Subject: Urgent Action Needed To Ban Critical Race Theory

Dear Chairman Bayse, Vice Chairman Haffner, and Members of the Education Committee:

I am writing to ask for your support to act immediately to bring up HB 1141 for a floor vote including a vote of Representative Nick Schroer's amendment to HB 1141 prohibiting the teaching of Critical Race Theory and "The 1619 Project" in Missouri's education institutions and HB 1411. The legislative session is ending, and we need to take immediate action and stop the implementation of the racist Critical Race Theory and the revisionist history of "The 1619 Project" from Missouri's educational institutions. Missouri taxpayers should not be funding hate.

States, like Arkansas, Iowa, Idaho, Tennessee, Oklahoma, and Florida have already passed legislation banning this Marxists-based ideology. Critical Race Theory and "The 1619 Project" removes individualism and teaches students to hate their country and believe their fellow students are somehow either superior or inferior based on their race or gender. Teaching this harmful and racist theory and revisionist history to our children is teaching systemic racism.

Missouri should be looking for ways to unite this country and look beyond race or gender. We shouldn't be looking to return the pre-civil rights era of segregated water fountains, bathrooms or college dorms. The story of the American founding and the subsequent stories of the Civil War and the Civil Rights movement of the 1960's are the real stories of the spirit of America - how our young nation wrestled with the amoral institution of slavery and defeated it and how a century later Americans continued to advance the idea that ALL Americans are equal in the eyes of God.

Children in our state should be taught that their hard work, their character, and their deeds matter more than the color of their skin or the economic situation they have been born into. This is the real American way, and it is available to all. It is for this reason that I urge you to Representative Schroer's amendment to HB1141.

Sincerely,

Byron Keelin

Vaccine Folly - Mask Hysteria: Why? Midterms Thievery!

What does CDC stand for? Control, Dominate and Confuse. Subjugate and Panic until Midterms Mail in Voter-Fraud Success! Socialize Hand-Shaking Distance: Shackled Dependent Slaves of the State?

Healthy men and woman wearing Mask, and Social Distancing themselves, identifies them as Defeated, Fearful; whose faith has been Captured by Devil Media, and the CDC Masters of Fear and Paranoia Dr Frankenstein Fauci. Face-masks are a - Virus Trap - health hazard. Workers are being Fresh Oxygen Starved - Re-Breathing Exhausted Air. More moisture, warmer, darker, diminished oxygen around the mouth and nose is inviting - to a lonely virus looking for a home. Does air get though and around the Mask? Yes, then so will a virous stupid! Air will be sucked in the sides of a Mask. Hide from the Air Stupid: Duct tape the edges and breathed hard? You can smell food and perfume with your mask on. How stupid are you America? Mind-Slaves of Devil Media!

About 4,500 Covid 19 Vaccine Deaths reported by a government website as of May 8, 2021? Fox news reported 30 or more people a day die from the vaccine, about a thousand a month. Why is this Not on all tv and radio news? I would predict that Covid vaccine deaths are under reported and the vaccine will kill and injure over one hundred thousand.

2 Corinthians 3:18 NIV: Christians “with Unveiled faces all reflect the Lord’s glory.” God decides who gets Sick, and who Recovers Not the State. FAITH - is the opposite of fear. SOCIALIZE - Hand Shaking Distancing. Covid-19 is Spreading God given Immunity to 98%. The same thing vaccine is supposed to do? Testing All inspires Needless Panic. 98% of those who test positive have God given immunity that is specific to each person and safer than Frankenstein’s vaccine. Deaths from CV-19 should be accepted, without, Subjugating healthy Americans. Of the 2% that may get sick 90% will recover Idiot Arrogant *Governor Superhero will Mask your face, kill your business, and Job and claim to save you? God’s Perfect Vaccine: INDIVIDUAL herd IMMUNITY - Protective Antibodies through Normal Socializing is free - Unique - to each individual and hundreds of times safer than the Devils Vaccine. When Frankenstein Fauci’s Artificial Antibodies meet God given natural Antibodies many will get sicker. The Devils will end up Generating Variant Covid-20+? Dr Fauci wants your Blood. So, he can Steal God’s freely given immunity - mix it with - Yuck - and sell it. Damned Elitist Promote Fear, Criminalized Normal Socializing and Despise, God Given Immunity. Are they, fearful of competition from God? Yes, getting well without the CDC offends them. Federal Dollars is their objective Not health.

The Socialist Evil Seed of Bailouts: Governors shackle business and Jobs depending on federal dollars. If federal deficit spending were Not an option: America would be FREE. Freedom to work and live unrestricted is the answer - Not federal dollars. Business and Jobs Shackled is America’s Killer Not Covid-19. CDC bureaucrats Devil-Media, Deceitful and Dimwitted politicians are the problem.

Elitist Insanity - The Living must be - Shackled - until we save the sick and dying Forcing the healthy - to behave as if they were sick with useless mask and social distancing is Tyranny. The Flu kills many more Children. Of the Covid-19 hospital patients in New York - 66% were in Home Lock-Down - Demonstrating - Social Distance and Facemask everyone is folly. Forcing businesses to shut down is NEVER Justified.

VETO OVERRIDE FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

I was disappointed to learn of the Governor's veto of section 4.056 in HB 4. In his veto letter, Governor Parson stated, "I hereby veto $150,000 including $100,000 general revenue, for sales and use tax refunds for which the taxpayer was notified of the expansion of the Department of Revenue's interpretation of the tax base by audit, and for the attendant costs incurred by taxpayers in audit compliance. Sufficient appropriation authority for sales and use tax refunds is already included in other refund lines within the budget. Additionally, this line may violate Article III, Section 38(a) of the Missouri Constitution." This section states, in part: "The general assembly shall have no power to grant public money… to any private person…."

The reality is that the Department of Revenue (DOR) took money from private businesses. The money belongs to the business owners, not the government. The money is private money, not public money. (Yet, the money has been in the hands of the government for some time. It should be returned to the rightful owners – with interest, and fees expended for attorneys and CPAs.)

In this letter, I hope to provide sufficient detail to inform you of the issue and persuade you to support small business in Missouri (by voting to override the Governor's veto of section 4.056).

HISTORY

Between 2005 and 2015, the department re-interpreted tax law. Before that time, taxes were collected from users of entertainment venues (sporting events, concerts, et cetera). Now, here's the funny part, in 2005, the DOR began conducting audits on fitness centers, dance studios, and martial arts instructors. The department re-classified these businesses as entertainment venues. During these audits, these business owners were notified of their tax liability.

I can imagine there may be a few folks who consider exercise as fun, but for most of us, exercise is anything but fun! Most Missourians were (and, still are) unaware of the fact that these businesses were now required to collect a tax from people who wanted to benefit from the services offered by these business owners.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I became aware of the change when I was a member of the House Ways and Means committee in 2015. A bill introduced (by then Representative Burlison and former Senator Kraus) to reverse the DOR decision was eventually passed and signed by the Governor.

Afterward, I began to wonder about the businesses harmed by the DOR's actions. Some were fined sizeable sums of money. I learned that nothing had been done to right the wrong. So, I filed a bill to require the money be returned to the businesses hurt by the state. In 2018, the bill was close to passing the House, but eventually died on the calendar.

Up to that time, business owners involved in the audits (and the eventual requirement to remit "unpaid" taxes) traveled to the Capitol to provide testimony – to plead their case to the legislature – in anticipation of being made whole. In 2017, I was informed that the business owners had lost all hope of recouping their hard-earned profits. They no longer invested time to attend hearings. While most people found that to be sad, I was seething... and, I just could not let it go…!

In 2018, the same bill (with a different number) was introduced and heard in committee. It died before being placed on the calendar.

Now, to add to the iron-fisted rule of government, the DOR found another source of revenue. While conducting an audit of a business in Cape Girardeau, auditors learned that the business occasionally offered a room for rent for various purposes. This audit led to examinations of businesses across the southern part of the state. The focus of these audits was narrowed toward wedding venues.

In short, the DOR replicated their actions of 2015: changing the interpretation of tax code (resulting in additional revenue to the state). These exploits again caused harm to Missouri businesses… to the tune of tens of thousands of dollars.

Calls to the DOR regarding the changes resulted in vague and inconsistent information from department employees. Due to the lack of clarity, business owners made several attempts to encourage the DOR to forgive the taxes due (and, if required to collect taxes, to begin with a "clean slate"). In the end, department representatives would not budge – even with the realization that some of these businesses might close as a result of the tax burden.

An appeal was made to Governor Parson. After explaining the situation, he seemed to understand the error. The Governor stated on May 15, 2019, (in a meeting with legislators and staff), "No one (business) would be have to pay." I was present in this meeting.

I trusted Governor Parson to keep his word. To my surprise, the audits continued and the DOR notified more businesses of tax liabilities.

In subsequent meetings with former DOR director Joel Walters and current director Ken Zellers, it appeared to me that these men understood the problem. Nonetheless, no effort was made to correct the situation.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

What truly fuels my ire is the fact that DOR leaders appear to be more interested in taking money from profitable businesses than extending a little grace to small business operators. Simple logic suggests that closed businesses produce no taxable income (at least one business closed as a result of the notification of tax liability by audit). Why would government officials make decisions which could lead to a business closure? One word: Arrogance! These actions are consistent with an oligarchy?

The intent of HB 1806 (2020) was to return the money "stolen" from these businesses with interest, and including attorney fees and CPA charges, if any.

The bill was heard in the Special Committee on Small Business. During the hearing, Chairman Andrews expressed his desire to hear from the DOR director, Ken Zellers. Director Zellers responded to the summons. The committee previously had communicated their extreme displeasure of the DOR's action. The director was asked about the department's actions – to say that I was surprised by his response is an understatement. DOR Director Ken Zellers stated that he was not aware of the situation (involving the wedding venue).

Prior to the hearing, Director Zellers was present in two separate meetings (of which the sole focus was the DOR's re-interpretation of the tax law relating to wedding venues). These meetings were held in May the previous year. The director's statement, in committee, was as far from the truth as one could get. (In layman's terms, he lied.)

The session was shortened due to COVID. In lieu of the bill passing, two lines were added to the HB 2004 (2020) in order to allocate sufficient funds to refund the money owed to the affected businesses. The budget lines passed the House by vote of 134 "yes" to 0 "no."

Governor Parson vetoed the two lines.

The House voted to override the Governor's veto (September 2020). However, the Senate did not take up the override motion.

Well, here we are, once again. The budget lines have been vetoed a second time. If the House successfully acts to override the Governor's veto, I hope you will join me in an attempt to make Missouri businesses whole again (by overriding the veto).

The DOR has historically given unclear direction to Missourians who request clarification regarding business operations within our state. Specifically, fitness center and wedding venue operators have stated to me that they contacted the DOR for answers to questions regarding whether or not taxes should be collected from persons with whom they conduct business.

I have pasted a letter from the DOR-Taxation division in response to a constituent's application for a tax I.D.

RE: MISSOURI TAX REGISTRATION

Dear Sir or Madam:

Thank you for submitting your Tax Registration Application (Form 2643) to the Missouri Department of Revenue. The Department is unable to determine the type of tax registration being requested. Therefore, we are returning your application.

Your application indicates you are a service-oriented business only. Service businesses are not required to obtain a Missouri retail sales tax license. You should pay sales tax to your suppliers when making purchases. The Department is returning your application along with your bond.

The interpretation set forth above is subject to changes by the General Assembly, and to changes in interpretation by court or administrative agencies. If changes occur, the taxpayer who relies on an outdated interpretation may be subject to additional taxes plus interest and penalties. For this reason, the interpretation set forth above should be reviewed on a regular basis by the taxpayer who might be relying upon it.

If you require additional information or assistance, please contact the Taxation Division at Post Office Box 3300, Jefferson City, Missouri 65105-3300 or by telephone at (573) 751-5860 during the hours of 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. See the Department's web site at www.dor.mo.gov/tax/business/register/forms to download forms, if applicable.

Hope Springs Farm operates a wedding barn (an empty room). Please note the date of the letter (February 6, 2015). The current situation with wedding venues operators and the question of collecting taxes from persons renting an empty space for the purpose of conducting a wedding did not begin until 2018. The question of whether or not a business renting an empty space should collect a tax on the room rental had, according to the letter, already been decided.

Paragraph 2 indicates that wedding venue operators should not collect a tax because they were leasing a space – not selling a tangible item. They should, however, collect sales taxes from suppliers for taxable items.

Paragraph 3 indicates that the tax code is subject to changes made by the legislature. No such changes have been enacted into law. (Changes were made, however, by the DOR which caused an undue burden on a number of small business operators.)

Subject: Vote against the Amendment to Senate Bill 1

Good afternoon,

This week, Missouri State Sen. Bob Onder introduced a new Amendment that would allow the Republican Governor to fire any prosecutor—an elected official chosen by the people—and hire his own replacement. The new Amendment to Senate Bill 1 comes in the wake of St. Louis Circuit Attorney Kim Gardner's historic re-election.

That is undemocratic and unacceptable!

We the people will not accept this and it will not be tolerated. Gardner was elected and there is no justifiable evidence for her to be removed from her position.

We demand that the Missouri State Legislature vote against the Amendment to Senate Bill 1, and that Governor Mike Parson, and St. Louis elected officials strongly oppose this un-democratic removal of an elected official today!

Thank you,
Karna Patel

Subject: Wayfair Talking Points

Hello all,

Thank you so much for helping us draw a positive conclusion to the Wayfair issue. I was asked to give the caucus a summary / talking points for the Wayfair bill. Here you go.

State Representative J. Eggleston | District 2

201 West Capitol Avenue, Room 414
Jefferson City, MO 65101
Phone: 573-751-4285
Fax: 573-522-0402

WAYFAIR TALKING POINTS

"Wayfair" is the nickname of an internet sales tax to have internet retailers collect a tax on internet purchases that are not already being taxed. It's called "Wayfair" after a 2018 Supreme Court case where Wayfair.com, NewEgg.com, and Overstock.com sued South Dakota over a similar law passed in that state. Ironically, Wayfair lost the case, but gained tons of name-ID for their web site.

Web sites that have physical stores like Walmart.com and HomeDepot.com are already collecting sales tax on their sites' purchases, but web sites with no Missouri stores were not. Because of the passage of the Wayfair bill (SB153), in 2023 all web sites will charge and collect Missouri sales tax. This primarily affects purchases on sites like Amazon.com, Ebay.com, and Etsy.com, and helps level the playing field for our Missouri stores to better compete against the internet's e-retailers.

Local cities and counties that have passed a voter approved use tax will see increases in their tax revenue from the Wayfair bill. About 2/3 of Missouri counties and 1/3 of Missouri cities with a sales tax have passed this local use tax. City and county governments that have not passed a local use tax will need to do so before seeing any financial gains. Of course, any local use tax increase will come from the pockets of citizens in the affected communities.

To offset the increased sales/use taxes, Missourians will see lower income taxes. In 2024, Missouri income tax will drop 0.1% for all citizens who pay income tax. Additional cuts will be available to those in the lower income range. By approximately 2030, Missouri income tax is expected to drop another 0.2%. Once fully enacted, these cuts will save Missourians approximately $300-400 million per year in income taxes. Because these cuts are triggered by other revenue growth, the Wayfair bill will provide income tax relief to our citizens while still prudently financing the needs of our state budget.

The Wayfair bill also included other beneficial provisions such as not income taxing citizens' stimulus checks, property tax relief for recreational aircraft, allowing rural retail stores to benefit from the Missouri Works program, and tightening the rules of certain corporate development projects.

Senator Andrew Koenig and State Representative J. Eggleston have both worked extensively over the last three years on the Wayfair bill and are happy to finally have this legislative task accomplished. The Wayfair bill now awaits the Governor Parson's signature. Since he has named Wayfair as an important priority, it is expected the governor will sign the bill before the mid-July deadline.

In summary, if signed into law the Wayfair bill will do the following:

- Make all websites that do significant business in Missouri collect sales tax on all online purchases starting in 2023
- "Level the playing field" so Missouri's brick and mortar stores will no longer be at a competitive tax code disadvantage with their online counterparts
- Give city and county governments with a voter-approved use tax increased revenues
- Cut the state income tax, ultimately saving Missourians approximately $300-$400 million per year and leading to bigger paychecks for our citizens

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

We Need to Continue the Fight in Missouri, Not Washington D.C.

The decision of Roy Blunt to retire at the end of his term next year has created an opening that has consequences up and down the political hierarchy. Several people want to take his position, which then leaves lots of openings down the line.

There are more people wanting to go to Congress than you can imagine. I would be the first to say that Congress as a whole is dysfunctional and has relegated its lawmaking authority to unelected bureaucrats. There are some good people in Washington, but they are far outweighed by people who are there for the pay and power they seek for themselves. This is a national disgrace, in my opinion.

So when you think about your life and liberties and the infringement upon them you should look at the massive, unelected, unaccountable bureaucracy in Washington. For our lives to return to some semblance of what they were intended to be with the least amount of government interference we need people who will demand the overreach of bureaucrats to stop. At the Federal level this could be accomplished, at least to start, by CUTTING THEIR MONEY OFF. I don't care what laws are passed, the bureaucracy has grown to the level it overpowers just about everything.

Politicians pay no attention to what these bureaucracies do because their own lives are largely exempt from this overreach. It's kind of a "gentleman's agreement" that only occasionally strays from its boundaries and comes after "one of its own." Namely, a politician that somehow gets on the wrong side of the administration, or is used as a scapegoat for something. Most of the time, though, it continues on its derelict ways, spending massive amounts of money and ignoring the consequences of what is happening in the middle class of America.

I believe true patriots need to work within their state government and do these things:

1. Downsize state government and its voracious appetite for money.
2. Hold bureaucrats accountable for achieving something of value to the working middle class of the state (the most overwhelmed and under-represented group in the state). This is the class that pays through taxation, fees, licensing, etc. for the overreach of government.
3. Reform the entitlement system, which is rapidly growing and incentivizing people to do absolutely nothing while demanding all their wants be met.
4. Speak up for the average citizen; listen to what is happening to them because of the same bureaucracy issue we have at the federal level, and do what you have to to defend them against this. The vast majority of people feel that the government will ignore them or crush them at will and that nobody will help them. And I believe that they are right about this.

I get phone calls, messages, emails from people nearly every day asking for help. Many of them are not from Northeast Missouri, but no one will stand up for them. This might seem unnecessary, but that would underestimate the effect this has on a person's ability to live freely, operate a business, and raise their family. If we do not pay attention to this and address it the long term detrimental pressure is enormous. Societal implications are far reaching.

I often tell people that Republicans tend to pay the most attention to the top 5% of society and Democrats pay attention to the bottom 25%. No one is paying attention to the middle class, which is shrinking and being crushed by faulty policy, corporate cronyism, and ignorant politicians who are constantly attracted to those who will contribute to their campaigns. This middle class is what powers our economy, provides the employee partners and entrepreneurs we want, and in general actually does "Make America Great."

We need warriors in our state much more than we need warriors in Washington D.C.

ICYMI: Mayors Urge Congress to Pass President Biden's Build Back Better Agenda

This week, mayors from across the country came together virtually to applaud the Senate passage of the Bipartisan Infrastructure Deal and called upon Congress to pass President Biden's Build Back Better Agenda, which "will deliver the generational investments that America's cities need to continue their economic recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic, grow our economy from the middle out, and create millions of new jobs."

The mayors' statements underscored the importance of the Build Back Better Agenda, which includes President Biden's American Families Plan and key elements of the American Jobs Plan that were not included in the Bipartisan Infrastructure Deal. The mayors touted the impacts of the Build Back Better Agenda's "investments that will help cities thrive, including investments in housing, child care, community college, and climate action."

Read the statements below.

Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti:
"Mayors see firsthand the struggles of the people they serve, and know the profound impact these dollars will have on their daily lives. If passed, this reconciliation package will fuel the recovery of our cities and make possible long overdue investments to immediately improve the quality of life for millions of Americans."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Richmond Mayor Levar Stoney:
"This $3.5 trillion budget resolution will be a game changer in our communities if approved by the House of Representatives. Specifically, the investment in universal pre-K for 3- and 4-year olds is needed in the City of Richmond as 59 percent of children are unprepared when they start kindergarten. Preschool access is a critical component to community wealth-building and has been shown to increase the maternal employment rate — a population we know has been hit the hardest by the pandemic."

Seattle Mayor Jenny Durkan:
"For America to build back better we must invest in people and reignite the American dream. Seattle has led the way with two free years of college for our high school graduates and expanded pre-school for our 3 and 4-year-olds. We must build pathways to family wage jobs that will support and build our future," said Mayor Jenny Durkan. "We also must invest in rebuilding our roads and bridges. The cracked West Seattle Bridge is not just a critical commuting corridor, it is an economic driver for the region with goods passing through the Port of Seattle on their way to or from the rest of our country. To lead the way in the fight against climate change and rebuild our economy, we must prioritize the infrastructure of the future – like clean, rapid transit and electric vehicle charging."

Scranton Mayor Paige Cognetti:
"The American Families Plan is our opportunity - and our obligation - to provide a level playing field for America's children and secure our nation's economic future. We must act boldly and decisively now to address the sustained and growing inequities that serve as barriers to the American Dream for our kids and our families. If we fail now we fail generations of Americans and put our national security in jeopardy."

Detroit Mayor Mike Duggan:
"We must work to eliminate the barriers preventing Detroit's youth from achieving their educational goals. No one should be denied a quality education of their choice because of their zip code. The Build Back Better plan will do just that."

Kansas City Mayor Quinton Lucas:
"Far too many Kansas City and American families have struggled for far too long to make ends meet, faced with stagnant wages and, simultaneously, rising costs of living—which is why it's vital that Congress quickly pass President Biden's Build Back Better Plan. As someone who grew up experiencing homelessness, I know firsthand how quickly costly bills and missed payments can compound upon each other, making it near impossible for families to climb out of financial crisis. Finally, this Plan would open doors to important opportunities—such as safe and affordable housing—for families like mine. I look forward to working with the Biden Administration to quickly implement the Build Back Better Plan, which will provide Kansas Citians with affordable housing and child care, paid medical leave, and good-paying jobs."

Minneapolis Mayor Jacob Frey:
"In Minneapolis, we are making historic investments in creating and preserving affordable housing. We are proud to be doubling down on these priorities, and these efforts are supercharged by Federal funding like what is proposed in the Build Back Better plan," said Mayor Jacob Frey. "These types of investments are how we build back the housing infrastructure necessary to make sure we are emerging from this pandemic to not just return to normal, but to blow past normal and create a new more equitable city for all."

San Antonio Mayor Ron Nirenberg:
"The Build Back Better plan is a major boost for our efforts to make the economy work better for average American families. The BBB agenda will improve the lives of Americans, many of whom were hurting before the COVID-19 pandemic struck."

San Diego Mayor Todd Gloria:
"We have a once-in-a-generation opportunity to build our nation back better than ever. Through this package, we can rebuild and adapt our nation's infrastructure to combat the impacts of the climate crisis, create millions of affordable homes, pull millions out of poverty with the expansion of tax credits for families, and forge a path to the middle class through universal pre-K and free community college. I thank President Biden and Vice President Harris for their bold vision and look forward to joining with my mayoral colleagues across the country to support this critically important effort."

Eviction Rental Assistance

Statement by Press Secretary Jen Psaki on Eviction Moratorium

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

AUGUST 13, 2021

Throughout the pandemic, preventing evictions and keeping people in their homes has been a proven way of slowing the spread of COVID-19.

The Administration believes that CDC's new moratorium is a proper use of its lawful authority to protect the public health. We are pleased that the district court left the moratorium in place, though we are aware that further proceedings in this case are likely.

The President continues to call on State and local elected officials and judges to issue local eviction moratoriums and move aggressively to distribute the $46.5 billion in emergency rental assistance funds that are available through the bipartisan COVID relief act that Congress passed in December 2020, and through the President's American Rescue Plan that was enacted in March 2021. And, the President calls on landlords to seek out rental assistance and not evict tenants from their homes, and echoes Attorney General Garland's calls for state and local courts to implement policies to discourage eviction filings until landlords and tenants have sought emergency rental assistance funds.

Emergency Rental Assistance Toolkit

Get Rent Help Now

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) has released an online tool to help renters and landlords impacted by the pandemic easily find and apply for payment assistance for rent, utilities and other expenses. The Rental Assistance Finder, available at www.consumerfinance.gov/renthelp, connects renters and landlords with the state and local programs that are distributing billions of dollars in federal assistance nationwide to help renters stay housed during the pandemic.

As part of an unprecedented economic recovery effort, the federal government has allocated more than $46 billion to assist households unable to pay rent, utilities, and other housing costs. All 50 states and hundreds of local, tribal, and other programs are distributing funds. The CFPB's Rental Assistance Finder tool will make it easier for renters and landlords to connect with rental assistance programs in their area, and take the first steps toward accessing available funds.

The CFPB is working closely with partners across the federal government to provide homeowners and renters the resources they need, including information to understand their rights and protections. Along with the U.S. Departments of Agriculture, Housing and Urban Development, Treasury, Veterans Affairs, and the Federal Housing Finance Agency, the CFPB has created consumerfinance.gov/housing, which serves as the federal government's one-stop, go-to resource for up-to-date information on relief options, protections, and key deadlines.

Biden-Harris Administration Actions to Help State and Local Governments Prevent Evictions

The American Rescue Plan allocated an additional $21.5 billion for Emergency Rental Assistance (ERA) that can be used by renters to cover arrears and make landlords whole. This is on top of $25 billion allocated under the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2021, bringing the total amount of ERA available to more than $46 billion and creating an economic and moral imperative for state and local governments to rise to the challenge of building a new infrastructure for getting emergency rental assistance to vulnerable renters and landlords. The Biden-Harris Administration's May 7th guidance has helped state and local governments move more funds to more renters in need. But state and local governments must do better. Money is available in every state to help renters who are behind on rent and at risk of eviction.

The Biden-Harris Administration has announced a series of actions to help state and local governments prevent evictions and promote housing stability. Specifically, the Biden-Harris Administration is providing the following support and guidance to:

- Urge state and local courts to participate in eviction diversion efforts
- Highlight that American Rescue Plan funds for state and local governments and for emergency rental assistance can be used to fund eviction diversion plans, including counseling, navigator, and legal services
- Convene a White House summit for immediate eviction prevention plans.
- Accelerate and broaden state and local delivery of emergency rental assistance by providing clarity on bulk payments, aiding Americans experiencing homelessness, and overcoming language and disability barriers.
    - Strongly encourages partnerships with courts to actively prevent evictions and develop eviction diversion programs.
    - Helps families experiencing homelessness gain access to assistance.
    - Drives towards equal access by removing language and cultural barriers in securing emergency rental assistance.
    - Provides a streamlined payment option for utility providers and large landlords to make accessing emergency rental assistance on behalf of multiple tenants easier and more attractive.
    - Pushes grantee coordination to reduce the confusion, burdens, and delays in providing assistance created by differences in locally-imposed requirements among programs operating in the same regions.
    - Lifts up grantees implementing effective practices to ensure that assistance quickly reaches the renters who need it most.
- Ensure that the 30-day eviction notice requirement for federally-backed properties is enforced.
- Make clear the Fair Housing Act must be followed.
- Leverage government information channels to reach vulnerable tenants and landlords by:
    - Publishing on Treasury's website a list of more than 590 links to state, local and tribal government ERA programs.
    - Lifting up consumerfinance.gov/housing.
    - Conducting outreach to HUD grantees, HUD-assisted households, and housing providers who receive HUD assistance.
    - Sharing program information with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's SNAP beneficiaries and the Social Security Administration's SSI recipients.
    - Conducting targeted outreach to vulnerable tenants.
    - Aligning philanthropic supports.

Biden-Harris Administration Actions to Prevent Foreclosures

Three federal agencies that back mortgages – the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), and Department of Agriculture (USDA) – extended their respective foreclosure moratorium until July 31, 2021. Once the moratoria ended, HUD, VA, and USDA announced additional steps to prevent foreclosures on mortgages backed by those agencies until borrowers are reviewed for COVID-19 streamlined loss mitigation options that are affordable, while FHFA will continue to work with Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac to ensure that borrowers are evaluated for home retention solutions prior to any referral to foreclosure.

Additionally, HUD, VA, and USDA will continue to allow homeowners who have not taken advantage of forbearance to date to enter into COVID-related forbearance through September 30, 2021, while homeowners with Fannie Mae or Freddie Mac-backed mortgages who have COVID-related hardships will also continue to be eligible for COVID-related forbearance. Finally, HUD, VA, and USDA will be announcing additional steps in July to offer borrowers payment reduction options that will enable more homeowners to stay in their homes.

Biden Administration Announces Nearly $5 Billion in Resilience Funding to Help Communities Prepare for Extreme Weather and Climate-Related Disasters

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) announced three pre-disaster funding opportunities to help states and communities prepare for major disasters that are costing lives and livelihoods and devastating local communities and businesses. These programs will allow communities to apply for nearly $5 billion to increase their preparedness in advance of climate-related extreme weather events and other disasters, and improve their ability to recover after these events. In particular, FEMA is announced the following:

- $1 billion in funding for its Building Resilient Infrastructure and Communities (BRIC) program for Fiscal Year 2021. This new program, launched in 2020, provides grants to states, local communities, tribes, and territories to proactively reduce their vulnerability to natural hazard events before they occur, and make themselves and the nation more resilient. This year, the Biden Administration is doubling the program's funding and implementing a number of changes to enhance funding opportunities for tribes and disadvantaged communities, including by changing program selection criteria and providing a larger allocation for tribes.

- $3.46 billion in funding for its Hazard Mitigation Grant Program (HMGP). The 59 states, tribes, and territories that received a major disaster declaration in response to the COVID-19 pandemic will be eligible to receive 4% of the disaster costs related to their declaration to invest in mitigation projects that will help better prepare and protect communities from natural disasters and the impacts of climate change. The influx of funding will help communities prioritize mitigation needs for a more resilient future, including underserved communities that are often most vulnerable to the impacts of climate change.

- $160 million in funding for its Flood Mitigation Assistance (FMA) grant program for Fiscal Year 2021 to reduce or eliminate the risks of repetitive flood damage to homes and buildings insured by the National Flood Insurance Program.

These new funding opportunities support the President's Build Back Better Agenda. This agenda includes historic investments to make our aging infrastructure more resilient in the face of increasingly severe floods, wildfires, droughts, hurricanes, and other risks. It also supports the President's Justice40 Initiative, which set a goal of delivering at least 40% of the overall benefits of Federal investments in climate and clean energy to disadvantaged communities. Through these investments, we will advance environmental justice and equity, reduce the vulnerability of communities to disasters, promote individual and community safety, strengthen our ability as a nation to adapt to changing conditions, and reduce the burdens these changes place on our first responders.

DHS Issues New National Terrorism Advisory System (NTAS) Bulletin

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

WASHINGTON – On August 13, 2021 the Secretary of Homeland Security, Alejandro N. Mayorkas, issued a new National Terrorism Advisory System (NTAS) Bulletin regarding the heightened threat environment across the United States. The threat environment to the Homeland is diverse and challenging, especially leading up to and following the 20th Anniversary of the September 11, 2001 terror attacks as well as religious holidays that could serve as catalyst for targeted violence.

Threats in the Homeland include those posed by domestic terrorists, individuals and groups engaged in grievance-based violence, and those inspired or motivated by foreign terrorists and other malign foreign influences. These actors are increasingly exploiting online forums to influence and spread violent extremist narratives and promote violent activity. This Bulletin builds on Bulletins issued in January and May by the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and provides more information about the threat landscape we face for the coming months.

"DHS remains committed to sharing timely information with the public about the heightened threat environment in order to protect communities across our country," said Secretary Mayorkas. "Today's NTAS Bulletin advises the public about the heightened threat landscape we face and how DHS is working with our partners, at every level of government and in the community, to combat domestic terrorism and targeted violence in all its forms. We are committed to ensuring every initiative undertaken by DHS in response to the threat is consistent with privacy protections, civil rights and civil liberties, First Amendment-protected rights, and other applicable laws."

DHS and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) will continue its close coordinating with state, local, tribal, and territorial law enforcement and public safety partners to ensure situational awareness of potential violence in their jurisdictions and will maintain open lines of communication with federal partners. DHS encourages the public to remain aware of the evolving threat environment and report suspicious activity to law enforcement officials.

Under the Biden-Harris Administration, DHS has increased the development, production, and dissemination of intelligence and other actionable information central to countering threats in the current environment. DHS has established a new, dedicated domestic terrorism branch within the Department's Office of Intelligence and Analysis (I&A). Further, DHS has established the Center for Prevention Programs and Partnerships (CP3) to help build local prevention frameworks to provide communities with the tools they need to counter terrorism and other targeted violence.

In February, Secretary Mayorkas designated combating domestic violent extremism as a National Priority Area for the first time in FEMA grant programs. As a result, state, local, tribal, and territorial governments are required to spend at least 7.5 percent, or a minimum of $77 million, of their DHS grant awards toward combating this threat.

These initiatives are taken in concert with the Biden-Harris Administration's National Domestic Terrorism Strategy which highlights the whole-of-government approach being take to enhance the analysis and distribution of actionable intelligence to stakeholders; prevent domestic terrorism recruitment and the mobilization to violence; disrupt and deter domestic terrorism activity; and confront long-term contributors to domestic terrorism.

Treasury and IRS Disburse Second Month of Advance Child Tax Credit Payments

Treasury Plans Permanent Mobile-Friendly and Multi-Lingual Sign-up Tool for Non-Filers, Announces New Sign-up Tool Created by Code for America

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of the Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service announced today that more than $15 billion were paid to families that include roughly 61 million eligible children in the second monthly payment of the expanded and newly-advanceable Child Tax Credit from the American Rescue Plan passed in March. The number of payments this month increased and cover an additional 1.6 million children. Eligible families received a payment of up to $300 per month for each child under age 6 and up to $250 per month for each child age 6 to 17.

This tax relief is having a real impact on the lives of America's children. According to the Census Bureau's Household Pulse Survey data released earlier this week, parents reported having less trouble covering the costs of food and other household expenses after receiving their first CTC payment. The share of families reporting that they sometimes or often did not have enough to eat in the past week dropped to the lowest percentage since the pandemic began. Parents are using their CTC payments to pay for basics for their kids. Roughly half of those who received a July CTC payment reported using it to pay for food and 1 in 4 spent some of their CTC on clothing.

"Today 61 million children across America are benefiting from the advance Child Tax Credit, helping families put food on the table and meet the needs of the next generation," said Deputy Secretary Wally Adeyemo. "We want every eligible family to have access to the advance Child Tax Credit, which is why we will continue our outreach efforts to drive enrollment as our children return to school."

Treasury is announcing its commitment — as part of the Administration's efforts to extend the expanded CTC program — to create a permanent, multi-lingual, and mobile friendly sign-up tool to help more Americans who do not regularly file taxes to claim their CTC. Treasury will work with Congress to ensure the effort is fully resourced. The Administration will also work with Congress to provide the necessary funding for a multi-year effort — leveraging public sector and community-oriented solutions — to reach and sign up more families and children.

In the meantime, Treasury and the White House are announcing a new, mobile-friendly, bilingual sign-up tool created by Code for America — a civic technology non-profit — which will be available in the coming weeks. The Administration will make an all-of government effort to enroll eligible families in the CTC, while also supporting the type of outreach and assistance needed over the long-term to ensure the Child Tax Credit is lifting up all our nation's children.

As was the case last month, the vast majority of families received their August payments by direct deposit and the remainder will receive checks in the mail. Due to a technical issue expected to be resolved by the September payments, a small percentage of recipients – less than 15% - who received payments by direct deposit in July will be mailed paper checks for the August payment. Families can visit the Child Tax Credit Update Portal to see if they're receiving a direct deposit or paper check this month.

For additional information for taxpayers on how they can access the Child Tax Credit, visit https://www.irs.gov/credits-deductions/advance-child-tax-credit-payments-in-2021 and see Frequently Asked Questions here.

HUD ANNOUNCES $2.7 BILLION FUNDING OPPORTUNITY TO HELP PEOPLE EXPERIENCING HOMELESSNESS

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is making $2.656 billion in FY 2021 Continuum of Care Program (CoC) competitive funding available to homeless services organizations across the country for supportive services and housing programs for people experiencing homelessness. Read HUD's Notice of Funding Opportunity (NOFO).

"The safety of a stable home is essential during the COVID-19 pandemic and this Administration is committed to meeting the needs of the more than half a million Americans who are struggling with homelessness on any given day," said HUD Secretary Marcia L. Fudge. "Coupled with the historic resources in the American Rescue Plan, the Continuum of Care Program grants made available through this announcement will provide communities with the resources needed to ensure that more Americans have the safety and stability of a home."

The Continuum of Care Program is the largest source of federal grant funding for homeless services and housing programs serving people experiencing homelessness. By statute, CoC Program grants must be awarded through an annual NOFO to which nearly 400 Continuum of Care communities apply for grants for approximately 7,000 homeless services projects. This includes both renewals of existing grants and grants for new projects.

Due to COVID-19, HUD was granted authority to renew grants without a NOFO in FY 2020. Therefore, this NOFO will be the first CoC Program NOFO since the COVID-19 pandemic.

As with prior NOFOs, Continuums of Care will have the opportunity to renew existing projects, apply for new projects, and to reallocate resources from lower performing projects to better serve people experiencing homelessness. However, this year's NOFO includes some new opportunities. The FY 2021 CoC Program NOFO will, for the first time, invite Indian Tribes and Tribally Designated Housing entities (TDHE) to apply for grants through the CoC program. Additionally, the NOFO will provide $102 million for new rapid re-housing, supportive services and other activities critical to assist survivors of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

As the first CoC Program NOFO of the Biden-Harris Administration, this NOFO reflects the Administration's commitment to equity and evidence-based solutions to address homelessness. Specifically, HUD is seeking projects that:

- End homelessness for all persons experiencing homelessness;
- Use a Housing First approach;
- Reduce unsheltered homelessness and reduce the criminalization of homelessness;
- Improve system performance;
- Partner with housing and health agencies, including to leverage and coordinate American Rescue Plan resources;
- Advance racial equity and addressing racial disparities in homelessness; and
- Engage people with lived experience of homelessness in decision-making.

Applications for the FY 2021 CoC Program NOFO are due to HUD on November 16, 2021. Click here for additional information.

Statement by Press Secretary Jen Psaki on Eviction Moratorium

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
August 20, 2021

The Administration believes that CDC's new moratorium is a proper use of its lawful authority to protect the public health, and we are pleased that the circuit court joined the district court in leaving the moratorium in place that is keeping hard-pressed Americans in their homes in areas of substantial or high COVID-19 spread. Throughout the pandemic, national, State and local eviction moratoria have kept people housed and slowed the spread of COVID-19. As we continue our effort to stop the spread of the highly transmissible Delta variant, the eviction moratorium remains vitally important.

The President continues to call on State and local governments to do more to protect vulnerable households. In the last week, Administration officials have continued their engagement with State and local elected officials and judges to encourage the swift delivery of emergency rental assistance funds and implementation of eviction diversion strategies. As the President has said, State and local elected officials should move more aggressively to distribute the $46.5 billion in Emergency Rental Assistance funds provided in part through the American Rescue Plan. And, State and local courts should issue their own moratoria and implement policies to discourage eviction filings until landlords and tenants have sought Emergency Rental Assistance funds. State and local funds from the American Rescue Plan are also available and should be deployed when needed to support these and other eviction prevention strategies.

Subject: "WHAT IS MISSOURI AG ERIC SCHMITT TRYING TO HIDE"

Attention: Member of the Missouri State Congress

Please see the article in the Kansas City Star editorial page of Friday's paper written by Dave Helling.

As a private citizen of Missouri I want to know why the Attorney General of Missouri Eric Schmitt has ignored request from the Kansas City Star's Reporter David Helling's request under Missouri's Sunshine Laws the when he clearly ask for an "open records request on Feb 2, 2021 for memos, emails, texts and other correspondence related to the 2020 Presidential election, count of electoral votes, and the certification of those votes on Jan 6th. Apparently as of May the 7th Mr. Helling has not hear back or received the information he requested under the "Missouri Sunshine Law".
As a private citizen of Missouri I have summited to the AG Office a similiar request and I am hoping others will join my efforts in obtaining that information. Hopefully it does not fall on deaf ears, his avarice for Power, or is not meet with the condescending ego of an elected official

It is my hope that some in the media will take action and request the same information requested by Staff Writer and Reporter for the Kansas City Star David Helling. Perhaps if the AG's Office is bombarded with request the Office may indeed respond as they should.

Why do we have a Sunshine Law if we cannot access documents that are a public record?

Sincerely yours

Subject: When Might makes right, then governments will kill us.

I sent the e-mail below to the Georgia Legislature, Georgia newspapers, the Atlanta, Canton, and Ball Ground City Councils.
We are hitting pretty hard as we take Georgia Prohibition head first into the AD 2022 election. Our campaign is probably the most fierce and constant effort on the national scene that the Prohibition Party has mounted in long decades. It is to stop the slaughter of American children by our federal, state, and local governments. Confident that God is with us although man is not, we go forth in what strength we have to strive right manly like in our weakness. We go forth to save each life and to free the nation from the evils that now devour us to set the captives free not for price or reward. What good fellows of long ago gave us must we give less to those ahead? No. May we perish if we do. We owe interest. We must give more. The Prohibition Party is the most virtuous and manly of all the political parties in the land. Our halos must shine as we struggle against the darkness.

GEORGIA PROHIBITION CELESTIAL DISCUSSIONS THROUGH GOD WE SHALL DO VALIANTLY
TUESDAY, JULY 27, IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD
AND SAVIOR JESUS CHRIST 2021

ONE IS EVIL. MANY ARE NOT. MIGHT MAKES RIGHT. POWER HAS THE ABILITY TO KILL AND CALL IT RIGHT.
WHEN GOVERNMENT BECOMES OUR ENEMY AND WILL KILL US.

Today in the newspaper there was reported of an arrest of a 56 year old man from Woodstock, Georgia who kidnapped a boy, raped the lad, and then killed him 33 years ago. It was declared a cold case and filed away but the boy's family kept pressuring the law to keep looking. Every so often they would investigate the case again with no result. Then they decided to exhume the boy's body. They found a link to the man through his DNA. He was arrested.

Keeping the boy in mind and the fact that he was killed by a homosexual, we remember how President Obama

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

ignoring the states resisting homosexuality, dictated same sex marriage as legal on the states and lit up the White House with the homosexual's rainbow colors. He did so because he loved democrat party more than he loved the people the democrat party caused to die with homosexuality. The democrat party used interstate organizations dedicated to evils that kill Americans to stay in office. Although one homosexual kills and we all see homosexual's evil nature, the democrat party feels that many homosexuals are OK although the evil causes people to kill. Any evil group that gives a political party power over the people and the political party wants to rule so much that once in office, it will kill for the evil group. The same is true for alcohol. One drunk is locked up in jail. But millions of drunks killing millions of people will be lifted up to rule the nation because there are so many people that they kill that it makes the killing look good.

Female elected officials are easily conned by power groups that give their party power. They will kill average Americans, even children, by lifting homosexuals, drunks, marijuana, abortion, and all kinds of evils that kill individual Americans. They love power and praise and their political party but they love he American people very little. They steal their lives for money. They look at millions dying and pay no attention. Communist activists crawl like insects in the corruption.

LUCY'S TOOTH

Lucille Ball, the comedy actress, during World War II had a filling in her tooth that caused the tooth to act as a radio receiver.
It was picking up the radio transmission of a Japanese spy. This is not mentioned by the communist activists as they condemn the US for placing American citizens of Japanese heritage in internment camps. They had to in order to control the situation on the west coast when it looked like Japan and Germany were winning the war. These communist activists have done the same in using the period of slavery and segregation to induce hatred fro the nation by the people. They are now trying to erase American history and substitute a counterfeit history as they addict and kill millions with legal vices and disease.

There is a story in Latin about ancient Germany that was then suffering from famine. There was a leader who had a lot of grain stored in towers but he would not release the grain. Later the grain towers caught fire and people were screaming. The leader laughed and said, "It is the squeaking of mice. Then he heard a voice in his ear that told him, Thy body, wretch, the mice will devour."

Today the government aids the death of millions of Americans by supporting evil interstate gangs that cause the deaths. They look on the millions as though they had no meaning like the old German leader. Top females high in our government lie, cheat, and conspire to keep their political party in power. They keep the alcohol, abortion, marijuana, and in Nevada legal prostitution locked in on the children as they watch Americans destroyed. The voice is in their ears but they don't hear it because they are so vain, so evil, that they can't hear the whisper, " Ye wretches, your bodies will be devoured by mice." Self-glory pursued at the cost of millions of lives they are supposed to defend.

Governments that kill the people they are to defend and paid and pledged to do so, are tyrants, and despots over us.

Nancy Pelosi has been lifted so high in government that she considers herself better than a tiny child she is killing with abortion, alcohol, homosexuality, and other evils. She can not see her neighbor or his child. She can only see the mirror on the wall that tells her she is greater than a tiny child she is causing to die. Those seduced who voted to put her up as a queen over us all are worse than she is for they feel she and they arebetter than the tiny child she is killing with abortion and Alcohol to appease the wretched slaves of those vices. A little voice is in her ear and in the ears of those who support her tells them to stop the slaughter but they can not hear.

Georgia Prohibition stands up to present to the American people a Prohibition Amendment to stop the slaughter of the American child and bring our apostate and reprobate governments back to defend each life in the nation. Why? Because we hear the still small voice telling us not to play in the vices and kill but to stay on guard and save.

THE CHILD ABUSE FEDERAL, STATE, AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS AND THE TROJAN HORSE.

Men and women worshipping evils such as alcohol, immoral sex, marijuana, sex change, homosexuality, and having no love for neighbors and children in their towns, counties, states and the nation come into our political parties and on into the governments. There the scheme with others of their satanic ilk in the news media, Hollywood, music profession, and the universities to gather people from every state to legalize their evils causing many people to die including children. They control presidents and make them desert the children and destroy them with alcohol, marijuana, homosexual AIDS, and suicides. The towns and cities willingly kill the children with the legalized evils. They addict the women and the women loving the vices more than their children and addict their children. Loving their political parties more than the Constitution, their neighbors, and their nation, top political women in politics such as Nancy Pelosi, Kamala Harris, women in the US Senate, and in the US House watch millions of American die due to alcohol and abortion and do not care. They use the numbers of vice addicts to hold on to power which they love and the praise they get. They lead millions of Adults and children into hell by ignoring the Bible's warning against the human sacrifice of children for money and to serve the political parties that just want to rule but not to defend and save the people.

Americans need to unite as one nation and one people to place their children first and return the federal, state, and local governments back under our Constitution and the Declaration of Independence that each of us to defend each person. America promises life to each of us and each of us has the duty to defend each life. Instead our governments dominated by women who have deserted the children to kill them for vice addicts, alien groups.

We need to establish a prohibition amendment to bring us all back to the duty to defend each life and to make all political leaders, interstate groups, and religions.

Now I lay me down to sleep. I pray the Lord my soul to keep. if I should die before I wake, I pray the Lord my soul to take.

Former Sen. Dan Brown, patriarch of legendary Missouri family, passes at 70

Former state Sen. Dan "Doc" Brown, the patriarch of a legendary Missouri family, passed away on May 11, 2021, at age 70. His legacy of service to the state continues on with his son, current Sen. Justin Brown.

A stalwart fixture in the Missouri Legislature, Brown died Tuesday at the age of 70 at his home in Rolla. He was born in Solo, Missouri, a town with no stoplights on the westside of Hog Creek in Texas County.

BUZZ

— Though the fate of SBs 53 and 60 was feeling pretty touch-and-go even into the early morning hours, it was unanimously passed out of conference committee this morning, with all of the members of the conference signing on to the report.

Not only did it pass the conference, but the language that the speaker really wanted to keep in which would give the General Assembly subpoena power was taken out. Don't forget, Gov. Mike Parson had threatened to veto the bill if that language was included. He probably realized that giving the House subpoena power was a pretty slippery slope that he didn't want our state to go down.

The unanimous passage shows great negotiation skills and determinism from Sens.Tony Luetkemeyer and Brian Williams. They were both in the side gallery of the House last night working on getting support for the bill.

The bill will have to wait until tomorrow to be heard in the House, but the good news for proponents is there are very few reasons for conservative Republicans in the lower chamber to hate the bill, and most Democrats support it, even with the language eliminating the residency requirement for Kansas City police officers. Looks like Williams' months of hard work is paying off.

— After the House vote last night where Floor LeaderDean Plocher threw down the gauntlet and really became the leader, he was asked to come over to the Senate. When he walked in, there wasn't just the normal glad-handing a politician receives or the lobbying by senators to bring their bills to the floor in the House. He was greeted with the one quality that is the hardest thing a House leader to attain in the Senate: respect.

— Opponents to the Grain Belt project have come to terms with the fact that this session is effectively their last chance to stop the project, and even if there's a lengthy debate on the floor, it's likely to meet the same fate it has the last four or five years and go down in the Senate. The reality is that the project is already well underway, and the state would have considerable legal exposure if it killed a project they've already approved.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— The FRA is still in jeopardy after the Senate voted down party lines to send it back to a conference committee attached to a bill from Sen. Holly Rehder. If the anti-abortion language stays on, it's hard to see any Democrats voting for the final product. That could lead to a special session. Speaking of special session, members of the House Elections and Elected Officials Committee called for a special session on election integrity today. Their call might be moot, however. At the time of this writing, the Senate is debating a bevy of election-related bills sent over from the House.

— Congratulations to Sen. Angela Mosley and Rep. Jay Mosley, the first married couple in the Missouri General Assembly to pass a bill together. HB 402, which would prohibit the publishing of names and other information of winners of the state lottery, was third read and passed in the upper chamber tonight.

— Members were honored by the presence of St. Louis Cardinals legend Ozzie Smith, the greatest shortstop in the history of humanity, in the House and Senate today. Go crazy, folks!

— Kansas City mayor Quinton Lucas took a strange shot at Chris Koster while saying that he is still eyeing the U.S. Senate race.

"Do you want candidates who can share a story, or do you want to run Chris Koster for governor again?" the mayor said in an interview with The Hill.

— In other news that everyday Missourians definitely care about, U.S. Senator Josh Hawley's legislation to ban TikTok on government devices passed out of a U.S. Senate Committee.

— Happy birthday Sen. Jeannie Riddle!

PACE reforms cross legislative finish line

The General Assembly approved changes to Missouri's Property Assessment Clean Energy (PACE) Act program Wednesday morning.

HB 697 from Rep. Bruce DeGroot would require municipalities taking action with a clean energy development board to notify the Division of Finance of the change, and the division would conduct examinations of a board every two years. The Clean Energy Development Board would be required to work with property owners by disclosing project information, keeping them up-to-date on developments, and informing them in writing that delinquent assessments would be a lien on their property.

Freshmen to Watch: Bennie Cook

Rep. Bennie Cook is no stranger to working with lawmakers and constituents, and he's making that experience the foundation for his time in the statehouse.

Among various roles in his community, including a commission with the Texas County Sheriff's Department and his service as the county's emergency management director, he also worked as a field representative for U.S. Congressman Jason Smith for four years. Cook said he felt humbled to begin his own tenure representing his district in the House.

Defending private property rights and our family farms

Our state's agriculture industry cannot succeed in feeding the world without the hard work of Missouri's farmers. That is why it is critical to protect basic constitutional private property rights for farmers to work their land and earn enough to support their families and communities.

Republicans should quit virtue-signaling and pass COVID liability protections

By: Maryann Manion

The Republican Party is the party of entrepreneurs and hard work. We're the party that applauds building a family business from the ground up and being able to operate that business without the government's interference. But right now, some in the Republican-led Missouri legislature are leaving our small businesses vulnerable to attacks by frivolous lawsuits and greedy trial lawyers.

Room to deal? Plocher, Schatz face logjam of legislation as session nears its end

With just a couple weeks of session left, there wasn't a great list of accomplishments for the first session of the 101st General Assembly. The leading item of a pretty paltry list was a bill regarding foster children.

Meanwhile, the Senate had seemingly stalled over issues like education reform, gambling, and nominations to the University of Missouri's Board of Curators. And in the House, Senate priorities such as increasing the gas tax or implementing a statewide PDMP log jammed in committees while rumors flew that the lower chamber would hold hostage legislation from Republican senators who supported fully funding Medicaid.

As is the case most years, when session hit the two weeks left marker things began to happen. After the Senate, passed a House priority of the legislation assisting families adopting or fostering children. Then, the Senate took the House position on not expanding Medicaid. After that, the Senate again took the House position on Rep. Phil Christofanelli's legislation establishing the education savings account program, taking up and passing the lower chamber's bill without any amendments after only 15 minutes of what would be better described as a discussion, not a debate.

BUZZ

— Sen. Dave Schatz's gas tax legislation cleared another hurdle today when it made it out of the House Fiscal Review Committee. The narrow 5-3 vote came down to Rep. John Wiemann, whose vote was unclear until he cast it. It was an hour for a statesman to step up, and he did. There is a reason he is as respected as he is.

The bill's tally is very close in the lower chamber. You're likely to hear Democrats speak against the bill — not because they don't like a gas tax, but because they're sick of Republicans running ads saying that Democrats want to raise taxes and then sponsoring legislation to raise taxes — but you assure that ultimately vote yes on the measure. In caucus earlier today, Minority Floor Leader Crystal Quade told them to vote how they want on the bill, but her position could change. If proponents get every Democrat, they only need 33 Republicans to vote yes. Estimates are that there could be as few as 35 ready to support it. It might take Rep. Ashley Bland-Manlove stepping up and being the actual leader of the Democratic Caucus again to move a major piece of legislation.

— Wayfair tax legislation sponsored by Rep.J. Eggleston hit a stumbling block in the Senate GAFO committee this afternoon after the motion to exec on the bill failed to get a second. It could come up again, but it was a significant setback for the legislation that has already made it's way out of the House and the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

— Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin's phone lines experienced higher-than-normal call volume today afterParis Hilton told her 16.9 million Twitter followers to call the senator and ask that she pass HB 557, a bipartisan bill that would require certain residential care facilities to register with the state. Hilton got involved in the legislation earlier by submitting written testimony in support of its passage. O'Laughlin is expected to speak against the bill on the floor of the Senate, and something tells me O'Laughlin won't be moved by the reality TV star's thoughts.

— The conference committee for SBs 53 & 60 from Sens. Tony Luetkemeyer and Brian Williams was supposed to take place today but was moved to tomorrow without supporters being given a notice or reason. It seems there was just some language clarification that needed to happen before both chambers started the debate. The bill may run into another issue, though. There is a belief going around that Gov. Mike Parson is planning to veto the bill if a provision granting the speaker his own cop. The provision is the latest demand from Speaker Rob Vescovo, but several Senate members don't like it and are a little tired of playing Charlie Brown to Vescovo's Lucy. The Speaker is holding firm on the language so the bill's future is now up in the air. The Speaker may run into some other issues with his caucus, though. He was asked in caucus today if IP reform was traded for ESAs, and he told his members it wasn't. Word is they're not exactly convinced of the veracity of that statement.

— As focus turns to the House Rules-Legislative Oversight Committee this week, don't rely too much on the notices of what's on deck. Lawmakers said last week that just because a bill is on the notice, doesn't necessarily mean it will be brought up. Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer's COVID liability bill is currently sitting in that committee waiting to be exec'd.

— While Mike Haffner officially announced his bid for floor leader today, keep an eye on Reps. Hannah Kelly and Jon Patterson. Both are planning to make formal announcements soon for the floor leader position.

— Congressman Jason Smith has snagged Bill Stepien, former President Donald Trump's 2020 campaign manager. He said he is still "strongly considering" a bid for U.S. Senate but is focused on the budget at the moment as the committee's Republican leader.

"Our state needs a strong conservative voice to follow Roy Blunt, and I would put my conservative record and support for working-class Americans, small businesses, and farmers up against anyone in the state who might be running. … I am at Ground Zero in the fight against Joe Biden's reckless spending and tax increases that Speaker [Nancy] Pelosi and Chuck Schumer are trying to ram through Congress this summer."

— Speaking of White House spending, the Biden administration announced today that it is launching more Coronavirus State and Local Fiscal Recovery Funds. Missouri is slated to get more than $2.6 billion overall from this funding source.

— Happy birthday to Rep. Ron Hicks!

— Be sure to listen to the latest episode of Third Read from Kaitlyn Schallhorn and Conner Kerrigan. This week, Rep. Bill Hardwick joins us to guest host the podcast and talk about his experience as a freshman legislator. Listen on Apple Podcasts, Spotify, or right in your browser.

Ben Baker announces bid for House Speaker Pro Tem
Rep. Ben Baker announced his bid for House Speaker Pro Tem Monday, touting his rural background and promising to facilitate relationships.

“It is my desire to serve you with excellence and offer value to caucus members that will be a fresh vision of collaborative success,” Baker said in a letter to his colleagues and shared with The Missouri Times. “If you know me, you know that I believe in hard work and clean living. As members of the General Assembly, we have an incredible opportunity to serve our constituents and affect change for Missouri, and I take that challenge seriously.”

Mike Haffner jumps into floor leader race
Rep. Mike Haffner is running for majority floor leader, he told his colleagues Monday.

Haffner is a Republican who has represented HD 55 in Cass County since 2019. He’s the chairman of the Joint Committee on Agriculture and the vice-chairman of the Elementary and Secondary Education Committee.

Freshmen to Watch: Richard West
Rep. Richard West found himself in a unique position this year — serving his first term as a state representative and his fourth as mayor of New Melle simultaneously.

West’s initial career was in law enforcement, a passion he began pursuing right out of high school. He retired after 21 years, with a 28-month stint as an international police advisor in Iraq under his belt as well, before running for mayor to address policing and budgetary concerns. While he plans to pass the torch on when his term expires, he said the experience of operating in two different governments at once provided an interesting challenge.

Freshmen to Watch: Marlene Terry
Rep. Marlene Terry ran to represent HD 66 with a long-time passion for education and her community at the forefront of her mind.

“My inspiration for being involved in politics started with me being on the school board; I served for nine years,” Terry told

From Medicaid expansion to gas tax, key lawmakers wrap up session

With session coming to a close, legislators from both sides of the aisle and chambers recapped the biggest issues of the last few months.

Reps. Ashley Bland Manlove and Dan Houx joined Sunday’s episode of “This Week in Missouri Politics” to discuss the end of session and the year’s biggest debates, from the fight to reform education to funding for Medicaid expansion. Despite being included in the governor’s recommendation, the $34 billion budget passed without an appropriation for expansion.

‘Tale of two governors’: New ad compares Parson’s handling of coronavirus to Cuomo

A new ad contrasts Gov. Mike Parson with embattled New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo’s handling of the coronavirus pandemic.

The two-minute spot, released by the pro-Parson Uniting Missouri group Friday, compared Missouri to New York in terms of recent positive COVID-19 cases, unemployment, and relocation in what it called “a tale of two governors.” The ad said media coverage of Parson’s efforts during the pandemic was unfairly negative while Cuomo was heralded for his handling of the global crisis.

While Cuomo, a Democrat who has represented New York since 2011, was praised for his leadership during the earlier days of the pandemic — even winning an Emmy for his daily press briefings — he has come under fire for recent months for the thousands of nursing home deaths that occurred as the pandemic wreaked havoc. His administration has been accused of covering up the exact number of deaths, and the state’s attorney general, as well as the FBI, have launched probes. The FBI is reportedly looking into Cuomo’s efforts to protect nursing homes from liability.

BUZZ

—The biggest news from yesterday was the appointment of two new curators to the University of Missouri system. There's no question it will take some work on the front end to see Todd Graves get an easy confirmation. The appointment obviously puts Sen. Bill Eigel in a really uncomfortable spot. On the other hand, there will be a few other senators making it their priority to get his appointment done.

The other name, Keith Holloway, was out of the blue for the 8th district. Frequently, the 8th district curator has been someone with ties to the Delta Center or Missouri S&T, which Holloway doesn't have. His appointment brings the end of David Steelman's current stint as a curator — probably the most influential curator in modern times. When he was appointed to the board, every metric was going down for the university. It had, by all accounts, pitiful leadership and even its biggest supporter, Jay Nixon, knew somewhat of a shake-up was necessary. Steelman's time on the board has been prolific. He saw the university through the protests and was the leading voice supporting the hiring of Mun Choi, who by every single credible person's account has been an outstanding choice for the college. He was also a leading voice advocating not to squander the head coaching job on a coach that would have been considered a joke by the SEC. He pushed to hire Eliah Drinkwitz, which by all accounts is a rockstar hire. He also pushed to make the system president the chancellor of the Columbia campus, a move that seemed like painfully common sense to everyone at the time but took a skilled operator to pull together all the moving parts. It's hard to imagine how Mizzou was ridiculed and derided just a few years before. Most people would say the main reason Mizzou has improved so much since 2014 is because of Steelman's service. Holloway doesn't have big shoes to fill, he has enormous boots to fill. Some might say Holloway could be a harder confirmation than Graves because of the giant he is attempting to replace. Gov. Mike Parson has had a track record of outstanding appointments — maybe unmatched in state history. However, this appointment of Holloway will raise eyebrows amongst his most ardent supporters that have actually bled for him. It will be an interesting last six weeks of the session.

— Former state Rep. Courtney Curtis, an aide to St Louis County Council memberRita Heard Days, is now scheduled to be sentenced on March 31. Curtis pleaded guilty last year to three federal counts of wire fraud, including using $47,000 in campaign funds for personal expenses. He could face up to one year in prison.

— Any changes to education reform that are done in the Senate will need to be revisited by the House. The path of least resistance to Parson's desk would be for the Senate to pass Rep. Phil Christofanelli's ESA bill as is. It most likely has the 18 votes already, and since it was such a tight vote in the House, it would be better to pass a version that doesn't need to be sent back to the lower chamber. It would also give the junior representative a huge win to bring home as he thinks about his political future.

Education reformers, including Floor LeaderCaleb Rowden, however, would like to see votes for a broader package. They need to at least get votes on the record so they can know who they need to start working when reform inevitably comes up next year. They can walk and chew gum at the same time, though: Get ESAs to the governor's desk and vote on a broader package.

— As of right now, it seems that almost the entirety of Republican House leadership is unified in their opposition to addressing Missouri's roads crisis. There isn't a clear path out of the Senate for Eigel's personal property tax legislation, either. Wayfair may be the only tax reform that passes this session which would still be significant since it hasn't gotten through both chambers until this year.

—Democrats have made a priority out of Sen. Brian Williams's police reform bill. Supporters, including the FOP, are hopeful that the bill will be heard on the floor Monday or Tuesday. It is probably the highest-profile Democrat-sponsored piece of legislation likely to pass this year.

Missouri individual tax filing, payment deadline extended through May

The Missouri Department of Revenue (DOR) extended its deadline for 2020 state individual tax filing and payment by a month.

The deadline was pushed from April 15 to May 17. Gov. Mike Parson announced the extension Friday, saying additional time would help Missourians still reeling from the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Missouri pharmacists filling the gaps in coronavirus vaccine distribution

With more than 180,000 residents, Boone County is one of the more populous in the state and is home to the University of Missouri, which has been able to host mass testing and coronavirus vaccination events. But those types of mass events aren't always easily accessible for the county's disabled or older population.

That's where Tanya Alberty and her local pharmacies come in. Along with her husband, Alberty owns two pharmacies, D&H Drugstore, in Columbia. They gave their first doses of the vaccine on Dec. 20, making them one of the first pharmacies in Missouri to get approved and to vaccinate. Since, her pharmacies have administered more than 2,500 doses.

Flood recovery efforts outpacing past years, Parson says

Missouri is recovering from 2019's catastrophic flooding quicker than it had after other floods thanks to the work of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the legislature, Gov. Mike Parson said.

Parson met with Brigadier General Pete Helmlinger of U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Northwestern Division to discuss the state's recovery efforts this week. Missouri faced severe flooding in 2019, devastating multiple areas of the state and reaching historic levels in some regions. Parson said communities were recovering faster than they had from flooding in 1993 and 2011, with 70 percent of damaged levees reconstructed so far.

Parson taps new curators for MU board

After months of consideration, Gov. Mike Parson named two appointments to the University of Missouri (MU) Board of Curators this week.

Todd Graves, who was tapped for the 6th congressional slot, served as the U.S. attorney for the Western District of Missouri by presidential appointment from 2001 to 2006 before becoming a founding partner of Graves Garrett LLC. He also chaired the Missouri Republican Party for two years beginning in 2017.

OPINION

Pediatricians protecting our communities

By:Thuylinh Pham

As pediatricians, our job is not only to protect the well-being of children but to promote and advance the health of all families. Each day we work to ensure the children of Missouri are provided every opportunity possible to succeed — and this starts with protecting families from disease and illness with vaccines during routine well child visits.

It's during these routine well child visits when pediatricians have the best opportunity to talk with families about their child's development and work to build a plan for ensuring children grow into healthy and productive adolescents and adults. We use this time to discuss things like nutrition, safe sleep, cognitive development, and protecting the child from harm. We work hand-in-hand with the families we serve to reach a level of comfort with the care being administered, especially as it relates to vaccines.

Jamey Murphy awarded St. Louis County Republican of the Year

Jamey Murphy became the youngest person to be named St. Louis County Republican of the Year Sunday.

Jamey, chief of staff to Sen. Paul Wieland and son of Rep. Jim Murphy, was recognized Sunday for his work in politics. Murphy, who previously served as chief of staff for former Sen. Jim Lembke and as a member of the Mehlville School District Board of Directors, said he was thankful for the award.

BUZZ

— The Senate is going to be hearing the Housebudget bills on the floor Wednesday so it's about to get very wonky in the upper chamber. It's hard to remember all the nuances in the budget process from session to session so we brought you the rundown so you know what will be happening in the coming days.

There were 14 budget bills and two supplementals sent to the Senate by the House, and now that they've gone through Sen. Dan Hegeman's Appropriations Committee, they'll head to the floor. The Senate essentially treats appropriations bills the same as any other House bills that are third read on the floor with one significant exception: Appropriation bills are the only ones that can be brought to the floor from the formal calendar out of order. Normally, if a bill the chamber wanted to hear was low on the formal calendar, lawmakers would move to place the bills before it on the informal calendar to get to the one they want to take up.

Appropriation bills can be heard at any time, regardless of the order. That's about the only real procedural change.

Outside of that, the two chambers handle budget bills a bit differently. For example, the Senate doesn't require offsetting amendments like the House. If the House puts $30,000 toward X, it has to take away $30,000 from Y. No such rule exists in the Senate. It can add the money where it finds it appropriate without pitting issues against each other.

Once the bills are third read on the Senate floor, any item that the two chambers failed to agree on will go to conference — which will consist of three Republicans and two Democrats from each chamber. The Speaker and Pro Tem officially appoint the members of the conference, but the minority leaders in each chamber get to chose their representatives.

Conference rules also highlight the difference between the two chambers. Although the bills can pass out of conference committee with a simple majority, House rules state that conference reports cannot be submitted to either chamber unless at least three House members and two Senate members sign the report.

Per usual, expect budget debates to take up a lot of time in the Senate this week. Although folks have been calling for Senate Democrats to stand until their feet bleed on the Medicaid expansion funding issue, they may decide to trust Chuck Hatfield in court more than they trust a filibuster on the floor. However, there are other issues that may draw their attention — like, where is the state planning on putting money for medical marijuana?

— Desperate for content, Jack Suntrup at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently wrote a story about Rep.Wiley Price and how leadership is docking his pay to recoup fees associated with the investigation into him. As per usual, Suntrup wasn't able to get a comment from Price, but ran the story anyway.

"I've been paying the imposed fines without making a big deal out of it. No one would have heard about this if the Post-Dispatch hadn't needed a story to write," Price told us.

— Kansas City Mayor Quinton Lucas expressed his anger at the House over a bill being heard in committee today from Budget Chair Cody Smith to designate a bipartisan five-member committee to have oversight on local spending decisions for federal stimulus funds. Lucas said Kansas City got "shafted" in CARES Act funding.

— The U.S Supreme Court has agreed to take up the gun rights case that Attorney General Eric Schmitt wrote an amicus brief for. The case looks at whether the Constitution protects the right to carry guns in public.

"Biggest case since Heller," Schmitt said on Twitter.

— Watch the latest episode of "This Week in Missouri Politics" with special guest Congresswoman Ann Wagner who discusses the southern border and her potential U.S. Senate run. On the panel, we've got Reps. Mary Elizabeth Coleman and LaKeysha Bosley, along with Mark Dalton and birthday boy David Barklage.

— The U.S. Census Bureau released the 2020 Apportionment data today, and as expected, Missouri did not lose or gain a congressional seat. Be on the lookout for a breakdown of what exactly today's data means for Missouri from editor Kaitlyn Schallhorn on the website later today.

Freshmen to Watch: Barbara Phifer

After more than 40 years as a United Methodist pastor, Barbara Phifer was considering retirement. But as her concerns of what she saw as threats to democracy grew, she knew her work wasn't quite done.

Phifer, who received her master's of divinity from the St. Paul School of Theology, is one of the first women to serve as a pastor in Missouri. She's served in churches in Missouri as well as in Montevideo, Uruguay during the 1980s where she had a firsthand account of the country's transition from a dictatorship back to democracy.

Wagner on possible US Senate run: 'We're taking a look at it'

While she hasn't officially announced a bid for outgoing U.S. Senator Roy Blunt's seat in 2022, Congresswoman Ann Wagner said it's something she's exploring.

"We're taking a look at it very seriously. I have to say I love my district — it's home, it's where I raised my family, and we've worked hard here," Wagner said. "You have to have the support of your constituents, but what you really have to do is talk to Missourians and that's what we're in the process of doing now, talking to everyday Missourians from across the state. … There's plenty of time for politics and making decisions about the future."

OPINION

Open letter to my colleagues in the legislature

By: Alex Riley

The COVID-19 pandemic that began last spring changed life as we know it. Government entities around our state and nation shut down our small businesses, closed our schools, and banned people from attending their places of worship at a time when faith in a higher power was the only thing that provided hope for many. Unemployment and poverty rates skyrocketed while our citizens' mental health declined precipitously. Thankfully, there seems to be a light at the end of the tunnel and society is finally beginning to reopen. People are getting back to work and vaccination rates are increasing while COVID-19 cases are decreasing.

At the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, nearly 90 percent of U.S. adults felt the internet served an important role in their day-to-day lives, and nearly half claimed that disruption to their cellphone or internet service during the crisis would be a major concern.

Public schools are public goods

By: Teresa Mithen Danieley

As the parent of three children enrolled in St. Louis Public Schools, I am deeply dismayed that so many in the Missouri House — including some Democrats — voted in favor of HB 137, which will shift up to $17 million dollars a year from traditional public schools (specifically SLPS) to charter schools, which will not be required to provide the same services as public schools. We must make sure that HB 137 dies in the Senate.

BUZZ

— Former Sen. Jamilah Nasheed has been appointed to the Board of Probation and Parole. To be fair this will raise some eyebrows, and it would be naive to think that there won't be some Republicans that grouse, but at the end of the day, the Missouri Senate has never failed to confirm one of their colleagues.

In other appointment news, Cape Girardeau businessman Keith Holloway has been reappointed to the Board of Curators for the 8th district. He was appointed during session, but it quickly became clear the loyalty many in the state Senate felt for David Steelman wouldn't allow someone to be confirmed while he was still in the post. However, Holloway had nothing to do with any of the controversy surrounding the session issues and handled himself with a generous portion of class. Because of the way he carried himself last session, look for a pretty easy confirmation next session. As for why so many regarded David Steelman so highly, just look to his last board meeting where he finalized a deal for the indoor football practice venue. I'll have a column Monday laying out the argument that no one has ever left a board so much better than they found it than David Steelman did the MU Board. He is likely the greatest curator in the history of the school.

— Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler is set to make her U.S. Senate race official with an event at Frontier Justice, a shooting range in Lee's Summit, next Thursday.

Possible replacements for Hartzler in the 4th congressional district include Sen. Caleb Rowden, former state Rep. Caleb Jones, Sen. Denny Hoskins, Sen. Rick Brattin, and Rep. Bill Hardwick. But one reader said to keep an eye on Rep. Mike Haffner, calling him a "natural fit" for the district given it includes two bases and he has an impressive career in the U.S. Navy as a commanding officer of a F/A-18 Hornet Squadron. Haffner also has strong agriculture ties.

— Senator Roy Blunt is set to receive the Harry S. Truman Public Service Award tomorrow in Independence. The annual award is given by the city to someone who "possesses the qualities of dedication, industry, ability, honesty, and integrity that distinguished" the former president.

— As he's helping Republicans all across the country this cycle, former U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo is headlining Secretary Jay Ashcroft's second annual Faith and Freedom rally in July in Springfield.

"I am honored to welcome Secretary Pompeo to Missouri to headline this year's Faith and Freedom event. As President Trump's top diplomat, Secretary Pompeo's influence has been felt around the world. This will be a very special event," Ashcroft said.

— St. Louis Mayor Tishaura Jones nominated Neal Richardson as executive director of the St. Louis Development Corporation (SLDC). Richardson is the president of Dream Builders 4 Equity and is the director of the Business Impact Group at US Bank.

Missouri pharmacists could administer HIV medication if licensure bill approved by governor

Amid a bevy of licensing reforms passed by the legislature this year, one measure would allow easier access to life-saving HIV medication.

Among other things, the bill would allow pharmacists to dispense HIV post-exposure prophylaxis (PEP) medications, provided the pharmacist has completed the necessary training program. PEP treatments are used within the critical three-day period following exposure to the virus.

Ameren Missouri donates unique fire truck in St. Louis

The St. Louis Fire Department is the first in the nation to use a new state-of-the-art fire truck thanks to a donation from Ameren Missouri.

The specialized truck was designed to fight underground electrical fires — a rare but complex situation for firefighters. It can quickly extinguish underground fires through the use of a specialized nozzle and carbon dioxide, which Ameren said is a safer and more effective way to battle underground fires.

Jamilah Nasheed appointed to Parole Board

Former state Sen. Jamilah Nasheed has stepped into a vacant spot on the Missouri Parole Board with the potential to be re-appointed for a longer term.

Nasheed, who served in the General Assembly from 2007-2020, was appointed by Gov. Mike Parson to sit on the seven-member board tasked with reviewing whether certain incarcerated individuals meet state requirements for parole or conditional release. The board also gathers information related to potential commutations, pardons, and more.

Schmitt drops lawsuit over St. Louis County health orders

Attorney General Eric Schmitt withdrew a lawsuit against St. Louis County Thursday after “frivolous” health orders aimed at COVID-19 were lifted.

Schmitt filed the suit last month, pointing to May’s “Reopen STL” order that still required masks for outdoor activities and retained mask requirements for students in the county. The suit leveled eight counts against the county — two relating to religious exercise, one on violating the right to assemble, one saying the latest order was too vague, and four alleging arbitrary orders.

Missouri lawmakers approve plan to extend orders of protection for life

Before the legislative session comes to a close, Missouri lawmakers approved a plan to extend orders of protection for life — a move giving hope to victims of domestic and sexual violence.

SB 71 — championed by Sens. Elaine Gannon and Holly Rehder and state Rep. Lane Roberts — is heading to the governor after it was truly agreed to and finally passed Monday. It gives judges the discretion to extend orders of protection for life, includes pets in protection orders, and expands the definition of stalking to include means through a third-party source such as social media.

“Having this lifetime protection order as a tool that a judge can possibly use for me gives me hope and makes me feel like I actually matter,” Lisa Saylor, a survivor and advocate for this legislation, said.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

BUZZ

— A new organization, called Missouri Can't Wait, has set up a website and form letter to get Missourians to support SB 262, Sen. Dave Schatz's bill that would increase the gas tax in Missouri in order to repair our crumbling bridges and roadways. The group is supported by the Missouri Chamber of Commerce which supported the bill along with 31 other organizations and individuals during public testimony in the Senate.

— The bill that most people thought was more comedic relief than serious, theSecond Amendment Preservation Act (SAPA), is getting support from a new group that is pushing to see it brought to the floor for a vote. Senators have been fielding a ton of scripted (and unscripted) calls from constituents on the bill. It would stand to reason the upper chamber would have to PQ it.

However, if you're the Democrats, why wouldn't you just let the Republicans run on a Blue Lives Matter platform and then sit down and watch them pass a provision to let folks sue the police? If you're Sen. John Rizzo, has there ever been a bigger bait and switch in Missouri politics than being accused of wanting to defund the police by the same folks working to pass a bill that would allow frivolous lawsuits to literally take money away from the police?

If there's anything that runs close to guns and abortion it would be cops. Where support for guns can sometimes be weak in the suburbs, there's nowhere in the state that support for cops is stronger than in the suburbs. It will be interesting to see what the Senate does.

The real question is this: There are 24 Republican senators. How many of them are willing to take the demotion to being a House member with a bigger office by PQ'ing a gun bill? If something were to be PQ'd, which would break the Senate, it would stand to reason that it would be something large and consequential like initiative petition reforms — not some gimmick like SAPA.

—The budget conference will begin tomorrow. Regardless of how it shakes out, the House has scored a victory by actually setting some policy in the budget after two years of pretty consistent drubbings. The Senate would have never rejected Medicaid expansion funding if the House hadn't started it. Whatever happens this year with the budget, the House is having a better year than they have the last two years because they set a policy and the Senate followed. That's a victory for the lower chamber.

— Attorney General Eric Schmitt is the new chair of the Republican Attorneys General Association (RAGA), taking the helm officially about two weeks ago. But don't expect it to last. With his U.S. Senate run, count on the RAGA to choose a new chairman in the near future.

— Progress Missouri, the self-proclaimed progressive communications hub for Missouri, has returned with Jessica Pace as its executive director. Pace graduated with a Master's in Public Policy Administration from the University of Missouri – St. Louis in 2010. After nearly a decade in California, she returned to Missouri to work on state and national policies.

General revenue collections continued to increase in April, latest report says

(Labor Tribune) Missouri transportation investment bill could have yearly economic impact of $1.8B, generate more than 17,000 jobs

Missouri has long had one of the lowest average gasoline taxes in the nation, and it has been about 25 years since the state gasoline tax was increased.

In addition, Missouri has consistently ranked in the bottom half of states in terms of roads in poor condition and bridges that are deemed structurally insufficient. Estimates suggest that Missouri currently underfunds its transportation system by more than $825 million annually.

General Assembly gives final approval to FY22 budget

Both chambers of the Missouri legislature gave final approval to the more than $34 billion budget Friday afternoon.

The House began third reading budget bills, passing them along to the Senate. Most bills passed without conflict, with the lack of funding for Medicaid expansion the biggest topic of conversation in the lower chamber. A recommendation from the governor was stripped during the package's time in the House Budget Committee and never returned despite attempts from both chambers and both sides of the aisle.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

BUZZ

— The budget bills had a relatively easy time making it through both chambers today, as the budget has a privileged set of rules that deal with filibusters on third reading. Only once did Sen. John Rizzo briefly stand to speak against HBs 10 and 11 which would have been the vehicles to fully fund Medicaid expansion. Outside of those bills, there was virtually no debate and all others passed through with healthy majorities. Sens. Mike Moon, Rick Brattin, Bill Eigel, and Bob Onder, all members of the Senate Conservative Caucus, were consistent no votes on several of the budget bills.

Things didn't go as smoothly in the House. Floor LeaderDean Plocher PQ'd two budget bills before Rep. Peter Merideth, ranking minority member of the Budget Committee, could have a say in the debate. The quick PQ caught some members of the Democratic Caucus off guard. They thought they would have more time to voice their opposition to some of the bills. While there was some incorporation of Democrats' ideas in the budget and debate was heard on the budget during House perfection and third reading, there was a tighter reign kept on the conference reports that one would assume the minority would have more to approve of.

— Speaker Rob Vescovo said he would put Sen. Dave Schatz's gas tax on the calendar for next week after it was voted out of Rep. Phil Christofanelli's House Rules Committee earlier today. Many folks are automatically putting all of the Democrats in the yes column for the bill, but they probably shouldn't take those votes for granted. Although Democrats agree with the gas tax increase, they get skeptical when it can be used as an excuse for taxes to be decreased elsewhere. Without most Democratic votes, the path to 82 gets tight.

— As of right now, expect Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer's COVID liability bill to make it out of the House Rules-Legislative Oversight Committee next week. COVID liability legislation has been a priority for Gov. Mike Parson since last year, and he kicked this session off by saying he wanted a clean bill on his desk immediately.

— Jamie Robinette is the new executive director of the House Suburban Caucus.

"Jamie will take our operation to the next level as we craft legislative initiatives that will address the important issues facing our suburban communities. She has the relevant personal experience with suburban issues and is uniquely suited to lead our policy teams as we work to make life easier for hard-working American families," Congresswoman Ann Wagner said about the hire.

— Point of order: There was an objection from the education reform folks over our assertion yesterday that they spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on behalf of SD 25 candidate Eddy Justice against now-Sen. Jason Bean in last summer's primary. However, they didn't know who was behind the spending. Kind of the entire issue with dark money all in one paragraph.

— The furor came and went pretty quickly over the indictment of David Barklage. Most folks feel that if this is all that comes from this unusual tax case then he will be back to being a major player in Republican circles in time for the next election cycle.

Springfield land bank bill makes progress in both chambers

Language allowing Springfield to establish a land bank trust to manage property is making its way through the legislature as session draws to a close.

HB 563, sponsored by Rep. Bill Owen, would establish a land bank in Springfield for the management, sale, and transfer of real estate. The bill passed through a Senate committee this week and awaits further action in the upper chamber. Owen stressed that the program would extend beyond the concept of a conventional bank, instead creating an agency to manage local land.

Senate pauses insurance, tax credit bills for further review

The Missouri Senate sent a pair of amended House bills to the Governmental Accountability and Fiscal Oversight Committee Thursday afternoon.

Prior to passing a controversial education bill to the governor's desk, the upper chamber tabled legislation for the time being after adding amendments on the floor. From insurance reform to fuel tax credits, here's a rundown of Thursday's pending legislation.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

— The governor made Cabinet changes today, replacing directors at five agencies as early as today. Among the changes:

- Robert Knodell as acting director of the Department of Social Services;Jennifer Tidball will serve as its COO.
- Maggie Kost as acting director of the Department of Economic Development;Rob Dixon previously announced he'd be joining Ameren as its director of community and economic development later this month.
- Valerie Huhn as acting director of the Department of Mental Health.Mark Stringer will retire at the end of the month.
- Joseph Plaggenberg as acting director of the Department of Revenue.Ken Zellers is taking over as acting director of the Office of Administration today.

Sarah Steelman is one of the most successful OA commissioners since the position was created. She holds her own and even stands out among her predecessors such as Mike Keathley and Doug Nelson. She did a job on par with anyone amid an intense shakeup with a governor's resignation to a pandemic. Steelman was a steady hand of professionalism. She didn't make everybody happy, but anyone who would would probably be in jail. She protected governors and tax dollars as well as anyone in the history of that job. As it reads, the No. 1 thing I've heard today is "God bless, Ken Zellers" because you want to be the person who follows someone who failed at the job. Steelman's high heels will be very hard to fill.

— Marty Lyons has been elected president and CEO of Ameren Corporation and a member of the board of directors effective Jan. 1, 2022. Additionally, Warner Baxter will move to be executive chairman of Ameren at the first of the year — The Jefferson City Council unanimously passed a bill of support for an expansion of the Jefferson City National Cemetery last week. It's up to the U.S. Veterans Administration to accept more than two acres from East Miller Park for the expansion.

Rep. Dave Griffith has joined the push for the expansion alongside the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Jefferson City Veterans Council, and the national American Legion. Griffith said allowing veterans to be buried in a veterans cemetery near their homes was "an obligation the VA should uphold."

— SSM Health in St. Louis increased its minimum wage to $15 per hour throughout its four-state system on Sunday. The increase is expected to impact about 3,000 employees (about 7 percent) in Missouri, Illinois, Oklahoma, and Wisconsin.

"Our Mission and Values call us to care for the health and well-being of all those we serve. As a leading employer in each of our communities, our ongoing commitment is to foster a diverse, inclusive and equitable workplace – which includes providing fair and socially just wages and benefits for our team members, along with robust programs and resources designed to promote wellness," said Laura S. Kaiser, FACHE, president and CEO of SSM Health.

— Completion of the Bicentennial Bridge is facing a delay while a safety feature is built to cover a section of the bridge over the railroad tracks. A ribbon-cutting ceremony had been planned to officially open the bridge to the public later this month, but Jefferson City Mayor Carrie Tergin said it was now expected to take place in late November or early December.

The bridge will provide a pedestrian and bike path from the Capitol to Adrian's Island, an area along the Missouri River.

governor announced Tuesday.

Knodell, Parson's deputy chief of staff, stood in as acting director for the Department of Health and Senior Services earlier this year and led the state's COVID-19 vaccination efforts.

In an interview with The Missouri Times Tuesday, Knodell said he wants to "empower" the DSS staff and work with the General Assembly, department, and external stakeholders to care for Missouri's most vulnerable population.

Rocheport Bridge construction kicks off with groundbreaking ceremony

Construction on the new Rocheport Bridge on I-70 is set to begin following a groundbreaking ceremony Tuesday.

The bridge replacement has been a central focus of the General Assembly and the Parson administration, particularly in recent years. Built in 1960, the two-lane "lynchpin of America" bridge carries about 12.5 million vehicles per year as it connects Boone and Cooper counties in mid-Missouri.

And with 40 percent of those commercial vehicles, the bridge is a "critical freight bottleneck" for the rest of the nation, said Missouri Department of Transportation (MoDOT) Director Patrick McKenna.

Schmitt campaign, PAC raise $4M+ since start of campaign

Attorney General Eric Schmitt brought in more than $646,000 in the third quarter, raising $2 million since the start of his U.S. Senate candidacy, his campaign said.

Schmitt's campaign has nearly $1.2 million cash on hand, according to the figures provided. A total of 6,493 people have donated to the campaign since it began. He has received donations from people in every county in the state, according to his campaign.

In addition, the super PAC supporting Schmitt, Save Missouri Values PAC, brought in $832,000 in the third quarter. In total, the PAC has raised $2.36 million.

Marty Lyons named Ameren CEO, Warner Baxter to become executive chairman

Ameren Corporation will see new leadership in 2022, with Marty Lyons taking over as president and CEO for Warner Baxter who will transition to executive chairman of its board of directors.

Lyons, who has served as president and CEO of Ameren Missouri since 2019, has held several roles in the company since joining in 2001. Lyons will work closely under Baxter in his new position and assist with the corporation's transition to clean power. He will also be a member of the Ameren Board of Directors.

Both men will assume their new roles on Jan. 1, 2022.

Schmitt encourages local governments to sign on to $500M opioid settlement

Attorney General Eric Schmitt is urging communities to sign on to a settlement with opioid manufacturers, warning millions of dollars for opioid abatement and treatment programs are on the line.

In August, Schmitt agreed to settlement terms from Johnson & Johnson and other distributors including McKesson, AmerisourceBergen, and Cardinal Health that could funnel more than $500 million into an opioid abatement and treatment fund overseen by the Mental Health, Social Services, Health and Senior Services, and Public Safety departments.

Martha Stevens forgoes House re-election bid

Rep. Martha Stevens will not seek re-election in 2022, she announced Monday, leaving the HD 46 seat at the end of her third term next year.

CD 04 TIP SHEET

We continue our tipsheet series by taking a closer look at Missouri's 4th congressional district, currently represented by Republican Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler.

Congresswoman VICKY HARTZLER

If Vicky Hartzler decides to jump into the U.S. Senate race, it's because she feels the Lord has led her to run for U.S. Senate, and now is the time. If she wanted, she could stay and continue to serve the 4th district for as long as she desired. You've never heard of him, but John Webb lost to her so many times that he decided to give up and lose a state House seat instead.

Hartzler has built a political career on her faith, which is not just talk. Back in 2018 when former Gov. Eric Greitens was first embarrassing the state, most members of Congress and statewide officials found ways to squirm around and speak out of both sides of their mouth. They talked vaguely about values while not wanting to say anything that might cause the Greitens social media bots to descend on them. Not Congresswoman Hartzler. A lot of politicians talk about faith and values to get votes and then stop pretending they're righteous once no one is looking. Hartzler is an honest-to-goodness Christian. It's real, and Missourians know it is.

She's also a rural Missourian to her core and understands the needs of her district well. She was the chief architect of provisions signed into law during the Trump administration that helped expand private investment in rural broadband. Her rural roots run deep on the organizational side, too. She went from being relatively unknown to winning her race against an incumbent because she and her husband built a massive network of support through the Farm Bureau, and she still has those relationships.

If Hartzler ran, she'd be a force to contend with, and would make faith-based voters have to work harder to justify their vote for someone like Eric Greitens.

Bottom Line: She seems like she is running, and if she does, she is unlikely to take many votes from Greitens.

X-Factor: Do Christian voters stick with the actual values they profess?

If Hartzler decided to get in the Senate race, the primary to replace her would take off pretty quickly. This race starts with the two Calebs — Jones and Rowden. Other candidates may get in the race, but expect these two to draw the most attention in a primary fight.

Senator CALEB ROWDEN

It seems incredibly likely that the Senate Majority Floor Leader would enter the race to represent the 4th district if Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler declared. Caleb Rowden ran a great re-election campaign for his state Senate seat against Judy Baker in 2020 and edged her out with a narrow 3-point win. He hit the pavement, knocked doors, and raised almost $1 million. He has a history of being the underdog. He defeated two former senators — one in the primary and one in the general — in his first House race. He was also the underdog in his state Senate campaign against former Rep. Stephen Webber. In short, Rowden is a winner.

He's generally chosen to stay away from the culture wars over the last five years which has helped him in liberal centers like Columbia to win swing seats some Republicans couldn't compete in. However, his history as a contemporary Christian singer and background in church work will give him plenty of credibility with folks who have been sending Hartzler to Congress for a decade.

No doubt that it would be a bit of a relief for the Floor Leader to leave the Senate where his job has become a nearly impossible balancing act. Being in a supermajority is fun until you start getting consistently filibustered by members of your own party.

Bottom Line: If Hartzler's in, Rowden's in. He can raise money and run a hell of a campaign.

X-Factor: He will draw the district. Where will he think he is the strongest?

Former State Representative CALEB JONES

Caleb Jones has the largest rolodex in Missouri politics by like a factor of five. For you readers like Conner under 30, a rolodex is like your phone book app cut up into little pieces of paper; for you readers like Scott, a phone book app is like a rolodex, but on your cell phone. He has national connections from Rudy Guiliani to Marco Rubio and knows by name more Missourians than anyone else in this state, bar none. Also, he has the incredible balance of having the Greitens administration on his resume and being beloved by most of the people he has worked with in Jefferson City. Whatever you may think of Greitens, he has some deep name ID among many Republican primary voters.

He has successfully led the Missouri Electric Co-ops for two years now, which is probably the most influential lobby in outstate Missourah, and spent a lot of time successfully navigating Missouri and Washington politics before then. With the co-ops behind him, Jones could easily appeal to the 4th district. Can you imagine a county fair that Caleb Jones wouldn't dominate?

But having a successful career means taking a significant paycut in order to run. However, it's possible the Co-ops would give him a leave of absence to run in order to have one of their own in Congress. Maybe it would convince them to finally move those Co-op annual meetings to the end of July instead of the beginning of August to let the politicians sponsor them.

But Jones knows better than most that seats in Congress don't open up but a couple times in a career, and he would be an excellent congressman. For a state losing Senator Roy Blunt, Missouri needs someone like a Caleb Jones going to Washington to replace that care and interest in bringing home investment in the state.

Bottom Line: You have to assume he and Sen. Caleb Rowden work something out or this will be one of the most contentious primaries in state history.

X-Factor: This is Caleb Jones we are talking about. You probably won't know what he is going to do until you get a text five minutes before he announces.

Sen. DENNY HOSKINS

Sen. Denny Hoskins is really sitting in a pretty great spot for this opportunity. He has really come into his own in his second term in the Senate. He has three years left in the upper chamber so he can raise a good deal of money for his run and has a solid voting record and lots of the right friends in the right places to cash in chips if he chose to run.

Where Hoskins is concerned, this is where this race gets interesting from a redistricting perspective.

Cass County is somewhere where Caleb Jones' brother Clayton is well known but is kinda up for grabs without a favorite son candidate. The more of Hoskins' Senate district that is drawn into the 4th — and if there is no Cass County candidate in the race — the more viable his prospects are.

Bottom Line: His brand as a CPA and his Warrensburg base make him a top contender — especially if two Boone County residents are in the race.

X-Factor: What if there is only one Boone Countian and a Cass Countian jumps in?

Sen. RICK BRATTIN

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

He has a great story: joined the Marines after 9/11, which is a great look. He has some connections through former Sen. Lembke that could put him in a good position. Cass County will be crucial to the race, and the more Central Missourians that get in, the better the odds for a Cass County candidate.

Bottom Line: Seeing as he is in the middle of his Senate term, you have to think he and Sen. Hoskins get together and decide on one candidate from the west.

X-Factor: What if his home in northern Cass County is drawn into the 5th in an effort to make Missouri a 7-1 Republican delegation?

State Rep. BILL HARDWICK

Bill Hardwick is a rising star for the Republican Party. He is a veteran and a former prosecutor. Very popular among his colleagues and has been impressing nearly everyone he meets early in his House career. Depending on how the 4th is drawn and how many people get in the race, he may have a few folks come calling.

Bottom Line: It may just be too early in the career of this potential star to push all his chips in on a congressional run.

X-Factor: Does Fort Leonard Wood get its wish and put Pulaski County in the 8th?

Missouri Farm Bureau President Garret Hawkins

The leader of rural Missouri is a talent and would be a top shelf contender for any political office he chose. It seems like he is probably content to stay in the role he only recently came to, but this won't be the last time he is mentioned as a top tier contender for a political office. He is too young, too talented, and has too impressive of a resume not to be talked about.

State Rep. Kurtis Gregory

A successful farmer, solid businessman, played football at Mizzou, great rolodex of potential donors; the only reason he isn't a top contender is that Saline County is in the 5th district for now. However, he might be impressive enough to keep it there to keep him out of a race.

State Rep. Dan Houx

Dan Houx is one of the most impressive people currently serving in state government. He has signed both sides of a paycheck and would impress any group of businessmen he met. However, his clout is only growing in the House, and he is the heir apparent to Senator Hoskins' Senate seat.

Former Boone County Clerk Taylor Burkes

Taylor Burkes was appointed Boone County Clerk and has made waves about running for Congress with claims that he can put together $100,000 quickly. He is the exact type of candidate that Senator Hoskins or Brattin need to run to divide up that central Missouri vote.

Vicky Hartzler on a potential Senate race and how she's forged her political path thus far Vicky Hartzler knew as a child she would go into public service. She remembers praying at 9 years old, asking God how she could make a difference, when "state representative" popped into her head.

Hartzler represented Cass and Johnson counties in the Missouri Legislature for six years before eventually serving the 4th congressional district in Washington, D.C. But now, Hartzler has found herself praying about her future again, whether she's meant to continue her political career in the U.S. Senate.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“Definitely we are looking very seriously at it,” Hartzler said about her rumored interest in replacing outgoing Senator Roy Blunt. “We’re very excited about the opportunities to bring compassionate, effective, strong leadership perhaps to more Missourians.”

Senate approves Graves’ appointment to UM Board despite bipartisan pushback

After a bipartisan filibuster that spilled into the early morning hours, the Missouri Senate approved the appointment of Todd Graves to the University of Missouri (UM) System Board of Curators.

The Senate considered the attorney and former head of the Missouri Republican Party for nearly eight hours beginning Tuesday evening, with Democrats and Republicans trading shifts holding the floor before the appointment was approved 19-13.

Most Missouri small businesses expect to remain open despite coronavirus impact, new report says

A majority of small business owners in Missouri are confident they will remain open despite the COVID-19 pandemic, according to a new survey.

Facebook surveyed more than 35,000 small business owners around the world, including 511 in Missouri, for its Global State of Small Businesses Report in February. The report, which included state-level data for the first time, examined the impact of the pandemic on small businesses, how they adjusted, and what business owners expect in the future.

Senate passes statewide PDMP legislation

Missouri moved one step closer to no longer being the only state without a prescription drug monitoring program (PDMP) Tuesday afternoon.

The Missouri Senate passed Sen. Holly Rehder’s SB 63 which establishes the Joint Oversight Task Force of Prescription Drug Monitoring within the Office of Administration, creating a statewide PDMP. The task force would work with a vendor after a competitive bid to collect and maintain patient data — which would be deleted after three years.

Biden taps Robin Carnahan to head GSA

Former Missouri Secretary of State Robin Carnahan is President Joe Biden’s pick for administrator of the General Services Administration (GSA).

“I’ve spent my career working to improve the delivery of government services to the public,” Carnahan said on social media. “GSA plays a critical role in the government’s ability to effectively deliver services, and I am honored to be nominated by [President Biden] to lead this important agency at this important moment.”

David Tyson Smith wins special House race in Columbia

David Tyson Smith, an attorney, will replace former Rep. Kip Kendrick as the representative for HD 45 in Columbia, becoming the first Black representative to serve a district outside of Kansas City or St. Louis in the House.

“Winning this election is not the end. It is only the beginning. I am dedicated to getting up every day to make sure that every voter’s rights are protected and that everyone has fair and equitable access to the ballot,” Smith said in a statement. “I want this victory to inspire renewed engagement in the political process. Together, we have a lot of work to do, but it’s clear that we can believe again.”

In his first few months serving in the statehouse, Rep. Chad Perkins has learned the Capitol never sleeps.

Ashcroft v. Ashcroft: Father knows best — protect the initiative process

By: Carl Bearden

Members of the Missouri General Assembly have sponsored at least 19 bills and joint resolutions that deal with suppressing Missouri citizens’ access to their constitutionally reserved power to use the initiative petition to redress their grievances against their government. These include HJR 20 et al, SJR 2, HB 333, SB 149, and others. The HJRs and SJR are the most egregious attacks on the people’s power.

CD 07 TIP SHEET

Another politician that's floated his name for U.S. Senate is Congressman Billy Long. We've said before that we're pretty sure no one loves serving his district in Washington more than Long. Like many other Republican congressmen, he could continue to get re-elected to the 7th district for the rest of his career. There are two factors that make it seem like this may be the time for him to run, though: his 2010 term limit pledge and his upcoming fundraiser at Mar-a-Lago.

The biggest ruse in Republican politics is the term limits pledge. If you believe that Billy Long is going to hold himself to a term limits pledge he took 12 years ago, I've got some beach front property in Butler County to sell you. But, the pledge could be a good reason for him to run instead for Senate — if he truly believes he can win a primary.

But the real motivating factor for Long's run would be the coveted endorsement from President Donald Trump. If he could be the one to secure that, he's a shoo-in for the nomination. He's got a good case to make: He was one of Trump's earliest and most ardent supporters. Their personalities just go well together.

But there are plenty of people vying for that same endorsement, and it's unclear whether Trump will even get involved in the primary.

The odds are long that Long gets in, however the odds may be cooling on Jason Smith running, and Long would be on the depth chart of Missouri members of Congress who Trump likes. He's a solid No. 2 behind Jason Smith so it could be his time to run. We've seen him at quite a few Lincoln Days dinners' he's never been to before.

If Long decides to get in, here is a look at who may run to replace him.

Former House Speaker ELIJAH HAAHR

Elijah Haahr would almost certainly consider a run if Long were to enter the fray. He's known in the district, has the 2019 abortion bill on his resume, and served as the youngest Speaker of the House in Missouri's history. He could definitely raise the money. Haahr brought in almost $400,000 in his 2018 race for the state House. He's good on the campaign trail and an effective and talented legislator. The chance to run for Congress only comes once or twice in a lifetime. Haahr may decide to seize the moment.

Bottom Line: Haahr would be a serious contender for the seat. If Long is in, it's likely that Haahr takes a crack at it.

X-Factor: This is the one time there really is no X-Factor. He has every reason to run if the seat's open, and he probably will. Why would a man who got his first week of freedom from politics fly down to Georgia to work a special election?

State Senator LINCOLN HOUGH

Lincoln Hough is a powerful and effective legislator in the state Senate and has a dogged determinism that gets things done. He has the look and can raise the money from Springfield, and there is no one in Jefferson City right now who is owed more favors than Lincoln Hough. He's the Caleb Jones since Caleb Jones left the legislature. Every lobbyist in the building has spent the entire interim for the past two years talking him up to members of their association. Plus, he's always been a terrific industry fundraiser.

He's hurt by the fact that most of his elections have been generals and not primaries, but his determinism was shown this year when he proposed the largest tax cut in Missouri's history. He's also been the leading effective voice in taking on the director of Labor and whatever weirdo plot that department has to beat people out of their unemployment money.

Bottom line: Lincoln Hough is the most effective state senator in the chamber right now, and he truly enjoys being there — six years in the House will make you enjoy the Senate. Will he want to give up something he enjoys and is very good at to run to Washington with two young children?

X-Factor: Has he been too effective as a state senator to win a Republican primary? Primary voters aren't big on effective governance. Rather, they just enjoy whoever is loudest on Twitter. Keep in mind, Jack Goodman came in second last time.

State Treasurer SCOTT FITZPATRICK

One word: talent. Scott Fitzpatrick has already decided he might do something different and is openly touting a state auditor run. If he's moving on from state treasurer, a congressional run would definitely be easier to explain to the folks who supported him for that role. He would be a good candidate, would be able to recruit national resources to the state, and would be getting to Congress young enough to follow the path of Jason Smith and potentially become the U.S. House Budget chair himself. It would be more exciting to raise money for Congress than for state auditor, and the connections he makes during the cycle could help him out quite a lot in the future since they're all sure to be impressed by him.

Bottom line: From the outside looking in, if he wants to run for office in 2022, Congress makes more sense than auditor.

X-Factor: If Mike Moon is in his backyard pulling votes, it may be harder for him to find the support. As always, geography is the name of the game.

State Senator ERIC BURLISON

Eric Burlison will win the race to the farthest right but still has solid connections to the establishment Republicans in southwest Missouri. He is almost a model congressional candidate. Some folks almost discount him as exclusively a right winger, but he won a lot of praise for his work as Professional Registration chair in the House.

It will be interesting to see if he decides to take the jump — especially because his caucus will make a serious run at leadership, especially if Caleb Rowden runs for Congress himself. Burlison could be in a good position for a leadership role. It's hard to imagine someone so meant to run for Congress not jumping in if the seats open, though.

Bottom line: If the seats open, Eric Burlison should be a candidate for it. There are no two better senators that fit the model of a Republican primary winner than Bob Onder and Eric Burlison

X-Factor: He's put a lot of his eggs in the basket of a few fundraisers. If they don't support him this time, does he wait for a race where they will?

State Senator MIKE MOON

Mike Moon is the only eligible state senator who is mid-cycle, allowing him to run for the congressional seat without having to give up his current position. Everyone else would have to pack up their things in the state Senate in order to run. He has the conservative bona-fides that would play well in a Republican primary and won't hesitate to create a video or two showing how much he loves being a farmer.

Moon is a really good campaigner. What you don't know until you meet him is that he's a gentleman and a kind man. When you meet him on the stump, he is a very good politician strictly because he's just a good guy.

Bottom line: What would be the possible downside to running? He's right wing, friendly, and can keep his Senate seat.

State Senator BILL WHITE

Bill White isn't guaranteed to run for the seat, but he's got a good case for it. He's got the personal wealth to get himself a significant head-start on fundraising and could easily talk to the farmers in his district to get together the rest of the funds needed. If enough Springfield candidates get in and divide up that vote, a candidate like White may just be able to get enough Joplin votes to topple them all without having to raise more than half a million dollars. It would have to look very appealing to the former Marine. State Sen. Gary Nodler took on similar odds when he ran in 2010.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Bottom Line: Bill White takes his job seriously. He is easily one of if not the most thoughtful senators in the chamber and seems to genuinely enjoy it.

X-Factor: How many candidates from Springfield get in will be a determining factor for any candidate.

State Representative CODY SMITH

Cody Smith is a competent Budget chair and is well thought of in the General Assembly. If he wanted to run, he would have to give up his last two years in the House and sacrifice a potential underdog run for the speakership. It will be a tough decision: He would be leaving the House Budget chairmanship, and he is one of the rare people who would have served longer as Budget chair than not in his term-limited career. All signs point to that being a job he enjoys. Nothing is exciting the sixth time you do it as the first, though, so that could change. He has the look to run, and he's young enough that he could build seniority over time. As Budget chair, a lot of lobbying groups are writing him checks and will continue to do so. And let's not forget that Jana Smith has the best Twitter account of any Missouri politician's spouse.

Bottom line: Are Jasper County's 12,000 Republican primary voters enough to overcome the 31,000 Greene County votes that are sure to be split among a bunch of hopefuls? Cody Smith may decide to finish up his time in the House instead of wading in.

X-Factor: Some have mentioned him as a potential candidate for Speaker. He could conceivably make an underdog run for the position over the summer, and if it doesn't work out, decide to jump in in the fall.

CD 08 TIP SHEET

We continue our tipsheet series by looking at who might run to replace Congressman Jason Smith if he decided to get into the U.S. Senate race. Redistricting will have a lot to say about who takes on this seat.

The 8th district was the primary hangup in redistricting last time. With more than half of the Republican delegation considering running for U.S. Senate, it could be one of many key districts this time around. Congresswoman Ann Wagner has made no secret she would be glad to take Congressman Blaine Luetkemeyer and Smith's Jefferson County voters which would likely push the 8th father west. You won't have to ask Pulaski County twice to be in the 8th, especially if Fort Leonard Wood could be represented by the House Budget chairman.

However, there is a contingent that wants all of Jefferson County in the 8th. Now they might not like what they get because while Jefferson County to JeffCo folks is Jefferson County, to the rest of the state it's just St. Louis South. You can imagine asking a Madison County Republican to vote for a St. Louis congressman.

The most important factor here will be what each candidate can raise after they announce. None of the fundraising they've done for their state offices will matter. Everyone is starting at $0 in their federal accounts, and it's unlikely anyone will file a federal committee until Smith announces. Who can get $200,000 and jump start their campaign the quickest?

Former House Speaker TODD RICHARDSON

The most honorable man to ever hold the gavel as Speaker of the House, Todd Richardson sought the seat the last time it opened, and many will speculate that he will again.

He built up a lot of political goodwill in the state while serving in the lower chamber, becoming pretty much everyone's favorite Speaker. You'd be hard-pressed to find someone who served with Richardson who has anything bad to say about him.

After he left the House, Richardson successfully steered MO HealthNet, the state's Medicaid system. Recently, though, he's taken a leave of absence so he can take a break from making the drive from Poplar Bluff to Jefferson City all the time.

Bottom line: Does he want to do it? He would be giving up a great job, and keep in mind, he could have been state auditor if he just filed and could have been attorney general if he would have just accepted it. He doesn't think like everyone else and may just sit this out too.

X-Factor: If he returns from his break and realizes he wants it.

State Senator JUSTIN BROWN

Sen. Justin Brown has perhaps the best thing going for him you can have in a rural Missouri primary: geography. The questions you'll get asked about a candidate in southeast Missouri isn't how they voted on an issue — everyone is pro-life and pro-gun — but where are you from and where is your kin from?

If you take the areas in the district that are likely to vote for a Rolla farmer over anyone else, which would probably be something like Phelps, Dent, Reynolds, Shannon, Oregon, Texas, Wright, Douglas, Ozark, Howell, and Crawford in 2018, they made up about 35 percent of the primary vote.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

If Sen. Karla Eslinger or anyone else from the western side of the district stays out, he could have a perfect storm — especially if the farther west the district creeps in redistricting.

He is a farmer, which will work great in the district, with a great look and is someone with very few enemies. He does, however, have to choose whether to run for Congress and give up his seat as he is up for re-election to his Senate seat this cycle. If he runs as the only candidate from the west, he is a top contender and maybe the favorite.

Bottom line: If redistricting keeps the district relatively the same and no one like Sen. Karla Eslinger runs from the west, it could be too good of an opportunity to pass up.

X-Factor: Does redistricting really take the 8th into St. Louis as Speaker Rob Vescovo has mentioned — which would take away some of his western advantage, and hell maybe even Phelps itself out of the 8th?

State Senator HOLLY REHDER

Sen. Holly Rehder is all but guaranteed to run if Smith gets into the Senate race. She is probably the best all-around politician in the field and just recently won a tough state Senate race where she picked up votes outside of her geographical base.

She has a solid voting record, has shown the ability to raise money, and has a tremendous story. It's an off year for her, so she could run and still keep her state Senate seat if she loses. She will have a big advantage in that if Smith announces for Senate she will just be in and not have to dither.

Her state Senate district took up around 23 percent of the existing 8th district primary vote in 2018. However, she has Cape Girardeau County in her state Senate district which is 11 percent of the 8th district vote by itself. Can she convince Cape County Republicans that she is one of them? If she can then she is a top contender and has her own claim to the favorite in the race.

She also has a secret weapon in her husband, Ray, who can raise a hell of a lot of money for the campaign and knows everyone in the area. He's serving as chair of the 8th, and his connections in Southeast Missouri run deep. Expect Rehder to get in early and draw a lot of support.

Bottom line: If Smith is in, Rehder is in. Expect an announcement from her quickly after we get one from Smith.

X-Factor: She convinced more than 40 percent of Cape Countians to vote for her over a Cape County native — an amazing, outstanding, and remarkable number. If she convinces them that they are voting for one of their own for Congress and they don't run anyone else, then she is the one to beat.

State Senator JASON BEAN

Sen. Jason Bean is someone who is in mid-term and has every incentive to get into this race — and the more crowded the field the better his chances are.

His family is deeply rooted in Southeast Missouri Republican politics. His brother, Barry, has connections all around the district from his work with Farm Bureau, and Bean could stroke the check that vaults him into the top contender bracket.

His Senate district is now totally ruby red Republican primary voters and made up around 21 percent of the primary vote in 2018. However, he has shown an ability to connect with folks outside of this Bootheel farming base. For instance, his webbed feet got 52 percent of the vote in the hills of Shannon County against three candidates from the hills in Butler County.

Like everyone in this race, his odds shift with redistricting and who all runs. First, it helps his campaign if Todd Richardson doesn't run. Ideally, if Sen. Holly Rehder didn't run, that would help him but she is likely in regardless. After that, the more the merrier for the tallest man in the field, and every candidate that gets in be them from West Plains, Cape or Farmington increases his odds.

Bottom line: There's little downside for Bean if he decided to run, but his odds depend on who files and what the district looks like.

X Factor: He is on track to be Senate President Pro Tem — would a congressional race loss affect that?

Others who haven't been mentioned as much but would be serious contenders:

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Former Cape Girardeau Mayor JAY KNUDTSON
Jay Knudtson is the former mayor of Cape Girardeau. He has long talked about running for something higher, and this might be it. He would need a lot of candidates to be in for his odds to peak, and his candidacy would be harmful to Sen. Holly Rehder. But the last time the 8th was an open seat was before he was born.

Sen. KARLA ESLINGER
Sen. Karla Eslinger is just an outstanding senator. She hasn't expressed an interest in running, but in a crowded field, her part of the district has lots of votes.

Rep. HANNAH KELLY
Rep. Hannah Kelly has her path to the Senate crowded by Sen. Karla Eslinger and could make a run for Congress herself.

Rep. TRAVIS SMITH
Rep. Travis Smith is a newcomer to the Missouri Legislature in his first term in the House, but he's someone who is well-liked in the community and could self-fund a bid for Congress if he wanted to. More than likely, though, he's biding his time. He for sure wants to run one day but will more than likely spend some time cutting his teeth in the statehouse before he jumps onto the national stage.

Attorney DERRICK GOOD
Derrick Good has been building support and making phone calls. He could get edged out by redistricting — his house is on the very edge of the southside — and redistricting could expand northeast, into Jefferson County. Not a front runner out of the gate but don't sleep on a JeffCo candidate jumping into the 8th as it exists now, and more likely so if the district moves north.

Former State Sen. KEVIN ENGLER
He hasn't mentioned running, but Kevin Engler would be my personal pick to make the race so much more fun, and the debate so much more meaningful.

Kunce raises nearly $300K in first quarter

Democrat Lucas Kunce raised nearly $300,000 in the three weeks since he announced his bid for U.S. Senate, his campaign said Monday.

Kunce's camp said it raised more than $280,000 before the April 1 Federal Election Commission (FEC) quarterly deadline with most contributions (95 percent) less than $250. He has yet to hold an in-person event.

"My campaign isn't accepting a single cent of corporate PAC money, so I'm proud and grateful we've already been able to count on such strong support in the weeks since we've joined this race," Kunce said. "Right now, we're putting those resources into building the powerful and unprecedented grassroots movement we'll need to take back this U.S. Senate seat for everyday Missourians."

OPINION

Retroactively stopping the state's largest energy infrastructure project would cost Missouri taxpayers greatly

By: Bill White

For the better part of the last century, Missouri law has been very consistent about what needs to happen for a large-scale energy infrastructure project to get approved in the Show-Me State. It's a grueling process through the Missouri Public Service Commission (PSC), but it's fair. Unfortunately, some in Jefferson City seem to believe that lawmakers should insert themselves in this process in order to pick winners and losers, an action that would be abhorrent to conservatives like me.

OTHER STORIES

Eric Burlison jumps into CD 7 race

Sen. Eric Burlison has launched his campaign for Congressman Billy Long's seat — the second conservative state senator to do so this week.

Burlison represents SD 20, which encompasses Christian County as well as part of Greene County, in the Senate. He leads the Small Business and Industry Committee and serves as vice-chairman of the Professional Registration Committee. Burlison, who has served in the General Assembly since 2009, is a member of the Senate Conservative Caucus.

"I am proud to say I have a solid record safeguarding Missouri from radical socialism and championing conservative and America First values in our state," Burlison said. "As the socialist Democrats in Washington continue to unleash wave after wave of woke, socialist policies on our country, I am now ready to take the fight to Congress to take back America."

Hartzler endorsed by Penny Nance of Concerned Women for America

Penny Young Nance, president and CEO of Concerned Women for America (CWA) has backed Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler in her bid for U.S. Senate.

Nance, who was a member of former President Donald Trump's Life Advisory Council, called Hartzler a "courageous warrior who fights for Missouri families." The pair have become both friends and political allies over the years since Hartzler first ran for Congress, Nance said.

Parson awards 2020 Missouri Public Safety Medals

Gov. Mike Parson and the Department of Public Safety (DPS) awarded first responders and civilians public safety awards for their heroic actions in 2020.

Awards were handed out to 15 first responders and seven civilians during Wednesday morning's ceremony. Parson applauded the recipients for their willingness to help their fellow Missourians despite the danger they found themselves in.

Donald Kauerauf sworn in as Missouri's health director

Donald Kauerauf was sworn in as the new director of the Missouri Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS) Wednesday.

"We are excited to welcome Don to Missouri and look forward to the great work he is sure to accomplish in service to all Missourians," Gov. Mike Parson said. "Don is no stranger to state government and has more than 30 years of experience in public health and emergency management. It is obvious that he has a firm grasp on public health issues and the COVID-19 crisis, and we are confident in his ability to lead [DHSS]."

PSC investigating Spire STL Pipeline contingencies

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) ordered Spire Missouri to file contingency plans as the fate of the Spire STL Pipeline remains in flux.

The 65-mile interstate pipeline was approved by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), the PSC's federal counterpart, in 2018. However, three judges on a federal appellate court vacated its approval in June and remanded the issue following a legal challenge mounted by the Environmental Defense Fund (EDF). FERC has yet to take the next step on the case.

Lucas Kunce's switch on abortion raises question if there's still room for pro-life Democrats in Missouri
As he campaigns for U.S. Senate, Lucas Kunce, a Democrat, has touted his commitment to "reproductive freedom." But that wasn't always the case, especially when he ran for state representative in 2006.

Kunce unsuccessfully challenged Republican Mark Bruns for the Jefferson City House seat when he was 24 years old. According to news reports and surveys at the time, Kunce ran as a "pretty conservative Democrat" who was anti-abortion and opposed to taxpayer funds being used to promote or subsidize organizations that provided abortion services.

But in recent social media posts as he campaigns for Roy Blunt's Senate seat, the former U.S. Marine said "reproductive freedom is an important aspect that will be included" in his campaign's platform.

BUZZ

— Let's take a look this week at the dominos that could fall if one of the members of Congress actually files for office. There are six Republicans in the congressional delegation, and thus far, Congressmen Blaine Luetkemeyer and Sam Graves have not floated their names — leaving Congresswomen Ann Wagner and Vicky Hartzler as well as Congressmen Billy Long and Jason Smith considering joining Attorney General Eric Schmitt and former Gov. Eric Greitens as running with Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe still considering a bid.

Long enjoys being in Congress a great deal and is there for the rest of his life if he chooses. Hartzler has floated her name for Senate and governor a few times but has never moved much past floating. Smith is someone who could put together the team and the money to make a run and is the clear favorite of the Trump folks, but he is in line to be the House Budget chairman in a year and a half so he has a lot to give up. Wagner intended to run in 2018 when Josh Hawley was chosen by Washington folks to be the U.S. Senator and is a couple of slots away from being a chairman; that combined with her being the most independent thinker in the bunch makes her probably the most interesting to watch.

I'd reckon I'd rank them in terms of pulling the trigger as: 1. Wagner 2. Smith 3. Hartzler 4. Long.

So let's look at what might happen if they ran starting with Congressman Long.

If Long were to file, there would likely be a redo of 2010 when then-Congressman Roy Blunt ran for Senate with a gaggle of candidates.

You probably start with Sen. Lincoln Hough and former House Speaker Elijah Haahr.

Hough would be able to raise a good deal of money as he is still in office. He has put together what might be the most successful first two years of a Senate term in the term limits era. He has always raised money and would have a natural in with the cattle community and the Springfield business community. As the author of what could be the largest tax cut in state history, he has something for the activists to rally behind. However, he would have to give up his Senate seat to run.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Haahr has been making the rounds cultivating the types of contacts that could help put together the money needed for a run. He is young and has an impressive resume on abortion to tout.

Then you would look to Sen. Eric Burlison as someone who would start out with a great deal of grassroots support. He is the type who could see a national group come in with some money and — combined with his grassroots support — he would be a very formidable contender. He, too, would have to give up his Senate seat to run.

Former Sen. Jay Wasson would be a tremendous congressman, and if he chose to run, would probably have the backing of most of the high-profile southwest Missouri business leaders.

State Treasurer Scott Fitzpatrick has made his intentions to run for state auditor known but would have to at least be tempted to take a look at this. Just as with auditor, he is in the middle of his treasurer's term so he wouldn't have to give it up.

House Budget Chair Cody Smith would be the logical Joplin candidate and would be a serious candidate if he chose to run, and with Sen. Bill White now in Senate leadership, it probably makes some sense for him to run now.

If Smith doesn't run, then don't count out his vice-chair Rep. Dirk Deaton. He's a young guy who could be in Congress forever.

Dark horse candidate: They get Clif Smart to become a Republican and run. He would be amazing. Mizzou should pay his filing fee.

All speculation aside, I'd bet you a cold Bud Light against your Mother's beer that Billy Long is on the ballot for Congress in 2022.

— Ralls County Presiding Commissioner Democrat Wiley Hibbard is looking to challenge Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin next year. His message is he is going to run on is that the roads destroyed by O'Laughlin trucks should be paid for by gas taxes paid by O'Laughlin. He says that while SD 18 schools falter, O'Laughlin remains fixated on providing city charter schools tax breaks.

It's a fiery message, but then when it comes back to guns and abortion, it's a very safe Republican district. However, an elected official mounting a challenge might be for some interesting headlines even though he's likely to get trounced in the election.

— Senator Majority Floor Leader Caleb Rowden made sure to clear the Senate's plate before spring break so that the upper chamber could narrow its focus on a few key pieces of legislation that the majority wants to see pass through this year.

Education reform is at the top of that list, but it's still unclear what path O'Laughlin's omnibus bill has after the vote to reconsider passed.

Proponents, such as Rowden, still haven't had the necessary conversations with Republican senators whose votes are desperately needed since the Democratic Caucus is generally unified in its opposition to the legislation. Although there is always the smallest chance that Kansas City Democrats go on to support some type of education reform, the package as it stands isn't something they can bring home to their constituents. The pro-reformers are going to need every single Republican vote in order to see something pass, and there are a few Republicans who haven't seen any version of the bill that they care to approve. There's a difference between a substitute that can get 18 votes and one that can get folks to sit down on a filibuster — and it's unclear which version will be brought to the floor.

That hasn't stopped O'Laughlin from staying squarely focused on education. She's spent her spring break touring the state, talking with different institutions and communities about her bill and how it could help them, and has been very active on her Facebook in promoting education reform as a whole.

Meanwhile, the other focus of the Senate will be taxes. Sen. Bill Eigel's personal property tax bill got the nod to be reconsidered just before the Senate let out last week, Sen. Dave Schatz's gas tax passed the upper chamber, and Wayfair cleared both the House and the Senate before we left. It gets tricky here since there are groups opposed to Eigel's bill while fully supportive of the Wayfair and gas tax proposals. Take the Municipal League and firefighters, for example. Their fear is that decreased personal property taxes will lead to higher real property taxes or a reduction in essential services. But, the Municipal League wants to see things like Wayfair and the gas tax pass. Not only would cities see a portion of the gas tax, but they're also hopeful better roads and bridges could help strengthen their local economies.

Can the upper chamber find a way to negotiate all of these elements to deliver real tax reform for the people of Missouri? It's clear that Schatz is the right man for the job.

— Speaking of Schatz, we hope you'll join us on March 30 at 6 p.m. at the Millbottom to celebrate the President Pro Tem who is awarded The Missouri Times' 2020 Statesman of the Year!

What the new COVID relief package means for Missouri

The Biden administration won its first legislative victory last week, passing a $1.9 trillion COVID-19 relief package.

The act included a third wave of stimulus for taxpayers, in addition to creating and expanding a bevy of grants designed to offset the economic impact of the pandemic for individuals, businesses, departments, and communities. The plan narrowly passed both chambers before reaching President Joe Biden's desk last week.

Here's a look at how the American Rescue Plan Act will impact Missouri.

'Commemoration, education, and reconciliation': Lynne Jackson leads push to denounce Dred Scott decision

The Senate approved a resolution formally condemning the Missouri Supreme Court's Dred Scott decision last week, rejecting the verdict more than a century after it was handed down. Scott's great-great-granddaughter, Lynne Jackson, was the mind behind the effort.

Jackson, president and founder of the Dred Scott Heritage Foundation, said the path to the resolution began years earlier when she set out to recognize the legacy of her ancestors. The foundation raised $250,000 to commission and install the only statue of Scott that includes his wife, Harriet Robinson Scott. The statue was unveiled in 2012 outside the Old Courthouse in St. Louis.

PSC approves intervention in Empire transportation electrification case

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) approved an application to intervene in its consideration of a proposal from the Empire District Electric Company.

Empire requested approval of a five-year pilot term for a portfolio of transportation electrification programs meant to increase the use of electric technology and bolster the grid. Ameren Missouri applied to intervene in the PSC's consideration, stating the commission's decision in the case could affect similar programs in development at Ameren. The commission approved the intervention during Wednesday's agenda meeting, finding good cause for its participation.

CD 4

Republican Vicki Hartzler is running for U.S. Senate.
The 4th district is still the most interesting because there is a field of qualified candidates and an entire field of potential candidates who will reshape the race if they get in. Senate Floor Leader Caleb Rowden could jump in and he would become the favorite — with his holdback being that there already are two candidates from Boone County in the race.

The other senator who seems more likely than not to run is Sen. Rick Brattin. He would be an excellent congressional candidate who is in midterm and like Rowden, wouldn't have to give up his seat to run. I think both are more likely than not to enter the race, but each week that goes by without them leads you to think they might not.

Cass County Commissioner Ryan Johnson entered the race and withdrew, but he will be highly influential to whoever gets his support. I do think that he is likely to be at a Capitol someday; maybe he starts at the state Capitol.

Former Rep. Caleb Jones and current Sen. Denny Hoskins are another two who would reshape the race but seem closer to not running than the other two. Now onto the folks who have announced.

Kalena Bruce
Kalena Bruce is a cattle farmer who has a great deal of connections in the Missouri ag community and is the only candidate who not only has filed but is even rumored to run from the southern part of the district.

She has some video on stage with Trump that you will probably see in the campaign and has some ability to self-fund as she has already put $80,000 into the race. She will have to make a decision next quarter if she can raise more money or is she going to primarily self-fund. If none of the four mentioned above jump in, she will have a chance to consolidate her base in the ag community and the southern part of the district and be the frontrunner after filing closes.

Taylor Burks
Taylor Burks did what he needed to do: post a $100,000 quarter. He is a veteran who was previously appointed to be the Boone County clerk and has a story to tell. The question was: Would he have the resources to tell that story?

He would be the biggest beneficiary if Sen. Rowden doesn’t enter the race. If that is the case, and he can either continue raising or self-funding, then Burks will have a claim to being the frontrunner.

Rep. Sara Walsh
Rep. Sara Walsh posted nearly $40,000 this quarter which is pretty strong for someone who is more known for grassroots than fundraising prowess and having to deal with a personal tragedy during the third quarter.

It seems her campaign will either be won or lost depending on her ability to amass the largest number of conservative activists and try to hang competitive in the race long enough for an out-of-state group to boost her finances closer to August.

It's really to read much more into the quarter as she has been dealing with far bigger issues than a congressional race but should be commended for continuing forward and everyone can revisit her campaign later.

CD 7

Republican Billy Long is running for U.S. Senate.
This race is one where you could make a case for all of the major candidates, and it could come down to geography as it appears that they will have different geography and lanes to run in.

State Sen. Eric Burlison
Sen. Eric Burlison came out of the gate with a big fundraising haul and a couple of endorsements that could be key next summer.

He has a conservative pedigree and perhaps the strongest relationships with the Republican activists in southwest Missouri. He probably has to find a way to get separation from Sen. Mike Moon and isolate the race as himself vs. former Sen. Jay Wasson. At the start, he is a top contender.

Contributions this period: $147,536
Contributions this cycle: $147,536
Cash on hand: $143,862

State Sen. Mike Moon
I have written many times on this tipsheet not to underestimate the campaign skills of Sen. Mike Moon, and in his burst out of a first-quarter raising $100,000, he made me look smart again. Some have said he can only play spoiler for someone, but I think he has every chance to win. If the negatives start flying between Jay Wasson and Eric Burlison, then Sen. Moon, if he can continue to raise money, can fly right between them and into Congress.

Contributions this period: $103,847
Contributions this cycle: $103,847
Cash on hand: $96,865

Former State Sen. Jay Wasson
Sen. Jay Wasson is perhaps the most successful state senator since term limits. He will start the race as the clear fundraising favorite as no one has better relationships in the Springfield business community than Wasson.

If the other three candidates fight it out for the far-right activists, and Sen. Wasson establishes a lead in fundraising, he will be the favorite.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

He is in the mold of Senator Roy Blunt when he held the 7th congressional district for several terms before entering the Senate and has the real advantage of having the support of his friend, former Sen. Ron Richard. Can you imagine being the house in Joplin that tells Ron Richard he can't put up a Wasson sign?

Sam Alexander
He's a farmer and an emergency room physician in Springfield. He has significant potential to self-fund and is the only candidate in the race who has never held public office. He will compete for the right-wing vote and cast his net as not just conservative, but very conservative. He's a quiet but strong candidate who just may surprise a few folks.

CD 2

Republican Ann Wagner is seeking re-election.

Congresswoman Ann Wagner
Everyone was predicting that CD 2 was going to be decided by a razor-thin margin in 2020 with President Trump on the ballot and a very good campaigner in state Sen. Jill Schupp, the Democratic nominee. However, Congresswoman Ann Wagner ended up winning by a comfortable margin.

However, 2022 is not 2020. '22 is the mid-term of a less than overwhelming Biden presidency which should provide an advantage to Wagner. While there are some talented Democrats running, Jill Schupp was a big figure who from the start would outshine them. Lastly, 2022's CD 2 won't be the same CD 2 as 2020. It will be more Republican. Now, don't look for Missouri Republicans to be as clearly shamelessly crooked as Illinois Democrats, but CD 2 will be redder. With all those factors in mind, this is probably the last cycle CD 2 is even tracked as long as Congresswoman Wagner serves in it.

Contributions this cycle: $1,741,157
Cash on hand: $1,352,211
Debts: $0

State Rep. Trish Gunby
Rep. Trish Gunby fits the profile of the district pretty well, and she proved her ability on the campaign trail when she flipped a Republican state rep seat Democratic. She could start the race possibly expecting the same support as Sen. Schupp and try to build out. However, while she has raised her first $100,000, she has an opponent in the race who has raised six times that, and in the best-case scenario, she would start a general election campaign with no money.

Ben Samuels

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Ben Samuels is a businessman with family money who has previously worked for the mayor of Chicago. He has immense connections to wealth, but more importantly, he has been able to tap those connections to jump out to a huge fundraising lead.

Some Democrats hope he could be another Courtney VanOstran who only lost by 4 percent in 2018. It appeared that the lack of a record and being under the radar was a benefit and maybe a better matchup for Democrats than in 2020.

Contributions this cycle: $636,720

Ray Reed
Ray Reed is the youngest candidate in the field and is a former Nixon and Missouri Democratic Party staffer. He is trying to tap some of the college students in the area to get behind his efforts. The bottom line is that Reed is no different than anyone else in that he will have to raise money — and fast — to mount a serious campaign.

Reed is going to work a grassroots campaign and try to at least make a name for himself to run again in the future. Keep an eye on him. If 2022 isn't his year, he will likely have one soon.

Missouri's 'box in' testing strategy 'important example' of protecting vulnerable people during COVID-19, Birx says Missouri's "box in" testing strategy during COVID-19outbreaks received praise from Dr. Deborah Birx, the White House Coronavirus Task Force response coordinator, Tuesday.

"This 'box in' strategy that is being used here in Missouri I think really is an important example of how to protect vulnerable individuals. When you see what Missouri has done with the longterm care facilities, when you see what they've done with the VA care facilities, it's really an important, critical message," Birx told reporters from the Missouri Capitol.

The "box in" approach involves testing all staff and residents specifically in longterm and other congregate living facilities to keep the virus contained and prevent further spread. It focuses on contact tracing and quarantine as well.

The continuing drama of special session

— As it winds forward, there's some speculation in the House — as there has been since they took a firm stand on the special session legislation — that they may pass some bills out in the middle of next week and adjourn. There's also some speculation that the House won't fully adjourn but will tell the Senate "these are the bills and we're not coming back." There are some folks who believe this is setting the state up for a second special session (most people are looking at running concurrent to veto session) on COVID liability.

The interesting part of that will be if the Senate runs the Kim Gardner language with something Sen. Karla May cannot sit down on and a PQ is forced, that would almost certainly mean a COVID special session would be a nightmare. There's no way Democrats would not force the same during a COVID special session. However, you would hope during a COVID special session, there would be a meeting before the call, and at least Republican leadership would all be on the same page before it began. It's hard for anyone to imagine Gov. Mike Parson would force two PQs in two special sessions. It's also hard to see Sens. Caleb Rowden, Gina Walsh, and John Rizzo, who combined have made it a few years without a PQ, going back down that road again. However, there's a bad feeling in the Capitol about where these things are headed.

There's a hope that once Speaker Elijah Haahr is in the Capitol next week after he's had his full caucus together at Branson to discuss these issues he'll be able to sit down with Rowden and Dave Schatz and come up with something. The unfortunate part is: If you're Parson, the Senate had a crime bill teed up and ready to pass, and if the House would have stated its objections earlier, they probably would have gotten most of them remedied in the bill. But now, the House could make changes to SB 1 or pass a series of their own laws, and most likely the Senate could get some of them through and call victory. It really does have the feeling of snatching defeat from the jaws of victory if you assume the Speaker was ever committed to passing any part of a crime bill.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— Speaking of summer caucus, they had a very successful fundraising year for House Republicans in 2019 which I believe was ahead of their fundraising for the past two cycles. However, fundraising has slowed this summer probably due to COVID and other factors. It's generally during the caucus that they'd come back up to pace but absent a couple of large donors contributing, COVID changing the dynamics of some aspects of fundraising, and with a different leader making the phone calls, it's likely they won't be able to keep the pace of some previous cycles. The question will be how close to previous cycles' pace can they stay. A special environment would be created if President Trump's numbers continue to decline in the suburbs, and Democrats can in any way narrow the gap either by Republican fundraising declining, theirs going up, or a combination of the two. You could actually see Democrats poised to take advantage of some opportunities they didn't have in past cycles.

What may be even more interesting is a shift in St. Louis in the House. The House race battleground was Jefferson and South St. Louis counties. Now Jefferson isn't a battleground at all, and South St. Louis won't have some of the pickups West St. Louis does. It could be, before the election, there are tighter races in South St. Louis County than in West for Republicans.

— There's a different swagger among Missouri Democrats since they threw the socialist senator from Vermont off the bow of the ship, and for the first time in quite some time have a presidential candidate who can go to every county in Missouri and not hurt a Democratic candidate. It's been since President Obama in 2008 that that could credibly be said. You've seen under Crystal Quade and John Rizzo some infrastructure put in place, such as a website for the Senate Democratic Caucus to fundraise for potential members such as Deb Lavendar, Doug Beck, or Judy Baker, put in place. Those basic infrastructure things weren't in place in previous years to the extent they are now. This gives Democrats the ability to take advantage of a changing map of swing voters in the state and a changing legislature map after the Census.

— The legislative redistricting looks to be the biggest dumpster fire in a long time. I'll give you a Stein of Knowledge prediction: It will take so long to sort out that some incumbent legislators won't run because they won't know their district.

Speaking of Rep. Rocky Miller in the House! The most deliberative Rules chair in the history of the Missouri Legislature had a bit of irony this week as Judge Patricia Joyce totally scrapped the ballot language Missouri Republicans wrote for their own version of Clean Missouri. This was one of the many problems Miller pointed out when he kept the bill in his Rules Committee for a long time — such a long time everyone had a chance to read every word of the bill multiple times. But the irony is the judge who confirmed one of his many suspicions with the bill was the one he sought to impeach back in 2015.

The smart money on what happens is this Clean Missouri bill gets defeated by a large margin. It also leads to a bunch of legal fights, and I'd be willing to bet Todd Graves is a good enough lawyer that ultimately judges end up drawing these maps after there's no way to agree on a demographer in the legislature and Nicole Galloway is a U.S. Senate candidate. At the end of the day, you'll see judges drawing the maps as they always have. While that matters to every single House member, as for how it affects the state, look to see what they will do with Lee's Summit, Chesterfield, Kirkwood, and Columbia districts. Let's be honest, Sen. Lincoln Hough's Springfield district can't possibly get any worse for Republicans. It can only improve.

— And speaking of the senator with the spiky hair, you're all invited to our "30 Under 30" event on September 14, the night before the night before veto session. We'll start rolling out the impressive honorees in the Whispering Gallery next week. And at the party, we also have a great lineup of folks to ridicule and mock the senator from Greene. (If we really wanted to get him fired up, we'd call him the junior senator from Greene, but we won't do that.) The list of amateur comedians includes myself, Mike Kehoe, Eric Schmitt, Ryan McKenna, Bill Eigel, and — because we wanted to include at least one Democrat — Tracy McCreery.

New Uniting Missouri ad highlights Parson's support for law enforcement

Uniting Missouri PAC, which supports Gov. Mike Parson, released a new ad Wednesday highlighting the chief executive's support for law enforcement.

The statewide ad features Rob Dean, a St. Louis County police officer who has served for nearly 25 years. The 30-second spot is part of a multimillion-dollar media blitz.

"Missouri law enforcement needs a governor who has our back. And that's why I'm supporting Mike Parson," Dean said.

Should masks be required in the Capitol? Democratic rep wants new rule

During committee hearings this week, most state representatives and guests donned face coverings of some sort — but a few did not. State Rep. Peter Merideth wants to implement a new House rule that would require masks to be worn inside the Capitol.

"Under existing House rules, I can be kicked out of the chamber for refusing to wear a tie, but lawmakers face no consequence for endangering lives by roaming the crowded House floor without a mask," Merideth said. "With the worst public health crisis in a century still raging and no end in sight, the House must demonstrate common sense and make lives at least as important as enforcing the dress code."

DESE lowers barriers to substitute teaching certification

Missouri's Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) Board of Education agreed to allow substitute teacher candidates an alternative way to be licensed.

The board approved the provision, which allows substitute teacher candidates to take 20 hours of online training rather than the 60 hours currently required for certification. The item was proposed as a way to compensate for an expected shortage of substitute teachers.

Faleti: Ashcroft moving to 'suppress votes in Missouri'

Secretary of state candidate Yinka Faleti said his opponent, Republican incumbent Jay Ashcroft, has mishandled the issue of mail-in ballots.

"The secretary of state is the person you would expect to move heaven and earth to ensure that all eligible Missourians can exercise their fundamental and constitutional right to vote," Faleti said during a press event Monday morning. "Jay Ashcroft has instead moved to suppress votes in Missouri."

July jobs report shows continued recovery despite substantial unemployment rates

Missouri gained more than 52,000 jobs last month, according to seasonally adjusted numbers in the July jobs report.

The report found an overall increase in employment for the month compared to June with a seasonally adjusted decrease in unemployment by nearly a full percentage point from 7.8 to 6.9 percent. Missouri remained below the national rate of 10.2 percent for the month.

PSC refuses changes to Evergy cost review

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) denied a request to limit the scope of a review of costs related to Evergy Metro Investment mechanisms.

The company requested the PSC refine the scope of its review of Evergy's Demand-Side Investment Mechanism (DSIM). The review covered the company's refusal to enter a capacity-sale contract, which Evergy argued was not related to its DSIM. Evergy requested the review focus on the other element regarding the company and fees related to the mechanism.

Parson: Administrators prepared to reopen schools

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Gov. Mike Parson said he's confident in local administrators' decisions on reopening schools.

"I am very confident in the local levels to be able to handle this school situation," Parson said. "As I talked to the administrators and I talked to teachers across the state, I think everybody wants kids back in school, for the most part, and they're prepared for that, and I'm confident in that."

Galloway issues audit of Greene County government; audits of sheriff, county commission continue after court confirms legal duty of Auditor to protect whistleblowers

An audit released today by State Auditor Nicole Galloway gives a rating of "good" to Greene County government. The review, formally requested last year by the Greene County Commission, looked at the operations of county government agencies other than the county commission and the sheriff. Those two audits continue, after the Auditor obtained a court ruling confirming her legal duty to protect the identity of whistleblowers.

Moving election deadline won't instill confidence

By: Jay Ashcroft

Since June, I have been telling Missouri voters through print, TV, and radio interviews to request absentee or mail-in ballots early and to return them to their local election authority without delay. With more than 10 weeks before the Nov. 3 election, there is no reason to think the sky is falling.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

— The Missouri Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence (MOCADSV)'s CEO Colleen Coble has announced her retirement. Her retirement date has yet to be announced but board members said they will create a search committee and plan to have someone in place by the start of the new year. Coble joined MOCADSV 33 years ago. You can read more about her here.

— Rep. Tricia Derges is continuing to maintain her innocence and has teased a state Senate campaign. She has filed another motion to dismiss her case, this time citing "government negligence in misrepresenting to the court the medical unavailability of a key witness," according to a press release. She had previously filed a motion to dismiss questioning the alleged "dual role" of an assistant U.S. attorney of both investigator and prosecutor. And more is expected to come this week.

— Kudos to Mike Butler of the Missouri Democratic Party for just being honest about why he terminated employees. After a big to-do about fired party employees, he said he let them go because they were bad at their jobs, not because of any unionizing.

— An update from the Spencer Toder for U.S. Senate campaign:

"On Spencer Toder's campaign, we've been entirely focused on rebuilding trust between voters and politicians by visiting communities all across the state because we know that trust is built through personal conversations, not through social media posts. In the four short months Spencer has been running, we've helped Missourians learn of the Child Tax Credit, marched with union members for a $15 minimum wage, assisted folks in getting health insurance, met with exonerees working to free Kevin Strickland and Lamar Johnson, volunteered to help people in need of rental assistance, and organized a supply drive for Afghan refugees. I'm exceptionally proud of the work we're doing and hope folks are paying attention."

— Mark your calendars! We're roasting Sen. John Rizzo on Sept. 13 at 6 p.m. at the Capital Bluffs Event Center in Jefferson City to kick off veto session week. A portion of the proceeds will benefit the Midwest Innocence Project.

VoteVets backs Lucas Kunce in Missouri Senate race

VoteVets, a PAC focused on defense policy and electing veterans to public office, has backed Lucas Kunce for U.S. Senate.

Kunce is a Marine veteran who has been outspoken about the situation in Afghanistan over the past few weeks as the U.S. withdrew and the Taliban took control. He has critiqued “institutional dishonesty” related to the war in Afghanistan and said the U.S. needed to end the expensive war sooner.

Rebecca Gordon steps down as head of Governor’s Mansion foundation

After nearly eight years at the helm, Rebecca Gordon is leaving the Friends of the Missouri Governor’s Mansion at the end of the month.

Gordon took over as executive director in 2015 under then-Gov. Jay Nixon, using her 25 years of experience with nonprofits to help steer the group through three administrations and a pandemic that briefly shuttered the mansion’s doors last year. Gordon said the last year had been a challenge and it was time to step back to be with family.

Spire STL Pipeline declined rehearing by federal court

A federal court declined Spire Missouri’s request for a rehearing over its STL Pipeline Tuesday, but the company is continuing its pursuit of a regulatory solution.

A three-judge panel on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit vacated the project’s approval by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) in June, remanding the issue back to the commission two years after the 65-mile pipeline began providing natural gas service to the St. Louis area. Spire applied for a rehearing before the full court last month, but the request was denied by the three judges Tuesday.

OPINION

Show me commitment to women in political leadership

By: Allison Gibbs; Amanda Morrison; Amanda Pohl

Missouri women have recently gained traction in political representation, but these advances have still left Missouri women far from equal representation. In fact, over the past 20 years, Missouri women have accounted for only 20 percent of elected positions even though they represent 51 percent of the population. Missouri women deserve a far greater voice in the policymaking that impacts their lives, particularly at the local level.

What allies can do in the time of abortion bans

By: Justice Horn

As I write this, the Republicans in the Missouri Legislature are planning to introduce legislation that would ban abortions after six weeks, modeled on the Texas law that would take effect this week. If this bill is filed, passed, and signed into law here in Missouri, it would change the lives of over half of the 500,000 Kansas Citians who call Kansas City home. It's important that we show up, call, and email our state representatives to prevent this bill from going into effect here in Missouri. Moreover, it's important that we also realize that as cisgender men, we could never undertand what cisgender woman, transgender indivduals, and non-binary people with uteruses are going through right now. It's our duty though to show up, center those voices, and stand in solidarity with those targeted by this law.

Missouri Rep. Derges indictment grows to include alleged $900K COVID fraud scheme

Rep. Tricia Derges fraudulently sought and obtained about $300,000 for coronavirus tests already paid for by clients at a for-profit clinic, authorities said in a new indictment unsealed Friday. Derges, who was indicted by a federal grand jury in February for an alleged wire fraud scheme and illegally providing prescription drugs, ultimately sought nearly $900,000 in CARES Act funding, investigators said.

Derges has pleaded not guilty to all of the 23 counts, including the newly unsealed ones, her attorney said.

Derges, 63, allegedly received $296,574 in CARES Act funds in December 2020 after submitting a fraudulent application to Greene County. The application sought reimbursement for more than 3,000 tests provided by her nonprofit Lift Up Someone Today, Inc. However, investigators said the tests were actually done by her for-profit Ozark Valley Medical Center which she had already received payment from clients for.

BUZZ

— Missouri Right to Life and other pro-life groups wrote a memo coming out against SenMike Moon's abortion bill, which would establish the "Abolition of Abortion in Missouri Act," adding a definition of "person" to the criminal code to include a human being from the moment of conception. The pro-life groups' argument, which is supported by Sen. Bob Onder, is the laws Missouri already has in place are sufficient and trying to start over with a new strategy is a step in the wrong direction. Also, if enacted into law, SB 391 could put a woman in prison if she had an abortion which Right to Life is strictly against.

"I urge you to think twice about supporting this bill, because it has many flaws and problems – some of which I pointed out to state Senators in my testimony during a committee hearing on the bill earlier this month. While I respect all lawmakers who want to save babies by passing pro-life bills, I have a responsibility to point out where those bills might be flawed – or even harmful to pro-life efforts. That is a duty that I have taken seriously in my 36 years as a fulltime pro-life lobbyist at the Missouri Capitol," Sam Lee from Campaign Life Missouri wrote in an email to supporters.

"[SB 391] would repeal all of the excellent pro-life laws passed over the last forty years that have done so much to protect unborn children and provide women with alternatives that enable them to choose life for their unborn child," Onder said in a Facebook post.

"The votes are not there on the Senate Health and Pensions Committee," said one insider.

The bill most likely will not make it out of committee, but Moon may try to add it to another bill on the floor as an amendment, forcing a debate.

— After the House voted against fundingMedicaid expansion yesterday, it doesn't seem that the Senate wants to work very hard to clean up the pieces. That leaves MedEx in limbo — constitutionally mandated but unappropriated. Since the amendment expanded Medicaid, there are almost a quarter of a million more Missourians covered under the program.

What matters now is how much money the state puts in to cover those individuals. There is almost certainly a lawsuit on the horizon, most likely against the Department of Health and Senior Services. That will force the court to decide whether the department and legislature will have to fund the program.

— Municipal elections in Springfield are pretty heated. Elected positions within the city and on the school board are part time and unpaid, but that hasn't prevented the election from being set on fire, literally. The issues started this week with nasty text messages about school board candidates coming from anonymous numbers without any indication of who is funding them. Then, more texts came saying the firefighters supported liberal and in some cases anti-police candidates. The only problem was these texts were fake, and the firefighters made that known. The next day after these texts is when a sign for candidate Craig Hosmer was set on fire. Police are investigating the incident.

— The debate over SB 12 showed that even though the public health bill had general Republican support, the Conservative Caucus became so laser-focused on hurting St. Louis County Executive Sam Page, making non-Conservative Caucus Republicans uncomfortable.

"The bill became much more complicated than it needed to be," said one Senate insider.

But, the Conservative Caucus is pushing back on the idea that they were unwilling to negotiate.

"Negotiations were real and ongoing. The narrative that the Conservative Caucus was not negotiating began before the bill even came up," said one person who was a part of the negotiations.

Any way you message it, the entire incident highlighted that the upper chamber is looking more and more like a three-party body: the Republicans, the Democrats, and the Conservative Caucus. This is making Senate Majority Floor Leader Caleb Rowden's life complicated in ways that his predecessors haven't had to deal with.

— The "Drinks to Go" bill that was recently perfected by the Senate has a poison pill buried in it that goes by the name of "retail to retail." The provision, which was snuck in, would allow a restaurant like a pizza shop with a smaller cooler to buy more beer from a gas station or liquor store if they ran out of drinks. Major distributors, who love the original bill, are strictly against the provision because it eliminates the three-tiered system of distribution and takes away their power to control the market.

— John Brunner has teased that he might be looking at a campaign for U.S. Senate, but a Republican insider has said his interest has cooled in recent days. He may have to self-fund the campaign, like he's done in the past, which is a deal-breaker.

— See the latest episode of This Week in Missouri Politics on Sunday, when Scott talks with guest Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe about his gubernatorial campaign announcement. Panel includes Hannah Beers Sutton, Columbia Mayor Brian Treece, Sen. Karla Eslinger, and Kaitlyn Schallhorn.

Senate leadership still sees path forward on local health department restrictions

Though an attempt was shot down this week, Senate leadership still sees a possible future for legislation curbing the power of local officials during health emergencies.

SB 12 from Sen. Bob Onder was meant to lessen the power of local officials in response to the situations like the COVID-19 pandemic, allowing entities to order shutdowns for 15 days within a 180-day period before requiring approval from other legislative bodies, among other restrictions. The bill was voted down Thursday morning after nearly eight hours of debate on an amendment sunsetting the restrictions after a year, with nine Republicans joining Democrats in rejecting its perfection.

Plocher sponsors tax credit for businesses affected by shutdowns

A pair of bills in the Missouri House seek to bolster businesses impacted by shutdowns over the past year through a tax credit.

House Majority Floor Leader Rep. Dean Plocher's HB 1406 and HB 1407 would authorize a state income tax credit for eligible businesses that faced a shutdown from a political subdivision over the course of the COVID-19 pandemic. The amount of the credit would be based on real and personal property tax liability and the number of days exceeding two weeks that the business was closed during the declared state of emergency and would be capped at $50,000 per year, with excess carrying forward.

Tobacco 21 will address youth use; legislature should pass HB 517

By: A.J. Moll

Like many other states, lawmakers in Jefferson City are debating a reverse on the ability for localities to control tobacco ordinances, including enacting local taxes and prohibition. Advocates of the law claim that localities must be in charge of tobacco policies to address youth use of tobacco and vapor products. Unfortunately, allowing localities the permission to ban, regulate, and tax tobacco and vapor products creates a patchwork of confusion in laws as well as invite bad players to profit off of localities' regulations.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

— Gov. Mike Parson came out of the gate swinging this morning with a press conference without taking questions excoriating a Post-Dispatch employee who discovered teachers' Social Security numbers on a DESE website. DESE said it fixed the issue last night, but its website was largely down for most of the day.

In the back and forth, the Post-Dispatch said its employee had discovered the vulnerability in the website, alerted the department, and held its story so as not to compromise educators' information further. The governor called the discovery a "hack" that was an "attempt to embarrass the state and sell headlines for their news outlet." He vowed legal repercussions against the outlet and said the Cole County prosecutor had been notified.

Parson's heavy-handed move has drawn national media attention and has largely been criticized, and some Republicans have come down on the side of the Post-Dispatch such as Rep. Tony Lovasco who said: "It's clear the Governor's Office has a fundamental misunderstanding of both web technology and industry standard procedures for reporting security vulnerabilities. Journalists responsibly sounding an alarm on data privacy is not criminal hacking." However, most Republicans have defended the governor, and no serious person argues against the fact there is a vendetta by the Post-Dispatch against the conservative governor.

Since the morning press conference, however, the Governor's Office has doubled down on the approach, firing off multiple tweets throughout the day contending the "DESE hack was more than a simple 'right click.'" What is either going to validate or call the approach into question is what exactly went into finding this information. Essentially, how much more than a right-click went into this?

At the presser, Parson was joined by DPS Director Sandy Karsten. Noticeably absent was DESE Commissioner Margie Vandeven.

— In other news, the Spire rate case in front of the PSC should come to an end tomorrow. PSC Staff nearly had a deal done, and in fact did come to an agreement with the utility on most issues. However, in what was a change from procedure, the OPC decided not to engage at all. It will probably be a pretty normal rate case where there's not a lot of ground broken as Spire will most likely get what's customary in the industry and move on. What is odd and could impact future rate cases, according to everyone, was the OPC was pretty disengaged, and in the end, just filed a bunch of objections. It will be interesting to see if the PSC rewards that approach or not and if they do, then expect everyone to take that approach going forward.

IN OTHER NEWS

Parson vows to 'utilize all legal methods' after Post-Dispatch employee discovers DESE website vulnerability
Gov. Mike Parson vowed to hold "perpetrators" responsible after educators' personal information on the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education's (DESE) website was compromised.

The whole matter — which the governor called a "hack" — could cost the taxpayers up to $50 million, Parson said.

Parson said an individual obtained personal information, including Social Security numbers, of at least three teachers through a "multistep process" that decoded and converted the data. The Cole County prosecutor has been notified, and the Missouri State Highway Patrol's Digital Forensic Unit will conduct an investigation "of all of those involved."

[Mike Cierpiot, Michelle Pleus recognized by Evergy for work on securitization bill]
Sen. Mike Cierpiot and chief of staff Michelle Pleus were honored by Evergy this week for their efforts on a bill that will help utility companies transition to clean generation.

The language allows utility companies to issue bonds to finance energy transition costs if approved by the Missouri Public Service Commission (PSC), also known as securitization. The measure progressed through the upper chamber with little opposition and made it onto the governor's desk as part of an omnibus utility bill signed into law in July.

[Hartzler ends third quarter with $1.6M cash on hand]
Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler raised more than $446,000 in the third quarter, ending it with more than $1.65 million cash on hand, her campaign said.

Specifically, Hartzler raised $446,155 in the last quarter, her campaign said. She has $1,651,443 cash on hand.

Additionally, the American Dream PAC supporting him, will report bringing in $180,000 during the third quarter. Kehoe is running for governor in 2024.

"It's impressive for any candidate running in Missouri to raise $500,000 in a quarter, but to do it three years out from an election is historic and shows Mike's strong ability to connect with supporters from every corner of Missouri who are investing in the future of our state," Mike Hafner, an advisor, said. "It is evident that Mike is laser-focused on providing leadership for Missouri state government."

[Mike Moon raises nearly $110K in 31 days]
Sen. Mike Moon raised nearly $110,000 in the third quarter, his campaign said.

Moon raised $109,647 in the third quarter, the campaign said, with $96,865 cash on hand. The conservative Republican launched his bid for the 7th congressional district on Aug. 31, one month before close of books for the third quarter.

Liberty Utilities, Spire Missouri East and West, and the Empire District Electric Company requested authority to alter their purchased gas adjustment (PGA) riders to extend their recovery periods beyond 12 months. Carol Comer, director of Natural Resources, dies

Department of Natural Resources Director Carol Comer has died.

“We are greatly saddened and heartbroken to hear of Director Comer’s passing,” Gov. Mike Parson said. “Carol was an extremely talented and accomplished leader, and the entire state of Missouri grieves alongside her friends and family. Carol brought expertise, energy, and an enthusiastic smile to every project, and she will be deeply missed among our cabinet and in the thousands of lives that she touched. She was a dedicated public servant who loved this state, its people, and the great outdoors. We could not have asked for a better advocate for Missouri’s natural resources. Teresa and I will keep Carol’s loved ones in our prayers as we mourn the loss of this extraordinary individual.”

Connie Patterson, director of communications for DNR, said, “We plan to carry out her vision for the agency moving forward. We are thankful for the strong leadership of Deputy Directors Dru Buntin and Katie Jo Wheeler.”

BUZZ

—DNR Director Carol Comer passed away today. DNR is in the process of informing all its employees, but her family was notified earlier today. In a surreal piece of irony, the news reached the Governor's Office during a Cabinet meeting. We will pass funeral arrangements along as they become available.

— Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler is set to announce her run for U.S. Senate tomorrow and will be our featured guest on "This Week in Missouri Politics" Sunday. With Hartzler in the race, speculation now turns to who will run for her seat, and we'll have one of the front runners, state Sen. Caleb Rowden, as our other guest this weekend. We'll discuss the open congressional seat, the end of session, and the future of the FRA. If anyone has any questions for them, send them our way.

The biggest impact of Hartzler's decision to run might not be the senators hoping for her seat and how that affects next session. Her district has long been a swing district and has changed many times over the years. With redistricting, there was some thought that after Congressman Blaine Luetkemeyer term-limited out as Banking chairman, if Republicans took the majority he would put the district of Boone County and Jefferson City together to advantage Caleb Rowden. Now that district could go all sorts of ways. One possibility is drawing a 7-1 map and taking Congressman Emanuel Cleaver's district and dropping it down south, giving a portion of it to CongressmanSam Graves. That might advantage a candidate such as Sen. Denny Hoskins. Throughout the history of Missouri, you'll notice very seldom is the southeast Missouri congressman from Cape.

— The Missouri Association of Counties is looking for a new director. If I had to guess, an early frontrunner would be Audrain County Commissioner Steve Hobbs. It is a highly sought-after job, and it has become one of the top organizations in the Capitol.

— The city of Houston is making things happen this week by now offering fiber optic internet service, part of its commitment to promoting economic development. The city joins a growing list of hometown utilities like Carthage, Kennett, West Plains, and Marshall in making these enhancements happen for residents in rural Missouri. According to city leaders, finding ways to provide services to all segments of the community sets the table for new opportunities — especially in small rural communities across Missouri.

— The Missouri Farm Bureau raised more than $25,000 and collected over 2 tons of non-perishable food throughout April for its Sixth Annual Home Run Against Hunger.

Ransom, Parson's strict constructionist pick for Missouri Supreme Court, sworn in Judge Robin Ransom had just left a bowling tournament with her friends and was headed to dinner at Happy China in St. Louis when a 573 number flashed across the screen. Knowing it was likely a Jefferson City number, Ransom shushed her friends but disappointment began to set in when she heard Andrew Bailey, the governor's general counsel, on the other end of the phone.

But then Bailey asked her to wait, and it clicked: She wouldn't be on hold if Gov. Mike Parson had not picked her for the open position on the Supreme Court of Missouri.

Ransom is slated to begin work officially this week in the iconic red-brick building across from the Capitol — about two weeks after Parson officially introduced her as his pick for the bench. She's coming to the state's highest court after serving as a judge on the Court of Appeals Eastern District, having previously worked as a circuit judge and in family court and as a prosecutor.

Special session requests abound in 2021: A look at what lawmakers want to tackle

It's the year of the special session requests.

Lawmakers are already expected to return to the Capitol for September's veto session and to tackle redistricting, but the first session of the 101st General Assembly hadn't even officially concluded before requests for special sessions began to pour in. Thus far, the Governor's Office has received 13 official requests.

Missouri abortion law stymied by federal appeals court

After the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the preliminary injunction placed on Missouri's restrictive abortion law, the Attorney General's Office said it will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to step in.

In its opinion, the Eighth Circuit said Missouri "failed to demonstrate that its policy priorities outweigh the public interest in access to pre-viability abortions or the significant interference with [Planned Parenthood's] business and the harm to pregnant individuals who might seek a pre-viability abortion before final judgment in this case."

Casey Wasser named Missouri Soybean COO

After serving as its policy director for several years, Casey Wasser is stepping into a new role as the chief operating officer for the Missouri Soybean Association, Missouri Soybean Merchandising Council, and Foundation for Soy Innovation.

Wasser's promotion is effective July 1. The position is new for the organization, and Wasser will also continue leading the group's policy work.

Agricultural facility inspection bill to be signed into law

After passing through both chambers of the Missouri Legislature, a bill outlining who could inspect agricultural facilities is scheduled to be signed into law this week.

HB 574, sponsored by Rep. Kent Haden, would designate the Missouri departments of Agriculture and Natural Resources, local sheriffs and law enforcement, and other federal and state agencies as the only authorities able to inspect agricultural facilities, including facilities raising livestock. Other entities would be allowed to inspect the property by invitation only. Charter counties would be exempted from the new statute.

Parson to sign off on state commitment to fund water project

Gov. Mike Parson is scheduled to sign a resolution affirming the state's commitment to a water project underway in northern Missouri this week.

The resolution, sponsored by Sen. Dan Hegeman, affirms the legislature's support of the East Locust Creek Reservoir Project by allocating an annual maximum of $1.5 million toward its construction. The money would be directed from the state's Multipurpose Water Resource Program Fund, and the resolution caps the total of the state's contribution at $24 million.

PSC approves change to electric service territory agreement

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) approved a change to Evergy Missouri West and Osage Valley Electric Cooperative'sterritorial agreement this week.

Osage Valley and Evergy requested an addendum to their existing agreement to allow Osage Valley to serve as the exclusive electric provider for a 10-acre lot in Cass County. Commission Staff reviewed the application and recommended its approval; the PSC obliged during Wednesday's agenda meeting, requiring Evergy to file updated tariff sheets reflecting the change in its service area.

Railroad merger plans should consider manufacturers and shippers

By: Karan Pujji

In the wake of a revamped trade agreement between the U.S., Mexico, and Canada (USMCA), the fight to control American rail traffic is reaching a fever pitch. At issue is whether the Surface Transportation Board (STB) should approve a $25 billion merger agreement between Kansas City Southern Railroad (KCS) and the Canadian Pacific Railroad (CP) or whether it should entertain the $35 billion offer by Canadian National Railroad (CN) to acquire KCS. Although the CN and CP are both Canadian companies, that’s where the similarities end.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

— State Rep. J. Eggleston placed $100,000 of his own money in his candidate committee today in his bid to replace Sen. Dan Hegeman. This is a race largely dependent on redistricting with Rep. Allen Andrews most likely in and Reps. Rusty Black and Brenda Shields on the edge of the district.

— Gov. Mike Parson will headline a fundraiser for Treasurer Scott Fitzpatrick in late September. Fitzpatrick is campaigning for state auditor.

— House members' emails got a little messy last week with a public debate over COVID-19 vaccines. It all started when a House staff member sent out an email promoting a free vaccination event being held at the Capitol. Rep. Brian Seitz hit "reply all" with his opinion that the "government should stay out of the jab business." Rep Keri Ingle quickly responded to criticize his "unsolicited opinion" and ask for prayers for sick friends and medical professionals. There were a few other emails making light of the "reply all" feature as well.

— The House Elections and Elected Officials Committee has scheduled a hearing for Aug. 24 on initiative petition reform and election security. Rep. Dan Shaul, who chairs the committee, has requested a special session to address a myriad of initiative petition and election reform proposals, including voter ID. He cited alleged "discrepancies and issues with the election process in several states across" the U.S. in his request.

— The Labor-Management Council honored former state Sen. Gina Walsh during its annual dinner last week with the Leadership in Labor-Management Cooperation Award.

— The special State Fair edition of The Missouri Times newspaper with exclusive content from Senator Roy Blunt, an insider's look at the 4th congressional district, Bicentennial coverage, and more is out now. Pick a copy up from newsstands around Jefferson City or check it out online here.

St. Louis County mask moratorium extended while parties encouraged to 'discuss possible resolution'

A St. Louis County judge continued the temporary restraining order blocking the county's mask mandate while also asking lawyers on either side of the issue to work together on a proposed solution.

Judge Ellen "Nellie" Ribaudo granted a temporary restraining order earlier this month blocking St. Louis County from implementing a health order requiring individuals wear face coverings while indoors, regardless of vaccination status, in an attempt to mitigate rising COVID-19 cases. The temporary restraining order was set to expire Tuesday, but Ribaudo extended the order for two days while instructing both parties "to discuss a possible resolution of the issue."

Schmitt successful in challenge to Biden administration immigration policy

A federal judge ordered the Biden administration Friday to continue the Trump-era Migrant Protection Protocols (MPP) program, which keeps migrants in Mexico as they await a hearing — a win for Attorney General Eric Schmitt.

Schmitt along with Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton sued the Biden administration in April in an effort to reinstate the MPP program, also referred to as the "Remain-in-Mexico" plan. The pair argued the MPP reduced detention and enforcement burdens for the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) among other agencies.

The Biden administration had suspended the program in January.

Missouri lowers substitute teacher requirements to address shortage

Those seeking a substitute teaching certificate in Missouri will be allowed to pursue accreditation through alternative training as the state still struggles with a staffing shortage heading into the new school year.

The rule change, approved by the State Board of Education Tuesday, permanently gives applicants the choice between the standard 60 hours of college credit hours or 20 hours of online training to obtain a certificate beginning at the end of the calendar year. The rule was approved on a temporary basis last year to remove barriers to employment and fight the recruitment shortage — which had been an issue in the state for six years but was further aggravated by the COVID-19 pandemic.

Q&A: The state of public transit in Missouri

The Missouri Times chatted with Kimberly Cella about the state of public transit in Missouri and its greatest needs. She is the executive director of both Citizens for Modern Transit and the Missouri Public Transit Association.

The Missouri State Fair: A timeline

The Missouri State Fair is returning in full this year to celebrate the state's bicentennial, continuing a longstanding tradition of showcasing everything Missouri has to offer.

The annual celebration has hit many milestones — and a few stumbling blocks — since it began in 1901. Here's a look at the fair's history, from its early days to its expansion into one of Missouri's biggest events.

Co-ops hope to bring electric vehicles to rural communities

As electric vehicles gain popularity across the nation's roadways, Missouri's electric cooperatives want to expand the network throughout the state.

Commonly known as EVs, the innovative vehicles are becoming more prominent in communities as a way to preserve the environment while circumventing rising gas prices. While larger cities have been quick to invest in the emerging technology, Association of Missouri Electric Cooperatives (AMEC) CEO and Executive Vice President Caleb Jones said cooperatives were excited to bring the innovation to rural members curious about its benefits.

Bond: Blunt's successor needs to fight for Missouri

With several contenders on both sides of the aisle vying for U.S. Senator Roy Blunt's position next year, former seat holder Kit Bond said Missouri needed a strong successor to follow in Blunt's footsteps.

"I wasn't going to retire until I found that Roy was ready to step in, and I also told Roy he wants to make sure he gets a good person to succeed him," Bond, a Republican, said. "People need to know what you're thinking, and you need to develop a sound platform of the things you need — that the people of Missouri need."

The State Fair: A proud tradition and celebration of Missouri agriculture

By: Roy Blunt

Every year, thousands of Missourians travel to Sedalia for the State Fair. For many families, it's an annual tradition, and it's pretty easy to see why. You can sample delicious food, listen to great concerts, and see what makes Missouri's farmers and ranchers the best in the world.

As the son of dairy farmers, I know firsthand how hard farmers and ranchers work to feed and fuel the world. With global food demand expected to double in the next 30-40 years, Missouri farmers and ranchers are well-positioned to meet that demand and benefit from the economic opportunities that come with it. In Washington, I'm focused on making sure our farmers, ranchers, and businesses have the tools they need to not only compete but lead the way in a global economy.

Missouri's future is based on today's education

By: Lincoln Hough

Throughout my life, the value of a good education has been instilled in me by my parents. My dad is an educator by trade and every opportunity growing up was a lesson in disguise. At some point, I realized my life is better because those around me value education. I was fortunate to be raised in a community that shares that same commitment, and I think this is where my steadfast commitment to education — whether it's elementary, secondary, post-secondary, or technical — comes from.

A look at the diverse tapestry of Missouri agriculture

By: Hannah Kelly

My first lesson in agriculture was falling flat on my face cleaning out the back lot of the milk barn. Any farm kid knows this means you are covered in mud from head to toe. Boy, did I used to absolutely not like going to the milk barn. Now, looking back on those years, I realize they were formative in my work ethic and understanding of what is a large portion of the backbone and heart of Missouri. If you would have told that kid who fell flat on her face that day that she'd be serving in the Missouri Legislature, I would have laughed at you. As they say, "God laughs while we make plans," and here I am.

Finding the pragmatic approach in a divisive CRT dialogue

By: Craig Stevenson

Like most Americans, critical race theory (CRT) entered my vernacular through various news and social media outlets about nine months ago. I've spent time examining, thinking carefully, reading many perspectives, and have had one-on-one conversations, all in an effort to understand a few things: (1) What is CRT? (2) Is it good or bad?, and (3) Is there a pragmatic approach to real equity issues our children face?

Hough proposes largest tax cut in Missouri history

Sen. Lincoln Hough filed a bill proposing the largest income tax cut in Missouri history this week, in an effort he said was to reduce the state's tax burden.

"My proposal has one intention: to help hard-working Missourians keep more of their hard-earned money," Hough said in a statement. "This legislation would be the largest single tax cut in state history, guaranteeing Missouri taxpayers keep more of what they earn. With this effort, we will ensure Missouri families have more money to spend on their families, in our communities, growing local economies."

— Turnout in today's municipal elections in St. Louis is lower than expected. The election board was originally estimating about 30,000 folks would turn out for the first round of voting today; now it's saying it will be closer to 20,000. St. Louis City Treasurer Tishaura Jones is still expected to advance to the second round of voting in April, with Board of Aldermen President Lewis Reed and Alderwoman Cara Spencer running negative ads against each other for the No. 2 spot. Spencer was mailing negative hits against Reed as recently as this past weekend.

— Disgraced former Gov. Eric Greitens told a radio station he's "evaluating" a run against Senator Roy Blunt in 2020. Greitens teases a run for office every few months. If I had to guess, I don't think Blunt is particularly worried.

— Charter school opponents are getting close to overplaying their opposition to reform. Many superintendents acted as if the sky was falling when the House passed Rep. Phil Christofanelli's ESA bill last week, hurting their credibility a bit. A lot of rural Republicans, however, are still against charter school expansion in any form. The question now is whether there's enough to stop whatever bill comes out of the Senate.

However, don't expect the Senate to take up the education bill this week. Key members are missing, and reform proponents can't afford to lose a single vote right now.

— House Speaker Rob Vescovo established the Special Committee on Redistricting yesterday, appointing Rep. Dan Shaul as the chair and Rep. Hannah Kelly as vice chair. Rep. Jerome Barnes is the ranking minority member for the committee. Others appointed to the committee include Reps. Ben Baker, Donna Baringer, Chuck Basye, LaKeySha Bosley, Shamed Dogan, J. Eggleston, Travis Fitzwater, and Don Rone.

Other committee changes:

- Rep. Scott Cupps to Rules - Administrative Oversight.

— The House Ethics Committee has scheduled a hearing for tomorrow afternoon but expect it to go into a closed session.

Protecting students with food allergies

By: Jason Chipman

For the more than 32 million Americans dealing with food allergies, and the many more suffering from sensitivities to different food items, it has become a critical daily function to plan and manage their diets to prevent catastrophic reactions to allergens. And while the world has been quick to adapt in many ways to provide allergen-free food options, there are still many areas where efforts to protect folks with food allergies have lagged behind. One area I have worked to address during my time in the legislature is the way our public universities accommodate students with food allergies.

Roeber sexually, mentally, physically abused his children, House Ethics Committee finds

The House Ethics Committee formally recommended Rep. Rick Roeber be expelled from the House after finding that he physically, sexually, and mentally abused his children when they were as young as 5 years old.

The committee said it found records and testimony confirming that one child was sexually abused at 5 years old and was sexually abused at 9. The committee said it reviewed more than 200 pages of documentation of alleged abuse and sworn testimony from five witnesses, and the sexual abuse occurred in 1990.

The sexual abuse detailed to the committee constitutes a Class A felony, according to the report.

BUZZ

— The Lincoln Days circuit has begun for the U.S. Senate race. Never one to shy away from unnecessary showmanship, disgraced former Gov. Eric Greitens requested walk-up music at both the Macon County and Jackson County events with the former fulfilling his request. Nothing says “genuine enthusiasm” like walk-up music at a political dinner. It may be old-fashioned, but maybe we should leave that for the guys at Busch Stadium who actually make our state proud. Greitens also requested a holding room at both locations, wanting to avoid talking to actual Missourians while he is running to represent them.

— This week will make or break the funding mechanism for Medicaid expansion in Missouri. The Senate will be marking up the House’s budget, and Medicaid expansion funding, which wasn’t included in the House version, will be a focal point of deliberations later in the week. There are some who see Senate deliberations as the last chance for the legislature to fund the expansion without it having to go through the courts.

— The Missouri Catholic Conference sent a letter to state lawmakers reiterating its support for Medicaid expansion and the full funding of the program.

“We pray for you our legislators as you engage the virtue of prudence in your deliberations on these important issues,” said the letter signed by four of the Catholic Bishops in Missouri.

Along with the letter, Healthcare for Missouri, the group that worked to get the expansion measure passed, also penned a letter stating that Medicaid does not fund abortion services, and the passage of the Medicaid expansion amendment does not change that.

— Tomorrow is inauguration day in St. Louis. Mayor-elect Tishaura Jones will be inaugurated as the first Black female mayor of the city at noon in a socially distanced ceremony limited to about 90 in-person attendees and live-streamed. St.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Louis County Executive Sam Page, Kansas City Mayor Quinton Lucas, and East St. Louis Mayor Emeka Jackson-Hicks are all set to speak. Jones will most likely announce a second inauguration event in June in the hopes that there won't be so many restrictions on gatherings by that time.

— Nine members of the St. Louis Board of Alderman were absent today for their final meeting. Whether they were genuinely unable to attend or didn't want the embarrassment of going to their last meeting because they lost the election, the lack of attendees was bad news for the Local 77 St. Louis Firefighters Union. Mayor Lyda Krewson vetoed a bill that would have changed the governance over its pension system, and they needed 20 votes to override the veto. Now, the union will face a board that is much less likely to be sympathetic to its cause, bringing them back to square one.

Throughout the state, the firefighters have always been the most politically astute union. This will be a test of their political acumen. They may not get what they had in the previous bill, but don't count them out of getting some effective changes.

— A new coalition is exploring putting a measure on the statewide ballot to reform term limits for the Missouri Legislature. It would amend Article III of the state Constitution so as to allow members of the General Assembly to serve for 16 years, but in whatever chamber they choose.

"There's no good reason to make legislators split their 16 years of service between the House and Senate. By doing so, the current law empowers special interest lobbyists while driving legislators to focus less on doing their jobs and more on finding their next jobs—including sometimes with a special interest who lobbies them while in office," Rob B. Schaaf, a board member for Show Me Integrity, said.

— A winning ticket for a Mega Millions $4 million prize was sold in Mountain Grove. Sen Angela Mosley has a bill that would prohibit the State Lottery Commission, its employees, or any organization working with the lottery from publishing identifying information of any person who wins the state lottery. It passed out of General Laws earlier this month and is now on the informal calendar. The winner has until Oct. 13 to claim their prize, so maybe by then, they can legally keep their identity concealed.

Kimberly Guilfoyle joins Greitens campaign as national chair

Former Fox News personality and Trump advisor Kimberly Guilfoyle has joined former Gov. Eric Greitens' U.S. Senate campaign as his national chair.

"Gov. Greitens is a fighter who has stood with President Trump and has a proven record of advancing conservative America First policies," Guilfoyle said. "I am proud to join his team as the National Chair and look forward to championing Gov. Greitens' vision throughout Missouri and around the country."

Onder: 'There needs to be accountability' for shutdowns

More than a year after the COVID-19 pandemic began impacting Missourians, Sen. Bob Onder continues to push for the curbing of local officials' power during health emergencies.

"I think whether rural or urban, there needs to be accountability to the people, accountability to voters and their elected officials," Onder said. "This is different than shutting down a restaurant because of salmonella or E. coli or a boil water order after a flood. Shutting down a class of business or making people stay at home, this is really unprecedented and there needs to be accountability."

Senate committee passes supplemental budget bill

With less than a month left before the end of session, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved its first budget bill Monday.

HB 15 is a $1.5 billion supplemental budget bill appropriating funds for education, transportation, and workforce development, among other items. The bill passed the committee by a vote of 13-1 with Sen. Bill Eigel voting in opposition. Eigel pointed to educational funds earmarked for COVID-19 response early in the discussion.

States are solving the COVID liability problem; Missouri should follow suit

By: Jamie Burger

After over a year of lockdowns and COVID, we finally see a light at the end of the tunnel. Thanks to the expedited vaccine roll-out spearheaded by the Trump administration, our country is on track to having enough vaccines for every American by the end of May. With all of the progress we have made, we cannot slow up now.

Energy improvement financing laws a win for customers and the environment

By: James Owen

The traditional finance industry in Missouri has made it a legislative priority to dismantle the laws in Missouri that enable greater customer access to money to help with energy improvements to their home or business. Known as Property Assessed Clean Energy, or PACE, these laws were designed to fill in the gaps for customers who were unable to access traditional loans. Yet, the lobbyists hired by the banks — and the lawmakers doing their bidding — argue that PACE is bad for customers. This argument is the worst form of gaslighting.

Increased funding needed for state and local roads

By: Garrett Hawkins

Rural residents and farmers understand the importance of good roads and bridges. It's the reason why the Missouri Farm Bureau has long supported essential funding for our state and local highway infrastructure. This support goes as far back as the "Get Missouri Out of the Mud" campaign 100 years ago this decade when the state's first fuel tax was enacted.

Extremist politicians attack access to birth control, threaten Medicaid for all

By: Lauren Nacke

Contraception is a game-changer for women and people with the capacity for pregnancy. Access to birth control has given people the opportunity to continue their education, hold down a job, plan their future, and challenge the status quo. When considering that 99 percent of women have used contraception at some point in their lives, it's not controversial.

This Week in Missouri Politics Column: The Chronicles of the Phony Woke

Let me start off by admitting right from the beginning that I ain't what you would call woke.

However, I am someone who — due to some folks befriending me, sharing their life experiences with me, and pouring themselves into my heart — believes that African Americans and transgender folks have had a harder row to hoe in life than folks who were born like me.

As storm descends on Capitol, Republicans scramble to reach deal on FRA reauthorization

Thunder resounded throughout the Senate chambers, and hail rained down on Jefferson City Friday night as Senate Republicans continued to search for a “compromise” FRA reauthorization.

Business on the Senate floor ground to a halt shortly after 12 p.m. when Sen. Bob Onder attempted to attach an amendment excluding abortion providers and their affiliates from Missouri’s Medicaid program. The Senate then stood at ease to address a point of order levied by Minority Floor Leader John Rizzo.

After about an hour, the Senate moved into recess. Republicans caucused for about an hour Friday afternoon, but dealmaking continued behind closed doors as the capital city grew dark and the power flickered in the Capitol.

Bells chimed to bring senators back to back to the chamber at about 7 p.m., but the gavel was not lifted. Republicans moved to caucus about an hour later where a deal that was seemingly in place just minutes before broke down.

BUZZ

— It took all day for the Senate to come up with FRA renewal authorization. It was perfected late Friday night with a three-year sunset. It eliminated the language targeting Planned Parenthood and abortion providers and changed the language related to contraceptives and birth control to target: “family planning services shall not include abortions or any abortifacient drug or device that is used for the purpose of inducing an abortion” except in instances when the woman’s life is at stake.

It call came to a head when Sen. Bob Onder attempted to attach an amendment fully excluding abortion providers and their affiliates from Missouri’s Medicaid program. The Senate stood at ease at noon after Minority Floor Leader John Rizzo raised a point of order.

The Senate then stood in recess at 2 p.m. while the point of order was continued.

During this time, Senate Republicans held caucus meetings and huddled behind closed doors attempting to reach a compromise. Sen. Andrew Koenig worked on one proposal that would exclude abortion providers from Medicaid pending approval from CMS.

The bells began to chime to call senators back into session around 7 p.m. But only a few senators trickled in, and the deal that was seemingly in place shattered. With the bells still chiming, Republicans held another caucus shortly before 9 p.m., and senators finally came to the floor 20 minutes later.

Sen. Dan Hegeman offered the substitute which included the CMS language and a five-year sunset on the FRA reauthorization. Onder, as he had been saying he would, opposed the measure. He attempted to amend the bill to his language — outright preventing Medicaid coverage for abortion providers and their affiliates — but it was defeated in a roll call vote. Republican Sens. Mike Bernskoetter, Justin Brown, Mike Cierpiot, Karla Eslinger, Elaine Gannon, Dan Hegeman, Lincoln Hough, Jeanie Riddle, Caleb Rowden, Dave Schatz, and Bill White joined all 10 Democrats to defeat the amendment.

Then Hegeman introduced a new substitute. This one extended the FRA for three years and completely left out the abortion provider language. It also changed the language regarding birth control and contraceptives. This was a win for female senators who gathered earlier Friday and worked with Sen. Paul Wieland to take that language back to what he had originally offered. During their meeting, the senators expressed concern that the way it was written — by listing out the drugs — women could be prohibited from obtaining birth control or emergency contraceptives, including in cases of rape or incest.

Sen. Mike Moon attempted to attach an amendment to this version that would tax endowments of universities that teach students how to perform abortions. Sen. Dave Schatz ruled a point of order was well taken, and the amendment failed.

Missouri Right to Life’s Susan Klein said the group opposed this version of the FRA package. The group had advocated for even stronger pro-life language than what the bill originally included.

At 10:45 p.m., the Senate recessed so the bill could go through the committee process. It reconvened about an hour later and perfected the FRA renewal plan. The Senate adjourned at 11:41 p.m. until 12:05 a.m. when the plan is to come back and third read the bill.

— Sara Baker is leaving her post as the legislative and policy director of the ACLU Missouri. She’s joining St. Louis Mayor Tishaura Jones as her deputy chief of staff.

Latest Missouri gas tax plan includes rebates for drivers

Individuals who drive through or in Missouri could receive a refund for the increased gas taxes paid under a new plan put forth by Rep. Becky Ruth, chair of the House Transportation Committee.

Under Ruth's plan, the gas tax would rise by two cents per gallon on Jan. 1, 2022, and will then increase by an additional two cents per gallon annually for five years. But those who pay any portion of the increase — including non-Missourians who purchased gas in the state — would be eligible to receive a refund for the increased amount paid.

"We are in desperate need of funding for our roads and bridges, but we also know a significant portion of Missourians don't support an increase to our fuel tax," Ruth said. "By giving taxpayers the option to obtain a rebate, we can strike a balance that generates the funding we need while also protecting taxpayers who don't want to see their tax bill go up."

It’s unclear which committee it will be referred to, but the Special Committee on Litigation Reform, which is chaired by Rep. Bruce DeGroot, is a good bet.

House Majority Floor Leader Dean Plocher said he is supportive of the decisions Speaker Rob Vescovo has made following Rep. Tricia Derges’ federal indictment over an alleged stem cell treatment scheme.

St. Louis mayor urges Parson to expand vaccine access

St. Louis Mayor Lyda Krewson called on the state’s chief executive to supply more pharmacies in her city with the COVID-19 vaccine Friday — but the Parson administration said it’s out of its control.

“The most pressing part of this problem is the distribution and availability of vaccines,” Krewson said in a letter to Gov. Mike Parson and Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS) Director Dr. Randall Williams. “To date, the City of St. Louis has had some success in working with our community health partners to get vaccine into the arms of those qualifying individuals in need… However, the demand for the vaccine at this point still greatly outpaces the supply, and the city of St. Louis needs partners at the ready once supply is sufficient enough to get shots into people’s arms.”

Gov. Mike Parson expanded special session Monday afternoon to allow the Attorney General's Office to prosecute certain homicides in St. Louis, a move Democrats called a political retaliation against Circuit Attorney Kim Gardner.

In an exclusive comment to The Missouri Times, Sen. Karla May responded: "Regardless of our differences on the effectiveness of policy, we will stand united on the Senate floor. The only way it will pass is if they are willing to PQ for the governor. We always stick together. I expect all Dems to help filibuster. If they want concurrent jurisdiction, then let's see what it looks like in Mississippi County."

DHSS issues four new medical marijuana facility licenses

Four new medical marijuana infused product manufacturing facility licenses were issued today to the entities next in line on the conditionally denied applicant list. During the compliance review process for all new medical marijuana facility licenses, the Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS) has determined that certain infused product manufacturing facilities submitted duplicative applications for licensure and therefore received multiple licenses for a single proposed facility.

Most Missourians support passing ballot measures without legislative interference, study finds

A majority of Missourians support the passage of constitutional amendments without interference from the legislature, according to a new study.

The survey, commissioned by national voting group Secure Democracy, found 80 percent of those polled believed the General Assembly should not have the power to block, limit, or reverse ballot measures approved by voters. Additionally, 55 percent of those polled said they would support legislation requiring a three-fourths vote of the legislature to alter or repeal a ballot measure.

Ragnar Research, the firm commissioned to conduct the survey, polled Missourians earlier this month. Chris Perkins, a partner at the firm, said the results showed voters wanted the legislature to implement the will of the people.

— Medicaid expansion spent all morning and part of the afternoon leading the debate in the House. Currently, the constitution mandates expansion, but Budget Chair Cody Smith and the Republican caucus haven't appropriated funding for that expansion, voting down bills to fund the program in committee. CEOs and presidents from Greater St. Louis, Inc., the Greater Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, and The Civic Council of Greater Kansas City sent a joint letter to House and Senate leadership as well as Gov. Mike Parson asking them to appropriate funding. Right now the House has all but guaranteed a court battle unless the Senate steps in, which — despite public statements from Sen. Lincoln Hough, vice-chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee, encouraging the upper chamber to fund the program — they are still unlikely to do.

— After a lengthy filibuster led by Sens. Greg Razer and Paul Wieland, in which they inquired several other senators, the nomination of Todd Graves to serve on the University of Missouri Board of Curators was laid over today. Expect the debate to start again next week with some tough decisions for the governor if Graves doesn't get approved.

— The House has put a lot of effort into adoption services and the foster care program this session, and that was reflected in the budget passed today. Kids Win Missouri, a non-profit focused on improving the well-being of Missouri's children, released a statement supporting the House's version of the budget, saying it "includes unprecedented support for the kinship and foster families caring for nearly 14,000 children currently in foster care in Missouri."

— Today is Ryan Clearwater's last day in the Senate. He served most recently as Sen.Eric Burlison's chief of staff. Clearwater will be joining the private sector working for Veterans United in Columbia. Former state Rep. Steve Helms will replace Clearwater.

— HB 369, the Prescribed Burn Bill, passed the House this week 141-1 and is headed for the Senate. The Conservation Federation of Missouri and many other outdoor and conservation organizations have this legislation as one of their top conservation priorities this year. Look for this to head through the Senate and onto the governor's desk to make prescribed fire liability insurance more attainable for Missourians to improve the habitat and landscape across the state.

— Get ready to start seeing more seersucker in the upper chamber on Wednesdays. SensBrain Williams and Tony Luetkemeyer will be co-chairing the Seersucker Caucus going forward and are encouraging senators, staff, and everyone to wear seersucker on Wednesdays to the Capitol.

— Josh Nicoloff, a Democrat from Jackson County, officially launched his campaign to challenge CongressmanBlaine Luetkemeyer today. He is a revenue audit manager for a hospitality company.

— The Missouri National Education Association backed David Tyson Smith for HD 45 today.

— United WE's Appointment Projects is expanding to the West Coast in a partnership with South San Francisco. Mayor Mark Addiego and Councilwoman Flor Nicolas have teamed up with the Kansas City-based organization to improve gender diversity among civic leadership positions in South San Francisco.

— House committee changes:

- Tracy McCreery removed from the Committee on Conservation and Natural Resources
- Gretchen Bangert appointed to the Committee on Conservation and Natural Resources

— The House Ethics Committee will have a closed meeting on Tuesday at noon.

Kansas City, St. Louis business leaders advocate for Medicaid expansion

Business leaders from Kansas City and St. Louis are imploring Missouri lawmakers, including Gov. Mike Parson, to expand Medicaid coverage as voters approved last year.

Greater St. Louis, Inc. CEO Jason R. Last month, the U.S. House passed legislation meant to support and increase grant funding to a bevy of victim service programs.

The VOCA Fix to Sustain the Crime Victims Fund Act has been a labor of love for U.S. Congresswoman Ann Wagner this year and advocates are hoping to see action taken quickly on it. The legislation funds service grants that help survivors of domestic, sexual, and child abuse as well as other crimes.

Spire seeks to mitigate impact of cold snap on customer bills

Utility companies, including Spire Missouri, are examining ways to dampen the impact of last month's devastating winter storms on customers' bills.

Scott Carter, president of Spire Missouri, said ratepayers would see an increase on their bills to compensate for the cold weather event starting in the fall, but the company plans to spread the cost over the next few years rather than increase rates all at once.

Ameren Missouri requests rate adjustment to bolster reliability

Ameren Missouri filed a proposal with the Public Service Commission (PSC) Wednesday, seeking a rate adjustment aimed at bolstering its electric and natural gas systems.

The adjustment, which would take effect in early 2022, would reflect infrastructure updates and clean energy investments. Warren Wood, vice president of legislative and regulatory affairs for Ameren Missouri, said the increase would keep rates low while allowing the company to continue investing in infrastructure.

School choice will have little to no impact on rural schools

By: Cindy O'Laughlin

There are many school choice proposals floating around the legislature this year. There's also more momentum to make small changes to the way we do K-12 education in the state in response to COVID-19. Many public school leaders are worried about how this will impact their bottom line. For many of the proposals, there's little to no financial impact on rural schools.

USDA silent on P-SNAP benefits for April but temporarily extends SNAP to eligible low-income college students

Missouri is still waiting on guidance to submit a waiver for April Pandemic Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (P-SNAP) or Food Stamp benefits from the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), Food and Nutrition Service. P-SNAP maximizes the SNAP amount each household receives based on the household's size. This means Missouri will issue regular SNAP benefits based on the amount each household is eligible to receive plus an additional 15 percent temporary benefit increase through June from the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2021.

Missouri Farm Bureau president testifies before Congress on rural broadband Missouri Farm Bureau President Garrett Hawkins testified before a congressional subcommittee this week to advocate for greater access to affordable broadband, particularly in rural communities.

“America’s farmers and ranchers embrace technology that allows their farming businesses to be more efficient, economical, and environmentally responsible,” Hawkins told lawmakers. “Today’s farmers and ranchers are using precision agricultural techniques to make decisions that impact the amount of fertilizer they need to purchase and apply to their fields, the amount of water needed to sustain crops, and the amount and type of herbicides or pesticides needed.”

Appearing virtually before the House Transportation and Infrastructure’s Subcommittee on Economic Development, Public Buildings, and Emergency Management Wednesday afternoon, Hawkins pointed to four principles: ensuring data accuracy and mapping; planning for the future; fostering local, state, and federal partnerships; and focusing on precision agriculture.

BUZZ

— Outside of Rep. Phil Christofanelli’s empowerment savings account legislation, Rep. Doug Richey’s charter funding equity bill is the only other piece of education reform legislation that may find its way to the governor’s desk this session. It passed out of the House and is now waiting to be heard on the Senate floor after making it through Sen. Cindy O’Laughlin’s Education Committee this past week. Education reform has been a priority of both Speaker Rob Vescovo and Senate Floor Majority Leader Caleb Rowden from the beginning of this session so you would think they would be able to put aside their differences in order to get one of these bills passed. Richey’s bill specifically has bipartisan support and made it out of House and Senate committees with several Democrats voting yes. That is one piece of legislation to definitely keep your eye on next week in the Senate.

It’s funny: In the early 2000s, charter schools were promoted and passed with significant effort from Kansas City Democrats. Now, it’s become another purity test for the more left-wing parts of the party.

And a lot of the folks equating charter school legislation with defunding public schools are very comfortable sending their own kids to the institutions — nearly half of all Kansas City and St. Louis students attend a charter school.

— Another bill to keep an eye on as one that may make it through the legislative logjam before the end of session is Sen. Greg Razer and Rep. Phil Christofanelli’s HIV legislation which would allow a pharmacist to dispense medication for HIV preexposure prophylaxis and HIV postexposure prophylaxis without a prescription. Razer’s version passed out of Sen. Bob Onder’s committee unanimously, and Christofanelli’s passed out of the House chamber with zero no votes. The sponsors have strategically given the language several paths forward so the freshman Democratic senator and Republican rising star in House may see a victory yet.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— As the budget bills move into conference next week, conferees are appointed by bill, not lumped together in one group for all of the appropriations bills. The chairs of the Senate Appropriations Committee (Sen. Dan Hegeman) and House Budget Committee (Rep. Cody Smith) will sit on all of the conferences, but the other two Republican members from each chamber will likely rotate between members of those respective committees based on their areas of expertise. Democrats will rotate as well, with Budget Ranking Minority Member Peter Merideth being a familiar, but not omnipresent, face during the talks. He and House Minority Floor Leader Crystal Quade will submit recommendations to Speaker Rob Vescovo who could decide to reject their suggestions. It's happened in the past, and we know this Speaker has no problem being petty.

— Don't count SB 51 out just yet. The House could still reconsider its rejection of the COVID liability protections bill from Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer before session ends. Remember, Gov. Mike Parson said he wanted the first piece of legislation to hit his desk this year to be a clean COVID liability bill.

— Gov. Mike Parson is taking meetings with legal counsel and his Medicaid team to figure out what the options are moving forward after the legislature refused to fund expansion. The MO HealthNet division has been working on preparing for the influx of eligibility and trying to determine the best path forward with or without funding for the July 1 expansion date.

"We will assess our options and legal requirements on how to move forward with Medicaid expansion, once the budget is finalized," Parson said on social media.

— The search for a permanent replacement for Robert Knodell at the Deptartment of Health and Senior Services has been "good," according to Knodell. There are candidates both inside and outside the state who are interested, and they are well on track to meet the 60-day deadline the governor set to have a permanent director in place.

— We're hearing Ryan Johnson, Cass County Commissioner and lobbyist, is considering a run for Rep. Vicky Hartzler's seat if she decided to get into the U.S. Senate race. You can read Scott Faughn and Conner Kerrigan's tipsheet on CD 04 here to see the other potential candidates.

— According to state-by-state research from economist Lenore Palladino and the Women Effect Fund, President Joe Biden's American Families Plan would add an estimated 118,194 jobs in Missouri with its proposed 10-year, $425 billion investment in child care.

Auditor could have say in Clean Missouri 2.0 ballot language

A Senate resolution aimed at changing the voter-approved Clean Missouri could get some input from the state auditor before it ends up on the ballot — if it ever does.

SJR 38 does not include a fiscal note with the ballot language as it stands now. That means if the resolution, which is on the House's calendar, passes the General Assembly, it would be up to Democratic State Auditor Nicole Galloway to write the fiscal note.

Galloway, who is running against Gov. Mike Parson in the gubernatorial contest this year, would have 30 days to come up with a fiscal note once the resolution is delivered to her office, per state law. The fiscal note will then be filed with the secretary of state.

BUZZ

It all comes down to this

— The Stein of Knowledge is telling me the House Democrats have gotten what they were asking for. With the change to the bill, they will now be prepared to support PDMP.

If the bill passes, it will look like an incredibly skillful set of maneuvers by Minority Leader Crystal Quade. If the House Republican leadership won't go to the bill, it looks like a huge debacle on all sides. Blaming House Democrats for the bill not passing is comical as there were three legislative days for Republicans to go to the bill. It's completely logical that if House Republicans hadn't treated the minority as they did or if they just ran the bill that was passed out of the Senate long before the COVID-19 crisis struck, the whole issue of PDMP would be over. There's not one Republican in the state who isn't sick of talking about it.

— The biggest issue will be the Senate Caucus this morning and the issue will be: Do they want to continue? The truth of the matter, Sen. Scott Sifton is a respected dealmaker of anyone in the body. His legacy will be negotiating bills he didn't even support so they could be passed without PQs. He's a respected statesman, and there will be moments next year when the pro-tort reform folks wished they had such an honest statesman as Scott Sifton on their side. After he was treated as most would call with less than honest deal craft in the House, of any Republicans still on the fence about whether they should be here, any of them would be fine if they could leave.

There was some fentanyl language that might be enough for Sifton to hang his hat on to continue session. But it's likely Sifton uses the respect he has for everyone to set the precedent this is not how senators are treated, regardless of party. If Sifton uses his respect to set the precedent now, he will empower the new Minority Leader John Rizzo a great deal of power going forward.

— Speaking of empowering, there are at least two senators in Republican leadership who said they're not only okay with adjournment sine die today, they're in favor of it. While your old hillbilly pal finds it unlikely, it's completely within the realm of possibility that the Senate stalls for some time, and without a grand gesture by the House today, the Senate adjourns this afternoon. Don't get me wrong, there are still several priorities Caleb Rowden is trying to make happen. Oddly enough, they are probably thought of as more Democratic priorities than Republican. They're small things, but not small for the people trying to figure them.

It's been a long year for Rowden dealing with a frustrating House, and maybe he's ready to reset things in a more normal environment in January.

— More than one senator mentioned last night after the early adjournment that if they take this sort of unprofessional behavior from the House this week, the next two years will be a nightmare. However, you're already seeing senators who pass serious legislation begin to reach out and form relationships with Curtis Trent and Dean Plocher. Maybe this is to remind them that those relationships are important — a lesson Sen. Brian Williams taught everyone in the Budget Committee when his priority stood when under normal circumstances, he would have lost out.

— One thing the Senate will do regardless of session overall is discuss a Wayfair compromise. While it's unlikely to pass this year, it will likely set the framework for next session.

— There are questions about deal craft. However, none of those questions surround Rich Aubuchon and a near career of work came to fruition with what some people would say is the largest tort reform bill in memory. Some of these bills are written in direct response to past court decisions and would likely withstand court decisions to come. Aubuchon and his crew of lobbyists have had some tough days over the years fighting this fight, but he had a hell of a day yesterday.

— We'll have Missouri Farm Bureau President Blake Hurst join us live on Facebook at 3 p.m. today. And on Sunday on "This Week in Missouri Politics," we'll be joined by U.S. Congresswoman Ann Wagner.

Missouri Legislature OK's measure streamlining rape kit testing process

The Missouri House OK'd legislation from the other side of the building that includes a bevy of protections for sexual assault victims, including a streamlined process for testing rape kits.

The bill now heads to the governor for final approval.

SB 569, championed by Sen. Andrew Koenig, is derived from an audit from the Missouri Attorney General last year which found more than 6,000 untested sexual assault kits throughout the state. The bill aims to streamline the testing process and make it easier for victims to track the kits' statuses.

"Survivors of sexual assault will no longer have to suffer in silence," Koenig told The Missouri Times. "Survivors deserve justice and this legislation gives them the resources and support needed to find closure and finally resolve their case."

Schmitt releases first US Senate campaign ad: 'My conservative values run deep'
Attorney General Eric Schmitt released his first campaign ad for the 2022 U.S. Senate race Monday, promising to continue former President Donald Trump's "America First" agenda.

"President Trump built the strongest economy our country has ever seen. And I am going to fight to bring it back," Schmitt said in the two-minute spot. "My conservative values run deep. I am a sixth-generation Missourian and a proud pro-life father of three. I am a strong defender of your Second Amendment rights. I am tough on illegal immigration, and I believe that government should be limited, spending should be constrained, and taxes should be low."

Schmitt officially entered the 2022 U.S. Senate race to replace retiring Senator Roy Blunt last week. In announcing his candidacy on Fox News, Schmitt touted his efforts in office to defend Trump's policies during the fledgling Biden administration as Missouri's attorney general.

BUZZ

— U.S. Congressman Jason Smith made the rounds in Jefferson City today. It's pretty clear he's running for US Senate — not as a ploy, not as a game; he's actually running, no matter what. He's made certain commitments to folks that he would not seek the nomination without the support of former President Donald Trump. Either he has that support or a hell of a poker face. The reason folks might credibly doubt he has that support isn't because of the Twitter feed of Greitens folks; it's very likely because U.S. Senator Josh Hawley has a substantial preference for Eric Schmitt.

This race may come down to Hawley versus Smith and who most has the ear of Trump. If Trump decides to stay out of it, you're looking at a U.S. Senator Eric Greitens unless Jay Nixon decides to run or Scott Sifton runs a very solid campaign.

Don't forget, Smith already has $1.5 million in the bank. That pile of money won't be easy for other contenders to quickly raise. One interesting caveat about him running is that Greitens runs strong in the 8th district. There's little doubt that their hometown congressman could pluck some of that support, and if Greitens doesn't win the 8th, he doesn't win the primary. Where that could be important is a multi-candidate race: Smith pulling support from Greitens could help others who are looking to knock the disgraced governor down.

Speaking of other contenders, it looks more and more like Rep.Vicky Hartzler is going to enter the race. She feels the Lord has led her to run for U.S. Senate; she's just unclear when that is. If she decides that time is now, she will make a difference in the calculations for other candidates.

If and when Smith announces, the race for his seat will start or stop with Todd Richardson's decision. Most folks believe he won't run this time. There's going to be a lot of people who vacillate back and forth on who are the top candidates. In a rural area, the race won't be about issues or identity — it will be about geography.

It would surprise me if someone from St. Francis or Jefferson counties didn't run. That would leave the west side of the district open for a candidate. Without Richardson or Sen. Karla Eslinger, and barring another candidate from the southeastern part of the district, expect Sen. Justin Brown to be the favorite going in simply based on the fact that the ruby-red Republican part of that district would prefer to vote for a Hill candidate like Brown over someone from the eastern part of the district.

— A Senate Education Committee hearing scheduled for Monday was only an "informal" one. Chair Cindy O'Laughlin said she is going to host a series of informal lunches for members to "get to know each other better as persons not political opponents."

"Forging relationships is so important and can help make progress rather than war every time you turn around. It has already been helpful to me in both giving voice to my thoughts and hearing someone else's."

There is a good chance that education reform once again hits the floor of the Senate this week, but it's unclear whether the upper chamber will move forward with SB 55 as is or if they'll try to break the bill into individual parts before bringing it before the full body. Although the two bills aren't connected, the same Republicans who voted against SB 12 — the bill attempting to lessen the power of local officials during health emergencies defeated on a perfection vote last week — are serving as a tangible guide of just which Republicans the pro-education reform crowd will need to work over before taking up a bill like SB 55 again.

— Sen. Bob Onder is promoting legislation to fix the Missouri Course Access and Virtual School Program (MOCAP) with a press conference tomorrow. Onder has argued school districts and administrators don't fully allow parents to utilize the online learning options, thus resulting in legal action needed to be taken by parents.

— Garrett Hawkins is off to a fast start at the Missouri Farm Bureau. He has pretty quickly united his board and a lot of the agricultural community around his leadership at the organization that serves as the loudest voice for rural Missouri.

— The Senate is currently debating Sen. Holly Rehder's PDMP legislation. It looks like the Conservative Caucus, save for Sen. Mike Moon, is on board with the legislation. That caucus could be the biggest roadblock to any legislation in the upper chamber so, with its support, it seems Rehder has a good chance of getting the bill back over to the House where it's passed each year she's brought it up. The bill looked ready to pass last year before it was caught between some Senate versus House drama in the final hours of session.

— House committee changes:

- Martha Stevens to the Missouri Consolidated Health Care Plan Board of Trustees

— Glenn Jacobs, Truman State alumnus and mayor of Knox County, Tenn., was appointed to the new Missouri National Guard Hall of Fame Civilian Advisory Board over the weekend. Located in Kirksville, the Missouri National Guard Hall of Fame was established in 2020 by a group of Veteran volunteers to commemorate and recognize individuals who have served in the Missouri National Guard or its predecessor, the Missouri State Militia.

— The EPA has listed the Lake of the Ozarks as an "impaired waterbody," something that the Missouri Soybean Association and Missouri Corn Growers Association are pushing back on. The groups said it would have detrimental effects on the lake's community.

"This decision in particular brings with it the potential for grave economic consequences for the entire state, not to mention the Lake of the Ozark region. This is because of the Lake's large and important contribution to the state's economy through tourism. The Lake also has a direct impact on the local economy, including its public schools and other entities that rely on its strong tax base and economic drivers," the organizations said in a letter to the EPA.

Kehoe: 'It's our time to give back to Missourians'

After a career in business and a decade in the statehouse, Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe said he hoped to give back to Missourians if he wins his bid for governor in 2024.

"We've been really blessed," Kehoe said. "Claudia and I think it's our time to give back to Missourians. It's been a good community and state to us — Missourians have welcomed us into their homes. I love this state, I'm a true Missourian who's never lived anywhere else, and I think it's our opportunity to give back."

Most Missourians support implementation of Medicaid expansion, according to new survey

A majority of Missourians support the General Assembly implementing Medicaid expansion, according to a new survey commissioned by the Missouri Hospital Association (MHA).

Opinion research firm American Viewpoint surveyed about 800 Missouri voters in January, asking them questions about the legislature's responsibilities, COVID-19, and the impacts the expanded program would have on the state. Randall Gutermuth, president of American Viewpoint, said the results showed Missourians backed the program's implementation regardless of the way they voted on Election Day.

It's time to move Missouri forward

By: Ashley Aune

Last week, I told a friend I was preparing to hear a Republican bill to lower the state minimum wage, and their response was, "Have they ever considered moving forward, rather than backward?" Sarcasm aside, they had a point. As a first-term state representative, I'm growing increasingly frustrated by the regressive rhetoric and policies coming out of the Republican party.

Community pharmacies, a piece of the vaccination puzzle

By: Michaela Newell

Community pharmacies are an integral piece of the health care system helping to vaccinate millions in Missouri. Pharmacists are vaccination experts, accessible, well trusted, and know their community's needs. The Governor's Office and Missouri officials recognized all of these characteristics. In March, Missouri was the second state to prioritize a consistent supply of vaccines to local pharmacies. Since then, in March alone, independent pharmacies have been able to provide more than 80,000 doses of COVID vaccines to their communities. This is an example of how pharmacists have been an important part of the process to vaccinate the citizens of Missouri.

• Public seating will be socially distanced and therefore very limited.
SCR1 has space for 15 individuals in addition to Senators and staff. As chairman I have no control over who is allowed access to the room, I strongly suggest interested parties line up prior to the doors opening. Due to the limited seating capacity, we ask that individuals who have completed their testimony and have no further business with the committee to be courteous of individuals that maybe waiting outside for their turn to testify.

• Audio for committee hearings will be streamed. Links may be found for each committee room at https://www.senate.mo.gov/hearingsschedule/hrings.htm
The Chair has no control over when the streaming begins or ends, I would strongly advise all members and attendees to assume that anything said in the committee room may be live streamed. This includes the time before and after the meeting is called to order. The Chair has no ability to control the quality of the streaming process, with some witnesses wearing masks it is possible that some testimony may be inaudible.

• Written testimony will be allowed in lieu of in person oral testimony. Witnesses must register and may upload any written testimony at https://www.senate.mo.gov/senatewitnesssystem/ This committee will only accept testimony for or against a bill and does not accept testimony for informational purposes. While all testimony will be shared with all committee members, unless witnesses are present and willing to answer questions from committee members, these comments will not be part of the official record.

• All submissions must be received one hour prior to the hearing and may not exceed five pages in length.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

Former state Sen. Jay Wasson said he's "actively considering" a bid for the 7th congressional district after U.S. Congressman Billy Long launched his Senate campaign.

When contacted by The Missouri Times, Wasson said, "It's fair to say I'm actively considering joining the race for Congress."

A Republican, Wasson served multiple terms in the Missouri Legislature, representing SD 20 in the upper chamber. He currently serves on the Missouri State University board of governors.

"He would be the best of any of the people I've heard considering running," said former Senate President Pro Tem Ron Richard. "He is well-liked, very smart, and had an excellent reputation in Jefferson City for doing the right thing. He would be great."

From Nixa, Wasson has a background in real estate development, particularly in commercial development. It was that experience that made him particularly interested in economic development issues in the General Assembly, Wasson previously told The Missouri Times.

One of Wasson's longtime allies, Sen. Lincoln Hough, has been mentioned as a potential contender for the 7th congressional district as well.

"Look, Billy [Long] will be a great senator and to those who have reached out and encouraged me to consider running in the 7th, I've got cattle to sell, school starting for my boys, and hay to get in the barn before I start thinking about politics again," Hough told The Missouri Times.

Other potential contenders:

Mike Moon tells us: "I've been encouraged to run for Congress. I'm flattered to be considered. I'll definitely think about running. I'll have conversations with my family. And, I'll definitely seek the Lord's Wisdom, too. Missouri needs to send someone to Washington who won't back down. Someone who will fight for Freedom over Faucism, fair and free elections, and who will not rest until our troops are brought home."

Eric Burlison on Facebook: "I don't know if you saw the news … Our congressman, Billy Long, is running for another seat. Because of that, we have an opportunity to run for U.S. Congress. God's timing is not our timing, and this is His race to win, not mine. It will be the most difficult race in my life and we need your prayers as we approach this difficult decision."

Cody Smith tells us: "There's a lot going on with the state's budget right now, and I remain committed to my role as House Budget Chairman."

Other prospective contenders include Springfield businessman Jeff Layman, former member of Senator Blunt's staff Joelle Cannon, and Rep. Bishop Davidson.

OTHER BUZZ

— Congressman Jason Smith is holding multiple events around the state this week — notably not in his district. Polling shows he is the candidate who, if he enters the U.S. Senate race, would affect former Gov. Eric Greitens the most.

— State Rep. David Gregory officially launched his state auditor campaign today with several campaign stops planned across the state this week. He started his campaign with an immediate endorsement from the Missouri Fraternal Order of Police.

Billy Long jumps into US Senate race

Congressman Billy Long made his entrance into the U.S. Senate race Tuesday, adding one more to an already crowded field of Republican contenders.

Long made the announcement he was seeking to replace outgoing Senator Roy Blunt on Fox News just as Attorney General Eric Schmitt and former Gov. Eric Greitens did. He said he's kicking off a bus tour of Missouri.

"We need to get the Senate back. You aren't going to do anything until you get the Senate back and I'm the guy who can win that Senate seat in Missouri," Long said. "As Republicans, we must fight hard to regain control of the Senate. The Democrats are working at warp-speed to dismantle everything President Trump and I fought for over the last four years. I'm fed-up, and I'm not having it."

Ann Wagner running for re-election to Missouri's 2nd congressional district

After much speculation about a potential U.S. Senate bid, Congresswoman Ann Wagner has decided to defend her 2nd congressional seat in 2022.

"I am running for re-election to Congress because Missourians need a principled fighter who will hold the Biden administration accountable and stand up for what we believe and hold dear to our hearts," Wagner said of her decision in an op-ed exclusive to The Missouri Times Tuesday.

"In Congress, I've worked hard for the good people of Missouri's 2nd district. Being your congresswoman has never been a job for me; it is a calling," she said. "The work I do in Congress — from putting forward legislation to protect our values to ensuring the veterans and every single person I represent in the St. Louis area receive the benefits they have earned to working with business and industry to grow economic opportunity for future generations — the 2nd congressional district is personal to me and my family. It is home."

Missouri Senate race: Who is running for Roy Blunt's seat?

Despite much speculation, former Gov. Jay Nixon and former U.S. Senator Claire McCaskill have both declined to enter the Democratic primary. Congresswoman Ann Wagner said she will run for re-election to the U.S. House and Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe is running for governor in 2024.

Still, there's a growing contingent of Republicans and Democrats vying for the seat. Here's a look at who has entered the race.

Schmitt successfully blocks St. Louis County mask mandate

A St. Louis County judge granted Attorney General Eric Schmitt's request for a temporary pause on the county's mask mandate Tuesday, stalling the order until a hearing before the court later this month.

The court blocked St. Louis County Executive Sam Page, St. Louis Health Department Director Faisal Kahn, and the county health department from enforcing the mandate until an Aug. 17 hearing on whether the county council's vote to end the mandate can prevail. Judge Nellie Ribaudo found residents were caught between the order and the vote, leaving them without proper guidance on the matter.

Schmitt said his office won the first battle over the mandate, though the conflict was far from over.

Attempt to put gas tax increase before voters falters

Americans For Prosperity-Missouri (AFP-MO) abandoned its effort to place the motor fuel tax increase on the ballot in 2022 but still plans to fight the hike next session.

The referendum petition filed in May sought to place the measure before voters in November 2022, more than a year after the first incremental increase.

Schmitt challenges Kansas City mask mandate

Having successfully halted St. Louis County's mask mandate Tuesday, Attorney General Eric Schmitt filed a similar challenge in Kansas City.

Schmitt filed a lawsuit in Jackson County Tuesday afternoon, arguing the mandate was "unreasonable, unconstitutional, and arbitrary and capricious" and asking the court to invalidate it. The suit targeted Mayor Quinton Lucas, County Regulated Industries Division Director Jim Ready, and the city's health department.

PSC dismisses Grain Belt Express complaint

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) dismissed a complaint against the Grain Belt Express that alleged changes to the project violated prior PSC orders.

A coalition of groups, including the Missouri Landowners Alliance (MLA), argued planned changes to the project released by parent company Invenergy would invalidate an order issued by the commission in 2019. The certificate of convenience and necessity (CCN) required the project file an updated application if the design changed — which management had yet to do.

Capital city to host bicentennial celebration next week

The capital city is gearing up to celebrate Missouri's bicentennial next week with a series of events commemorating the milestone.

The celebration is set to kick off Monday with the dedication of the Bicentennial Bridge, which will provide a pedestrian and bike path from the Capitol to Adrian's Island along the Missouri River. The bridge will connect to a 30-acre parkland north of the Union Pacific Railroad. The Bicentennial Chessboard, a collaboration with the World Chess Hall of Fame, will also be unveiled on the island.

Noble Health Foundation partners with rural schools to offer free physicals

The Noble Health Foundation joined the city of Montgomery and Wellsville School District to offer free physicals for student-athletes.

The exams were offered to students entering grades 7-12 this semester, seeking to help the school minimize the risk of injury for students due to pre-existing health conditions. The group said while the federal government invested in some schools to help struggling districts during the COVID-19 pandemic, the ongoing financial difficulties remained and put smaller districts at risk of closing.

It's time to get our country back on the right track

By: Ann Wagner

Joe Biden, Nancy Pelosi, and the radical Left are attacking the fabric of our society with their socialist agenda. Each day they have control, they push our nation closer and closer to the brink of socialism. Republicans have no time to waste in taking back majorities in the House and Senate. The future of our country depends on it.

In Congress, I've worked hard for the good people of Missouri's 2nd district. Being your congresswoman has never been a job for me; it is a calling. The work I do in Congress — from putting forward legislation to protect our values to ensuring the veterans and every single person I represent in the St. Louis area receive the benefits they have earned to working with business and industry to grow economic opportunity for future generations — the 2nd congressional district is personal to me and my family. Farm Bureau gears up for Missouri State Fair

Every year, I look forward all summer to the Missouri State Fair and memories to be made. I was about 5 years old when I attended the fair for the first time with my grandparents — a memory I have never forgotten. I remember walking the rows of farm equipment and sitting between grandpa and grandma in the Coliseum watching livestock shows. For lunch, we enjoyed a picnic on a blanket under a tree near where we had parked. It was the best day.

This Week in Missouri Politics Column: Mike Parson ain't your daddy

By: Scott Faughn

The desire to blame folks for things is a very powerful urge. Typically blame comes when folks are frustrated or scared or when they have an agenda. Then they feel the urge to stretch blame to highly illogical places.

COVID is something that has been so all-encompassing for people that after a year and a half, any sane person has had to spend at least a little time both frustrated and scared. Because of that, I've seen some folks blame Donald Trump and now Joe Biden. I've seen some folks blame Mike Parson and Sam Page. While others blame China, I tend to side with those who blame the Cubs.

Kehoe announces 2024 gubernatorial run, forgoing US Senate bid

Instead of making a bid for Roy Blunt's U.S. Senate seat in 2022, Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe said he will run for governor in 2024.

Kehoe, 59, made the announcement Monday morning.

"I am humbled to know so many Missourians see an even greater leadership role for me in Missouri," Kehoe said. "I will continue to use my years of job-creating business experience, what I have learned on the farm, in leading for conservative views and values in the state Senate, and now as lieutenant governor to increase opportunity, freedom, and security for all Missourians."

"I will work to unify the party behind a strong nominee committed to representing Missouri's conservative, common-sense views and values in the United States Senate," he continued. "While Claudia and I have been honored by the encouragement and offers of support for me to serve as Missouri's next U.S. Senator, my true calling remains to work on behalf of Missourians in Missouri as lieutenant governor and as candidate for governor in 2024."

BUZZ

— With Rep. Dan Shaul announcing his candidacy, the race to replace Sen.Paul Wieland in SD 22 has renewed interest for what will prove to be an interesting primary. Despite being the first out of the gate, Rep. Mary Elizabeth Coleman stands to lose the most if Rep.Becky Ruth also decides to join the fray. If she decided to run, Ruth would see an influx of cash from the labor sector, especially the Teamsters. They're not fans of either Shaul or Coleman and will put their money where their mouth is when it comes to that Senate seat. It just depends on how much money they're willing to throw into the race.

In a three-plus-way primary, it always helps to be the woman running against two or three men, or the man running against two or three women. For whatever reason, voters typically split the vote between the others. Jean Evans won when she ran against three men in the primary for HD 99, Saundra McDowell got the nomination when she ran for auditor against three men, and Rep. Bruce Degroot won his House seat in 2016 against three women. The same dynamic could play out in JeffCo, helping Shaul.

Ruth may be looking for an appointment rather than a seat in the Senate, though. If she's running, I'd expect an announcement in the coming weeks.

For the Democrats, redistricting could play a significant role in who they decide to put up for the seat. According to the Missouri Constitution, a candidate is eligible to run either in the district in where they currently live, in any district that takes in a portion of the district where they lived prior to redistricting, or any district that includes part of the county where they live the first year after redistricting.

This means that quite a few more folks will be eligible to run, but it also means they'll have to wait to see if they're eligible until the state gets detailed Census data, which isn't likely to happen until the end of September at the earliest. If that's true, House and Senate commissions won't be able to start proposing districts until October or November. With Jeffco's population growing quite a lot over the last 10 years, you can expect SD 22 to shrink.

— Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe's announcement that he's running for governor in 2024 doesn't necessarily change the fact that Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft is still the favorite for the role, but it does mean that Ashcroft's inevitable announcement will be framed as him running against Kehoe, rather than the other way around. There are likely a few other candidates who have their eye on the top spot, but 2024 is a long way away, and consultants won't be paying attention to that race until Nov. 9, 2022.

— Looking at the 2022 Senate race, it's starting to look like any Democrats who were considering throwing their hat into the primary are about to watch that ship sail. Former state Sen. Scott Sifton and newcomer Lucas Kunce are the only two that have the infrastructure and funds to mount a serious campaign. Anyone else who could match their preparedness has already said they won't run, or, like Auditor Nicole Galloway, endorsed Sifton. But, Eric Greitens' announcement today that he will be running for the seat is probably making Democrats in Washington think they have a shot at the race with a divided Republican ticket. Jay Nixon may be one of the first people who received a phone call after the announcement.

— Rep. Phil Christofanelli's ESA bill is going to be heard in the Senate Education Committee tomorrow. It may end up being the only chance the Republicans have to pass education reform this year. There is always the risk that the Senate hang a bunch of amendments on it and send it back to the House, where it ultimately gets shot down. The bill passed with only 82 votes in the House and some of those votes may fall away if the Senate tampers too much with the bill.

— 'Hancock and Kelley,' the political talk show on Fox2Now anchored by St. Louis' John Hancock and Michael Kelley, is going national. They'll be getting a regular Thursday feature on the "The Donlon Report," a new show on NewsNation, which used to be WGN.

— Tune in this Thursday at noon when Kaitlyn Schallhorn and Conner Kerrigan will be premiering their new Missouri Times podcast, Third Read. Schallhorn and Kerrigan will wrap up the #MoLeg week while sipping on a new cocktail every Thursday. Have a cocktail suggestion? Text Conner at 815-263-1261.

A good kind of fever
By: Garrett Hawkins
My wife has been stricken with a severe fever and itchy hands. Oddly enough, though, Jennifer is smiling, chatty, and full of pep. It happens every year when March 1 arrives. She gets spring fever accompanied by the itch to garden, starting with planting peas and potatoes.

Amended 1: Change of time.

The Senate Committee on Insurance and Banking may go into Executive Session and vote on Senate Bill 474, Senate Bill 475, Senate Bill 485, and/or 501.

• Public seating will be socially distanced and therefore very limited.
SCR1 has space for 15 individuals in addition to Senators and staff. As chairman I have no control over who is allowed access to the room, I strongly suggest interested parties line up prior to the doors opening. Due to the limited seating capacity, we ask that individuals who have completed their testimony and have no further business with the committee to be courteous of individuals that maybe waiting outside for their turn to testify.

• Audio for committee hearings will be streamed. Links may be found for each committee room at https://www.senate.mo.gov/hearingsschedule/hrings.htm
The Chair has no control over when the streaming begins or ends, I would strongly advise all members and attendees to assume that anything said in the committee room may be live streamed. This includes the time before and after the meeting is called to order. The Chair has no ability to control the quality of the streaming process, with some witnesses wearing masks it is possible that some testimony may be inaudible.

• Written testimony will be allowed in lieu of in person oral testimony. Witnesses must register and may upload any written testimony at https://www.senate.mo.gov/senatewitnesssystem/ This committee will only accept testimony for or against a bill and does not accept testimony for informational purposes. While all testimony will be shared with all committee members, unless witnesses are present and willing to answer questions from committee members, these comments will not be part of the official record.

• All submissions must be received one hour prior to the hearing and may not exceed five pages in length.

BUZZ

— Amid rumors she's considering a U.S. Senate bid, U.S. Congresswoman Ann Wagner has started a new PAC, the "Wagner Victory Committee," per POLITICO. Wagner has also been active on social media decrying so-called vaccine passports and President Joe Biden's gun control initiatives he unveiled today.

— Kirk Mathews will fill in for Todd Richardson as interim director of Missouri's Medicaid program. He's been heading the Medicaid Office of Transformation. Read more about him from our 2019 profile.

— Rep. Nick Schroer's bill allowing to-go alcohol in Missouri restaurants will be heard in the Senate General Laws committee on Tuesday. The bill passed the House with a bi-partisan majority in late February. A Senate version from Sen. Denny Hoskins has been second read in the lower chamber.

— Mental health is on everyone's mind this week. Senator Roy Blunt visited Columbia this week where he met with UM System President Mun Choi and other health care officials. During a roundtable, he stressed the importance of treating mental health like any other health illness.

Freshman Rep. Patty Lewis' mental health parity bill is scheduled to be heard in committee next week. Over in the upper chamber, Sen. Greg Razer has a mental health parity bill, but it's sitting in the Senate Insurance and Banking Committee and has not yet had a hearing. The bills seek to put Missouri in line with federal law signed by then-President George W. Bush which prohibits health insurance providers from imposing greater benefit limitations on mental health and substance abuse disorders than surgical or other medical coverage. The federal law left it up to states to establish enforcement mechanisms which Missouri has not yet done.

— Keep an eye out tomorrow for a tipsheet on the 8th congressional district. Congressman Jason Smith hasn't announced his bid for U.S. Senate yet, but we expect it in the coming weeks.

— Listen to the latest episode of "Third Read" from our very own Kaitlyn Schallhorn and Conner Kerrigan. This week, Kaitlyn and Conner discuss Todd Graves' appointment to the UM System Board of Curators, Sen. Holly Rehder's PDMP bill, Rep. Ron Hicks' gun bill, Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler's potential run for U.S. Senate, the results from the St. Louis City municipal elections, and more. Listen on Spotify, Apple Podcasts, or right in your browser.

— St. Louis Mayor-elect Tishaura Jones will be the featured guest on "This Week in Missouri Politics" Sunday. NARAL's Mallory Schwarz, Derrick Good, and Reps. Ron Hicks and Rasheen Aldridge will make up the panel.

Kolkmeyer brings lifetime of public service experience to PSC

With a stint in the statehouse and a long career in business and safety behind him, former Rep. Glen Kolkmeyer is taking that experience to his new position in the Public Service Commission (PSC).

Kolkmeyer was appointed to the commission by Gov. Mike Parson last week, the latest step in a lifelong career of service to Missourians. The former legislator told The Missouri Times he felt honored to be chosen for the position and ready for the next chapter.

“I look at this opportunity as a continuation of my public service,” Kolkmeyer said. “Starting right out of high school I joined the fire service, then served 13 years on the Propane Safety Commission, and eight years in the legislature. This to me is just continuing that public service. I’m extremely honored that the governor asked me to serve.”

BUZZ

— The St. Louis City Board of Elections is expecting a 30 percent turnout for the municipal elections tomorrow which will cover the race for mayor, aldermen, and the school board.

The mayor's race is too close to call this early, but TreasurerTishaura Jones enjoys a small lead over Alderwoman Cara Spencer. Spencer's campaign has focused its budget on TV ads, while Jones's campaign has focused on an extensive field operation. Both campaigns' messaging has focused on Jones, with the treasurer highlighting what she believes to be her strengths while Spencer's camp has gone after her perceived weaknesses. While a lot of progressive groups have been volunteering for Jones, Spencer has the support of the popular firefighters union. The two have also both responded today to the widely televised disturbance at the city's maximum-security jail, the second major incident there this year and a focal point for many local progressive activists.

It's important to note that Jones was re-elected treasurer in 2020 with 78 percent of the citywide vote which means more people know her name than Spencer.

Today, the Spencer campaign circulated a memo by internet pollster Invisibly predicting a 15 point victory by Spencer and dismissing a poll by rival pollster Show Me Victories that showed Jones leading.

The winner of tomorrow's election, which will be the first of its kind after the passage of Prop D, will be sworn in on April 20, the fastest transition in recent memory.

The most important and pressing test for the new mayor will be who can change the 32 percent capacity rule at Busch Stadium to 100 percent so all American patriots can go watch the Cardinals play the greatest sport on Earth.

— Renew Missouri, a non-profit focused on renewable energy and energy efficiency policy, is urging the Boone County government to reject proposed wind ordinances drafted by its Office of Resource Management.

"The rules are drafted to say no wind turbines can be within 1,750 feet of any property lines or road," Renew Missouri Executive Director James Owen said. "Not only is this completely restrictive, it's not even backed up by sound engineering and scientific standards. They are a farce."

— The Missouri Veterans Commission has a new chair and vice chair.Kelly McClelland, owner, president, and CEO of McClelland Law Firm in Liberty, was elected chairman of the commission. He is a U.S. Army veteran. Meredith Knopp, a former captain in the U.S. Army, is the new vice chair. She is the co-founder of the nonprofit HEROES Care.

— Look for a tipsheet on the U.S Senate race and possible congressional races tomorrow midday.

For Rolla families, school choice means hope for a better education

By: Karen Harris

As any parent will tell you, when it comes to our children’s education we do not cut corners. We want what is best for our kids. We want them to get a world-class education that will empower them to live successful careers and happy lives. To those ends, we will sacrifice just about everything to make sure that happens.

Farm Bureau helping protect livestock from predators

By: Kelly Smith

In recent years, black vultures have been extending their range into southern Missouri. A cousin of the more common turkey vulture, these aggressive birds with a five-foot wingspan are now a common sight in our state. Until recently, the average farmer or rancher has had few options to deal with these pests. Thankfully, a new Missouri Farm Bureau (MOFB) program is providing relief.

Lawmakers call for local utility relief fund in wake of cold snap

A bipartisan group of legislators is calling on Gov. Mike Parson to establish an emergency relief fund for local utilities in the wake of February's cold snap.

Rep. Jeff Porter, who penned a letter to the governor that garnered the signatures of most of the Missouri House and seven senators, said the legislature hoped to secure help for constituents as they reckoned with the fallout of the extreme weather event and the resulting rise in natural gas and electricity prices. The letter requested a $50 million loan fund allowing citizen-led utilities impacted by the storm to borrow for up to five years without interest.

According to Porter, surrounding states have already begun implementing similar programs.

BUZZ

— Gov. Mike Parson asked to speak privately to the two statehouse reporters from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch after his press conference yesterday. Sources said he took the time to admonish them for their sexist coverage of Becky Willard's appointment as executive director at Hawthorn Foundation. If you remember, the headline for the Post Dispatch's article on Willard's new gig framed her as the "wife of top aide to Gov. Mike Parson," without naming her. This wasn't well-received by most folks on either side of the aisle who know that Willard's accomplishments very comfortably stand on their own two feet. Good for Parson for letting the Post Dispatch know that type of casual sexism won't be tolerated from members of the media.

— Democrats are still looking for their savior to prevent a SenatorEric Greitens and give their party a statewide win all in one fell swoop. The DSCC called former Gov. Jay Nixon back in January, and he originally passed on the opportunity to run, but that was before Senator Roy Blunt was out and Greitens was in. There have only been two Democratic statewide candidates in Missouri that have been able to peel away Trump voters — Nixon and Jason Kander, and Kander is for sure staying home this time. Those voters are going to be absolutely crucial in 2022. There's a narrative that Nixon will struggle with Black voters, but it's important to note that he won by 14 and 19 points, respectively, when he ran statewide, and had to pull together coalitions from every part of the Democratic party. It's true that those races happened before Ferguson, but it's also true that Democratic voters hate Greitens more than any candidate the Democrats could put up. He will have trouble with law and order voters who he had won over in the past from his work as attorney general, though.

Although Kansas City Mayor Quinton Lucas is an interesting prospect, his trial balloon seems to be losing steam, and his hands are tied with a city that is working on its economic recovery from the pandemic. We should have more insight into Nixon's thinking in the middle of this month. He's having serious talks with Democratic strategists and campaigners in the next few weeks.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— Medicaid expansion funding will now move over to the Senate after House Democrats were unable to move Republican votes with their messaging that the body was going “against the will of the people.” In fact, some House Republicans made it clear that this line of reasoning doesn’t really matter to them. Rep. Justin Hill said that he was “proud to stand against the will of the people” because they were duped by the language of the amendment.

Some of the folks who worked on the ballot initiative are wondering why Democrats abandoned the original messaging of the campaign, which was much more economically focused, and tried instead to shame Republicans into funding expansion. We’ll see if Senate Democrats take a queue from the campaign and shift their tone as they begin budget deliberations. Parson wants to see the program funded, and that was reflected in his budget.

“We do have enough money to cover the people [who are eligible],” Parson said in a presser yesterday. “If the Senate votes like the House did, then we’ve got to figure out how we’re gonna deal with it.”

It’s more likely that the Senate lets the whole ordeal be handled in court, but some members of the body, like Sen. Lincoln Hough, have publicly said that the upper chamber will find a way to fund Medicaid. But, Hough and other Republican members of the Senate may have an interesting primary coming up if their congressional representatives decide to jump into the U.S. Senate race. This may come as a shock, but Medicaid expansion probably won’t do too well in a Republican congressional primary.

— The police reform bill from Sens. Tony Luetkemeyer and Brian Williams is most likely headed to Rep. Ron Hicks’ Special Committee on Homeland Security in the coming weeks where it has a decent chance of being voted out without too much trouble.

— No new episode of “This Week in Missouri Politics” this week. Have a great Easter weekend and enjoy the last Monday without session until sine die.

Missouri lawmakers move to ban vaccine passports — but what are they?

Missouri lawmakers took the first step to ban so-called vaccine passports for travel this week.

An amendment attached to a transportation bill from Sen. Lincoln Hough prohibits Missouri organizations from requiring COVID-19 vaccine documentation in order to access transportation systems, such as on airplanes, buses, cabs, or trains. The amendment was adopted along party lines, and the bill was later perfected and sits on the calendar for third reading.

Members of the Senate Conservative Caucus celebrated the inclusion of the amendment on the bill.

PSC sets date for coronavirus waiver extension

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) moved up the effective date for an extended COVID-19 waiver requested by Spire Missouri.

Spire requested the effective date of an extended order waiving compliance with certain PSC rules, such as the frequency of in-person inspections, be moved up a month to accommodate social distancing guidelines.

Freshmen to Watch: Chris Sander

Sitting in Rep. Chris Sander's new office is a 500-gram firework cake.

Sander, a freshman representative from HD 33, is the owner and founder of Powder Monkey FIREWORKS, Inc. in Weldon Spring with locations also in Cape Girardeau, Kingdom City, and New Melle. And he brought part of his business with him to the Capitol as a reminder that he would like to be known for firework legislation.

Approval of UM Board of Curators picks stalls in Senate

Approval of two appointees to the University of Missouri Board of Curators stalled in the Senate Thursday amid legislators' concerns over the picks.

Sources have told The Missouri Times as many as 20 senators on both sides of the aisle, including those on the Gubernatorial Appointments Committee, had concerns about losing David Steelman on the board and that his replacement's nomination had gone upside down in committee. Steelman's appointed replacement, Cape Girardeau-based business owner Keith Holloway, did not make it to the floor for consideration this week. Sen. Justin Brown voiced his concerns about Steelman's replacement and pushed for him to retain his seat.

House considering bill to fight catalytic converter theft

As catalytic converter thefts increase across the country, the Missouri House is set to debate a bill meant to curb the issue.

HB 1153, sponsored by Rep. Don Mayhew, would change penalties for the theft of a catalytic converter, adding it to the offense of stealing. The first offense would be a Class A misdemeanor while any subsequent theft within a decade would be a Class E felony. Mayhew said theft was an issue for communities across the state.

How white politicians use dog whistles to divide us — and what white folks can do about it

By: Mallory Schwarz

St. Louis has earned a progressive moniker over time: We have Democratic-majority governing bodies, high-profile progressive leaders, and innovative, progressive initiatives. However, St. Louis has long been — and continues to be — one of the most segregated cities in the country. This deep divide is visible in our neighborhoods, schools, and elections.

Response to Tobacco 21 bills in legislature

By: Stan Cowan

If Missouri legislators truly wish to reduce youth tobacco use and enhance public health, they should disregard e-cigarette activist A. J. Moll's call for passage of HB 517 and instead listen to long-established health groups such as Missouri State Medical Association, Missouri Academy of Family Physicians, and American Academy of Pediatrics in support of SB 124.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

It would appear as though Congresswoman Ann Wagner is getting closer to a decision on the U.S. Senate race. It also looks pretty certain Congressman Billy Long will announce at his event next week. Kellyanne Conway has been doing his consulting and putting his team together, and it looks like he'll be in.

For those who do not want to see the state embarrassed again, Congressman Jason Smith still polls the best because he's the only one who cuts into former Gov. Eric Greitens' base in southeast Missouri.

Speaking of Greitens, while he has $2.5 million from billionaire Richard Uihlein, this hillbilly believes his guy is in for another $2.5 million which would put Greitens at $5 million in soft money. Keep in mind, with soft money, you have to pay standard rates in Missouri which will be astronomical.

A PAC supporting Attorney General Eric Schmitt dropped its first statewide ad comparing the U.S. Senate contender to the former president. The 70-second spot from the Save Missouri Values PAC likened Schmitt to President Donald Trump whose endorsement is highly coveted in the GOP primary. It highlighted Schmitt's comments and actions regarding alleged election irregularities during the 2020 presidential election along with Trump's allegations that Democrats cheated to take the White House.

The Stein of Knowledge says Congresswoman Wagner is nearing her decision. And David Gregory seems very likely to announce his plans for summer soon as well.

On the heels of Treasurer Scott Fitzpatrick announcing his run for auditor, there are some who wish he would have waited a week as many think he would be a very good congressional candidate. That said, the field in southwest Missouri probably starts with Sen. Eric Burlison. Burlison was a successful House member and moved several bills — and not just social issue legislation but many significant bills as chairman of Professional Registration. He seemingly enjoyed the House which makes you think he'd be in for Congress. If that's the case, keep an eye on Curtis Trent we a leading candidate to replace him in the Senate.

Probably the most natural candidate for office is former House Speaker Elijah Haahr. He's a tremendous politician, is well-liked, can raise the money, and understands what it would take to run for Congress. He has been considering this race as, to be fair, Congressman Long did make a term limit pledge that's up this year. Haahr would make a tremendous congressman and candidate. However, don't forget he spent eight of the most tumultuous years any person who has ever served the state as his time in the House from speakers stepping aside to governors resigning in disgrace to budget deficits to a damn pandemic. The guy may just want some time with his kids before going back to elected office.

Another top candidate would be Lincoln Hough. If Hough decided to dive in, he would be able to raise the money it would take to be competitive initially. And there will be many Missourians who feel with the loss of Roy Blunt, the state will desperately need someone who knows how to produce for the state. Hough's first three years as a state senator have probably been as impressive as anyone's first three years as a state senator. Every time this seat is open, if Joplin can get behind one candidate, they have a legitimate chance.

Assuming Ron Richard doesn't take a pass at the seat, Cody Smith would be a very viable congressional candidate and would likely be a very successful member of Congress. Whatever your thoughts were on the FRA, the clear and consistent position he took from the gaveling in in January to the end of the special session made even people who weren't his biggest fans tip their hats. It's seldom a Republican can stand out as a poised, intelligent, thoughtful leader, but he has pulled that off this summer and frankly is looked at differently by many today than he was this time last year.

Greene County Commissioner Bob Dixon probably takes a look at that seat, and there's no reason Sen. Mike Moon doesn't take a look. He would not need as much money as others. He could have that area of southwest Springfield to himself. As I've said since the day he said he was running for state senator, Mike. Moon. Is. An. Excellent. Campaigner. At. The. Front. Door.

Let me give you a couple of dark horse candidates: Jeff Layman, a very well-connected Springfield businessman, has tons of friends, and I've never heard of him having an enemy. He's independently wealthy and one of the reasons Billy Long won the seat to begin with. And then there's Joelle Cannon, formerly on the staff of Roy Blunt, who is well-liked and has connections everywhere. She could be the type of candidate who catches fire with some of her Washington, D.C., connections and see some groups come in to see her be successful. Lastly, Rep. Bishop Davidson. The halls of Congress are filled with folks who have been part of think tanks. He's got a good look, a lot of energy, and I know a lot of members who remind me of Davidson.

Trish Gunby launches challenge to Congresswoman Ann Wanger

State Rep. Trish Gunby officially kicked off her congressional campaign Monday, mounting a challenge to Republican Congresswoman Ann Wagner in Missouri's 2nd district.

Gunby was elected to the statehouse in 2019 during a special election in which she upset her Republican counterpart, raising about $156,000. for that race. As The Missouri Times previously reported, she filed paperwork with the Federal Election Commission last week to run as a Democrat for the U.S. House seat.

Speaking from a dance studio in Manchester Monday, Gunby said promised to establish relationships in Congress and compromise when she's able.

St. Louis County mask mandate battle sent back to state court

The legal battle over St. Louis County's mask mandate is heading to state court after a federal judge remanded Attorney General Eric Schmitt's lawsuit.

The 37-page lawsuit filed in the 21st Judicial Circuit Court in St. Louis County asked for the mandate to be declared "unconstitutional, unlawful, arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable, and invalid" under state law. The lawsuit said HB 271, signed by Gov. Mike Parson in June, required a report showing the need for such an order, but one was not provided.

Eigel: Mask mandates, shutdowns harm communities

As parts of Missouri reinstate mask mandates in an effort to combat rising COVID-19 cases, Sen. Bill Eigel said the move could cause more economic damage for businesses and communities.

"I think that creating a mask mandate as a way to coerce people into getting the vaccine and getting higher vaccination rates is not a good idea," Eigel said. "We have to get to a place where we're not tolerant of certain measures from the government in order to address the COVID pandemic and any kind of economic shutdown. … Quite frankly, they cause more destruction and damage to our communities, our business owners, and our livelihoods than anything that's going to be caused by COVID."

TWMP Column: Missourah owes Sarah Steelman a beer

The next time you're at a Mizzou game and you want a real quick test to see if someone actually understands state government, ask them what is the most difficult job in the entire Missouri bureaucracy. If they give you any answer other than the job of Commissioner of the Office of Administration, they failed your test.

The job is so expansive that it's really hard to explain all of the facets of it. The best way I can think to explain it is: All of the stuff the governor says that the state is doing, well the OA commissioner is actually in charge of doing that stuff.

Every contact of significance goes through that office. Every state employee wage issue has to be dealt with by that office. There really isn't much that the state does that an email or a piece of paper doesn't pass through Room 125 on the first floor of the Capitol.

No one did the job as professionally and competently, and in more troubled waters, than the outgoing commissioner, Sarah Steelman.
Normally, when someone leaves a post with the plaudits and fanfare from her contemporaries that Sarah Steelman is currently receiving, then they would have had to inherit a mess from their predecessor.

That was not the case here. Sarah Steelman inherited an incredibly well-run operation from Gov. Jay Nixon's OA Commissioner Doug Nelson. If you want some insight as to why Doug Nelson's reputation in the lobbying community has risen faster and higher than anyone I can remember in such a short period of time, it's maybe because he had to learn every detail about every function of state government in his previous position.

No, Sarah Steelman inherited a well-run operation, and she would go on to need all of that operations capacity to handle what was maybe the most challenging five years the state bureaucracy has endured in the last 150.

I'm not gonna detail her resume for you. If you're reading this, you should already know she was a leading state senator, state treasurer, professor — and all while having the more than full-time job of keeping David Steelman out of trouble.

She was appointed to the position during former Gov. Grietens' handful of months in office and was quickly and easily confirmed. In fact, it was her nomination that gave a lot of folks pause to consider the concept that maybe Greitnes actually cared about running the state. Look, one person can only do so much.

She had to deal with the off-payroll consultants attempting to chime in, the secret texting apps with communications on platforms she wasn't on, and the general chaos that the former governor seemed to enjoy during those few weeks in office.

Maybe more impressively, of the dozens of scandals that hit the Greitens administration, there was never a scandal about how the state let and approved contracts. Now, I heard about more than one person attempting to influence that process and being quite frustrated when she rebuffed them, but she would never confirm any of that to me. However, the scoreboard of no procurement scandals in an administration rife with scandals stands out.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

It did become public that as Greitens was heading out the door, he tried to stiff the state with his legal bills from mistreating that woman. She shut him down and said she was going to have to ask a judge for permission to pay them. Can you imagine how tough it must have been to tell the governor who appointed you no to that?

She is tougher than you think — and even if you think she is pretty tough, she is still tougher than you think.

With the backdrop of the Greteins' fiasco, she worked with the legislature and Capitol Commission on renovating the State Capitol. While there is no question that former Sen. Ron Richard was the man who, by sheer force of will, renovated the Capitol, it was Sarah Steelman who made sure the project was on budget and on time.

Gov. Mike Parson was sworn in this past January on the steps of a beautifully renovated state Capitol, and Sarah Steelman can tell you where every penny was spent on every brick of that building.

That project, and all of state government, ran into a challenge that no one could have predicted in a virus now known as the COVID-19 pandemic. This made not only procurement a challenge, but it made just the basics of providing a place for state employees to work challenging.

However, the state got on with the work and now has more options to serve Missourians from their homes than ever and serve the state in their offices safer than ever. And every mask, laptop, pair of gloves, and remote network was procured from her office.

Moreover, you can now find out pretty much exactly where your state tax dollars are spent from a website she was in charge of at: budgetexplorer.mo.gov.

Not a bad day's work.

I have no idea what she will do next — besides continuing her yeoman's work of keeping David out of trouble — but I reckon it will be something fun that most likely improves the state of Missouri in some way.

So if you see the native Jeff Citian over at Barvino or at a Mizzou game do your part because, you, me, and around 6 million other Missourians all owe her a beer.

Ashcroft: Election security vital for Missouri

With the 2022 elections on the horizon, Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft hopes to see voter ID and hand-marked paper ballots at polling places in the future.

"We'd like to get to a real good government photo ID requirement that makes sure that every registered voter can vote, but also we know who you are to make sure that people aren't cheating the system," Ashcroft said. "We'd love to go to handmark paper ballots — I've never known anybody that said you can hack a No. 2 pencil."

New IRS surveillance power would threaten local banks, small businesses

By: Kalena Bruce

Within the multi-trillion spending boondoggle being debated in Washington is a provision that will allow the IRS to spy on nearly every bank account in the U.S. Banks would be enlisted to monitor, track, and report on every account with $10,000 or more in annual cash flow. That's up from the originally proposed threshold of $600.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

— Interesting night at the Pulaski County Lincoln Days last night. It was a large crowd that heard Mike Kehoe and Jay Ashcroft give speeches back-to-back. They both said pretty much the same stuff. Surprise, surprise: Neither cares for Joe Biden much. It will be interesting to see the two of them speak back-to-back at more events over the next few years.

— In U.S. Senate race news, former Gov. Eric Greitens put out a poll showing him leading the race. As time goes on, I find polls to be less and less reliable. The problem is, I don't know what you do to replace them as far as measuring candidates' support.

— Look for a decision pretty soon from Sen. Caleb Rowden as to whether he runs for Congress. Most folks assume he's likely to run. He would certainly start off as a top-flight candidate. One reason is it's going to affect Senate leadership races. We'll have a full tipsheet on Friday, but look for the Conservative Caucus sitting on seven, and as of now, you need 13 for a majority. They have pickup opportunities in Northwest Missouri, Franklin County, and Jefferson County. The only person they are sure to lose is Sen. Bob Onder, but it seems possible everyone running there could be a candidate to join their caucus. They could lose Sen. Eric Burlison who is running for Congress, but the majority of the majority could lose Rowden to the same fate.

On the other end, if Rowden doesn't get in, Sen. Rick Brattin could be a top contender, and that would cost another seat. However, leadership contenders probably should start factoring this in. As it stands now, two leadership candidates are Sen. Bill White, who has already announced, and Sen. Mike Bernskoetter.

— Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe will report very strong third-quarter fundraising numbers. The gubernatorial campaign raised more than $300,000 and the American Dream PAC, which supports Kehoe, will report $180,000 for the third quarter. With the $40,000 in PAC contributions on Oct. 4, that brings the reported fundraising totals (both committee and PAC) to more than $500,000 reporting. The reports will be filed this evening.

— In other fundraising news, Eric Burlison raised nearly $150,000 in the first month since he announced his candidacy for the 7th congressional district on Sept. 1.

And Taylor Burks raised more than $186,000 in the third quarter in his quest for the 4th congressional district seat. He ends the quarter with more than $168,000 cash on hand.

— The Appellate Judicial Commission submitted three nominees to Gov. Mike Parson today for the vacancy on the Missouri Court of Appeals, Western District to replace the retired Judge Thomas Newton. The nominees are: Deputy attorney general Shaun J. Mackelprang, 16th Judicial Circuit Judge Jalilah Otto, and 7th Judicial Circuit Judge Janet L. Sutton.

— Tomorrow, look for a column from me on some of the extraordinary accomplishments of former OA Commissioner Sarah Steelman.

— Sunday on the show we'll have Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft.

New Medicaid regulations for abortion providers in Missouri took effect Wednesday, enacting requirements some said could potentially jeopardize funding for Planned Parenthood.

Galloway's follow up review of New Madrid County finds county making progress after 2020 audit found unpaid payroll taxes cost county taxpayers more than $50K

State Auditor Nicole Galloway released today her follow up review of New Madrid County, located in southeast Missouri. The review was the result of a report issued in December 2020 of a regularly scheduled audit of the county that resulted in a rating of "poor" – the lowest possible. The most significant finding from that audit was that monthly reports and state payroll tax withholdings totaling $382,047 were not received by the state for more than five years, resulting in more than $50,000 in interest costs to the county.

OPINION

IRS reporting mandate grossly violates your privacy

By: Max Cook

What can possibly go wrong when you funnel the private data of millions of citizens into the IRS? It's a terrifying thought, but it's one we may soon face as U.S. House Democrats intend to include a highly controversial IRS tax reporting provision in their budget reconciliation package.

BUZZ

— Paris Hilton — yes, Paris Hilton — submitted testimony in support of Rep Rudy Veit's bill that would require "exempt-from licensure residential care facilities" to comply with certain inspections under the Department of Social Services and mandate employees and volunteers under background checks. Hilton's team confirmed with The Missouri Times this morning that it was truly her testimony.

Hilton came forward last year to describe the "continuous torture" she endured while attending boarding school in Utah as a teenager.

"I believe that no child should have to endure the harmful treatment that I experienced, and I urge Missouri legislators to listen to the survivors who are submitting their testimonies for the hearing on April 14, 2021. These stories reveal a pattern of abuse across the state's many residential facilities and highlight the urgent need for oversight."

— Apparently, there is room for more than just the craziness of Eric Greitens in the U.S. Senate race. Mark McCloskey, the infamous gun owner, is apparently planning to announce his bid for the seat very soon. This is great news for Eric Schmitt as you have to imagine that the Venn diagram of Greitens and McCloskey fans is almost a perfect circle.

"Good God. What a shitshow," one Republican operative said.

— The NAACP has said it will oppose Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer's SB 53, a criminal justice bill that has been combined with Sen. Brian Williams' SB 60. The bill has had a relatively smooth path to passage until now. It includes provisions from Williams that would ban police from using chokeholds and provisions from Luetkemeyer that would eliminate residency requirements for Kansas City police officers. The bill is being heard in the House Judiciary Committee today, and the section that the NAACP is against would create a new felony for doxxing, or releasing personal information about, an officer.

"[Luetkemeyer]'s bill creates a new felony. It is morally irresponsible to create a new law that produces another group of people that will be labeled as felons that would not have been. What kind of criminal justice bill could create a new felony?" Kansas City NAACP First Vice-President Rev. Rodney Williams said.

,— Ben Brown, the owner of Satchmo's Bar & Grill, released his state Senate announcement video yesterday. He is running in response to the restrictions on businesses imposed by St. Louis County during COVID-19. Brown is working with Victory Enterprises.

"Government is supposed to be here to defend the rights of the people, and if there's no one else willing to stand up and put an end to this madness, then I will so that no one in our state ever has to fall victim to an overreaching and abusive local government again," Brown said in the video.

— Speaker Rob Vescovo's office sent a staffer to end the House Ways & Means Committee hearing today on two of Sen. Andrew Koenig's bills, both related to taxation. It's notable that Koenig was the only member of the Conservative Caucus who was having bills heard in the House today, and the committee wasn't notified beforehand about the Speaker's intentions. This could be your normal House versus Senate stalling of bills, but there seem to be ulterior motives involved. This comes as the Conservative Caucus continues to experience significant fracturing as they wage war on Senate leadership.

— The House Administration and Accounts Committee is discussing House policy changes to let legislative assistants work remotely during interim. To be fair, this would just be the House giving LAs permission to do something the legislators have been letting them do for years.

Those were just a few memories shared by about a dozen people from all over the country who testified before a Senate committee Wednesday afternoon, pleading for lawmakers to put in place mechanisms to protect children and young adults at Missouri’s unlicensed boarding and reform facilities. A bipartisan effort from Reps. Rudy Veit and Keri Ingle would give the state the ability to perform background checks and regulate the facilities.

“I’m not asking anybody to do anything that good a good businessman or woman would not do — background check, safety inspection, fire inspection, keep medical records,” Veit, a Republican, told the Senate Seniors, Family, Veterans, and Military Affairs Committee of HB 557.

Following a filibuster spanning the early morning hours, the Missouri Senate passed a House tort reform bill Wednesday, setting its own version aside.

While a parallel Senate bill saw more than five hours of perfection debate, it was tabled in favor of the House version shortly before 6 a.m. DeGroot’s bill quickly passed by a vote of 21-11 with Sen. Mike Moon joining Democrats as a no vote after decrying the shift between bills.

Parson requests relief fund for local utilities reeling from cold snap

Gov. Mike Parson is requesting an emergency relief fund for local utility companies impacted by the cold snap, answering the call of a bipartisan group of lawmakers.

Parson made a supplemental budget request this week for a $50 million loan fund, known as the Municipal Utility Emergency Loan Program, to allow citizen-led utilities to borrow for up to five years without interest to address the impact of February's winter storm. A bipartisan majority in the House signed a letter from Rep. Jeff Porter last week requesting the fund with 16 senators also backing the effort.

"On behalf of hometown utilities in Missouri, we're appreciative of the governor's swift action to request these funds for community utilities across the state," John Twitty, president and CEO of the Missouri Public Utilities Alliance, said in a statement. "It's great to see the governor act so quickly along with the stated support of legislators."

BUZZ

— As St. Louis Mayor-elect Tishaura Jones begins to build out her administration, one name seems to be floated as a potential top pick for an appointment: State Rep. Rasheen Aldridge. The HD 78 representative has been a longtime unabashed supporter of Jones.

— Discussions are beginning around who will replace JudgeLaura Denvir Stith who retired from the Missouri Supreme Court earlier this year. Bill Corrigan, a circuit judge in St. Louis, is one possible name. Corrigan at one time served as one of the youngest presidents of the Missouri State Bar Association and won the Republican primary for county executive of St. Louis County in 2010. Gov. Mike Parson appointed him to the circuit court in November.

Another hopeful is Missouri Solicitor General John Sauer who was appointed byJosh Hawley when he was serving as attorney general in 2017. He previously clerked for the late U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia.

Judge Don Burrell is also likely on a shortlist; he's on the court of appeals in the Southern District where his term expires late next year.

It's not clear whether the governor would want to appoint a man to fill a woman's seat, but it may not be up to him. There's a commission that sends him three names, and if he doesn't choose one, the commission gets to seat the next Supreme Court judge.

— Joelle Cannon, director of government affairs for Liberty Utilities, has been named as a 2021 Club for Growth Foundation fellow. She's worked for Senators Roy Blunt and Tom Coburn and is the former deputy policy director for the Senate Republican Conference.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— Elad Gross filed a special lawsuit with 14 other people in St. Louis earlier this week to request a Board of Visitors to inspect the jails. This comes after three uprisings at the St. Louis Justice Center where prisoners broke windows and held signs out for the public to see.

— Todd Nelson, a former employee of the Missouri Gaming Commission filed a lawsuit recently saying he was wrongfully terminated for being a "whistleblower." The lawsuit said Nelson "made numerous public complaints and disclosures of violations of law, mismanagement, gross waste of funds, abuse of authority, waste and specific dangers to public health and safety by the Commission."

— Rep. Ann Wagner has been building out her staff and bringing in fresh blood, presumably for her Senate run.Nick Perryman, former deputy state director for the Missouri Republican Party, is on his way down from Wisconsin to join her team. Perryman is joining her district office in Missouri and will be her campaign manager should she decide to run for re-election to Congress instead for the U.S. Senate seat, he tells us. Perryman has worked as a regional field director for Senator Roy Blunt and as deputy state director for Trump Victory Wisconsin in 2020.

— It looks like the appointee to the UM System Board of Curators from the 8th district might have to wait until after session. Right now, Keith Holloway doesn't have the support to make it through the Senate so there is some re-assessment happening on his appointment behind the scenes.

— Look for Sen. Dave Schatz's mechanical contractor bill, some form of education reform, and possibly gaming to hit the floor of the Senate next week. Some of these issues were supposed to be debated this week but were pushed back by the Todd Graves appointment debate.

Kansas City unveils zero-emission electric buses

Kansas City is adding its first zero-emission electric buses to its public transportation fleet, seeking to benefit both commuters and the environment.

The Kansas City Area Transportation Authority (KCATA) revealed the two new vehicles Friday morning. The buses will be put into service later this spring, offering a reduced carbon footprint, as well as comfort and safety features, at no cost to passengers.

Freshmen to Watch: Neil Smith

Rep. Neil Smith is a native of California but love is what kept him in Missouri.

"I got here 16 years ago, [and] I met my future wife. I was supposed to get on a flight and go back home, [but] I never did," Smith told The Missouri Times. "I married her three years later, and we've been together 16 years."

OPINION

Extreme weather events prove electric cars aren't a perfect solution

By: Charles Watson

Extreme weather patterns are causing unprecedented storm events which seem to be more intense and frequent. This means we can expect another snowstorm next winter like the one we experienced last month which will push our electrical grid to its breaking point again.

Missouri Legislature gives final approval to statewide PDMP bill

After a decade of conversation in the statehouse, an effort to establish a statewide prescription drug monitoring program (PDMP) made it across the legislative finish line Tuesday.

Sen. Holly Rehder's SB 63 would establish the Joint Oversight Task Force of Prescription Drug Monitoring within the Office of Administration, creating a statewide PDMP. The task force would work with a vendor after a competitive bid to collect and maintain patient data, which would be deleted after three years. The House truly agreed and finally passed the measure Tuesday.

The bill has been a labor of love for Rehder over the years; she sponsored the bill throughout her House tenure before moving to the upper chamber this session.

BUZZ

— Even though the Senate passed ESA legislation, which was a priority for House and Senate leadership, the House has not been as kind to Sen. Dave Schatz's gas tax bill. During floor debate, Rep.Jason Chipman added an amendment that would instead put the issue to a referendum. It's pretty clear that if the Speaker asked Chipman not to add the amendment he wouldn't have, but it doesn't seem like the Speaker is too inclined to uphold his end of any bargain — and likely the 2021 legislative session.

Chipman is against the gas tax and claims to want it to be put to the people, but he seems OK with the taxpayer paying for electric cars which is plugged into the Capitol building to charge. You wonder if he gets reimbursed by the state for his mileage?

We've already begun to see fallout from the House debate. The Senate GAFO committee hearing tomorrow morning was canceled and rescheduled. You can't help but notice that Rep. Hannah Kelly, who was passionately outspoken in support of the referendum amendment, had a bill on that hearing notice.

Still, the amendment failed. But the time the House wasted letting the debate play out didn't help. Going this late into the night causes supporters not to feel very inclined to stick around for the final vote on the bill. There were 14 total amendments filed, and each one makes it almost impossible for the bill to make it to the governor's desk since a conference committee would run out the clock.

Speaking of conference committees, it was awful generous for all of the House Democrats, led by RepCrystal Quade, to agree to support the gas tax. That may help delay SB 26's passage. It's hard to get something across the finish line when it's moved to a conference committee with only a few hours left until Sine Die. That bill already would have a tough time, since proponents were hoping that the plethora of House amendments would be taken off in the conference.

— The Speaker's last demand, so far, of this session is to have his own cop to investigate the long list of Missourians who don't have the proper "respect" for him. Finding 18 votes to grow gub'ment to that ridiculous extent seems a hard hill to climb, but at this point, even finding a Senate handler is looking tough. The search for the right liberal began with Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer, but he took a pass as it seems he didn't want to live with being reminded of such Gardner-esque power grab. Then the baton of authorism was attempted to be passed to Sen. Bill Eigel who went hard-pass on being the biggest liberal in the chamber. As of 12:48 a.m., Sen. Eric Burlison has chosen to be the Bernie Sanders of the Missouri Senate and is going to carry the bill. The questions will be numerous. Starting with: Why is the senior senator from Greene carrying House priories working against the Senate position? That will likely continue into asking: Does the Speaker need a jail for his cop, does the Speaker need a cop car for his cop, does the Speaker need a SWAT team for his cop … and the questions are likely to take a long while.

— The FRA, which is the only thing outside of the budget that truly needs to pass, was added to Sen Holly Rehder's SB 64. That bill had a good amount of non-controversial, bipartisan language in it, like syringe access and Rep. Phil Christofanelli's Kratom bill. Now, though, it will run into a potential filibuster from Sens. Paul Wieland and Bob Onder as they try to add anti-abortion language to the FRA.

There's a good chance that a compromise isn't reached, the FRA moves to a special session, and all of the language in Rehder's original bill becomes a casualty of the Senate war.

— The vending machines in both the Senate and the House basement were removed today. We're hearing hopefully those machines will be returned before the end of the week. It's a rough time to not have any snacks readily available in the building.

— After hitting the stumbling block in the Senate GAFO committee yesterday, Wayfair legislation found its way back on to a Senate substitute for HB 66 which deals with aircraft property tax. That bill now heads to …. GAFO.

— Kansas City Mayor Quinton Lucas is joining U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and other U.S. mayors in Washington, D.C., tomorrow to highlight the need for infrastructure investment.

— St. Louis Mayor Tishaura Jones announced new appointments to her administration and the St. Louis Public Schools Board of Education today. Nancy Cross will serve as the director of Operations, Amber Simms will be the city register, and Alisha Sonnier was appointed to the vacant seat on the Board of Education.

— Happy Birthday Sen. Greg Razer!

— You can find the latest physical edition of The Missouri Times newspaper in the Capitol basement and in stands around downtown.

Police reform package stonewalled in conference over House provision

A conference committee over a massive bipartisan police reform package didn't get off to a great start Tuesday as House members stonewalled work on the legislation over one provision.

The House and the Senate are at loggerheads a particular provision, HB 1069, which creates offenses for witnesses who fail to comply or answer questions when summoned by the General Assembly. Opponents to the measure argue it would give the Speaker and Senate President Pro Tem too much power, equating it to an attempt to turn the General Assembly into a court. The Governor's Office has told lawmakers Gov. Mike Parson will veto the package should it contain that language, but House members refused Tuesday morning to work on the rest of the bill without assurances that provision would remain in place.

Missouri ending all federal pandemic-related unemployment benefits in June

Gov. Mike Parson moved to cut federal pandemic-related unemployment benefits Tuesday, arguing the move would encourage more Missourians to get back into the workforce. Missouri will phase-out of the six programs by June 12.

"From conversations with business owners across the state, we know that they are struggling not because of COVID-19 but because of labor shortages resulting from these excessive federal unemployment programs," Parson said. "While these benefits provided supplementary financial assistance during the height of COVID-19, they were intended to be temporary, and their continuation has instead worsened the workforce issues we are facing. It's time that we end these programs that have ultimately incentivized people to stay out of the workforce."

Jim Murphy announces bid for House Speaker Pro Tem

Rep. Jim Murphy announced his candidacy for House Speaker Pro Tem Tuesday, promising to be a "liaison and voice of the caucus."

In his letter to colleagues and provided to The Missouri Times, Murphy touted his decades-long career in business management and experience in sales and marketing as giving him the tools needed for the leadership role. He said he's built the relationships necessary in the upper chamber and with the Governor's Office that would be beneficial to the caucus.

Schmitt sues St. Louis County over 'unreasonable' health orders

More than a year after COVID-19 shutdown orders and local control became prevalent issues, Attorney General Eric

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Schmitt is taking the fight to St. Louis County.

Schmitt filed suit Tuesday against St. Louis County Executive Sam Page, the county's health department, and its director, Dr. Faisal Khan, over shutdown orders, singling out restrictions on religious institutions, masking requirements, and other orders. According to Schmitt, he wrote to the county to address concerns last month and received a vague response before the county amended its policies — but not to the extent Schmitt requested.

Scott Sifton has already taken on Eric Greitens — and he's ready to do it again

Scott Sifton has already gone toe-to-toe with Eric Greitens. As an attorney in the state Senate, Sifton challenged the erstwhile governor over his budget cuts, called for an investigation into potential campaign finance violations, and worked on the impeachment inquiry.

Now, Sifton and Greitens are battling again — but this time over an open U.S. Senate seat.

State Auditor Nicole Galloway said today her office has begun regularly scheduled audits of Schuyler County and Sullivan County, both located in northern Missouri. Schuyler County received an overall rating of "good" in its most recent audit, issued in June 2015. The most recent audit of Sullivan County was completed in December 2016, with the county receiving an overall rating of "poor." A follow-up report on Sullivan County operations, released in 2017, showed county officials had made progress addressing the issues reported in the audit.

OPINION

Critical K-12 teacher shortages in Missouri must be addressed

By: Angie Besendorfer

Missouri is facing a crisis when it comes to employing qualified teachers to fill open K-12 positions. To help understaffed school districts, legislation was recently introduced in the Missouri Senate that allows the State Board of Education to grant temporary teaching certificates for both hard-to-fill subject areas and schools that are being impacted the most.

Rick Roeber resigns from Missouri House

Rep. Rick Roeber, who faces allegations of sexual and physical abuse from his now-adult children, has resigned from the House. His final day will be April 16, he said in an email to House Speaker Rob Vescovo Tuesday.

Roeber had been barred from sitting on the House Republican Caucus before the 2021 legislative session began, and the House Ethics Committee was tasked with investigating the allegations. His children accused him of both sexual and physical assault in a Kansas City Star editorial in September. Roeber had denied the allegations.

In his letter to Vescovo, which was forwarded to House members Tuesday afternoon, Roeber said he and his "soon to be wife" are moving out of state "to be closer to our extended families."

BUZZ

— The effects of last week's marathon confirmation ofTodd Graves to the MU System Board of Curators hung over the Senate. When the Senate is pushed to the brink of grinding down senators, then there is going to be pushback and it came last night.

Once the Conservative Caucus — sans Sens.Cindy O'Laughlin and Andrew Koenig — saw that Sen. Dave Schatz's mechanical contractor bill was set to hit the floor, they decided to instead leave and go grab some dinner, preventing a quorum from being established. When leadership found a quorum without them, thanks to Sen. Justin Brown convincing Sen. Elaine Gannon to return to the chamber, leadership decided to bring up the FRA bill instead. Members of the Conservative Caucus oppose an FRA extension bill without any of Sen. Paul Wieland's strong anti-abortion provisions.

Once the absent Conservative Caucus members found out the FRA bill was up, they headed back to the floor to make sure the FRA extension remained stalled. It wasn't a trick or anything. Sen. Caleb Rowden's office sent out the schedule that morning, and FRA was on there. At the end of the night, no bills were passed and everyone walked away pissed.

Speaking of the bill, Sen. Doug Beck held his own on the floor in his first contentious floor debate — and with the Pro Tem no less. Speaking of Schatz, it's really really hard for a Floor Leader or a Pro Tem to carry bills outside of one thing that is more for the greater good.

When it comes down to it, something is going to have to give. The Conservative Caucus continues to hold up priorities for leadership, and we're getting down to the part of session where you can begin counting hours until Sine Die.

The Conservative Caucus is clearly unhappy with leadership, and many other senators are becoming unhappy that leadership has bent over backward for them.

To be honest not appearing for a quorum call for a bill sponsored by the Pro Tem is pretty salty.

*"I don't think I've ever seen the Senate this bad,"*said one seasoned insider.

Speaking of MU confirmations, as of the writing of this email, the 8th district nominee is not set for Gubernatorial

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Appointments tomorrow.

— It seems like Rep. Rick Roeber's resignation didn't come because he suddenly had a change of heart about his moral imperative. We're hearing the House Ethics Committee was set to release a recommendation that he be expelled from the body and was going to see at least 82 votes to kick him out — a pretty historic move. Resignation made it easier for everyone, including Roeber, who now has Jean Peters Baker's office investigating him. Since he is resigning, the Ethics Committee doesn't have to release its report since it will no longer have jurisdiction over his conduct, but leadership today said it's going to anyway.

Roeber might not be around for it, though. His letter to Speaker Rob Vescovo said he has plans to head out of state as soon as possible.

"I'm glad it's not a distraction anymore," said one representative.

Despite his resignation, the joint statement from Vescovo and House Ethics Committee Chairman Travis Fitzwater was one of the most harshly worded statements crafted. The pair did not hold back, revealing they have spoken to law enforcement officials about "the risk he may pose to other children." They said "we cannot allow him to once again walk away from the children he victimized."

Now, the questions of when Gov. Mike Parson will call a special election and who will run to replace him become relevant. For the Democrats, it's important to note Chris Hager only lost to Roeber by 300 votes so House minority leadership may be looking at that district as a pick-up. It's also important to note that he lost by 300 votes to someone who is credibly accused of abusing his children so you can only imagine the uphill climb you would have against someone who doesn't have that sort of baggage.

— House Committee changes:

- Rusty Black appointed to the Career Technical Education Advisory Committee

— Ryan Davis has been named the new leader of Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner's St. Louis office beginning May 1. Robert Newmark, who led the office since 2011, is stepping down from the position. Davis is the co-head of BCLP's Sports & Entertainment Group and has represented sports clients such as the St. Louis Cardinals and the St. Louis Blues. He's a member of the St. Louis Sports Commission board and the St. Louis Children's Hospital Development Board's executive committee.

— Be sure to catch The Missouri Times' editor Kaitlyn Schallhorn on KCUR's "Up to Date" tomorrow morning shortly after 9 a.m. for a conversation on COVID vaccine passports and steps the Missouri Legislature has taken to ban them.

Senate drama thwarts Monday's session

After five hours of session, there was only one clear winner in the Senate Monday: drama.

The upper chamber seemed to have a complete breakdown as relationships among Republicans openly fissured on the floor. Some lawmakers are still agitated over how the Todd Graves appointment to the University of Missouri Board of Curators played out; others think Dave Schatz has taken too much of a hands-on approach as Senate president pro tem, keeping priority legislation like raising the gas tax or tackling so-called gray gambling machines, sources said.

The fracas began when Schatz's SB 11, creating a statewide mechanical contractor licensing system, came to the floor. While Democratic Sen. Doug Beck was the most vociferous opponent to the bill, arguing from the floor that it hampered local control and weakened training requirements, Republicans, too, were making their displeasure known.

Missouri halts J&J vaccine following reports of blood clots

Missouri placed a moratorium on administering the Johnson & Johnson coronavirus vaccine Tuesday following few reports of extremely rare blood clots suffered by those who received it.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommended halting the use of the vaccine Tuesday after reporting six people out of the more than 6.8 million who received the single-dose vaccine had experienced the severe blood clots.

House tackles mental health parity bill

A House committee is set to consider a bill meant to bring the state into line with national mental health parity standards.

HB 889, sponsored by Rep. Patty Lewis, would prohibit insurance companies from imposing limitations on mental health benefits that are more stringent than those applied to medical or surgical benefits. Lewis said the bill would bring Missouri into line with the Mental Health Parity and Addiction Equity Act signed into law by former President George W. Bush in 2008; Missouri would be the last state to do so.

Freshmen to Watch: Adam Schwadron

When he's not at the Capitol, you might be able to find Rep. Adam Schwadron at a bourbon tasting. The Republican freshman is a certified bourbon steward who has an affinity for tasting the different flavors.

Schwadron, who represents HD 106, first became interested in politics after taking a political science course at the University of Missouri – St. Louis (UMSL). Ultimately, he changed his major to political science from business administration and lobbied for the Associated Students of the University of Missouri, gaining Capitol experience.

House rejects Roeber resignation so Ethics probe can continue: 'Our work is not done'

The Missouri House rejected Rep. Rick Roeber's resignation on the day before he was set to leave the statehouse.

House Ethics Committee Chairman Travis Fitzwater formally rejected the resignation, calling for its postponement so the committee can continue its investigation and finalize its report. The House unanimously voted to reject the resignation in a 153-0 vote.

Rep. Richard Brown, the vice-chair of the committee, urged lawmakers not to "allow this member to escape" without the full recognition of the report.

"Our work is not yet done," Brown said.

BUZZ

— Rick Roeber is clearly in trouble, and it's good that law enforcement is handling this serious issue. That would have still happened, though, had House members not chosen to reject Roeber's resignation Thursday so you have to start wondering about incentives. It might be cynical, but this is the House we're talking about. There is always a political calculation being made when something like this happens.

It does seem pretty clear that running for state representative was a terrible decision and one that seems likely to change the trajectory of his life.

Speaker Rob Vescovo has spent his entire tenure saying his priority legislation should be considered non-partisan and non-controversial because it's "for the kids." This has definitely led to some good legislation for children in the state of Missouri — like Rep. Hannah Kelly's bills enhancing support for foster parents or the bipartisan effort between Reps. Rudy Veit and Keri Ingle to put some more oversight on unregistered childcare facilities. But Vescovo has soured relationships with other members of leadership, especially in the Senate, because he expects his priorities to be above the same politics that govern everything else that happens in that building.

Now, he's chosen to make a big show of rejecting Roeber's resignation because of how heinous his alleged crimes were. That's fine, and maybe it's the right move, but if Vescovo truly believed that Roeber's crimes were that heinous and wasn't just doing this to boost his own profile, you would think that he would have moved to expel Roeber as soon as session started since the accusations were already public knowledge. But again, sometimes you have to look at things a bit cynically. Let's not forget there were other priorities of Vescovo's that passed with only 82 votes, Roeber's being one of them.

— Speaking of Vescovo, word on the street is the Speaker is holding hostage Rep.Bruce DeGroot's HB 345, tort reform legislation that passed the Senate after a marathon debate lasting in the early morning hours Wednesday. This is a bit surprising as the Speaker has generally professed to be in favor of all tort reform, but it just highlights the increasing tensions between Vescovo and Senate President Pro Tem Dave Schatz over issues like education reform and a gas tax increase.

— Kyle Haubrich, a health care regulatory compliance lawyer, has launched a campaign to replace Dan Shaul in the House. Shaul is term-limited and is running for state Senate.

"I believe that out-of-control government regulations are killing our small businesses and driving up costs on our families. I strongly support legislation to restrict out-of-control government bureaucracies and boards that have recently implemented endless mandates and restrictions without any voter oversight."

— Mayor-elect Tishaura Jones filled some key administration officials today. She picked former police Chief Dan Isom as her Public Safety director. He's a former Director of Public Safety for the state and St. Louis police commissioner. She tapped Adam Lane, the deputy chief of staff in the treasurer's office, to succeed her as the city's treasurer. The appointment of Isom will not be viewed favorably by the rank and file officers, but she already knew that.

— U.S. Congresswoman Ann Wagner hasn't announced she's running for U.S. Senate, but she's certainly making news recently. In Congress, she's working to advance pro-life legislation mandating infants born alive after an abortion procedure receive the same standard of care as any newborn baby and ensure penalties for abortionists who would allow an infant to die or kill the infant. She supported a discharge petition to be filed on the House bill — a procedural maneuver to force a vote on the legislation.

Wagner also recently took a trip to the southern border and has been vocally decrying the border crisis.

Additionally, her camp announced today that she raised more than $515,000 during the first quarter of 2021. She ended the quarter with more than $620,000 cash on hand. She is an incredible fundraiser, maybe the best in the state.

— Over in the medical marijuana world, 120 medical cannabis businesses have been approved to open in Missouri as we approach the industry's six-month mark. Cumulative sales are nearly $30 million. In all, the Department of Health and Senior Services has licensed almost 350 facilities to cultivate, manufacture, test, and dispense medical marijuana.

— All 25 applicants to replace retired Supreme Court Judge Laura Denvir Stith were revealed by the Appellate Judicial Commission Thursday. Fifteen of the applicants are employed in the public sector and seven in the private sector. The applicants are: Cory L. Atkins; Chad E. Blomberg; Donald E. Burrell Jr.; R. Craig Carter; William M. Corrigan Jr.; Katherine M. Fowler; Kenneth R. Garrett III; Jennifer R. Growcock; Matthew P. Hamner; Lisa White Hardwick; Marjorie M. Lewis; Shaun J. Mackelprang; Tracey A. Mason-White; Jeffrey T. Remember, law enforcement groups have already pegged Cristian Stevens as their top pick for the spot. Also keep an eye on Bill Corrigan, he will ge a hard look.

— This year's legislative softball tournament raised $11,000 for the Samaritan Center in Jefferson City. Congratulations to Sen. Dave Schatz's team who emerged from the tournament victorious.

"Everything I do in my life I do thinking, 'What would God think of this?'" Buchheit-Courtway told The Missouri Times. "I don't care if anyone remembers my name, but I want them to remember me as that girl who loves God and Jesus and lets them shine through."

Senate passes sewer, rate adjustment policy change

The Senate third read and passed a utility rate adjustment bill Thursday, quickly approving changes made during this week's lengthy perfection debate.

SB 44 from Sen. Bill White would allow water and sewer companies to request rate changes more often. Under current law, utilities go to the Public Service Commission (PSC) for a rate adjustment on a three-year cycle. The legislation would allow companies serving more than 8,000 customers to request a slight increase every six months through a water and sewer infrastructure rate adjustment (WSIRA) to keep up with the conditions of equipment and speed up cost recovery.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

Sunday on "This Week," Sen. Caleb Rowden didn't make any announcements, but he certainly sounded a lot like a congressional candidate. You will hear the phrase "governing conservative" quite a bit. I think it will stick because in his case, it's true. My guess is the field for CD 4 isn't complete today.

Speaking of CD 4, I met Kalena Bruce and her husband at the fair. Her ag background is an outstanding fit, and she has some video of her speaking with Trump that I anticipate you will see. Also, she has Victory working her race. She will be a legitimate contender.

A little follow-up from the fair. No-show Eric Greitens was no surprise, and let's be honest, folks at the fair ain't really his folks anyway. Mike Deering had far more authentic Missourah Cattlemen than Creve Cour Cowboys in attendance. People still remember how no governor ever liked the fair less or spent less time there than he did. Well, that one fair that he was governor for anyway.

The rest of the Senate candidates were at the fair with Eric Schmitt likely being the most visible, but Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler had a strong presence as well as it is her district. Congressman Jason Smith, who seems in no hurry to make a decision, worked the fair as hard as anyone, and he feels and looks at home there.

If I just had to guess, I wouldn't look for a final decision from Smith until after the redistricting maps are drawn. On the Senate campaign trail, it was nice to see former Sen. Scott Sifton. He looked more at home at the fair than any other statewide Democrat I can think of.

However, there was no bigger presence than the line to get in the Cattlemen Building. He wouldn't admit it when he taped our show, but I know Deering loves having the longest line at the fair to get his Missourah beef.

It was odd not seeing Senator Josh Hawley at the Ham Breakfast, but you did see Senator Roy Blunt everywhere last Thursday. The only major statewide figure who had a larger presence was Farm Bureau President Garrett Hawkins who literally was personally everywhere or had a staff member at every thing.

All real fairgoers know Pettis County Presiding Commissioner David Dick, who recovered from a heart attack just in time for the fair. They grow 'em tough in Pettis County. However, in other news on the Pettis County health beat, I was so sad not to see Sen. Jim Mathewson at the fair. First time I've ever been to the fair that I didn't see him. Doesn't really feel like a fair without him. I hope when his term is over, Gov. Mike Parson will still come to the Ham Breakfast. It might be only him that can fill the void left by Jim Mathewson, the consummate senator.

While the politicians showed well, no one just wholeheartedly embraced the fair more Mizzou President Mun Choi. I think he bought every kid in Sedalia a funnel cake, and if you wanna know why Mun Choi isn't just respected but loved, all you needed to do was watch him at the fair.

Speaking of Mizzou winners, Rep. Kurtis Gregory took home the prize in the horse hitching contest. Reportedly he blew away Rick Francis as well as Sens. Mike Bernskoetter, Lincoln Hough, and John Rizzo.

Speaking of the senior senator from Jackson, I'm looking forward to the roast of Sen. Rizzo the night before the night before veto session. Shoot an email if you're interested in joining us.

In the other news roundup: Big opportunity for Schmitt's campaign with his lawsuit trying to allow parents to decide if their kids need to wear masks or not. Liberals have turned up their criticism of Schmitt since his campaign announcement but for a few weeks had been claiming that some of his more high profile suits were more stunts than real, but in the last two weeks, he has silenced that line of attack with a string of very high profile wins. There is a reason more politicians have launched to the U.S. Senate or Governor's Mansion from attorney general than any other statewide office in modern times. If he wins this case, it will affect all the children in the state and be a statement win that will unquestionably boost his campaign. God help any judge who sides against him who wants to be promoted by a Republican governor or president for the next 40 years.

If I was a betting man, I would predict that so long as Rep. Billy Long stays in the Senate race, you see a Jay Wasson vs. Eric Burlison race in the 7th, with the possibility of Sen. Mike Moon getting in. If Congressman Long withdraws from the Senate race and opts to run for re-election, I think Sen. Moon could still run. I wonder if folks are through underestimating what a terrific campaigner Mike Moon is?

Speaking of the 7th, I have no inside info if she will run for Congress, but the buzz that Joelle Cannon has stirred makes me think she will be on a ballot for something in the next couple cycles — maybe even this one. If you just think of the logical trajectory of politics at some point, the Republicans' dominance will ebb and the exact type of candidate that they will need for competitive seats will be successful women who can communicate with people.

Now that our State Fair hangover is over — I tend to mean that both figuratively and literally — we will be back on a Monday. Wednesday, Friday schedule until the holidays.

Missouri's SAPA still standing after judge rejects attempts to block it

A Cole County judge denied a request to block Missouri's Second Amendment Preservation Act (SAPA) which seeks to "invalidate" certain federal gun laws that could restrict ownership.

Cole County Circuit Judge Daniel Green sided with the state the day before the law is set to be implemented. St. Louis and Jackson counties had sued, asking the court to find SAPA unconstitutional.

"Today's ruling was an important victory for the Missouri Attorney General's Office over the Biden Department of Justice, and for the Second Amendment rights of all Missourians," Attorney General Eric Schmitt said. "Since the Second Amendment Preservation Act was passed, I promised to fiercely defend the law and Missourians' Second Amendment rights — that's exactly what we did in this case and will continue to do moving forward."

Missouri CD 4 candidates decry Afghanistan attacks but differ on response Attacks at the Kabul Airport in Afghanistan left at least 12 American service members dead Thursday, according to the Pentagon, with further threats being monitored as the U.S. assists with evacuation efforts.

The attacks followed the announcement the U.S. would be withdrawing its troops from Afghanistan by Aug. 31 and the Taliban's subsequent occupation of Kabul. Many across the nation have been critical of President Joe Biden in the aftermath, including candidates for Missouri's fourth congressional district.

Kalena Bruce, a conservative cattle farmer who recently jumped into the race, called for Biden to resign amid the controversy Thursday.

DHSS increases WIC security following audit recommendations

Missouri's health department has made changes to who can access the Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) program system in an effort to increase security.

The changes have come on the heels of a report from Auditor Nicole Galloway which gave Missouri WIC Information Network System (MOWINS), the state's software program managing WIC, a rating of "good" but said improvements were needed when it came to data security. Specifically, the audit said some user accounts, including those at county health departments, were not removed in a timely fashion, leavi

Blaine Luetkemeyer, Ann Wagner back Spire STL Pipeline

As the fate of the Spire STL Pipeline hangs in the balance, members of Missouri's congressional delegation advocated for the pipeline's continued service in the St. Louis region.

Congressman Blaine Luetkemeyer and Congresswoman Ann Wagner penned a letter to Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) Chairman Richard Glick this week, calling on the commission to approve Spire's application to continue operations as winter approaches. The duo pointed to February's winter storms, which led to increased prices and strain on the grid. Luetkemeyer and Wagner warned the St. Louis region would face devastating consequences in similar situations if the pipeline were shut down — an argument Spire has made as well.

Cole County judge upholds health order legislation

A Cole County judge upheld a new state law curbing the power of local officials to issue health ordinances during emergencies Thursday.

HB 271, sponsored by Speaker Pro Tem John Wiemann, was challenged by Overland, a small community in St. Louis County. It asked the court to temporarily bar the state from enforcing the law, which began with a measure establishing a local government expenditure database, because it "ballooned in size due to the addition of numerous other provisions, virtually none of which are germane to that objective."

A fond farewell:' Benton mural model reflects on iconic piece of history

The mural adorning the House Lounge has awed visitors and legislators alike for nearly a century with its depiction of the highs and lows of Missouri's history. Harold Brown, the model for the only baby depicted in Thomas Hart Benton's masterwork, made the trek to the statehouse this week for what he called a "fond farewell" to the piece.

"It's been an honor," Brown told reporters during his visit Wednesday. "I like doing this. I like to expose people to the story."

AG Schmitt officially jumps into Senate race

After weeks of speculation, Attorney General Eric Schmitt officially jumped into the U.S. Senate race Wednesday morning to replace Senator Roy Blunt.

Schmitt has deftly risen through the ranks of Missouri politics, from alderman to state senator to state treasurer. After Josh Hawley was elected to the U.S. Senate in 2018, Gov. Mike Parson appointed him attorney general. Schmitt handily defeated his Democratic opponent in November to remain in office. The Missouri Times reported earlier this month that he was expected to join the fray of those running for Blunt's seat.

In announcing his candidacy on Fox News, Schmitt touted his efforts in office to defend former President Donald Trump's policies during the fledgling Biden administration.

For more on the U.S. Senate race and Schmitt's announcement, check out the following explainers which were updated today:

- Roy Blunt announces retirement: Here's who might run for open seat
- A look at how Schmitt has taken on the federal government as attorney general

BUZZ

— Becky Willard is going to be the new executive director for The Hawthorn Foundation, but you wouldn't know that from reading the sexist headline in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The paper pissed both Republicans and Democrats off when it referred to Becky, who is very accomplished in her own right, as "wife of top aide to Gov. Mike Parson." Here are a few reactions:

Sen. John Rizzo: "The idea that a person can only succeed because of their spouse is insulting, misogynistic, and archaic. Highly skilled people should not be disqualified because their spouse is successful. I don't know Becky but I wish her luck in growing Missouri's crucially important export market."

Sen. Caleb Rowden: "Her name is Becky Willard — not 'wife of top aide.' Maybe the St. Louis Post-Dispatch should be less sexist when writing stories for clicks. Becky is the perfect ft for this job, and beyond qualified."

— Conservative radio show host Hugh Hewitt got into a bit of a spat with disgraced former Gov. Eric Greitens today while interviewing him on his show. Hewitt told Greitens he was concerned that he was was "Todd Akin 2.0. — and mentioned that Greitens was credibly accused of "half rape." He also had to walk Greitens through condemning the Capitol insurrection that occurred earlier this year and called Greitens out when he compared himself to former President Donald Trump. As Hewitt noted, Trump was maligned by Democrats; Greitens was under investigation by House Republicans. If there is one thing Greitens is a master at though, it's sticking to his five talking points and just repeating them over and over and over and over — despite what the question actually is or who it is asking. The interview serves as an early sign that Greitens temper might get the best of him as he leaves his safe space and starts taking real questions from the national media.

— House Floor Leader Dean Plocher seems to be slowing down or even stopping a lot of floor action in the lower chamber. It's normal for a speaker and a floor leader to be at odds, but the disagreement between these two, which may be attributable to Rob Vescovo's iron fist method of leadership, seems to be getting increasingly more divisive.

While Plocher holds a lot of power, their relationship is a two-way street. If House Republicans want to be effective over the next two years, it will need more unity out of its leadership.

"Dean seems to only be moving the bills of people who voted for him for Speaker," said one Republican lawmaker.

— House committee changes:

- Sean Pouche appointed to the Missouri Emergency Reponse Commission
- Barry Hovis appointed to the MoDOT and Patrol Employees' Retirement System (MPERS)

— Some House Democrats are getting their bills on the floor this week, the first Democrat bills to be debated this year. Reps. Mark Sharp, Kevin Windham, and Rasheen Aldridge all have legislation being debated on the floor this week.

— Brian Neuner was appointed by Gov. Mike Parson and confirmed by the Senate to serve on Missouri's Mental Health Commission.

— Doug Emhoff, the second gentleman, was in St. Louis today to tout the Biden administration's "American Rescue Plan." Missouri Democratic Party chairman Mike Butler greeted him in St. Louis.

OTHER STORIES

AG Schmitt: A timeline of his career

Attorney General Eric Schmitt officially threw his hat into the race for U.S. Senator Roy Blunt's seat after weeks of speculation Wednesday. The office would be the latest in a varied political career for the Republican.

"I am fighting every day to protect and defend our constitution in my service to Missourians as their attorney general," Schmitt said in a statement. "In the U.S. Senate, I will continue the fight to preserve the conservative policies championed by President Trump that built the strongest economy in American history."

ESA bill takes first step in the Senate

After narrowly passing the House last month, a bill seeking to establish an education savings account (ESA) program was heard by a Senate committee this week.

HB 349, sponsored by Rep. Phil Christofanelli, would establish the Missouri Empowerment Scholarship Accounts Program. The program would allow taxpayers to claim a tax credit of up to 50 percent of their tax liability for contributions to educational assistance programs. The funds would be pooled in ESAs for use on tuition, textbooks, tutoring services, and other costs.

OPINION

Freedom-loving Missourians should back COVID liability reform

By: Phil Christofanelli

For nearly a year, the government put our constitutional freedoms on hold in the name of fighting a pandemic. Businesses and organizations had to shutter their doors without any due process. Despite the guarantee to free exercise, middling functionaries of the state told churches and other houses of worship to stop gathering. Freedom of assembly was canceled outright with not so much as a whimper of protest. If you ask me, these freedoms guaranteed by our Constitution should not be so easily discarded. As cases drop and vaccinations rise, we must focus on restoring the God-given liberty of Missourians to enjoy our lives free from government hectoring.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

— Attorney General Eric Schmitt took the lead in a recent Remington Group poll, beating ouEric Greitens, Vicky Hartzler, Billy Long, and Mark McCloskey in that order.

— Come on out to the Capital Bluffs Event Center tonight for our Roast of Sen.John Rizzo along with food and drinks. It's sure to be a good time!

— You can look forJay Wasson to come into the race for the 7th congressional district race shortly, most likely at the first of the quarter.

— The Board of Public Buildings, the group that apparently needed to approve the LGBTQ history exhibit before it could be in the state Capitol, met for about five in the Governor's Office today but didn't discuss the exhibit at all.

— Talk is ripe of a special session regarding the Biden administration's vaccine mandate. Very few people believe something can actually come of it, but it seems likely they'll probably call a special session on something. These types of things are very good special session fodder because there's really nothing that the state could pass that would mean anything, but they could all agree on their symbolic gesture.

— Garrett Webb and Chris Schoemann are officially a part of the Strategic Capitol Consulting family. Webb joined on a contract basis last year and Schoemann was brought on full time earlier this summer. Schoemann is from South Africa, played Division I rugby at Lindenwood University, and studied international business and finance. SCC poached him from Stifel Nicolaus. Webb is a familiar face and friend in the hallways of the Missouri Capitol Building. He brings over a decade of experience in politics, public policy, communications and government affairs to the team.

— Looking at fundraisers this week, Rep.Dan Houx's seems to be the place to be with Rep.Dean Plocher on the event invite.

OTHER STORIES

Schmitt leads GOP field in Senate race in latest poll

Attorney General Eric Schmitt has taken the lead in the U.S. Senate race among the GOP contenders in a new Remington Research Group poll released Saturday.

Schmitt edged out former Gov. Eric Greitens by 1 percent in the new poll. Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler came in third followed by Congressman Billy Long and attorney Mark McCloskey. The poll was conducted in conjunction with Missouri Scout (MOScout).

Biden vaccine mandate: 16 GOP senators request special session

More than one dozen Republican state senators signed a letter to the governor Friday requesting a special session to curtail the Biden administration's COVID-19 vaccine mandate.

"This is the time to fight back against 'federal power grabs and government overreach that threatens to limit our freedoms,'" the letter said, quoting Gov. Mike Parson's previous comments about the vaccine mandate.

Schmitt: Missouri wants a fighter for US Senate

As he campaigns for U.S. Senator Roy Blunt's seat, Attorney General Eric Schmitt said voters want to see an experienced Republican take the spot on Capitol Hill.

"People want a fighter," Schmitt said. "They see what I've done, they've seen my record. They want somebody who's going to go to Washington, D.C., who's going to take these issues on in this really important fight to save America.

How the LGBTQ exhibit was removed from the Missouri Capitol

It began with only a few inquiries from state representatives and staffers on Sept. 1.

"I was hoping you could explain to me the reasoning of having the gay rights banners hung up in the state museum at the Capitol?" Rep. Ann Kelley said in an email that Wednesday morning to Rich Germinder, director of policy and legislative affairs for the Missouri Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

OPINION

The Entertainment Industry Jobs Act will bring skilled jobs to Missouri

By: Bruce DeGroot

Missouri has recently dedicated significant efforts to workforce development and training, including financial investments, joining the Workforce Innovation Network, and launching the Job Centers of the Future through Missouri's Office of Workforce Development. It is essential that Missouri provide job opportunities to fulfill the promise of those efforts and continue to increase the skills of the Missouri workforce. A recent legislative initiative is intended to provide a significant boost to this effort.

St. Louis is ready to collaborate with lawmakers

By: Tishaura Jones

When I ran for mayor, I emphasized that our city needed to have hard conversations around racial divides, equitable development, and the resources we deploy to improve public safety. When I was invited to testify at the Missouri Senate Interim Committee on Emerging St. Louis Regional Issues, I saw an opportunity to have a difficult discussion around St. Louis' relationship with the Missouri Legislature.

ESA bill heads to governor's desk

Despite extensive conversations during its time in the House, a bill establishing an education savings account (ESA) program in Missouri quickly passed the Senate Thursday — and is perhaps the only education reform bill to see success this legislative session.

HB 349, sponsored by Rep. Phil Christofanelli, would establish the Missouri Empowerment Scholarship Accounts Program. The program would allow taxpayers to claim a tax credit of up to 50 percent of their liability for contributions to educational assistance programs. The funds would be pooled in ESAs for use on tuition, textbooks, tutoring services, and other costs. The program would apply to taxpayers in areas with populations at or exceeding 30,000.

BUZZ

—You really wouldn't have seen the Senate adjourning before 5 p.m. today after TAFP'ing perhaps one of the most controversial bills of the session — Rep. Phil Christofanelli's bill establishing Empowerment Scholarship Accounts (ESAs).

Most were expecting the Senate to go late tonight as rural Republicans and the Democrats filibustered a bill aimed at paving the way for more charter schools, but the bill had short floor time and passed with all Democrats voting against it along with Republican Sens. Lincoln Hough, Sandy Crawford, and Karla Eslinger.

With Sens. Jason Bean and Justin Brown flipping their positions and voting for the bill, charter schools took a step forward and public schools took a step back.

As with most of these reforms, they all start out promising to be only for St. Louis and Kansas City and then grow into rural Missouri.

Bean, who was ruthlessly attacked with hundreds of thousands of dollars in mail from the education reform folks last summer, took to the floor to try and make the point that this particular set of reforms this specific year would spare his district where, to be honest, not a single person has ever asked to be reformed. But the message is clear that while today the rural legislators that are being promised the reforms will not reform them in the backside, there is never a shortage of reforms, and there is no doubt it will be months or weeks — not years or decades — before the reforms come for the urban and rural alike.

With ESAs heading to the governor's desk, it's more than likely that Sen.Dave Schatz's gas tax bill has a clearer path there as well. That may explain some of the more surprising yes votes. There was a lot of back and forth between Sen. Caleb Rowden's office and Speaker Rob Vescovo's office. Now that the House has taken another win for the session — the ESA bill that passed in the Senate was the House's version with no amendments — and the Senate played the junior partner in the House Medicaid expansion plan — will they really be inclined to consider Senate priorities? If the Senate doesn't get a haul for essentially becoming the junior chamber the past month, then there will be no shortage of finger-pointing at the Senate summer caucus.

Either way, a huge congratulations to Christofanelli.

— While on the big-ticket item of Medicaid expansion, the Senate rode in the sidecar while the House drove. The minute that was over, Sen. Lincoln Hough took over again.

For the trade of some more money to charter schools and a couple million for something called the opportunity trust that literally no one seems to know what it is, the haul he brought in was:

- $5 million to establish the reserve for Fire Fighter Cancer pool to assist the firefighters who work to protect our families every day.
- Expanded access to mental health care for hundreds of thousands of Missourians.
- Allocated $50 million to Missourians who are in distress and unemployed during the pandemic.
- Funding to ensure our parents and grandparents have a safe environment to remain in their homes and be self-sufficient as they progress through their life.
- Increased funding for higher education, and early childhood education. This allows our state technical and community colleges to assist Missourians to receive degrees and certifications that allow us all to be successful and encourages economic growth and development in Missouri.

The credit will be passed around the room but it's no accident that "Senate position" was repeated so much it almost became annoying during conference.

If Senate leadership has struck a deal with the House, that the House will keep equal to the deals on the budget, then probably most everyone will leave next week happy. If they didn't then … yikes, there will be a lot of senators with a lot to say during the series of special sessions in store for the interim.

— A new billboard went up in Rep. Tricia Derges' district, saying the embattled representative is "innocent until proven guilty." It's unclear who put up the sign or paid for it. It's also unclear whether a billboard is any help to someone facing a litany of federal indictments.

— Mizzou's very own Coach Eliah Drinkwitz visited the Capitol today as the House debated legislation that would allow college players to be compensated for the use their name, image, and likeness. The language was added by Rep. Nick Schroer and passed in the House overwhelmingly, despite vocal opposition from the House Speaker. Add that notch to Sen. Greg Razer's cap, and add one in Drinkwitz's helmet as well. From the enthusiasm we saw from elected officials, who all wanted their photo taken with the coach, you can add one more to David Steelman's cap while you're at it. He is, after all, the reason Drinkwitz is at the university in the first place.

— Now that the Second Amendment Preservation Act (SAPA) has made its way out of the Senate GAFO committee, the groups that were pushing for it to pass out of committee through a flood of constituent calls have turned their attention to Sen. Holly Rehder's PDMP legislation which made it out of the Rep. Phil Christofanelli's House Rules committee last night. But with PDMP, they want the bill to die before it can be passed. The fate of the legislation is unclear without Rehder on the House floor with her years of expertise on the matter.

With a substitute and several amendments adopted, a licensure bill covering occupational therapists, pharmacists, and other professions was sent for fiscal review Thursday.

HB 542 began in the House with the Occupational Therapy License Compact and grew to include other licensing measures by the time it reached the Senate floor. The underlying bill would allow eligible occupational therapists and assistants to practice in other member states; active-duty military members and their spouses would also retain home-state licensure without having to maintain residency.

OPINION

Don’t tax death

By: Garrett Hawkins

Benjamin Franklin wrote in 1789: “Nothing in this world can be said to be certain, except death and taxes.” While both remain certain 232 years later, nothing requires them to be combined. In fact, taxing death itself is one of the most immoral things the government does — and that’s saying something.

LEDE

How Schupp is taking on utility legislation this session

As this session nears its finale, a handful of bills focused on utility reform are progressing through the legislature — but not without input from Sen. Jill Schupp.

Schupp debated two pieces of utility legislation last month, negotiating with bill sponsors to reach compromises while speaking on the roles of Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) and consumers in the state's utility industry. She pointed to the commission's oversight as an essential part of the balance between monopoly utilities and ratepayers.

"The PSC's ability to oversee them is based on the fact that somebody needs to be a proxy for the market," Schupp told The Missouri Times. "Since they have no competition, nothing is driving their prices down unless we put into place good laws and have good oversight from the PSC to make sure that what they're spending is prudent and to make sure they are providing reasonable and safe services at a fair price."

BUZZ

— HB 271 from Rep. John Wiemann is the first non-budget bill to go to conference. There's barely a handful of legislative working days left this session, and the only bill unrelated to foster care to make it out of the logjam is one establishing a local government expenditure database.

The issue is as old as the bicameral legislature: The House and Senate wanting the other to blink first on their priorities.

The Senate made a good-faith gesture in moving the foster care bill that was met with a great deal of collective ambivalence by most, so it made sense to send it through.

The Senate also wants the refundable gas tax brought to a vote, which poses an interesting problem for the Speaker.

If Floor Leader Dean Plocher were to support the Republican gas tax proposal, it likely has 82 votes. Now, that poses a problem for the Speaker because he rarely ever speaks to Plocher, and therefore may not know what he would do, and may not want to ask.

Additionally, many think Plocher would like to see a biodiesel bill move through the Senate.

There has been a great deal of weeping and gnashing of teeth about the lack of bills headed to the governor's desk, but it could be in part due to the fact that next year will mark the 20th year of the Republican majority, and most of the big Republican items have been passed.

Now Speaker Rob Vescovo is as strange as they come, but this back-and-forth logjam is nothing new, and I think many people feel if they just passed the budget and ground to a halt then the public is safe and good for Missouri.

You could see a real way that Sen. Dave Schatz and Plocher could take matters in their own hands and do some dealing.

However, if the Senate moves a school reform bill out of its chamber before they are ready for the season to end then they deserve to look like the fools they would be because once that bill leaves the Senate, they are left with zero leverage and nothing to deal on.

— Columbia Mayor Brian Treece said the health order for the city may expire on May 12 if the city continues to see improving conditions around COVID-19. As well, St. Louis County Executive Sam Page and St. Louis Mayor Tishaura Jones announced this morning that restaurants and businesses in St. Louis and St. Louis County are allowed to operate without curfews and can host customers at full capacity while maintaining social distance.

Although the metro areas are keeping the mask mandates, we've begun to see a significant reduction in mask-wearing by even some of the most staunch supporters of government control here in Jefferson City. You used to be able to guess someone's political affiliation by whether they were wearing a mask. With hospitalizations, cases, and deaths all reduced and somewhere around one-third of the country is fully vaccinated, that's no longer the case.

It seems like it may be time for others, especially those who make decisions about occupancy at Busch Stadium, to take a page out of Treece, Jones, and Page's book and let us all free from government health orders.

Attorney General Eric Schmitt agrees. He released the following statement in response to the easing of COVID-19 restrictions:

"To ensure that personal, economic, and religious freedoms are preserved in St. Louis County, the Attorney General's Office sent a letter to St. Louis County on April 20th expressing our concerns with the Safer at Home order and its restrictions on St. Louis County residents. Following my warning about the trampling of individual liberties, St. Louis County Executive Sam Page reversed course and eased many restrictions today. We will continue to monitor this situation and will vigorously defend Missourians' individual liberties in St. Louis County and across the state."

— SB 317, a bill dealing with licenses for individuals who are behind on their child support, was brought up on the Senate floor today. Normally, that wouldn't be interesting, but no one in the chamber was told beforehand that the bill was going to be heard. They went into their Monday under the impression that they would be looking at House bills, but instead were hit with a bill that wasn't anywhere on the list of legislation to prepare for. More than likely, leadership was giving Sen. Karla May floor time on one of her priority bills in exchange for her sitting down on other pieces of legislation, such as education reform.

— The Missouri Farm Bureau has chosen Blake Rollins as its new chief administrative officer. Rollins was most recently employed as the deputy chief of staff for the former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue.

— The House Rules - Legislative Oversight Committee voted today to reconsider Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer's COVID liability bill. They did not yet vote to pass it out of committee; insiders predict that could happen next week.

Ann Wagner travels to southern border: 'It's only going to get worse'

Last month, Congresswoman Ann Wagner took a flight from Washington, D.C., to Texas for a visit to the southern border. It was her second trip to the border as a U.S. congresswoman — the first during the Biden administration — and she left with a dire warning.

"What we saw, it was heartbreaking, absolutely devastating. And it's only going to get worse," Wagner said in an interview with The Missouri Times following her trip.

Here are the House conferees for FY 2022 budget negotiations

With a balanced state budget due at the end of the week and negotiations expected to begin Wednesday, Speaker Rob Vescovo has named the House members heading to conference.

The Senate passed its version of the FY 2022 budget last week, passing the $34 billion package after an evening of debate. The House and Senate will go to conference — with each chamber sending three Republicans and two Democrats — to hammer out the differences between both proposals.

Missouri Farm Bureau President Garrett Hawkins: Property rights a 'fundamental question'

Missouri Farm Bureau President Garrett Hawkins said the conflict over property rights was paramount to Missouri's farmers and landowners, both today and for the future.

He pointed to a recent rally in the state Capitol where various officials and groups backed a legislative effort to curb the ability of projects — namely the Grain Belt Express — from using the power of eminent domain to construct above-ground transmission lines.

Freshmen to Watch: Terry Thompson

At just 20 years old, Rep. Terry Thompson was the youngest member of the Lexington Rotary Club.

Thompson eventually became president of the club and has taken its motto — "all about service above self" — to heart. He has a decades-long career in banking, having started as a bookkeeper and rising to an executive.

(News Tribune) Prosecutor: Domestic violence one of most under-reported crimes

Domestic violence reports in Jefferson City dropped significantly (about 40 percent) from 2019-20, according to data from the Missouri Highway Patrol.

And reports in Cole County overall remained flat, the data show. That would be encouraging, but what's more likely is that domestic assaults actually increased — significantly, Cole County Prosecuting Attorney Locke Thompson said.

OPINION

Grain Belt Express’s tax benefits to local schools are undeniable

By: Joshua Shoemaker

Prior to me becoming Superintendent of Schools in Keytesville, the county seat of Chariton County, the previous administration had the good fortune to oversee a new pipeline project that brought much-needed tax revenue to Chariton County. This allowed the district to roll back the school property tax levy by a nickel.

Funding for capital improvement projects perfected by House

As the Senate prepares to consider the full budget on the floor this week, the House perfected a new appropriations package dealing with improvement projects.

HBs 17, 18, and 19 would each appropriate more than $200 million in funding for capital improvement projects for various departments, universities, and the statehouse. Rep. Dirk Deaton, the House Budget Committee vice chairman, presented the bills before the body Tuesday morning, highlighting the need for updates across the state.

BUZZ

— Last night, the word going around the Capitol was that the Republican senators who voted to go along with the public and expand Medicaid were informed through backchannels that Speaker Rob Vescovo would be killing their bills. The Gentleman from Paranoia for the 100th time this session felt slighted and reacted by deciding he would try to bully the senators. He had pretty wisely even told his caucus last week not to expect their bills to go anywhere in the upper chamber — and then started to realize the consequences of his actions. Not one to be bullied, Sen. Justin Brown canceled his Transportation Committee hearing where a few House bills were set to be heard. More impactfully, Senate Majority Floor Leader Caleb Rowden canceled his Senate Rules Committee hearing showing he may be nearing the end of his patience with the Speaker. Humorously, set to be heard in Rules was Vescovo's bill to get his own Barney Fife.

Can you imagine giving Rob Vescovo his own cop to harass all the Missourians he thinks are out to get him?

This morning before session, Vescovo walked hat-in-hand over to the Senate to seek peace. He even threw a member of his own caucus under the bus. The cherry on top came later when Brown's uncontroversial boat dock bill was suddenly noticed for executive session after sitting idly in a House Rules committee for more than three weeks.

Now that Vescovo is trying to make amends with the Senate, maybe the House takes a break from guns and abortion bills and moves some Senate bills during the last two weeks.

The session came perilously close to grinding down this morning, and while it was a stand-up move for the Speaker to go in person to ask for peace, it also shows with so few important issues on the docket how quickly this session could blow out.

— 'Tis the season. A House bill establishing alocal government expenditure database was brought up on the Senate floor where 28 amendments — from raising court reporters' pay to barring municipalities from requiring so-called COVID-19 vaccine passports for public transit — were added over a more than three-hour span. Sen. Bob Onder also successfully tacked on an amendment restricting local public health orders, something he's been after all session, albeit in a more scaled-back manner than what he's previously proposed. The amendment stifles public health orders that close businesses, churches, etc. to just 30 days during a 180 day period unless approved by the majority vote of the area's governing body approves an extension. After the 28th amendment was tacked on, the bill was laid over so senators could work out any tweaks and potentially bring it back up with a new Senate substitute for round two.

— Rep. Ashley Bland Manlove, chair of the Black Caucus, had a conversation with former Tallahassee Mayor Andrew Gillum today about working together with other Black LGBTQ+ elected officials across the country to increase their representation in state and local politics.

— SB 51, the COVID-liability bill, failed in a House committee last night due in part to some conspiracies floated by so-called "medical freedom" activists, mainly from those who are opposed to vaccines in the first place. Aside from those, one erroneous argument levied against SB 51 is that it would make it easier to sue businesses over COVID exposure. They argue a left-wing judge could have a looser interpretation of the word "negligent" and allow people to sue a business for not requiring employees or customers to wear six masks, as an example.

Yet on the other side of the coin, these activists have called SB 51 "Cuomo Care," attributing the bill to liability provisions previously signed by New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo that protected hospitals, nursing homes, and other health care entities. Cuomo is under investigation for his administration's handling of nursing home patients during the height of COVID-19, specifically with the placing of positive patients into nursing homes. The activists want to make it easier to sue certain health care businesses and hospitals in Missouri.

— Sen. Holly Rehder's PDMP legislation is being heard in Rep. Phil Christofanelli's House Rules committee soon. It's unclear where the fate of the bill, which is in its ninth year of being filed by Rehder, stands. If it doesn't pass, members of that committee will have to explain how they're not showing tacet support for Sam Page, who authored the legislation that created the PDMP program in St. Louis County when he was a councilman. Without a statewide program from the legislature, that program is currently the largest and most effective PDMP in the state of Missouri.

Some on the committee may say their conservative donors and constituents don't like PDMP, but they should remember that Rehder won her Senate seat in the most conservative part of the state after being the primary sponsor of the legislation for her entire tenure in the House.

— Congratulations to Dave Berry of First Capitol Advisors and his wife Alexa on the birth of their pride and joy Jack!

Freshmen to Watch: Darrell Atchison

Rep. Darrell Atchison walked into his first legislative session in Jefferson City with one priority in mind: serving the people of HD 153.

Atchison, who represents Ripley, Carter, and parts of Wayne and Butler counties, said he was used to a more orderly process than what he found in the House; he retired from the Missouri National Guard after 23 years of service and continues to work as a financial advisor with Modern Woodmen of America. Atchison said he was content to listen and learn through his first legislative session while bringing a more laid-back presence to the chamber.

A Missouri budget process primer

The Senate is going to be hearing the House budget bills on the floor Wednesday so it's about to get very wonky in the upper chamber. It's difficult to remember all the nuances in the budget process from session to session so we brought you the rundown so you know what will be happening in the coming days.

There were 14 budget bills and two supplementals sent to the Senate by the House, and now that they've gone through Sen. Dan Hegeman's Appropriations Committee, they'll head to the floor. The Senate essentially treats appropriations bills the same as any other House bills that are third read on the floor with one significant exception: Appropriation bills are the only ones that can be brought to the floor from the formal calendar out of order. Normally, if a bill the chamber wanted to hear was low on the formal calendar, lawmakers would move to place the bills before it on the informal calendar to get to the one they want to take up.

OPINION

Missouri should avoid the mistake other states made with Medicaid expansion

By: Jeremy Cady

When Missouri decided to expand Medicaid last year under Amendment 2, it voted, like many states, for a program it couldn't afford.

Attempt to lessen power of local officials during health emergencies fails in Senate

After nearly eight hours of negotiation, a bill meant to lessen the power of local officials during public health emergencies was rejected by the Senate Thursday morning.

SB 12 would have prohibited political subdivisions from imposing rules restricting the number of people gathering or residing on private residential property during a state of emergency related to public health. It also sought to restrict political subdivisions from imposing a public health order that directly or indirectly closes or restricts businesses, churches, schools, and other places from operating for longer than 15 days within a 180-day period without approval from governing bodies. Its perfection was ultimately rejected by a vote of 11 to 19.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

BUZZ

— Sen. Bob Onder's public health bill failed last night in the Senate because the body couldn't reach a compromise that the Conservative Caucus was willing to swallow. Even though they got most of what they wanted, it still wasn't enough. Republicans who aren't a part of the Conservative Caucus got tired of their unwillingness to move and voted against or absent on the bill. Thus far, leadership has gone the extra mile to work with the Conservative Caucus in getting their bills to a vote, and in most cases, voting with the Conservative Caucus. However, you're seeing the first signs of pushback from other senators in the Republican Caucus who want to see the same effort from leadership on their priorities.

— Sens. Tony Luetkemeyer and Brian Williams's police reform bill is likely to get third read early next week. Most of the Democratic Caucus is expected to vote for the bill despite the residency requirements. There may be a few Kansas City holdouts, like Sen. Barbara Washington, but the bill should easily pass the upper chamber and move over to the House for consideration. Supporters, like police organizations, are happy with the negotiated version of both bills and plan on working hard to get it to the governor's desk.

— Former U.S. Attorney Tim Garrison announced today that he will not be running for U.S. Senate, despite rumors that he was considering.

"I will always support and defend our constitutional principles of limited government, individual liberty, and personal virtue. After careful consideration, however, I will not be a candidate for election to the United States Senate."

— A new ad hitting Cara Spencer has been released in the St. Louis mayor's race. 314 Forward released an ad comparing Spencer to Mayor Lyda Krewson, saying she would bring about more of the same policies, rather than actually being a progressive mayor. Spencer and Treasurer Tishaura Jones will go head-to-head on April 6 for the mayor's job.

— The Medicaid expansion fight played out early in the Budget markup hearing today. Funds affecting MedEx were put into a separate bill, HB 20, that the committee voted on first during markup.

"Stop acting like we don't have any money because you don't want to provide health care to people," Rep. Peter Merideth, the ranking minority member on the committee, said during debate.

Chairman Cody Smith sternly encouraged the committee to avoid assigning motives to their fellow colleagues. The bill failed to pass with even Smith, who sponsored the bill, voting against it. Now, the Senate will have put Medicaid expansion funding in its budget, or the House will have to start over with a new offer that will somehow differ from this approach.

Outside of Medicaid expansion, despite the billions coming in from the American Rescue Plan, Smith is being extremely cautious with the influx of funds coming into the state. He's already cut around $250 million from Gov. Mike Parson's proposed budget.

—Today the Congressional Medal of Honor Society announced retired St. Louis Police Captain David Dorn would be posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor Citizen Honors Award. Dorn died during the protests this past summer over the killing of George Floyd.

— Listen to the first episode of "Third Read," the new #moleg podcast from Kaitlyn Schallhorn and Conner Kerrigan. You can find it on Spotify, Apple Podcasts, or listen right in your browser.

— "This Week in Missouri Politics" is back on Sunday with Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe as the featured guest.

Senate approves renewable natural gas program

A Senate bill meant to help Missouri utility companies receive financial help transitioning to renewable natural gas is on its way to the House.

SB 141, sponsored by Sen. Jason Bean, would require Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) to allow gas companies to offer a voluntary renewable natural gas program. The commission would enact reporting requirements and a process to recover expenses from the program through an automatic rate adjustment clause, with the funds put toward installing and maintaining the equipment needed for the program. Recovery would not begin until the project begins operations.

Senate to consider bipartisan unemployment overpayment waiver

The Missouri Senate is working on its own effort to prevent the state from recouping unemployment overpayments during the COVID-19 pandemic.

SB 481, sponsored by Sen. Lincoln Hough, would direct the state of Missouri to apply for a federal waiver to prohibit the Department of Labor (DOL) Division of Employment Security (DES) from recovering or attempting to recover non-fraudulent federal overpayments incurred during Missouri's proclaimed state of emergency. Pat Thomas, Hough's chief of staff, said seeking repayment would harm Missourians reeling from the impact of the pandemic.

SCR1 has space for 15 individuals in addition to Senators and staff. As chairman I have no control over who is allowed access to the room, I strongly suggest interested parties line up prior to the doors opening. Due to the limited seating capacity, we ask that individuals who have completed their testimony and have no further business with the committee to be courteous of individuals that maybe waiting outside for their turn to testify.

• Audio for committee hearings will be streamed. Links may be found for each committee room at https://www.senate.mo.gov/hearingsschedule/hrings.htm
The Chair has no control over when the streaming begins or ends, I would strongly advise all members and attendees to assume that anything said in the committee room may be live streamed. This includes the time before and after the meeting is called to order. The Chair has no ability to control the quality of the streaming process, with some witnesses wearing masks it is possible that some testimony may be inaudible.

• Written testimony will be allowed in lieu of in person oral testimony. Witnesses must register and may upload any written testimony at https://www.senate.mo.gov/senatewitnesssystem/ This committee will only accept testimony for or against a bill and does not accept testimony for informational purposes. Amid Senate rumors, Jason Smith to hold reception at Mar-a-Lago

Congressman Jason Smith, a potential candidate to take over Roy Blunt's seat in the Senate, is hosting a fundraiser at former President Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago home later this month along with other prominent Republicans, including Gov. Mike Parson.

The Palm Beach, Florida, invitation lists Parson and the first lady, South Dakota Gov. Kristi Noem, Colorado Congresswoman Lauren Boebert, Texas Congressman Ronny Jackson, Florida Congressman Brian Mast, New York Congressman Lee Zeldin, and former Georgia Congressman Doug Collins as the honorary host committee. The reception is slated for April 30.

US SENATE BUZZ

— It's been a rough fundraising start for Eric Greitens. So far, he has only pulled in a whopping $27,314, — $18,000 coming as a personal contribution. The scandalous former governor only has about $9,000 cash on hand, an amount showing a limp campaign unable to get off the ground outside of silly media hits. Seriously, after the second or third time you've been in the news apparently saving a life via CPR, people are going to start wondering why so many people are choking in your general vicinity. Even with his failing campaign, Greitens was able to secure an endorsement from a Republican group in New York. I don't think I'd put the opinions of New Yorkers anywhere on the list of things Missouri voters care about, but Greitens hasn't really stepped foot in the state since he announced his campaign so it's not clear that he's very in tune with Missouri's voters anyway.

— Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler may have another reason to truly dive into the U.S. Senate race. We're hearing John Brunner could support her candidacy if and when she announces if he decides to opt out himself. However, operatives close to Brunner tell us he is "still weighing all options and his main focus is deciding the best path forward to disrupt the Missouri political establishment."

— Jason Smith's reception at Mar-a-Lago is part of a larger trend of Republican hopefuls searching for their golden ticket to the Senate: an endorsement from Donald Trump. It's a smart play since anyone who receives that support will pretty much be a shoo-in for the Republican nomination. We know almost every Missouri hopeful has visited the former president's Florida club, and he may be getting ready to sit them all down, Apprentice style, like he did with candidates vying for Ohio's open Senate seat.

— Democrat Lucas Kunce, who has announced a run for U.S. Senate, has seen 89 percent of his campaign's contributions come from out of state. You'd think that more folks running to represent Missouri would spend some actual time in Missouri.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— Rep. Chris Dinkins may be adding his name to the list of candidates interested in running for Congressman Jason Smith's seat if Smith decides to run for U.S. Senate. The primary field will already be pretty crowded, and redistricting will play a significant role in who can and can't jump in.

OTHER BUZZ

— One statewide race that hasn't gotten quite enough attention yet is the race for auditor which will also be on the ballot in 2022. It's unclear whether Nicole Galloway will run for re-election, and the Republican primary is a bit of an open field right now. We've heard that Sen. Bob Onder may be considering a run, but it's likely that he is waiting to see if Rep. Travis Fitzwater will announce. Fitzwater has the funding and ability to make a serious and successful run for the seat.

— The Senate will begin its budget talks next week, and almost every other issue will have to take a backseat while they negotiate internally and with the House. Sen. Lincoln Hough isn't giving up his fight to ensure that the state fully funds Medicaid expansion so we'll see how late those nights get in the upper chamber.

— After the NAACP criticized SB 53, Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer's sweeping police reform bill that includes Sen. Brian Williams' ban on the police use of chokeholds, the Democratic lawmaker is responding:

"Just the other day in Minnesota, not far from where George Floyd was killed, another Black life was lost after an encounter with the police. That could easily happen to me. When I take off this lapel pin, I am no different than any other Black male in this society. There is too much at stake for us to continue to pound the table and shout at each other. That doesn't accomplish anything. I am focused on making sure that we ban chokeholds and remove bad officers from the profession. I am working to restore the trust between our communities and law enforcement. SB 60 is the only meaningful progress on police reform in this state since the death of Michael Brown. I am proud of the work we have done so far. I am looking forward to the day that SB 60 becomes law in the state of Missouri."

— Rep. Nick Schroer has been named Liberty Alliance's first Conservative Champion of the Week.

— On Sunday's episode of "This Week in Missouri Politics," Scott talks with Sen. Bob Onder. The panel includes Reps. Donna Baringer and Chad Perkins, along with St. Louis Alderwoman-elect Anne Schweitzer and Jamey Murphy.

Greitens, Schmitt tied for Senate in survey of likely GOP voters

Attorney General Eric Schmitt and former Gov. Eric Greitens are locked in a virtual tie for U.S. Senate among Republican primary voters polled in a recent survey.

The Remington/MO Scout poll asked likely 2022 Republican primary voters who they would choose between Greitens and Schmitt if the election was held today: 40 percent chose Greitens while 39 percent chose Schmitt. Twenty-one percent of those polled were undecided.

NFIB backs Schmitt's American Rescue Plan Act suit

The National Federation of Independent Businesses(NFIB) is throwing its weight behind Attorney General Eric Schmitt's legal challenge to the American Rescue Plan (ARP) Act.

Schmitt sued the U.S. Department of the Treasury and Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen last month, pointing to a provision he said would force states to pick between COVID-19 relief funds or their tax policies if interpreted too broadly. The lawsuit asked the court to provide clarity over the interpretation; Schmitt said he supports a narrower reading of the provision that would just prohibit states from using COVID relief funds to offset tax reductions.

PSC approves Ameren coronavirus assistance fund

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) approved a request from Ameren Missouri to redirect more than $3 million to assist customers through the COVID-19 pandemic.

Ameren requested modification of an agreement directing $3.5 million to a low-income weatherization program, instead putting the funds toward low-income customers impacted by the pandemic. The proposal included $2.5 million slated to directly fund these programs with the remainder covering administrative costs associated with their implementation. The order was granted an expedited effective date during this week's agenda meeting.

Freshmen to Watch: Bishop Davidson

For freshman Rep. Bishop Davidson, the decision to run for office came last-minute — but he's already making waves a few months into his first term in the statehouse.

Davidson's decision to vie for the HD 130 seat coincided with other developments in his life, including the launch of his tutoring and original-curriculum service and his return home. While his passion has long been education, he hopes to do his part for the state from the House floor.

Freshmen to Watch: Michael Burton

Rep. Michael Burton, a former Broadway cast member and professional actor, has landed a role in the Missouri statehouse.

Burton believes that his background as an actor has prepared him for the legislature by teaching him persistence.

Kansas City International Airport grapples with increased utility bills after cold snap

In the wake of the devastating winter storms earlier this year, Kansas City International Airport (KCI) received a $2.4 million natural gas bill — but the city is pushing back.

"Kansas City certainly understands the energy industry challenges from this winter, primarily originating in the southwest," Mayor Quinton Lucas said on social media. "We do not believe, however, those costs should be disproportionately assessed to our MoKan flying public."

BUZZ

As the special session teeters on dumpster fire, there are legit problems. It started off with the Senate passing a bill that could have had victory declared. It didn't come easy, but it got done. Then, the House did not like a couple of parts of it, especially the juvenile portions. Specifically, the Speaker did not like some of the portions of the juvenile portions, and he said that pretty vocally. He was not shy about sharing his concerns. It came down to a lot of pressure was placed on Judiciary Chairman David Gregory to do some things that probably would not have been seen as top legislative deal craft. He turned all of those down, and at the end of the day, the changes that some people wanted might not have had the votes in the Judiciary Committee. And either way, the bill was going to move forward essentially intact — if it moved forward at all.

However, the Rules Committee that the Judiciary Committee reports to is chaired by Rep.Holly Rehder, and as the week wore on, it became clear she had intentions on sending some of it back to be fixed. After some pretty heated back-and-forth between the Governor's Office and the Speaker, it was decided there would not be a House session this week, therefore, there was no need for the Judiciary Committee.

Instead of taking SB 1, the House will turn it into several smaller bills to be sent to two different committees. A joint statement from Speaker Elijah Haahr, Speaker Pro Tem John Wiemann, and Majority Floor Leader Rob Vescovo said:

"In an effort to protect the integrity of the lawmaking process, and to ensure these important issues are thoroughly vetted, we intend to simplify the process with single-subject bills so we can focus on the merits of each bill individually to produce legislation that makes our streets and neighborhoods safer. Given the fact the governor expanded the call as one of our committees was considering the bill he originally proposed, we think it's important to take a step back and give additional thought and attention to each part of the plan. This will provide a more deliberative process that will allow us to craft the kind of policy that will better protect Missourians from the scourge of violent crime."

Essentially this has turned into a staring match between the Speaker and the Governor, and the Speaker was able to do what Speakers can do during a special session which is just not participate. There is talk that the committees won't be back for another week and a half but that's not officially known. Where the bill stands right now is SB 1 probably doesn't move in its current form.

As to the language regarding Kim Gardner, which is the new controversial part, most everybody wants to try to find a compromise especially as there's a growing consensus among legal scholars that it would be viewed as a special law anyway and would have a hard time withstanding scrutiny. You have to assume the Governor's Office at this point would take a deal on SB 1 on at least the juvenile portion, and you have to assume that deal is out there if all sides want it. However, what the House could do is pass their version of the bills they want and adjourn sine die and leave — forcing a take it or leave it to the Senate. And the later they do that, the easier it is on Senate Democrats to filibuster. Most people thought it would just head to a conference when it hit some snags, but now it looks like there is going to have to be serious negotiations with the House because the Speaker can cancel the whole show if he so chooses. That would not make the Speaker look very tough on crime but it all depends on how much he cares about those allegations, and chances are, he's not staying up at night worrying about that. A running theme is not that many legislators take the special session all that seriously. It's looked down on by many that this will do much to solve crime in St. Louis.

And part of that is the reason why it will take a lot of work to get 18 signatures on the PQ. There are some senators, who are really senators, who are not supporters of PQ such as Lincoln Hough and Mike Cierpiot. Some believe Paul Wieland could be on that list. And the scary part of that is most people would put Doug Libla, who is carrying the bill, on that list. No one believed when he took this on he'd be signing up for a bill that would be subjected to a PQ. It would be very sad to make Senator Libla end his career on a PQ bill as he's always been a senator's senator.

The funny thing about the whole thing is, special sessions are usually an advantage to the Governor because it's very hard to filibuster a special session. However, while Senate Democrats have few cards to play other than filibustering for eight weeks, the Speaker has enhanced cards to play. You have to assume something is worked out and something that you can call a "crime bill" reaches the Governor's desk.

The one thing that is indisputable is every day that people are talking about crime, they're not talking about COVID. And that puts Nicole Galloway in a very tough spot. Does she take the side of Gardner and anger people from Arnold to Wentzville or does she take the side of the cops and anger everyone on Cherokee Street in the city?

While things look sloppy in Jefferson City, what's pretty cut and dry is that there's no good politics for Galloway having to talk about Gardner. The longer the special session stretches out, most likely the better it is for Governor Parson even if the legislative deal craft looks sloppy in the process.

IN OTHER NEWS

Special session distracts from coronavirus, Quade says

House Minority Floor Leader Crystal Quade called the special session on violent crime a distraction from what she said is a more pressing issue at hand: the COVID-19 pandemic.

"When Gov. Mike Parson first called this special legislative session, it was clear that the purpose was not to address violent crime, but to change the subject from his disastrous leadership during the COVID-19 pandemic," Quade said. "It seems Gov. Parson may need a reminder that when we discuss COVID-19, we should be thinking about more than just numbers; we should be looking at faces."

Parson calls on attorney general to help prosecute St. Louis homicides in expansion of special session

Just two weeks after the special session to address violent crime began, Gov. Mike Parson expanded the scope to include concurrent jurisdiction in St. Louis.

The move gives the Attorney General's Office the power to prosecute certain homicides in St. Louis: if a case is at least 90 days old, the chief law enforcement officer makes the request, and the circuit attorney has not yet filed charges.

"Despite increasing murders in the city, fewer charges have been filed in the past three years, creating a significant backlog of cases," Parson told reporters at the Capitol Monday. "Legislative measures must be taken to further address violent crime in Missouri and protect our citizens. Today, I am expanding the call of special session on violent crime to include a new provision to assist with the growing backlog of murder cases in St. Louis."

— The Missouri Times Statesman of the Year Event is starting at 6 p.m. tonight at the Millbottom. Senators will be briefly visiting with Gov. Mike Parson before they head over to the Millbottom to join us in celebrating Senate President Pro Tem Dave Schatz. The program will begin when they arrive. We've got plenty of food, beer, and spirits so bring your staff and friends. See you tonight!

— The St. Louis mayoral race between Treasurer Tishaura Jones and Alderwoman Cara Spencer is one week from today. So far, Jones has raised and spent more than Spencer, mostly on her field game. Spencer has focused instead on broadcast TV spots.

Jones' campaign has raised $332,000 and spent $280,000, with $122,000 left in the bank.

Jones' PAC has raised $74,000 and spent $126,000, with $61,500 left in the bank.

Spencer's campaign has raised $278,000 and spent $269,000, with $36,500 left in the bank.

Spencer's PAC has raised $66,500 and spent $60,000, with $14,000 left in the bank.

Down ballot, Alderwoman Megan Green is trying to flip the board of aldermen by electing three challengers to incumbents. Anne Schweitzer, Shedrick "Nato Caliph" Kelley, and James Page are all recruits who are looking to upset their opponents after an interesting primary. Schweitzer beat incumbent alderwoman Beth Murphy by a sizable number in that primary, and Kelley and Page came very close and are now running off of the scandals their opponents have been embroiled in. Jack Coatar has been dealing with a charge that he accepted $10,000 in contributions from LLCs linked to new developments in the ward, and Tamika Hubbard has been hobbled by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch's stories about her family's financial interest in a project they've reportedly stalled.

— Expect to see biodiesel back in the House tomorrow. It seems that, even with the deal tying the biodiesel and trans youth bills together, leadership is still pushing ahead with biodiesel, and may have the votes to do so.

— Maura Browning, communications director for Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft, is moving over to the Labor Department where she'll also be doing communications.

Senate passes bill banning chokeholds, altering KCPD residency rules

A Senate bill banning the use of chokeholds and altering residency requirements for Kansas City police officers is moving on to the House.

SB 53, sponsored by Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer, quickly passed the Senate Monday by a vote of 30-4, with several Kansas City senators voting against it. The language would prohibit the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners from enacting residency requirements more restrictive than 30 miles outside of the city limit and would require officers to live within the state of Missouri.

PDMP bill perfected in Senate

After extensive debate among Senate Republicans, a bill seeking to create a statewide prescription drug monitoring program (PDMP) was perfected.

Sen. Holly Rehder's SB 63 would establish the Joint Oversight Task Force of Prescription Drug Monitoring within the Office of Administration, creating a statewide PDMP. The task force would work with a vendor after a competitive bid to collect and maintain patient data, which would be deleted after three years. The bill was perfected after more than six hours of debate.

Former GOP Sen. Kit Bond Defends Spending Earmarks (Wall Street Journal)

Your editorial blasting appropriations earmarks overlooks the key point: If elected officials don't have a say, unelected bureaucrats will make all federal spending decisions ("Earmarks Are the GOP's Bridge to Nowhere," March 19). Even worse, these decision makers are not known to the public, they are not elected, not accountable to voters, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to hold them personally responsible.

OPINION

Your vote matters in St. Louis elections

By: Luz María Henríquez

With the upcoming mayoral and aldermanic elections, we have a chance to create a Midwest beacon for civil liberties in St. Louis. For far too long Missouri as a state, and St. Louis in particular, have garnered headlines for racial inequality and racist policing. St. Louis is a series of systems that are badly broken and in need of repair so that each of its residents has an opportunity to thrive. For months, the ACLU has texted, called, and spoken to voters who care about this city. Now, it is time to take the pledge to all do our part — starting with those on the ballot.

The right to assemble is the bedrock of our democracy — Vote NO on SB 26

By: Rasheen Aldridge and Cori Bush

The hallmark of a healthy democracy is civil debate, protest, civic engagement, and an unwavering right to voice one's beliefs even when there is disagreement — especially when there is disagreement. Free speech and assembly are fundamental to a functioning democracy. Their placement in the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution implies their importance. It comes as a surprise then to see that the Missouri House is poised to pass a bill that would silence the voices of those rising in defense of Black lives by enacting criminal penalties on the right to protest.

It is about dignity

By: Candance Wesson

Here are some of the demeaning choices you face as a woman in prison: Do you spend the little money you have on calling home to tell your baby you love them or on tampons to get you through this month's cycle? Do you risk toxic shock syndrome by using a homemade tampon, or do you turn a t-shirt into a makeshift pad? If you start spotting while pregnant, do you use your "ask" to see the doctor right away, or do you wait and see whether it gets worse?

From legislating to lobbying, a look at Kurt Schaefer's progression through government

From lawyer to policymaker to partner at a governmental relations firm, Kurt Schaefer has been on all sides of Missouri government over the past two decades. He is no stranger to the complex relationships and conflicts that arise in state government.

Schaefer is a partner at Lathrop GPM Consulting, a law and governmental relations firm with offices in Jefferson City and Columbia. But he's also a former assistant attorney general, deputy director of the Department of Natural Resources, and Appropriations chair in the Senate.

Schaefer said his experience in all aspects of government — from the lawmaking process to the executive branch to the courtroom — informed his work to this day.

Vicky Hartzler announces Senate candidacy in Lee's Summit

After months of speculation, Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler jumped into the U.S. Senate race Thursday — becoming the first congressional official and woman to do so.

Unlike other candidates, Hartzler didn't make the campaign official on cable news. Instead, she traveled back to Missouri, telling those gathered at the Frontier Justice shooting range in Lee's Summit.

Hartzler, 60, drew on her faith while criticizing President Joe Biden and "socialist Democrat policies" in her campaign speech.

Missouri ranked No. 32 in broadband access; millions invested in improvements

Missouri is ranked No. 32 in broadband access compared to the rest of the country, according to Tim Arbeiter, director of broadband development at the Department of Economic Development.

Arbeiter said there are more than 147,000 unserved or underserved households and more than 392,000 individuals without reliable internet access in the state. The state has made drastic improvements despite the high numbers, substantially increasing its ranking since 2018.

Alex Dubinsky seeks to be Missouri's youngest state rep

With Rep. Tracy McCreery terming out of her House seat, student and former campaign strategist Alex Dubinsky is gearing up to run for the open spot.

Dubinsky, an incoming law student at Washington University, is no stranger to the campaign trail: He worked with freshmen Reps. Jo Doll and Bridget Walsh Moore on their bids and served as organizing director for Cort VanOstran's 2018 congressional race.

Vicky Hartzler: A timeline of her career

After months of speculation, Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler officially announced her candidacy for U.S. Senate Thursday, seeking to add to her lengthy resume of public service.

Hartzler joins a growing pool of well-known contenders for outgoing Sen. Roy Blunt's seat after meeting with Missouri officials and agriculture groups and extensive consideration about the opportunity.

New semiconductor wafer jobs coming to Missouri

Missouri is gaining 75 new jobs thanks to an $800 million supply agreement between semiconductor manufacturers GLOBALFOUNDRIES (GF) and GlobalWafers (GWC).

The new jobs will go to GWC's MEMC facility in O'Fallon, where specialized wafers — thin slices of semiconductor used to manufacture solar cells and integrated circuits — are manufactured for GF's facilities across the country. Ameren Missouri helped facilitate the deal through its Economic Development Incentive which provides discounts on energy to new or expanding companies that meet the criteria outlined in its Smart Energy Plan.

Department of Social Services prepares Missourians for the gradual return of the regular SNAP/ Food Stamp program

Starting later this summer, the Department of Social Services (DSS) will take gradual steps to ease Missouri's return to the regular SNAP/Food Stamp program operation. DSS will send out letters in July to notify SNAP recipients of important upcoming dates of SNAP changes to move the state steadily toward the resumption of the regular program.

Gambling with the FRA could lead to ruin

By: Ingrid Burnett

Lately, there has been a significant amount of coverage on the failure of the Senate to pass a voluntary tax paid by hospitals that allows us to draw down a large federal match referred to as the Federal Reimbursement Allowance (FRA). This tax generates more than $1 billion, and the match adds another $2 billion.

Farm Bureau stands united behind America's farmers, ranchers at southern border

By: Garrett Hawkins

In rural Missouri, we know what it's like to feel forgotten. Coastal elites think of us as "flyover country" and have no idea what our lives are like or what we struggle with. When hard times come, the last thing you need is to feel like nobody's listening and nobody cares.

Dave Schatz named 2020 Statesman of the Year

Dave Schatz is a competitor. He's an avid fisher and hunter, has coached virtually every sport imaginable for his children, and has an almost unparalleled affinity for golf. Schatz loves to win — and he brings that same drive to the statehouse.

Schatz has risen in the Capitol from a state representative to president pro tem of the Missouri Senate. Because of his dedication to Missouri's infrastructure, skillful setting of the session's policy agenda, and ardent allegiance to principle, The Missouri Times has named Schatz its 2020 Statesman of the Year.

BUZZ

— The story of education reform in the Senate is a never-ending saga. SB 55 was expected to be heard on the floor this week, but they need every senator in that chamber to make it happen, and there are a few missing the rest of this week. When the chamber is full again, Senate Majority Floor Leader Caleb Rowden and Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin, the sponsor, need to decide whether they want to move forward with the omnibus bill or break it into its component pieces to try to get those passed.

"Every day that SB 55 isn't on the floor, the latter feels more likely," said one observer.

— The "Missouri Made Fuels Act", also known as the biodiesel bill, passed in the House today with 88 votes. Far from splitting along party lines, the bill saw support from the Black Caucus but not most other Democrats. Floor Leader Dean Plocher voted yes along with plenty of more moderate Republicans, but Speaker of the House Rob Vescovo was a "no."

Some members of the Democratic Party were frustrated by the supposed deal struck between Rep. Justin Hill and leaders of their party involving the biodiesel and trans sports bill. Supposedly, if the Democrats could deliver "no" votes on biodiesel, Hill would make sure the trans bill died in committee. But the trans bill was DOA in the Senate anyway, and biodiesel passed even without most Democrats. The whole incident was a bad look for House Democratic leadership — they're getting manipulated with deals on social issues and whiffing on one of the few issues that they could have had a real impact on the state. It's kind of hard to expect to make inroads in rural Missouri when you get played over straw man issues.

"It just feels like the conservatives are learning that they can file scary-language bills and then get some of us to bend over backward trying to stop them, even if they have no chance of passage," said one Democratic lawmaker.

On the Republican side, some members voted against the bill saying that it is the government interfering with the free market, but proponents, including sponsor Rep. Mike Haffner, say the bill is a win-win for Missouri's largest industry.

Either way, congratulations to the Missouri Soybean Association on the bill's passage. It's expected to have a slightly less bumpy road in the Senate because negotiations have been ongoing among all parties involved. It's been passed out of the Senate Agriculture Committee unanimously, and now just needs time on the floor.

— Sen. Holly Rehder's PDMP bill is ready to go over to the House — if only it had a handler. The bill has passed the lower chamber every year that Rehder has brought it up, and usually gets stalled in the Senate. Now that Rehder is in the upper chamber, she was able to clear that hurdle, but it's unclear who on the House side can pick up the mantle. It's a popular bill that can most likely pass the lower chamber; it just depends on who will get to take credit for it.

— The rumors that former Gov. Jay Nixon is seriously considering stepping into the U.S. Senate race to keep Missouri from being represented by Eric Greitens are true.

— Former state Rep. Courtney Curtis, aide to County Councilwoman Rita Days, was sentenced by the feds today for wire fraud after he was accused of stealing funds from his campaign account. He received a 21-month sentence. The guidelines were 15-21.

—Former state representative and current Kansas City Council member Brandon Ellington has been charged with assault. The alleged incident happened at 18th & Vine.

— The latest print edition of The Missouri Times has been issued! Find it on newsstands around the Capitol and grab your free copy today or find the digital issue here.

— House staff got new commemorative pins this year for the bicentennial celebration from Rep Dean Plocher.

— Thank you to everyone who came out last night for our Statesman of the Year Event honoring Sen. Dave Schatz. The turnout was incredible, and it looked like everyone had a great time. We hope to see you at the next The Missouri Times event!

Parson, Schmitt fire back at DOJ's SAPA letter: 'We will fight tooth and nail to defend' gun rights

Gov. Mike Parson and Attorney General Eric Schmitt pushed back against the federal government in their response to the Department of Justice's inquiry into the Second Amendment Preservation Act (SAPA): "We will not stand by while the federal government tries to tell Missourians how to live our lives."

Parson and Schmitt responded to the federal government's inquiry in their own seven-page letter Thursday regarding HB 85 which the governor signed into law Saturday. SAPA sought to declare federal laws that could restrict gun ownership among law-abiding Missourians as "invalid" in the state. It also said public officers and employees cannot enforce federal firearm laws that would be deemed invalid under this law, and those who do so could be subjected to a $50,000 penalty.

BUZZ

— In the never-ending saga of the FRA, the Governor's Office finally has its back against the wall.

The governor tried to let the legislature figure it out as they have for 20 years and pass the FRA — however, that didn't happen in session.

It appeared the governor gave them a little space after session, but as the July 1 date creeps up, they've had to become more engaged as the adults to try to keep the kids from fighting.

The governor apparently accepted that some abortion language was necessary to pass it. However, he probably could have done a better job of communicating with the House.

In what is a shocking reversal of the norm, the House, led by Budget Chair Cody Smith, has been the adult in the room. It passed a clean FRA without a lot of drama, then quietly waited while the Senate fought to do what everybody acknowledges had to be done.

In the meeting we told you about earlier in the week with the governor, they floated a five-year extension with some of this abortion language which some senators did not like. It appears as though a three-year extension would be acceptable, especially for Parson as it would mean it was the last time he had to have this fight.

Senators seemed to be coming to some kind of agreement on a list banning some drugs that are birth control or abortion, depending on your political point of view.

However, no one seemed to talk to the House. They made it clear that they were fine with their previous position on a call that happened today. They basically said they preferred their position of a clean FRA. Since no one talked to them, they were going to pass their own bill and go to conference but that they would acquiesce to some abortion language if that's what it took to get this done, again playing the role of the more statesman-like body.

If you watch "This Week in Missouri Politics" Sunday, you'll see Sen. John Rizzo essentially say the same thing. He prefers a clean FRA but would probably go along with some language in order to get this important thing done for the state and seek his retribution for the end of session on something less pivotal.

The call everyone had previously expected yesterday or today seems far from what's likely at this point. It appears the governor is going to have to call a session and prepare for withholds. It would be a stunning retreat of minority power in the Senate if Democrats help do anything that doesn't honor the deal for a clean FRA. An emergency clause will probably only be attached to a clean FRA.

Where that leaves everybody on a warm Friday afternoon is the governor may be forced to get the ball rolling with a call so they can begin work. July 1 is rapidly approaching, but on the bright side, you currently have the governor, House Republicans, Senate Democrats, and a little more than half of the Senate Republicans in support of a clean FRA. That group appears somewhat willing to agree; the meeting was really designed to identify what Sen. Paul Wieland wants, and depending on who you ask, that seems to have made some progress, but Sen. Bob Onder did not seem to have his concerns addressed. Now the House seems to take a little umbrage at being left out of these discussions and may chart their own course which is hard to argue.

As July 1 steps up, it is now up to the governor.

— Congratulations to Kurt Becker for his new position as chief operating officer for the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF).

— Following the Supreme Court's dismissal of several Republican states' (including Missouri) challenge of ObamaCare, Attorney General Eric Schmitt said:

"During my time in the legislative branch of state government, I fought to ensure that the citizens of Missouri have access to quality, affordable and readily available healthcare. Since taking office as attorney general, I've continued that fight for more affordable health care, including the landmark, historic lawsuit that I filed against major generic drug manufacturers fighting against artificially inflated drug prices.

We're certainly disappointed in the Supreme Court's decision, and that the case wasn't decided on its merits but rather procedural grounds. As Missouri's Attorney General, I have a solemn obligation to defend the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Missouri — that's exactly what I did in this case and what I will continue to do."

Missouri cannot disregard federal gun laws, Justice Department says

In enforcing the Second Amendment Preservation Act (SAPA), Missouri cannot reject or disregard federal gun laws, the U.S. Justice Department (DOJ) said in a letter to Gov. Mike Parson less than a week after he signed the bill.

SAPA, sponsored by Rep. Jered Taylor, seeks to declare federal laws that could restrict gun ownership as "invalid" in the state. It also said public officers and employees cannot enforce federal firearm laws that would be deemed invalid under this law, and those who do could be subjected to a $50,000 penalty.

Acting Assistant Attorney General Brian Boynton told Parson and Missouri Attorney General Eric Schmitt the U.S. Constitution's Supremacy Clause supersedes the new law. He also warned the law could hamper relationships between the federal government and Missouri.

McCloskeys plead guilty to misdemeanor harassment, assault charges

Mark and Patricia McCloskey — the couple who became infamous after they waved their guns from their porch as a group of protestors gathered near their home in St. Louis last year — pleaded guilty in court Thursday.

Mark McCloskey, who is a Republican U.S. Senate candidate, pleaded guilty to a Class C misdemeanor of assault in the fourth degree and agreed to a $750 fine. Patricia McCloskey pleaded guilty to a Class A misdemeanor of harassment in the second degree and agreed to a $2,000 fine.

Taylor: SAPA will hold up in court

The Second Amendment Preservation Act (SAPA) is already sending a clear message to the federal government that Missouri will not enforce federal gun laws that infringe on Missourians' rights, Rep. Jered Taylor said of his legislation after the Department of Justice (DOJ) sent a letter to the state.

Taylor said he believed the state to be on "great legal ground" with HB 85 which declares federal gun laws that could restrict gun ownership for "law-abiding citizens" as "invalid" in the state. He added he believes the new law, which Gov. Mike Parson signed Saturday "is going to hold up" should it be challenged in court.

DESE submits American Rescue Plan proposal for local schools, teacher retention

Missouri's Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) submitted its request for federal funds through the American Rescue PlanThursday, allocating most to local schools to respond to the pandemic.

Of the state's $1.96 billion allotment through the Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief (ESSER III) fund, 90 percent would go to local education agencies (LEAs) under the department's plan. The remaining 10 percent would be used to address the impact of the pandemic through state-level initiatives and projects.

Missouri college athletes could get paid for their likeness under bipartisan plan

With less than two weeks left of the legislative session, a bipartisan effort is underway to allow college athletes to be paid for their likeness.

Democratic Sen. Greg Razer spearheaded the effort Tuesday by attaching an amendment to a House education bill that would prevent colleges from prohibiting or punishing a student-athlete who earns compensation for the use of his or her name, image, likeness, or "athletic reputation." The language also stipulates that an athlete's grant-in-aid or stipend eligibility should not be impacted by compensation.

"What we're talking about is allowing the Olympic model in the NCAA — allowing our student-athletes to earn money off their name, image and likeness through endorsements," Razer told The Missouri Times. "To date, 11 states have NIL legislation signed into law and Georgia has a bill sitting on the governor's desk. Allowing these athletes to make money off their own name, image, and likeness is long overdue, and it's time Missouri moves on this legislation."

BUZZ

— Today's budget conference committee saw the Senate positions sweeping the day. There was a pretty clear dynamic that House chairman Cody Smith was laser-focused on $5 million for some charter school maintenance and another $2 million for opportunity trust.

Once Smith had convinced Sen. Lincoln Hough to go along with those two asks, the committee took the vast majority of Hough's positions.

However, no matter how the line items shook out, the House reclaimed a dominant role in the budget process by refusing to go along with the statewide vote to expand Medicaid. There was no doubt the Senate and the governor were planning to abide by the vote and fund it. It was the House that took the first step and the Senate followed.

— Speaking of Hough, he moved Rep. Phil Christofanelli's ESA bill out of his GAFO committee today. In a humorous turn of events, even though he isn't much of a fan of the legislation, he told his committee members they should feel free to go against the chair and vote for the bill. I guess you have to follow the chairman in the Senate only sometimes.

There are some promises from the House that some Senate bills will start making their way to the House floor — but it will be interesting to see which Senate bills start to move in the House.

— SB 26, which kept the House in session late last night, may serve as an interesting precursor to SB 50, the police reform bill from Sens. Tony Luetkemeyer and Brian Williams. SB 26 saw an almost record number of amendments debated and added for a House bill with Floor Leader Dean Plocher letting everyone have their say. Should we expect the same for SB 50? Or did the lower chamber add everything they could to SB 26, giving Luetkemeyer and Williams a break as they try to pass legislation that's been supported by interest groups on both sides of the issue?

— Gov. Mike Parson today told state employees that they have to be back in offices by May 17. Now, all we need him to do is bring that same energy to Busch Stadium.

— The field for U.S. Senate has grown, but not with any names you'll likely recognize. Spencer Toder is a Democrat and small business owner who says he's running for Senate because "our state deserves someone that works for them." On the Republican side, Dan McQueen, who was mayor of Corpus Christi, Texas for 37 days, is running as well.

— Last week, we reported medical marijuana was set to hit 100,000 patients in the state of Missouri this week. Today, proponents of MMJ and those who are pushing for recreational legalization have even more to celebrate. To date, 92 dispensaries are currently serving patients and caregivers in the state.

With Missouri planning to authorize a total of 192 dispensaries statewide, it will be easier to get marijuana with a medical card than any state outside of Oklahoma.

By comparison, our neighbors to the east, with double Missouri's population, have only 55 licensed, operating dispensaries.

Missouri regulators have also issued nearly 3,000 agent identification cards to medical cannabis industry employees, fueling economic investment in the state by an industry that's expected to generate nearly twice that many jobs, more than $800 million in direct spending and another $570 million in indirect spending.

— Ameren Missouri has worked with the Missouri Public Service Commission (PSC) and Office of Public Counsel to direct an additional $3.5 million to help eligible customers. $1.3 million will be used to create a new energy efficiency program for eligible low-income customers, $1 million will be distributed to help a network of local energy assistance agencies that distribute energy assistance funds to customers in need, and $1.2 million will fund additional energy assistance programs throughout 2021.

Missouri Legislature progresses PACE reforms

The Missouri Senate approved changes to the state's Property Assessment Clean Energy (PACE) Act program after hours of debate Tuesday.

The head of the division would be able to arrange hearings on boards in violation of PACE, leading to civil penalties or forfeiture.

Freshmen to Watch: Jim Kalberloh

Rep. Jim Kalberloh's interest in politics was sparked as a child.

"When I was younger, the state representative was from our town as well, and I knew him so I followed him in his career for 24 years," Kalberloh, a Republican, told The Missouri Times.

Democratic Rep. Raychel Proudie spends the majority of her day reading bills and amendments as well as meeting with other legislators.

At the beginning of the session, Proudie spends a lot of time asking for her bills to be heard or sent to a committee. Proudie pays extra attention to the amendments added to each bill to ensure that she knows what she is voting for.

Tracy McCreery announces Senate candidacy: 'Independent voice for commonsense solutions'

Although she's long been considered the next in line for the seat, Rep. Tracy McCreery made her state Senate candidacy official Monday. McCreery, a Democrat, is running for what is now Sen. Jill Schupp's SD 24 in St. Louis County.

"I feel like it's an important next step for me. In 2011, when I first ran for office, I campaigned and committed to being an independent voice for commonsense solutions," McCreery told The Missouri Times ahead of her announcement. "I've worked with members of both chambers and both parties. Now, I'm taking it to the next level."

McCreery has represented HD 88 in St. Louis County since 2012. She chairs the Joint Committee on Life Sciences and is the ranking member on a bevy of other committees, including Agriculture Policy, Emerging Issues, Legislative Review, and Utilities.

BUZZ

— There is more to the Chad Perkins story than has been told.

I've not written this yet because I was waiting to talk to a source, but now that is unlikely, and I thought I would share some things that may have been glossed over.

First of all, it appears from all indications that this is a bitter cop trying to exact revenge on someone he used to work with.

There ain't no heroes in this story, but there is a pretty clear villain: Frankford Police Chief Josh Baker.

The real story begins with him working with now state Rep. Chad Perkins as sheriff's deputies.

While Perkins went on to become mayor of Bowling Green and now a legislator, Baker went onto the part-time job of the police chief of Frankford — an absolutely beautiful town of around 300 folks in Pike County.

The city ain't got a website or anything fancy, but take my word for it, Mayor Kerns is a good guy with a bit of a problem on his hands.

It started with an incident back in May of 2015 where there was a call made and now-Rep. Perkins met a young lady. Now, if you read the Post-Dispatch story, you would have read she was a teenager. This was most likely just meant to smear him for being a Republican because, according to her, she was 20 years old at the time. Now there ain't much difference, but perception matters in something like this, as the PD knew when they used the word teenager instead of her actual age of 20.

Sometime in this, Rep. Perkins and the young lady shared phone numbers and apparently visited each other a few times after. She was never arrested or the subject of an investigation, but my mama would probably point out in her capacity as the secretary of the Church of God in Poplar Bluff that she might have been a little too young to plan on marrying.

However, as Rep. Perkins went on to find success in politics, he dealt with the same problems everyone does who finds success in the field — namely, others wanting you to help them or someone they support find similar success in politics via endorsements, fundraisers, etc.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Well, Rep. Perkins made Champ Clark proud and stuck with the wise decision to stay out of the local Pike County assessor's race that pitted Mr. Baker's wife against Deputy Pike County Clerk Tracy Foster — a race Mrs. Foster would go onto win handily over Mr. Baker's wife, earning him a sworn enemy in the clearly quite envious police chief Mr. Baker.

But Rep. Perkins wasn't the only enemy Police Chief Baker blamed for his wife's political setback. He also blamed the Pike County clerk who is the election authority. He made all kinds of claims that they had cheated in the counting of the ballots, and he personally saw election fraud all over the place as part of a wide-ranging conspiracy to swing the all-important Pike County assessors race.

Of course, nothing came of his claims, and they were written off as the bitter diatribes of a failed aspiring political spouse. However, because he used his office and the letterhead of the City of Frankford, his claims got the customary look over before being dismissed.

After he exhausted everyone with his stories of mass election fraud, he went back to those who had failed to come through with endorsements of his wife. Folks whose political careers and lives were finding success where his were failing, and he settled on his old colleague — one of the rising stars in northeast Missouri Republican politics — the former mayor of Bowling Green and the new state Rep. Chad Perkins.

He went back and decided his conscience could no longer bear the weight of a tawdry scandal from six years ago, and he had to let the world know that then-Deputy Perkins had slept with a much younger woman.

Of course, it had nothing to do with his wife's failed election — nothing at all.

Police Chief Baker told literally everyone he could find in the world that now Representative-elect Perkins had to be stopped before taking office. He was laughed out of every federal, state, and county law enforcement agency before finally sending a complaint to the Missouri House of Representatives which told him they would put their investigative prowess behind his conspiracy theories. I'm sure Chief Baker hopes the Missouri House decides to install his wife as Pike County assessor before it's all over.

Besides law enforcement, Chief Baker shopped his delusions of corruption theories to everyone he could find before finally landing at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Well, seeing as Rep. Perkins is not a socialist, they were all too eager to throw up a very vague and very dark story insinuating much more than saying Rep. Perkins was awful. Before long their comrades at MSNBC took the baton from them and got rolling too.

Never mind that in the scathing letter I've attached a neutral prosecuting attorney from another county said that Jacob Barker wasn't fit even be in law enforcement, the smear train had left the station.

Now, personally, I recommend always responding to the Post-Dispatch on a live stream, but you can take your public relations advice from someone with a much more distinguished reputation than me.

And speaking of tacky, if you want to write a story about a woman going through a divorce, that's your business. And to be honest, you should probably triple-check your address. But there is nothing classy about using a photo you took when she was telling you her deeply personal #MeToo story and then using it again to hit her over her divorce like the Post-Dispatch did.

Later, the sheriff of Pike County came out and said these claims were baseless, and I have a couple of new wrinkles to the story.

- The Highway Patrol is now looking into Chief Baker and the reports he has filed.
- There is a meeting tomorrow (Tuesday) where Mayor Kerns is meeting with his city council to decide how to deal with the problem of Chief Baker.
- The young lady, who Chief Baker was using, has hired one Al Watkins to seek a little retribution on the city of Frankford. Lord have mercy on the soul of the insurance lawyer that is tasked with handling that one.

In the end, there are no heroes in this. Hell, maybe Al will be a hero for getting this young lady a check for this. Either way, it should be a little tougher than this to smear someone. Hero or not.

Wieland: Senate Republicans discussing call for leadership change

Despite his intention to keep the conversation private, Sen. Paul Wieland said he was discussing his call for new Senate leadership with other lawmakers.

“It was never my intention for it to be a public discussion,” he said. “Now that it’s out there, I can tell you that every day since it’s been out there I’ve talked to one or more senators every day about the situation in our caucus, and it’s something we’re going to have to work through as a caucus and decide what we’re going to do.”

Kevin Strickland should be pardoned, bipartisan coalition of lawmakers tell Gov. Parson

A bipartisan group of lawmakers is calling on Gov. Mike Parson to pardon a man currently serving a life sentence for murder after new details about the case have come to light.

Lawmakers from both chambers signed on to a letter asking for further review and a pardon in the case of Kevin Strickland, who was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole for a 1978 triple homicide. The case largely hinged on testimony from a witness who named Strickland but later recanted her testimony. Two other men who pleaded guilty to their involvement in the killings also said Strickland was innocent.

Parson signs statewide PDMP into law

Gov. Mike Parson signed a bill into law establishing a statewide Prescription Drug Monitoring Program (PDMP) Monday, bringing Missouri into line with the rest of the country.

Sen. Holly Rehder’s SB 63 established the Joint Oversight Task Force of Prescription Drug Monitoring within the Office of Administration, creating a statewide PDMP. Proponents say the program allows health care professionals to better monitor and control the distribution of opioids and other prescriptions to their patients. Patient information remains protected under federal Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) regulations.

BUZZ

— With the executive branch shakeup this week as Health DirectorRandall Williams and COO Drew Erdmann resigned, many were left wondering how Department of Labor Director Anna Hui still had her post. Hui has been criticized for her handling of the mistaken COVID-19 unemployment overpayments. She also angered lawmakers — several who had had her back — after the department seemingly misled legislators on a deal they made where the department would stop collections on the federal overpayments if they didn't add an emergency clause in their bill allowing the department to "forgive" nonfraudulent overpayments of federal benefits. The department had said it would be too overwhelmed for the bill to go into effect immediately. Rep. J. Eggleston argued on behalf of the department, saying it had assured him they would not hassle taxpayers, especially with letters threatening to garnish wages, in the meantime.

"You sent them after March 4, which was the day I got on the House floor and asked my 162 fellow members to trust me because I was trusting you," Eggleston during a recent committee hearing. "We kind of went to bat for you through a negotiated agreement … and now there's this great misunderstanding. That puts what we gave you with the emergency clause in jeopardy."

— Folks who have talked to Mark McCloskey and people around him say that his consideration to run for U.S. Senate is real. It's been said before, but that would only hurt one person: Eric Greitens. The disgraced former governor is actually sitting in a pretty comfortable spot right now. It's looking more and more like the members of Missouri's congressional delegation are going to decide to stay put in their House seats. The one still to keep an eye on is Vicky Hartzler. She isn't doing cold political calculation — she's following her faith, which is telling her to run. With all but a few normal candidates out of the race, one of the main things that could hurt Greitens is having someone who can actually call themselves an outsider run. If McCloskey is serious, though, he hasn't teamed up with any consultants that could actually help him launch such a significant undertaking. Although he's been speaking at a few Lincoln Days events, the rest of his operation is looking pretty loose.
"There's obviously not a professional touch on that campaign," said one observer.

— If you're a lobbyist whose primary responsibility is killing bills in the legislature, you can probably start to kick your feet up and book your flights down to Mexico (the country, not the fine Missouri municipality). There are only two things the legislature absolutely has to pass before Sine Die — the FRA and the budget, and only one of those is constitutionally mandated. With only three weeks left in session, and Democrats ready to stand on Medicaid expansion funding, it's hard to think of what else could possibly get done this late in the game. Budget debates will bring the Senate to a halt over the coming days, and the real question is whether the Democrats will force a PQ on Medicaid expansion or just get a few soundbites in before sitting down sometime in the early morning hours.
On the other side of the building, the House doesn't seem interested in passing anything coming out of the upper chamber. Sen. Dave Schatz's gas tax is especially looking in jeopardy. It's got overwhelming public support and a friendly Transportation chair in Rep. Becky Ruth, but if it's exec'd out of that committee Monday evening, it then goes to Legislative Oversight. Rep. Phil Christofanelli, who chairs that committee, has always voted against gas tax increases.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Don't expect Speaker Rob Vescovo to lift a finger to help, either. Crumbling roadways and angry Missouri businesses are just the casualties of his war on the Senate.

—Listen to the latest episode of Third Read from Kaitlyn Schallhorn and Conner Kerrigan on Spotify, Apple Podcasts, or right in your browser. This week, they end up having to get creative with the margarita recipe while they discuss Rick Roeber's expulsion, Medicaid expansion, Dr. Randall Williams's resignation, and more.

— Tune in to This Week in Missouri Politics on Sunday, when Scott Faughn will be speaking with featured guest Ann Wagner. On the panel, we have Reps. LaKeysha Bosley and Mary Elizabeth Coleman along with Mark Dalton and David Barklage.

Bob Onder's campaigns — while attending Harris-Stowe State University and Washburn University School of Law. Even before that, his interest in policy was piqued.

PSC accelerates Missouri-American Water Company order

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) expedited an order allowing Missouri-American Water Company to operate in Stone County.

The commission approved Missouri-American's application for a certificate of convenience and necessity (CCN) to install and operate a water system in part of Stone County in February. Under the application, all of the area's unregulated water systems will be acquired with Missouri-American taking over for the area's 39 customers.

U.S. SENATE TIP SHEET

Welcome to the first tipsheet of what promises to be one of the most interesting off-year elections in recent memory. Over the course of this week, we will be bringing you our take on all of the races leading down to the U.S. House. Keep in mind, no one will know exactly what the House and Senate will look like or even who the candidates will be until redistricting happens, but we can give you a view from our sources around the state as to where the campaigns start.

With Democrats controlling the White House and both branches of Congress, look for it to be another banner year for Missouri Republicans. There is a glimmer of hope for Democrats in that President Biden has thus far been able to curtail the most left-wing elements of his party and is a likeable guy. That, combined with better organization and redistricting, could give Democrats some hope. However, those are the types of theories that have been floated in Missouri for going on a dozen years. Republicans just seem to dominate every election that there isn't a Todd Akin-type at the top of the ticket.

With that in mind, let's start it off with the U.S. Senate race. Everything else cascades down from there.

U.S. Senate Republican Primary - Announced Candidates

Former Gov. ERIC GREITENS

When former Gov. Eric Greitens Greitens was just a state problem, national Republicans, some of whom are on this list, ignored us in the Show-Me State. Well, now Missouri's problem has now become their problem.

With a Democrat in the White House, this should be a safe seat for the Republicans, and they shouldn't have to drop a dime on this race. But with a guy who ties up women in his basement and fleeced a veterans charity leading the ticket, those national Republicans will have to open up their wallet, thereby endangering their chances of retaking the majority. As one national Republican put it, this guy is basically Todd Akin 2.0.

Some of you may find comfort telling yourselves there's no way he could win a primary. Not so fast!

Greitens preys off angry people who want someone to blame for their problems. It may be true that 51 percent of the Republican electorate aren't a collection of whiners and losers who detest personal responsibility, but it could be true that 33 percent of them are. And if anyone else gets into this race, that might be enough.

Some of you might think Republicans believe in Christian values and therefore would never go for a guy who resigned in disgrace because of a sex scandal. Not so fast!

Yes, there are a lot of Republicans who believe in Christian values. Take David Humphries, for example. However, a lot of folks are willing to throw those values out the window whenever it fits their personal agenda.

Some of you will say the sleaze and scandal was too much for the Republicans to risk again. Not so fast!

Some people are just hooked on Greitens — reason and logic be damned. And don't judge, many of you reading this have fallen head-over-heels for a politician before.

A lot of Republicans saw the ridiculous way the media treated President Trump and some of the scandals Democrats and media basically made up (like the Russia hoax), and some once fair-minded Republicans are now highly skeptical of everything. This could give Greitens just enough room to get them to give him a second chance.

Bottom line: He is a great fundraiser, stays on message like maybe no one else in modern Missouri politics, and starts with a floor of probably 25 percent support from folks you could never convince he isn't a saint. Sorry Cocaine Mitch, he is your frontrunner.

X Factor: More scandals. He has repeatedly said this was one woman, one time. Well, if you believe that there is a first and only time you take your hairdresser back to your family's basement, dress her in your wife's pajamas, tie her up, and spit on her, then you're a special kind of stupid. Consider becoming a Cubs fan.

Attorney General ERIC SCHMITT

The only one in the field to be elected statewide twice, Attorney General Eric Schmitt came out of the gate quickly and announced just after U.S. Senator Roy Blunt told everyone he was retiring. He is an outstanding fundraiser and has some existing national connections. His media strategy is strong — you'll see him on the news once a week from the next year either putting criminals in jail or suing the Biden administration for something. He also has a good relationship with Senator Josh Hawley that he could use to either keep President Trump out of the race or even secure his support.

Some will question whether he has the killer instinct to deal with Eric Greitens, who has never been constrained by facts or honesty. Well, I think he does, but even if he doesn't, he has a Linn County native on his team in Jeff Roe who certainly does. Also, to be fair, there is a strong contrast between the top law enforcement officer in the state and a guy who gets arrested all the time.

Bottom line: This will be a deeply personal race, and Schmitt's story is probably better than anyone's. There could ultimately be two primaries: the non-pervert primary which will decide who takes on the pervert, and the August primary against the pervert. Schmitt has repeatedly said he is in this race no matter who all files next year. He may get the chance to prove that in the coming weeks.

X Factor: How many non-perverts jump and in and stay in.

Congressman JASON SMITH

He left the Missouri House for the U.S. House nearly 10 years ago and has seen his career rocket to the very top of House leadership — one of the fastest rises in modern Missouri politics. If the Republicans take the majority next fall, Congressman Jason Smith will be the Budget chairman and is the top pick of almost anyone in the know in Washington to one day be Speaker of the House. During his meteoric rise, he made a pretty influential friend in former President Trump.

Some of you might remember the presidential debate at Washington University in 2016. There was a tape leaked by NBC that had Trump saying that he would grab women "by the pussy." After any presidential debate, there is a spin room where each party fills the room with elected officials and big names to spin the results of the debate. After that tape was leaked, one of the only two elected officials in that room to defend Trump was Congressman Jason Smith.

He can wait as long as he wants to announce because his fundraising will be just as strong — and maybe stronger — if people think he will be Budget chair. He has more than $1.5 million in federal dollars on hand and has the relationships in Washington to raise a lot more. He has taken the 8th from red to scalding hot red and had the most Republican primary votes in the 2018 election. He is very serious about running but doesn't have to be in a rush.

Bottom line: Will he give up such a sparklingly bright congressional career to run?

Congresswoman ANN WAGNER

Congresswoman Ann Wagner is the most independent-minded of anyone on this list and probably has the most guts too. She just won a hugely expensive congressional race where nearly $30 million was spent. She has a huge name ID in the state's largest media market and is the best fundraiser on the list.

There is some clear remorse by many Republicans for how she was treated in 2018, and the best way to truly say "I'm sorry" in politics is with a $200,000 fundraiser. She has the rolodex to make it happen and would be the most effective on the attack versus Eric Greitens. She will have to explain her harsh words about President Trump in 2016, but he has endorsed her congressional races twice since then.

Bottom line: The more fragmented the primary, the better for her. She makes her own decisions and could choose to run at any time.

Businessman JOHN BRUNNER

John Brunner has run twice before, both losing efforts, but has maintained a base of supporters and some elected officials with his Young Americans for Liberty efforts. He seems to be quite cozy with far-left columnist Tony Messenger so that might make some folks scratch their heads, but no one doubts that he doesn't like Eric Greitens. He is the kind of guy who will text you how much he supports you one day and then be a willing accomplice with an ultra-lefty in a smear column the next.

Bottom line: It's a hell of a time to be in the hand sanitizer business, and he could fund another campaign and probably not miss the money.

X Factor: Would he run a campaign just to target Grietens, or would he bow out of a race if his entry would help Greitens?

Congressman BILLY LONG

U.S. Congressman Billy Long enjoys representing the folks in southwest Missouri more than anyone in Washington. He is close to former President Trump and is someone that the former president could endorse. He has the loyalties of the ruby red 7th district and has the money to do it — and could even do some self-funding. Plus there is no one with a bigger, more engaging personality than Long. He will do very well on the trail in outstate Missouri.

Bottom line: Does he love his current job enough to risk it?

X Factor: If he waded in, could he get that Trump endorsement?

Senate President Pro Tem DAVE SCHATZ

Sen. Dave Schatz is serious about running. He is term-limited in the statehouse and has the private resources if he chose to spend them funding a race. He has a conservative record to run on in the Capitol and has a list of accomplishments of delivering for real Missourians.

Everyone in Boonville and Columbia should have a Schatz sign in their yard for his work on the Rocheport Bridge alone.

Give him some time after session to take a look at the race, but if this were an arm-wrestling match, he would be the next U.S. senator.

Bottom line: Does he have the fire in his belly and room in his wallet to dive in?

X Factor: If the field is fractured enough he could find his path.

U.S. Senate Democratic Primary - Announced Candidates

Former State Senator SCOTT SIFTON

Former Sen. Scott Sifton is a very talented politician who has waited his turn and apparently feels that now is his time. He was one of the most effective state senators of the term-limit era, and won a swing distinct twice — even with Donald Trump on the ballot in 2016.

He did this while being a top fundraiser, not just among Democrats, but in the entire state. Also of note: He is one of the first Democrats to win a competitive primary as a pro-choice candidate versus a pro-life candidate in South County, and then go onto win the general.

He could also do the job. Missouri has enormous shoes to fill in replacing Roy Blunt, and Sifton is one of the few Missourans who could.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Bottom Line: Do national Democrats unite behind him or someone else?

X Factor: If he faces Greitens in the general, then the world unites behind him.

Veteran LUCAS KUNCE

Lucas Kunce is pretty much unknown in Missouri Democratic politics so he would have to spend some time building up his name. He will also have to answer for his 2006 pro-life position, something the Democratic Party is no longer OK with. He has already flipped his position to fit the new stance of the party that is moving ever left.

Bottom Line: Sifton is a huge hurdle for him to overcome, and he would most likely get trounced in the general based on name recognition alone.

U.S. Senate Democratic Primary - Rumoured Candidates

Former Gov. JAY NIXON

What a race it would be: Jay Nixon versus Eric Greitens. Nixon would easily have the best shot if he were to decide to get into the race, and national Democrats have already taken his temperature. He's seriously considering, and we've got our eye on him.

Kansas City Mayor QUINTON LUCAS

If he were to announce, Mayor Quinton Lucas could be a serious contender in this race. He's a promising upstart in the political space and has proven to be an effective leader at the helm of Kansas City. But his chance to announce has all but passed. He's got to get in soon or wait for the next race.

U.S. Senate Republican Primary - Candidates who aren't running

Lt. Gov Mike Kehoe has forgone a U.S. Senate race in order to run for governor.Watch his interview with Scott on "This Week in Missouri Politics" where he talks about the decision here.

Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft has also announced that he will not be running. Earlier in March, he and his wife, Katie, sat down with Scott for an interview to explain their decision to stay out of a race that Ashcroft was almost guaranteed to win. Read more here.

OTHER STORIES

Could this be the year Missouri fixes its domestic violence gun loophole?

It was promised to be an easy fix. The Missouri Legislature, in its haste to push through legislation expanding concealed carry in the state in 2016, accidentally stripped language from state statute preventing individuals convicted of a domestic violence misdemeanor or the respondent of a full order of protection from possessing a firearm.

Lawmakers at the time vowed to come back the next year and add those protections — already enshrined at the federal level — back into state law. But it never happened.

This year with a Republican handler, however, proponents are cautiously optimistic.

Renew Missouri urges Boone County to reject proposed wind ordinances

Renew Missouri is urging the Boone County government to reject proposed wind ordinances that it says would effectively prohibit turbines in the area.

The Columbia-based clean energy policy group is opposed to a proposal drafted by the county's Office of Research Management outlining regulations and procedures for companies operating wind farms within the county limit. James Owen, Renew Missouri's executive director, said the restrictions would essentially ban wind turbines in the county.

SB 51 is Missouri's answer to COVID liability protection for all

By: Dean Van Schoiack

No corner of this state has remained immune in battling COVID-19. The economic recession that resulted from the lockdowns further threw our communities into disarray. Already struggling communities have been pushed to the brink. But thanks to our timeless spirit, we are finally getting to the other side of this. The ability of our communities to adapt and survive is a testament to the tenacity and know-how that makes our country great.

Charter school opportunities could have kept my family in my hometown

By: Stephanie Bell

Across the state, parents are agonizing over their children's education. Parents are constantly asking themselves, "Are my children in a good school?" or "Are my kids getting the best education possible?" The COVID-19 pandemic has only exacerbated these concerns as the status quo was blasted apart and online learning became the norm for many. Tragically, thousands of families across the state are trapped in failing school districts, with little alternative. For far too many, the quality of education is tied up with something as arbitrary as zip code, whether a family can squeeze their way into an area with good public schools. (Many of us in southern Boone did just that: relocated here from elsewhere because of the high-quality school district.)

How lawmakers suggest handling the COVID-19 unemployment overpayments

After a three-hour hearing earlier this month, a House committee has recommended additional information from the state as well as legislative action to adequately address the overpayment of unemployment benefits issued to Missourians during the coronavirus pandemic.

Approximately $150 million of overpayments — of both federal and state funds — was sent to about 46,000 individuals in Missouri as the pandemic shuttered businesses and left people out of work. Gov. Mike Parson has said the overpayments need to be recouped.

A bevy of lawmakers on both sides of the aisle in each chamber has filed legislation to forgive, at least partially, the overpayments. Here's a look at what we know about the overpayments and what the Special Committee on Government Oversight recommended after concluding its public hearing.

BUZZ

— As the debate around charter schools continues, a main talking point of proponents has been charters have better adapted to the COVID-19 pandemic and are having in-person learning, while public schools are still doing remote classes. Children being at home when they could be at school has been a burden for both parents and students all over the state, and the disparity between public and charter schools may be enough to convince them that charters are a necessity. There have been at least a few senators fielding calls from constituents who want their public schools open because their neighbor's charter school kids have been in the classroom for months now.

Good news for those tired parents came out today when the CDC urged K-12 schools to be reopened and laid out a 38-page plan for school districts to do so. It's important to note here that the talking points around the Trump administration using executive influence to push bad science is gone — this is Joe Biden's CDC. It's easy to imagine Gov. Mike Parson moving swiftly on these recommendations. Getting kids back in school has been a priority of his since the beginning of the pandemic. But he (and Biden) still have to work with the teachers' unions who have not wanted their members going back into the classroom without a vaccine.

The charter school expansion bill is still stalled until Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin returns, but this new guidance from the CDC adds a whole other level to the debate. Even though she's been out of the Capitol sick, she's still been reaching out to stakeholders for suggestions of how to strengthen her legislation.

— Some House Committee changes:

- Rep. Mark Ellebracht (former ranking member) removed from the Ethics Committee
- Rep. Robert Sauls appointed to the Ethics Committee
- Rep. Richard Brown appointed ranking member of the Ethics Committee

— The House Ethics Committee has scheduled a closed hearing for Monday afternoon. It could be taking up one of the many complaints filed in the wake of the investigation involving Rep. Wiley Price.

Rep. Alex Riley, a Republican, wasn't planning on running for office. At least not just yet.

"Growing up, I always had this really strong interest in politics … but more importantly the policymaking side of things," Riley told The Missouri Times. "While I was very interested in politics, it was … because of the opportunity it provides to enact positive policy."

Freshmen to Watch: Maggie Nurrenbern

Despite being one month into her career as a legislator, Rep. Maggie Nurrenbern is no stranger to the statehouse or collaboration across the aisle.

A Democrat from Kansas City, Nurrenbern interned in the Missouri Senate during the 2006 legislative session, working for then-Sen. Chuck Gross, a Republican. She said the experience taught her as much about cooperating with the other party as it did about the Capitol and inspired her effort to establish a new bipartisan freshmen caucus to collaborate on common-ground issues in the lower chamber.

PSC approves Evergy West fee change

Missouri's Public Service Commission (PSC) approved a Fuel Adjustment Charge (FAC) change to allow Evergy Missouri West to offset under-recovered costs this week.

Evergy West submitted its true-up FAC filing, proposing changes to its current charges to compensate for under-recovering more than $765,000 from customers between September 2019 and August 2020. Evergy requested that the change take effect on March 1.

Missouri general revenue continues to rebound in new year, January report says

Missouri's net general revenue for January increased by more than 18 percent over the same time last year, according to State Budget Director Dan Haug's latest general revenue report.

Last month saw $1.02 billion in collections, while $860 million was reported for January 2020. Collections for the 2021 fiscal year-to-date were also up, having leaped up to $6.46 billion, an increase of nearly 20 compared to last year.

2021 Lunar New Year celebration kicks off at Missouri Capitol

To kick-off this year's Lunar New Year celebrations in Missouri, Lt. SCR1 has space for 15 individuals in addition to Senators and staff. As chairman I have no control over who is allowed access to the room, I strongly suggest interested parties line up prior to the doors opening. Due to the limited seating capacity, we ask that individuals who have completed their testimony and have no further business with the committee to be courteous of individuals that maybe waiting outside for their turn to testify.

• Audio for committee hearings will be streamed. Links may be found for each committee room at https://www.senate.mo.gov/hearingsschedule/hrings.htm
The Chair has no control over when the streaming begins or ends, I would strongly advise all members and attendees to assume that anything said in the committee room may be live streamed. This includes the time before and after the meeting is called to order. The Chair has no ability to control the quality of the streaming process, with some witnesses wearing masks it is possible that some testimony may be inaudible.

US SENATE

Republican Roy Blunt is retiring in 2022.

This race is shaping up to be one of the most compelling primaries since the '16 gubernatorial primary and before that, the '92 gubernatorial primary. It will be almost impossible to find someone able to fill the shoes of the Missouri legend, U.S. Senator Roy Blunt. His accomplishments are too numerous to even list here, and his successor could spend a career working diligently and never do more for Missouri than he has, but let's look at those vying to give it a shot.

Republican candidates

Former Gov. Eric Greitens

It's really hard to put much stock in polling this early, and I think everyone has learned not to never believe polling produced by a candidate, but you have to think this race started with former Gov. Eric Greitens around 40 percent. His name ID from his previous campaign and his arrests and quitting his job as governor have to be close to 100 percent, and he was the first candidate in the race. However, you knew that would be his high watermark. Where that floor is now is the question, and you have to think that every new candidate that gets in the race probably increases his odds even slightly.

His appeal will be to anyone angry about anything; he will be their guy. Now, I know what you're thinking — that Republican primaries have lots of family values voters. Well, we learned from early '18 that many of them are just simply lying about caring about values. It will be interesting to see how many of them are with Greitens this time, and watch everyone snicker if they ever mention the word values again.

When this race began, I figured his ceiling was around 33-35 percent and his floor was somewhere around 25 percent, and I'd still figure that he can't get more than 35 percent of Republican primary voters down in that basement, but as the campaign has gone on, I tend to think his floor may be a little lower, around 20 percent or so. His own polling shows he is down to 36 percent, so you can figure it currently stands quite a bit lower in reality.

His fundraising has been pretty lackluster in comparison to his '16 run, and he seems to have problems with getting successful people to have their name publicly attached to his on an FEC report. However, his spending seems to entail paying anyone who has ever met Donald Trump to tweet something nice about him which has led to a huge burn rate — leaving him, as of today, with little more than $50,000 to spend. His PAC got a huge boost last quarter to try and change the narrative, and another distraction might be in order this month.

Thus far, the campaign has been unimpressive with him traveling anywhere in the country not to be around Missourians. It reminds me of the unfocused vanity show that his gubernatorial campaign was before Austin Chambers arrived in the state. There was no doubt he became a terrific politician, but the early months were a lot like this. He did pull a flash of the old Greitens when, hearing that some allies of Senator Mitch McConnell were unlikely to help his campaign, he publicly came out against the Republican Senate leader. You know in some ways Washington almost deserves him. I suppose there are some Missourians who don't expect the candidate to actually show up in, you know, Missouri, but are there enough be duct-taped to his campaign?

If he hits his ceiling of 35 percent he wins; if it lands near a floor of 20 percent he loses. What if he ends up with 27 percent?

Missouri Attorney General Eric Schmitt
In the beginning, Attorney General Eric Schmitt's campaign's success was mostly seen in fundraising, but he has developed a new strategy of: wake up in the morning, sue Joe Biden, go to bed, and repeat.

And it's working.

The strategy was maligned by some at first. Then, he scored a huge win in court over St. Louis County and has seen his campaign begin to take off.

From his social media to his Lincoln Day speeches to his air time on national cable outlets to his fundraising, he has the clear momentum in this race early on.

Speaking of fundraising he led the field with $650K this quarter — twice what Greitens raised — and has over $1 million in the bank after his debts. That combined with his Save Missouri Values PAC (which reportedly has over $1.5 million on hand) gives him the early fundraising lead. If this race will come down to Greitens vs. a Republican without sexual assault baggage, Schmitt is making a strong early case to be that Republican.

Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler
Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler is doing everything she needs to do at this stage to set up her shot next summer. She is racking up endorsements of evangelical conservatives including Penny Young Nance, president and CEO of Concerned Women for America; Nebraska Senator Deb Fischer; Tony Perkins of the Family Research Council; Maggie's List; David Barton; and former Minnesota Congresswoman Michele Bachmann.

Those combined with what she hopes will be support in the agricultural community and the fact that she is the only woman in the race, means she will have a real shot next year.

If she can consolidate that base of evangelicals, women, and the ag community, then she could be the candidate to step forward if the two Erics unload their multi-million dollar war chests against each other.

She brought in around $450K this quarter, but the strength of her fundraising comes from the large bankroll she had on hand before the race began. With $1.6 million, she has the largest hard money war chest of the race, and she isn't spending hers as fast as others in the race. She has a PAC forming called Americans for Conservative Government, and legendary Missourian Peter Herschend is having an event next month for it.

Congressman Billy Long
Congressman Billy Long posted a healthy quarter raising over half a million dollars. I've always said that if every Missourian sat down and spent 10 minutes with all of the candidates, Billy Long would be the frontrunner.

He has a simple message of being fed up, and his congressional district is a tremendous base to launch a five-way Republican primary out of. I think the real test will be his fundraising next quarter to see where he is in the race.

Mark McCloskey
There is undeniable enthusiasm in this race for Mark McCloskey. He is a hit at Lincoln Days and folks actually sit up and listen to his speeches. The question will be: Can he take all of those folks who want a picture with him for their Facebook pages and turn them into activists supporting his campaign?

He raised a quarter-million dollars which is great for someone not in the office, but that burn rate is going to raise some eyebrows.

The campaign has had some turnover internally, and first-time efforts are usually a learning experience. But if McCloskey can get his campaign organized to focus the enthusiasm into actually helping him get votes, then he will be a real force in this race. Imagine where he would be in this race if he just put on a pink shirt and took that AR with him everywhere?

Democratic candidates

Former state Sen. Scott Sifton
Scott Sifton is a tremendous candidate, maybe the most effective Democratic state senator of the last decade, and honestly, the party leadership probably should have cleared this field for him. But there is a reason Missouri Democrats are in the shape they are in.

He will have the support of most in labor and the trial bar. He has been hitting the road, and I've even seen him start to make some news show spots.

Remember, Sifton was one of the first suburban candidates to win a primary as the pro-choice candidate against a pro-life Catholic Democrat. Then he flipped that state Senate seat in 2012, defeating an incumbent.

He is a callback to Gov. Nixon or Senator McCaskill, you remember, when Democrats were actually competitive in statewide races. However, it appears he is going to have to empty his coffers to win this primary.

Lucas Kunce
This dude can fundraise. Lucas Kunce is a former Democratic candidate for state representative from Jeff City — losing to local hero Mark Bruns no less — and a Marine veteran who has done an amazing job of raising money with $850K this quarter and more than $1.7 million overall.

While he is raising money, he is spending it, too, with just over $670K on hand. However, a lot of it is from his small-dollar donors who he can stack up and go back to as the race unfolds, but they are costly to identify and develop.

He is doing all he can to attach his campaign and its viability to that of Jason Kander's 2016 run and is attacking pretty much everyone in Washington, even calling himself an outsider.

I'm thinking that his fundraising pace might not continue as it is, but it will continue, and he is clearly in the race to stay. The question that he and really everyone on the Democratic side have to ask themselves is while your running, praying

He is an interesting Democratic candidate. While his fundraising numbers are not competitive, Spencer Toder says he is trying a “new and innovative” approach of trying to help people with his resources.

This quarter he raised $45K and used a lot of it to fill storage units with supplies to aid refugees from Afghanistan. He has seemed to focus his time on meeting with and recruiting activists to help his efforts. I guess we will see if the innovative approach is successful, and he is becoming interesting to watch.

STATE AUDITOR

Missouri State Treasurer Scott Fitzpatrick
The sitting state treasurer has a free shot at the off-cycle state auditor’s job, and he is taking it. He has had some early successes with the governor coming out and headlining a fundraiser for him and a well-done appearance on Fox News last week.

The race could be tricky as some will ask why he doesn't want to be state treasurer anymore, but that is likely more of an issue if he isn’t successful next August than before. He has Victory running the race, and they will bring with them their network of conservative activists.

The story of this race so far is fundraising. It stands to reason that Scott Fitzpatrick will have more institutional support as a sitting statewide officeholder and that means he can still win while being out-fundraised. However, he will have to at least keep pace, and with a $362K quarter combined with what he has saved from his time as House budget chair and a $250,000 loan to his campaign, he is doing that.

There probably is a number where his institutional advantages make him the favorite. The question is what is that number. I would think the answer is $1 million, but it may end up higher or at least make him spend that $250,000.

State Representative David Gregory
Rep. David Gregory was the first into the race, and above all, he has maintained a legitimate fundraising advantage throughout. He reiterated his commitment to the race on Oct. 2 when he matched Fitzpatrick's $250,000 loan to his campaign with a $250,000 of his own. Gregory has put together a solid campaign team including Missouri campaign veterans Rich Chrismer and Gregg Keller as well as Timmy Teepell, one of the folks behind Senator Josh Hawley's efforts.

I met Teepell, and I'll tell you the guy is talented, but the race may hinge on how well Keller can fashion the attacks next summer.

As Fitzpatrick has scored some pretty impressive Missouri political endorsements, Gregory has been developing an outsider message, and part of that is that he is developing a list of celebrities to back him such as Ozzie Smith, Bernie Federko, Matt Hughes, and Neil Smith along with endorsements from police and firefighter groups.

The endorsements probably don't go very far on either side, and like all down-ballot races, this contest will come down to money. There is no question that Gregory has to raise more money than Fitzpatrick to win, but the question is how much more. If he keeps a two-to-one spread, then this will be a razor-thin race.

Missouri FY 2022 budget: 4 differences between House, Senate plans

All eyes are on the budget as session nears its end, with the upper chamber set to consider more than $34 billion in appropriations this week.

The measures passed out of the Senate Appropriations Committee last week with smaller changes than in recent years. A notable exclusion from both the House and the Senate committee's versions — despite an attempt that split the upper chamber's committee members right down the middle — is Medicaid expansion, a point of contention across the Capitol.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

BUZZ

— Medicaid expansion funding will have its final fight in the Senate today as it begins budget debates. Despite a funding mechanism being in the governor's budget, and a well-articulated argument from Sen. Lincoln Hough, it's a safe bet there aren't three more Republican senators who will go along with Hough, Mike Cierpiot, and Justin Brown by voting for the funding mechanism, and the Democrats have said that they're not willing to filibuster the issue.

The Department of Health and Senior Services has been preparing for July 1 when an estimated 230,000 more Missourians will be eligible for Medicaid per the constitution.

However, it seems likely that when the budget is finalized next week, the department will begin to alter its preparations as the political conditions change. At that point, there's likely standing for the lawsuit to start, and Missouri turns its lonely eyes to Chuck Hatfield and Lowell Pearson. It's a big testament to the respect that Pearson has in Jefferson City that he can clean up scandals for HRCC and be on the legal team suing them in favor of Medicaid expansion.

Don't be surprised if this case is the first one Judge Cotton Walker gets. He's not an extremist and is palatable to both sides. It would be interesting to see him offer his opinion since it will have to go up the chain. However, if it's either him or Judge Jon Beetem, the circuit court will probably give them their best ruling.

Once the appellate and Supreme Court rule — and most feel that Medicaid expansion has a better than even shot — it will be interesting to see what the House does after that.

If we had to guess, there will be some representatives who will threaten the court plan and some who will still want to deny the vote and the court ruling. If after the Supreme Court rules, they still refuse to fund Medicaid expansion, there is no knowing what will happen after that.

The only thing certain about any of it is that Medicaid and redistricting are fountains of Whispering Gallery content well into the fall.

— As we head into the final two weeks of session, the House and Senate are trying to trade back and forth in order to advance the priority legislation from leadership in each chamber. One bill to keep an eye on is Rep. Phil Christofanelli's empowerment savings account (ESA) legislation. The bill is in Sen. Lincoln Hough's Governmental Accountability and Fiscal Oversight Committee. Hough could hold the bill until the end of session, but he's also reasonable. It's hard to guess there isn't a deal that can be made to move that bill especially since it's a priority of Senate Majority Floor Leader Caleb Rowden.

— One of the most personal inquiries this session was yesterday between Sens. Cindy O'Laughlin and Bill Eigel — one where the tension could be felt all the way up in the press gallery. It's difficult to see that relationship that hit a snag over how the handling of the education reform bill was packaged being repaired before the end of session.

As well, Sen. Denny Hoskins' gambling bill had to be laid over again yesterday after an amendment from his fellow Conservative Caucus member Sen. Mike Moon, which would have brought the bill to a referendum that needed the support of the people of Missouri, was added on to the substitute. Hoskins put out a statement today saying he is "surprised by those who act to protect out-of-state special interests over the securities of their own constituents, veterans, students and Missouri small businesses."

— The Missouri statehouse is receiving national attention again: A crew from ABC News's Nightline was in the Capitol today to cover the bill barring transgender children from participating in youth sports.

— Happy birthday to Rep. Ashley Bland Manlove!

Senate passes $2B supplemental budget package

"It's a loving district," Collins told The Missouri Times. "It's not a segregated district, it's very loving."

To fund or not to fund … the expansion question

By: Doug Richey

Since this time last year, I've engaged my constituents on the important question of Medicaid expansion. My membership on the House Budget Committee proved invaluable as I communicated critical details related to this question. We now face the question to fund or not to fund expansion. Once again, knowing the state's budget and, more importantly, the state's ongoing priorities has proven helpful.

Missouri Senate passes its budget package sans Medicaid expansion funding

It took more than nine hours and a bevy of impassioned speeches on health care, but the Missouri Senate ultimately passed its package of budget bills for FY 2022.

The $34 billion package passed out of the upper chamber shortly after midnight. The House and Senate will go to conference — with each chamber sending three Republicans and two Democrats — to hammer out the differences between both proposals.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

BUZZ

— SB 26, an omnibus public safety bill from Sen. Bill Eigel, was set to be heard in the House today but was instead moved to Tuesday. The bill would make some protests that block vehicular traffic illegal and caught the attention of Congresswoman Cori Bush who penned an op-ed in The Missouri Times with Rep. Rasheen Aldridge saying the bill should not pass.

It will look quite a bit different than it did upon entering the House, however, as a large number of representatives are planning on adding amendments to the legislation. This seems to be the reason it was delayed. Floor Leader Dean Plocher appears ready to open the bill up and let anyone who wants to add amendments go for it. As of right now, we can expect the debate to take several hours before a PQ is called. But, as we've learned, things in the lower chamber change day by day.

If it looks bizarre, it probably is. It appears folks are seeing the least amount of communication between Speaker Rob Vescovo and Floor Leader from Town & Country since Tim Jones and John Diehl. The lack of communication in leadership means the House isn't unified on a path forward because typically one isn't communicated. However, there was some communication on the ag bill when the gentleman from Jefferson was reminded that if he was in the chamber he was required to vote.

The JV quality of the Speaker was evidenced again this afternoon. When asked if he's worried about whether the House is holding up priorities today during a press conference, Senate Majority Floor Leader Caleb Rowden said, "I usually worry very little about what the House does."

— Public defenders in the state received good news from the budget that was passed out of the Senate last night. The upper chamber added 53 FTEs to the agency to allow them to hire more lawyers to clear their waitlist. This is also good news for the state which could be on the receiving end of a class-action lawsuit if the funds aren't allocated. A judge ruled the waitlists — which are mostly filled with lower-income defendants — are unconstitutional, but wanted to give the legislature time to increase the agency's budget before he ruled on the case. According to the court order, there were 2,500 people on waiting lists in November. Of those, 233 had been waiting for representation for more than a year.

Speaking of budget, lawmakers are looking to go to conference on Wednesday next week.

— Missouri is expected to pass 100,000 medical marijuana patients early next week. Last week, which included the infamous 4/20 holiday, the state saw $3.3 million in sales. Missouri has now passed $35 million in total sales and has more dispensaries licensed and approved to operate than Illinois, a recreational state that has twice Missouri's population.

— After Sen. Denny Hoskins' gaming bill has laid over twice this week, he said: "I don't see a path forward for any gaming legislation this year whether it's Sportsbook, VLTs, or eliminating illegal machines." But Senate President Pro Tem Dave Schatz told reporters Thursday that he thought there was enough support in the upper chamber to tackle "illegal gaming," noting additional money was added to the budget to eradicate that practice. Expanding gaming, however, is "more challenging," Schatz said.

"I doubt seriously the expansion of sports wagering and/or VLTs is going to occur," Schatz said.

It should be noted again that Schatz won't be blamed this year for killing VLTs. Sen. Mike Moon snatched that title from him.

— Listen to the latest episode of Third Read from Kaitlyn Schallhorn and Conner Kerrigan. Stephen Gutowski, founder of TheReload.com, joins to discuss the U.S. Supreme Court taking up a Second Amendment case. Listen on Spotify, Apple Podcasts, or right in your browser.

Voter rights groups rally against initiative petition changes

Dozens of voting rights advocates gathered at the statehouse this week as part of Protect the Ballot Initiative Rally and Advocacy Day.

The event, organized by advocacy group Show Me Integrity, included representatives from various organizations demonstrating against proposed changes to Missouri's initiative petition process. Bob Johnson, who served in the Capitol in both the House and Senate between the 1970s and early 2000s, said the process allowed people to use their voices in the lawmaking process.

Senate considers election reform legislation

It's down to the wire for a pair of election reform bills in the Missouri Capitol.

HB 334 and HB 738 would revise Missouri's election policies. The first bill, from Rep. John Simmons, requires photo IDs for those voting in-person absentee, while voters without IDs would fill out provisional ballots to be counted if certified. HB 738 would alter a myriad of election policies, including requiring the use of paper ballots, allowing no-excuse absentee voting, and prohibiting the use of mail-in ballots.

Senate progresses effort to denounce Dred Scott decision

The bipartisan push to formally denounce the Missouri Supreme Court's Dred Scott decision is nearing the finish line this session.

A bipartisan resolution from Reps. Raychel Proudie and Dottie Bailey would formally condemn the high court's 1852 decision denying Scott and his wife's suits for freedom. The resolution was presented before the Senate by Sen. Steven Roberts Thursday before being unanimously adopted.

Randall Williams resigns as health director; Robert Knodell named acting chief

Dr. Randall Williams resigned as Missouri's Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS) director Tuesday. Gov. Mike Parson appointed Robert Knodell, his deputy chief of staff, as the acting director.

"Dr. Williams has been a huge asset to Missouri, especially this past year in dealing with COVID-19," Parson said. "We greatly appreciate all the work he has done for the people of our state and wish him the best in his future endeavors."

Williams, an OBGYN, took over as the director of DHSS after he was appointed by former Gov. Eric Greitens in 2017. Before that, Williams worked in North Carolina, his home state, as the director for its Department of Health and Human Services. He didn't plan to leave the Tar Heel State for Missouri, a place he only briefly visited as a child, but after flying out for an interview, he was hooked.

BUZZ

— The big news of the day was the resignations of DrRandall Williams and Drew Erdmann. This was the result of a series of a few pretty long-standing feuds coming to a head pretty quickly. There was one specific problem that led to Williams leaving, of which more will come to light in the coming days. Apparently, he did not take the news very well.

Robert Knodell will be the Acting Director, with Dr.George Turabelidze authorizing standing orders. Knodell believes it will be weeks, not months, that he will be in the position. They already have their eyes on several candidates to replace Williams, and when they find one, Knodell will go back to his post in the Governor's Office. It could take less than a month for a permanent director to be in place. Look for Erdmann to have a quiet return to private life.

On the never-ending drama that is the UM System Board of Curators, several senators supportedTodd Graves only understanding that the appointment of Keith Holloway would not move forward. Holloway will be considered in a hearing for the Gubernatorial Appointments tomorrow, but, according to Sen. Caleb Rowden, "We are not planning to exec his nomination to the floor." If he were to come to the floor, you could probably count on losing two days of business and it would likely affect every piece of legislation on the calendar.

Truly, it has nothing to do with Holloway's qualifications. Many assume he will become a curator sometime in the interim. However, he is the ultimate example of being in the wrong place at the wrong time, and being tapped to potentially replace David Steelman, who many consider to be the greatest curator of all time.

— Sen. Holly Rehder's PDMP bill is being heard in the House this evening in the Veterans Committee. The official line is that the bill is going through that committee because it has a relatively small bill list, but it's likely more strategic than that. The Veterans Committee feeds into Rep. Phil Christofanelli's Rules committee which may be more likely to get the bill approved and on the floor.

Speaking of Rehder and her legislation, the senator from Sikestongot a shoutout on the Rush Limbaugh Show this week for her bill designating Jan. 12 as Rush Limbaugh Day in honor of the late radio host. The bill was heard in the Senate General Laws Committee last week.

— Columbia Mayor Brian Treece weighed in on the MONA debate currently happening in the state legislature.

"Columbia's non-discrimination policy has made @CoMoGov more attractive to business, industry, and faculty because they can recruit and retain the best in the field and their families," Treece said in a tweet today.

— After a jury convicted former Officer Derek Chauvin of murder and manslaughter in the death of George Floyd, Rep. Ashley Bland Manlove, chair of the Missouri Legislative Black Caucus, said:

"George Floyd's death last year at the hands of a cop with a history of abusive behavior sparked protests and demonstrations across the country and around the world about the liminal status of Black people in society. This conviction feels like a monumental and important step towards equality for communities of color who have experienced violence and discrimination at the hands of law enforcement for far too long."

— A few senators and representatives were in St. Louis today to attend the swearing in of St. Louis Mayor Tishaura Jones, who is now the first Black female mayor of the city. We'll be keeping an eye on Jones as she works to fill out her staff in the coming weeks.

"I'm going to walk into an office that my ancestors never imagined me working in, but I'm here," Jones said during the ceremony.

U.S. SENATE BUZZ

— U.S. Senate candidate Eric Schmitt pledged his support for congressional term limits today, promising to support an amendment that would limit the House to three terms and the Senate to two terms.

"Serving in the Congress should not be about political careerism; it should be about public service and working to expand and improve opportunities for all Americans. I support adding a term limit amendment to our U.S. Constitution, and believe it will attract those who see the importance of working for the people, and not enriching themselves by abusing the trust of the voters who elected them."

— Add Congressman Billy Long to the list of individuals who is hosting a fundraiser at former President Donald Trump's Florida Mar-a-Lago home. Long could tout himself as one of the earliest supporters of Trump, and even though he likes representing the 7th, the chance to run for U.S. Senate may only come once or twice in a lifetime. Look for a CD 07 tipsheet later in the week that'll examine who may run to replace Long if he jumps into the fray.

— As we await a potential endorsement from the former president, CNN reports that Donald Trump Jr. has taken a new role as a top adviser guiding his father's endorsements. Remember: Trump Jr. is dating Kimberly Guilfoyle, who is the new national chair for former Gov. Eric Greitens' campaign. Trump's Save America PAC put out a statement from pollster John McLaughlin today about his endorsements:

"President Trump is the strongest endorsement I have ever witnessed in politics. Polling consistently shows that when President Trump endorses, it almost always clears the field and puts his America First candidate on the path to victory. That's why everybody is coming to Mar-a-Lago for his support."

Reps strip nondiscrimination bill from Children and Families Committee

House members used a rare procedural move to strip a bill barring discrimination based on a person's sexual orientation or gender identity from the House Children and Families Committee this week.

HB 275 from Rep. Tom Hannegan was relieved from the committee chaired by GOP Rep. Mary Elizabeth Coleman after 55 representatives signed onto a discharge petition filed with the chief clerk. Sources said lawmakers moved to strip the bill out of the committee after Coleman refused to hear it.

Freshmen to Watch: Bill Hardwick

Rep. Bill Hardwick has an appreciation for just how delicate life is.

At 20 years old, Hardwick went through Officer Candidate School (OCS) and became the youngest lieutenant in the Missouri National Guard at the time. Three years later, in April 2008, Hardwick was serving in Iraq with a platoon tasked with sweeping for IEDs when his vehicle was struck multiple times. Staff Sgt. Jeremiah McNeal Hardwick was killed; Hardwick still has a pinched nerve in the back of his head and scars.

E15, homegrown opportunity Missouri can depend on

By: Steve Murphy

Did you know that the size of the domestic gasoline market in the U.S. is larger than the next 10 countries combined? That's why growing the share of renewable fuels in Missouri's gas tank represents the single biggest opportunity to grow our rural economy and drive dependable grain demand for family farmers.

BUZZ

— Sen. Brian Williams' police reform bill, which was tied to Sen.Tony Luetkemeyer's Kansas City Police residency bill, is being debated on the floor of the Senate right now, It's one of the most significant pieces of legislation that a Senate Democrat is carrying with a real chance of passing this year, and Wiliams has earned it after working with police unions and organizers for more than eight months before it was even heard in committee. It isn't often that a Democrat can get support from the FOP on police reform legislation.

But, Kansas City Democrats aren't happy about the residency aspect so it's a slow debate while SenBarbara Washington and Luetkemeyer negotiate a palatable version to perfect.

If passed, his ability to work with different groups and across the aisle bolsters the argument that Williams should run for U.S. Senate, something we've heard he hasn't ruled out just yet. There are a number of Democrats who may believe they can bring the fight to an unruly opponent like Eric Greitens, but Williams may be one who actually has the chops. He's popular in his district and has strong ties to labor, knows how to work with Republicans, and would have support from folks back in D.C. The issue he runs into now is a ticking clock — with three Democratic candidates already announced and fundraising, time is running out to stake a spot in the race.

— Two seemingly unrelated pieces of legislation in the House are strangely intertwined — RepMike Haffner's biodiesel bill and Rep. Chuck Basye's joint resolution on trans athletes. As a caucus, the Democrats have little negotiation power when it comes to killing bills, but Minority Floor Leader Crystal Quade was able to work with individuals on the Administrative Oversight Committee to get action on Basye's bill postponed in exchange for Democratic "No" votes on the House version of the biodiesel bill.

Luckily for the Soybean folks, it's likely the Democrats turn around and support the Senate version of the legislation when it makes it over to the House floor. Unluckily for the Democrats, you can bet they'll be having the same fight over anti-trans bills next year. Least lucky of all, though, are rural Republicans. Some in House leadership have decided to dismiss their rural members on biodiesel after they got some of them to vote for the St. Louis charter bill. The transgender bill affects nearly no one in rural Missouri yet they're still being sold out in the negotiations. You would think one day a vision might come to rural Republicans that maybe they should force some of the St. Louis people they vote into leadership to give a damn about rural Missouri, but today is not that day.

There could be other factors at play here, as well. There are several Republicans on either side of the issue who have their eye on Sen. Bob Onder's seat, which he is terming out of in 2022. Reps.John Wiemann, Justin Hill, and Nick Schroer have all been floated as potential candidates.

— Budget Chair Cody Smith is waiting for federal guidance before any decisions are made about what to do with the massive influx of cash into the state from the American Rescue Plan. The only problem is: Lawmakers aren't expecting federal guidance for another 15-30 days which would give the Budget Committee less than five weeks to pass the budget before the constitutionally mandated deadline of May 15.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— Rep. Marlon Anderson has been appointed ranking member of the Joint Committee on the Justice System.

— Gov. Mike Parson and Virgin Islands Gov. Albert Bryan, co-chairs of the National Governors Association, met with new U.S. Secretary of Education Miguel Cardona earlier Tuesday and released a joint statement stressing the importance of safely re-opening schools.

"Secretary Cardona and Governors agree that a state-federal partnership is critical to ensure support for school reopening, effective federal guidance, and implementation of the American Rescue Plan to equitably address the education disparities caused by COVID-19. Today's meeting is the beginning of many meetings between Governors and the U.S. Secretary of Education."

Cardona said:

"Today's meeting with Govs. Parson and Bryan is an example of the strong partnership the U.S. Department of Education under the Biden Administration will have with states and Governors as we continue safely reopening America's schools. I was encouraged to hear from them what Governors across the country are doing to help schools in their states not only reopen but meet the social, emotional, mental health, and academic needs of all their students, particularly those in underserved communities and disproportionately impacted by the pandemic. I look forward to continuing to work with NGA and Governors on our many areas of mutual interest in education."

OPINION

We cannot let trial lawyers shut down our state
By: John Wiemann
All of us in Missouri have had a challenging year due to the government-imposed COVID-19 shutdowns, social distancing, and other restrictions. A year later, there is seemingly a light at the end of this tunnel. Our businesses are starting to reopen, students are returning to schools, and people are starting to assemble together once again.

Time is right for more high-speed internet access in rural Missouri
By: Jason Bean
With a legislative district encompassing eight counties here in southeast Missouri, I'm privileged to have a front-row seat to all that makes our region great.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW TODAY

— Around 35,000 petitions were delivered to the Attorney General's Office today asking for the release of Kevin Strickland. If you're pro-police, you should probably be pro-getting Strickland out of jail. It's not very pro-police to back a system that doesn't work. It's pretty clear by now that an innocent man is still in jail, and how many nights would anyone else want to be there? It's common sense to me that those backing justice think the man should be free, and it would surprise me if the governor doesn't agree with that.

— Kalena Bruce raised more than $100,000 in 10 days. I've met Bruce and her husband, and I think she's going to be a top candidate. She might just be on "This Week in Missouri Politics" after veto session so folks can decide for themselves.

— Expect some push-back to begin on folks who went a little far confiscating gaming machines. There have been some intelligent ways anti-grey machine folks have started to attack.

— Rep. Tricia Derges has filed a motion to dismiss her federal charges, alleging a federal assistant U.S. attorney in the case previously directing a Medicaid Fraud Unit Investigator even though she did not participate in the Medicaid reimbursement program. Al Watkins, Derges' attorney, said the case was "nothing short of a circus."

OTHER STORIES

Cori Bush, demonstrators advocate for release of Kevin Strickland, Lamar Johnson

Congresswoman Cori Bush joined a coalition of advocacy groups and exonerees to push for the release of Kevin Strickland, Lamar Johnson, and others the group said were wrongly convicted.

“We’re talking about people where it’s been publicly made known that they are innocent by prosecutors and our attorney general and governor still say they will not allow them to be released from prison — that’s direct violence on our community, that is violence on their families,” Bush told The Missouri Times. “I can tweet things out and I can go on television, but it’s another thing to go out and show up for these families and communities so they see their legislators right in the midst of the protest.”

Rowden: CD 4 needs an experienced representative

While he’s still considering a bid for Missouri’s 4th congressional district, Senate Majority Floor Leader Caleb Rowden said it was important for the district to see someone ready to take the lead.

“You need somebody who can definitively say ‘I was in the room when the Heartbeat Bill — the best pro-life bill in the country — got negotiated and passed; I was in the room when the Second Amendment Preservation Act got negotiated and passed; I was in the room when any number of pro-agriculture bills that have helped our family farmers tremendously got passed,’” Rowden said. “Regardless of who gets in the race, nobody else is going to be able to say that other than me.”

Marijuana legalization, record expungement could be before Missouri voters

A campaign to legalize adult cannabis use in Missouri is emphasizing the use of new revenue to automatically expunge nonviolent cannabis-related criminal records.

Legal Missouri 2022, a statewide coalition, filed a ballot initiative with the state last week seeking to legalize recreational marijuana use while expunging criminal records for those with low-level marijuana offenses. Marijuana possession accounted for nearly half of all drug-related arrests between 2010-2018 with almost 21,000 arrests reported in 2018 alone, according to the coalition.

Kalena Bruce hauls in $100K+ in 10 days

Bruce’s campaign heralded the fundraising data, collected from Aug. 18-27, as an “impressive start.” Among other candidates for the 4th congressional and other offices, Bruce was a strong fixture at the recent Missouri State Fair.

OPINION

Government price caps?! That’s not Missouri Values

By: Tim Jones

The first year of Democrats controlling Congress and the White House has already proven to be an unmitigated disaster for American workers. The Biden administration’s “tax and spend” policies are hurting the economy, and unfortunately, its allies in the U.S. Senate are seeking to deploy new regulations that would further hit Americans in their pocketbooks.

OTHER STORIES

John Wiemann launches campaign for state Senate

House Speaker Pro Tem John Wiemann kicked off his campaign for state SenateTuesday, promising to be a "constitutional conservative" leader in the upper chamber if elected.

Wiemann has represented HD 103 in St. Charles County since 2015. He is running to replace Sen. Bob Onder who is term-limited and represents what is now SD 2 ahead of redistricting.

"We need more constitutional conservative leaders in the Missouri state Senate who understand the importance of a limited government that gives all Missourians the freedom and opportunities to achieve the American Dream," Wiemann said. "Politics attracts a lot of talkers, but government needs more effective doers and solution finders — leaders who can advance good conservative policies that empower people, not the government."

Mike Moon launches congressional bid for 7th district

State Sen. Mike Moon has officially launched his congressional bid for the 7th district in southwest Missouri.

Moon, who raises cattle in Lawrence County, said his faith propelled him to jump into the open congressional race. In an exclusive interview with The Missouri Times ahead of his official announcement, Moon said he was concerned the "radical left" was attempting to squash conservative principles.

"I think we're in the fight for our country to preserve our Christian values and to support and protect the Constitution," Moon said. "I'm tired of seeing Republicans go to Washington and vote like Democrats."

Court sides with Parson's decision to end federal pandemic unemployment benefits

Missouri can still end its federal pandemic-related unemployment benefits after a court denied a preliminary injunction Tuesday.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Gov. Mike Parson ended the federal pandemic-related unemployment benefits in June in what he said was an effort to encourage more Missourians to get back into the workforce after the COVID-19 pandemic shuttered businesses.

Cole County Judge Jon Beetem denied a request for a preliminary injunction Tuesday, saying the plaintiffs "failed to show a probability of success on the merits." The order noted the federal benefits are set to expire on Sept. 6.

Ernest Johnson eligible for death penalty, Missouri Supreme Court says

The Missouri Supreme Court Tuesday unanimously rejected Ernest Johnson's request that he's ineligible for the death penalty because he is intellectually disabled.

The state's high court found Johnson failed to prove his ineligibility for the death penalty and denied his motion to be executed by firing squad rather than lethal injection; Johnson said the drug used, pentobarbital, would react with a tumor in his brain and cause painful seizures. He also applied to appear before the court in person, but that petition was denied as well.

Missouri receives $429K federal grant for drinking water systems

Missouri's small towns and underserved communities will be able to improve their drinking water systems thanks to a grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The state has access to $492,000 to use to ensure compliance with the federal Safe Drinking Water Act. Missouri can use the funds to conduct household water quality testing to ensure safe drinking water by analyzing samples for contaminants, including unregulated chemicals.

All aboard: Big Boy train stops in Jefferson City

Hundreds gathered in the capital city Monday evening for a glimpse at Union Pacific's Big Boy, the largest steam locomotive in the world, which made an overnight stop this week.

The whistle announced the train's arrival near the Millbottom around 3:30 Monday afternoon, but crowds had already gathered to watch the behemoth roll into town. Hundreds of curious Missourians and their families made the trek to take pictures with the train despite a brief storm rolling into town Monday evening. The train departed for Kansas City the next morning.

Q&A: Competency-based learning and Missouri's teacher shortage

The Missouri Times chatted with Dr. Angie Besendorfer, chancellor of Western Governors University (WGU) Missouri, about alternative learning methods as the state continues to face a teacher shortage.

WGU has utilized competency-based learning, an education method based more on proficiency than time spent in a classroom for more than 20 years. After more than 30 years in the education field, Besendorfer said the method allows students to progress through their courses and graduate faster and could attract more applicants to the field.

Rural areas struggle to fund 24/7 victim services

By: Meghann Kosman

Recently, my executive director, Linda Mattson, and I were invited to speak to a local community organization that included attorneys, newspaper reporters, and hospital workers. They were all familiar with North Star Advocacy Center's services because we speak to the group almost every year. This year, we discussed the decrease in the federal Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) funding and the potential to receive a smaller grant. Advocates are used to being creative, but when we risk a potential funding cut for 24/7 life-saving services, it takes much more than creativity.

Missouri Supreme Court voids 'paycheck protection' bill

A 2018 law adding sweeping changes to how labor organizations — exempting, however, public safety unions — conduct business was struck down by the Missouri Supreme Court Tuesday.

The Supreme Court upheld a lower court's decision rendering the GOP-backed HB 1413 null for violating public employees' right to collective bargaining "through representatives of their own choosing." It also said the law violated the state constitution's equal protection clause by exempting public safety labor organizations.

The state's highest court concurred with the circuit court in finding the offending provisions could not be severed from the legislation as a whole.

Traffic stops decreased significantly in 2020, according to AG's Vehicle Stops Report

Last year saw a significant reduction in vehicle stops across the state, according to the Attorney General's Office's 2020 Vehicle Stops Report.

There were 24 percent fewer stops in 2020 compared to 2019 — decreasing the stop rate per person from 32 in 2019 to 23.8 last year and totaling about 1.16 million stops overall in 2020. The report noted the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on these rates; stay-at-home orders and business closures decreased the number of drivers on the road in the spring, and law enforcement sought to reduce face-to-face contact to mitigate the spread.

Capitol Complex Tax Credit could benefit donors to state building improvement fund

With a years-long renovation of the statehouse exterior finally completed, further improvements may be funded under a bill from Sen. Mike Bernskoetter awaiting the governor's signature.

Bernskoetter's SB 36 creates the Capitol Complex Tax Credit Act, allowing taxpayers who contribute to the Capitol Complex Fund a credit against state income taxes or those imposed on financial institutions. The credit would amount to half of the donation, capped at $10 million; any amount exceeding the donor's tax liability will be carried forward for up to four years. The fund would expire in 2027 unless renewed by the legislature.

— Today may well have been the worst day of the Eric Greitens campaign so far. Just a few hours ago, noted gun owner Mark McCloskey jumped into the U.S. Senate race to replace Roy Blunt, meaning Greitens may be about to lose a significant part of his base that uses grievance as a driving force in their lives.

It appears McCloskey may have teamed up with Chris Marston, a political consultant who has done lots of work with Virginia Republicans.

— Rep. Rasheen Aldridge seems to still be on the shortlist to join St. Louis Mayor Tishaura Jones' administration. The freshman legislator is less likely to leave his post in the middle of his term, however. Even with his Limb Loss Awareness language passing this session, Aldridge tells us that there are more legislative achievements he has his eye on for the upcoming session.

— There's been a significant development in the fight for transparency in the medical marijuana process in Missouri. A court decided earlier today that businesses that applied to either manufacture, cultivate, or distribute medical marijuana and were rejected can now gain access to the applications of other companies. The ability to take rejections to circuit court had been built into the system when medical marijuana was passed in the state.

On another note, the constitutional minimums for marijuana manufacturing and cultivation will be raised soon due to the new census numbers, since they are population-based. Dispensary minimums will remain stagnant since there only need to be at least 24 for each of Missouri's eight congressional districts, and those remained the same.

— Manufacturing company Elite Tool is investing more than $3 million to expand its facility in Moscow Mills. The expansion will include 20 new jobs.

"We're excited that Elite Tool is growing and investing in our state. This company supports many critical industries and provides its community with high-quality jobs which is exactly the kind of dedication we need to keep moving Missouri forward," Gov. Mike Parson said.

— According to paychex.com, Missouri is the top-ranked state for hourly earnings growth. If you're trying to make the argument that the stock market isn't a good indicator of where the real economy is at, hourly earnings growth is probably where you'd want to direct your attention. This is good news for Gov. Mike Parson and the everyday Missourian.

FRA renewal clears legislature; House pushes 'defund' Planned Parenthood bill

Legislation renewing the FRA tax for three years cleared a major legislative hurdle Wednesday afternoon after it was TAFP'd by the House. But a House bill, meant to "defund" Planned Parenthood died as the special session concluded.

The governor, who had given lawmakers a July 1 deadline to pass a renewal package during an extraordinary session, is expected to sign off on the FRA proposal before the end of the day.

The FRA renewal began in the Senate and includes a prohibition on abortifacients from being covered under Medicaid. Still, House Minority Floor Leader Crystal Quade told reporters following the vote that she considered the bill a "clean FRA" after attempts to add language further restricting Medicaid funding of abortion providers and affiliates to the FRA failed.

BUZZ

— Special session came to an end in what was a pretty predictable outcome. It can't help but remind you a little of the federal government just gridlocked in silliness. It reminded me of the federal debt limit that has to be increased, and they wait until the night before to do it. It's the type of stuff we've always avoided in Missouri, but it would appear the GOP is becoming too big to govern. These are not the types of things that Missourians do this way, but at the end of the day, they got it done. All's well that ends well.

The person who looked the best was House Budget ChairCody Smith. He passed a clean FRA twice this session and got what the Senate gave him across the finish line pretty easily. Hat tip to the House for how they handled it. They came up with a bill for the folks who were more focused on social issues instead of fiscal issues. It took all the heat and angst in committee which was good for the FRA bill.

The floor today was a little House-ish when they decided to add something with vaccine passports to it. It was clear that bill wasn't ready. The moral of the story is you can only do so many stunts at one time. After a lengthy debate that led to literally nothing, they kept the abortion parts and passed a separate bill that I have no doubt if they make it a priority next session, it will pass.

Other ones who looked good the last two weeks start with Sen.John Rizzo who probably would have liked some retribution for what he felt was unfair treatment toward the end of regular session. But Republicans couldn't stop fighting with each other. He looked like the clearer, calmer person in control last Friday, and Republicans looked less than organized.

And then there are Reps.Nick Schroer and Mary Elizabeth Coleman. There is an old maxim about when everyone says you're pulling a political stunt, it's probably a good one. This was a good stunt. It lines up with where their Senate primaries are going. If you look at Right to Life's endorsements the last cycle, it's pretty spot on. The one thing about Right to Life issues, it's where the majority of Missourians are (if you stay away from birth control). And it's where a majority of voters are in Jefferson and St. Charles counties.

It will be interesting to see how the winds blow and who gets to carry these bills in what could be a potential special but

Moving forward, the Senate put out a statement saying they aren't going to do HB 2 but will put together a committee that will work in tandem with the Governor's Office. If people recall, it wasn't really the budgetary rules that cut Planned Parenthood's funding off. It was much more of a group of conservative politicians regulating an organization out of existence in the state. It will probably be Gov. Mike Parson's health director's regulations that regulate Planned Parenthood out of the abortion business. He probably won't tweet a lot about it or make a lot of noise, but it will just gradually happen over the course of several months. It would surprise me if, when the legislature gavels in January, Planned Parenthood is still receiving any money from the government.

If Parson does end the funding of Planned Parenthood in Missouri, it will be interesting to see what issue the pro-life community comes up with next. It's the curse of success: When you eliminate abortions in the state and you're a pro-life group, what do you do next? Something tells me someone will have an idea.

The Hyde Amendment threat will still be out there because the federal government hasn't passed a budget in God knows how long and is unlikely to do so soon. They haven't done a budget in so long, in fact, it would be shocking if they were to pull it off.

— Some interesting observations: The House and the Senate budget committees sign off on tax credits each year. It's highly questionable if it would stand up to any legal security if there's no actual authority given to a committee if this was a serious exercise. The two committees didn't even pass the same authorization language. Seems ripe for a legal challenge one day should someone ever choose to go down that route.

— Missouri Supreme Court Justice George W. Draper III has submitted three nominees to Gov. Mike Parson to fill the vacancy on the Missouri Court of Appeals, Eastern District. They are: Ellen S. Levy, a circuit judge and probate division administrative judge in the 21st Judicial Circuit; Jeffrey T. McPherson, a partner at Armstrong Teasdale LLP in St. Louis; and John P. Torbitzky, a member of Reichardt Torbitzky LLC in St. Louis.

— Twenty-two health groups submitted an amicus brief with the Missouri Supreme Court in support of Medicaid expansion Wednesday. The groups are: National Health Law Program, American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network, American Diabetes Association, Cancer Support Community, Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, Epilepsy Foundation, Gateway Hemophilia Association, Gilda's Club Kansas City, Hemophilia Federation of America, March of Dimes, Midwest Hemophilia Association, NAMI Missouri, National Alliance on Mental Illness, National Coalition for Cancer Survivorship, National Hemophilia Foundation, National Multiple Sclerosis Society, National Organization for Rare Disorders, National Patient Advocate Foundation, Prostate Network, The AIDS Institute and the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society.

With Gov. Mike Parson’s signature, Missouri became the last state to enact a sales tax on online purchases, commonly known as a Wayfair tax.

SBs 153 and 97 from Sen. Andrew Koenig allows the state to impose a sales tax on online purchases made through vendors with a physical presence in the state, a practice Parson said had already been adopted by 49 states and Washington, D.C. Parson said the change would benefit more than 570,000 small businesses across the state.

Bipartisan economic distress, police mental health programs signed into law

A pair of funds meant to aid distressed communities was signed into law by Gov. Mike Parson this week, offering new programs for police officers and economic distress zones.

Sen. Karla May’s bipartisan SB 57 would establish a Critical Incident Stress Management Program for police officers within the Department of Public Safety (DPS). Under the program, officers would receive assistance coping with stress and psychological trauma resulting from an emotionally stressful event on the job. All officers would be required to meet with a program service provider every three to five years for a mental health check-in.

Elijah Haahr named executive director of new Noble Health Foundation

Former House Speaker Elijah Haahr has been named the executive director of the new Noble Health Foundation with the goal of breaking down barriers to rural health care.

An arm of Noble Health Corp, the foundation will support education, development, training, and implementing health care options. Haahr said he will be spending time raising money and meeting with school superintendents and college presidents to better understand the health care needs — from counseling to cardiovascular screenings to physicals — in their communities.

“I grew up on a farm and spent eight years in the legislature trying to improve and protect rural Missouri,” Haahr said. “Having the chance to lead a foundation that is solely focused on improving rural health care is an incredible opportunity."

— Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin is encouraging folks to message her if they have publicly funded offices in their area that are still closed due to COVID-19 precautions.

"In my mind, if you have a publicly funded office then you should be open and provide services when the public needs them," O'Laughlin said in a Facebook post that specifically called out the Macon County License Bureau for being closed.

— Emily's List, a liberal group that helps get pro-abortion women elected to public office, has once again picked Congresswoman Ann Wagner's seat as one it has targeted to flip in 2022. The group had backed Sen. Jill Schupp in her unsuccessful challenge against Wagner in 2020.

— Patricia McCloskey, wife of U.S. Senate candidate Mark McCloskey, had her charges amended by Special Prosecutor Richard Callahan today. Under the new filings, jurors would have the option of convicting Patricia of misdemeanor harassment instead of the original weapons charge.

"While there is still work to do and more witnesses to interview in terms of trial preparation, this substitute information represents my best judgement (sic) as to the options a jury or a judge should be given in light of the totality of the facts and circumstances that can be proven," Callahan said in a statement. "A similar decision will be made regarding Mark McCloskey in the coming days."

— Speaking of the U.S. Senate race, Congressman Jason Smith was at Trump Tower in New York yesterday meeting with former President Donald Trump. With McCloskey entering the race, getting in may seem like a good calculation for Smith even if he is more excited about the prospect of becoming chair of the House Budget Committee. But remember, Smith has Bill Stepien, Trump's former campaign manager, on his team now.

"Congressman Smith has hired a top-flight team and is a conservative. He enjoys a good relationship with President Trump; if he decides to get in the race he would be formidable," a prominent Republican strategist said.

"As long as he files with Trumps endorsement he still wins in Missouri with $50 and a website," said another.

— Rolla is getting its first medical marijuana dispensary this week; Trinity Missouri is set to open Friday, May 28.

— First lady Jill Biden is scheduled to visit the Metropolitan Community College in Kansas City on Thursday. The community college will host a vaccine clinic Thursday afternoon, and Biden's visit is meant to highlight the partnership between federal retail pharmacy partners and community colleges in getting the COVID-19 vaccine out.

Additionally, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Marcia Fudge will be in Kansas City to highlight the American Jobs plan with Congressman Emanuel Cleaver and Quinton Lucas.

A month after new electric transit buses were introduced in Kansas City, U.S. Congressman Emanuel Cleaver is seeking federal funds to bolster the city's electric fleet.

Cleaver requested $6 million to go toward six electric buses, costing around $1 million each. The proposed earmark came at the behest of the Kansas City Area Transportation Authority (KCATA) and would be part of an increased focus on transportation and infrastructure from Congress and the new presidential administration.

Missouri's water, sewer infrastructure rate adjustment process could be changing

One of the last bills to progress through the General Assembly this session will alter the way utilities change their water and sewer rates in Missouri if signed into law.

SB 44 from Sen. Bill White allows water and sewer companies to request rate changes more often. Under current law, utilities go to the Public Service Commission (PSC) for a rate adjustment on a three-year cycle. The legislation would allow companies serving more than 8,000 customers to request a slight increase every six months through a water and sewer infrastructure rate adjustment (WSIRA) to keep up with the conditions of equipment and speed up cost recovery.

House cancels session next week amid rising coronavirus cases

Just one week into this year's legislative session, Missouri House leadership announced it will be pausing the lawmaking process.

Speaker Rob Vescovo, Speaker Pro Tem John Wiemann, and Majority Floor Leader Dean Plocher released a statement Thursday afternoon announcing the cancellation.

"Due to the rising number of COVID-19 cases in the building, we are exercising an abundance of caution to protect members, staff, and visitors by canceling session next week," the statement said. "Our goal is to return to work the following week."

BUZZ

—House Speaker Rob Vescovo had tried to pressure Governor Mike Parson into installing a COVID testing site in the basement of the Capitol, but the governor was unable to fulfill the request. With a few members testing positive, and Monday already being a holiday, House leadership decided to cancel the whole week.

— Leadership in the Senate is less likely to stop business every time there is a rise in cases. The constant starts and stops would make it hard to finish a session. They didn't have many senators out, partially due to the differences in the chambers. With just one-fifth as many members, there's more distancing available in the Senate chambers than the House. Luckily, Missouri has entered a new phase of the vaccine rollout, with a priority on those 65+ and with pre-existing conditions, which would cover many members of both chambers.

— Be sure to tune in to This Week in Missouri Politics on Sunday. Sen. Karla May was the main guest and gave a very direct and straightforward defense of Rep. Wiley Price.

Rep. Jim Murphy from HD 94 was on our Opinion Maker Panel along with Rep.Trish Gunby, Kurt Witzel, and Jamey Murphy. Rep. Murphy said decisively that Joe Biden is the president-elect, and he felt safe in the Capitol building.

— Speaking of the safety of the building, none of the typical groups that you would see protesting on the grounds have applied for a permit to do so for the week, a step they normally take. Important to remember that there was an organized protest at the capitol last week on the same day of the D.C. riots, but the one in Jeff City stayed calm.

— Just Oust Seditious Hacks, or JOSH PAC, is the latest effort to get rid of Senator Josh Hawley.

Gov. Mike Parson authorized the deployment of an undisclosed number of National Guard members to D.C. for up to 30 days Thursday. Members will assist with possible security issues and medical evacuation if needed, according to a spokesperson.

The move comes a week after protestors stormed the U.S. Capitol in opposition of the presidential vote count. Five people died as a result of the day's events, including two U.S. Capitol police officers.

Thank you to the best boss I have had

By: Dan Kleinsorge

Having just sat down to my last day in state service, I finally have a moment to reflect on the last six years. When Dave Schatz, then a state representative with a reputation for a temper, hired me in December 2014, I had no idea what to expect. I was just coming off a tough year fighting for "Right to Farm," and I knew Senator-elect Schatz was pro-ag and conservative so I thought we'd be a good fit. What I did not know is that Dave would be the best boss I have had.

Budget committee passes FRA renewal along with bill targeting Planned Parenthood

The House Budget Committee nearly unanimously passed the Senate's FRA renewal package Tuesday afternoon.

SB 1, which renews the Medicaid provider tax for three years, passed 27-2 out of committee with Republican Reps. Sara Walsh and Richard West as the lone no votes. The full House is set to convene Wednesday morning to take up the package.

The FRA renewal bill also included a provision banning Medicaid coverage of abortifacients. Rep. Cody Smith, who chairs the Budget Committee and presented the Senate bill, said it was "misleading" to call this bill a "clean FRA" because of the additional provision.

Missouri Right to Life testified against the package because it did not include more stringent anti-abortion language. After the Senate approved the legislation in an early morning vote Saturday, the organization said it was "disappointed" in the 12 GOP senators who voted against an amendment that would prohibit outright Medicaid dollars from going to abortion providers and their affiliates.

"With the Hyde Amendment on the chopping block in Congress and without the Senate putting substantive prolife language in the FRA to ensure no tax dollars go to abortion providers and their affiliates, I could not in good conscience be a yes at this point in the event HB 2 (which I co-sponsored and codifies in statute pro-life language to prevent public tax dollars from funding abortion) doesn't pass the Senate," Walsh told The Missouri Times. "I have always been a staunch supporter of defunding Planned Parenthood."

— In what was the mirror opposite of the Senate proceedings, the House Budget Committee was smooth, professional, and relatively uneventful. They led with the abortion-specific bill first, and everyone seemed to let their steam out on that one.

By the time they got to SB 1, it was basically a list of lobbyists reminding the committee how important the FRA is.

One nugget from the testimony was Susan Klein saying Missouri Right to Life would at least like to see a bill accompanying SB 1 providing some further restrictions on abortion funding.

We are starting to hear from local Right to Life activists saying they believe their senators are pro-life and starting to defend them. This is going to be an interesting few months for the pro-life movement in Missouri.

— Big news out of the Supreme Court on the Sunshine Law. Elad Gross finally got a win, and probably a big one. It was a unanimous decision authored by Judge Patricia Breckenridge vacating the original judgment and remanding the case. The court said the Sunshine Law does not allow a governmental body, like the Governor's Office, to charge for attorney review time. It allows a governmental body to collect "research time" and "staff time" fees, but not "attorney review time."

It also said Gross successfully pleaded his case that the Governor's Office committed knowing violations of the Sunshine Law pertaining to his two requests by charging $40/hour for research and processing, failing to provide earliest date records would be available, failing to give a detailed explanation of the cause for delay, and failing to give an explanation for the redactions.

The Missouri Supreme Court also set an execution date of Oct. 5 for Ernest Lee Johnson who killed three people in a Columbia convenience store robbery in 1994. He had sought an alternative to the lethal injection of pentobarbital, arguing the drug coupled with his brain tumor would cause painful seizures. The U.S. Supreme Court denied review in the case in May.

— House Democrats are undergoing the first of multiple planned virtual training sessions with the National Democratic Training Committee this evening. The training will focus on messaging and connecting with supporters and constituents.

"If we want to see more Democratic victories in Missouri, we need to provide local candidates, campaign staff, and community leaders the tools and training they need to be successful. We understand the important work that needs to be done here in Missouri which is why we're thrilled to be joining the Missouri House Democrats to put on these training sessions and welcome new people into the fold as we look to build the bench for 2022 and beyond," said Missouri native Kelly Dietrich, the National Democratic Training Committee founder and CEO.

— Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler held a fundraiser in Kansas City last night that her campaign says is bringing in six figures. The campaign says it's closing the quarter strong.

— Missouri's cannabis industry has hit another milestone: more than 200 operators have been licensed to do business in the state. The facilities include cultivators, manufacturers, and testing labs.

— Allison Murdock is beginning her term as managing partner of Stinson LLP on July 1 along with David Crosby who will step into the role of deputy managing partner. Murdock is the previous deputy managing partner and was unanimously picked by Stinson's board for the new role.

Missouri expands protection orders under new law

Missouri's protection order regulations were altered under a bill allowing orders to be extended for life and adding protection for pets signed into law Tuesday.

Parson signs off on PACE, tort reform, banking bills

Gov. Mike Parson signed bills altering Missouri's Property Assessment Clean Energy (PACE) program, 065 arbitration process, and licensure for financial institutions Tuesday morning.

HB 697 from Rep. Bruce DeGroot requires municipalities taking action with a clean energy development board under PACE to notify the Division of Finance of the change, and the division would be required to conduct examinations of a board every two years. The Clean Energy Development Board would be required to work with property owners by disclosing project information, keeping them up-to-date on developments, and informing them in writing that delinquent assessments would be a lien on their property. It was TAFP'd the final Wednesday of regular session.

After more than 21 years of service, Judge Thomas H. Newton is retiring from the Missouri Court of Appeals, Western District next week.

“Everyone who has been privileged to work with Judge Newton will tell you the same thing. Judge Newton’s imprint on our court has been of immeasurable value: his ever-present smile; his congenial, gracious and respectful manner; his commitment to fairness and neutral decision making; the seriousness with which he approached his work, aware that even routine issues were of the utmost importance; and his view of those who work at the court of appeals as part of his court family,” Western District Chief Judge Cynthia L. Hegeman: ‘We will get the FRA done’

As the special session reaches its midpoint, FRA renewal bill sponsor Sen. Dan Hegeman said the legislature was determined to get it through the process to prevent massive budgetary withholds.

“I am convinced we’ll get the FRA done,” Hegeman said. “It may be a winding path, but we’ll get one done. … The key on this is that some folks are worried that it may violate the federal standards or this social security code, and then we won’t gain anything.”

Amid FRA renewal drama, female senators broker deal on birth control language

Negotiations on abortion language tied to FRA reauthorization largely fell apart throughout the day, but one coalition of senators was successful in brokering a deal: a bipartisan group of women.

Nearly every female senator on both sides of the aisle met Friday to discuss a provision in the FRA reauthorization package that would exclude certain medications from Medicaid coverage “when used to induce an abortion.” Concerns were levied that women who use Medicaid could be prevented from accessing birth control or emergency contraceptives because of the way the drugs and devices were listed out in the bill.

— The Congressman Jason Smith for Senate rumors gained some traction recently as a mailer featuring him prominently next to former President Donald Trump went out to Missourians … outside his congressional district. The red, white, and blue mailer says Smith is "leading President Trump's America First agenda" and highlights his voting record.

— A rally for former Gov. Eric Greitens rally over the weekend featuring former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani and Jessie Jane Duff, who chaired a pro-Trump veterans group last year, sat a few more than 100 people. The event was held in Robertsville — not Richardson as Duff tweeted.

During the rally, Giuliani took a swipe at Navy veteran and former Gov. Matt Blunt, the son of Senator Roy Blunt whose seat Greitens is seeking, by saying the scandal-ridden Greitens who resigned office, was twice the governor than the last four combined.

Ernest Lee Johnson is constitutionally ineligible for execution

By: Matthew Rosene, Sneha Chaturvedi, Anna Fenstermacher

The American justice system guarantees all, whether victim or accused, equal and just treatment under the law. The Eighth Amendment strengthens this by prohibiting cruel and unusual punishment. In Atkins v. Virginia, the U.S. Supreme Court expanded this by deeming execution of people with intellectual and/or developmental disabilities (IDD) unconstitutional. However, a lack of concrete standards for IDD classification within the justice system leads to individuals with IDD being placed on death row.

US SENATE GOP Primary

Eric Greitens

He is the most well-known name in the race, and that is a good thing for name ID and placing well in early polling, and then there are the seedy reasons that everyone knows that Eric Greitens name.

His first fundraising quarter was a disaster, bringing in around $9,000 which would be a solid number for the first 24 hours of a state Senate campaign.

This quarter, his fundraising picked up just under $350,000, but there are a couple of astounding numbers out of his quarterly filing. First of all, of the money he raised, he blew well over half of it renting lists to email folks.

The second of the $350,000 he took in, only 11 percent of those transactions were from Missouri donors. It is clearly the most brazen example of out-of-state interests buying Missouri's junior U.S. Senate seat in the history of our state. It is well understood why Missourians would not want their name recorded as donating to the disgraced former governor, but I don't think anyone could have imagined how few there would be willing to associate their names with Greitens.

His campaign thus far has been funded exclusively by out-of-state special interests delivering a message of him whining about his reasons for quitting the governorship after less than a year and a half. The long-term issue could be religious conservatives. It's hard to imagine Missouri's religious conservative movement forfeiting any ability to critique anyone's lifestyle for an entire generation by lowering their standards low enough to justify backing Eric Greitens for high office.

Eric Schmitt

If you want to see the report that would be the complete mirror opposite of Missouri's most famous sex pervert, it would be the fundraising report of Missouri's top law enforcement official.

Of Eric Schmitt's 610 contributions totaling $1.3 million, 87 percent of his contributions were from actual Missourians. Some were from long-time backers of the St. Louis Republican, such as Stephen Bauer, Tim Drury, Jean Paul Bradshaw, John Eilermann, Susan Eckelkamp, Jared Novelly, and Steven Plaster. There were a few new names that maxed out to his Senate campaign, such as William and Robert Orschel, Steven Tilley, and Steven Wynn. Rex Sinquefield and Mike Ketchmark were back supporting him in what might foreshadow an even bigger expenditure later in the campaign.

The biggest surprise on the list is probably Mark Boback who was instrumental in the Greitens for Governor campaign six years ago. However, the biggest boost for Schmitt is the litany of Herzog Company executives, including Brad Lager, who have a history in large donations and were also big donors to Greitens in 2016.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Also of note: Linn County native and national Republican top consultant Jeff Roe made a personal donation to Schmitt. While Schmitt is likely the most naturally gifted politician of the group without serious skeltons to come out, he isn't known for the bare knuckle attacks that are likely to come. An example is that the Greitens campaign attacked Schmitt for beginning the process of complying with recently passed SAPA law. However, the man known as the toughest Kansas Citian since Pendegast made his reputation on being the toughest brawler in the bar.

It would have been ideal for Schmitt to have kept Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler — and looking forward, any other of the members of Congress — out of the race, but with those things out of his control he has done everything he possibly could have to cement himself as a front runner in the second quarter.

Vicky Hartzler

If you want to see a mix of Missouri and foreign donors with a mix of several PACs thrown in, Congresswoman Vicky Hartzler compiled a $1 million quarter with some of it clearly from folks supporting her congressional race and several lining up behind her Senate run. It's probable that next quarter will tell the tale on her fundraising prowess in the Senate race.

There were some folks who were on both hers and Schmitt's reports, such as Tim Drury, Stephen Plaster, and William and Robert Orscheln. There were a few that were unique, such as Jennifer Bukowsky, Harvey Tetttlebaum, and Clyde Lear. Forres Lucas stands out as someone who has the ability to make a bigger impact on the race later.

However, what stuck out the most was the number of close friends of Senator Roy Blunt on her report such as Gregg Hartley, Roy Pfautch, Rob Monses and Charlie Kruse. Her biggest get in all of the Blunt crew is her landing the support of Mavis Busiek, the undisputed queen of southwest Missouri Republican politics.

Congresswoman Hartzler has several advantages in the race — from being the only woman, to the only candidate from rural Missouri to the only candidate with ag credentials. She will have some things to show over the course of the next few months that she can stake out ground to both statewide and in the fundraising circles, but with the current field she has a clear shot to win.

Mark McCloskey

If you want to see a report as unique as the candidate, then Mark McCloskey's is your pick. He raised over half a million dollars in a very short time frame — mostly from small donors — and a great deal of it from outside of Missouri. He has been attending events all around the state, and it's almost impressive to see the number of Republicans who want a selfie with him.

Now the question is: Will all of those who post a selfie with him vote for him?

He is a much deeper thinker than the thing everyone knows about him and has a pretty long track record of supporting Republicans.

The bigger question is: How will the first time candidate hold up to the intense scrutiny that his obvious popularity will bring him. I just started getting press releases from Palm Strategies so he is establishing some traditional campaign infrastructure. My stein of knowledge says don't underestimate him.

US SENATE Democratic Primary

The Democratic primary will be a pretty fluid affair with former Sen. Scott Sifton having the infrastructure and the relationships from being perhaps the most effective Democratic state senator of the past decade. It appears that Lucas Kunce has the ability to raise money with Tim Shepard and Spencer Toder trying to catch a grassroots fire.

The big question is: Does former Gov. Jay Nixon, the man who more Missourians have voted for than any Missourian in state history see Greitens as the likely nominee and jump in?

STATE SENATE

First, all of these projections are subject to change radically after redistricting. However, we are going to layout our views based on what the districts are now.

With practically the entire Democratic Caucus in their mid-term it's not likely that the Democrats lose any seats, but at the same time, it's hard to see where they pick up any. The sheer partisan breakdown starts off with 10 returning Republicans and 7 returning Democrats.

However, there are another 10 seats the Democrats have literally no chance to even be competitive in — taking the totals to 20 Republicans and 9 Democrats. Then there is SD 22, where it might take a miracle for the Democrats to compete, taking it to a 21 to 9 Republican majority. Then you have three more likely Republican seats with incumbents up for re-election in SD 8, SD 30, and SD 34, and a likely Democratic retention in SD 24. And without redistricting changing the dynamic, you have a projected 24-10 Republican supermajority returning to the Capitol.

That leaves the real Senate drama, the internal fight within the Republican caucus. With Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin seemingly out of the Conservative Caucus, you have 7 out of the 24 that could unite behind one of their own for leadership. If Sen. Bill Eigel is the one they put up, he could pull away from a couple of others. Of those 7, only Sen. Bob Onder is term-limited. On the other side, the only three races where the Republicans could lose a seat, all three are not in their caucus, but all three are also highly unlikely to lose their seats. However, Sen. Caleb Rowden could be in Congress come time to vote which would not only take away one of their 17 but their candidate for Pro Tem.

In order for the Conservative Caucus to break through to the 13 members, they would need in order to elect a leadership slate, they would need one of their members to replace Sen. Bob Onder to bring them back to 7 and then sweep the primaries in SD 10, SD 12, SD 22, and SD 26 — taking them to 11. Even then, they would have to either go after a couple of the incumbents in long shot primaries, or cut a deal to bring over a member by offering them a plum chairmanship, or Sen. Bill Eigel would have to draw on one of his personal friendships to forge a tie.

We have ranked the open seats by competitiveness as they are currently drawn.

LEDE

SCOOP: Representatives to take up resolution rejecting 2020 election results in other states next week
A House committee plans to meet on Monday to discuss a resolution calling on Congress to reject the 2020 presidential election results.

Filed by Republican state Rep. Justin Hill Thursday, HR 2 says the lower chamber does not have "faith in the validity" of the results in six swing states: Arizona, Georgia, Michigan, Nevada, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin. It asks Congress to refuse to accept the electoral votes for those battleground states — which went for Vice President Joe Biden.

BUZZ

— It's apparently Missouri week at the White House this week.Eric Schmitt was among a group of attorneys general who met with President Trump privately at the White House today. But Dr. Randall Williams was at the White House on Tuesday, meeting with Trump, Vice President Mike Pence and General Gustave Perna. Perna, pictured here with Williams, is the chief operating officer of Operation Warp Speed, the federal government's effort to get out the COVID-19 vaccine.

— Like Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin, Rep. Cody Smith thinks Medicaid needs reforms. On Wednesday, he hinted at a lengthy debate over the program's cost in Missouri as the legislature tries to figure out how to expand it.

— Kim Gardner has been dismissed from the McCloskey case due to campaign emails sent that involved the case.

— Despite Monday's hearing, there does not seem to be support for Rep. Justin Hill's resolution in the Senate or on the second floor. Notably absent from the list of signees are Reps. Dirk Deaton, J. Eggleston, Rudy Veit, and Nick Schroer — all GOP members part of the committee that will hear the resolution. Rep.Robert Ross, the committee chairman, did sign onto it, however. And it's important to note that incoming Speaker Rob Vescovo is at the top of the list. Some reactions from Democrats and Republicans alike:

- "Can't decide if this is a joke or a horrifying seditious attack on democracy itself...."
- "It seems highly unlikely the results of the election would change even if many of those claims are proven. The resolution is outside the call to session, so we can't pass it anyway."
- "Certainly a form of treason."
- "Waste of taxpayer dollars."

Missouri Republicans dive into presidential election challenges

Attorney General Eric Schmitt has thrown his weight behind another state's legal challenge of the 2020 presidential election results in four battleground states.

His office filed an amicus brief Wednesday with the U.S. Supreme Court, leading 16 other states, in support of Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton's challenge of the results in Georgia, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin.

Texas filed the suit with the nation's highest court earlier this week in what's largely been seen as a longshot bid. Paxton alleged the four battleground states erroneously used the COVID-19 pandemic to circumvent their state legislatures and "unconstitutionally revised their state's election statutes" — thus changing the outcome of the 2020 presidential election.

O'Laughlin targets underperforming schools in new bill

Underperforming schools across Missouri could be shut down under a bill pre-filed by Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin last week.

SB 133 would require the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) to publish a list of schools annually that perform in the bottom 5 percent of schools for more than three years, according to standards set by the Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA). Those underperforming schools would then have to take action to transfer students out of the school or work to set up a charter school in the district.

Montgomery City receives $1.7 million federal broadband infrastructure grant

Montgomery City is set to receive $1.7 million to invest in broadband infrastructure and boost job growth from the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The grant will make use of funds from the Trump administration's Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017, which allocates money to invest in economically distressed communities across the country, called "opportunity zones." The department identified damage to the city from substantial flooding last year as a key motivator behind the grant.

Inside the FRA reauthorization negotiations

Most Republican senators met with Gov. Mike Parson for nearly an hour Tuesday afternoon to see if they could coalesce on an FRA reauthorization plan. And the consensus following the discussion is that they've inched closer to a deal with a special session in the works possibly as soon as next week.

Nearly every Republican senator attended the meeting with one calling in remotely. On the table, in particular, were three components to the FRA debate: the length of reauthorization; language prohibiting Medicaid funding for abortion providers and affiliates; and restricting the program from covering family planning services that include certain abortifacient drugs like Plan B or IUDs when used to induce an abortion.

Sens. Paul Wieland and Bob Onder were some of the most vociferous advocates for attaching pro-life language to the FRA reauthorization during session. However, the legislative session ended without reauthorizing the program which is set to expire on Sept. 30 and brings about $4 billion to the state.

BUZZ

— We're hearing Mark McCloskey held a reenactment of the now infamous scene at his house with the machine gun and pink polo for campaign footage.

— On the FRA, more and more folks are saying the language hashed out yesterday is generally what is going to be put to the floor. Sen. Bob Onder still has concerns about it not going far enough, however. During yesterday's meeting, Sen. Bill Eigel stood up for the Senate and pushed back on the five-year sunset. It was quickly stated that a three-year deal could be worked out, making this no longer Gov. Mike Parson's problem. We're hearing a special session could start Monday.

— Rep. Brian Seitz is asking the governor to call a special session regarding the teaching of critical race theory in public schools. According to the Governor's Office, Sen. Cindy O'Laughlin and Rep. Chuck Basye have already submitted a request regarding the topic.

Seitz's request specifically pointed to an unsuccessful House bill that would have banned teaching from the 1619 Project which has caused some controversy among historians.

"Critical Race Theory is an insidious theory, which seeks to divide Americans based upon characteristics that they were born with – characteristics that they cannot change. While race has played a role in American history, the proposition presented within Critical Race Theory that America was founded on racism and that a person's race makes them 'inherently' inclined to be either racist or oppressed is revisionist and without merit, at best and an outright lie, at worst. Allowing this type of curriculum to be taught to our children in Missouri public schools is unacceptable, and a stand must be taken against the dangerous path that some seem bent to set us on," Seitz said.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— St. Louis Mayor Tishaura Jones unveiled her plan to distribute about $80 million in federal relief funds yesterday:

- $6.75 million for public health
- $59 million for economic relief
- $11.5 million for public safety
- $1.4 million for administrative costs

Under the economic relief portion of her plan, funds would be used for rental, utility, legal, and mortgage assistance efforts. Money would also be used for community drive food distribution efforts, senior services, and broadband expansion. Public safety funds including youth programs, basketball leagues, and community violence intervention programs.

"Our city's recovery from the COVID-19 crisis must be equitable across zip codes and racial lines. From much-needed housing assistance to violence prevention programs, our first allocation of $80 million will help stabilize neighborhoods, improve public safety and build a strong foundation to invest more federal rescue funds down the road. The people of St. Louis are relying on us to deliver this aid quickly to boost lifesaving vaccination efforts and keep families in their homes ahead of a potential eviction crisis," Jones said.

— The 138th Veiled Prophet Parade, scheduled for July 3 in downtown St. Louis, usually draws a sizable contingent of local and statewide elected officials as well as bands, floats, costumed business execs, and giant balloons. That number may be much smaller this year with the cancellation of the adjacent Fair St. Louis and calls on social media for the route to be blocked by protests about the checkered history of the Veiled Prophet organization. St. Louis Mayor Tishaura Jones has already sent her regrets.

— Sunday we'll have Kansas City Mayor Quinton Lucas and Senate Minority Leader John Rizzo on "This Week in Missouri Politics." Got a question for them? Send those are our way!

BUZZ

— Well, those who were hoping the Governor's Office would bail the Senate out of the FRA impasse with a strictly worded special session call were disappointed this week as Gov. Mike Parson told Missourinet he wouldn't be calling a special session on the FRA until legislative leadership could come to him with something that would pass.

A few observations:

1. Rough run continues for Senate leaders who have carried a lot of water for the governor and could have used a little help with a strict call for a special session that would allow the Pro Tem to allow amendments out of order.

2. Good day for Sen. Paul Wieland who now gets to sit back and see what people have to offer to get him to sign off on any deals.

3. House Budget Chair Cody Smith gets to sit back and be the adult in this process for at least a few more weeks. He is on a good run right now.

4. The governor made sure this ain't his problem … for now. I just don't believe Gov. Mike Parson will allow the state not to pass the FRA. Maybe it's the move to hope the legislature sorts it out during Chiefs minicamp, but if this isn't solved come the first regular season kickoff at Arrowhead, this will be his problem.

5. The scene is set for a hero. Maybe it's Sen. Dan Hegeman, maybe it's Sen. Lincoln Hough, maybe Sen. Bob Onder, but the senator who figures this out will be a hero.

6. Could someone respond to this email and explain the worst-case scenario if an anti-abortion amendment is adopted?

— The Senate Administration Committee approved a new weather camera to be installed atop the Senate garage in a brief hearing this morning. The camera would provide live weather data and face the river. Due to privacy concerns, the camera will be housed in a blind obstructing its view beyond 180 degrees.

Costs associated with the new device include an $8,000 installation, ongoing internet service, and yearly power fees. KRCG, which proposed the new camera, will cover the expenses.

"We're excited to see Advocado expand in St. Louis. The company's commitment to innovation and growth has resulted in the creation of over 100 jobs that will provide new opportunities for Missourians to grow and succeed," Gov. Mike Parson says.

— The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) selected Jefferson City as one of 13 communities to participate in its Local Foods, Local Places program. Senate Education Committee considers charter school expansion in Missouri

The Senate Education Committee heard witness testimony Tuesday for a bill to allow charter schools to be established throughout Missouri, rather than only in certain St. Louis and Kansas City districts.

SB 25, sponsored by GOP Sen. Bill Eigel, would allow charter schools to be established in any municipality with a population of more than 30,000 — which includes an additional 61 school districts around the state. Per Missouri statute, charter schools are only allowed in the Kansas City 33 School District or the St. Louis Public School District.

— Despite the House's absence, the Senate continued the legislative session today, holding three hearings in different committees — Education, Judiciary, and General Laws.

— Former Missouri Gov. Eric Greitens released another video on social media today, telling the history of his political career through his eyes. It looks an awful lot like a campaign video, but ends with a blank screen where your typical logo for office would be. It really only served as a reminder that his campaign committee is still open.

— Today, both the Senate Education and Judiciary committees hit roadblocks while trying to stream audio of their hearings, showing that the novelty of a partially virtual session is hampering work in both chambers of the General Assembly. There was limited capacity in the room, and those manning the doors were only letting three members of the press in at a time. I was told to expect this to be a recurring issue this year. Whispering Gallery subscribers should start to make plans around how they will ensure their testimony is submitted to the different committees as COVID continues to have an adverse effect on legislative session.

Nearly a dozen witnesses testified on a pair of COVID liability bills before a Senate committee Tuesday, resurrecting the conversation in the Missouri Legislature.

The Judiciary and Civil and Criminal Jurisprudence Committee, chaired by Sen. Tony Luetkemeyer, heard the legislation Tuesday afternoon. The bills, sponsored by Luetkemeyer and Sen. Bill White, outlined protections to shield businesses in the state of Missouri from COVID-related lawsuits as long as the businesses followed certain health guidelines.

This Week in Missouri Politics Column: The tale of how the 1st session of the 101st General Assembly ended in the Senate

In an unprecedented move, at approximately a quarter after two in the afternoon, nearly four hours before by law all pending bills before the Senate are statutorily required to be tabled, Senate Minority Leader John Rizzo made the motion to adjourn. Not one Republican senator took to the Senate floor to object to anything Rizzo said all day — not even to his motion to adjourn. As he would say later at the press conference, it seemed a fitting end.

Some folks say the road to the early end started when Sen. Paul Wieland attached a pro-life measure to the FRA. The FRA is basically how the federal government sends Missouri taxpayers money back to Missouri hospitals so they can operate.

Now you have to know two things. No. 1: The sun rises in the east, and No. 2: No matter what the amendment is, if it is considered pro-life by Missouri Right to Life and it comes up for a vote in the Missouri Senate, it passes.

Wieland is viewed by most all parties as honorable in this situation. He pre-filed his amendment, his support of pro-life causes is seen by all sides as sincere, and he spoke to his colleagues beforehand and had the votes to put his amendment on the reauthorization bill.

Three Caucuses

Several senators say that the tale of how the session ultimately ended in bizarre fashion began on March 8, the day that Senator Roy Blunt announced his retirement.

Up until then, the Senate had moved a series of large bills out of the chamber and had sat back and watched the Speaker of the House somehow find a way to bungle the State of the State address.

It was then that not only did Sen. Dave Schatz began to consider running for U. S. Senate, but nearly all of the state senators in four of the six congressional seats held by Republicans began to consider runs for what could be open congressional seats themselves.

While there is no question the potential for state senators seeking higher office adds a heightened sense of political tension and calculation to everything that happens in the Capitol, the fundamental dilemma for Senate leadership has been for the past three years balancing the competing factors of bringing Democrats to the point of letting a bill come to vote while at the same time convincing members of the Conservative Caucus from adding amendments that would make it impossible for Democrats to sit down.

After two sessions of walking this highline, the members of the third caucus, Republican senators — who as some people are quick to forget are the majority of the majority caucus — were well tired of having their legislation die in search of placating what they consider the egoes members supposed to be in their own caucus working toward shared goals.

There was even a feeling in the body that the Democratic leadership and the majority of the majority spent most of session trying to assuage the Conservative Caucus on a growing list of issues.

That camaraderie was destroyed in early September when the Republican leadership floated a PQ motion to break the Senate and bring to a vote a piece of legislation offered by Sen. Bob Onder to provide concurrent jurisdiction on murders in the City of St. Louis.

At that point, several Democrats felt that the good they had fostered wasn't real, and several senators in the majority of the majority who up until that point had been the most stalwart supporters of Senate leadership began to feel the leadership they supported was more concerned with placating those who are opposed to them than those who support him.

Then came the announcement that the House wouldn't even take up the bill — making the entire process worthless as it was embarrassing and leaving at least 33 senators questioning how a screw up of this magnitude could take place in the Missouri Senate of all places.

However, several new senators were elected last fall, and it was a new year and most seemed forgiven — but for certain the episode was not forgotten.

Some senators pointed to the fact that Schatz filed more bills, some with staunch opposition, than most Senate leaders this session — and to be fair they did receive floor time. It's an interesting difference in the chambers that while the Speaker forced his priorities to the front without much of any concern for his members, House members quietly grumble but most just behave as dutiful House members and vote yes when told. In the upper chamber, there is never an abundance of the "thank you, sir, may I have another" mentality.

One of Schatz's priorities he inherited from the past two Senate presidents was increasing the funding for MODOT. It has been attempted in many different forms in many years, all to the same end. As session wound down and his other priorities went down, some in flames, he was increasingly willing to go all in on his gas tax.

After the bill moved through the Senate, he was forced to negotiate with House Speaker Rob Vescovo. Now, you never know all of any legislative leader's true priorities, but to his credit the Speaker is pretty plain spoken. He pretty clearly wanted something on education reform, something on foster kids, something to do with some paranoid grudge he has against me, and he wanted the legislature to follow his very loyal House Budget Chairman Rep. Cody Smith and not fund the voter approved Medicaid expansion.

Well, a bicameral legislature is set up to force compromise, it's a good thing, and usually happens in some form every session, normally at the very end in a give and take type exchange.

But this time the Speaker got a foster care bill very early, then while Sen. Schatz was behind the move all along, the House led the budget process in not funding the voter approved Medicaid expansion that Schatz already supported, and after that the Senate passed the education bill with no debate and no amendments.

You read that right; the Senate just took a major piece of legislation from the House and passed it unamended with no debate. Someone should make all 34 of them wear Rs on their licence plates for a month this summer. Most feel that since the measure only passed by a now kicked out child molester earlier in session, they didn't have 82 votes in the House to do it again. Most bizarre of all, they did it the week before the last week — surrendering most any leverage to negotiate in the final week.

No one will really ever know the full extent of any legislative deal, but it appeared the Senate cut a deal for a vote, but without a promise of support from the Speaker. He ultimately voted no, but it was his most loyal lieutenants who carried the water trying to attach amendments to send it to the public.

In the end it was House Floor Leader Dean Plocher who picked up the House, the governor, and the Senate and won the vote by an overwhelming margin. The Governor's Office even seemed to find the right feel for dealing with the House by ignoring their detractors and having Plocher and Rep. Becky Ruth to his office the next day to celebrate with a photograph, and full social media posts.

However, there is always a couple times each session when the House Democrats matter. This was one of them. If enough of them voted no or just walked, the measure wouldn't have passed. So a deal was struck with House Democrats that Sen. Bill Eigel's SB 26, a pro-law enforcement bill that included a provision where you could hit a protester if they were in the middle of the road, would not be taken up before Friday when conceivably Senate Democrats would kill the measure.

What Happened Thursday Night

The week was moving on to a pretty normal final week of session. The gas tax passed the House while the majority was making deals with the minority to amend but ultimately pass most of the major pieces of legislation. Apparently those deals were predicated upon ultimately passing a clean FRA.

There were really two lingering priories hanging in the balance in the Senate for the final 36 hours. A bill called SAPA that has to do with suing cops, or maybe cities, if they enforce federal gun laws and passing the FRA to keep Missouri hospitals open.

The Democrats were likely to give in on SAPA anyway because some of them see it as a good issue for them in the suburbs where they might be pro-gun but they are more pro-cop. In fact, a late night press conference was held with some cops to celebrate all of the pro-cop legislation that was passing complete with some large guns strategically placed against the podium. But the clean FRA was used as a reason to not force Sen. Lauren Arthur's amendment to bar those convicted of domestic violence from having guns, SAPA passed, and that press conference was held just a few hours later than they had hoped.

While this was going on, Eigel arranged to pull the controversial protester provision out of his SB 26 — now known as the police officer bill of rights. So at 12:01 a.m., which is technically Friday morning, Schatz went to the bill, and it passed.

Now this is where things get complicated. There is no question that Reps. Crystal Quade and Ashley. Bland Manlove did their deal on the gas tax believing that Friday morning might mean like 10 a.m. Friday morning when the Senate would normally convene. However, the most controversial provision of SB 26 was taken out. So you can see where Senate Republican leaders could rationalize that technically they didn't lie, and you can easily see where House Democratic leaders would feel they were lied to.

Now Onto The FRA

With Missourians' Second Amendment rights finally secured, the Senate had to try and get back in the good graces of the police that they spent the entire last year promising to be their best friends — so the police bill of rights was passed. Now at around 1 a.m., the only thing left was to get the FRA passed clean then go home and spend the next day passing the normal final day of session glut of legislation.

That started to seem doable as earlier in the day the Governor's Office began to inform Senate leaders they thought they had an idea that might save the day. Senate leadership had previously reached out to the Governor's Office several times for help with the FRA but had been pretty frustrated with the lack of response until they had the idea that they could promulgate a rule that would accomplish what Wieland's amendment was addressing. Most felt if leadership could get Wieland happy, then everyone else would fall in line.

Now he didn't have to feel any additional pressure to be all that accommodating in the weeks leading up to the final evening. He was a very solid supporter of Senate leadership and — even with that being the case — was rolled on an appointment to the University of Missouri System Board of Curators by Senate leadership and the Governor's Office choosing to deal with Senate Democrats instead of him. His position was strengthened when web ads and text messages attacking him and other senators who shared his position started landing. However, by the 1 a.m. — on what I reckon Quade would call Thursday night, and what I reckon Schatz would call Friday morning — he was probably willing to listen to a reasonable compromise, especially from a certain member of the governor's staff who he had a very long relationship with.

As the FRA was on the floor, Wieland made his case then left the floor to Sen. Bob Onder. It was at that point one of the senators who handles himself on the floor very, very well, Sen. Bill White, took to the floor to debate Onder. They both held their own, and two things became pretty clear to those of us watching. No. 1: White is excellent on the floor, and No. 2: Onder was not in a compromising mood.

While the Governor's Office said it thought it could help, it was more of a march than a cavalry charge to get to the fight. It was around 2:45 a.m. that they were really in the mix, and at that point, Schatz felt that he could step away from the negotiations and hopefully come back into the discussion with a deal that Wieland had signed onto and all would be well.

No Deal

It was around 3:15 a.m. that word was getting around the gallery where I sit that, accurately or not, a potential deal was in the works that could get a clean FRA out of the Senate.

Well around 3:30 a.m. the chimes rang, and there was a vote called on an amendment that would clearly violate the agreement between Democratic and Republican Senate leadership.

Now at 3:30 a.m. during a filibuster, Republican senators have a sleep schedule that they have to maintain to ensure there is always at least one senator in the chamber to make sure those filibustering don't make a motion to adjourn and to make sure there are 18 senators to wake up to answer a quorum call.

Well when you have an amendment, you need pretty well everyone. Some felt that the Democrats allowed the vote to take place because they felt they had the votes to defeat the amendment, and then the filibuster would continue with another amendment, but it would prove the point that they could perfect the bill cleanly.

As the chimes rang, Sen. Caleb Rowden, who was spending damn near every second trying to bring senators to a compromise, went to find Schatz from what wasn't the break he was hoping for. He was also waking up to a situation that hadn't yet produced a deal between the Governor's Office and Wieland.

He went into the chamber and sat at the staff table while the roll was called and didn't answer the first time his name was called. After the roll was called, the vote was 15-13 so his vote to side with Onder really wouldn't matter. So when a senator made the motion to call the absentees, he voted with Onder to make the vote 16-14, again making Schatz's vote meaningless.

However, the Senate was to the point that most every rule of the Senate was being used to stretch the process so a motion was made for a verification of the roll. It was at that moment that Sen. Barb Washington came into the chamber, of course voting no, making the vote 16-15.

While there is no meaningful difference to the fate of the amendment between 16-15 or 16-14, there was all the difference to Schatz. Now, if he would have voted no, the amendment would have been 15-15, tied, and therefore not been adopted.

It was this difference that blew up the Senate and ensured that this would be the last meaningful piece of business the Missouri Senate conducted that session.

The Fallout

At that moment, the Senate minority felt it had been lied to. They had for two years worked, oftentimes alongside, the majority leadership to maintain the state Senate and craft legislation and in many ways cater to the Conservative Caucus. They had allowed legislation to pass that they passionately disagreed with in exchange for rather small concessions on other matters. Now, they had kept their end of the deal, their word, and they felt the majority hadn't.

From a lengthy conversation with Schatz, when he voted with Onder, he felt that his vote was not going to have any consequence to the outcome of the vote, and his yes vote would maintain his ability to play a role in negotiating a compromise later. If he really wanted to deceive, he could have claimed his vote was in order to be able to make a motion to reconsider if that became a viable option, but he said he really didn't think of it. He did say at the time he wasn't thinking of it as the end of the effort but just another roadblock to get over on the way to passing the FRA.

At that point, a clean FRA was not possible; therefore the Senate minority had given and given and was not going to be receiving anything. Rowden, seeing the reaction from the minority, wisely adjourned the Senate until the next morning.

The next morning, Sen. John Rizzo met with his caucus and told them that he was blowing it up. He was taking to the floor when they convened and would be filibustering until 6 p.m. He told them that they didn't have to join him, and he didn't know what the majority's response would be, but he had made his mind up.

Sen. Karla May had a bill that was teed up to pass if they went to legislation, but everyone else in the caucus was on board. It didn't take long for May to agree and take to holding the floor herself.

On the floor it was a different Sen. John Joseph Rizzo than anyone had seen before. He seemed to come into his own as he fired at the President Pro Tem of the Senate, calling the Republican leadership dishonest and incompetent and praising the Republican Speaker for working the Senate leadership like fools. He used passion and humor and spoke with an authority and delivery of a Koster or a Callahan or a Nixon who had spoken in that well before him.

As his Democratic colleagues began to come to the floor and take their shifts, Schatz asked to speak with him. Rizzo said he had nothing to say to him, something to the effect that there would be no good to come from that conversation because he knows himself and knows how Schatz is.

Schatz again asked to speak to him man-to-man and Rizzo again declined, but Schatz asked if he would listen and Rizzo relented. If you saw the post-session press conference, you would see that Rizzo wasn't swayed.

Rowden who has maintained a lot of credibility by not voting for a last fall PQ and several other measures, reached out to Rizzo and was told the one way to start to get back on track would be to get folks out of here because nothing was going to happen anyhow, and they would just be back in a few weeks to pass the FRA anyway.

Around 1:30 p.m., Rizzo asked for an update, and Rowden asked for a little time to go to the House and inform Plocher that their early adjournment wasn't meant as a sign of disrespect but was about their own dysfunction. It was sometime around 2 p.m. that Rizzo asked for an update.

It was around 10 minutes later that the Senate minority leader rose and announced a privileged motion which was the first clue.

Then he made the motion to adjourn until May 19. (You have to adjourn until a specific date.)

Lt. Gov. Mike Kehoe took his time before moving forward.

Then he slowly asked for all those in favor.

Then he paused again.

Then asked for all those opposed.

Then he paused again.

Then he declared that believed the ayes have it.

Then he paused.

Then he declared they ayes have it, and the Senate was adjourned.

It appeared that right after, Rizzo approached Kehoe and apologized for putting him in a tough situation. However, there is the old Ron Richard rule about always making sure a member of the majority was in the chamber to object to an adjournment motion.

Not only did no Republican take to the floor to defend their caucus, there wasn't even anyone there to object to adjourning.

The Buck Stops With Schatz

In a long conversation with Schatz, he expressed real contrition for how it ended. He repeatedly said that he never intended to deceive Rizzo, that there were a number of balls up in the air at the end, and they didn't all land as he would have hoped. He stressed that every possible outcome was discussed on how to keep the FRA clean, and his intention was to continue that work regardless of the amendment vote. There were even some Republicans discussing teaming up with the Democrats to force an end to the debate if Wieland's concerns were satisfied.

He said it was 3:30 in the morning, and he hadn't slept a full night in a week, and there was no time to think of a U.S. Senate race or a bunch of multilevel political calculations, but he expressed respect for Rizzo even after his comments and understood why he was angry and hoped to reach out to him this summer and talk.

Mostly he talked about how there were so many things that all came to a head at once. Eigel changed his bill to make it much easier to pass, SAPA became a huge priority, Wieland's gravitas on the issue of aboriton, the Governor's Office's big solution to the FRA problem never arrived, and in the end, when it was over, it didn't end the way he had hoped.

However, the one point he left me with was whether or not someone supported SAPA or SB 26 or the gas tax or the failure of the FRA to pass, the Buck Stops Here. He understood why Rizzo was upset, and he owned it all like a man. Moreover, when he says that he didn't set out to intentionally mislead Senator Rizzo I believe him.

Rizzo reflected that he probably should have blown things up back in January as retaliation for the PQ debacle from September, but he just didn't think it was fair to the five new members to start out their Senate careers with that burden. In hindsight, he seemed to feel that if he had done so it might actually have helped Schatz and Rowden better deal with their own caucus and increase overall civility in the chamber.

He commented how former Sen. Jake Hummel was over in the House working extremely hard and oftentimes alone to get the Democrats to stay on board with the gas tax. He questioned how the House minority can trust the Senate leadership again on anything? He said what drove him over the edge was that his caucus put its trust in him, and he put his trust in Senate leadership. “When they screwed me they screwed them, and that’s what drives me crazy.”

He said there was no reason not to keep their word. They had previously taken Sen. Mike Moon’s bills and stripped their amendments and could have done so here. Basically his caucus kept their word, the majority lied.

What’s Next?

Well there is still the matter of the 1.8 billion of federal dollars Missouri taxpayers have sent to Washington and need returned in order to keep the hospitals they paid for open.

The House actually looks like the adults here as they can probably pass a clean FRA if they choose to.

The Senate minority’s position is pretty clear: Either pass a clean FRA with us or pass a dirty FRA without us. Rizzo didn’t seem in much of a position to compromise. There was no question he was angry about being lied to, but he seemed just as frustrated with what he said was a lack of competence in how the majority ran the chamber from ineffective dealing with the House to even kind of pitying them for not having anyone in the chamber for his motion to adjourn.

As of now, the only way to a clean FRA with Wieland on board would be for the Governor's Office to prepare the rule and start that process before issuing the call to special session. As of today, no Republicans really know how to get Onder on board with a clean bill.

The governor will obviously have to call a special session, and in that call he could choose to take a side.

Rizzo pointed out the easiest move was for the governor and the pro tem to be on the same page from the time they issue the call. Issue a strict call to remove the sunset from the FRA or issue a call to specifically change the date the program ends to 2027 or 2037 or whatever. Then have the pro tem to rule any other amendments out of order.

It will be tough for Senate leadership to negotiate the bill, but one person who has emerged from this mess with all of his integrity intact is the Senate Appropriations Chairman Dan Hageman.

While he is unquestionably 100 percent pro-life he voted for the clean FRA each time it was brought up, and even an angry Rizzo spoke of him with respect. He is known to be one senator who is very close to the governor. He will unquestionably be the key when the deal is actually brokered.

The Bottom Line

However the FRA special session works out, it appears that the Republican caucus has reached the brink internally. Schatz will be forced to confront the Conservative Caucus or risk a complete revolt from the majority of the majority with a Senate Democratic caucus not just standing back and watching but strategically engaging in the fights. Neither option really harms the Conservative Caucus, they are really in the catbirds seat either way.

The real dilemma for Schatz, and it would be for anyone who was pro tem right now, is dealing with such a large caucus and a caucus within the caucus that really has no reason to care about his personal political success. Sen. Ron Richard’s challenge was to find ways to deal with a small number of senators who opposed individual policies the policies the caucus supported. Schatz has to deal with an actual caucus within a caucus pulling it to the right. In reality, it's probably a real work of political skill that it took two years, four months, one week, and four days to get here.

Maybe the most telling thing from Friday about where the Missouri Senate stands is that during the press conference, all three caucuses were in the room when Rowden, who carries as much respect as any senator in the chamber from all sides, said he believes he is leaving the Capitol with his relationships intact. It was met with audible laughter from at least one member in both of the other two caucuses.

BUZZ

— You may have heard that Gov. Mike Parson's announcement that he will not cover Missourians who are newly eligible for Medicaid on July 1 has sped up the process for the inevitable court case that will come from the legislature's decision not to fully fund Medicaid. This is true. Since there is no longer a chance that the Department of Social Services will cover that population, the courts will now consider this a "live dispute" between two parties and not just a hypothetical question of whether they'll be covered.

— Bill review should start in earnest next week. The Budget & Planning division of the Office of Administration will analyze each of the bills that were TAFP'd by the legislature to ensure that there aren't any Hammerschmidt violations — these being bills that deviate from a single subject — or any other issues.

Not every violation found in bill review is that serious. For instance, in 2018, Gov. Mike Parson vetoed a bill to replace a statue of Thomas Hart Benton with a statue of former President Harry Truman in the National Statuary Hall in the U.S. Capitol. Parson didn't veto it because he doesn't like Truman; he did so because the bill referred to the wrong Benton. It was referring to the painter's uncle of the same name who was a state senator.

— St. Louis Board of Aldermen President Lewis Reed set off a flurry of ambitious speculation at City Hall by filing a new campaign committee to seek "a citywide office" in 2025 when incumbents Comptroller Darlene Green and Mayor Tishaura Jones will be up for re-election. Reed's term as president expires in 2023. The filing fuels speculation that he will not run for board president again. Reed narrowly survived a tough Democratic primary for president in 2019 and lost primaries for mayor in 2013, 2017, and 2021. Cara Spencer, Jeffrey Boyd, Megan Green, Jack Coatar, and Jamilah Nasheed are all potential candidates for board president in 2023.

— For all you political communications folks, be careful with your upcoming fundraising emails. In a statement of offense today, the U.S. Department of Justice said it considers language that promises donations will be matched to be a "material misrepresentation."

Plocher announces bid for House speaker

House Majority Floor Leader Dean Plocher is running for House speaker, informing his Republican colleagues Monday that he is up for the challenge “to build a stronger, more prosperous economy for every Missourian.”

Plocher just completed his first session as the majority floor leader. Representing HD 89 in St. Louis County, Plocher was first elected during a special election in 2015. He’s a practicing attorney in Clayton and a former municipal judge.

“Protecting our caucus is a main responsibility of leadership, and with redistricting upon us next election cycle, it is incumbent upon leadership to raise the necessary resources to protect every member’s seats,” Plocher said in his letter to Republican colleagues. “Our caucus and your ideas inspire me every day to be a better policymaker and serve the common good. It is reasonable to expect minor policy disagreements and debate among our strong Republican majority, but we must not lose sight of the simple fact that there is far more uniting us as conservatives than what divides us.”

Missouri gas tax increase could be left up to voters if new referendum is successful

The Secretary of State’s Office is now accepting comments on a referendum petition filed to place the recently-passed gas tax hike before voters before it can be implemented.

Jeremy Cady, state director of Americans For Prosperity-Missouri (AFP) filed the referendum petition with the Secretary of State’s Office Friday seeking to put the recently-passed legislation gradually increasing the state’s gas tax to a vote of the people. The petition suggests placing the proposal on the Nov. 8, 2022 ballot — more than a year after the first increase would take place.

Missouri Farm Bureau president opposes proposed federal ‘death tax’

Missouri Farm Bureau President Garrett Hawkins voiced his opposition to a tax reform proposal from President Joe Biden, citing impacts on farming families in Missouri.

Biden proposed eliminating the “stepped-up basis” rule, which sees the government adjust appreciated values of a house or stock portfolio when passed down to the next generation as an inheritance. The rule protects heirs of properties under an $11.7 million threshold from paying what is known as a so-called “death tax” — a tax on the transfer of property after someone’s death.

Lawmakers look back on session, from education to PDMP

With the 2021 legislative session in the books, lawmakers from both parties and chambers sat down to discuss the final weeks and the bills that passed the finish line.

Sens. Lauren Arthur and Holly Rehder, state Rep. Becky Ruth, and Aaron Baker of Axiom Strategies joined Sunday’s episode of “This Week in Missouri Politics” to cover session’s biggest topics, from education reform to an increase in the state’s motor fuel tax. The tax increase finally passed the lower chamber after a lengthy discussion Tuesday, with Democrats taking to the floor to support it before it was approved. The increase would bolster the state’s roads and bridges, one of Gov. Mike Parson’s top priorities.

James Owen, executive director of Renew Missouri, said the upgrade had been in the works for some time.

Subject: WHO PAYS? ST. LOUIS CITY ILLEGAL RR QUIET ZONES

SO, IF RAILROAD QUIET ZONE RAILROAD CROSSINGS REQUIRE A HOLD HARMLESS AGREEMENT WITH ST. LOUIS CITY, WHO PAYS FOR THE RAILROAD DAMAGES/INJURIES/KILLS AT 87 RAILROAD CROSSINGS IN THE CITY SINCE 2005? WHERE ARE THESE AGREEMENTS LOCATED?
SO, IF RAILROAD QUIET ZONE RAILROAD CROSSINGS REQUIRE THE CITY TO PAY CROSSING MAINTENANCE COSTS HOW MUCH DOES ST. LOUIS PAY THE RAILROADS IN CROSSING MAINTENANCE FEES?
SO, WHY ARE THESE CROSSINGS IN ST. LOUIS CITY QUIET ZONES WHEN ALL THEIR TWINS AREN'T IN THE REST OF THE STATE. ELSEWHERE YOU WANT A QUIET ZONE YOU HAVE TO CLOSE HALF THE COUNTY AND PIMP OFF YOUR MOMMA. UNLESS MODOT ILLEGALLY USES CROSSING SAFETY FUNDS.

Subject: Will -0- railroad crossing completion rate = MURDER?

So if you take the MoDOT prior STIP 32 items for railroad crossing upgrades for this year. Eliminate the bullshit preliminary engineering counts, etc. --and two crossings listed for PCPA railroad crossing County: Pemiscot County Port Authority who have no crossings in the FRA data and check those 24 projects left against the NEW Stip 102 crossing items---LEAVES A -0- COMPLETION RATE THIS YEAR which shows up in the FRA data. Where does that purty little graph show up in the MoDOT worthless accountability records? Where are our $7.4 million safety funds sitting?
