the Congressional Districts of the State of Missouri. My name is Rochelle Walton Gray. I serve as Chairperson of the First Congressional District Democratic Committee of Missouri. I am also a member of the St Louis County Democratic Central Committee, from the Ferguson Township, a former Missouri State Representative, from District 75, and a former member of the St Louis County Council, representing District 4. As Chairperson of the First Congressional District Democratic Committee of Missouri, I am here in support of the drawing of a fair and equitable Congressional reapportionment plan for the State of Missouri that will continue to provide African American voters of Missouri the opportunity to elect Representatives to Congress of their choice, and particularly from the First and Fifth Congressional Districts which are presently represented by African American Congresspersons.

I must first acknowledge that I was assisted in the preparation of my testimony by my father who was a seven-term member of the Missouri House of Representatives and who has been in the forefront of advocating for reapportionment plans at the federal, state, and local level in Missouri for five decades. He is the author of a dissertation entitled, Separation from Power, A Study of African Americans Quest for Election to Public Offices in St Louis and Kansas City. One of the Chapters in the Dissertation specifically addressed reapportionment of legislative bodies. This testimony is gleaned from that Chapter of the Dissertation.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

It is my hope that I will be able to outline to you, the issues that must be considered by this committee in drafting a reapportionment plan for the congressional districts of the state that will result in the retention of two Congressional districts, out of the eight to which Missouri is expected to be entitled, in which African American voters may have the opportunity to elect congressional representatives of their choice.

LEGISLATIVE REAPPORTIONMENT

The legislative branch of government at the local, state, and federal levels are composed of multi-member bodies. Generally, each legislator is elected from a single-member geographical district. Under the US Constitution, for single member districts, each district must contain a total population, as nearly equal in population to each of the other districts, as practical. The districts are also required to be compact and contiguous.

POPULATION SHIFTS

Periodically, we have shifts in populations from district to district, due to relocation of people from one district to another or moving out of or into the district.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Furthermore, we have births and deaths, thus, some districts' total population will increase in excess of the average required population per district, while other districts' total population will decrease below the required average, over time. This then results in districts substantially unequal to each other in total population per district. In order to remedy this problem, the Federal, State and Local Constitutions, respectively, generally provide that every ten years, following the decennial census, each district's boundaries shall be redrawn, and the population reapportioned among the districts such that the districts will be restored to as nearly equal total populations per district as is practical. (Reynolds v. Sims, 1964)

RACIALLY DISCRIMINATORY REAPPORTIONMENT

During this reapportionment process, district boundaries may be drawn in such a manner as to either minimize or maximize the number of districts with a black voting majority and thus minimize or maximize the number of black persons who might be elected as members of the legislative body. Historically, the redistricting process has been under the control of the white majority; and, unfortunately, those governmental bodies which are responsible for reapportioning the legislative branches have historically used the reapportionment process to minimize black voting strength and thus to minimize the number of black legislators elected to office.

VOTE DILUTION

An article titled, "Minority Vote Dilution", includes an essay by Frank R. Parker in which hediscusses racial gerrymandering in legislative reapportionment.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

He discussed several methods used during reapportionment to dilute the minority vote.

SIXTY-FIVE PERCENT (65%) RULE

One of the concepts discussed by Parker in his essay is the 65% rule. Equal opportunity in the electoral process means that black voters are entitled to have an equal chance to elect African Americans to office to that of white citizens.

Ordinarily, equality would mean that districts should be drawn that are at least 50% black, wherever possible. However, analysis of census data reveals, that the black population as a whole is about 5% younger than the white population.

Therefore, the black voting age population in a district will generally be 5% less than the white voting age population, given 50% parity of the races. Also, due to lower socio-economic characteristics, black people of voting age tend to be registered at a rate which is 5% lower than the voter registration rates of white voters; and furthermore, black registered voters tend to turnout to vote at approximately a 5% lower rate than white registered voters. Thus, to create a district in which the black voting strength is equal to that of white voters, the black population in a district must be adjusted upward by 15%. A district then must be 65% (50% plus 15%) black in order for the black voters to have an equal opportunity to elect a representative of their choice.

CRACKING AND PACKING

Another issue discussed by Parker were the practices of "cracking" and "packing" as vote dilution devices. As indicated above, a black majority of at least

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

65% in a legislative district is necessary for black voters to elect a representative of their choice. However, a district with greater than a 65% majority is not required. Therefore, it has been found that white reapportionment authorities will employ variants of one of two basic tactics in order to minimize black voting strength:

(1) Cracking -- this is when district lines are drawn so that an area of concentrated minority population, which could constitute one or more majority black districts, is divided among several predominantly white districts, to assurethat no black person can be elected in any of those districts; or

(2) Packing -- this is when district lines are drawn so that an area of concentrated minority population, which could constitute two or more majorityblack districts, is packed into a single majority black district, to assure that no more than one black person is elected to office.

The packing and cracking devices take variant forms with the same objective, to minimize the number of black legislators elected to the legislature. Thus, we find discussed in U.S. Justice department documents various situations which the justice department believes is indicative of vote dilution.

John Dunne, Assistant U.S. Attorney General for Civil Rights, wrote several unpublished papers on this subject, and delivered speeches on the issue before various groups on the question of "reapportionment." U.S. Justice Department Regulations, 28 CFR 51, serves as the basis of his paper. Dunne sets forth the following as a list of redistricting practices which are deemed to be vote dilution devices:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

1. Altering district boundaries so as to put a black incumbent in the same district with a white incumbent where that white incumbent has advantages in campaign funds or a white voting majority,

2. Altering district boundaries so as to match black incumbent legislators in the same district as fellow black incumbent legislators, while creating open districts, in which no incumbent resides, with a white majority population, in order to assure that black incumbent legislators will not be re-elected and will instead be replaced by white legislators,

3. Altering district boundaries so as to carve up the constituency of a black incumbent so as to prevent said constituency from re-electing said incumbent to office,

4. Reducing the percent of black voters in a district where the black voters have previously been able to elect candidates of their choice by only a veryslim margin,

5. Maintaining the re-election chances of white incumbents by preserving the old district lines of such white incumbents to the greatest extent possible to prevent black voters from electing representatives of their choice,

6. Altering district boundaries to increase the number of white voters, in previously marginal or competitive districts where, black voters were almost, but not quite, able to elect a preferred candidate,

7. Creating open districts, where there is no incumbent, by drawing the boundaries of the district so that the black group will constitute an electoral minority,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

8. Arbitrarily, capriciously, and discriminatively deviating from the redistricting criteria that the commissioners claim they used in drawing the boundary lines, for example, crossing county or city boundary lines to pick up voters to create a white majority district while refusing to do so to create a black majority district,

9. Excluding black persons from the process of drawing the plan, or merely paying "lip service" to them by soliciting, but then ignoring, the black voter's input and then providing arbitrary, capricious, or discriminatory rationale for rejecting the black voter's redistricting proposal.

DISCRIMINATORY EFFECT

The result of cracking and packing of black voters is to deny black voters the opportunity to elect representatives of their choice in proportion to their numbers of the population as a whole.

14th AMENDMENT

The Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution has been held to require populations as nearly equal to each other as is possible in legislative districts. Therefore, on failure of the state or local legislative body, board, or commission, which has responsibility to adopt a reapportionment plan, a citizen can go into U.S. District court and request the court to either order the legislative body, board, or commission to redraw the boundary lines, or on failure to do so, thecourt itself can redraw said lines to provide that each district has a population as nearly equal to each other district as is practical.

15th AMENDMENT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In addition, however, the court has found that in reapportioning said legislative districts, the reapportioning authority has to consider the effects of the Fifteenth Amendment and those statutory provisions passed by the U.S. Congress to enforce Amendment Fifteen. The 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution provides:

"The right of the citizens of the United states to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

VOTING RIGHTS ACT

The United State Supreme court has established the principle that practices which dilute the right to vote should be treated like practices which deny the right to vote altogether; and thus, any reapportionment plan which results in the cracking or packing of concentrations of black voters in such a manner as to deny the minority group its right to elect representatives of its choice is a violation of the U.S. Voting Rights Act. The courts have said then that the reapportioning authority's obligation is to draft a plan with districts containing populations as nearly equal to each other as is practical, without diluting minority voting strength.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS

Title 42 of the United States Code, Section 1971(a)(1), provides that anyone who is otherwise qualified to vote under state law is entitled to vote "without distinction of race, color or previous condition of servitude." Section 1971(b) of title 42 provides that it is illegal for officials or private citizens to interfere with a person's right to vote in any general or primary election. And Section 2 of the U.S. Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended in 1982, provides:

"(a) No voting qualification or prerequisite to voting or standard, practice, or procedure shall be imposed or applied by any State or political subdivision in a manner which results in the denial or abridgment of the right of any citizen of the United States to vote on account of race or color,

(b) A violation of subsection (a) is established if, based on the totality of circumstances, it is shown that the political processes leading to nomination or election in the State or political subdivision are not equally open to participation by members of a class of citizens protected by subsection (a) in that its members have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice. The extent to which members of a protected class have been elected to office in the State or political subdivision is one circumstance which may be considered: Provided, That nothing in this section establishes a right to have members of a protected class elected in numbers equal to their proportion in the population."

PROOF OF DISCRIMINATORY EFFECT

In a reapportionment court case, in order to prove a violation of the Voting Rights Act, the plaintiffs must present evidence to the court of the following:

1. That African Americans are located in an area that is geographically compact and contains sufficient numbers of black Americans such that single member districts with a black majority can be drawn.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2. That the number of districts with black majorities actually drawn, by the reapportionment commission, is less than the maximum number of black majority districts that could have been drawn.

3. That black voters are politically cohesive in the districts being drawn, that is, they tend to vote as a bloc, casting most of their votes for the same candidates for offices.

4. That whites vote as a bloc, casting their ballots in such concentrations such that the candidates of choice for the black community are usually defeated.

LITIGATION SUPPORT

In order to evaluate and determine whether or not a reapportionment plan has the effect of diluting minority voting strength through a racial gerrymander to minimize the number of majority black districts, research must be done on following issues:

1. Reapportionment Plan

The researcher must prepare a plan showing the maximum number ofdistricts that might be drawn in those areas of the state, where blacks are concentrated, that is, St. Louis City, St. Louis County, Kansas City, Columbia, and the bootheel area of Southeast Missouri.

2 Racially Polarized Voting Behavior

Thereafter the researcher must make a statistical analysis of black voting preferences in those districts included in that plan. Because voting on the basis of race is the question that needs to be answered, Black candidate vs. white candidate elections should be analyzed. The researcher should identify Black candidates, over the last ten years, for state representative and other offices, who had white opponents. Election results would then be secured on a precinct-by-precinct basis. The precincts are then matched against the census data to determine black vs. white voting behavior, that is, did the predominantly white precincts vote for the white candidate? Did the predominantly black precincts vote for the black candidate? How did the racially mixed precincts vote?

In those elections where there might be only white candidates and no black candidates, did the black voters all vote for one white candidate, while the bulk of the white voters voted for the other white candidate? Or if there are only black candidates, and no white candidates, did the white voters bloc vote for one of the black candidates, while the black voters voted for the other black candidate? Racial bloc voting then does not depend on the racial identity of the candidates, but on the racial identity of the voters. Therefore, the researcher must show that the black voters tend to vote as a bloc for some particular candidates or issues, while white voters tend to vote as a bloc for the opposing candidate or issue.

The researcher will identify the names of black candidates in the jurisdiction who have previously run for office over the past ten years. The researcher should also identify ballot issues and candidates with racially charged issues. Some issues, such as school tax elections, can be analyzed for bloc voting behavior, as well. In St. Louis City, for example, the black population is younger with school aged children; therefore, the black community tends to vote as a bloc for school tax increases; on the other hand, the white community is older, without school aged children, and therefore tends to vote against such issues. This is still evidence of racial bloc voting and should be included in the researcher's analysis.

There must be separate research for each area of the state in which the black population is concentrated, that is, Jackson County, St. Louis City and St. Louis County, Columbia, the bootheel. In order to practically demonstrate the 65% rule, we have to look at voting age population, registration rates and voter turnout.

3. Voting Age Population

Black vs. White Voting age population in a district must be analyzed. If a district is 50% black, but the black population over the age of 18, compared with the white population over the age of 18, is 5% less than the white voting age population, the district may need to be increased to 55% black in order to achievea black voting majority.

4. Registration Rates

Voter registration rates in the districts must be analyzed; that is, the number of registered voters in a precinct in proportion to the number of people in a precinct who are 18 or older. If the black voter registration rates are five percent less than the white voter registration rates, then to have an effective voting majority, the black population may need to be increased in the district by five percent to 60% black.

5. Voter Turnout

Voter turnout rates should be analyzed. Although there may be 1000 people registered in a precinct, only 300 of those people may actually vote on an average over the years. Black voter turnout rates should then be compared with white voter turnout rates in order to determine the percentage of black population which one wants in a district. Normally it is found that black voter turnout is 5% less than white voter turnout, thus a district which is 50% black will not give blacks an equal opportunity to elect a representative of their choice unless the black population is increased to 65% of the total.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

6. Socioeconomic Factors

Socioeconomic factors should be analyzed, that is, how does the black community compare with the white community on a socioeconomic basis, in terms of housing, income, education, health care, crime statistics, business indices, etc.

This data may be secured from the census but is also the subject of numerous sociological studies as well as government, agency, newspaper, and university reports. These socioeconomic factors are important in that one's socioeconomic status influences one's political behavior. The lower the socioeconomic status, the lower the participation rates.

7. Historical Discrimination

Historical evidence of racial discrimination should be gathered. Both official, public, and private discriminatory actions should be reviewed. Laws which required segregated facilities such as school segregation should be identified. Court enforcement of racially discriminative private action such as restrictive housing covenants should be included in the research. Administrative or executive action against black institutions such as the closing of black public hospitals is strong evidence of public indifference to the needs of the black voters. Racially segregated country clubs, employment discrimination, segregated pools, theaters, hotels, etc., and the experiences of black and white discrimination investigators are good sources of information on private discrimination against blacks.

The researcher thus must identify any official or unofficial discriminatory practices of legislative, executive, or judicial officials, as well as identify private practices which resulted in discrimination against blacks and those instances of de facto discrimination which show that, though not sanctioned by law, there is discrimination in fact.

SUMMARY

In summary then, the researcher can demonstrate the discriminatory effect of a reapportionment plan by showing that the number of majority black districts that could have been drawn is greater than the number of districts that were actually included in the redistricting plan. But, the significance of a plan which minimizes the creation of majority black districts can only be demonstrated by the fact that racial bloc voting prevails in the Congressional, State or Municipal Council or Aldermanic district; and thus, if a group of black voters are submerged in majority white districts, they will be unable to elect representatives of their choice. Those proofs will result in the court voiding such a discriminatory reapportionment plan and mandating the drawing of a new plan.

OTHER PROTECTED MINORITIES

The above principles apply to Hispanic and Native American populations as well.

PARTISAN REAPPORTIONMENT

Similarly, historically, that same process has also been employed to minimize a particular political party's voting strength, within a district, and thus to minimize the number of legislators affiliated with a particular political party being elected to office in the legislative body as a whole. No court, however, has found that partisan gerrymandering is unconstitutional, to date.

CONCLUSION

In closing, I want to first thank you for the opportunity to give testimony to this Honorable Committee. It is my hope and the hopes of the African American citizens and voters of the State of Missouri that this Honorable House Committee on Congressional Reapportionment will keep the above principles in mind when drafting a plan for reapportionment of the eight congressional districts in this state and that it will include in its plan two districts, the first and the fifth, that will have sufficient African American majorities that will grant the African American voters therein the opportunity to elect representatives of their choice.

Again, thank you and that is the end of my testimony.

Testimony for District 5
April 13, 2021
Missouri House Special Committee on Redistricting

My name is Mary Lindsay. I live in Kansas City in Missouri's 5th Congressional District. I share my views as a member of the League of Women Voters of Missouri's Redistricting Committee. I appreciate the opportunity to express my opinions on congressional redistricting.

I wonder why the southern line of District 6 currently crosses the natural barrier of the Missouri River and claims a significant portion of Jackson County. I am also puzzled about why Ray County is in District 5 since it is a rural county having more in common with other counties in District 6. Perhaps Districts 5 and 6 were not gerrymandered in 2011, but the shape of District 5 seems highly suspicious.

When one political party holds a supermajority in both legislative bodies and the governorship, that party clearly wields great power and will surely be tempted to gerrymander congressional districts.

Modern technology provides computer programs to precisely draw maps to be remarkably nonpartisan or to be remarkably partisan—fair or unfair. Similarly, technology allows citizens and courts to make equally precise assessments of the actual fairness of resulting district maps.

I hope honorable members of this committee will resist the temptation to gerrymander and will incorporate "partisan fairness" and "competitiveness" in congressional districts for this decade.

The U.S.A.'s founders wrote the Declaration of Independence, Constitution, and Bill of Rights to establish this country and it's government for having a civilized reality to enable the citizens to have life and safety. The U.S.A.'s ideals have become overpowered by barbaric philosophies and ways, corruption, incompetence, and crimes.

Since 1900 the robbing of very many citizens' lives by various ways amounts to at least 250,O00,O00 deaths. Genocide has happened. When reading these crime statistics keep in mind that not all crimes have been reported and counted. An F.B.I. report shows that during the 1960s crimes had increased 400-500% more. By the early 2000s an F.B.I. report shows 22,252,305 reported and counted crimes. There are at least 10,000,000 violent actions each year.

The state governments, court systems, social services, and foster care system have not been reliable for protecting citizens from serious harm and being robbed of life. There is corruption and incompetence. Very many cases of robbing of life have not been taken seriously. Some judges overturn jury verdicts. Many criminals receive plea bargains and little or no prison time. Most criminals released from prison still have a violent nature and continue to do violent crimes.

I have read that 4,000,000 women are battered by their mates each year. Some judges make court judgements, which result in murders that could have been prevented. Often rapes have not been taken seriously. I have read at least 700,000, females are raped each year. 61% of rape victims are underage minors. The foster care system's ways result in children as missing persons, being sex trafficked, and murdered. I have read about 1,000,000 missing persons each year. Most of them are probably murdered. I suggest government officials get serious about fighting corruption and crimes.

The U.S.A. has other philosophies and ways, which have resulted in genocide. The schools do not provide enough education about biology, health, and illnesses. A food chart is shown, but not enough nutrition details for good health, including good immunity. Many citizens do not realize they have nutritional deficiencies. When they become ill, they go to the mainstream medical system expecting to be cured. However, the usual treatments of surgeries, prescription drugs, chemicals, radiation, and vaccines do not fix the problem of nutritional deficiencies. Wrong treatments cause at least 2,000,000 citizens to lose their lives each year.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Corrupt people, who want to cause even more genocide, have deceived most citizens about coronavirus to convince them to take very dangerous experimental vaccines - COVID vaccines.
https://www.naturalnews.com/2020-04-03-eugenicist-bill-gates-demands-digital-certificates-coronavirus-vaccination.html

For a long time there has been deception about virus. https://thefreedomarticles.com/dr-stefan-lanka-2020-article-reveals-virus-misconception/

Most citizens have been deceived about the difference between a cold, the flu, and COVID. A cold and the flu are respiratory illnesses. COVID is a circulatory illness. "Doctor Reveals Corona Effect - COVID not Viral but Blood Coagulation" https://the freedomarticles.com/doctor-reveals-corona-effect-blood-coagulation/

All vaccines have many toxic ingredients. Very many thousands of children have died from the usual vaccines and hundreds of thousands got autism. The COVID vaccines have additional toxic ingredients - hydrogel and nanobots, which are very tiny pieces of metal. They change DNA, cause illnesses, such as paralysis, sterility - not able to have children, and deaths. From taking the COVID vaccines thousands of people have already soon died. For the other people, who have taken the COVID vaccines, and not died, perhaps they have better nutrition. However, because the COVID vaccines change DNA, they will cause them death too. It may be from 1 month to 3 years time before death happens to very many more citizens.

Vaccines do not prevent infections and have many toxic ingredients. Healthy foods along with nutritional supplements are needed to prevent infections. Some nutritionists have written books with details about what is needed. There has been a lawsuit against the U.S.A. government about forced vaccines. The government lost. Not only the government, but also schools, employers, and banks should not be allowed to require vaccines, the COVID vaccines, for citizens to have jobs and services. I have heard about the vaccine promoters wanting the U.S.A.'s children to take the COVID vaccines too. I suggest that government officials get the COVID vaccines stopped to allow whatever number of citizens, who have not taken them, to live.

Sincerely,
Deborah Reid

Good morning Senator Rowden

I am a disabled veteran since 1968 writing to ask that you fulfill your Oath of Office (as I did in 1968) to defend the US Constitution. I am told by several sources that the SAPA ball is literally in your court, awaiting action by yourself Please, please take *immediate pro-active measures in securing passage of SAPA

Women and Minorities (including my own wife) well understand the self defense issues, and anyone who does not need only view the following video: If you, like most of us, are time constrained please skip over to 3:20 to see what happened to an elderly lady who wanted only to defend herself from rioters and looters.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=y9qUxaTikuc Gun Confiscation Can and Has Happened in America - Katrina 2005

Can any of us imagine our Grandmother, Mother, Wife, Sister, Daughter being left (as this woman was) with no self defense?

And if anyone thinks mis-deeds cannot happen in Missouri, please 'flash back' to only a few short years ago The Missouri Highway Patrol provided a spreadsheet of names of people with Conceal Carry Weapons permits to the federal government ….. Gov. Jay Nixon previously said the State had not sent the information..

https://themissouritimes.com/schaefer-announces-patrol-released-ccw-list-to-second-federal-agency/

Two final points: In 2002 I retired from Saudi Arabia and brought my wife to the USA (after an incredible amount of paperwork, police background checks and fees), and the first thing I did was teach her gun safety and how to shoot. When she became a citizen the first thing I did was enroll her in a CCW class and then take her to the Sheriff's office for her very own CCW permit. Two points are to be made: 1) the ladies at the local Sheriff's office, and indeed our Lawrence County Sheriff himself, are very supportive of a woman's right to self defense, and 2) multiple Sheriff's around the State are on record as supporting the 2nd Amendment and a woman's right to self defense…. Do not let the media convince you otherwise! My wife's CCW pistol is like her credit card ……. She does not leave home without it! We should never need fear that the self defense capability of any law abiding citizen (any color of the rainbow) could be infringed.

Time is very short, SAPA must yet go back to the House, and from there to the Governor for signature. Federal Government over-reach is at an unbelievable level, in so many areas, and promptly passing SAPA will secure our rights, and make a clear statement. The annual 2nd Amendment Rally is at the Capitol next week, I hope we can learn that SAPA is 'a done deal' at that time.

PLEASE, PLEASE BE PROACTIVE IN PASSING SAPA.

Thank you

Robert E (Gene) Ballay

Missouri's SAPA is (finally) on the move, in our State Senate.PLEASE TAKE A FEW MINUTES FROM A BUSY DAY TO WATCH THIS VIDEO EXPLAIN HOW MISSOURI'S SAPA WOULD WORK. KEY TOPICS AND THE PRESENTATION TIME WITHIN THE VIDEO ARE SHOWN BELOW.

More Than A Dozen States Are Trying To Nullify Federal Gun Control

8:25 total view time

1. Introduced with an over-view of the concept of nullifying Federal laws and historical examples of actual use
2. 0:40 discusses how Oregon used the same concept to quit 'collaborating with Federal government" in the detainment of illegal immigrants and establishment of Sanctuary Cities
3. 1:00 Arizona Governor signs into law their SAPA, which is based upon the same concept as Missouri(in fact, it appears they took the MO legislation as a starting point, and beat us into passing it as a law). Montana's Governor recently signed legislation based upon the same concept
4. 1:37 explains President James Madison's concept, which is the basis of the MO SAPA
5. 2:23 explains how Florida's SAPA Law works(which is similar in concept to our Missouri SAPA)
6. 2:55 documents other anti-commandeering examplesof States refusing to cooperate with the Federal Government on laws they (the State) find inappropriate (Sanctuary Cities, decriminalization of Marijuana, etc). An underlying feature of the strategy is that the Federal Government has passed far more laws (some of which are very questionable, in a Constitutional sense) that they can not enforce those laws without State agents
7. 4:15 The legality of these "anti-commandeering" State laws does not in fact depend upon the constitutionality of the specific issue, as determined in five separate Supreme Court cases
8. 5:42 a historical perspective on this nullification conceptis discussed, that draws upon anti-slavery northern State response with regard to the Fugitive Slave Act in pre-Civil War days.
9. 6:25 explains which Sheriff's Association sometimes lobby against SAPA legislation (hint, Federal money is involved)

Time and action are of the essence as SAPA still needs to go back to the House, and then to the Governor.

Every law-abiding American (especially women and minorities) deserves to have the GOD-GIVEN right of self defense and further delays by the Senate Leadership could leave us in the position of having to explain to our Grandmothers, Mothers, Wives, Sisters, and Daughters why their GOD GIVEN self-defense capability has been taken away.

PLEASE, PLEASE BE PRO-ACTIVE IN SECURING PASSAGE OF SAPA PLUS THE GOVERNOR'S SIGNATURE

Thank you Gene Ballay Aurora, MO

> Dear Chairman Basye, Vice Chairman Haffner and Members of the Education Committee:
>
> I am writing to ask for your support of Representative Nick Schroer's amendment to HB 1141 prohibiting the teaching of Critical Race Theory and "The 1619 Project" in Missouri's education institutions and HB 1411.
>
> The legislative session is ending, and we need to take immediate action and stop the implementation of the racist Critical Race Theory and the revisionist history of "The 1619 Project" from Missouri's educational institutions. Missouri taxpayers should not be funding hate.
>
> States, like Arkansas, Idaho, Tennessee, Oklahoma, and Florida have already passed legislation banning this Marxists-based ideology. Critical Race Theory and "The 1619 Project" removes individualism and teaches students to hate their country and believe their fellow students are somehow either superior or inferior based on their race or gender. Teaching this harmful and racist theory and revisionist history to our children is teaching systemic racism.
>
> Missouri should be looking for ways to unite this country and look beyond race or gender. We shouldn't be looking to return the pre-civil rights era of segregated water fountains, bathrooms or college dorms. The story of the American founding and the subsequent stories of the Civil War and the Civil Rights movement of the 1960's are the real stories of the spirit of America - how our young nation wrestled with the amoral institution of slavery and defeated it and how a century later Americans continued to advance the idea that ALL Americans are equal in the eyes of God.
>
> Children in our state should be taught that their hard work, their character, and their deeds matter more than the color of their skin or the economic situation they have been born into. This is the real American way, and it is available to all. It is for this reason that I urge you to Representative Schroer's amendment to HB1141.

Good afternoon Senator Schatz

It is my understanding that our Missouri Second Amendment Preservation Act is again "in your court, awaiting action by yourself", and *my wife and I are writing to ask that you take prompt and pro-active measures to immediately pass SAPA onwards to the House, and then to the Governor for signature. TIME IS SHORT.

The following photos date to 11 Sept 2013 when we took our boys out of school to attend a rally at the Capitol in support of SAPA, thereby giving them a hands-on lesson in how our great country works. Today my older boy is into his second year as a US Marine, and sad to say Missouri is still awaiting SAPA.

Please take a look at the photos and note that what you find are honest, hard-working, law-abiding Missouri residents, men and women, who neither live in gated communities nor have security details, and depend upon themselves and their neighbors in all kinds of ways. There are 600 square miles in Lawrence County, and while we have the best Sheriff in the entire State that is a lot of area to cover with limited manpower.

And I would like to draw your attention to another demographic my wife is an immigrant who works at Walmart in order to feed her family back in Philippines, and I am here to tell you that people who are outside the Mainstream are daily faced with innuendos, curses and intimidation that you could not imagine. Just as soon as she became a citizen I took her to the Sheriff's office for her very own CCW, and your inaction on this issue is now putting her (and countless others) at risk of losing their God-Given right of self defense. If some chose to not go with CCW, fine as this is a free country. But there are many who value the ability to defend themselves and their loved ones.

If anyone thinks mis-deeds cannot happen in Missouri, please 'flash back' to only a few short years ago The Missouri Highway Patrol provided a spreadsheet of names of people with Conceal Carry Weapons permits to the federal government ….. Gov. Jay Nixon previously said the State had not sent the information.

https://themissouritimes.com/schaefer-announces-patrol-released-ccw-list-to-second-federal-agency/

PLEASE BE PRO-ACTIVE WITH SAPA, MOVE IT ONWARDS TO THE HOUSE PROMPTLY AND THEREBY SUPPORT OUR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS. Thank you

Joey and Jimmy arrive in Jefferson City for the Second Amendment Rally. A "hands-on lesson" in democracy at work.

11 Sept 2013.

The Rally is primarily focused on Governor Nixon's veto of the Second Amendment Preservation Act, but as can be seen by the placards, there are other concerns as well.

Although the DC Crowd, and many in the media, would cast us as a bunch of radicals, we suggest that you look at those in attendance and judge for yourself.

CSPOA/Sheriff Mack Press Release: Dated Sept. 10, 2013

The Constitutional Sheriffs and Peace Officers Association endorses HB 436 and applauds the legislature for their courageous stand to nullify any effort to infringe the right of the people to keep and bear arms. All law enforcement officers should be on the side of the people and the Constitution. The opposing side is made up of Nixon, Biden, and Obama and a bunch of other politicians who want us to believe that the Constitution no longer applies today. The CSPOA stands firmly against all such propaganda.

Richard Mack, Director
Constitutional Sheriffs and Police Officer Association
PO Box 567 Higley, AZ 85236
(480) 840-9091

Sheriff Richard Mack (ret) was one of the two plaintiffs in the U.S. Supreme Court case Printz v. United States. Sheriffs Mack and Printz prevailed in that case, resulting in the court ruling that states could refuse to participate in federal gun control efforts. The Supreme Court's ruling in Printz factored heavily in the portion of the Obamacare ruling that stated the federal government could not force the states to expand Medicaid or punish them with sanctions if they didn't expand existing Medicaid programs.

Good morning Senator Rowden

I am a disabled veteran of 53 years,tasked by my fellow veterans with determining what the Senate hold-up is with our Second Amendment Protection Act, and then reporting those findings back to them. I am being told by several sources, that the SAPA ball is literally in your court, awaiting action by yourself If this is correct could you please update me with any concerns so that I may report to my fellow veterans, after which we will do our best to address those issues.

Veterans (every color of the rainbow) have more 'skin in the Constitutional rights debate' than almost any other constituency, for we have literally put our lives on the line, with many of us 'paying the price' until this very day.

Minorities (including my own wife) also well understand the self defense issues,which brings me to a second point. If a particular group does not favor self defense that is their right (it's a free country), but I can tell you with certainty that the Inner Cities are where a majority of the violence takes place, and I want my wife to be able to defend herself anywhere in this great country.

And two final points: In 2002 I retired from Saudi Arabia and brought my wife to the USA (after an incredible amount of paperwork, police background checks and fees), and the first thing I did was teach her gun safety and how to shoot. When she became a citizen the first thing I did was enroll her in a CCW class and then take her to the Sheriff's office for her very own CCW permit. Two points are to be made: 1) the ladies at the local Sheriff's office, and indeed the Lawrence County Sheriff himself, are very supportive of a woman's right to self defense, and 2) multiple Sheriff's around the State are on record as supporting the 2nd Amendment and a woman's right to self defense…. Do not let the media convince you otherwise! My wife's CCW pistol is like her credit card ……. She does not leave home without it!We should never need fear that the self defense capability of any law abiding citizen could be infringed.

Time is very short, SAPA must yet go back to the House, and from there to the Governor for signature. Federal Government over-reach is at an unbelievable level, in so many areas, and promptly passing SAPA will secure our rights, and make a clear statement. The annual 2nd Amendment Rally is at the Capitol next week, I hope we can learn that SAPA is 'a done deal' at that time.

PLEASE, PLEASE BE PROACTIVE IN PASSING SAPA.

Thank you

Robert E (Gene) Ballay

ps: Two slides follow, to illustrate what is meant by 'Veterans have skin in the Constitutional Rights Discussion'.

How well I remember the Army sending me home to that great big $21 / month disability pension, and further encountering smug looks of contempt when I enrolled at MSU (SMS in those days).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

How well I remember the VA taking 7 ½ years to process and reject my last pension review request, refusing to accept as evidence of medication side effects the very paperwork they would include with my VA prescription medication.

January 1968: "just another day" and the next thing I know is awakening 18 hours later in what seems to be an ICU, in traction with no clothes on.

April-May 1968: Home on Convalescent Leave. Eleven months in five different military hospitals: learned to walk again at age 19.

Eleven months in five different military hospitals and when discharged in Dec '68 I thought that was the end of it. Little did I realize the significance of the doctor's action when I was cut out of the body cast. Double femur fractures such as mine were common in the military hospitals, and it was not unusual for the injured leg to grow back shorter than the other: my right leg was ¾" shorter than the left. The usual remedy for this situation was a built up shoe, but when I asked the doctor who removed my body cast if I needed a built-up shoe, his exact words were "naw, you will get used to it". *That doctor knew the road to the next promotion did not pass through the 'built up shoe route'.

I remember like yesterday, coming home from the Army to a GREAT BIG $21/MONTH DISABILITY PENSION, just wanting to forget about it all, and Mother repeatedly telling me to file a claim with the VA, so as to get the injuries "in the record": and how glad I am that I finally filed that claim.

The problem with "getting used to it" is that knee, hip and back joints were no longer properly aligned and by my late 40's it was affecting daily life. After retiring from Saudi Arabia and returning to US, I went to the VA, where *both the Pain Management and Podiatry doctors said the same thing: there should have been a compensating shoe prescribed when the body cast was removed. Orthopedic shoes were then prescribed, and clearly made a difference, but the mis-alignment damage to the various joints could not be undone, and thus began a journey with pain. There must be tens of thousands of disabled vets, whose injuries / chronic pain are much worse than mine, and yet the media would have the public believe that we are only "whiners, seeking sympathy and easy money": have you ever seen the media interview, even a single time, a disabled vet and inquire about his situation???

YES, VETERANS (EVERY COLOR IN THE RAINBOW) HAVE 'SKIN IN THE CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS GAME'.

Below please find my correspondence with Senator Hough

Regardless of whether one is a shooting enthusiast or not, there is a fundamental right of self defense at issue here, especially for those citizens who are at most risk (specifically women, elderly, etc). If someone does not care to have a CCW, fine, it is a free country. But for most of us who live in a rural environment, with drugs and people in need of a quick fix all around (etc etc), we value our ability to defend ourselves and those we love.

And if anyone thinks that there is no need to separate our Constitutional rights from Federal Agencies, please take a look at the link included in the original correspondence, in which Missouri twice provided a list of CCW permit holders to Federal agencies.

If you find merit in any of my points, please ask Senator Hough to take positive action

Thank you

Senator Hough

I am told that Senators Schatz and Rowden have at the last minute 'passed Missouri SAPA to you' and am writing to ask that you now take prompt and pro-active action to move the House Version to a Senate vote.

Time is very short and Senators Schatz and Rowden have put the Senate version of SAPA in an untenable position, meaning that in order for SAPA to have a chance at passing the Legislature, we need the House version to move.

There are various perceptions from which to view SAPA, and in my e-mail to Schatz and Rowden of a few days ago (below), I summarize several.

Please take this opportunity to demonstrate to hard-working, law-abiding Missouri citizens, men and women, that you have their interests at heart, and that you are not playing the role of an elitist, nor being manipulated by a lobby group.

Thank you

Good afternoon Senator Schatz

It is my understanding that our Missouri Second Amendment Preservation Act is again "in your court, awaiting action by yourself', and my wife and I are writing to ask that you take prompt and pro-active measures to immediately pass SAPA onwards to the House, and then to the Governor for signature. TIME IS SHORT.

The following photos date to 11 Sept 2013 when we took our boys out of school to attend a rally at the Capitol in support of SAPA, thereby giving them a hands-on lesson in how our great country works. Today my older boy is into his second year as a US Marine, and sad to say Missouri is still awaiting SAPA.

Please take a look at the photos and note that what you find are honest, hard-working, law-abiding Missouri residents, men and women, who neither live in gated communities nor have security details, and depend upon themselves and their neighbors in all kinds of ways. There are 600 square miles in Lawrence County, and while we have the best Sheriff in the entire State that is a lot of area to cover with limited manpower.

And I would like to draw your attention to another demographic: my wife is an immigrant who works at Walmart in order to feed her family back in Philippines, and I am here to tell you that people who are outside the Mainstream are daily faced with innuendos, curses and intimidation that you could not imagine. Just as soon as she became a citizen I took her to the Sheriff's office for her very own CCW, and your inaction on this issue is now putting her (and countless others) at risk of losing their God-Given right of self defense. If some chose to not go with CCW, fine as this is a free country. But there are many who value the ability to defend themselves and their loved ones.

If anyone thinks mis-deeds cannot happen in Missouri, please 'flash back' to only a few short years ago: The Missouri Highway Patrol provided a spreadsheet of names of people with Conceal Carry Weapons permits to the federal government ….. Gov. Jay Nixon previously said the State had not sent the information.

https://themissouritimes.com/schaefer-announces-patrol-released-ccw-list-to-second-federal-agency/

PLEASE BE PRO-ACTIVE WITH SAPA, MOVE IT ONWARDS TO THE HOUSE PROMPTLY AND THEREBY SUPPORT OUR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS. Thank you

Gene Ballay / Aurora, MO.

The Rally is primarily focused on Governor Nixon's veto of the Second Amendment Preservation Act, but as can be seen by the placards, there are other concerns as well.

Although the DC Crowd, and many in the media, would cast us as a bunch of radicals, we suggest that you look at those in attendance and judge for yourself.

The Constitutional Sheriffs and Peace Officers Association endorses HB 436 and applauds the legislature for their courageous stand to nullify any effort to infringe the right of the people to keep and bear arms. All law enforcement officers should be on the side of the people and the Constitution. Sheriff Richard Mack (ret) was one of the two plaintiffs in the U.S. Supreme Court case Printz v. United States. Sheriffs Mack and Printz prevailed in that case, resulting in the court ruling that states could refuse to participate in federal gun control efforts. The Supreme Court's ruling in Printz factored heavily in the portion of the Obamacare ruling that stated the federal government could not force the states to expand Medicaid or punish them with sanctions if they didn't expand existing Medicaid programs.

Missouri Governor — Michael L. Parson

Office of Communications

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

June 30, 2021

Governor Parson Signs Wayfair Legislation Into Law

(JEFFERSON CITY, MO) – Today, during a ceremony at the State Capitol, Governor Mike Parson signed SB 153 & 97 into law, allowing Missouri and local jurisdictions to collect an online use tax that will help protect Missouri's brick and mortar businesses.

"Passing Wayfair legislation has been a top priority of my administration, and we are happy to be signing this critical legislation into law today," Governor Parson said. "This law will help even the playing field between Missouri small businesses and large out-of-state retailers. With more than 570,000 small businesses in the state of Missouri, it is time that we establish a 21st century tax code that benefits our Main Street businesses rather than companies that don't invest in our communities or employ our citizens."

In 2018, the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in South Dakota v. Wayfair, Inc. allowed states to adopt rules to collect sales and use taxes from business not physically located in their state but who sell and deliver products into the state.

SB 153 & 97 will allow Missouri and local jurisdictions to collect a use tax from online retailers who sell and deliver more than $100,000 in tangible goods to consumers in the state annually.

Collection and remittance obligations will begin on January 1, 2023. Sales and uses taxes cannot be retroactive and will be collected by the Missouri Department of Revenue. Following 49 other states and Washington D.C., Missouri will be the final state to implement an economic nexus law since the Supreme Court's decision in 2018.

Currently, Missouri businesses lose sales because out-of-state, online retailers are not subject to the same state sales tax laws that local businesses are. The current system also burdens Missouri businesses because they are required to remit sales and use taxes to other states, but out-of-state businesses selling to Missourians do not.

"This legislation is many years in the making and long overdue in the state of Missouri," Governor Parson said. "This is a big win for our state and our small businesses, and we appreciate Senator Koenig and Representative Eggleston for prioritizing this legislation and working tirelessly to find agreement and get it passed."

View in browser

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Please join the University of Missouri Board of Curators, University leaders, state and federal dignitaries, and honored guests as we celebrate the

of the

Roy Blunt NextGen Precision Health Building

Tuesday, Oct. 19, 2021 | 10 AM

University of Missouri

1030 Hitt Street

On the corner of Virginia Avenue & Hospital Drive

This anchoring facility will harness the power of the four universities in the UM System, MU Health Care, MU Extension and external partners to bring together cutting-edge research, technologies, and treatments to transform health care and save lives.

Grand Opening festivities will take place both virtually and in person. A livestream link and additional event information will be available at precisionhealth.missouri.edu.

Please RSVP by Friday, Oct. 8 at umurl.us/NextGenGrandOpening.

Complimentary parking and shuttle service will be available in Parking Structure 7, just south of the NextGen building.

For additional information, please visit precisionhealth.missouri.edu.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

At this time, we are asking all attendees to wear a mask to this event.The University of Missouri continues to monitor the COVID-19 situation and will post any changes regarding this request between now and this event.

Additionally, all attendees are asked to monitor their symptoms before coming to the University of Missouri campus. Please do not come to campus if you are experiencing symptoms, feel unwell and/or have come into contact with someone who has tested positive for COVID-19.

For more information, please visit renewal.missouri.edu.

Subject: grid-level, consumer-level

Hello,

My name is Andy Hurla and I've been testing the waters in Missouri for the Blunt family retirement.

This decade, there's grid-level and consumer-level initiatives we'll need to organize in the US economy.

To explain, I'm including 2 photos:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(energypolicy.columbia.edu)

Biden's proposal incentivizes the grid-level to invest in electric transmission facilities that meet new standards. Where does Missouri stand on this issue?

(Siemens)

At the consumer-level, items like the charger shown in the above picture will likely become common household items by 2035.

We need to prove where clean energy choices are cost solutions. When this is true, we need to support business plans.

When Missouri does have a grid-level upgrade, new business needs to service the consumer-level appropriately. Let's take our time. Biden's plan would make a tax credit effective for years 2022-2032.

This decade, Missouri will also need a measured comparison of digital money circulating the economy against printed money circulating in the economy.

Sincerely,
Andy Hurla

Subject: HB 1141

Dear Chairman Basye, Vice Chairman Haffner and Members of the Education Committee:

I am writing to ask for your support of Representative Nick Schroer's amendment to HB 1141 prohibiting the teaching of Critical Race Theory and "The 1619 Project" in Missouri's education institutions and HB 1411.

The legislative session is ending, and we need to take immediate action and stop the implementation of the racist Critical Race Theory and the revisionist history of "The 1619 Project" from Missouri's educational institutions. Missouri taxpayers should not be funding hate.

States, like Arkansas, Idaho, Tennessee, Oklahoma, and Florida have already passed legislation banning this Marxists-based ideology. Critical Race Theory and "The 1619 Project" removes individualism and teaches students to hate their country and believe their fellow students are somehow either superior or inferior based on their race or gender. Teaching this harmful and racist theory and revisionist history to our children is teaching systemic racism.

Missouri should be looking for ways to unite this country and look beyond race or gender. We shouldn't be looking to return the pre-civil rights era of segregated water fountains, bathrooms or college dorms. The story of the American founding and the subsequent stories of the Civil War and the Civil Rights movement of the 1960's are the real stories of the spirit of America - how our young nation wrestled with the amoral institution of slavery and defeated it and how a century later Americans continued to advance the idea that ALL Americans are equal in the eyes of God.

Children in our state should be taught that their hard work, their character, and their deeds matter more than the color of their skin or the economic situation they have been born into. This is the real American way, and it is available to all. It is for this reason that I urge you to Representative Schroer's amendment to HB1141.

Sincerely,

Willa Frattini

Subject: HB 1559: Opposition

Chairman Basye and members of the House Committee on Elementary and Secondary Education:

As Assistant State Director of American Atheists for Missouri, I write to oppose HB 1559.

American Atheists is a leading organization of atheists and freethinkers nationwide, and has been defending the separation of church and state for over half a century.

HB 1559 would exempt private schools and religious schools from increases in the minimum wage as currently required by law (290.502 RSMo).

I shall not here dwell on the argument that this bill would be an affront to working people, nor that it would exert a downward pressure on wage levels.

Rather, I protest that this bill would bestow an unacceptable degree of religious privilege.

The proposed exemption would not, of course, be limited to religious schools. However many private schools, if not most, are religious in nature, and provide religious instruction as well as instruction in secular academic subjects.

Religious institutions are already largely exempt from taxation. Arguably, such exemption can be justified as a way to avoid excessive entanglement between church and state -- the third prong of the Lemon test. As a result, religious institutions receive government benefits that others must pay for, such as police protection, fire protection, and street repair.

However, the notion of entanglement does not plausibly excuse the exemption proposed in HB 1559. A religious school that has to increase its wages is no more entangled with the state than one that doesn't. Of course, the same rationale does not apply at all to non-religious private schools.

There's no reason why private schools of any kind should be entitled to pay educators less than a fry cook at McDonalds.

As I understand it, public schools are altogether exempt from minimum wage requirements. It has been argued that their exemption gives them an unfair advantage over private schools. However, that exemption is entirely a creature of the general assembly. You can change it.

In any case, other provisions of law guarantee a minimum annual salary of $25,000 for public school teachers (163.172 RSMo), far more than the minimum wage. That minimum does not apply to teachers in private schools.

HB 1559 would be a gift to religious institutions. It would enable them to demand subsidies, not only from people who don't share their beliefs, but also from their own employees. Such privilege, even if not strictly confined to religious schools, is undeserved and indefensible.

TESTIMONY IN SUPPORT OF HB 1568

Paraquad would like to thank the Chair and members of the House Elementary and Secondary Education Committee for allowing us to submit testimony. Paraquad is one of the oldest and largest independent living centers in the country. Centers for Independent Living are unique because over 50% of our board and staff are people with disabilities, making us the experts when it comes to disability policy and programs.

Paraquad's mission is to empower people with disabilities to increase their independence through choice and opportunity. This choice and opportunity apply to children with disabilities, as well.

HB 1568 addresses the practice of 'restraint and seclusion' that many children with disabilities experience in schools.

This bill modifies provisions relating to seclusion and restraint policies in public schools. The bill defines restraint and seclusion, requires school discipline policies to prohibit the use of restraint and seclusion except for circumstances to promote the health and safety of students, teachers, and staff, requires that parents are notified within 24 hours of any use of restraint or seclusion involving their child, requires that all involved in any use of restrain and seclusion write reports detailing the reasons why the action was taken,requires the school to inform parents of their rights to review the reports, appeal and file complaints in addition to other provisions. All these requirements will help ensure that the practice of restraint and seclusion is only utilized in rare situations when the safety of individuals as at stake.

It is well documented that schools use these inappropriate techniques as a fall back rather than take the time to implement positive behavioral supports. We have heard from some parents that their children experienced PTSD because of use of these tactics. Students are often harmed because of these practices and in some states, students have even died when restrained.

Below are links to several news articles about how this issue is directly impacting students with disabilities in Missouri.

- MO school using padded rooms to subdue special-needs children (July 2018)
- Disabled boy found strapped down to wheelchair at school; caregiver wants answers (April 2018)
- Independence parents 'furious' that school puts elementary kids in isolation rooms

We know that the use of restraint and seclusion is a problem in the United States and Missouri. Adoption of HB 1568 will move Missouri forward in its use of proper behavioral interventions for students with disabilities.

Sincerely,

Kim Lackey

Dear Committee Members,

I am writing to ask you to vote FOR HB 1636 that would exempt MO 4-day week school districts from the new later school year start date. Being a 4-day week is new to our district this year. One of the things that stands out in my mind from our open sessions last year with our community is the excitement from families about having the opportunity to take extended weekend trips throughout the year. By implementing a 4-day week, some families have taken advantage of having a 3 day weekend each week by traveling. One family made a list of places in MO that they'd like to visit on a 3 day weekend.

Having a 4-day week, I believe, helps tourism in MO. I realize that school starting during the state fair might be a reason for the tourism group to be upset but another thought on that is this....we allow our students to be excused from school for the state fair if they are showing something at the fair and when they are involved in activities such as 4-H or FFA. In our district, our school start date doesn't affect state fair attendance as we excuse students to attend.

Please vote in favor of HB 1636 to exempt 4-day week districts from the new later school year start date.

Dear Representatives,
Thank you for hearing the bill HB1317, and I encourage you to vote in favor of HB1317 sponsored by Rep. Sommer, requiring school districts to establish a state approved gifted program. I am a former President of the Gifted Association of Missouri and a former gifted program teacher. The state of Missouri is in the bottom percentage of states who require and support gifted programs for their students. Seven years ago, Missouri was one of only 7 states that did not support or mandate gifted education. I am not sure where that number is now.
Without a gifted education mandate our gifted students are suffering. Their educational needs for learning at a deeper and advanced level are not being met. Schools do not necessarily do the right thing on their own for many reasons.
After starting and teaching the gifted program for seventeen years at Puxico R-8, they ended the gifted program with no notice and really without any explanation why in 2017. The school was under financial hardship at the time, and still may be. Partly due to the lack of funding for schools at the state level for several years. With a heavy heart I resigned my position at Puxico school in 2017. I did not have the heart to stay there and continually explain to the students why we no longer had a gifted program. I felt the best choice was for me to leave and start fresh. The identified and unidentified gifted students at Puxico are no longer having their needs met as well as other schools in the area. Bernie school ended their long standing gifted program the same year Puxico did.
Legislation is needed. This same scenario is happening all across the state, in both urban and rural schools. Missouri should want better for their gifted children, than to be one of the bottom states in the Nation by not providing services for them. With the state increasing the funding of schools in recent years, and projecting to again next year, school administration should no longer use the lack of funding as an excuse.
Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter. Your support for gifted children in the state of Missouri is needed and appreciated.

Sincerely,
Patty Cookson

It bans schools from creating policies which prohibit parents and guardians from recording IEP and 504 plan meetings. We are speaking of children's education! It is vital to students success to have all involved on the same page. Because these meetings contain an abundant amount of important information for both educators and parents, it makes no sense to not record. The current situation is setting parents and educators up to fail our children.

Subject: HB848

Good afternoon.

I write to you today to request rejection of HB848 if you truly care about Missouri kids and families. A sunrise past 8:30 in the morning in the coldest days of winter is precisely what this bill would accomplish. Please give what that reality would feel and look like some serious thought before you enter your executive session tomorrow at 8am.

I ask this as a mother, an educator, an advocate for public health, and as a hobby farmer.

If Missouri were on Daylight Saving Time in the winter months, my husband and I would be tending animals and their feed/water in the dark for nearly half of the year each week day before we head to our day jobs of teaching. In winter, this is already complicated since the water is often frozen. Professionally, our first students each morning would start classes before the sun rises for four of those same months. And our son would drive to school in the dark for 5.5 months of the school year, during the days of the year the weather is coldest and the roads slickest.

There are many reasons why HB848 should die. The reasons above are quite personal. I hope you have read in testimony from sleep doctors at Washington University the harm HB848 will likely do, based on evidence we have of communities that exist on the west sides of timezones. Here, sunrise is delayed a full hour from what it is on the eastern edge of any timezone, and also here you have higher rates of cancer, obesity, and in some regions suicide. Communities don't thrive when the sun rises too late despite our natural inclination to pay more attention to sunset. The UK, Russia, and even the United States have tried Daylight Saving Time in the winter. We did it during World War II, and again in 1974 to "save" energy. No energy was saved, but kids did die at school bus stops. And so the US ended DST in winter, just as was done in the UK and Russia. People don't need winter to be harder than it already is, and whether one realizes it or not, sunrises after 8am for six months of the year are difficult to deal with.

I know imagining the lazy ease of a late July sunset seems lovely in January, but January isn't July and the tilt of the earth gives us our winter. We can't change that by changing the hour on the clock. But we can alter health, safety, and wellness by mimicking the same conditions that are problematic on west sides of timezones. The research and data available shows how badly our bodies need sunlight as early in the day as we can get it. (If you have had light therapy prescribed, you know time of day is part of that prescription--light in the morning actually triggers sleep each night and mood each day.) Please see savestandardtime.com for these studies and many, many more.

Please reject HB848. If ending clock change is the goal of this legislature, then consider HB 780, which does nothing more than align Missouri with other US states and territories that simply opt out of Daylight Saving Time each year. No permission or approval from the federal government is needed to enact HB780. The American Academy of Sleep Medicine and the Society for Research on Biological Rhythms promote the shift to year-round Standard Time for our health.

I leave you with an image from the Baltimore Sun, January 29, 1974, that shows the embarrassment federal legislators experienced over their decision to move the country to DST in winter. It's an interesting source and also notes the child deaths attributed to darkness.

Bids to kill daylight time heard

By ALBERT SEHLSTEDT, JR.
Washington Bureau of The Sun

Washington—There were serious moves in Congress yesterday to repeal year-around daylight saving time, which went into effect only three weeks ago as an energy-saving measure.

Congressmen in both houses expressed concern over schoolchildren who have been endangered on roads and highways during the dark morning hours of winter.

In Florida, a special session of the state legislature was scheduled for today so that clocks could be turned back an hour. Eight schoolchildren have been killed in pre-dawn accidents there.

"The inescapable conclusion to be reached is that darkness had a great deal to do with the pre-dawn deaths," said Gov. Reubin Askew, who called the one-day session solely to deal with the daylight saving time issue.

In the United States Senate, Marlow W. Cook (R., Ky.) rose in support of repealing the year-round daylight saving plan, cleared by Congress December 14, and cited the Florida deaths, plus a reported increase in sexual assaults on youngsters in Minnesota and problems in other states.

Senator Dick Clark (D., Iowa), sponsor of one of the bills to repeal the daylight measure, said it was the No. 1 issue he confronted when traveling in his home state during the Christmas recess.

"I think it's time we recognize we may well have made a mistake," Senator Clark told his colleagues.

8 bills in House

Senator Robert Dole (R., Kan.), also sponsoring a repealer, said the daylight bill passed in December had little in-depth study.

The majority leader, Senator Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.), said he was appalled by the Florida deaths and urged the Senate Commerce Committee to give repeal legislation its immediate consideration.

On the House side of the Capitol, there are eight bills before the Commerce Committee calling for the repeal of winter daylight saving time. All have been introduced since congressmen returned from their home districts to Washington January 21.

Representative Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), who, along with most of the Florida delegation, is supporting repeal, said last week that "the small savings in energy that we will make do not justify the loss of lives of our children nor the hardship placed upon our children and their parents.

"I regret for others their loss of benefit from energy that would be saved in the country and from extra time at the end of the day, but the lives of our children should receive first consideration."

Forecasts of energy savings with daylight time appear to have been exaggerated, according to Senator Clark. He said in a floor speech on the subject yesterday that the Federal Power Commission has estimated that only two-tenths of 1 per cent of this month's fuel savings could be attributed to daylight time. Savings of from 1 to 3 per cent had been hoped for.

If Congress does, indeed, conclude that it made a mistake in enacting daylight time for the winter months, much of the problem that the new law created is already behind the nation.

The sun is rising earlier each day and light could be over most of the country in the morning before the repealers are approved by the appropriate congressional committees and transportation agencies are given adequate advance warning to change their schedules, and the legislation is finally enacted into law.

Sincerely,

Angie Miller

Good morning Representative -

I am writing to lend my strong support to HB952 which bans the Critical Race Theory teachings in our schools.

Many thanks to all that you do to keep Missouri great.

Subject: HCS distribution

Committee Chairs,

It has come to our attention that legislative analysts are not always receiving the emails when House Committee Substitutes are being distributed. If you could, please ensure that your legislative assistants are including the legislative analyst for that committee on the distribution list for House Committee Substitutes. This will greatly help the legislative analysts' ability to assist the committee.

The list of legislative analysts and the committees they staff is located on the House Intranet. http://mointra/default.aspx?id=23

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact our office or House Research.

Sincerely,

Julie Baker

Representative,

Enclosed is an HCS for HB 303 which has been noticed up for executive session. This legislation establishes transfer procedures to nonresident districts for students in public schools, with some edits for clarity, consistency, and cohesion with House drafting practices.

TIMELY DISTRIBUTION FOR THIS HCS IS BEFORE 8 AM ON MONDAY FEB 15 WHICH IS 1 LEGISLATIVE DAY AND 24 HOURS BEFORE THE EXECUTIVE SESSION FOR WHICH IT IS NOTICED, THIS MAY OCCUR ELECTRONICALLY

I've attached a comparison for this version to the introduced bill so that the committee can more readily see the changes.

Cordially,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

HOUSE COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE

FOR

HOUSE BILL NO. 303

AN ACT

To repeal sections 167.020 and 167.151, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof nine new sections relating to admission of nonresident pupils, with a delayed effective date.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, AS FOLLOWS:

Section A. Sections 167.020 and 167.151, RSMo, are repealed and nine new sections enacted in lieu thereof, to be known as sections 167.020, 167.151, 167.1200, 167.1205, 167.1210, 167.1215, 167.1220, 167.1225, and 167.1230, to read as follows:

167.020. 1. As used in this section, the term "homeless child" or "homeless youth" shall mean a person less than twenty-one years of age who lacks a fixed, regular and adequate nighttime residence, including a child or youth who:

(1) Is sharing the housing of other persons due to loss of housing, economic hardship, or a similar reason; is living in motels, hotels, or camping grounds due to lack of alternative adequate accommodations; is living in emergency or transitional shelters; is abandoned in hospitals; or is awaiting foster care placement;

(2) Has a primary nighttime residence that is a public or private place not designed for or ordinarily used as a regular sleeping accommodation for human beings;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

MO-REP-21-1608-F-001631

(3) Is living in cars, parks, public spaces, abandoned buildings, substandard housing, bus or train stations, or similar settings; and

(4) Is a migratory child or youth who qualifies as homeless because the child or youth is living in circumstances described in subdivisions (1) to (3) of this subsection.

2. (1) In order to register a pupil, the pupil or the parent or legal guardian of the pupil [~~or the pupil himself or herself~~] shall provide, at the time of registration, one of the following:

[~~(1)~~] (a) Proof of residency in the district. Except as otherwise provided in section 167.151, the term "residency" shall mean that a person both physically resides within a school district and is domiciled within that district or, in the case of a private school student suspected of having a disability under the Individuals With Disabilities Education Act, 20 U.S.C. Section [~~1412~~] 1411, et seq., as amended, that the student attends private school within that district. The domicile of a minor child shall be the domicile of a parent, military guardian pursuant to a military-issued guardianship or court-appointed legal guardian. For instances in which the family of a student living in Missouri co-locates to live with other family members or live in a military family support community because one or both of the child's parents are stationed or deployed out of state or deployed within Missouri under active duty orders under Title 10 or Title 32 of the United States Code, the student may attend the school district in which the family member's residence or family support community is located. If the active duty orders expire during the school year, the student may finish the school year in that district;

[~~(2)~~] (b) Proof that the person registering the student has requested a waiver under subsection 3 of this section within the last forty-five days; or

[~~(3)~~] (c) Proof that one or both of the child's parents are being relocated to the state of Missouri under military orders.

(2) In instances where there is reason to suspect that admission of the pupil will create an immediate danger to the safety of other pupils and employees of the district, the superintendent or the superintendent's designee may convene a hearing within five working days of the request to register and determine whether or not the pupil may register.

3. Any person subject to the requirements of subsection 2 of this section may request a waiver from the district board of any of those requirements on the basis of hardship or good cause. Under no circumstances shall athletic ability be a valid basis of hardship or good cause for the issuance of a waiver of the requirements of subsection 2 of this section. The district board or committee of the board appointed by the president and which shall have full authority to act in lieu of the board shall convene a hearing as soon as possible, but no later than forty-five days after receipt of the waiver request made under this subsection or the waiver request shall be granted. The district board or committee of the board may grant the request for a waiver of any requirement of subsection 2 of this section. The district board or committee of the board may also reject the request for a waiver in which case the pupil shall not be allowed to register. Any person aggrieved by a decision of a district board or committee of the board on a request for a waiver under this subsection may appeal such decision to the circuit court in the county where the school district is located.

4. Any person who knowingly submits false information to satisfy any requirement of subsection 2 of this section is guilty of a class A misdemeanor.

5. In addition to any other penalties authorized by law, a district board may file a civil action to recover, from the parent, military guardian or legal guardian of the pupil, the costs of school attendance for any pupil who was enrolled at a school in the district and whose parent, military guardian or legal guardian filed false information to satisfy any requirement of subsection 2 of this section.

6. Subsection 2 of this section shall not apply to a pupil who is a homeless child or youth, or a pupil attending a school not in the pupil's district of residence as a participant in an interdistrict transfer program established under a court-ordered desegregation program, a pupil who is a ward of the state and has been placed in a residential care facility by state officials, a pupil who has been placed in a residential care facility due to a mental illness or developmental disability, a pupil attending a school pursuant to sections 167.121 and 167.151 or sections 167.1200 to 167.1230, a pupil placed in a residential facility by a juvenile court, a pupil with a disability identified under state eligibility criteria if the student is in the district for reasons other than accessing the district's educational program, or a pupil attending a regional or cooperative alternative education program or an alternative education program on a contractual basis.

7. Within two business days of enrolling a pupil, the school official enrolling a pupil, including any special education pupil, shall request those records required by district policy for student transfer and those discipline records required by subsection 9 of section 160.261 from all schools previously attended by the pupil within the last twelve months. Any school district that receives a request for such records from another school district enrolling a pupil that had previously attended a school in such district shall respond to such request within five business days of receiving the request. School districts may report or disclose education records to law enforcement and juvenile justice authorities if the disclosure concerns law enforcement's or juvenile justice authorities' ability to effectively serve, prior to adjudication, the student whose records are released. The officials and authorities to whom such information is disclosed must comply with applicable restrictions set forth in 20 U.S.C. Section 1232g(b)(1)(E), as amended.

8. If one or both of a child's parents are being relocated to the state of Missouri under military orders, a school district shall allow remote registration of the student and shall not require the student or the parent or legal guardian of the student [~~or the student himself or herself~~] to physically appear at a location within the district to register the student. Proof of residency, as described in this section, shall not be required at the time of the remote registration but shall be required within ten days of the student's attendance in the school district.

167.151. 1. The school board of any district, in its discretion, may admit to the school pupils not entitled to free instruction and prescribe the tuition fee to be paid by them, except as provided in sections 167.121, 167.131, 167.132, [~~and~~] 167.895, and sections 167.1200 to 167.1230.

2. Orphan children, children with only one parent living, and children whose parents do not contribute to their support—if the children are between the ages of six and twenty years and are unable to pay tuition—may attend the schools of any district in the state in which they have a permanent or temporary home without paying a tuition fee.

3. Any person who pays a school tax in any other district than that in which [~~he~~] the person resides may send [~~his~~] the person's children to any public school in the district in which the tax is paid and receive as a credit on the amount charged for tuition the amount of the school tax paid to the district; except that any person who owns real estate of which eighty acres or more are used for agricultural purposes and upon which [~~his~~] the person's residence is situated may send [~~his~~] the person's children to public school in any school district in which a part of such real estate, contiguous to that upon which [~~his~~] the person's residence is situated, lies and shall not be charged tuition therefor; so long as thirty-five percent of the real estate is located in the school district of choice. The school district of choice shall count the children in its average daily attendance for the purpose of distribution of state aid through the foundation formula.

4. Any owner of agricultural land who, pursuant to subsection 3 of this section, has the option of sending [~~his~~] the person's children to the public schools of more than one district shall exercise such option as provided in this subsection. Such person shall send written notice to all school districts involved specifying to which school district [~~his~~] the person's children will attend by June thirtieth in which such a school year begins. If notification is not received, such children shall attend the school in which the majority of [~~his~~] the person's property lies. Such person shall not send any of [~~his~~] the person's children to the public schools of any district other than the one to which [~~he~~] the person has sent notice pursuant to this subsection in that school year or in which the majority of [~~his~~] the person's property lies without paying tuition to such school district.

5. If a pupil is attending school in a district other than the district of residence and the pupil's parent is teaching in the school district or is a regular employee of the school district which the pupil is attending, then the district in which the pupil attends school shall allow the pupil to attend school upon payment of tuition in the same manner in which the district allows other pupils not entitled to free instruction to attend school in the district. The provisions of this subsection shall apply only to pupils attending school in a district which has an enrollment in excess of thirteen thousand pupils and not in excess of fifteen thousand pupils and which district is located in a county [~~of the first classification~~] with a charter form of government which has a population in excess of six hundred thousand persons and not in excess of nine hundred thousand persons.

167.1200. 1. Sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall be known and may be cited as the "Public School Choice Act".

2. As used in sections 167.1200 to 167.1230, the following terms mean:

(1) "Department", the department of elementary and secondary education;

(2) "Local effort", the same meaning as used in section 163.011;

(3) "Nonresident district", a school district other than a student's resident district;

(4) "Parent", a student's parent, guardian, or other person having custody or care of the student;

(5) "Public school", a public school as defined in section 160.011 or a charter school as described in section 160.400;

(6) "Public school choice student", a public school student in kindergarten to grade twelve who has been enrolled in and completed a full school year in a public school in the student's resident district and who transfers to a nonresident district through a public school choice program under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001638

(7) "Resident district", the school district in which the student resides;

(8) "Resident local revenue", the resident district's average sum produced per child by the local effort taxes for the transfer year;

(9) "Sibling", each of two or more children having a parent in common by blood, adoption, marriage, or foster care;

(10) "Transfer year", the school year in which a transferring student attends school in a nonresident district;

(11) "Transferring student", a child beginning kindergarten in the child's resident district or a charter school or a public school student in kindergarten to grade twelve who has been enrolled in and completed a full semester in a public school in the student's resident district and who transfers to a nonresident district or a charter school through a public school open enrollment program under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230.

167.1205. 1. A public school choice program is established to enable a student in kindergarten to grade twelve to attend a school in a nonresident district subject to the limitations under section 167.1225.

2. Each school district except districts described in sections 162.670 to 162.999 shall participate in a public school choice program consistent with sections 167.1200 to 167.1230. This subsection shall not be construed to prevent any student from transferring out of the student's resident district to a participating district as a transferring student.

3. Sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall not be construed to require a school district to add teachers, staff, or classrooms or to in any way exceed the requirements and standards established by existing law.

4. (1) The department shall develop a model policy for determining the number of transfers available under section 167.1215 and establishing specific standards for acceptance and rejection of transfer applications under section 167.1230.

(2) The board of education of a school district and the governing board of a charter school shall adopt specific standards for acceptance and rejection of transfer applications under section 167.1230 by resolution.

(3) The standards may include, without limitation, the capacity of a school building, grade level, class, or program.

(4) The standards shall include a statement that priority shall be given to an applicant who has a sibling who:

(a) Is already enrolled in the nonresident district; or

(b) Has made an application for enrollment in the same nonresident district.

(5) The standards shall not include an applicant's:

(a) Academic achievement;

(b) Athletic or other extracurricular ability;

(c) Disability;

(d) English proficiency level; or

(e) Previous disciplinary proceedings; except that, a suspension or expulsion from another district shall be included.

(6) A school district receiving public school choice students shall not discriminate on the basis of gender, national origin, race, ethnicity, religion, or disability.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001640

5. A nonresident district shall:

(1) Accept credits toward graduation that were awarded by another district to a public school choice student; and

(2) Award a diploma to a public school choice student if the student meets the nonresident district's graduation requirements.

6. The superintendent of a school district shall cause the information about the public school choice program to be posted on the district website and in the student handbook to inform parents of students of the:

(1) Availability of the program established under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230;

(2) Application deadline; and

(3) Requirements and procedures for resident and nonresident students to participate in the program.

7. If a student wishes to attend a school within a nonresident district that is a magnet school, an academically selective school, or a school with a competitive entrance process that has admissions requirements, the student shall furnish proof that the student meets the admissions requirements in the application described under section 167.1220.

8. A nonresident district may deny a transfer to a student who, in the most recent school year, has been suspended from school two or more times or who has been suspended for an act of school violence or expelled under subsection 2 of section 160.261. A student whose transfer is initially precluded under this subsection may be permitted to transfer on a provisional basis as a probationary transfer student, subject to no further disruptive behavior, upon approval of the superintendent or the superintendent's designee.

9. A student who is denied a transfer under this subsection has the right to an in-person meeting with the nonresident district's superintendent or the superintendent's designee. The nonresident district shall develop common standards for determining disruptive behavior that shall include, but not be limited to, criteria under section 160.261.

10. Students shall not enroll in a nonresident district under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 in any school year before school year 2023-24.

167.1210. 1. A student who applies to enroll in multiple nonresident districts and accepts a public school choice program transfer to a nonresident district shall accept only one such transfer per school year.

2. (1) A student who accepts a public school choice program transfer to a nonresident district may return to the student's resident district during the school year.

(2) If a transferred student returns to the student's resident district, the student's transfer shall be void and the student shall reapply if the student seeks a future public school choice program transfer. No transferred student who returns to the student's resident district shall reapply for a future transfer under this subdivision until the student has been enrolled in and completed a full school year in a public school in the student's resident district before reapplying.

3. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, a public school choice student attending school in a nonresident district may complete all remaining school years in the nonresident district.

(2) A sibling of a public school choice student who continues enrollment in a nonresident district may enroll in or continue enrollment in that nonresident district if the district has the capacity to accept the sibling without adding teachers, staff, or classrooms or exceeding the regulations and standards established by law and the sibling has no discipline issues as described in section 167.1205.

(3) If a student makes a second or subsequent transfer in high school, the student shall be ineligible to participate in any varsity-level activity sanctioned by a statewide activities association that provides oversight for athletic or activity eligibility for students and school districts in this state for three hundred sixty-five days after such transfer.

4. The public school choice student or the student's parent is responsible for the transportation of the student to and from the school in the nonresident district where the student is enrolled, except that the nonresident district may enter into an agreement with the student's parent that the parent may transport the student to an existing bus stop location convenient to the school district if the school district has capacity available on a bus serving that location. If transportation is a related service on a student's individualized education program (IEP) and the student is a participant in the public school choice transfer program, the nonresident district shall not be required to provide such transportation as a related service under the IEP if the nonresident district and the student's parent have entered into an agreement under this subsection.

5. Notwithstanding the provisions of chapter 163 to the contrary, for the purposes of determining state and federal aid, a public school choice student shall be counted as a resident pupil of the nonresident district in which the student is enrolled.

6. (1) Except as otherwise provided, the nonresident district shall notify the public school choice student's resident district of the number of days the student was enrolled in the nonresident district.

(2) Upon receipt of such notice, the resident district shall calculate the per-pupil average daily local effort amount and send such amount for each day the student was enrolled in the nonresident district to the nonresident district prior to the last business day in June of the current school year. In no case shall the amount sent by the resident district exceed the amount of the annual per-pupil local effort as calculated by the nonresident district.

(3) If the resident district of the public school choice transfer student fails to send such amount owed to the nonresident district prior to the last business day in June in the current school year, the department shall withhold such amount from the resident district's monthly distribution of revenues and send such amount to the nonresident district by August fifteenth.

167.1215. 1. Before February first annually, each school district shall set the number of transfer students the district is willing to receive for the following school year under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230. The district may create criteria for the acceptance of students including, but not limited to, the number of students by building, grade, classroom, or program.

2. (1) Each school district shall publish the number set under this section and notify the department of this number, but shall not be required to accept any transfer students under this section that would cause it to exceed the published number.

(2) The school district may report the total number of students the district is willing to receive and further delineate the number by building, grade, classroom, or program.

3. Each school district shall develop a method for the formation and operation of a waiting list for applications that cannot be accepted because the number of transfers applied for exceeds the number of transfers available.

(1) Applications on the waiting list may be given priority for acceptance in the following order and may include other options for priority acceptance:

(a) Siblings of students already enrolled in the district;

(b) Children of an active duty member of the Armed Forces of the United States;

(c) Children of school district employees;

(d) Students who had previously attended school in the district but whose parents have since moved out of the district; and

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001645

(e) Students whose parents present an employment circumstance for which an open enrollment transfer would be in the student's best interest.

(2) A parent of a student on the waiting list shall be informed by the district of the details of the operation of the list and whether the parent will be required to refile a timely application for open enrollment in order to remain on the waiting list.

167.1220. 1. If a student seeks to attend a school in a nonresident district under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230, the student's parent shall submit an application:

(1) To the nonresident district with a copy to the resident district;

(2) On a form approved by the department that contains the student's necessary information for enrollment in another district; and

(3) Postmarked before May first of the calendar year in which the student seeks to begin the fall semester at the nonresident district.

2. A nonresident district that receives an application under subsection 1 of this section shall, upon receipt of the application, place a date and time stamp on the application that reflects the date and time the nonresident district received the application.

3. A nonresident district shall review and make a determination on each application in the order in which the application was received by the nonresident district.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

4. Before accepting or rejecting an application, a nonresident district shall determine whether one of the limitations under section 167.1225 applies to the application.

5. (1) Before July first of the school year in which the student seeks to enroll in a nonresident district under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230, the superintendent of the nonresident district shall notify the parent and the resident district in writing as to whether the student's application has been accepted or rejected. The notification shall be sent by first-class mail to the address on the application or by email.

(2) If the application is rejected, the superintendent of the nonresident district shall state in the notification letter the reason for the rejection.

(3) If the application is accepted, the superintendent of the nonresident district shall state in the notification letter:

(a) A reasonable deadline by which the student shall enroll in the nonresident district and after which the acceptance notification is null; and

(b) Instructions for the procedures established by the nonresident district for renewing enrollment in the nonresident district each year.

167.1225. 1. If sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 conflict with a provision of an enforceable desegregation court order or a district's court-approved desegregation plan regarding the effects of past racial segregation in student assignment, the provisions of the order or plan shall govern.

2. (1) A school district may annually declare an exemption from sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 if the school district is subject to a desegregation order or mandate of a federal court or agency remedying the effects of past racial segregation or subject to a settlement agreement remedying the effects of past racial segregation.

(2) An exemption declared by a board of education of a school district under subdivision (1) of this subsection is irrevocable for one year from the date the school district notifies the department of the declaration of exemption.

(3) After each year of exemption, the board of education of a school district may elect to participate in the public school choice program under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 if the school district's participation does not conflict with the school district's federal court-ordered desegregation program or settlement agreement remedying the effects of past racial segregation.

(4) A school district shall notify the department before April first if in the next school year the school district intends to:

(a) Declare an exemption under subdivision (1) of this subsection; or

(b) Resume participation after a period of exemption.

(5) Annually before June first, the department shall report to each school district the maximum number of public school choice program transfers for the school year to begin July first.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001648

(6) If a student is unable to transfer due to the limits under this subsection, the resident district shall give the student priority for a transfer in the following school year in the order that the resident district receives notices of application under section 167.1220, as evidenced by a notation made by the district on the applications indicating the date and time of receipt.

3. (1) Any student who transfers to a nonresident district under section 167.131, sections 162.1040 to 162.1061, or any section other than sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall not be subject to any requirements under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230.

(2) Districts receiving transfer students or sending transfer students to nonresident districts under section 167.131, sections 162.1040 to 162.1061, or any section other than sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall not be subject to any requirements under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 for those transfer students.

4. A student transferring to a nonresident district under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall not be considered a transfer student under any law relating to another transfer program or procedure that allows students to transfer out of their resident districts.

167.1230. 1. A student whose application for a transfer under section 167.1220 is rejected by the nonresident district may appeal to the department to reconsider the transfer.

2. A request for a hearing before the department shall be in writing and shall be postmarked no later than ten calendar days, excluding weekends and legal holidays, after the student or the student's parent receives a notice of rejection of the application under section 167.1220.

3. Contemporaneously with the filing of the written appeal under subsection 2 of this section, the student or the student's parent shall also mail a copy of the written appeal to the superintendent of the nonresident district.

4. In the written appeal, the student or student's parent shall state the basis for appealing the decision of the nonresident district.

5. The student or the student's parent shall submit, along with the written appeal, a copy of the notice of rejection from the nonresident district.

6. As part of the review process, the student or student's parent may submit supporting documentation that the transfer would be in the best educational, health, social, or psychological interest of the student.

7. The nonresident district may submit in writing any additional information, evidence, or arguments supporting the district's rejection of the student's application by mailing such response to the department. Such response shall be postmarked no later than ten days after the nonresident district receives the student's or parent's appeal.

8. Contemporaneously with the filing of its response under subsection 7 of this section, the nonresident district shall also mail a copy of the response to the student or student's parent.

9. If the department overturns the determination of the nonresident district on appeal, the department shall notify the parent, the nonresident district, and the resident district of the basis for the department's decision.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

10. (1) The department shall collect data from school districts on the number of applications for student transfers under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 and study the effects of public school choice program transfers under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230. The department shall consider, as part of its study, the maximum number of transfers and exemptions for both resident and nonresident districts for up to two years to determine if a significant racially segregative impact has occurred to any school district.

(2) Annually before October first, the department shall report the department's findings from the study of the data under subdivision (1) of this subsection to the joint committee on education or any successor committee and:

(a) The house committee on elementary and secondary education or any other education committee designated by the speaker of the house of representatives; and

(b) The senate committee on education or any other education committee designated by the president pro tempore of the senate.

Section B. The repeal and reenactment of sections 167.020 and 167.151 and the enactment of sections 167.1200, 167.1205, 167.1210, 167.1215, 167.1220, 167.1225, and 167.1230 of this act shall become effective July 1, 2022.

HOUSE COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE

FOR

HOUSE BILL NO. 303

AN ACT

To repeal sections 167.020 and 167.151, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof nine new sections relating to admission of nonresident pupils, with a delayed effective date.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, AS FOLLOWS:

Section A. Sections 167.020 and 167.151, RSMo, are repealed and nine new sections enacted in lieu thereof, to be known as sections 167.020, 167.151, 167.1200, 167.1205, 167.1210, 167.1215, 167.1220, 167.1225, and 167.1230, to read as follows:

167.020. 1. As used in this section, the term "homeless child" or "homeless youth" shall mean a person less than twenty-one years of age who lacks a fixed, regular and adequate nighttime residence, including a child or youth who:

(1) Is sharing the housing of other persons due to loss of housing, economic hardship, or a similar reason; is living in motels, hotels, or camping grounds due to lack of alternative adequate accommodations; is living in emergency or transitional shelters; is abandoned in hospitals; or is awaiting foster care placement;

(2) Has a primary nighttime residence that is a public or private place not designed for or ordinarily used as a regular sleeping accommodation for human beings;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(3) Is living in cars, parks, public spaces, abandoned buildings, substandard housing, bus or train stations, or similar settings; and

(4) Is a migratory child or youth who qualifies as homeless because the child or youth is living in circumstances described in subdivisions (1) to (3) of this subsection.

2. (1) In order to register a pupil, the pupil or the parent or legal guardian of the pupil [~~or the pupil himself or herself~~] shall provide, at the time of registration, one of the following:

[~~(1)~~] (a) Proof of residency in the district. Except as otherwise provided in section 167.151, the term "residency" shall mean that a person both physically resides within a school district and is domiciled within that district or, in the case of a private school student suspected of having a disability under the Individuals ~~w~~With Disabilities Education Act, 20 U.S.C. Section [~~1412~~] 1411, et seq., as amended, that the student attends private school within that district. The domicile of a minor child shall be the domicile of a parent, military guardian pursuant to a military-issued guardianship or court-appointed legal guardian. For instances in which the family of a student living in Missouri co-locates to live with other family members or live in a military family support community because one or both of the child's parents are stationed or deployed out of state or deployed within Missouri under active duty orders under Title 10 or Title 32 of the United States Code, the student may attend the school district in which the family member's residence or family support community is located. If the active duty orders expire during the school year, the student may finish the school year in that district;

[~~(2)~~] (b) Proof that the person registering the student has requested a waiver under subsection 3 of this section within the last forty-five days; or

[~~(3)~~] (c) Proof that one or both of the child's parents are being relocated to the state of Missouri under military orders.

(2) In instances where there is reason to suspect that admission of the pupil will create an immediate danger to the safety of other pupils and employees of the district, the superintendent or the superintendent's designee may convene a hearing within five working days of the request to register and determine whether or not the pupil may register.

3. Any person subject to the requirements of subsection 2 of this section may request a waiver from the district board of any of those requirements on the basis of hardship or good cause. Under no circumstances shall athletic ability be a valid basis of hardship or good cause for the issuance of a waiver of the requirements of subsection 2 of this section. The district board or committee of the board appointed by the president and which shall have full authority to act in lieu of the board shall convene a hearing as soon as possible, but no later than forty-five days after receipt of the waiver request made under this subsection or the waiver request shall be granted. The district board or committee of the board may grant the request for a waiver of any requirement of subsection 2 of this section. The district board or committee of the board may also reject the request for a waiver in which case the pupil shall not be allowed to register. Any person aggrieved by a decision of a district board or committee of the board on a request for a waiver under this subsection may appeal such decision to the circuit court in the county where the school district is located.

4. Any person who knowingly submits false information to satisfy any requirement of subsection 2 of this section is guilty of a class A misdemeanor.

5. In addition to any other penalties authorized by law, a district board may file a civil action to recover, from the parent, military guardian or legal guardian of the pupil, the costs of school attendance for any pupil who was enrolled at a school in the district and whose parent, military guardian or legal guardian filed false information to satisfy any requirement of subsection 2 of this section.

6. Subsection 2 of this section shall not apply to a pupil who is a homeless child or youth, or a pupil attending a school not in the pupil's district of residence as a participant in an interdistrict transfer program established under a court-ordered desegregation program, a pupil who is a ward of the state and has been placed in a residential care facility by state officials, a pupil who has been placed in a residential care facility due to a mental illness or developmental disability, a pupil attending a school pursuant to sections 167.121 and 167.151 or sections 167.1200 to 167.1230, a pupil placed in a residential facility by a juvenile court, a pupil with a disability identified under state eligibility criteria if the student is in the district for reasons other than accessing the district's educational program, or a pupil attending a regional or cooperative alternative education program or an alternative education program on a contractual basis.

7. Within two business days of enrolling a pupil, the school official enrolling a pupil, including any special education pupil, shall request those records required by district policy for student transfer and those discipline records required by subsection 9 of section 160.261 from all schools previously attended by the pupil within the last twelve months. Any school district that receives a request for such records from another school district enrolling a pupil that had previously attended a school in such district shall respond to such request within five business days of receiving the request. School districts may report or disclose education records to law enforcement and juvenile justice authorities if the disclosure concerns law enforcement's or juvenile justice authorities' ability to effectively serve, prior to adjudication, the student whose records are released. The officials and authorities to whom such information is disclosed must comply with applicable restrictions set forth in 20 U.S.C. Section 1232g(b)(1)(E), as amended.

8. If one or both of a child's parents are being relocated to the state of Missouri under military orders, a school district shall allow remote registration of the student and shall not require the student or the parent or legal guardian of the student [~~or the student himself or herself~~] to physically appear at a location within the district to register the student. Proof of residency, as described in this section, shall not be required at the time of the remote registration but shall be required within ten days of the student's attendance in the school district.

167.151. 1. The school board of any district, in its discretion, may admit to the school pupils not entitled to free instruction and prescribe the tuition fee to be paid by them, except as provided in sections 167.121, 167.131, 167.132, [~~and~~] 167.895, and sections 167.1200 to 167.1230.

2. Orphan children, children with only one parent living, and children whose parents do not contribute to their support—if the children are between the ages of six and twenty years and are unable to pay tuition—may attend the schools of any district in the state in which they have a permanent or temporary home without paying a tuition fee.

3. Any person who pays a school tax in any other district than that in which [~~he~~] the person resides may send [~~his~~] the person's children to any public school in the district in which the tax is paid and receive as a credit on the amount charged for tuition the amount of the school tax paid to the district; except that any person who owns real estate of which eighty acres or more are used for agricultural purposes and upon which [~~his~~] the person's residence is situated may send [~~his~~] the person's children to public school in any school district in which a part of such real estate, contiguous to that upon which [~~his~~] the person's residence is situated, lies and shall not be charged tuition therefor; so long as thirty-five percent of the real estate is located in the school district of choice. The school district of choice shall count the children in its average daily attendance for the purpose of distribution of state aid through the foundation formula.

4. Any owner of agricultural land who, pursuant to subsection 3 of this section, has the option of sending [~~his~~] the person's children to the public schools of more than one district shall exercise such option as provided in this subsection. Such person shall send written notice to all school districts involved specifying to which school district [~~his~~] the person's children will attend by June thirtieth in which such a school year begins. If notification is not received, such children shall attend the school in which the majority of [~~his~~] the person's property lies. Such person shall not send any of [~~his~~] the person's children to the public schools of any district other than the one to which [~~he~~] the person has sent notice pursuant to this subsection in that school year or in which the majority of [~~his~~] the person's property lies without paying tuition to such school district.

5. If a pupil is attending school in a district other than the district of residence and the pupil's parent is teaching in the school district or is a regular employee of the school district which the pupil is attending, then the district in which the pupil attends school shall allow the pupil to attend school upon payment of tuition in the same manner in which the district allows other pupils not entitled to free instruction to attend school in the district. The provisions of this subsection shall apply only to pupils attending school in a district which has an enrollment in excess of thirteen thousand pupils and not in excess of fifteen thousand pupils and which district is located in a county [~~of the first classification~~] with a charter form of government which has a population in excess of six hundred thousand persons and not in excess of nine hundred thousand persons.

167.1200. 1. Sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall be known and may be cited as the "Public School Choice Act".

2. As used in sections 167.1200 to 167.1230, the following terms mean:

(1) "Department", the department of elementary and secondary education;

(2) "Local effort", the same meaning as used in section 163.011;

(~~2~~3) "Nonresident district", a school district other than a student's resident district;

(~~3~~4) "Parent", a student's parent, guardian, or other person having custody or care of the student;

(5) "Public school", a public school as defined in section 160.011 or a charter school as described in section 160.400;

(~~4~~6) "Public school choice student", a public school student in kindergarten to grade twelve who has been enrolled in and completed a full school year in a public school in the student's resident district and who transfers to a nonresident district through a public school choice program under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(57) "Resident district", the school district in which the student resides;

(8) "Resident local revenue", the resident district's average sum produced per child by the local effort taxes for the transfer year;

(69) "Sibling", each of two or more children having a parent in common by blood, adoption, marriage, or foster care.;

(10) "Transfer year", the school year in which a transferring student attends school in a nonresident district;

(11) "Transferring student", a child beginning kindergarten in the child's resident district or a charter school or a public school student in kindergarten to grade twelve who has been enrolled in and completed a full semester in a public school in the student's resident district and who transfers to a nonresident district or a charter school through a public school open enrollment program under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230.

167.1205. 1. A public school choice program is established to enable a student in kindergarten to grade twelve to attend a school in a nonresident district subject to the limitations under section 167.1225.

2. Each school district except districts described in sections 162.670 to 162.999 shall participate in a public school choice program consistent with sections 167.1200 to 167.1230. This subsection shall not be construed to prevent any student from transferring out of the student's resident district to a participating district as a transferring student.

3. Sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall not be construed to require a school district to add teachers, staff, or classrooms or to in any way exceed the requirements and standards established by existing law.

4. (1) The department shall develop a model policy for determining the number of transfers available under section 167.1215 and establishing specific standards for acceptance and rejection of transfer applications under section 167.1230.

(2) The board of education of a school district and the governing board of a charter school shall adopt specific standards for acceptance and rejection of transfer applications under section 167.1230 by resolution.

(~~2~~3) The standards may include, without limitation, the capacity of a school building, grade level, class, or program.

(~~3~~4) The standards shall include a statement that priority shall be given to an applicant who has a sibling who:

(a) Is already enrolled in the nonresident district; or

(b) Has made an application for enrollment in the same nonresident district.

(~~4~~5) The standards shall not include an applicant's:

(a) Academic achievement;

(b) Athletic or other extracurricular ability;

(c) Disability;

(~~c~~d) English proficiency level; or

(~~d~~e) Previous disciplinary proceedings; except that, a suspension or expulsion from another district shall be included.

(~~5~~6) A school district receiving public school choice students shall not discriminate on the basis of gender, national origin, race, ethnicity, religion, or disability.

5. A nonresident district shall:

(1) Accept credits toward graduation that were awarded by another district to a public school choice student; and

(2) Award a diploma to a public school choice student if the student meets the nonresident district's graduation requirements.

6. The superintendent of a school district shall cause the information about the public school choice program to be posted on the district website and in the student handbook to inform parents of students of the:

(1) Availability of the program established under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230;

(2) Application deadline; and

(3) Requirements and procedures for resident and nonresident students to participate in the program.

7. If a student wishes to attend a school within a nonresident district that is a magnet school, an academically selective school, or a school with a competitive entrance process that has admissions requirements, the student shall furnish proof that the student meets the admissions requirements in the application described under section 167.1220.

8. A nonresident district may deny a transfer to a student who, in the most recent school year, has been suspended from school two or more times or who has been suspended for an act of school violence or expelled under subsection 2 of section 160.261. A student whose transfer is initially precluded under this subsection may be permitted to transfer on a provisional basis as a probationary transfer student, subject to no further disruptive behavior, upon approval of the superintendent or the superintendent's designee.

9. A student who is denied a transfer under this subsection has the right to an in-person meeting with the nonresident district's superintendent or the superintendent's designee. The nonresident district shall develop common standards for determining disruptive behavior that shall include, but not be limited to, criteria under section 160.261.

10. Students shall not enroll in a nonresident district under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 in any school year before school year 2023-24.

167.1210. 1. A student who applies to enroll in multiple nonresident districts and accepts a public school choice program transfer to a nonresident district shall accept only one such transfer per school year.

2. (1) A student who accepts a public school choice program transfer to a nonresident district may return to the student's resident district during the school year.

(2) If a transferred student returns to the student's resident district, the student's transfer shall be void and the student shall reapply if the student seeks a future public school choice program transfer. No transferred student who returns to the student's resident district shall reapply for a future transfer under this subdivision until the student has been enrolled in and completed a full school year in a public school in the student's resident district before reapplying.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, a public school choice student attending school in a nonresident district may complete all remaining school years in the nonresident district.

(2) A sibling of a public school choice student who continues enrollment in a nonresident district may enroll in or continue enrollment in that nonresident district if the district has the capacity to accept the sibling without adding teachers, staff, or classrooms or exceeding the regulations and standards established by law and the sibling has no discipline issues as described in ~~subsection~~section 167.1205.

(3) If a student makes a second or subsequent transfer in high school, the student shall be ineligible to participate in any varsity-level activity sanctioned by a statewide activities association that provides oversight for athletic or activity eligibility for students and school districts in this state for three hundred sixty-five days after such transfer.

4. The public school choice student or the student's parent is responsible for the transportation of the student to and from the school in the nonresident district where the student is enrolled, except that the nonresident district may enter into an agreement with the student's parent that the parent may transport the student to an existing bus stop location convenient to the school district if the school district has capacity available on a bus serving that location. If transportation is a related service on a student's individualized education program (IEP) and the student is a participant in the public school choice transfer program, the nonresident district shall not be required to provide such transportation as a related service under the IEP if the nonresident district and the student's parent have entered into an agreement under this subsection.

5. Notwithstanding the provisions of chapter 163 to the contrary, for the purposes of determining state and federal aid, a public school choice student shall be counted as a resident pupil of the nonresident district in which the student is enrolled.

6. (1) Except as otherwise provided, the nonresident district shall notify the public school choice student's resident district of the number of days the student was enrolled in the nonresident district.

(2) Upon receipt of such notice, the resident district shall calculate the per-pupil average daily local effort amount and send such amount for each day the student was enrolled in the nonresident district to the nonresident district prior to the last business day in June of the current school year. In no case shall the amount sent by the resident district exceed the amount of the annual per-pupil local effort as calculated by the nonresident district.

(3) If the resident district of the public school choice transfer student fails to send such amount owed to the nonresident district prior to the last business day in June in the current school year, the department shall withhold such amount from the resident district's monthly distribution of revenues and send such amount to the nonresident district by August fifteenth.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

167.1215. 1. Before February first annually, each school district shall set the number of transfer students the district is willing to receive for the following school year under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230. The district may create criteria for the acceptance of students including, but not limited to, the number of students by building, grade, classroom, or program.

2. (1) Each school district shall publish the number set under this section, and notify the department of this number, andbut shall not be required to accept any transfer students under this section that would cause it to exceed the published number.

(2) The school district may report the total number of students the district is willing to receive and further delineate the number by building, grade, classroom, or program.

3. Each school district shall develop a method for the formation and operation of a waiting list for applications that cannot be accepted because the number of transfers applied for exceeds the number of transfers available.

(1) Applications on the waiting list may be given priority for acceptance in the following order and may include other options for priority acceptance:

(a) Siblings of students already enrolled in the district;

(b) Children of an active duty member of the Armed Forces of the United States;

(c) Children of school district employees;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001667

(d) Students who had previously attended school in the district but whose parents have since moved out of the district; and

(e) Students whose parents present an employment circumstance for which an open enrollment transfer would be in the student's best interest.

(2) A parent of a student on the waiting list shall be informed by the district of the details of the operation of the list and whether the parent will be required to refile a timely application for open enrollment in order to remain on the waiting list.

167.1220. 1. If a student seeks to attend a school in a nonresident district under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230, the student's parent shall submit an application:

(1) To the nonresident district with a copy to the resident district;

(2) On a form approved by the department that contains the student's necessary information for enrollment in another district; and

(3) Postmarked before May first of the calendar year in which the student seeks to begin the fall semester at the nonresident district.

2. A nonresident district that receives an application under subsection 1 of this section shall, upon receipt of the application, place a date and time stamp on the application that reflects the date and time the nonresident district received the application.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001668

3. A nonresident district shall review and make a determination on each application in the order in which the application was received by the nonresident district.

4. Before accepting or rejecting an application, a nonresident district shall determine whether one of the limitations under section 167.1225 applies to the application.

5. (1) Before July first of the school year in which the student seeks to enroll in a nonresident district under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230, the superintendent of the nonresident district shall notify the parent and the resident district in writing as to whether the student's application has been accepted or rejected. The notification shall be sent by first-class mail to the address on the application or by email.

(2) If the application is rejected, the superintendent of the nonresident district shall state in the notification letter the reason for the rejection.

(3) If the application is accepted, the superintendent of the nonresident district shall state in the notification letter:

(a) A reasonable deadline by which the student shall enroll in the nonresident district and after which the acceptance notification is null; and

(b) Instructions for the procedures established by the nonresident district for renewing enrollment in the nonresident district each year.

167.1225. 1. If sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 conflict with a provision of an enforceable desegregation court order or a district's court-approved desegregation plan regarding the effects of past racial segregation in student assignment, the provisions of the order or plan shall govern.

2. (1) A school district may annually declare an exemption from sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 if the school district is subject to a desegregation order or mandate of a federal court or agency remedying the effects of past racial segregation or subject to a settlement agreement remedying the effects of past racial segregation.

(2) An exemption declared by a board of education of a school district under subdivision (1) of this subsection is irrevocable for one year from the date the school district notifies the department of the declaration of exemption.

(3) After each year of exemption, the board of education of a school district may elect to participate in the public school choice program under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 if the school district's participation does not conflict with the school district's federal court-ordered desegregation program or settlement agreement remedying the effects of past racial segregation.

(4) A school district shall notify the department before April first if in the next school year the school district intends to:

(a) Declare an exemption under subdivision (1) of this subsection; or

(b) Resume participation after a period of exemption.

(5) Annually before June first, the department shall report to each school district the maximum number of public school choice program transfers for the school year to begin July first.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(6) If a student is unable to transfer due to the limits under this subsection, the resident district shall give the student priority for a transfer in the following school year in the order that the resident district receives notices of application under section 167.1220, as evidenced by a notation made by the district on the applications indicating the date and time of receipt.

3. (1) Any student who transfers to a nonresident district under section 167.131, sections 162.1040 to 162.1061, or any section other than sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall not be subject to any requirements under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230.

(2) Districts receiving transfer students or sending transfer students to nonresident districts under section 167.131, sections 162.1040 to 162.1061, or any section other than sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall not be subject to any requirements under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 for those transfer students.

4. A student transferring to a nonresident district under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 shall not be considered a transfer student under any law relating to another transfer program or procedure that allows students to transfer out of their resident districts.

167.1230. 1. A student whose application for a transfer under section 167.1220 is rejected by the nonresident district may appeal to the department to reconsider the transfer.

2. A request for a hearing before the department shall be in writing and shall be postmarked no later than ten calendar days, excluding weekends and legal holidays, after the student or the student's parent receives a notice of rejection of the application under section 167.1220.

3. Contemporaneously with the filing of the written appeal under subsection 2 of this section, the student or the student's parent shall also mail a copy of the written appeal to the superintendent of the nonresident district.

4. In the written appeal, the student or student's parent shall state the basis for appealing the decision of the nonresident district.

5. The student or the student's parent shall submit, along with the written appeal, a copy of the notice of rejection from the nonresident district.

6. As part of the review process, the student or student's parent may submit supporting documentation that the transfer would be in the best educational, health, social, or psychological interest of the student.

7. The nonresident district may submit in writing any additional information, evidence, or arguments supporting the district's rejection of the student's application by mailing such response to the department. Such response shall be postmarked no later than ten days after the nonresident district receives the student's or parent's appeal.

8. Contemporaneously with the filing of its response under subsection 7 of this section, the nonresident district shall also mail a copy of the response to the student or student's parent.

9. If the department overturns the determination of the

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

nonresident district on appeal, the department shall notify the parent, the nonresident district, and the resident district of the basis for the department's decision.

10. (1) The department shall collect data from school districts on the number of applications for student transfers under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230 and study the effects of public school choice program transfers under sections 167.1200 to 167.1230. The department shall consider, as part of its study, the maximum number of transfers and exemptions for both resident and nonresident districts for up to two years to determine if a significant racially segregative impact has occurred to any school district.

(2) Annually before October first, the department shall report the department's findings from the study of the data under subdivision (1) of this subsection to the joint committee on education or any successor committee and:

(a) The house committee on elementary and secondary education or any other education committee designated by the speaker of the house of representatives; and

(b) The senate committee on education or any other education committee designated by the president pro tempore of the senate.

Section B. The repeal and reenactment of sections 167.020 and 167.151 and the enactment of sections 167.1200, 167.1205, 167.1210, 167.1215, 167.1220, 167.1225, and 167.1230 ~~and the repeal and reenactment of sections 167.020 and 167.151~~ of this act shall become effective July 1, 2022.

Representatives,

Please find attached the HCS for HB 421, which has been noticed for executive session on Tuesday at 8:00 am.

This language is a combination of HB 164 and HB 263 and provides procedures for creating subdistricts within certain 7 member school board school districts and urban school districts, with the requested changes.

This HCS provides both a school board option and an initiative petition option to allow the division of the district into subdistricts. Both options provide flexibility to the subdistricting and allow for a mixture in subdistricting and at large members. This language requires a vote of the district to approve the proposed plan before the implementation. Additionally this language would require a district that votes to utilize a new plan to stick with the plan for a minimum of five years before changes can be made.

Please contact house research at (573) 751-2979 if you have any questions or concerns regarding this piece of legislation.

HOUSE COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE

FOR

HOUSE BILL NO. 421

AN ACT

To repeal sections 162.261, 162.281, 162.291, 162.471, 162.481, and 162.491, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof six new sections relating to school district subdistricts.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, AS FOLLOWS:

Section A. Sections 162.261, 162.281, 162.291, 162.471, 162.481, and 162.491, RSMo, are repealed and six new sections enacted in lieu thereof, to be known as sections 162.261, 162.281, 162.291, 162.471, 162.481, and 162.491, to read as follows:

162.261. 1. The government and control of a seven-director school district, other than an urban district, is vested in a board of education of seven members, who hold their office for three years, except as provided in section 162.241 and subsections 4 and 5 of this section, and until their successors are duly elected and qualified. Any vacancy occurring in the board shall be filled by the remaining members of the board; except that if there are more than two vacancies at any one time, the county commission upon receiving written notice of the vacancies shall fill the vacancies by appointment. If there are more than two vacancies at any one time in a county without a county commission, the county executive upon receiving written notice of the vacancies shall fill the vacancies, with the advice and consent of the county council, by appointment. The person appointed shall hold office until the next municipal election, when a director shall be elected for the unexpired term.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2. No seven-director, urban, or metropolitan school district board of education shall hire a spouse of any member of such board for a vacant or newly created position unless the position has been advertised pursuant to board policy and the superintendent of schools submits a written recommendation for the employment of the spouse to the board of education. The names of all applicants as well as the name of the applicant hired for the position [~~are to~~] shall be included in the board minutes.

3. The provisions of Article VII, Section 6 of the Missouri Constitution apply to school districts.

4. (1) (a) The school board of any seven-director school district may divide the district into seven subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof and establish the election of board members as provided in this subsection.

(b) A school board desiring to divide a school district under this subsection shall vote on the question of dividing the district under this subsection. Upon the approval of the question by at least four members of the board, the school board shall follow the procedures described in subdivision (2) of this subsection.

(2) (a) A school board dividing a school district under this subsection shall develop and adopt a proposed plan for the division of the district. Such proposed plan shall be adopted upon the approval of at least four members of the board and shall contain at least the following information:

a. A summary of the proposed plan for dividing the district;

b. The time and place of at least two hearings to be held to consider the proposed plan;

c. A statement indicating whether the district will be divided into subdistricts, at-large districts, or some combination thereof;

d. A description of the areas of the school district each newly elected board member will represent;

e. A statement indicating whether the existing school board members will be replaced by the newly elected board members at one election or in succeeding elections to provide for staggered terms of the members; and

f. Any other information deemed necessary by the school board.

(b) For each hearing held as provided in this subdivision, the school board shall:

a. Publish notice of the hearing, the proposed plan, and any amendments to the proposed plan adopted at a previous hearing on the school district's website and by any other method allowed by law, with the first publication to occur no more than thirty days before the hearing and the second publication to occur no earlier than fifteen days and no later than ten days before the hearing;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

b. Hear all alternate proposals for division of the district and receive evidence for or against such alternate proposals;

c. Hear all protests and receive evidence for or against such proposed division;

d. Vote on each alternate proposal and protest, which vote shall be the final determination of such alternate proposal or protest;

e. Adopt any amendments to the proposed plan; and

f. Perform any other actions related to the proposed plan deemed necessary by the school board.

(c) a. After the conclusion of the final hearing proceedings conducted under this subdivision but before adjourning such hearing, the school board shall prepare the final plan to divide the school district developed as a result of the hearings and vote to adopt the final plan.

b. After the board prepares and adopts the final plan, the board shall present the final plan to the election authority of the county in which the school district is located for actions required under subparagraph c. of this paragraph and publish the final plan in the same manner as the initial proposed plan was published under subparagraph a. of paragraph (b) of this subdivision. The final plan shall contain at least the following information:

(i) A summary of the final plan for dividing the district;

(ii) A statement indicating whether the district will be divided into subdistricts, at-large districts, or some combination thereof;

(iii) A description of the areas of the school district each newly elected board member will represent;

(iv) The date of the election of each new school board member under the final plan;

(v) A statement indicating whether the existing school board members will be replaced by the newly elected board members at one election or in succeeding elections to provide for staggered terms of the members;

(vi) A ballot summary containing no more than fifty words, excluding articles, to place on the ballot to inform voters about the final plan; and

(vii) Any other information deemed necessary by the school board.

c. After receipt of a final plan as provided in this subsection, the election authority shall submit the question to the registered voters of the school district on the next available day for any election. The question submitted shall be in substantially the following form: "Shall _____ (enter the school district name) be divided into seven subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof?". The ballot summary provided in the final plan shall accompany the question on the ballot. If the registered voters of the school district voting on the question approve the question, the election authority shall follow the procedures described in subdivision (3) of this subsection. If the registered voters of the school district voting on the question reject the question, the school district shall not be divided and no similar proposal shall be considered by the board under this subsection until at least one year after the date on which the voters rejected the question.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(3) (a) If a final plan is approved by the voters of the school district voting on the question as provided in subdivision (2) of this subsection, before December first of the calendar year immediately preceding the general municipal election day in the calendar year in which the residents of the school district will vote to elect new school board members as provided in the final plan, the election authority of the county in which the school district is located shall divide the school district into subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof as directed in the final plan. Any subdistricts required by the final plan shall be of contiguous and compact territory and as nearly equal in population as practicable in accordance with the final plan. Within six months after each decennial census is reported to the President of the United States, the election authority shall reapportion the subdistricts to be as nearly equal in population as practicable. After the election authority divides the school district or reapportions the subdistricts, the election authority shall notify the residents of the school district as provided by law.

(b) Any resident of the school district who believes the election authority has divided the school district or reapportioned subdistricts in violation of paragraph (a) of this subdivision may petition the circuit court of the county in which the school district exists for an order directing the election authority to divide the school district or reapportion the subdistricts as provided in paragraph (a) of this subdivision. The petition shall be submitted to the circuit court within ten business days of the election authority's notice provided under paragraph (a) of this subdivision.

(4) On the first day available for candidate filing for the first general municipal election day occurring after the school district is divided under this subsection, any qualified resident who has or will have resided in a subdistrict or at-large district for the year immediately preceding the general municipal election day may file as a candidate for election to the school board as a member representing such subdistrict or at-large district. At the end of the time available for candidate filing, if no qualified resident of a subdistrict has filed as a candidate in that subdistrict, the election authority shall extend the time for candidate filing by seven additional days, and any qualified resident of the school district who has or will have resided in the school district for the year immediately preceding the general municipal election day may file as a candidate for election to the school board as a member representing that subdistrict. The election authority shall determine the validity of all declarations of candidacy.

(5) When the election is held on the general municipal election day, the seven candidates, one from each of the subdistricts or at-large districts, who receive a plurality of the votes cast by the voters of that subdistrict or at-large district shall be elected. Any candidate who is not a subdistrict resident but qualifies as a candidate as a school district resident under subdivision (4) of this subsection shall be elected by the voters of the school district. Each member shall be elected to a term as provided in the final plan approved under paragraph (c) of subdivision (2) of this subsection.

(6) Each member shall serve until a successor is elected or the member vacates the office. Any vacancy that occurs before the end of the member's term shall be filled as provided in this section.

(7) Except for a member who is not a subdistrict resident but is elected as a school district resident to represent a subdistrict under subdivision (4) of this subsection, each member shall reside in the subdistrict the member represents during the member's term.

(8) All other provisions applicable to seven-director school districts that are not in conflict with this subsection shall apply to school districts divided under this subsection.

5. (1) (a) If any seven-director school district receives a petition, signed by at least ten percent of the number of registered voters of the school district voting in the last school board election, calling for the school district to divide into seven subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof and establish the election of board members as provided in this subsection, the school district shall follow the procedures described in paragraph (c) of this subdivision.

(b) Any such petition submitted to the school district under this subsection shall contain a proposed plan for the division of the district. Such proposed plan shall contain at least the following information:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001682

a. A summary of the proposed plan for dividing the district;

b. A statement indicating whether the district will be divided into subdistricts, at-large districts, or some combination thereof;

c. A description of the areas of the school district each newly elected board member will represent;

d. The proposed date of the election of each new school board member under the proposed plan;

e. A statement indicating whether the existing school board members will be replaced by the newly elected board members at one election or in succeeding elections to provide for staggered terms of the members; and

f. A ballot summary containing no more than fifty words, excluding articles, to place on the ballot to inform voters about the proposed plan.

(c) Upon receipt of a petition and a proposed plan as provided in this subsection, the school board shall set the time and place of at least two hearings to be held to consider the proposed plan. For each hearing held as provided in this paragraph, the school board shall:

a. Publish notice of the hearing, the proposed plan, and any amendments to the proposed plan adopted at a previous hearing on the school district's website and by any other method allowed by law, with the first publication to occur no more than thirty days before the hearing and the second publication to occur no earlier than fifteen days and no later than ten days before the hearing;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

b. Conduct the hearing on the proposal for division of the district on behalf of the petitioners;

c. Hear all protests and receive evidence for or against such proposed division; and

d. Vote to adopt any proposed plan amendments agreed to by the petitioners as a result of the hearings.

(d) After the adjournment of the final hearing conducted under this subdivision, the board shall submit the petition and the final plan to the election authority of the county in which the school district is located for actions required under subdivision (2) of this subsection and publish the final plan in the same manner as the initial proposed plan was published under subparagraph a. of paragraph (c) of this subdivision. The final plan shall contain at least the following information:

a. A summary of the final plan for dividing the district;

b. A statement indicating whether the district will be divided into subdistricts, at-large districts, or some combination thereof;

c. A description of the areas of the school district each newly elected board member will represent;

d. The date of the election of each new school board member under the final plan;

e. A statement indicating whether the existing school board members will be replaced by the newly elected board members at one election or in succeeding elections to provide for staggered terms of the members;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

f. A ballot summary containing no more than fifty words, excluding articles, to place on the ballot to inform voters about the proposed plan; and

g. Any other information deemed necessary.

(2) After receipt of such petition and final plan as provided in paragraph (d) of subdivision (1) of this subsection, the election authority shall submit the question of whether to divide the school district as provided by the final plan to the registered voters of the school district on the next available day for any election. The question submitted shall be in substantially the following form: "Shall _____ (enter the school district name) be divided into seven subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof?". The ballot summary provided in the final plan shall accompany the question on the ballot. If the registered voters of the school district voting on the question approve the question, the election authority shall follow the procedures described in subdivision (3) of this subsection. If the registered voters of the school district voting on the question reject the question, no division as described in the petition and final plan shall occur and no similar petition shall be presented to the board under this subsection until at least one year after the date on which the voters rejected the question.

(3) (a) If the final plan is approved by the voters of the school district voting on the question as provided in subdivision

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(2) of this subsection, before December first of the calendar year immediately preceding the general municipal election day in the calendar year in which the residents of the school district will vote to elect new school board members as provided in the final plan, the election authority of the county in which the school district is located shall divide the school district into subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof as directed in the final plan. Any subdistricts required by the final plan shall be of contiguous and compact territory and as nearly equal in population as practicable in accordance with the final plan. Within six months after each decennial census is reported to the President of the United States, the election authority shall reapportion the subdistricts to be as nearly equal in population as practicable. After the election authority divides the school district or reapportions the subdistricts, the election authority shall notify the residents of the school district as provided by law.

(b) Any resident of the school district who believes the election authority has divided the school district or reapportioned subdistricts in violation of paragraph (a) of this subdivision may petition the circuit court of the county in which the school district exists for an order directing the election authority to divide the school district or reapportion the subdistricts as provided in paragraph (a) of this subdivision. The petition shall be submitted to the circuit court within ten business days of the election authority's notice provided under paragraph (a) of this subdivision.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(4) On the first day available for candidate filing for the first general municipal election day occurring after the school district is divided under this subsection, any qualified resident who has or will have resided in a subdistrict or at-large district for the year immediately preceding the general municipal election day may file as a candidate for election to the school board as a member representing such subdistrict or at-large district. At the end of the time available for candidate filing, if no qualified resident of a subdistrict has filed as a candidate in that subdistrict, the election authority shall extend the time for candidate filing by seven additional days, and any qualified resident of the school district who has or will have resided in the school district for the year immediately preceding the general municipal election day may file as a candidate for election to the school board as a member representing that subdistrict. The election authority shall determine the validity of all declarations of candidacy.

(5) When the election is held on the general municipal election day, the seven candidates, one from each of the subdistricts or at-large districts, who receive a plurality of the votes cast by the voters of that subdistrict or at-large district shall be elected. Any candidate who is not a subdistrict resident but qualifies as a candidate as a school district resident under subdivision (4) of this subsection shall be elected by the voters of the school district. Each member shall be elected to a term as provided in the final plan approved under subdivision (1) of this subsection.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(6) Each member shall serve until a successor is elected or the member vacates the office. Any vacancy that occurs before the end of the member's term shall be filled as provided in this section.

(7) Except for a member who is not a subdistrict resident but is elected as a school district resident to represent a subdistrict under subdivision (4) of this subsection, each member shall reside in the subdistrict the member represents during the member's term.

(8) All other provisions applicable to seven-director school districts that are not in conflict with this subsection shall apply to school districts divided under this subsection.

6. After a school district is divided under subsection 4 or 5 of this section, no new plan for division of the school district shall be proposed or adopted under subsection 4 or 5 of this section sooner than five years after a division of the school district under subsection 4 or 5 of this section.

162.281. Except as provided in subsections 4 and 5 of section 162.261 and subsections 3 and 4 of section 162.471, in all seven-director districts, including urban districts, when directors are to be elected for terms of different lengths, each candidate shall declare for a term of a specific number of years and the different terms shall be voted upon as separate propositions.

162.291. Except as provided in subsections 4 and 5 of section 162.261, the voters of each seven-director district other than urban districts shall, at municipal elections, elect two directors who are citizens of the United States and resident taxpayers of the district, who have resided in this state for one year next preceding their election or appointment, and who are at least twenty-four years of age.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001688

162.471. 1. The government and control of an urban school district is vested in a board of seven directors.

2. Except as provided in subsections 3 and 4 of this section, each director shall be a voter of the district who has resided within this state for one year next preceding [~~his~~] the director's election or appointment and who is at least twenty-four years of age. All directors, except as otherwise provided in subsections 3 and 4 of this section, section 162.481, and section 162.492, hold their offices for six years and until their successors are duly elected and qualified. All vacancies occurring in the board, except as provided in section 162.492, shall be filled by appointment by the board as soon as practicable, and the person appointed shall hold [~~his~~] office until the next school board election, when [~~his~~] a successor shall be elected for the remainder of the unexpired term. The power of the board to perform any official duty during the existence of a vacancy continues unimpaired thereby.

3. (1) (a) Except as provided in section 162.492, the board of directors of any urban school district may divide the district into seven subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof and establish the election of board members as provided in this subsection.

(b) A board of directors desiring to divide a school district under this subsection shall vote on the question of dividing the district under this subsection. Upon the approval of the question by at least four members of the board, the board shall follow the procedures described in subdivision (2) of this subsection.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001689

(2) (a) A board of directors dividing a school district under this subsection shall develop and adopt a proposed plan for the division of the district. Such proposed plan shall be adopted upon the approval of at least four members of the board and shall contain at least the following information:

a. A summary of the proposed plan for dividing the district;

b. The time and place of at least two hearings to be held to consider the proposed plan;

c. A statement indicating whether the district will be divided into subdistricts, at-large districts, or some combination thereof;

d. A description of the areas of the school district each newly elected board member will represent;

e. A statement indicating whether the existing board members will be replaced by the newly elected board members at one election or in succeeding elections to provide for staggered terms of the members; and

f. Any other information deemed necessary by the board of directors.

(b) For each hearing held as provided in this subdivision, the board of directors shall:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001690

a. Publish notice of the hearing, the proposed plan, and any amendments to the proposed plan adopted at a previous hearing on the school district's website and by any other method allowed by law, with the first publication to occur no more than thirty days before the hearing and the second publication to occur no earlier than fifteen days and no later than ten days before the hearing;

b. Hear all alternate proposals for division of the district and receive evidence for or against such alternate proposals;

c. Hear all protests and receive evidence for or against such proposed division;

d. Vote on each alternate proposal and protest, which vote shall be the final determination of such alternate proposal or protest;

e. Adopt any amendments to the proposed plan; and

f. Perform any other actions related to the proposed plan deemed necessary by the board of directors.

(c) a. After the conclusion of the final hearing proceedings conducted under this subdivision but before adjourning such hearing, the board of directors shall prepare the final plan to divide the school district developed as a result of the hearings and vote to adopt the final plan.

b. After the board prepares and adopts the final plan, the board shall present the final plan to the election authority of the county in which the school district is located for actions required under subparagraph c. of this paragraph and publish the final plan in the same manner as the initial proposed plan was published under subparagraph a. of paragraph (b) of this subdivision. The final plan shall contain at least the following information:

MO-REP-21-1608-F-001691

(i) A summary of the final plan for dividing the district;

(ii) A statement indicating whether the district will be divided into subdistricts, at-large districts, or some combination thereof;

(iii) A description of the areas of the school district each newly elected board member will represent;

(iv) The date of the election of each new board member under the final plan;

(v) A statement indicating whether the existing board members will be replaced by the newly elected board members at one election or in succeeding elections to provide for staggered terms of the members;

(vi) A ballot summary containing no more than fifty words, excluding articles, to place on the ballot to inform voters about the final plan; and

(vii) Any other information deemed necessary by the board of directors.

c. After receipt of a final plan as provided in this subsection, the election authority shall submit the question to the registered voters of the school district on the next available day for any election. The question submitted shall be in substantially the following form: "Shall _____ (enter the school district name) be divided into seven subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof?". The ballot summary provided in the final plan shall accompany the question on the ballot. If the registered voters of the school district voting on the question approve the question, the election authority shall follow the procedures described in subdivision (3) of this subsection. If the registered voters of the school district voting on the question reject the question, the school district shall not be divided and no similar proposal shall be considered by the board under this subsection until at least one year after the date on which the voters rejected the question.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(3) (a) If a final plan is approved by the voters of the school district voting on the question as provided in subdivision (2) of this subsection, before December first of the calendar year immediately preceding the general municipal election day in the calendar year in which the residents of the school district will vote to elect new board members as provided in the final plan, the election authority of the county in which the school district is located shall divide the school district into subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof as directed in the final plan. Any subdistricts required by the final plan shall be of contiguous and compact territory and as nearly equal in population as practicable in accordance with the final plan. Within six months after each decennial census is reported to the President of the United States, the election authority shall reapportion the subdistricts to be as nearly equal in population as practicable. After the election authority divides the school district or reapportions the subdistricts, the election authority shall notify the residents of the school district as provided by law.

(b) Any resident of the school district who believes the election authority has divided the school district or reapportioned subdistricts in violation of paragraph (a) of this subdivision may petition the circuit court of the county in which the school district exists for an order directing the election authority to divide the school district or reapportion the subdistricts as provided in paragraph (a) of this subdivision. The petition shall be submitted to the circuit court within ten business days of the election authority's notice provided under paragraph (a) of this subdivision.

(4) On the first day available for candidate filing for the first general municipal election day occurring after the school district is divided under this subsection, any qualified resident who has or will have resided in a subdistrict or at-large district for the year immediately preceding the general municipal election day may file as a candidate for election to the board of directors as a member representing such subdistrict or at-large district. At the end of the time available for candidate filing, if no qualified resident of a subdistrict has filed as a candidate in that subdistrict, the election authority shall extend the time for candidate filing by seven additional days, and any qualified resident of the school district who has or will have resided in the school district for the year immediately preceding the general municipal election day may file as a candidate for election to the board of directors as a member representing that subdistrict. The election authority shall determine the validity of all declarations of candidacy.

(5) When the election is held on the general municipal election day, the seven candidates, one from each of the subdistricts or at-large districts, who receive a plurality of the votes cast by the voters of that subdistrict or at-large district shall be elected. Any candidate who is not a subdistrict resident but qualifies as a candidate as a school district resident under subdivision (4) of this subsection shall be elected by the voters of the school district. Each member shall be elected to a term as provided in the final plan approved under paragraph (c) of subdivision (2) of this subsection.

(6) Each member shall serve until a successor is elected or the member vacates the office. Any vacancy that occurs before the end of the member's term shall be filled as provided in this section.

(7) Except for a member who is not a subdistrict resident but is elected as a school district resident to represent a subdistrict under subdivision (4) of this subsection, each member shall reside in the subdistrict the member represents during the member's term.

(8) All other provisions applicable to urban school districts that are not in conflict with this subsection shall apply to school districts divided under this subsection.

4. (1) (a) If any urban school district receives a petition, signed by at least ten percent of the number of registered voters of the school district voting in the last

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

election of a member of the board of directors, calling for the school district to divide into seven subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof and establish the election of board members as provided in this subsection, the school district shall follow the procedures described in paragraph (c) of this subdivision.

(b) Any such petition submitted to the school district under this subsection shall contain a proposed plan for the division of the district. Such proposed plan shall contain at least the following information:

a. A summary of the proposed plan for dividing the district;

b. A statement indicating whether the district will be divided into subdistricts, at-large districts, or some combination thereof;

c. A description of the areas of the school district each newly elected board member will represent;

d. The proposed date of the election of each new board member under the proposed plan;

e. A statement indicating whether the existing board members will be replaced by the newly elected board members at one election or in succeeding elections to provide for staggered terms of the members; and

f. A ballot summary containing no more than fifty words, excluding articles, to place on the ballot to inform voters about the proposed plan.

(c) Upon receipt of a petition and a proposed plan as

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

provided in this subsection, the board of directors shall set the time and place of at least two hearings to be held to consider the proposed plan. For each hearing held as provided in this paragraph, the board shall:

a. Publish notice of the hearing, the proposed plan, and any amendments to the proposed plan adopted at a previous hearing on the school district's website and by any other method allowed by law, with the first publication to occur no more than thirty days before the hearing and the second publication to occur no earlier than fifteen days and no later than ten days before the hearing;

b. Conduct the hearing on the proposal for division of the district on behalf of the petitioners;

c. Hear all protests and receive evidence for or against such proposed division; and

d. Vote to adopt any proposed plan amendments agreed to by the petitioners as a result of the hearings.

(d) After the adjournment of the final hearing conducted under this subdivision, the board of directors shall submit the petition and the final plan to the election authority of the county in which the school district is located for actions required under subdivision (2) of this subsection and publish the final plan in the same manner as the initial proposed plan was published under subparagraph a. of paragraph (c) of this subdivision. The final plan shall contain at least the following information:

a. A summary of the final plan for dividing the district;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

b. A statement indicating whether the district will be divided into subdistricts, at-large districts, or some combination thereof;

c. A description of the areas of the school district each newly elected board member will represent;

d. The date of the election of each new board member under the final plan;

e. A statement indicating whether the existing board members will be replaced by the newly elected board members at one election or in succeeding elections to provide for staggered terms of the members;

f. A ballot summary containing no more than fifty words, excluding articles, to place on the ballot to inform voters about the proposed plan; and

g. Any other information deemed necessary.

(2) After receipt of such petition and final plan as provided in paragraph (d) of subdivision (1) of this subsection, the election authority shall submit the question of whether to divide the school district as provided by the final plan to the registered voters of the school district on the next available day for any election. The question submitted shall be in substantially the following form: "Shall _____ (enter the school district name) be divided into seven subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof?". The ballot summary provided in the final plan shall accompany the question on the ballot. If the registered voters of the school district voting on the question approve the question, the election authority shall follow the procedures described in subdivision (3) of this subsection. If the registered voters of the school district voting on the question reject the question, no division as described in the petition and final plan shall occur and no similar petition shall be presented to the board under this subsection until at least one year after the date on which the voters rejected the question.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(3) (a) If the final plan is approved by the voters of the school district voting on the question as provided in subdivision (2) of this subsection, before December first of the calendar year immediately preceding the general municipal election day in the calendar year in which the residents of the school district will vote to elect new board members as provided in the final plan, the election authority of the county in which the school district is located shall divide the school district into subdistricts, at-large districts, or any combination thereof as directed in the final plan. Any subdistricts required by the final plan shall be of contiguous and compact territory and as nearly equal in population as practicable in accordance with the final plan. Within six months after each decennial census is reported to the President of the United States, the election authority shall reapportion the subdistricts to be as nearly equal in population as practicable. After the election authority divides the school district or reapportions the subdistricts, the election authority shall notify the residents of the school district as provided by law.

(b) Any resident of the school district who believes the election authority has divided the school district or reapportioned subdistricts in violation of paragraph (a) of this subdivision may petition the circuit court of the county in which the school district exists for an order directing the election authority to divide the school district or reapportion the subdistricts as provided in paragraph (a) of this subdivision. The petition shall be submitted to the circuit court within ten business days of the election authority's notice provided under paragraph (a) of this subdivision.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(4) On the first day available for candidate filing for the first general municipal election day occurring after the school district is divided under this subsection, any qualified resident who has or will have resided in a subdistrict or at-large district for the year immediately preceding the general municipal election day may file as a candidate for election to the board of directors as a member representing such subdistrict or at-large district. At the end of the time available for candidate filing, if no qualified resident of a subdistrict has filed as a candidate in that subdistrict, the election authority shall extend the time for candidate filing by seven additional days, and any qualified resident of the school district who has or will have resided in the school district for the year immediately preceding the general municipal election day may file as a candidate for election to the board of directors as a member representing that subdistrict. The election authority shall determine the validity of all declarations of candidacy.

(5) When the election is held on the general municipal election day, the seven candidates, one from each of the subdistricts or at-large districts, who receive a plurality of the votes cast by the voters of that subdistrict or at-large district shall be elected. Any candidate who is not a subdistrict resident but qualifies as a candidate as a school district resident under subdivision (4) of this subsection shall be elected by the voters of the school district. Each member shall be elected to a term as provided in the final plan approved under subdivision (1) of this subsection.

(6) Each member shall serve until a successor is elected or the member vacates the office. Any vacancy that occurs before the end of the member's term shall be filled as provided in this section.

(7) Except for a member who is not a subdistrict resident but is elected as a school district resident to represent a subdistrict under subdivision (4) of this subsection, each member shall reside in the subdistrict the member represents during the member's term.

(8) All other provisions applicable to urban school districts that are not in conflict with this subsection shall apply to school districts divided under this subsection.

5. After a school district is divided under subsection 3 or 4 of this section, no new plan for division of the school district shall be proposed or adopted under subsection 3 or 4 of this section sooner than five years after a division of the school district under subsection 3 or 4 of this section.

162.481. 1. Except as otherwise provided in section

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001701

162.471, this section, and [~~in~~] section 162.492, all elections of school directors in urban school districts shall be held biennially at the same times and places as municipal elections.

2. Except as otherwise provided in subsections 3, 4, and 5 of this section, hereafter when a seven-director district becomes an urban school district, the directors of the prior seven-director district shall continue as directors of the urban school district until the expiration of the terms for which they were elected and until their successors are elected as provided in this subsection. The first biennial school election for directors shall be held in the urban school district at the time provided in subsection 1 which is on the date of or subsequent to the expiration of the terms of the directors of the prior district which are first to expire, and directors shall be elected to succeed the directors of the prior district whose terms have expired. If the terms of two directors only have expired, the directors elected at the first biennial school election in the urban school district shall be elected for terms of six years. If the terms of four directors have expired, two directors shall be elected for terms of six years and two shall be elected for terms of four years. At the next succeeding biennial election held in the urban school district, successors for the remaining directors of the prior seven-director district shall be elected. If only two directors are to be elected they shall be elected for terms of six years each. If four directors are to be elected, two shall be elected for terms of six years and two shall be elected for terms of two years. After seven directors of the urban school district have been elected under this subsection, their successors shall be elected for terms of six years.

3. In any school district in which a majority of the district is located in any home rule city with more than one hundred fifty-five thousand but fewer than two hundred thousand inhabitants, elections shall be held annually at the same times and places as general municipal elections for all years where one or more terms expire, and the terms shall be for three years and until their successors are duly elected and qualified for all directors elected on and after August 28, 1998.

4. For any school district which becomes an urban school district by reason of the 2000 federal decennial census, elections shall be held annually at the same times and places as general municipal elections for all years where one or more terms expire, and the terms shall be for three years and until their successors are duly elected and qualified for all directors elected on and after August 28, 2001.

5. In any school district in any county with a charter form of government and with more than three hundred thousand but fewer than four hundred fifty thousand inhabitants which becomes an urban school district by reason of the 2010 federal decennial census, elections shall be held annually at the same times and places as general municipal elections for all years where one or more terms expire, and the terms shall be for three years and until their successors are duly elected and qualified for all directors elected on and after April 2, 2012.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

6. In any urban school district in a county of the first classification with more than eighty-three thousand but fewer than ninety-two thousand inhabitants and with a home rule city with more than seventy-six thousand but fewer than ninety-one thousand inhabitants as the county seat, elections shall be held annually at the same times and places as general municipal elections for all years where one or more terms expire, and upon expiration of any term after August 28, 2015, the term of office shall be for three years and until their successors are duly elected and qualified.

162.491. 1. Directors for urban school districts, other than those districts containing the greater part of a city of over one hundred thirty thousand inhabitants, may be nominated by petition to be filed with the secretary of the board and signed by a number of voters in the district equal to ten percent of the total number of votes cast for the director receiving the highest number of votes cast at the next preceding biennial election, except as provided in subsection 4 of this section.

2. This section shall not be construed as providing the sole method of nominating candidates for the office of school director in urban school districts [~~which~~] that do not contain the greater part of a city of over three hundred thousand inhabitants.

3. A director for any urban school district containing a city of greater than one hundred thirty thousand inhabitants and less than three hundred thousand inhabitants may be nominated as an independent candidate by filing with the secretary of the board a petition signed by five hundred registered voters of such school district.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

4. In any urban school district located in a county of the first classification with more than eighty-three thousand but fewer than ninety-two thousand inhabitants and with a home rule city with more than seventy-six thousand but fewer than ninety-one thousand inhabitants as the county seat, a candidate for director shall file a declaration of candidacy with the secretary of the board and shall not be required to submit a petition.

5. No candidate for election as a school board director representing a subdistrict under subsection 3 or 4 of section 162.471 shall be required to file a declaration of candidacy under this section as the sole method of filing for candidacy.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

HOUSE COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE

FOR

HOUSE BILL NO. 608

AN ACT

To repeal section 168.133, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof two new sections relating to substitute teacher licensing.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, AS FOLLOWS:

Section A. Section 168.133, RSMo, is repealed and two new sections enacted in lieu thereof, to be known as sections 168.036 and 168.133, to read as follows:

168.036. 1. In addition to granting certificates of license to teach in public schools of the state as provided in section 168.021, the state board of education shall grant substitute teacher certificates as provided in this section to any individual seeking to substitute teach in any public school in this state.

2. (1) The state board shall not grant a certificate of license to teach under this section to any individual who has not completed a background check as described in section 168.133.

(2) A background check conducted under this subsection shall be valid for four years for purposes of the certificate granted under this section and shall be transferrable from one school district to another district except as provided in subdivision (3) of this subsection.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(3) A school district employing a substitute teacher who has a certificate granted under this section may require the teacher to complete the background check annually. A school district may require the background check required in this section for a newly hired substitute teacher to be conducted at the teacher's expense.

(4) The state board may refuse to issue or renew, suspend, or revoke any certificate sought or issued under this section in the same manner and for the same reasons as provided in section 168.071.

3. The state board may grant a certificate under this section to any individual who has completed the background check required in this section and who has completed:

(1) At least thirty-six semester hours at an accredited institution of higher education and the orientation required in subsection 6 of this section; or

(2) The twenty-hour online training program required in this section and who possesses a high school diploma or the equivalent thereof.

4. The state board may grant a certificate under this section to any highly qualified individual with expertise in a technical or business field or with experience in the Armed Forces of the United States who has completed the background check required in this section but does not meet any of the qualifications in subdivision (1) or (2) of subsection 3 of this section if the superintendent of the school district sponsors such individual and the school board of the school district in which the individual seeks to substitute teach votes to approve such individual to substitute teach.

5. (1) An individual to whom the state board grants a certificate under this section may be a substitute teacher in any public school in the state if a school district superintendent, school district assistant superintendent, or public school principal in this state agrees to employ the individual as a substitute teacher.

(2) No individual to whom the state board grants a certificate under this section and who is under twenty years of age shall be a substitute teacher in grades nine to twelve.

6. An individual to whom the state board grants a certificate under this section shall complete an orientation developed and offered by the school district for which the individual originally teaches. The orientation for such individual shall contain at least two hours of subjects appropriate for substitute teachers and shall contain instruction on the school district's best practices for classroom management. Such orientation completed in any school district may be accepted by any subsequent district in which the individual substitute teaches. A subsequent school district may require the individual to complete a separate and distinct local orientation for the particular school district before the individual may substitute teach in the subsequent school district.

7. A certificate granted under this section shall be valid for four years. A certificate granted under this section shall expire at the end of any calendar year in which the individual fails to substitute teach for at least five days or forty hours of in-seat instruction.

8. The department of elementary and secondary education shall develop an online training program for individuals granted a certificate under subdivision (2) of subsection 3 of this section. The training program shall consist of twenty hours of training related to subjects appropriate for substitute teachers as determined by the department. A substitute teacher shall complete an orientation for substitute teachers provided by the school district in which the substitute teacher teaches.

9. Any individual possessing a valid certificate of license to teach granted by the state board shall be deemed to be a substitute teacher under this section if the individual has completed a background check as required in this section.

10. The state board may exercise the board's authority as provided in chapter 161 to promulgate all necessary rules and regulations necessary for the administration of this section.

168.133. 1. As used in this section, "screened volunteer" shall mean any person who assists a school by providing uncompensated service and who may periodically be left alone with students. The school district shall ensure that a criminal background check is conducted for all screened volunteers, who shall complete the criminal background check prior to being left alone with a student. Screened volunteers include, but are not limited to, persons who regularly assist in the office or library, mentor or tutor students, coach or supervise a school-sponsored activity before or after school, or chaperone students on an overnight trip. Screened volunteers [~~may only~~] shall access student education records only when necessary to assist the district and while supervised by staff members. Volunteers [~~that~~] who are not screened shall not be left alone with a student or have access to student records.

2. The school district shall ensure that a criminal background check is conducted on any person employed after January 1, 2005, authorized to have contact with pupils and prior to the individual having contact with any pupil. Such persons include, but are not limited to, administrators, teachers, substitute teachers, aides, paraprofessionals, assistants, secretaries, custodians, cooks, screened volunteers, and nurses. The school district shall also ensure that a criminal background check is conducted for school bus drivers. The district may allow such drivers to operate buses pending the result of the criminal background check. For bus drivers, the school district shall be responsible for conducting the criminal background check on drivers employed by the school district. For drivers employed by a pupil transportation company under contract with the school district, the criminal background check shall be conducted pursuant to section 43.540 and conform to the requirements established in the National Child Protection Act of 1993, as amended by the Volunteers for Children Act. Personnel who have successfully undergone a criminal background check and a check of the family care safety registry as part of the professional license application process under section 168.021 and who have received clearance on the checks within one prior year of employment shall be considered to have completed the background check requirement. A criminal background check under this section shall include a search of any information publicly available in an electronic format through a public index or single case display.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3. In order to facilitate the criminal history background check, the applicant shall submit a set of fingerprints collected pursuant to standards determined by the Missouri highway patrol. The fingerprints shall be used by the highway patrol to search the criminal history repository and shall be forwarded to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for searching the federal criminal history files.

4. The applicant shall pay the fee for the state criminal history record information pursuant to section 43.530 and sections 210.900 to 210.936 and pay the appropriate fee determined by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the federal criminal history record when [~~he or she~~] the applicant applies for a position authorized to have contact with pupils pursuant to this section. The department shall distribute the fees collected for the state and federal criminal histories to the Missouri highway patrol.

5. For each school district that is not enrolled in the Missouri Rap Back program under chapter 43, the department of elementary and secondary education shall facilitate an annual check of employed persons holding current active certificates under [~~section~~] sections 168.021 and 168.036 against criminal history records in the central repository under section 43.530,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the sexual offender registry under sections 589.400 to 589.426, and child abuse central registry under sections 210.109 to 210.183. The department of elementary and secondary education shall facilitate procedures for school districts to submit personnel information annually for persons employed by the school districts who do not hold a current valid certificate who are required by subsection 1 of this section to undergo a criminal background check, sexual offender registry check, and child abuse central registry check. The Missouri state highway patrol shall provide ongoing electronic updates to criminal history background checks of those persons previously submitted, both those who have an active certificate and those who do not have an active certificate, by the department of elementary and secondary education. This shall fulfill the annual check against the criminal history records in the central repository under section 43.530.

6. The school district may adopt a policy to provide for reimbursement of expenses incurred by an employee for state and federal criminal history information pursuant to section 43.530.

7. If, as a result of the criminal history background check mandated by this section, it is determined that the holder of a certificate issued pursuant to [~~section~~] sections 168.021 and 168.036 has pled guilty or nolo contendere to, or been found guilty of a crime or offense listed in section 168.071, or a similar crime or offense committed in another state, the United States, or any other country, regardless of imposition of sentence, such information shall be reported to the department of elementary and secondary education.

8. Any school official making a report to the department of elementary and secondary education in conformity with this section shall not be subject to civil liability for such action.

9. For any teacher who is employed by a school district on a substitute or part-time basis within one year of such teacher's retirement from a Missouri school, the state of Missouri shall not require such teacher to be subject to any additional background checks prior to having contact with pupils. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as prohibiting or otherwise restricting a school district from requiring additional background checks for such teachers employed by the school district.

10. A criminal background check and fingerprint collection conducted under subsections 1 to 3 of this section shall be valid for at least a period of one year and transferrable from one school district to another district. A school district may, in its discretion, conduct a new criminal background check and fingerprint collection under subsections 1 to 3 of this section for a newly hired employee at the district's expense. A teacher's change in type of certification shall have no effect on the transferability or validity of such records.

11. Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter the standards for suspension, denial, or revocation of a certificate issued pursuant to this chapter.

12. Beginning on January 1, 2022, any substitute teacher may, at the time such substitute teacher submits the fingerprints and information required for the Missouri criminal record review under subsections 2 and 3 of this section, designate up to five school districts to which the results of the substitute teacher's criminal history background check and fingerprint collection shall be disseminated. The substitute teacher shall pay an additional five-dollar fee for such records to be disseminated to the second and third school districts and an additional five-dollar fee for such records to be disseminated to the fourth and fifth school districts.

13. The state board of education may promulgate rules for criminal history background checks made pursuant to this section. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable, and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after January 1, 2005, shall be invalid and void.

Representatives,

Please find attached the House Committee Substitute for HB 368, which has been noticed for executive session on Tuesday, April 13, 2021.

This legislation requires each local school district and charter school to have on file a policy for reading success plans for certain students. The bill is similar to SCS/SB54 (0884S.03C) from 2021, with edits for clarity, consistency, and cohesion with House Drafting guidelines.

Please contact house research at (573) 751-2979 if you have any questions or concerns regarding this piece of legislation.

Cordially,

HOUSE COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE

FOR

HOUSE BILL NO. 368

AN ACT

To repeal sections 161.097, 167.263, 167.268, and 167.645, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof five new sections relating to reading success in schools, with a delayed effective date for a certain section.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, AS FOLLOWS:

Section A. Sections 161.097, 167.263, 167.268, and 167.645, RSMo, are repealed and five new sections enacted in lieu thereof, to be known as sections 161.097, 167.263, 167.268, 167.645, and 186.080, to read as follows:

161.097. 1. The state board of education shall establish standards and procedures by which it will evaluate all teacher training institutions in this state for the approval of teacher education programs. The state board of education shall not require teacher training institutions to meet national or regional accreditation as a part of its standards and procedures in making those evaluations, but it may accept such accreditations in lieu of such approval if standards and procedures set thereby are at least as stringent as those set by the board. The state board of education's standards and procedures for evaluating teacher training institutions shall equal or exceed those of national or regional accrediting associations.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001717

2. There is hereby established within the department of elementary and secondary education the "Missouri Advisory Board for Educator Preparation", hereinafter referred to as "MABEP". The MABEP shall advise the state board of education and the coordinating board for higher education regarding matters of mutual interest in the area of quality educator preparation programs in Missouri.

3. Upon approval by the state board of education of the teacher education program at a particular teacher training institution, any person who graduates from that program, and who meets other requirements [which] that the state board of education shall prescribe by rule, regulation, and statute shall be granted a certificate or license to teach in the public schools of this state. However, no such rule or regulation shall require that the program from which the person graduates be accredited by any national or regional accreditation association.

4. The state board of education shall require literacy and reading instruction coursework for teacher education programs aligned to certification in early childhood education, elementary education, middle school education with subject area certification in language arts, secondary education with subject area certification in English, special reading, and special education to include training in:

(1) The core components of reading, such as phonemic awareness, phonics, fluency, comprehension, morphology, syntax, and vocabulary;

(2) Oral and written language development;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(3) Identification of reading deficiencies, dyslexia, and other language difficulties; and

(4) The administration and interpretation of assessments and how to translate assessment results into effective practice in the classroom specific to the needs of students.

5. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable, and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after August 28, 2014, shall be invalid and void.

167.263. 1. A program to provide teacher assistants in regular classrooms in grades kindergarten through three is established. For the purposes of this section a "teacher assistant" is defined as a qualified person employed by a school district to assist a certificated teacher in classroom instruction and management. No teacher assistant shall be counted as a teacher for the purposes of establishing ratios of teachers to pupils in a classroom, school, or school district. Any public elementary school containing such grades [~~which~~] that meets the criteria pursuant to this section shall be eligible for a state financial supplement to employ teacher assistants.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001719

Eligibility criteria are that the school shall have a breakfast program, the school shall serve at least forty percent of its lunches to pupils who are eligible for free or reduced price meals according to federal guidelines, and the school shall have a reading [~~intervention~~] success plan for any student who requires such a plan pursuant to section 167.268.

2. A school district [~~which~~] that contains such eligible schools may apply to the department of elementary and secondary education for a state financial supplement to employ teacher assistants in those schools named in the application and in no other schools of the district. The state full-time equivalent financial supplement shall be three thousand dollars per teacher assistant. No more than one assistant per classroom shall be supplemented by the state pursuant to this section. Teacher assistants thus employed pursuant to this section shall assist teachers in grades kindergarten through three and in no other grades. School districts shall not apply for or assign teacher assistants employed pursuant to this section in classrooms designated as special education or compensatory education classrooms.

3. The state board of education shall promulgate rules and regulations for the implementation of this section. Such rules shall include identifying minimum qualifications for teacher assistants which may include teacher education students, determining the minimum number of pupils per classroom to be eligible for a teacher assistant, establishing application procedures for school districts, and determining a method of awarding state financial supplements in the event that the number of applications exceeds the amounts appropriated therefor. No rule or portion of a rule promulgated under the authority of this chapter shall become effective unless it has been promulgated pursuant to the provisions of section 536.024.

167.268. 1. The state board of education, in collaboration with the coordinating board for higher education and the literacy advisory council established under section 186.080, shall develop a plan to establish a comprehensive system of services for reading instruction.

2. Each local school district and charter school shall have on file a policy for reading [~~intervention~~] success plans for any pupils of the district or charter school in grades kindergarten through [~~three~~] four pursuant to the provisions of this section. Such plans shall identify strategies to be followed by the district or charter school teachers to raise a pupil identified as reading below grade level by recognized methods to reading at grade level by the end of the [~~third~~] fourth grade. Recognized methods of identification may include but need not be limited to the scores of the pupil obtained through any established standardized testing program currently administered by the district or charter school, observations of classroom teachers, and documented classroom performance. The local policy shall be aligned with the guidelines developed by the department of elementary and secondary education for reading success plans.

[~~2.~~] 3. The [~~state board of~~] department of elementary and secondary education shall develop guidelines to assist school districts and charter schools in formulating policies for reading [~~intervention~~] success plans. Such guidelines may include, but are not limited to, measures of reading proficiency, strategies for addressing reading deficiencies and disorders, timelines for measuring pupil improvement in reading, and information on screening for and treatment of [~~auditory dyslexia, and information on the Lindamood Auditory Conceptualization Test and the Auditory Discrimination in Depth Program~~] dyslexia and other reading deficiencies. In addition, any guidelines for instruction shall meet the needs of the students by ensuring that instruction is explicit, systematic, and diagnostic and based on phonological awareness, phonics, fluency, vocabulary, comprehension, morphology, syntax, and semantics. Such guidelines may also identify performance levels for pupils identified as handicapped or severely handicapped and conditions under which such pupils [~~are~~] may be exempt from the provisions of this section.

[~~3.~~] 4. Each local school district [~~enrolling a pupil identified as reading below grade level shall develop an individual plan of reading intervention for such pupil. The individual pupil's plan may include individual or group reading development activities. The plan may be developed after consultation with the pupil's parent or legal guardian~~] and charter school shall provide supplemental reading instruction under a reading success plan created under section 167.645 to any enrolled student who exhibits a reading deficiency.

167.645. 1. For purposes of this section, the following

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001722

terms mean:

(1) "Dyslexia", the same meaning given to the term in section 633.420;

(2) "Evidence-based reading instruction", scientific, research-based interventions that have been peer reviewed with substantial evidence of their effectiveness through multiple outcome evaluation;

(3) "Reading assessment", a recognized method of judging a student's reading ability, with results expressed as reading at a particular grade level. The term reading assessment shall include, but is not limited to, standard checklists designed for use as a student reads out loud, paper-and-pencil tests promulgated by nationally recognized organizations and other recognized methods of determining a student's reading accuracy, expression, fluency and comprehension in order to make a determination of the student's grade-level reading ability. Assessments [~~which~~] that do not give a grade-level result may be used in combination with other assessments to reach a grade-level determination. Districts and charter schools are encouraged but not required to select assessment methods identified pursuant to section 167.346. Districts and charter schools are [~~also~~] encouraged to use multiple methods of assessment;

[~~(2)~~] (4) "Structured literacy", an evidence-based reading instruction that addresses phonology, sound-symbol association, syllable instruction, morphology, syntax, and semantics when such instruction is taught through systematic, cumulative, explicit, and diagnostic methods;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001723

(5) "Summer school", for reading instruction purposes, a minimum of forty hours of reading instruction and practice. A school district or charter school may arrange the hours and days of instruction to coordinate with its regular program of summer school.

2. For purposes of this section, methods of reading assessment shall be determined by each school district and charter school. Each school district and charter school shall provide training on the administration of reading assessments to all kindergarten through fifth grade teachers and any other personnel who provide literacy instruction. Unless a student has been determined in the [~~current~~] previous school year to be reading at grade level or above, each school district and charter school shall administer a reading assessment or set of assessments to each student within [~~forty-five days of the end of the third-grade year~~] the first thirty calendar days of school for grades one through four, and by January thirty-first for kindergarten, except that the provisions of this subsection shall not apply to students receiving special education services under an individualized education plan pursuant to sections 162.670 to 162.999, to students receiving services pursuant to Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 whose services plan includes an element addressing reading or to students determined to have limited English proficiency or to students who have been determined, prior to the beginning of any school year, to have a cognitive ability insufficient to meet the reading requirement set out in this section, provided that districts and charter schools shall provide reading [~~improvement~~] success plans for students with an individualized education plan that have a reading deficiency, for students receiving services under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 whose service plan includes an element addressing reading, and to students determined to have such insufficient cognitive ability. The assessment required by this subsection shall also be required for students who enter a school district or charter school in grades four, five, or six unless such student has been determined in the current school year to be reading at grade level or above.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

3. [~~Beginning with school year 2002-03, for each student whose third-grade reading assessment determines that such student is reading below second-grade level, the school district shall design a reading improvement plan for the student's fourth-grade year. Such reading improvement plan shall include, at a minimum, thirty hours of additional reading instruction or practice outside the regular school day during the fourth-grade year.~~] (1) School districts and charter schools shall offer a reading success plan to each student in grades kindergarten through four who exhibits a reading deficiency, has been identified as being at risk for dyslexia in the statewide dyslexia screening requirement, or has a formal diagnosis of dyslexia to ensure students can read at or above grade level by the end of the fourth grade. School districts and charter schools shall consider the input of teachers and other building-level staff when identifying students for reading success plans. The reading success plan shall be provided in addition to core reading instruction that is provided to all students in the general education classroom. The reading success plan shall:

(a) Include, at a minimum, thirty hours of additional reading instruction or practice outside the regular school day during the fourth-grade year;

(b) Be provided to all students in grades kindergarten through four identified with a reading deficiency as determined by the school district or charter school using local or statewide screening assessments administered within the first thirty days of school for grades one through four, and by January thirty-first for kindergarten;

(c) Provide explicit and systematic multisensory instruction in phonological awareness, phonics, fluency, vocabulary, and comprehension as applicable to each student;

(d) Monitor the reading progress of each student's reading skills throughout the school year and adjust instruction according to the student's needs; and

(e) Be implemented during regular school hours.

(2) A structured literacy reading program shall be provided to any student with a formal diagnosis of dyslexia or for a student who was found to be at risk for dyslexia in the statewide dyslexia screening.

(3) If a student who is provided a reading success plan is determined to not be reading at or above grade level by the end of second grade, the student shall receive structured literacy instruction as well as additional support and services including, but not limited to:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

(a) Frequent, targeted reading intervention based on the student's needs and provided in a small-group or one-on-one setting;

(b) Frequent monitoring of the student's reading skills throughout the school year; and

(c) Adjustment of the structured literacy instruction and reading interventions according to the student's needs.

(4) For students in grades six through twelve, school districts and charter schools shall continue to address the reading deficiencies of any student for whom the deficiency creates a barrier to success in school.

4. A reading success plan shall be created for a student within forty-five days following the identification of a reading deficiency by such student's teacher and other pertinent school personnel, after consultation with the student's parent or legal guardian, and shall describe the evidence-based reading intervention services the student shall receive to remedy the deficiency. The reading success plan shall specify whether the student was found to be at risk for dyslexia in the local or statewide dyslexia screening requirement or whether the student has a formal diagnosis of dyslexia. Each student shall receive appropriate reading intervention until the student no longer has a deficiency in reading.

5. The school district or charter school shall determine the [~~method of reading instruction~~] specific structured literacy curriculum necessary to enforce this [~~subsection~~] section. The school district or charter school may also require the student to attend summer school for reading instruction as a condition of promotion to fourth grade. The department of elementary and secondary education may, from funds appropriated for the purpose, reimburse school districts and charter schools for additional instructional personnel costs incurred in the implementation and execution of the thirty hours of additional reading instruction minus the revenue generated by the school district or charter school through the foundation formula for the additional reading instruction average daily attendance.

[~~4.~~] 6. Each student for whom a reading [~~improvement~~] success plan has been designed pursuant to subsection 3 of this section shall be given another reading assessment, to be administered within forty-five days of the end of such student's fourth-grade year. If such student is determined to be reading below third-grade level at the end of the third grade, the student shall be [~~required to attend summer school to receive reading instruction. At the end of such summer school instruction, such student shall be given another reading assessment. If such student is determined to be reading below third-grade level, the district shall notify the student's parents or guardians, and the student shall not be promoted to fifth grade. No student shall be denied promotion more than once solely for inability to meet the reading standards set out in this section.~~

~~5. The process described in subsections 3 and 4 of this section shall be repeated as necessary through the end of the sixth grade, with the target grade level rising accordingly.~~

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT
MO-REP-21-1608-F-001728

~~Mandatory retention in grade shall not apply to grades subsequent to fourth grade.~~

~~6. The mandatory process of additional reading instruction pursuant to this section shall cease at the end of the sixth grade. The permanent record of students who are determined to be reading below the fifth-grade level at the end of sixth grade shall carry a notation advising that such student has not met minimal reading standards. The notation shall stay on the student's record until such time as the district determines that a student has met minimal reading standards~~] referred for an evaluation for an individualized education plan (IEP) and the district shall provide appropriate intensive structured literacy instruction on a one-to-one individualized basis. If the student does not qualify for an IEP under the state guidelines for qualification, the student shall continue to receive appropriate intensive structured literacy instruction on a one-to-one individualized basis until the student is reading at grade level.

7. Each school district and charter school shall be required to offer summer school reading instruction to any student with a reading [~~improvement~~] success plan. Districts and charter schools may fulfill the requirement of this section through cooperative arrangements with neighboring districts[~~; provided that such districts shall timely make all payments provided pursuant to such cooperative agreements~~].

8. A school district or charter school may adopt a policy that requires retention in grade of any student who has been determined to require summer school instruction in reading and who does not fulfill the summer school attendance requirement.

9. Nothing in this section shall preclude a school district or charter school from retaining any student in grade when a determination is made in accordance with district or charter school policy that retention is in the best interests of the student.

10. The state board of education shall evaluate and give weight to district and charter school reading interventions and compliance with the provisions of this section within the Missouri school improvement program.

11. The state board of education shall not incorporate information about the number of students receiving additional instruction pursuant to this section into any element of any standard of the Missouri school improvement program or its successor accreditation program; provided, however, each district or charter school shall make available, upon the request of any parent, patron, advocacy group, or media outlet [~~within the district~~], the number and percentage of students receiving remediation pursuant to this section. The information shall be presented in a way that does not permit personal identification of any student or educational personnel.

[~~11.~~] 12. Each school district and charter school shall make a systematic effort to inform parents of the methods and materials used to teach reading in kindergarten through [~~fourth~~] fifth grade, in terms understandable to a layperson [~~and shall similarly inform parents of students for whom a reading improvement plan is required pursuant to this section~~]. Notice to the parent or legal guardian of any student for whom a reading success plan is required shall be provided within thirty days. Such communication may be through electronic or other means; however, effort shall be made to ensure a parent received such communication. The notice shall state that the student has been identified as having a deficiency in reading identified through a screening or other method. The communication shall also note if the student screened positive for the characteristics of dyslexia. Additionally, the communication shall include the following information:

(1) That a reading success plan for the student shall be developed by the teacher and other personnel;

(2) A description of the current services and proposed, evidence-based structured literacy interventions and supplemental services;

(3) That the parent or guardian shall have the opportunity for input regarding the reading success plan;

(4) The timing for periodic updates on student progress, which shall be aligned with other normal interim student progress updates to the extent practicable; and

(5) Suggested strategies for use at home to help the student succeed in reading.

13. The department of elementary and secondary education may promulgate rules to implement the provisions of this section. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable, and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after August 28, 2021, shall be invalid and void.

186.080. 1. There is hereby established within the department of elementary and secondary education the "Literacy Advisory Council", which shall be composed of at least fifteen and no more than twenty members to be appointed by the commissioner of education. The members of the council shall include at least:

(1) One public school board member;

(2) One charter school representative;

(3) One public school district superintendent;

(4) One elementary or secondary school principal;

(5) Three teachers with expertise in reading instruction, including at least one teacher selected by each of the three largest statewide teacher organizations, and each of whom shall either be certified by the Center for Effective Reading Instruction or have completed all levels of the Language Essentials for Teachers of Reading and Spelling training program;

(6) One special education teacher;

(7) One parent of an elementary or secondary school student who has been diagnosed with dyslexia;
