EMAIL RECEIVED FROM EXTERNAL SOURCE

Good Friday morning.

The 2022 Legislative Session is over, which means it's time to start planning for 2023.

The Legislature on Thursday released a schedule of important dates for next year's 60-day Legislative Session. It will begin on March 7 and adjourn — at least in theory — on May 5.

There is an important date before the 2023 Legislative Session begins: Aug. 1. That's the deadline for filing claims bills. Other than that, the details are scant. The schedule doesn't list committee week dates, for instance.

Lawmakers will likely hold an Organization Session shortly after Election Day, during which many new members will be sworn in, and House Speaker-Designate Paul Renner and Senate President-Designate Kathleen Passidomo will wield the gavel for the first time.

Session is over; now the clock is ticking for Paul Renner and Kathleen Passidomo.

For what it's worth, the 2021 Organization Session was on Nov. 17, 2020, or two weeks after Election Day, and the first committee week was in mid-January.

Assuming a similar gap, the mostly ceremonial meeting would be around Nov. 22.

Emmy award-winning public relations veteran Lisa Garcia has been named to the Florida State Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Board of Trustees.

Garcia, a partner and Chief Operating Officer at Sachs Media. She is the lead strategist on Sachs Media's work for state and national clients, including the Florida Healthy Kids Corporation, The Nature Conservancy, and BlueTriton Brands.

Before joining Sachs Media, Garcia directed campaigns for nonprofit organizations in Washington, D.C. She has extensive experience in partnership building, television production, media placement, branding and marketing, and event planning. She earned a bachelor's degree in international studies from Frostburg State University.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Congratulations to Lisa Garcia, the latest great hire for Sachs Media.

“I’m extraordinarily honored to join the Board of Trustees of such a vital, prestigious, and successful organization,” Garcia said. “For more than 20 years, the Hispanic Chamber has been an effective advocate representing the concerns of Hispanic businesses and entrepreneurs, helping to make Florida a stronger, more economically diverse state. I look forward to being a part of that important mission.”

FSHCC was founded in 2000 in response to the tremendous growth of Florida’s Hispanic population. Today, FSHCC is Florida’s only statewide economic development organization dedicated to Hispanic business owners and is ranked by the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and MBE Connect Magazine as one of the top five Hispanic chambers in the country.

Top story

"[Florida hauls in $200M more than expected in January]" via Gray Rohrer of Florida Politics — Florida collected nearly $200 million more than expected in January, a report from state economists posted online Wednesday shows. In January, Florida received $4.07 billion, about $199.7 million more than economists' predictions. Leading that haul was $3.46 billion in sales taxes, $183.5 million over the estimate. The report warns the jump was affected by inflation and federal COVID-19 funds that were one-time payments during the pandemic. "January collections reflect activity that largely occurred in December, which continued to benefit from federal stimulus payments that have now ended; redirected spending from the hard-hit service sector; and some consumers' ability to draw down atypically large savings that built up during the pandemic," the report states.

Florida gets an unexpected windfall.

"Florida budget includes $20.5M for projects Gov. Ron DeSantis vetoed last year" via Gray Rohrer of Florida Politics — The 38 projects totaled $16.7 million in the prior year's budget before being axed by DeSantis. But many of them received more funds this time around, despite getting shut out. In previous years, lawmakers have been encouraged not to include funding for projects vetoed the year prior unless an understanding has been worked out with the Governor to let them take effect. The largest single project is $2 million for a program to help low-income women obtain long-acting reversible contraception, which Senate President Wilton Simpson has championed. DeSantis vetoed the project last year after a lobbying effort from anti-abortion rights activists. Simpson, who describes himself as "pro-life," has argued the program will give low-income women greater access to contraception and reduce unwanted pregnancies.

"Ileana Garcia apologizes for comments she made during 'don't say gay' debate" via Ana Ceballos of the Miami Herald — Sen. Garcia, a Miami Republican who recently faced national criticism for saying "LGBT is not a permanent thing" while debating a contentious bill in the Florida Legislature, apologized on Thursday to anyone who was offended by what she said. In a statement posted on Twitter, Garcia said she did not intend to "generalize or disregard the experiences of any member of the LGBT+ community" when arguing why she supported the "parental rights in education" bill — which critics have dubbed the "don't say gay" bill. In her statement Thursday, Garcia did not specify which comments she was apologizing for. But she said she understood the "responsibility and impact of words on others."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Garcia lamented that her comments made her a target of “threats of physical harm” last week.

First on #FlaPol — “Rene Plasencia resigns early from Florida House” via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — As the hankie dropped at Sine Die, Rep. Plasencia finalized his resignation from the Florida House. Due to term limits, Plasencia already faced the end of his time in the chamber in the next few months. He just shut down a Senate bid in Senate District 13, opting against a challenge to Sen. Linda Stewart. His time in Tallahassee has been drawing to a close, and a professional obligation prompted his early exit, he said. “I wanted to make sure I wasn’t leaving any loose ends by resigning,” he said. “But I’m termed out. I need to start working and move on with my life.”

"Jeff Brandes discusses the Legislatures missed opportunities" via Mark Parker of St. Pete Catalyst — Brandes said he believes his colleagues in the Legislature dropped the ball on some critical issues the average Floridian is facing. Chief among those is property insurance reform, addressing affordable housing and restructuring a criminal justice system that he repeatedly warns is on the verge of collapse. "These are things that people expect us — the Legislature — to address," said Brandes. "We failed." Instead of exploring sentencing reform and increasing parole opportunities or other diversionary measures, Brandes said lawmakers chose to build new prisons. While the demand for housing outpacing supply and soaring rents continue leading to the displacement of residents throughout Tampa Bay and the state, he said state lawmakers did nothing substantial to address affordable housing challenges.

"Shevrin Jones ends Session with wins for underrepresented Floridians, rational reform" via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — When it came to rational reform and fighting for Floridians unable to advocate for themselves, the 2022 Legislative Session proved another successful round of lawmaking for Democratic Sen. Jones. Jones closed out the Session having notched several big legislative wins, all effective July 1 upon receiving DeSantis' signature. Among them is SB 236, a measure that promises to positively affect innumerable families by raising from 5 to 9 the age through which a child in public schools can be categorized as "developmentally delayed." That change will bring Florida's rules in line with national standards. It can sometimes be difficult to identify developmental delays in some young children, and those who miss identification by age 6 can risk a break in service and eligibility for public special education programs, Jones said.

Shevrin Jones scores a couple of solid hits in Session.

"Democrats praise birth control funding, but bemoan abortion restrictions" via Christine Jordan Sexton of Florida Politics — Including funding to help low-income women obtain long-acting reversible contraception (LARC) makes sense but does not negate the negative impact of legislation to ban abortions after 15 weeks, two Democratic state Senators argued. LARC methods do not need to be taken every day, and depending on the type of LARC, they can be effective for anywhere between two months and 10 years. Examples of LARCs include injections and intrauterine contraceptive devices that release progesterone hormones into the womb. "It's nothing but excitement because if we are talking about unwanted pregnancies, as our colleagues like to say, then this is a step in the right direction toward it," said Rep. Tracie Davis.

Statewide

"Gov. DeSantis blames CDC for Florida rent spikes" via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — DeSantis, during extended remarks on the shortage of affordable housing in the state, contended that the CDC eviction moratorium that ran from Summer 2020 through last August was a contributing factor to rents spiking today. "The CDC basically had a moratorium that said that people didn't really have to pay rent. And I'm not saying people here weren't. Some may not have been," DeSantis said of the order issued in 2020 by Donald Trump's administration and extended by Biden. Regardless of how many people skipped out on rent, DeSantis noted the CDC created the problem writ large. "What's happening now is all these people who own these properties are charging more to make up for what was there," DeSantis explained.

Ron DeSantis explains why it's getting more expensive to live in Florida, Washington, D.C. has a role.

"Masks on airplanes? DeSantis says it's more COVID-19 'theater'" via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — DeSantis denounced the ongoing "farce" of a public transportation mask mandate as yet another "COVID theater" production. The Governor, addressing reporters in Okaloosa County, offered an extended denunciation of the ongoing mask mandate, lampooning perceived absurdities in the ongoing federal rule extended through mid-April by the Transportation Security Administration (TSA). "This is theater. This should not be extended. It should have never been done in the first place, but clearly, now, this is a farce, and so they need to repeal the transportation mask mandate," DeSantis said. "Let people fly and let them breathe normally." The mask mandate was scheduled to expire on March 18, but the Transportation Security Administration said Thursday that it will extend the requirement through April 18.

"DeSantis, Richard Corcoran join educators to tout advantages of progress monitoring" via Renzo Downey of Florida Politics — Underscored by a symbolic bill signing, DeSantis and Corcoran on Thursday made the third leg of their education victory lap in as many days since Session ended. Sporting an Irish-green tie, DeSantis continued touting the end of state standardized testing in Florida, as outlined in a bill (SB 1048) he signed into law Tuesday. The proposal, which the Governor signed a second time Thursday, will replace the annual Florida Standards Assessment with computer-based progress monitoring screening in English language arts and mathematics. The progress monitoring, spaced three times a year, will begin in the 2022-23 school year for pre-kindergarten through 10th grade students. The first two tests are intended to give students, teachers and parents guidance on how to work on the students' weaknesses.

"Disney catches it from all sides over Florida's 'Don't Say Gay' bill" via Katie Rice and Steven Lemongello of the Orlando Sentinel — Over the past few weeks, Disney has faced mounting pressure from different sides of the political spectrum. Many employees and fans have decried Disney's financial contributions to the bill's sponsors and criticized its initial silence, while DeSantis slammed the company for what he called a "woke" agenda. Even after CEO Bob Chapek said the company opposed the measure the day after it passed the Florida Legislature and issued an apology for his silence on the issue, the criticism of Disney has endured and even grown. California Gov. Gavin Newsom also jumped into the fray, writing on Twitter that Disney should reconsider its plans to relocate 2,000 mostly Imagineering jobs from Southern California to a new campus at Lake Nona in Orlando.

"Gabrielle Union tackles "Don't Say Gay" bill at Disney premiere: "We know where hate and oppression lead" via Chris Gardner of The Hollywood Reporter — "We're blended racially, culturally, with a variety of different abilities," Union told The Hollywood Reporter on Wednesday night while standing on the red carpet ahead of the world premiere at Hollywood's El Capitan Theatre. Union was then asked how she's processing the moment amid the wave of conservative legislation targeted at LGBTQ+ youth in states like Florida, Texas and Georgia. "I don't want to say shock because hatred doesn't shock me at this point. I've been a Black woman in America since '72. Nothing shocks me, but the fear that gripped me because I know what this leads to," she explained. "Every moment in history, there has been this moment. We know how this ends."

"What became of Trayvon Martin's hoodie?" via Manuel Roig-Franzia of The Washington Post — The hole in the fabric is jagged. A messy slash travels east-west across the spot where a heart once beat, then branches north. Nothing about this scar on a 17-year-old boy's hoodie is neat. Like millions of others worn by young men, this hoodie's life span should have been unremarkable. Instead, it set on a meandering path one night in 2012, as it seeped blood from the body of a kid named Trayvon Martin. The hoodie has changed hands, quietly traversed thousands of miles, been packed and unpacked, framed and unframed. The hoodie is included in an exhibit about Civil War Reconstruction at the National Museum of African American History and Culture.

"Governor and Legislature did nothing to stop manatees from starving" via Craig Pittman of Florida Phoenix — You probably heard a lot about what our fine legislators did during what's been dubbed the "culture wars" session. Manatees are iconic animals, popular with both tourists and residents. Last year, more than 1,000 of them died in a pretty horrible way: starving to death. The seagrass they eat has been wiped out by repeated toxic algae blooms that were fed by years and years of human pollution. Because of the lost seagrass, many of the ones that survived are suffering from malnutrition. All those lawmakers barking like a kennel full of frantic Chihuahuas about the "culture war" issues didn't have anything to say about cleaning up the pollution causing so many dead manatees. You don't have to be named "Sherlock" to deduce that their silence is a sign that something is seriously messed up in this state.

"'Toxic lead': Federal lawsuit aims to curb hunting and fishing in two Florida refuges" via Karl Etters of the Tallahassee Democrat — A Montana lawsuit aims to roll back expanded hunting and fishing opportunities in eight

National Wildlife Refuges, including two in Florida, on the claims that recreationists introduce lead into the landscape which harms wildlife that lives there. The November lawsuit was filed by the conservation group Center for Biological Diversity in the U.S. District Court for the District of Montana Missoula Division. The 56-page filing targets hunting and fishing activities in refuges from Arizona to Florida to South Dakota. The 2020 expansion of hunting in wildlife refuges "thwarts and decreases plaintiff's members' opportunities to observe the wildlife that use the refuges impacted by the Hunting and Fishing Rule," the center wrote in its lawsuit.

"Donald Trump staring at resounding rejection in GOP primaries" via Josh Kraushaar of National Journal — Trump is staring at a real chance that his endorsed candidates go zero-for-three in competitive Senate primaries in May, an outcome that would underscore his already mixed record in primaries and raise serious questions about the depth of his political clout within the Republican Party. Trump's undisciplined political strategy, seeking to punish any candidate he deems disloyal, faces a wall of resistance in the South, one of the most pro-Trump regions of the country during his presidency. From North Carolina to Alabama, Senate candidates fail to capitalize on the Trump seal of approval. Adding insult to injury, Trump's past praise of Russian President Putin proves to be a major vulnerability for MAGA-aligned candidates at the worst possible time.

Charlie Crist says Floridians are paying the 'DeSantis tax' at the pump — U.S. Rep. Crist released a video Wednesday bashing DeSantis for not yet suspending Florida's gas tax. Crist, running for Governor, first called for a gas tax holiday in November. DeSantis called for a gas tax ahead of the Legislative Session, and lawmakers approved in the 2022-23 budget. However, the holiday is set for October, shortly before Election Day. Crist's campaign said the timing was a "blatant political tactic." In the video, Crist says, "My plan would be to cut the state gas tax and the federal gas tax and save you 0.45 cents per gallon. Instead, what we're paying now is the DeSantis gas tax. It's wrong; we can do better."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Politics — Three former South Florida policymakers have joined several other current and former elected officials backing Democratic Sen. Annette Taddeo's run for Governor. Former Hialeah City Council member Paul Hernández and former Miami Beach Commissioners Michael Góngora and Joy Malakoff are throwing their support behind Taddeo, whose campaign announced the endorsements Thursday. "I am honored to be supported by these exceptional public servants," Taddeo said. "These endorsements are just more examples of the broad coalition of people our campaign is bringing together as we prepare to take on Ron DeSantis later this year."

"No proof for Val Demings claim that Marco Rubio backs tax hikes like those indicated in Rick Scott's plan" via Tom Kertscher of PolitiFact — "Marco Rubio and Rick Scott are planning to hike taxes on millions of Americans, including seniors and working-class Floridians," the text in her ad on Facebook and Instagram says. The video, which Demings also posted on YouTube, ends with: "Say no to the Rubio-Scott tax hike." Demings said Rubio "is following his party bosses, like Scott, with his plan to raise taxes on Florida's working families, retirees and veterans." Scott released a plan that indicates support for raising income taxes on millions of Americans, but there is no evidence that Rubio backs such tax hikes. We rate the claim False.

"Mike Pompeo endorses Bill Posey for re-election" via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — Former Secretary of State Pompeo has endorsed U.S. Rep. Posey. "Bill has a record of getting results and fighting for our America First priorities," Pompeo said. "He is exactly who the country needs right now to get back on the right track and hold the Biden administration accountable for their failed policies and lack of transparent leadership. We need more leaders like Bill who aren't afraid to hold government accountable, stand up to Communist China, and unleash American energy." Posey is a heavy favorite for re-election. A redistricting map approved by the Legislature will change his district little. About 58.11% of voters in the district voted for Trump, a Republican, in the 2020 presidential election.

Gun violence prevention groups back Maxwell Alejandro Frost for CD 10 — Democratic CD 10 candidate Frost announced endorsements from several individuals and groups dedicated to preventing gun violence. The list includes Brady: United Against Gun Violence, the Community Justice Action Fund, Newtown Action Alliance, Fred Guttenberg, Manuel Oliver, and Igor Volsky. "As a gun violence survivor myself and the former March for Our Lives Organizing Director, it is a great honor to have so many incredible gun violence prevention organizations and advocates behind me in this campaign. In Congress, I will work day and night to help create a world where people no longer have to fear gun violence, where students no longer have to hide under their desks for active shooter drills, and where we can put an end to the everyday gun violence that plagues communities of color," he said.

"Barbara Sharief might be taking on Lauren Book in the new SD 35" via Anne Geggis of Florida Politics — Sharief said she is strongly considering a race for Senate District 35, potentially setting up a primary challenge with Book. Sharief came in third in last fall's Special Election for Congress. She was part of a crowded field of Democrats competing for the nomination to succeed U.S. Rep. Alcee Hastings. Sharief said she's leaning toward running for the state Senate seat instead of a rematch with Democratic U.S. Rep. Sheila Cherfilus-McCormick and Dale Holness, who are running in the regularly scheduled contest for the seat in Florida's 20th Congressional District.

Will Lauren Book get primaried? Barbara Sharief is considering it.

"Orange County School Board member Johanna López announces HD 43 bid" via Ryan Nicol of Florida Politics — López says she's running for the newly redrawn Central Florida House District 43. López won the District 2 School Board seat in 2018 and is now looking to step up to the House. Her decision could put her against incumbent Rep. Daisy Morales, though it's not yet clear which seat Morales will run for later this year, given district boundaries have shifted due to redistricting. "Four years ago, I decided to run for the Orange County School Board because our youth needed a voice, someone who was not afraid to stand up for their well-being." López's team says she plans to seek the HD 43, regardless of Morales' decision.

"First month of fundraising for Emily Slosberg-King's open seat draws more than $100K" via Anne Geggis of Florida Politics — A Boca Raton Council member raised more than $70,000 in 20 days in his bid for Rep. Slosberg-

Commissioner Peggy Gossett-Seidman in February raised $6,300 in addition to the $30,000 loan she made her campaign. The Republican will be competing against Democrat Andy Thomson, an attorney who has won Slosberg-King's endorsement for the House District 91 seat. Slosberg, a three-term Democratic lawmaker, announced her departure from the House before hitting term limits. Slosberg-King is having her first child.

"Hunter Biden paid tax bill, but broad federal investigation continues" via Katie Benner, Kenneth P. Vogel and Michael S. Schmidt of The New York Times — In the year after he disclosed a federal investigation into his "tax affairs" in late 2020, Hunter Biden paid off a significant tax liability, even as a grand jury continued to gather evidence in a wide-ranging examination of his international business dealings, according to people familiar with the case. Biden's failure to pay all his taxes has been a focus of the ongoing Justice Department investigation. While wiping out his liability does not preclude criminal charges against him, the payment could make it harder for prosecutors to win a conviction or a long sentence for tax-related offenses, according to tax law experts, since juries and judges tend to be more sympathetic to defendants who have paid their bills.

"Joe Biden officials fear 'mass migration event' if COVID-19 policies end" via Jonathan Swan and Stef W. Kight of Axios — U.S. intelligence officials are privately bracing for a massive influx of more than 170,000 migrants at the Mexico border if COVID-19-era policies that allow instant expulsions during the public health emergency are ended. The response underway includes a newly created and previously unreported Southwest Border Coordination Center (SBCC), essentially a war room to coordinate an interagency response. Border officials have used Title 42 more than 1 million times to rapidly expel migrants at the southern border without hearing asylum claims. But the Trump-era order wasn't set up to be permanent, and senior Biden officials are preparing for its end as the virus is brought under control.

"Biden names public health expert Ashish Jha as coronavirus coordinator to succeed Jeff Zients" via Dan Diamond and John Wagner of The Washington Post — Zients, the management expert who has steered the Biden administration's pandemic response for more than a year, is leaving the job next month and will be replaced by Jha, dean of the Brown University School of Public Health and a practicing physician, Biden said in a statement Thursday. Zients's departure comes at a natural inflection point in the pandemic, with confirmed cases plunging from more than 700,000 per day at the mid-January peak of the omicron wave to about 33,000 per day now. Biden's selection of Jha, praised by administration officials and allies as a pragmatic communicator, also reflects the administration's belief that the pandemic is moving to a new stage where the United States must accept some level of coronavirus cases.

"Marco, Rick Scott continue to split on U.S. response to Ukraine crisis" via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — Scott is co-sponsoring a Senate resolution that would urge the transfer of planes and air defense systems to Ukraine, as he continues to strike the most aggressive posture in that theater out of the state's leading Republicans. However, fellow Republican Sen. Rubio is not on board, signaling a rare but significant split between leaders who align on most issues. Scott, who has urged a "no-fly" zone over the country, continues to demand more action from Washington to help the Ukrainian resistance, and this resolution is consistent with that push. Rubio did not sign on to this resolution and has cautioned against a "no-fly" zone, saying it would start "World War III." That position is consistent with the one held by the Biden administration.

"Byron Donalds, HBCU leaders address bomb threats at House Oversight hearing" via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — U.S. Rep. Donalds highlighted letters from Florida's historically Black universities Thursday, detailing threats those universities received amid bomb threats to HBCUs around the country. Donalds called for the House Oversight Committee to hold hearings following those prior threats. The committee followed through Thursday, allowing the Naples Republican to spotlight the letters from Florida HBCUs. "It is critical that effective oversight ensures that the federal government is not dropping the ball," Donalds said. An alum of Florida A&M University, Donalds has pressed from his position on the committee for aggressive investigation of threats. He actually attended the Tallahassee institution the same year a pipe bomb exploded on campus.

"Fewer Americans file for jobless claims last week" via Matt Ott of The Associated Press — Jobless claims fell by 15,000 to 214,000 for the week ending March 12, down from the previous week's 229,000, the Labor Department reported. First-time applications for jobless aid generally track the pace of layoffs. The four-week average for claims, which compensates for weekly volatility, fell to 223,000 from the previous week's 231,750. In total, 1,419,000 Americans, a 50-year low, were collecting jobless aid the week that ended March 5, down 71,000 from the week before that. Earlier this month, the government reported that employers added a robust 678,000 jobs in February, the largest monthly total since July. The unemployment rate dropped to 3.8%, from 4% in January, extending a sharp decline in joblessness to its lowest level since before the pandemic erupted two years ago.

"Jacksonville to debate, again, removal of Confederate monuments" via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — Jacksonville is poised to consider yet again removing Confederate monuments from public property. Matt Carlucci introduced a resolution Wednesday compelling a new plan for monument removal by July 26, capping the cost for monument removal at $500,000, with "alternative funding" sought to cover inevitable cost overage. Carlucci's "community conversation" on the process forward should be interesting given that legislation filed last year to remove the city's most prominent Confederate monument did not get traction. The Jacksonville City Council voted to withdraw a bill proposing to move a monument celebrating Confederate womanhood out of Springfield Park in November.

"Fernandina Beach Commissioners advised to tone it down after heated debates" via Wes Wolfe of Florida Politics — Passionate feelings about the future of playground equipment at Fernandina Beach's Central Park has led to acrimonious talk and pointed words, particularly in a February meeting of the City Commission and in the days afterward. Mayor Mike Lednovich attempted to bring the debate down to a collegial level at Tuesday night's meeting. "Our chamber lectern is affixed with a quote which reads, 'Kindness costs so little,'" Lednovich said. "I've been frustrated over the past two meetings, because we haven't done this. If I'm short with you, it's because we're not following protocol of when to speak, and sometimes we're not following protocol on how to speak. We're better than that."

"Fernandina Beach infrastructure projects kick into gear as weather warms" via Wes Wolfe of Florida Politics — Marinas fill and sometimes railroad crossings have to adjust. But for Fernandina Beach, infrastructure projects to address both issues will be underway as warm-weather tourism heats up around the port city's historic district. "The marina dredging will start their mobilizing this week and will start digging either the end of this week or beginning of next," City Engineer Charlie George said at the last meeting of the Fernandina Beach City Commissioners. The marina project is jointly funded by the city and the Florida Inland Navigation District (FIND), each contributing around $750,000 to the effort.

"Numbers show Amelia Island tourism bouncing back" via Wes Wolfe of Florida Politics — The first quarter numbers are in for Amelia Island tourism, and they show one of Florida's prime vacation destinations bouncing back from the economic drag of the COVID-19 pandemic. "All those taxable sales collections and bed tax collections were records for our performance in any given year," Amelia Island Convention and Visitors Bureau President Gil Langley said this week. Langley spoke to the Nassau County Board of County Commissioners regarding the period from October 2021-January 2022. For taxable sales, there were nearly $16 million in October, $13.4 million in November, $12.5 million in December and $9.3 million in January. That adds up to more than $51.3 million over the four months.

"Secret Service links Hot Yoga shooter to 'misogynistic extremism,' decades of warning signs" via Christopher Cann of the Tallahassee Democrat — Scott Beierle had a long trail of misogynist and criminal behavior that was missed by authorities before he walked into Hot Yoga in 2018 in Tallahassee, killing two people and injuring five, the U.S. Secret Service determined in a new report. There were plenty of red flags. He was arrested for groping women and trespassing at least three times; he was fired from multiple school districts for touching female students; his "inappropriate contact with female soldiers" led to his military discharge in 2010 and he was kicked out of his apartment after assaulting a woman at the complex's swimming pool.

"Tampa City Council confirms Mary O'Connor as Police Chief in split vote, but with caveats" via Daniel Figueroa of Florida Politics — The Tampa City Council held its long-awaited vote to confirm O'Connor as Chief of the Tampa Police Department (TPD) following more than a month of controversy and a PR campaign to win over a reluctant public. "The best police department in America will be even better under the leadership of Mary O'Connor," Mayor Jane Castor said. But it wasn't the unanimous decision the administration would've liked to see. Members voted 4-2 to confirm Castor's choice, but with caveats. All but one of the six Council members had concerns about a lack of transparency in the selection process or the Chief's checkered past. Council member Bill Carlson and Chair Orlando Gudes voted "no."

"Text messages reveal fuel behind John Dingfelder's resignation" via Evan Axelbank of Fox 13 Tampa — The text messages that led to the resignation of Tampa Councilmember Dingfelder include a who's-who of Tampa power players, including Council members, the heads of local organizations, citizen activists, and the head of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Fox 13 reviewed hundreds of pages of documents that show what led the city attorney to request further investigation into messages he sent and received. One of the accusations centers on the Super Bowl at Raymond James Stadium. Six days before the big game, Dingfelder messaged Bucs chief operating officer Brian Ford saying he was "disappointed" Council members weren't allowed to buy Super Bowl tickets at face value.

"With local lawmakers in charge, USF receives record state funding" via Romy Ellenbogen of the Tampa Bay Times — The University of South Florida has not always felt the warmth of state lawmakers' limelight. But Tampa Bay's 50,000-student university system is poised to see historic funding from the Legislature this year. The school is chalking that up to flush state coffers and the powerful support of two hometown leaders: House Speaker Chris Sprowls and Senate President Simpson. USF is slated to get $75 million from the state budget for a sleek new ocean science building on its St. Petersburg campus, along with millions of additional dollars for cybersecurity and nursing. It's also expecting a bump in recurring money for salaries and other operations. The Legislature has passed the budget, and it now goes to "Vladimir Putin says Russians living large in Miami are traitors to the motherland" via Michael Wilner and Ben Wieder of the Miami Herald — Russians living in Miami and the French Riviera "who cannot do without foie gras, oysters or so-called gender freedoms" are traitors to their homeland, Russian President Putin said, dismissing the effects of Western sanctions on Russian nationals with real estate assets overseas. U.S. and European sanctions have decimated the value of the Russian ruble since Putin ordered a brutal military invasion of Ukraine three weeks ago, sending the nation's economy into a tailspin. Western powers are betting "on national traitors, on those who earn money here, with us, but live there," Putin said, speaking with regional leaders on the economic fallout from the crisis.

"16 Cuban migrants, including children, arrive in the Keys. Latest in surge of landings" via David Goodhue of the Miami Herald — A group of 16 Cuban migrants, including two children, arrived in the Lower Florida Keys Thursday morning. Adults accompanied the children, Agent Adam Hoffner, Miami division chief of U.S. Customs and Border Protection, said in an email. The group arrived on Summerland Key, about 17 miles north of Key West, in a small commercial fishing vessel called the Anna Celia, Hoffner said. Thursday's landing came two days after the Coast Guard returned 21 Cubans who the agency stopped at sea about 46 miles south of Key West on Friday. Both incidents are part of an ongoing surge in maritime migration to South Florida and the Keys, including Haitians fleeing their homeland.

"Masks optional for students, staff at schools run by the Archdiocese of Miami" via Michelle Marchante of the Miami Herald — Masks are now optional for all students, teachers and staff at Catholic schools run by the Archdiocese of Miami, regardless of their vaccination status, with a few exceptions. "The only exceptions are for those within 10 days of a close contact with someone who tests positive for COVID-19, or within the 10-day period following a positive COVID diagnosis," the Archdiocese said in a Wednesday night news release. Parents were notified via email Monday afternoon. According to the updated policy, parents and other visitors will still be required to wear a mask inside schools run by the Archdiocese of Miami, including at indoor athletic events. Regardless of their vaccination status, all students will also have to mask up while riding the bus and whenever they're indoors on off-site field trips.

Audit finds several school safety violations in Broward — A recent state audit found several school safety violations in Broward County schools, Andrew Atterbury of POLITICO Florida reports. The audit dings the school district for not informing the Florida Department of Education about at least two incidents where a school safety officer was disciplined or dismissed. One incident involved a sheriff's deputy soliciting a minor. The other involved an officer discharging his gun "near" the school he was assigned to protect. The audit also found that the county had not ensured that school safety officers had completed legally required mental health crisis intervention training.

"America is Zooming through the pandemic panic-neglect cycle" via Ed Yong of The Atlantic — All epidemics trigger the same dispiriting cycle. First, panic: As new pathogens emerge, governments throw money, resources, and attention at the threat. Then, neglect: Once the danger dwindles, budgets shrink, and memories fade. The world ends up where it started. This Sisyphean sequence occurred in the United States after HIV, anthrax, SARS, Ebola, and Zika. Even so, it's not meant to happen this quickly. When I first wrote about the panic-neglect cycle five years ago, I assumed that it would operate on a time scale of years and that neglect would set in only after the crisis was over. The coronavirus pandemic has destroyed both assumptions. Neglect has set in within mere months, often before the panic part has been over. The U.S. funds pandemic preparedness "like Minnesota snow," said Michael Osterholm, an epidemiologist. "There's a lot in "Session overtime was dumb but necessary" via Bill Cotterell of the Tallahassee Democrat — Everybody watches Tuesday of the Session's final week, hoping a deal gets made so the budget can be delivered to members in time for final passage on Friday — followed by the handkerchief-dropping and on-time adjournment. If they don't make the deadline, they must extend the 60-day Session to get it done. Sometimes they'll include a couple of other important bills in the extension, and budget timing can be as precise as the launch window of a space shot. But it doesn't cost a lot in travel and per diem. Rushing compromises to avoid going past 60 days in Session would probably cost a lot more. And the three-day formality is a harmless anachronism that adds to the appearance of open government.

"Legislative Session a turning point toward despotism" via Sen. Tina Polsky for the South Florida Sun-Sentinel — Our Governor and his acolytes have labeled, or should I say, mislabeled, Florida as "the freedom state." Let me be clear. If he continues to have his way, Florida will only be "free" for the people who think and look exactly like him. Freedom to vote freely and by means that are safe and secure? No, no, and no. And believe it or not, DeSantis even created a new police force to oversee our elections, even though audit after audit has already shown Florida elections to be safe and secure. But of course, with his election police, he now wields a weapon he can use to intimidate, threaten, and cajole voters. Even businesses are being told how they must think and act, and if they stray from the Governor's thought police and dare to encourage equality and respect of people in their employ regardless of their gender, sexual preference, or gender identity, they too can be sued.

"Lawmakers were lost in the Twilight Zone and ignored our real-life challenges" via the Miami Herald editorial board — In Florida, conversations about race and sexuality are more dangerous than aging buildings in the aftermath of the Surfside condo collapse. School books need more scrutiny than rising property insurance premiums. Lies about widespread election fraud are more urgently addressed than real sky-high housing and renting costs. The Capitol has become a temple of made-up crises that the Legislature was happy to fix in the Legislative Session that ended Monday. There was no shortage of red meat DeSantis could feed his supporters in his culture wars. State Republican leaders may have won this Session's culture wars, but in real-life Florida, too many residents were civilian casualties.

"Books became another front line in Florida's culture wars" via the Miami Herald editorial board — The 2022

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Legislative Session was all about waging cultural wars in the name of “transparency” and parental involvement in public education. But we see right through them. One of the latest iterations is HB 1467, approved on the second-to-last day of Session. It would make it easier for parents — and, we suspect, political groups whose members might not have children in a local public school — to challenge and ban instructional material and library books from public schools. Conservatives know better than to outright ban books. Their strategy is more insidious. It won’t empty the shelves of school libraries overnight, but it will open the door to fear, self-censorship by school administrators and for activists to make the lives of school districts harder.

“Marco Rubio is right: Stop shifting those clocks” via the Orlando Sentinel editorial board — In a vote so sudden that some Senators said they didn’t realize it was taking place, the Senate approved Rubio’s proposal to end the annual spring-forward-fall-back rigmarole most Americans have grown heartily sick of. Rubio’s plan, dubbed the Sunshine Protection Act, is not perfect. It would set the nation to perpetual daylight saving time — with the sun rising, and setting, later than the times typically associated with dawn and dusk. Science, however, firmly favors a move in the other direction. There is one consistent thing about the research supporting either year-round option, however: The biggest problems come from wrenching perceived time back and forth twice a year.

EMAIL RECEIVED FROM EXTERNAL SOURCE

House Speaker Chris Sprowls wrapped his final Legislative Session — Regular Session, at least — in the House this week.

The Palm Harbor Republican held the gavel for a tumultuous two years, though the pandemic didn't define his term. Despite the headwinds it presented, he worked in concert with his Senate counterpart to usher several substantial pieces of legislation into law and pass successive record-breaking budgets.

He managed to get quite a few of his own priorities across the finish line as well, with many of them, such as his book delivery program and extension of Medicaid for new mothers, being met with bipartisan praise.

As the sun sets on his time in the Legislature, he sat down with Florida Politics to reflect on his tenure.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Chris Sprowls reflects on a consequential tenure.

Florida Politics: What are you most proud of over these last two years?

Speaker Sprowls: I'm proud that we have no regrets and that we started and finished with a bold vision and outcomes for Florida, whether that was in having the most significant expansion of school choice, protecting our environment, or making sure that the kids were struggling without a dad had a path to make their dad engage in real life. I'm proud that we fought boldly and got to leave this Session in the Florida House with nothing left behind.

Florida Politics: What did you learn most about yourself during your time as Speaker?

Sprowls: I think I learned that having a good team is what makes you truly successful and also making sure that you're putting the right people in the right positions, that you're lifting them up and that you're supporting them and you have their back all the time. That is the way that you're going to maximize the benefit to the entire organization, in this case, the Florida House. We've had this amazing leadership team and group of members, a lot of freshmen members that we lifted up early and gave really, really big bills to and they just rose to the occasion. And I think that it's because of that we're going to leave the House stronger than we found it.

Florida Politics: If your time serving Speaker was a memoir, what would the title be and why?

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Sprowls: "Left It All on the Field," because we have no regrets and did everything we came here to do. Whether it's the designation speech or opening day speeches, all the stuff that we laid out before, we did it.

Florida Politics: What would you say to those who say this last year was a cultural war session?

Sprowls: I'd say they weren't paying attention and they spent too much time on Twitter. Because the reality is, there were so many great things that happened for Florida — most robust sales tax breaks for everyday Floridians, including diapers, books and baby clothes; historic per-student funding; and more. For example, they may say culture wars is protecting human life, and I disagree; I think that that's an admirable thing. I'm proud of it. I'm proud to tell people that we did it. And you know what? Twitter can say what they want about us, but the reality is that we are leaving Florida better than we found it; we did really bold things, and we truly believe in what we voted on.

Allbritton earned 56% of the vote, with 90% precincts reporting. Opponent Maranda Douglas trailed the incumbent, taking 35% of the vote. Candidate Gerry Lee, a retired data manager, received the fewest votes at 8%. Born and raised in Clearwater, Allbritton returned after attending North Carolina Wesleyan College. Allbritton is a contractor and served on the National Association of the Remodeling Industry board. Douglas is a community activist and local business owner. Teixeira received just shy of 44% of the vote. Smith-Levin, who was considered a top contender with Teixeira, got about 36%. Rounding out the slate was the Rev. Jonathan Wade, a local pastor. He cleared just over 20%. Teixeira and Smith-Levin were considered front-runners in one of Clearwater's most dramatic races in recent years. Smith-Levin is a former Church of Scientology member who has made a name for himself, crusading against the Church and its influence in the city. But he has also made a name for himself with a few intoxicated incidents with law enforcement over the last two years.

"Dan Saracki snags Oldsmar mayoral seat from incumbent, Jarrod Buchman elected to council seat" via Kelly Hayes of Florida Politics — Oldsmar Mayor Eric Seidel lost re-election Tuesday evening to Oldsmar City Council member Saracki. Saracki collected 53% of the vote, while Seidel mustered 47%, with 100% precincts reporting. Saracki has served on the Oldsmar City Council for seven years, running his campaign on the promise to "spend taxpayer's dollars on programs that directly benefit Oldsmar citizens," according to his campaign site. Seidel served two stints on City Council — one from 2007-2009 and again from 2015-2019 — and was previously elected Mayor in 2019. "Costa Vatikiotis elected Tarpon Springs Mayor as the City Commission gets three new faces" via Daniel Figueroa IV of Florida Politics — City Commissioner Vatikiotis will replace the outgoing Mayor Chris Alahouzos in the North Pinellas city of Tarpon Springs. Vatikiotis cleared 56% of the vote. His challenger, Robin Saenger, got almost 44%. A Tarpon Springs native, Vatikiotis served as a city engineer and was City Manager before being elected to the City Commission in 2020. But the 73-year-old quickly set his sights on the Mayor's office. Alahouzos is leaving City Hall because of term limits. If Vatikiotis had waited out his Commission term to run for Mayor, he'd be 75 and facing an uphill battle against an incumbent. One of Vatikiotis' main concerns is over development. Pinellas County is Florida's most built-out, and Tarpon is one of the most built-out cities in the county at 90%.

But Blackburn's influence seems to have grown. She nearly tripled the margin this time around, beating Kapper by 13 votes, 120-107. Blackburn Heading south along Pinellas County's Gulf Coast, District 1 was also the sole race in St. Pete Beach. Chris Gaus won another term by a wider margin than his Redington Shores counterpart. The proposal (SB 1048) replaces the annual standardized testing with a computer-based progress monitoring screening. The progress monitoring, spaced three times a year, will begin in the 2022-23 school year for pre-kindergarten through 10th grade students. Speaking at St. Petersburg Collegiate High School, an "A"-rated Pinellas County public charter high school of choice every year since it opened in 2004, the Governor on Tuesday told reporters he was there not to praise the FSA, but to bury it. "Next year, Florida will become the first state in the nation to do a full transition to progress monitoring to inform school accountability," DeSantis said.

"DeSantis takes aim at Fair Districts amendments" via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — DeSantis is not limiting his redistricting disdain to a few proposed maps. DeSantis made clear he wants Florida's Fair Districts amendment thrown out in court. DeSantis has said for weeks he intends to veto congressional maps approved by the Legislature. Up until now, all arguments coming from his office centered on a single congressional district in North Florida. But in his most detailed public remarks on the issue, DeSantis on Tuesday laid out a legal argument that two 12-year-old Florida constitutional amendments stand in conflict with the U.S. Constitution. "I think our dispute very well may lead to saying that Florida's redistricting amendments are not consistent with the 14th Amendment's equal protection clause," DeSantis said.

"DeSantis laments Legislature stopping short on school board term limits" via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — DeSantis offered a qualified endorsement Tuesday of legislation (CS/HB 1467) imposing term limits on school board members statewide but said it didn't go far enough. "I'm a big believer in term limits," DeSantis said. "I think it should be eight years, two terms. They did three terms, which, you know, it's fine and I wouldn't veto the bill just over that. But if it were a stand-alone measure, I would have insisted on just two terms for school board members because I think that's enough time to go, serve, get stuff done." Eight years are enough for the Governor, he reiterated, saying the House measure was a model of doing it right.

"Legislature leaves without addressing property insurance crisis" via Lawrence Mower of the Tampa Bay Times — Florida homeowners will probably have to continue riding out a turbulent property insurance market on their own for the next year after state lawmakers ended their yearly legislative Session without enacting any reforms. House and Senate leaders couldn't agree during the roughly 60-day Session on a solution to relieve homeowners of double-digit rate increases, so they passed nothing. "Bottom line: homeowners lost, and that's what troubles me," said Sen. Jim Boyd, who sponsored the main property insurance reform bill in the Senate. Short of calling lawmakers back to Tallahassee for a Special Session to address the problem, which some Senators said was a possibility, homeowners can expect no new relief to their bills in 2022.

"Homeowners insurance: Legislature fails to pass major reform bills. This comes at a time when homeowners and insurance companies alike are desperately seeking remedy, as property insurance premiums are up nearly 25% in the last year and businesses report billions in underwriting losses. What do industry professionals predict will happen now? "Lawmakers OK payments to parents of children who died of brain injuries" via Carol Marbin Miller and Daniel Chang of the Miami Herald — In a Legislative Session highlighted by culture war battles and redistricting, Florida lawmakers made time to give a measure of mercy to a group of parents whose children died of catastrophic birth-related brain injuries. Following up on action taken last year, the Legislature voted to give $150,000 stipends to parents whose children were once enrolled in a state program called the Birth-Related Neurological Injury Compensation Association (NICA) but had been dropped from the rolls when the children succumbed to their birth injuries. Families of surviving NICA children received identical stipends last year as part of a comprehensive slate of reforms, but the families of children who died were left out, despite sometimes spending themselves in poverty trying to keep their children alive.

"Shark tracking, road expansions, nature trails: What local projects are in the state budget?" via David Bauerlein of The Florida Times-Union — The vision of creating an Ocearch center in Mayport reeled in $7 million in state money in the budget approved Monday as lawmakers cast their support behind building a Florida-based home for the nonprofit that tracks sharks up and down the East Coast. Whether the Ocearch headquarters ends up landing the money or suffers a veto will depend on DeSantis and his assessment of the budget on a line-by-line basis. "Miracle of miracles, politics being what it is right now, it managed to get traction," said Quinton White, executive director of the Marine Science Research

"Manny Diaz ends Session with wins on education, health care bills" via Ryan Nicol of Florida Politics — With the hankie dropping Monday, Sen. Diaz will walk away from the 2022 Legislative Session successful on several major pieces of legislation key to the GOP's agenda this year. As has been true for much of his time in the Legislature, Diaz's focus this Session was once again on education. Diaz backed two major bills that earned bipartisan support. One measure (SB 1048) replaced Florida's annual standardized testing structure with a new progress monitoring program. Students will be given three tests throughout the school year. The first two will aim to gauge their learning progress. The third and final test will still be given early enough for students to utilize summer school if necessary to meet state standards.

Manny Diaz scored big wins in 2022.

"Matt Willhite scores with legislation for veterans, police, patients and hurricane safety" via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — For Democratic Rep. Willhite, the end of the 2022 Legislative Session marked another successful period of bipartisan lawmaking in which he saw through several key items. This Session was also his last, for now, as he has set his sights on winning a Palm Beach County Commission seat in November, a move that will let him spend more time with his family. Willhite, an active-duty firefighter, had his two teenage sons join him in Tallahassee for the end of Session. Their presence, he said, reinforced his desire to spend more time with them, his wife, and their two dogs.

"Tyler Sirois celebrates his best Session yet" via Peter Schorsch of Florida Politics — Rep. Sirois' fourth Legislative Session was possibly his best yet. The 2022 Legislative Session saw the Merritt Island Republican snag his first chair, and it was a consequential one. He was picked to lead the Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee in part because House leadership recognized his levelheaded and collaborative approach to managing complex issues. Their assessment and the need for those character traits proved accurate. The process for drawing new congressional maps in a reddish-purple state is about as complex as it gets, especially considering the outcome of the 2012 redistricting Session.

"Why DeSantis's new abortion restrictions will be felt far beyond Florida" via Annie Geng of The National Review — On its busier days, the volunteer-run Tampa Bay Abortion Fund receives up to 15 calls requesting support. Callers might seek money for abortions or need assistance traveling to a clinic — whatever the ask, the fund shoulders it. But the picture of abortion access will soon grow complicated in Florida with a 15-week ban, the state's most restrictive yet. "We were hoping that Florida could be a haven for the South," Kelly Nelson, founder of the Tampa Bay Abortion Fund, said. Florida also has the right to privacy baked into its state constitution, which would have worked in favor of abortion rights

"Orange County students' education must remain inclusive" via Judi Hayes for the Orlando Sentinel — The Republican-led Florida Legislature and DeSantis have strong-armed several dangerous pieces of legislation this Session geared toward dismantling public education under the guise of "parental rights," but what of the rights of students to a robust, inclusive public education that's accessible to all? It's in the public's interest to educate all children appropriately and fulsomely, otherwise we're doomed to repeat the cyclical horrors on display today, where uneducated citizens purposefully eschew knowledge and progress at the behest of autocrats to enable those autocrats to stay in power. Last week, the College Board, which administers AP tests and the SAT, warned that states enacting laws that constrain teaching history or literature accurately would imperil their students' access to AP classes.

"Nassau County scores on roads, American Beach sewer funding" via Wes Wolfe of Florida Politics — Efforts were victorious to secure state budget funding to begin the process of expanding the bridge connecting mainland Nassau County to Amelia Island, with $1 million set aside for the project. Sen. Aaron Bean and Rep. Cord Byrd asked for $1.2 million originally. There are too many jobs and not enough affordable places to live on Amelia Island for its many workers, so the Shave Bridge is infamous for its daily bottlenecks. Nassau County Commissioner Jeff Gray remarked during a November discussion on budget requests that morning rush hour gridlock stretches as far as 4 miles west from the bridge.

"Florida Sheriffs notch victories in officer recruitment, juvenile justice" via Peter Schorsch of Florida Politics — As Florida's Sheriffs gathered for their Legislative Summit in August 2021, there was continuous discussion surrounding two major priorities: hiring and retaining the nation's best law enforcement officers and strengthening laws to protect Florida youths. Sheriffs have continuously shown a united front whose advocacy is critical to keep Floridians and visitors safe. Following a Legislative Session where the House and Senate worked to make Florida the best state in the country for law enforcement, sheriffs were a significant benefactor. Florida struggles to fill sworn and non-sworn positions, especially in fiscally constrained areas. The passage of HB 3 will provide much-needed support, including bonuses for recruitment and retention of deputies.

"Florida Chamber racks up wins in the 2022 Legislative Session" via Drew Wilson of Florida Politics — The 2022 Legislative Session has wrapped, and the Florida Chamber of Commerce has a slew of wins to celebrate. One of the Florida Chamber's most significant victories this year was a repeat of their 2021 win on COVID-19 liability protections. The current law that shields businesses and health care providers from COVID-19-related lawsuits was one of the first measures passed by the Legislature during the 2021 Session. But the shield protecting health care providers were set to expire this year. However, lawmakers last month approved a bill (SB 7014) sponsored by Sen. Danny Burgess that extends the protections through June 1, 2023. The Governor has since signed it.

The Florida Chamber notched solid wins in 2022.

The walkouts are planned for March 15-21 during a 15-minute break period and set to occur daily from 3 p.m. to 3:15 p.m. On March 22, organizers have planned a "full-scale walkout." It's unclear just how many Disney employees will participate in the protest, but as a note to employees who planned to participate, organizers explained that "You are protected to act while on break for the daily break walkouts, but the full-scale walkout … is not a legally protected action. "'Robust storms' headed to South Florida, and that could mean tornadoes. Here's a timeline" via Howard Cohen of the Miami Herald — "Robust storms" are expected in South Florida Tuesday and Wednesday, the National Weather Service in Miami warns. Blame it on a developing Gulf cyclone to the north heading toward South Florida, meteorologists with National Weather Service say. But unlike last weekend's bomb cyclone that brought a sudden drop in temperatures from a record high 90 on Saturday afternoon to the upper 50s Saturday night and Sunday morning, the Gulf cyclone is not bringing particularly cool air to the region. Temperatures will be in a narrow range of about 80 to 82 as a high to mid-70s as a low through the week into Saturday. The strong thunderstorm potential continues Wednesday afternoon, forecasters say.

"Tornado damage estimates up to $15.6M; county questions National Weather Service performance" via Jim Ross of the Ocala Star-Banner — The damage estimate from Saturday morning's tornado has climbed to $15.6 million, the Marion County Commission was told during its Tuesday morning meeting. That dollar amount includes real estate damage, personal property loss and the cost of debris removal, Emergency Management Director Preston Bowlin said. "This number will increase," he noted. The original figure issued Sunday was estimated at $12.3 million. Bowlin wasn't on the agenda for Tuesday's commission meeting, but he clearly was the center of attention. The storm was 65 yards wide and caused severe property damage — but no injuries or death. "We were very, very lucky and very, very blessed," Commissioner Kathy Bryant said.

The group behind the effort appealed the district's decision. Superintendent David Moore referred to the process and decision to keep most of the books in school libraries as "legally sound" after parents criticized the language used in the books. "DeSantis vs. Disney is the strongest signal yet he plans to run in 2024 — regardless of what Donald Trump does" via Philip Klein of the National Review — There's been a lot of speculation about DeSantis' 2024 ambitions. For a long time, many people assumed that he would definitely run if Trump decided not to, but that he would be unwilling to risk the damage that a bitter primary against Trump would do to his long-term political ambitions. However, DeSantis's public feud with Disney is the strongest signal yet that he plans to run for President, regardless of what happens with Trump. Going to war against Disney is not something he'd likely do so gleefully if he were planning to spend the next five years as Governor of Florida.

"Nikki Fried laments GOP-driven culture war in Legislative Session" via Jason Delgado of Florida Politics — Fried decried the 2022 Legislative Session on Tuesday, accusing Florida Republicans of waging a politically-motivated culture war while ignoring the needs of Florida and its residents. A Democratic gubernatorial contender, Fried lambasted the Republican-driven Session as a disservice to Floridians and issued an apology on their behalf to voters. Those voters, she contended, deserved legislation addressing "pressing issues" such as health care, affordable housing and skyrocketing property insurances rates, among others. Chambers, who works on the Tampa Electric Security and Emergency Management Team, said in a statement that he is running to combat "uncontrolled inflation, skyrocketing gas prices and a complete lack of affordable housing." "Like many of you, I don't come from a political family or hold a political pedigree, but I've served this country my entire adult life. "What China's COVID-19 uptick means for cars, iPhones and other things you buy" via Keith Bradsher of The New York Times — As Chinese officials scramble to contain the country's worst outbreak of COVID-19 since early 2020, they are imposing lockdowns and restrictions that are adding chaos to global supply chains. The measures in China, home to about one-third of global manufacturing, are disrupting the production of finished goods like Toyota and Volkswagen cars and Apple's iPhones and components such as circuit boards and computer cables. Case numbers are small compared with many other large countries, but China has taken a zero-tolerance approach to outbreaks. "Airlines say fliers are flocking back, despite higher ticket prices" via Alison Sider of The Wall Street Journal — After omicron slowed travel bookings at the start of 2022, airline executives said demand has rebounded more quickly than they anticipated. As a result, carriers said they expect to be able to absorb higher jet fuel costs by paring back flying capacity and passing the costs along to customers. To cover fuel price increases, airlines typically try to boost fares and cut less profitable flying, which results in fewer flights and in turn, higher prices for travelers. Some industry analysts have questioned whether those moves will work this time around, with price-sensitive leisure travelers accounting for the lion's share of fliers now. But airline executives said Tuesday that travelers are willing to pay higher fares, allowing carriers to raise them without undermining demand.

"Omicron BA.2 sub-variant now nearly a quarter of new COVID-19 cases in U.S., CDC estimates" via Alexander Tin of CBS News — The BA.2 sub-lineage of the Omicron variant now makes up nearly a quarter of new COVID-19 infections nationwide, the CDC estimated Tuesday, up from around 1 in 10 new cases just a week prior. BA.2's prevalence is the highest in the Northeast, according to the CDC's "Nowcast" estimates published Tuesday. In the region spanning New York and New Jersey, the agency estimates 39.0% of circulating viruses are BA.2. In New England, prevalence of BA.2 is at 38.6%. The new estimates come as the sub-lineage has raised concerns abroad, where it has grown to dominate cases reported worldwide — including in countries that are now facing a renewed surge of infections just as they had moved to lift many of their pandemic restrictions.

Health officials said the country's medical response remains stable following efforts to expand resources, with more than 30% of intensive care units designated for COVID-19 treatment still available. Republicans choosing “neither” (from 46% to 63%).

“Biden to withdraw nomination for Fed’s top bank cop” via Jeanna Smialek and Emily Cochrane of The New York Times — Biden will withdraw his nomination of Sarah Bloom Raskin to serve as the Federal Reserve’s top bank regulator on Tuesday, after a Democratic Senator said he would join Republicans in voting against her, most likely dooming her chances of confirmation. Raskin earlier on Tuesday sent a letter to the White House asking to withdraw her name from consideration to be the Fed’s vice chair for supervision, according to two people familiar with the decision. “Sarah was subject to baseless attacks from industry and conservative interest groups,” Biden said in a Tuesday statement. While the end of Raskin’s candidacy will leave the administration without the regulatory voice it was hoping for, it could pave the way toward confirmation for the White House’s other Fed picks.

“Half of Americans doubt Joe Biden will run in 2024, WSJ poll shows” via Ken Thomas and Catherine Lucey of The Wall Street Journal — A new Wall Street Journal poll found that 52% of Americans don’t think Biden will run for re-election in two years, while 29% do expect him to pursue a second term. Nineteen percent are undecided about his future. Biden and the White House have said he intends to run for re-election. People close to the President have suggested he will make a final decision after November’s midterm elections. But interviews conducted in recent weeks with dozens of voters, activists and local officials in the nation’s top battleground states, along with poll respondents, found a degree of ambivalence and uncertainty over whether Biden, who is 79 years old, should seek another term.

“Mike Pence could testify explosively to Trump’s Jan. 6 corruption. Will he?” via Paul Waldman and Greg Sargent of The Washington Post — As the House select committee examining the Jan. 6, 2021 attack on the U.S. Capitol gains steam, one of the strangest arguments floated in Trump’s defense has been this one: Whatever Trump might have done, he truly believed the election was stolen from him, and was merely using available processes to try to set things right. But new evidence undercuts this idea. The key revelation here is that Pence’s counsel Greg Jacob’s testimony to the committee suggests John Eastman may have fully understood he was pushing Pence to do something wildly corrupt. And Eastman was seemingly operating on Trump’s behalf, as Trump and Eastman collaborated to pressure Pence.

"Senate unanimously approves making daylight saving time permanent" via Alexander Bolton of The Hill — The Senate on Tuesday approved a proposal to make daylight saving time permanent, which if passed in the House and signed by Biden, would mean Americans would never again have to set their clocks back an hour and lose an hour of afternoon daylight in the fall and winter. If enacted into law, it would also mean that early risers lose an hour of daylight in the mornings in November, December, January and February. In New York, for example, under current law the sun will rise at 7:15 a.m. on Dec. 21, the shortest day of the year. If the Sunshine Protection Act becomes law, New Yorkers won't see the sunrise until 8:15 a.m. that day.

"Document in Jan. 6 case shows plan to storm government buildings" via Alan Feuer of The New York Times — The document, titled "1776 Returns," was cited by prosecutors last week in charging the far-right leader, Enrique Tarrio, the former head of the Proud Boys extremist group, with conspiracy. The indictment of Tarrio described the document in general terms, but the people familiar with it added substantial new details about the scope and complexity of the plan it set out for directing an effort to occupy six House and Senate office buildings and the Supreme Court last Jan. 6. The document does not specifically mention an attack on the Capitol building itself. But in targeting high-profile government buildings in the immediate area and in the detailed timeline it set out, the plan closely resembles what actually unfolded.

"Proud Boys leader charged in Jan. 6 plot jailed until trial" via Adriana Gomez Licon of the Orlando Sentinel — A leader in the far-right Proud Boys extremist group will remain jailed until his trial on charges that he remotely led a plot to stop Congress' certification of Biden's 2020 presidential victory. In a Miami courtroom Tuesday, U.S. Magistrate Judge Lauren F. Louis cited the danger that prosecutors say Tarrio poses to the community. The judge said her decision would be explained in detail later in a written order. Though he wasn't at the Capitol with other members of the Proud Boys during the violent insurrection on Jan. 6, 2021, prosecutors say Tarrio created the leadership structure, organized the group of men and directed them to the Capitol.

Proud boy: Enrique Tarrio is not being released anytime soon.

"Fearing political violence in 2024, judges sentence Jan. 6 defendants to probation through the next election" via Spencer S. Hsu and Tom Jackman of The Washington Post — U.S. judges including those appointed by Republican presidents are increasingly sentencing defendants who participated in the Jan. 6 breach of the Capitol to three-year terms of court supervision, fearing they could be misled into committing political violence in the 2024 presidential election. Judges have also raised concerns about elected officials who continue to play down the violence of the attack. "Many politicians are writing a false narrative about what happened. I think they are misleading people. … I am terribly afraid that people are going to follow that false narrative," U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan said in sentencing a 25-year-old Utah man to three years' supervision this year.

"North Carolina man told FBI that Antifa lured him into the Capitol on Jan. 6. A judge didn't buy it" via Michael

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Gordon of The Charlotte Observer — A federal judge in Washington sentenced North Carolina truck driver James "Les" Little to jail and long probation on Monday — not only for his role in the Jan. 6, 2021, assault on the U.S. Capitol but to keep the Catawba County man from joining "another riot" after the next presidential election. Little will spend 60 days in custody and serve three years of supervised release after pleading guilty in November to a misdemeanor charge of parading, demonstrating or picketing in a Capitol building. Little said the defeated President's supporters had been lured into the Capitol by members of Antifa waving Trump flags, according to a recording of a Jan. 13, 2021, interview played in court. He blamed police for escalating the violence with tear gas and rubber bullets.

"Conservative and far-right speakers to headline third Patriot Fest this weekend in Naples" via Kate Cimini of the Naples Daily News — Nearly two dozen local and national far-right and conservative speakers will take the stage this weekend at Naples' third Patriot Fest, including U.S. Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene, singer Ted Nugent and former entertainment lawyer-turned-conservative commentator Rogan O'Handley, also known as DC Draino on Instagram. Speakers will cover topics such as school boards, how race is addressed in schools, DeSantis and Florida politics, said Brendon Leslie, organizer of the event and founder and editor-in-chief of the far-right news site Florida's Conservative Voice. Leslie said he hopes Patriot Fest will "bring positivity back to politics, bring the message directly to the people and promote America (first) policies."

Epilogue: Trump

"Eric Trump thinks he knows why Putin didn't invade Ukraine while his dad was President" via Chris Cillizza of CNN — Much has been made by Trump and his allies that Putin didn't invade Ukraine until the Republican had left office. Now, Eric Trump — the second-eldest son of the former President — thinks he knows why that is. "Putin was in with KGB," he told Fox's Sean Hannity. "He can read people and he could tell that Donald Trump was a very strong person." First off, Eric's comment — almost certainly unintentionally — echoes what George W. Bush once said about Putin. "I looked the man in the eye. I found him to be very straightforward and trustworthy," said Bush of Putin following a summit in Slovenia in June 2001. Eric Trump's insistence that, somehow, Putin made a psychological assessment of his father, and that's why he didn't invade Ukraine, is also ripe for mockery.

"John Bolton's crusade to debunk Donald Trump's revisionist history on Russia and Ukraine" via Aaron Blake of The Washington Post — When Trump hasn't been praising Putin's strategic savvy in invading Ukraine, he's generally fallen back on one big talking point: that this wouldn't have happened if he were still in charge. And yet all along, one of his top former foreign policy aides has sought to make sure this claim doesn't go unchallenged. Bolton has now said repeatedly that this simply isn't how it went down. And he's made quite the opposite case: that Putin didn't do stuff like this during Trump's presidency because Trump was already doing the work for him — specifically, by undermining NATO. And it's a case that tracks with plenty of what we already knew, even as few Trump allies-turned-critics have seen fit to weigh in publicly of late.

"Trump denies his private 757 jet 'mothballed,' says it will be back in service in 90 days" via Antonio Fins of the Palm Beach Post — So, just what is the status of the Boeing 757 dubbed "Trump Force One?" Former President Trump on Saturday said that reports that his private 757 aircraft was "mothballed" at a New York state airfield were "fake news." Trump said the plane was undergoing "a major scheduled maintenance program, which will be completed in approximately 90 days." But photos of the decayed Boeing 757, which sports a red, white and blue design with Trump emblazoned atop the fuselage, had circulated online since the former commander in chief left the White House in January 2021. The absence of the aircraft became even more glaring as Trump began rallies last year where he teased a "LCSO says 'no foul play' after inmate's death; at least fourth death since August tied to jail" via Christopher Cann of the Tallahassee Democrat — The Leon County Sheriff's Office began investigating the death of an inmate Friday after he died in a local hospital. James Reed was brought to the hospital on March 3 after "officers found him unresponsive in his cell." "No foul play is suspected." The Sheriff's Office's Violent Crimes Unit is heading the investigation "as standard procedure for any death that occurs while in custody," wrote spokesperson Angela Green. An autopsy is pending, she added. "The death of any Leon County citizen is unfortunate, and our thoughts and prayers go out to the family of Mr. Reed," Green wrote in a statement.

"Nassau's County Attorney resigns after State Attorney's Office findings that he 'committed criminal acts'" via Dan Scanlan of The Florida Times-Union — Nassau County Attorney Michael Mullin has agreed to officially resign after a State Attorney's Office investigation strongly suggests he "committed criminal acts" by deleting text messages sought by a developer in a long-running battle over the Wildlight residential development. Wildlight is part of the 23,600-acre East Nassau Stewardship District under development by Rayonier, and Mullin represented the developer as a private-

"Amelia Island tax dollars slated for off-island tourism" via Wes Wolfe of Florida Politics — To justify paying a consulting firm more than $210,000 to layout Nassau County's tourism strategy, county staff noted three big numbers, tourists provide more than one-third of the county's sales tax revenue, support around 25% of county jobs and are responsible for more than $850 million in economic impact. County commissioners unanimously approved awarding Jones Lang LaSalle an estimated $214,500 contract Monday night, without discussion. The idea is to "develop a countywide tourism strategic plan and evolve the tourism market by creating a strategic road map to tourism sustainability both on and off-island." The Amelia Island Tourism Development Council (TDC) previously approved a resolution stating the same.

"Marianna adults with autism program to launch at former Dozier School for Boys site" via Tristan Wood of Florida Politics — A program to help teach adults with autism has started in Marianna. Its future home is on the site of one of the city's most infamous locations. NextStep at Endeavor Academy, a program helping adults with autism develop employment and independent living skills, launched its 12-week pilot program out of Chipola College in late January. The program's future home is Endeavor Park, a mixed-use development currently being renovated at the former site of the infamous Dozier School for Boys. Currently, the program's future site is still being renovated, said NextStep Program

"The cemetery deal that helped bury John Dingfelder's future on the Tampa City Council" via Daniel Figueroa of Florida Politics — A move to rezone portions of a Tampa cemetery dedicated to carnival and circus workers played a role in killing the City Council career of Dingfelder, according to documents from the City of Tampa. On Monday, Dingfelder delivered his resignation as part of a settlement agreement between him and development consultant Stephen Michelini over a public records lawsuit. Last month, Michelini, through his attorney Ethan Loeb, submitted an ethics complaint against Dingfelder to the city's legal team. Dingfelder was sent a list of 18 potential ethics violations between February and September 2021. The majority of them related to the Showman's Rest Cemetery.

"10 green iguanas live behind the SPCA Tampa Bay, suspended in time" via Stephanie Hayes of the Tampa Bay Times — The iguanas lazed resplendent on a sunny afternoon, luxuriating in a haze of mist. They wound curvy claws through the enclosure grate and bobbed their heads to talk fanning flappy dewlaps. File this one under: Did you know? Many visitors to the SPCA Tampa Bay don't know an odd little iguana sanctum is tucked out back in the vicinity of a goat and a pig. Most would-be pet parents come to see adoptable dogs and cats inside. Indeed, 10 green iguanas lurk magnificently in Largo. The reptiles are bulky and spiny, some several feet long. Despite their name, they come in various colors that vary with age and temperature. They move with surprising urgency, scuttling to different spots in the structure to feast on lettuce, squash and carrots.

"St. Petersburg's Round Lake is nearly dry. Here's why" via Colleen Wright of the Tampa Bay Times — Historic Round Lake has been drying up since November because of the dry winter and a broken pump that wasn't supposed to be pumping into the lake in the first place. The pump was installed at the lake in the Historic Uptown neighborhood west of Fourth Street N near downtown in the 1970s, but the Southwest Florida Water Management District now prohibits pumping water into lakes. The city didn't realize that until workers discovered the pump had broken on Nov. 30. The city spent $9,900 to have the pump fixed Thursday, though it is only used for irrigation around the lake. City spokesperson Janelle Irwin Taylor said the city is considering applying for a permit to refill the lake but said they are not sure if they will be successful.

"'Basically an eviction.' At Miami rent rally stories of $750 increase and grim choices" via Douglas Hanks of the Miami Herald — Emily Moloney felt good about her place in the Miami economy when the year began: She was earning $85,000 in a tech job and covering rent on a one-bedroom downtown apartment. Then came the notice of a $750 rent increase within 90 days. “I let them know this is basically an eviction,” Moloney, 31, said of the 40% hike needed to stay in her home. “I found Miami pretty affordable until now.” Moloney was one of about 30 people who joined Miami’s latest rally to protest rent spikes and demand government action on a housing market that’s considered a crisis by affordability activists, elected leaders, and others warning of rising prices endangering the workforce.

“Fort Lauderdale’s fired city auditor continued to work. Now he’s been sent on his way with paid leave” via

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Susannah Bryan of the South Florida Sun-Sentinel — In the latest political melodrama gripping Fort Lauderdale City Hall, Auditor John Herbst was placed on paid leave Tuesday, exactly one month after being fired during a late-night Commission meeting on Feb. 15. Herbst, city auditor for nearly 16 years, was still on the job due to a rare clause in his employment contract that allows him to stay on for another 60 days. He was fired in mid-February after the Mayor accused him of overstepping his authority by investigating whether then-Police Chief Larry Scirotto was working a second job as a college basketball referee while on city time. Then on Tuesday, commissioners placed Herbst on paid administrative leave.

"Bob Saget's fractures possibly caused by fall on carpeted floor in Florida" via The Associated Press — Fractures around Saget's eye sockets and bleeding around his brain were possibly caused by the comedian hitting "something hard, covered by something soft," such as a carpeted floor. In the incident report released by the Orange County Sheriff's Office in Orlando, a detective notes that Chief Medical Examiner Joshua Stephany said the fractures "would have stunned Mr. Saget," and that he would have experienced dizziness. Had he been with people at the time, they would have noticed "confusion, balance, and/or slurred speech," the report states. It does not pinpoint a location for Saget's fall.

"Orange Blossom Mall becoming Renaissance Business Park; Fort Pierce expecting 600 new jobs" via Thomas Weber of Treasure Coast Newspapers — What once was the Orange Blossom Mall is on its way to becoming a business park with education services and office space, bringing an estimated 600 jobs to Fort Pierce. Prime Rock Energy Capital, the developer that purchased about two-thirds of the mall's property in July for $11 million, is transforming the 39 acres into Renaissance Business Park, which will encompass shops, office and industrial space and education services. "It's a giant site, like five city blocks in size," said Michael O'Neill, Prime Rock Energy Capital's principal.

"Vero Beach boy shot, killed Jan. 30 while playing with gun made from parts bought online" via Corey Arwood of Treasure Coast Newspapers — Police released information for the first time Tuesday of their investigation into a Jan. 30 shooting death of a 14-year-old boy they said was accidentally shot by a friend playing with a loaded weapon he built from parts bought online. The agency called the shooting a "tragic accident" in a news release and said it would not pursue criminal charges against anyone involved. The teen died from the gunshot wound despite what rescue officials said were paramedics' immediate, life saving measures. Police officials and detectives said Tuesday that for over a year, the teen bought parts to make the untraceable 9 mm, referred to as a "ghost gun."

"Busch Wildlife breaks ground on Jupiter Farms sanctuary for 200+ animals. When will it open?" via Katherine Kokal of the Palm Beach Post — Five wetlands, hundreds of native trees and no interstate noise. Those are some of the benefits of a new 19.4-acre site in Jupiter Farms for the Busch Wildlife Sanctuary and its 200 animals. Crews broke ground on the new $15 million sanctuary last week. It sits at Rocky Pines and Indiantown roads, 6 miles northwest of the current sanctuary, which is sandwiched between Interstate 95 and Central Boulevard on land owned by the Loxahatchee River District. Right now, visitors to Busch Wildlife Sanctuary drive through an industrial area that is home to limousine services, landscaping agencies and construction companies to access the sanctuary.

"Central parents say their kids don't have the same opportunities. That is set to change." via Alex Miller of the Pensacola News Journal — As the sun comes up, peeking its face at the rural landscape across Allentown, the hustle and bustle of a new school day disturbs the surrounding calm. Central School sits on a corner amid vast parcels of land about 20 minutes north of Milton. Buses pull into a designated lane, the parking lot begins filling up and suddenly, this smaller K-12 school gives off the same excited, hurried morning energy people would see at one of the larger schools in the district. Inside its halls, however, Central School shows some distinct differences from some of its larger peers around Santa Rosa County.

"Gulf Breeze to appeal lawsuit over Tiger Point golf course, will pay back taxes for now." via Alex Miller of the Pensacola News Journal — Gulf Breeze will appeal the state's 1st District Court of Appeal ruling that it should not have received a tax exemption for Tiger Point Gulf Club. Mayor Cherry Fitch and the City Council made the decision to appeal Monday night at a special meeting. Next steps will involve the case going back to the state's 1st District Court of Appeal. The decision comes almost five years after former Santa Rosa County Property Appraiser Gregory Brown sued the city of Gulf Breeze, arguing the property was not ad valorem tax-exempt after Gulf Breeze bought on the company IGC, Tiger Point Golf Club LLC to operate the course in 2015.

"UF announces Artificial Intelligence Academic Initiative Center" via Drew Wilson of Florida Politics — The University of Florida announced Tuesday that it will create an Artificial Intelligence Academic Initiative Center. The new center, led by Associate Provost for Strategic Initiatives David Reed, will be the campus focal point for artificial intelligence- and data science-related academic activity at the university. "How does DeSantis sleep at night?" via Dana Milbank of The Washington Post — Until now, we've known that COVID-19 death rates were higher among the unvaccinated, and also higher in counties that went for Trump, whose supporters were more likely to resist vaccinations, masks and other pandemic precautions. Now that the omicron wave is over, a couple of new analyses of state-by-state data both point to an inescapable conclusion: Living in states run by a Republican governor is dangerous to your health. Using data from the CDC, consultant Doug Haddix reported Sunday that since July 1, the 14 states with the highest death rates were all run by Republican Governors.

"Wake up, Democrats: Three's a crowd in the Governor's race" via Sarasota Herald-Tribune editorial board — As DeSantis continues to view Florida as little more than a 65,758-square mile petri dish to test out and hone his blustering one-liners, divisive policies and cynical strategies for a run for the Republican Party's 2024 Presidential nomination, one thing has become increasingly evident: While there are three major contenders seeking the Democratic Party's nomination to face DeSantis in the November general election, Charlie Crist, Fried and Annette Taddeo — that's already become two candidates too many. It's time for two Democrats to pull out of the party's Aug. 23 gubernatorial primary and throw their support behind the remaining candidate who is truly best suited to challenge the heavily favored DeSantis. It's time for two Democratic candidates to make the selfless move to allow the general election race to effectively begin right now.

"'Nothing matters to these Republicans but power — power and malice'" via Diane Roberts of Florida Phoenix — The Governor and Legislature are only interested in making scared angry white people feel good about being scared angry white people. They're betting their voters don't notice or don't care about the contempt they have for the environment, the elderly, and the poor, and the special hatred they have for public schools. DeSantis has just appointed a woman to the state Board of Education who loves the Proud Boys, supports Q-Anon, and calls the Jan. 6 insurrection a "peaceful protest." He was hardly going to choose someone rational. The Legislature is cracking down on educators at all levels who dare tell the truth about the genocide of the continent's indigenous peoples, the brutality of the plantations, the laws restricting the freedom of Asians and Native Americans, the crippling injustices of Jim Crow, and any suggestion that the nation continues to struggle with the inequities of our criminal justice system, our police, and our financial institutions.

"DeSantis is turning Florida into his own mini-autocracy" via Ruth Ben-Ghiat of Lucid — DeSantis is a particularly dangerous individual. Many 21st century authoritarian governments take the form of electoral autocracies. Voters go to the ballot box, but the results are rigged so that the outcome of the election is what those in power need it to be. American states like Ohio have long had a version of this system. Yet Trump's relentless attempts to discredit our national election apparatus and the success of his Big Lie showed other unscrupulous politicians, DeSantis among them, the gains to be made through making fake claims of election fraud. Cue the Governor's new Office of Election Crimes and Security, housed within the Florida State Department. It has 15 investigators to pursue election crimes, including those reported via a "voter fraud hotline."

"DeSantis vs. Disney: The 'Don't Say Gay' fight Disney helped fuel" via Scott Maxwell of the Orlando Sentinel — You have to imagine there was a moment when Disney CEO Chapek was watching the Governor of Florida and his staff accuse him of coddling communists and siding with pedophiles when Chapek thought: What the hell just happened? I'll tell you what happened, Bob: You guys got caught trying to play both sides in politics. You were spreading feel-good talk about equality and civil rights but steering campaign cash to politicians with a long history of supporting anti-LGBTQ legislation. No. 2 was that, after being caught, you dared to speak up to DeSantis, who operates from a political playbook that says: Everyone who disagrees with me is a communist. Or a socialist. Or a freedom-hater. And now maybe even a friend to pedophiles.

"Florida can't outlaw my family" via Claire McCully of CNN — DeSantis recently defended a bill his opponents call a "don't say gay bill" by claiming that this law prohibits "sexual instruction in grades pre-K through three." I reject the fearmongering and dishonesty from the likes of DeSantis and his anti-LGBTQ colleagues and allies. The idea that school districts are actually trying to add anything like "sexual instruction" to pre-K through third-grade curriculum is ludicrous. What is really angering anti-LGBTQ alarmists in Florida and other states, most notably in Texas, is that schools and society at large are promoting acceptance and inclusion for gender-nonconforming children and LGBTQ parents.

"Unofficial Lego version of Volodymyr Zelenskiy raises money for Ukraine" via Kate Gibson of CBS News — A custom-printed Lego version of Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskiy — along with tiny toy Molotov cocktails — raised $16,000 for Ukraine relief efforts, according to the Chicago toy company behind the products. Independent retailer Citizen Brick this month offered a limited supply of the items, saying all of the money raised would go to help Direct Relief deliver medical supplies to people in Ukraine. "The minifigs sold out almost immediately. We made as many as possible in a frantic 24 hours, with the CB crew coming in on their day off to print," the toymaker wrote on Instagram. "California's first lab-grown mosquitoes may take flight — stirring controversy" via Lisa M. Krieger of PhysOrg — A biotech firm is seeking permission to release genetically modified mosquitoes into the open air of California for the first time later this year, aiming to reduce the expanding populations of invasive mosquitoes and prevent deadly disease. Over time, the controversial research project will introduce 2 million male mosquitoes with a "kill switch" built into their DNA. When they mate with wild insects, their offspring die, causing an eventual collapse of the population. The lab-bred insects are male, so they don't bite or spread disease. Modified they only mate with others of their species, not California's native mosquitoes. Only the female offspring die; the males live and become carriers of the deadly gene, passing it on to shrinking future generations.

"Nicolas Cage's 'Unbearable Weight' gets rare perfect Rotten Tomatoes score, a career-best" via James Hibberd of The Hollywood Reporter — Cage is getting some of the best reviews of his career … for playing himself. In the new comedy, The Unbearable Weight of Massive Talent, Cage plays a fictionalized version of himself who's offered $1 million to appear at the birthday party of a mega fan. But the fan may not be as he seems, and "Cage" soon finds himself falling down a funhouse mirror rabbit hole of his past roles, eventually landing in a Cage-style action movie. The Unbearable Weight reviews are all the more ironic given Cage's enormous initial reluctance to do the film. "I turned it down three or four times, I wanted no part of it," the actor told THR in a recent candid interview.

"Ferg's is selling pizza from an ATM. Is it any good?" via Helen Freund of the Tampa Bay Times — I'm not usually one for automated technology replacing human interactions, especially when it involves my meals. But when a colleague tipped me off that Ferg's Sports Bar & Grill in St. Petersburg had started selling pizzas out of an ATM, my interest was piqued. The idea seems straightforward enough: pizza, delivered out of an ATM, 24 hours a day. Guests order using a touch-screen system, and four minutes later a cardboard box full of hot, cheesy pizza pops out. So, what does ATM pizza actually taste like? No big surprises here: It tastes like a pretty average pizza.

Florida GOP in conflict: DeSantis' redistricting expert doesn't convince House panel
Miami Herald

February 19, 2022

The conflict between Gov. Ron DeSantis and the Florida Legislature came into sharper focus on Friday as the governor's office paid for a conservative redistricting expert to appear before the House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee and the committee rejected his arguments.

Robert Popper, a senior attorney with the conservative activist group Judicial Watch, told the committee that if it moves ahead with its map that leaves in place a North Florida congressional district that stretches across several counties, it could "be in trouble" if the map were to get challenged before the U.S. Supreme Court.

"I'm talking as a lawyer. This district is going to have problems in federal court,'' Popper told the House Redistricting Subcommittee.

A redistricting expert who was one of the founders of the Polsby-Popper score used to measure the compactness of a district, Popper argued that because the North Florida district which the House has named District 3, is not compact, it is not "narrowly tailored" and violates the "strict scrutiny" requirements in recent court opinions.

"The entire map is going to end up in litigation, we know that,'' he warned. "I respectfully submit that this committee and this House would want to be holding the strongest hand that it could. District 3, as drawn, does not permit that."

DEFYING DESANTIS
The warning sets the stage for what could be the long-range goal of the governor, who has all but threatened to veto a congressional redistricting map if it includes the district that has elected U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Tallahassee Democrat, who is Black. The district was approved by the court a decade ago to link together Black communities from the Antebellum South in an effort to allow minorities in the region to elect a candidate of their choice.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Last week, the Florida Supreme Court rejected the governor's request to provide legal guidance over whether or not legislators should dismantle the Black-held congressional district in North Florida.

Absent the court's advice, Florida Republican leaders have so far defied the Republican governor and failed to embrace his argument.

The Senate unanimously passed its congressional redistricting map that included four districts that could elect Black candidates to Congress, a configuration that would leave the Republican majority in a 28-member congressional delegation at 16, with 12 seats, including a new one in Central Florida, likely able to elect a Democrat.

The House committee on Friday voted 14-7 along partisan lines to adopt a map that would likely elect only three Blacks to Congress, dismantling the Orlando-based district currently held by U.S. Rep. Val Demings, a Black Democrat, but leaving the district that elected Lawson intact.

By contrast, DeSantis has called Lawson's district an "illegal gerrymander" and said he would reject any map that has it in it. He has submitted two maps that create only two districts in the state that preserve Black voting strength, dismantling the Lawson and Demings districts.

Unlike the Senate's congressional plan, both the House map and the governor's give Republicans two additional seats in the congressional delegation by creating districts that would likely elect an 18-10 Republican majority.

Under questioning of Republican members of the committee on Friday, Popper confirmed that his airfare to Tallahassee and his hotel were paid by the governor's office.

DeSantis spokesperson Taryn Fenske said that those expenses were paid by the legal counsel hired by the governor at taxpayer expense but, she noted, the House asked the governor to provide a witness to appear.

According to Judicial Watch, a group that has earned its reputation by filing Freedom of Information Act lawsuits to investigate claimed misconduct by government officials, Popper specializes in gerrymandering cases and has been with the organization since 2013.

FAIR DISTRICTS UNDER FIRE?

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Popper's testimony brought into focus the governor's legal argument and raised the prospect that the governor may be preparing to argue that the Fair Districts standards of the Florida Constitution may come into conflict with the federal court's interpretations of redistricting law.

In 2010, Florida voters overwhelmingly approved the Fair District standards, prohibiting the Legislature from drawing districts that favor incumbents or political parties or diminish the ability of minority voters from electing candidates of their choice.

The standards also require that legislators give priority to preserving the voting strength of minority voters over the geographical compactness of minority voters.

Members of the committee, many of whom had read Popper's written testimony ahead of the meeting, peppered him with legal questions.

Rep. Daniel Perez, a Miami Republican and a lawyer, asked how a court should weigh the equal protection standards of the U.S. Constitution against the Fair District standards of the Florida Constitution.

"Would it be fair to say that the 14th Amendment would invalidate the Fair District amendments — specifically, the prohibition on not diminishing the ability of minority communities to elect a candidate of their choice?'' he asked. "If it does not, then why is complying with the Florida Constitution, not a compelling state interest?"

"It depends,'' Popper answered. "My testimony is not to suggest that the Fair Districts amendment would be unconstitutional and all its applications."

"Can you point us to a district that does not diminish minority voting ability but is more narrowly tailored?'' asked Rep. Tyler Sirois, R-Merritt Island, the committee chair.

No, Popper answered.

Rep. Kaylee Tuck, R-Lake Placid, asked if Popper agreed with Florida Supreme Court Chief Justice Charles Canady's dissent in the redistricting case from a decade ago in which he interprets the state's redistricting standards that prohibit the state from diminishing minority voting access.

"I'm not an expert in Florida law,'' Popper answered.

Could he cite any federal court decisions relating to Section 5 of the federal Voting Rights Act that "requires that a district must be compact?'' Tuck continued.

No, Popper said, adding that he knows of case law where a non-compact district was rejected.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

And does he agree that adopting the governor's map for the North Florida district "will diminish the ability to elect" Black candidates, Tuck asked.

"It's ambiguous,'' Popper answered.

The intense grilling from Republicans prompted Democrats to conclude that Popper was not there to help them draw maps that abide by Florida law.

"We're here, big picture, trying to weigh what is best for the residents of Florida," said Rep. Christine Hunschofsky, D-Parkland.

She asked if there was "a compelling justification" to have less representation from minority candidates "in favor of more compactness?"

Popper continued with his warning. "This district is going to have problems in federal court,'' he said.

By the end of the meeting, Sirois commended Hunschofsky because her question "just cut to the heart of the matter."

He then read the redistricting standards of the Florida Constitution and concluded: "We have to follow the law."

"I want to assuage any doubt that may be in front of you today,'' he said. "This is a legally sound map. It's a constitutionally compliant map. Please join me in voting yes."

Democrats said they are hopeful the governor's approach will continue to be rebuffed by their Republican colleagues as the House and Senate work out differences in their congressional maps.

"We are the architects of our congressional and House and Senate maps and the governor is not — despite his attempts at interference," said Rep. Kelly Skidmore of Boca Raton, the ranking Democrat on the committee. "The process worked, and he has been shut down and his paid testifier today didn't change anybody's opinion on that."

Mr. Popper,

My name is Ryan Newman, and I am General Counsel to Governor Ron DeSantis. John Gore at Jones Day suggested that I reach out to you.

The Florida House of Representatives has scheduled a committee hearing for this coming Friday, March 18, on its congressional redistricting map. The House proposal retains Congressional District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

We were hoping that you might be interested in serving as a witness at the hearing to educate the committee on why retaining this district would likely violate the U.S. Constitution.

Please let me know if you would be interested in speaking with us. I'm cc'ing Jason Torchinsky and Mo Jazil, who have been representing the Governor's office and the Florida Department of State as outside counsel. Josh Pratt and Nick Meros are Deputy GCs in my office.

I look forward to hearing from you.

All,

The hearing is scheduled for 8 am to 12 pm on Friday, February 18. The witness need not submit written testimony.

But I think it may nevertheless be helpful for the Governor's office to submit a memo explaining our position on why the proposed CD3 is unconstitutional. Let's discuss in the morning.

Thanks,
Ryan

Mr. Popper,

My name is Ryan Newman, and I am General Counsel to Governor Ron DeSantis. John Gore at Jones Day suggested that I reach out to you.

The Florida House of Representatives has scheduled a committee hearing for this coming Friday, March 18, on its congressional redistricting map. The House proposal retains Congressional District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

We were hoping that you might be interested in serving as a witness at the hearing to educate the committee on why retaining this district would likely violate the U.S. Constitution.

Please let me know if you would be interested in speaking with us. I'm cc'ing Jason Torchinsky and Mo Jazil, who have been representing the Governor's office and the Florida Department of State as outside counsel. Josh Pratt and Nick Meros are Deputy GCs in my office.

I look forward to hearing from you.

All the best,
Ryan

STATEMENT OF INTEREST

Lenny Curry is the Mayor of the City of Jacksonville. Located in Duval County, Jacksonville is the largest city by land area in the contiguous United States, as well as home to almost one million people. As of the 2020 census, 453,367 Duval County citizens, of which 344,386 are of voting age, are located within the current Congressional District 5. The portion of Duval County's citizens located within District 5 constitutes 60% of the District's population. By contrast, of the remaining seven counties partly or wholly within District 5, Leon County is the next largest with less than 23% of the District's population.

Mayor Curry submits this interested person brief, pursuant to his authority under section 6.04 of the Charter of the City of Jacksonville as the chief executive and administrative officer of the City, to explain why the Court should exercise its discretion to render an advisory opinion which may affect District 5 in its current form.[1] The boundaries of District 5 and whether it withstands constitutional scrutiny is an issue of great public importance to the citizens of Jacksonville and impacts their voting rights under both the United States and Florida Constitutions.

[1] It should be noted that Mayor Curry takes no position on the validity or appropriateness of any of the proposed Congressional District maps.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The United States Constitution requires congressional apportionment to be based, in part, on a decennial census. U.S. Const. art. I, § 2. With the completion of the most recent census, the Florida Legislature will be presenting a bill to Governor DeSantis redrawing Florida's congressional districts based on this data. Each of the potential redistricting plans retains essentially the current District 5, which stretches over 150 miles from the westside of Jacksonville to Leon County and encompasses part or all of eight different Florida counties.

On February 1, 2022, the Governor requested this Court render an opinion on whether article III, section 20, subsection (a) of the Florida Constitution "requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice."

FL-GOV-22-0226-D-000113

On February 2, 2022, this Court requested briefs from interested persons addressing whether the Governor's request for an advisory opinion on the redistricting issue was within the purview of article IV, section 1, subsection (c) of the Florida Constitution and whether the Court should exercise its discretion to provide an opinion in response to the request.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

City of Jacksonville Mayor Curry joins Governor DeSantis' request for two reasons. First, and most fundamentally, the Court's ruling on the Governor's redistricting questions encourages public confidence and finality in the upcoming election. Rendering an advisory opinion ensures the ability of Jacksonville's voters and qualified candidates to participate in the election in a manner consistent with Florida voters' rights to fair and effective representation. In short, Jacksonville citizens will know that the district in which they vote and the candidates for whom they vote will withstand constitutional scrutiny before their votes are cast.

Second, an advisory opinion provides the Court with the opportunity to announce a much-needed redistricting standard. This Court's prior redistricting jurisprudence does not provide appropriate guidance for crafting redistricting maps that meet constitutional scrutiny. Given that the constitutionality of District 5 is uncertain, and that it is unclear whether a potential violation of the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard would require adoption of District 5 in its current form, an advisory opinion from this Court would reduce the possibility Jacksonville citizens will participate in an election that may face protracted legal challenges as to both federal and Florida voting standards.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

ARGUMENT

A. This Court's exercise of its discretion to render an advisory opinion will provide certainty and finality to Jacksonville voters and potential political candidates.

This Court has acknowledged the seriousness of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). Providing this certainty at the advisory opinion stage is a "proper exercise of judicial power," id. at 424 (Canady, J., dissenting), as it provides a clear interpretation of the Florida Constitution so that the lawmaking branches may properly conduct their business.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

As explained in Section B infra, Jacksonville citizens who reside in District 5 deserve confidence that District 5's apportionment plan complies with the Florida Constitution. Otherwise, voters face the prospect of electing a representative under uncertain circumstances.

This lack of certainty extends to qualified candidates and election staff, who cannot be sure that District 5 will survive a post-election challenge. Indeed, given its "unique history," District 5 very well may face such a challenge in the absence of clear constitutional standards. See Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 402.

In light of these concerns, the fast-approaching election, and likely litigation concerning the District 5 lines, the Court's resolution of the Governor's questions is of paramount importance. In resolving these questions now, the Court ensures Jacksonville's residents may cast their votes with the requisite certainty and fairness mandated by Florida's Constitution, regardless of the decision it reaches. See id. at 416 ("[T]here can hardly be a more compelling interest than the public interest in ensuring that the Legislature does not engage in unconstitutional … gerrymandering.").

Equally as important, the Court grants itself the opportunity to provide the Governor and Legislature "with the benefit of [its] guiding construction" before enactment of an apportionment plan. See In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 684 (Fla. 2012) (commending the Legislature for its efforts to interpret article III, section 20 of Florida's Constitution but acknowledging that it lacked the benefit of the Court's guidance). In doing so, the Court also eliminates the possibility of several lower court actions and appeals—a prospect the Court previously observed would result in "an abdication of [its] responsibility under the Florida Constitution" and would "create uncertainty for the voters of this state, the elected representatives, and the candidates who are required to qualify for their seats." Id. at 609.

Thus, by taking up Governor DeSantis' request now, the Court provides efficiency and finality in the redistricting process, both of which ultimately benefit District 5's residents.

B. The Court should exercise its discretion to render an advisory opinion because the constitutionality of District 5 is uncertain, and this Court's prior redistricting jurisprudence does not provide appropriate guidance for crafting redistricting maps that meet constitutional muster.

This Court's prior redistricting jurisprudence, coupled with the Supreme Court's decision in Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455 (2017), render the constitutionality of the current District 5 uncertain at best. And issuing an advisory opinion here provides the Legislature with much-needed guidance on how to devise a redistricting map that satisfies Florida's constitutional requirements while advancing voters' right to fair representation.

When this Court held it was necessary for Florida's Legislature to redraw District 5 in an East-West orientation, it declined to define a standard for the redrawing. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 271 (Fla. 2015) ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII."). This Court also did not consider whether the current iteration of District 5 was required to prevent the diminishment of racial minorities' ability to elect representatives of their choice. See id. Complicating the controlling law further, in *Cooper v. Har*ris, issued in 2017 after this Court's most recent redistricting cases, the United States Supreme Court made clear that race-centric redistricting is permissible only if a state can prove that it had "good reasons for concluding" that its action was "required" to preserve minority voting rights. 137 S. Ct. at 1459.[2] The Governor's request specifically asks this Court to interpret whether a potential violation of Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard would require the current District 5.

This recent federal precedent, coupled with the unsettled guidance in the Court's prior redistricting jurisprudence, creates uncertainty as to the constitutionality of District 5 in its proffered and current form, as well as muddles the standards the Legislature must meet to satisfy both the United States and Florida Constitutions. By answering the Governor's request for an advisory opinion, this Court affords itself the opportunity to address the appropriate legal standards governing redistricting.

Jacksonville's citizens are not well served by potentially voting in a District with increased prospects of being tossed out as invalid after several years of post-election litigation, and they may be better served without a District stretching from one region of the state to another. Giving a proper interpretation of the Florida Constitution at this stage will enhance the separation of powers as the lawmaking branches may appropriately act with "institutional independence and integrity" to avoid unnecessary litigation. See Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 425 (Canady, J., dissenting). While this Court has previously sought to provide "clear guidance as to the specific deficiencies in the districts that the Legislature must redraw," id. at 416, an advisory opinion will more appropriately provide interpretation of any specific limitations required in article III, section 20, subsection (a) of the Florida Constitution. This posture will better achieve proper deference to the lawmaking process and will better ensure the legal firmness of District 5 on behalf of the voters.

[2] Thus, according to Harris, a race-centric redistricting plan is not acceptable merely because it fails to diminish a minority constituencies' right to elect the candidate of its choice. Instead, the standard asks whether the Legislature was justified in concluding that race-centric redistricting was needed to prevent a such a diminishment. See id.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

CONCLUSION

In answering the Governor's request, the Court will provide Jacksonville's voters with enhanced confidence and certainty grounded in a proper interpretation of the Florida Constitution. An opinion will further moot certain constitutional questions likely to arise in potential post-election litigation. For these reasons, the Court should answer Governor DeSantis' request.

My name is Robert D. Popper. I am a Senior Attorney and Director of voting integrity efforts at Judicial Watch, Inc. Judicial Watch is a Washington, D.C.-based public interest nonprofit dedicated to promoting transparency, accountability, and integrity in government, politics, and the law.

I was admitted to the Bar in New York in 1990, and I have been practicing as a litigator for 32 years. I have special knowledge and expertise in the area of voting law and have written both popular and scholarly articles on the subject.[1] I have particular expertise in the areas of racial and political gerrymandering. In 1991, with Professor Daniel Polsby, I wrote an article describing a mathematical way to measure the geographic compactness of congressional districts.[2] This standard is now known as the "Polsby/Popper" criterion and is one of the most widely used tests of district compactness. In 1997, I brought a lawsuit that ultimately led to New York's 12th Congressional District being enjoined as an unconstitutional racial

In 2005, I joined the Voting Section of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, where I worked for eight years. In 2008, I received a Special Commendation Award for my efforts in enforcing Section 7 of the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 ("NVRA"), which requires state offices providing public assistance to offer those receiving it the opportunity to register to vote. That same year, I was promoted to Deputy Chief of the Voting Section. In my time at DOJ, I managed voting rights investigations, litigations, consent decrees, and settlements in dozens of states. I helped to enforce all the statutes the Department is charged with enforcing, including the NVRA, the Help America Vote Act of 2002, the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act of 1986, and the Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment Act of 2009. I managed lawsuits enforcing the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended, including the minority language provisions of Section 203; the preclearance provisions of Section 5; the anti-intimidation provisions of Section 11; and both vote denial and vote dilution claims under Section 2.

In 2013, I joined Judicial Watch. In my time there, I have filed voting rights lawsuits in federal and state courts alleging claims under the First, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments, Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, the NVRA, and a number of state constitutional provisions. Among other things, I am currently representing plaintiffs pursuing gerrymandering claims in Maryland State court.

In preparation for my testimony, I looked at Florida's proposed congressional districts in maps drawn by the Florida House Redistricting Committee (see H000C8011, dated

[3] Diaz v. Silver, 978 F. Supp. 96 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (three-judge court), aff'd mem., 521 U.S. 801 (1997).

In sum, my testimony is that proposed Congressional District 3 is highly vulnerable to being enjoined in a lawsuit that could be filed in federal court on the basis of principles embodied in the landmark ruling of Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630 (1993) and its progeny.

In Shaw, the Supreme Court first held that "redistricting legislation that is so extremely irregular on its face that it rationally can be viewed only as an effort to segregate the races for purposes of voting, without regard for traditional districting principles and without sufficiently compelling justification" states a federal, constitutional claim "under the Equal Protection Clause." 509 U.S. at 642. Two years later in Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900 (1995), the Supreme Court upheld a lower court ruling invalidating a Georgia district on the basis of Shaw. The Court explained that "the essence of the equal protection claim recognized in Shaw is that the State has used race as a basis for separating voters into districts." 515 U.S. at 911. Assigning voters on that basis "embod[ies] stereotypes that treat individuals as the product of their race, evaluating their thoughts and efforts—their very worth as citizens—according to a criterion barred to the Government by history and the Constitution." Id. at 912.

The racial intent behind the district challenged in Miller was apparent "when its shape is considered in conjunction with its racial and population densities." Id. at 917. Because "[r]ace was … the predominant, overriding factor" in its design, the district could not be "upheld unless it satisfies strict scrutiny, our most rigorous and exacting standard of constitutional review." Id. at 920. "To satisfy strict scrutiny, the State must demonstrate that its districting legislation is narrowly tailored to achieve a compelling interest." Id. The Court noted in particular that "creating a third majority-black district to satisfy the Justice Department's preclearance demands" under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act was not enough under the circumstances to justify the challenged district:

> As we suggested in Shaw, compliance with federal antidiscrimination laws cannot justify race-based districting where the challenged district was not reasonably necessary under a constitutional reading and application of those laws. … The congressional plan challenged here was not required by the Voting Rights Act under a correct reading of the statute.

More recently, in Bethune-Hill v. Va. State Bd. of Elections, 137 S. Ct. 788, 797-98 (2017), the Court made clear that a plaintiff challenging a district under Shaw was not required to "establish, as a prerequisite to showing racial predominance, an actual conflict between the enacted plan and traditional redistricting principles." The Court recognized that "the 'constitutional violation' in racial gerrymandering cases stems from the 'racial purpose of state action, not its stark manifestation.'" Id. at 798 (citation omitted). Bethune-Hill is also noteworthy in that the Court, under a deferential review for "clear error," did not overturn the district court's finding that a district with 55% BVAP was necessary to avoid liability under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. But the Court in another case summarized Bethune-Hill's findings as follows:

> [W]here we have accepted a State's "good reasons" for using race in drawing district lines, the State made a strong showing of a pre-enactment analysis with justifiable conclusions. In Bethune-Hill, the State established that the primary mapdrawer "discussed the district with incumbents from other majority-minority districts[,] … considered turnout rates, the results of the recent contested primary and general elections," and the district's large prison population. … The State established that it had performed a "functional analysis," and acted to achieve an "informed bipartisan consensus."

Abbott v. Perez, 138 S. Ct. 2305, 2335 (2018) (emphasis added). Significantly, the Court in Abbott rejected a proposed justification for a race-based district where the State of Texas argued that it was necessary to comply with Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, but had not made the required strong showing. Id. at 2334. Similarly, in Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1470 (2017), the Court rejected a claim that a race-based district was necessary to comply with Section 2 when the State of North Carolina could not show the preconditions required to make such a claim.

Turning to Congressional District 3 in the proposed plan, I believe it will be vulnerable to a serious—and probably a winning—Shaw-type claim under the Fourteenth Amendment. I understand that there will be little dispute that the district was drawn with its racial characteristics as the predominant consideration. I also understand that the shape of the district will be well-explained by the effort to include African-American populations around Tallahassee and Jacksonville. Moreover, the district clearly violates traditional districting criteria. Its Popper-Polsby score is 10%, and its Reock score is 11%. These are very low compactness scores for any U.S. congressional district, and in both cases these are the lowest compactness scores in the State of Florida.[4]

I also believe that the defenders of District 3 will be unable to justify the district so as to satisfy their burden of strict scrutiny. To begin with, I am unaware of the existence of any sort of "a strong showing of a pre-enactment analysis with justifiable conclusions." Abbott, 138 S. Ct. at 2335. But further, even if the race-based character of the districts could be justified under federal or Florida law, the district's noncompactness will compel the legal conclusion that it is not "narrowly tailored" to achieve its goals, as it must be to satisfy strict

[4] District 3 also has the third worst Area/Convex Hull score in the State. However, I do not consider the Area/Convex Hull test to be a reliable compactness measure. There are too many district indentations and distortions it simply cannot "see." Accordingly, it is too forgiving.

scrutiny. See Miller, 515 U.S. at 921 ("The congressional plan challenged here was not required by the Voting Rights Act under a correct reading of the statute.").

As a final point, the fact that the BVAP in District 3 is at around 44% according to the House Committee's online information (or 42% according to the Princeton Gerrymandering Project) will defeat the State's ability to justify the district. The Supreme Court has held that no Section 2 claim is possible where the minority VAP is less than 50%. Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 19-20 (2009) ("It remains the rule … that a party asserting § 2 liability must show by a preponderance of the evidence that the minority population in the potential election district is greater than 50 percent."). The Supreme Court has at least suggested that the same rule applies in the context of Section 5. Perry v. Perez, 565 U.S. 388, 398-99 (2012) ("The court's order suggests that it may have intentionally drawn … a 'minority coalition opportunity district' in which the court expected two different minority groups to band together to form an electoral majority"; and, if so, "it had no basis for doing so. Cf. Bartlett …"). See also In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 625 (2012) ("Just as Section 2 jurisprudence guides the Court in analyzing the state vote dilution claims, when we interpret our state provision prohibiting the diminishment of racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of choice, we are guided by any jurisprudence interpreting Section 5.").

In sum, if I were asked by a client whether Congressional District 3 complies with the federal constitution, my answer would be an emphatic no.

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

THE CAPITOL
TALLAHASSEE, FLORIDA 32399 • (850) 717-9249

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

[1] See, e.g., Chiles v. Child. A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

Hi Ryan,

Alexa Corse, reporter with The Wall Street Journal here. I'm working on a story about redistricting in Florida, and I was hoping I could ask you a clarification question. I saw that you've said the governor has legal concerns with the legislature's proposed maps. What specifically are the governor's legal concerns?

Thank you,
Alexa

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

Honorable Tyler Sirois
Member, Florida House of Representatives
Chairman, Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee
400 South Monroe Street

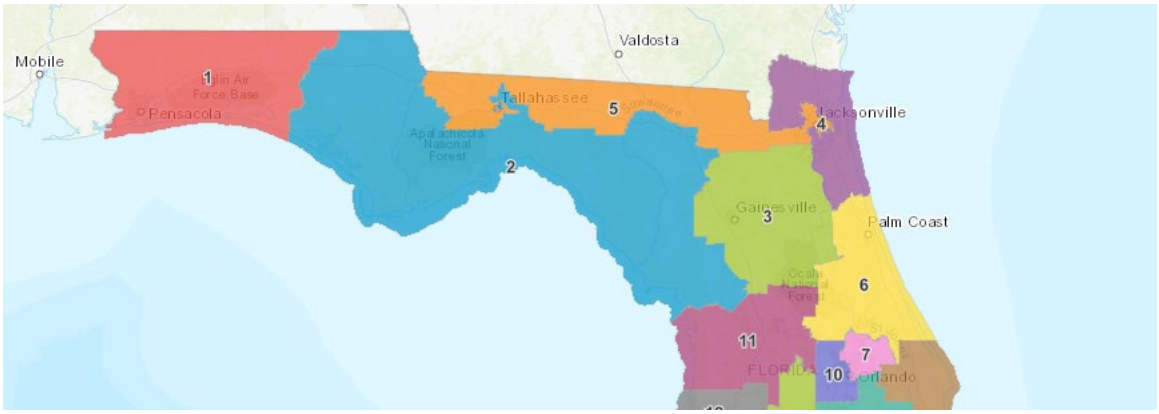
Dear Chairman Sirois:

I write to convey the legal objections of the Executive Office of the Governor to the inclusion of Congressional District 3 in the maps proposed by the staff of the Florida House Redistricting Committee. The proposed district, which largely tracks current Congressional District 5, spans approximately 200 miles from East to West and cuts across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population in Leon and Gadsden Counties. The district is not compact and does not otherwise conform to usual political or geographic boundaries. Instead, it appears to be drawn solely to combine separate minority populations from different regions of northern Florida in a less than majority-minority district so that together they may have an opportunity to elect a candidate of their choice.



Where race is "the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," the legislature must prove that such "race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463-64 (2017) (citations omitted). Because the Legislature cannot show that the proposed Congressional District 3 would satisfy strict scrutiny, the proposed district violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and should not be included in any map enacted by the Florida House of Representatives.

Current Congressional District 5 (Orange)

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment generally prohibits state laws that separate citizens into groups on the basis of race. A state law that "expressly distinguishes among citizens because of their race" can survive legal challenge only if it is "narrowly tailored to further a compelling governmental interest." Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 (1993). This principle applies not only to a law that "contains explicit racial distinctions, but also to those 'rare' statutes that, although race neutral, are, on their face, 'unexplainable on grounds other than race.'" Id. (quoting Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). Redistricting legislation is treated no differently. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, "redistricting legislation that is so bizarre on its face" that it can only be explained because of race "demands the same close scrutiny that we give other state laws that classify citizens by race." Id. at 644.

To state an equal protection claim, a plaintiff must "show, either through circumstantial evidence of a district's shape and demographics or more direct evidence going to legislative purpose, that race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's [line-drawing] decision." Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 916 (1995). Specifically, the plaintiff must prove that "the legislature subordinated traditional race-neutral districting principles, including but not limited to compactness, contiguity, and respect for political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests, to racial considerations." Id.

Given the foregoing considerations, it is evident that non-racial grounds cannot explain proposed Congressional District 3. First, the district violates traditional districting principles. Far from compact, the district records compactness scores as low as .11 on the Reock test, .63 on the Area / Convex Hull test, and .1 on the Polsby-Popper test. It also does not respect political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests. The district splits four counties and three municipalities, and it stretches across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with minority populations in Leon and Gadsden Counties. These communities are in separate and distinct regions of northern Florida and are not defined by shared interests. With respect to contiguity, the district narrows to a mere three miles wide from North to South when traversing the northernmost precincts of Leon County at the state's northern border in an effort to include the minority populations in western Leon County and Gadsden County while avoiding the non-minority population in eastern Leon County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Second, only two considerations plausibly explain the district's unusual shape—partisanship or race. If the district were drawn to favor partisan interests, it would violate the Fair Districts Amendment of the Florida Constitution. Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution provides that "[n]o apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." If improper partisan interests did not play a role, the only reasonable explanation for the district is race. This conclusion follows from the historical circumstances surrounding the creation of the current district.

The Florida Supreme Court drew the current district—Congressional District 5—in 2015. The Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando because it concluded that such configuration had been unconstitutionally tainted by improper partisan influences. League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 403 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). The Court further held that the North-South version was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. Consequently, the Court adopted the current East-West version. Id. at 405-06. While acknowledging that the new configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), the Court determined that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. at 405. The Court explained that the non-compact shape was necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted). Thus, it is clear that race considerations predominated in the drawing of the current district. And because the proposed reapportionment plan seeks to retain the district in large measure to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, race considerations likewise predominate in the creation of proposed Congressional District 3.

Third, it is obvious, given the location of minority neighborhoods and precincts, that district lines in both Jacksonville and Tallahassee were drawn specifically to capture minority populations and to combine them into one district. But according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "[a] reapportionment plan that includes in one district individuals who belong to the same race, but who are otherwise widely separated by geographical and political boundaries, and who may have little in common with one another but the color of their skin, bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid." Shaw, 509 U.S. at 647. By attempting to connect a minority population in Jacksonville with a faraway minority population in Tallahassee and surrounding areas, proposed Congressional District 3 does precisely what the U.S. Supreme Court has condemned.

Because it subordinates traditional districting criteria to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, Congressional District 3 is a racial gerrymander that can survive constitutional challenge only if the Legislature can prove that "its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1464 (citation omitted). The Legislature cannot meet that exacting burden here.

The U.S. Supreme Court has long assumed, without definitively deciding, that complying with the Voting Rights Act ("VRA") is a compelling interest. Id. at 1464, 1469. In this case, however, there is no good reason to believe that the VRA requires Congressional District 3. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 26 (2009) (plurality), Section 2 is satisfied only when a compact majority of minority citizens can be drawn into a single district. But there is no configuration in any proposal put forward in any public map that we are aware of that has created a majority-minority district in northern Florida.

As both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court have noted, Section 2 prohibits the dilution of minority votes where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1470 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50 (1986); In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 622-23 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I"). Congressional District 3 is not a reasonably configured district, and in any event, it does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority.

Nor does Section 5 of the VRA require Congressional District 3. Before the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the VRA's coverage formula in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553-57 (2013), the State of Florida was not a covered jurisdiction under Section 5, but five Florida counties were: Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe. None of those counties are in Congressional District 3. Moreover, even assuming that compliance with the VRA is a compelling interest, it is doubtful that "continued compliance with [Section] 5 remains a compelling interest" in light of "Shelby County v. Holder." Ala. Legis. Black Caucus v. Alabama, 575 U.S. 254, 276 (2015).

Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA, see Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-20, it should be noted that Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." Shelby County, 570 U.S. at 534-35; see also South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 329-34 (1966). When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

In any event, the non-diminishment provision of the Florida Constitution simply does not require Congressional District 3. Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution provides that "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." This section contains two relevant provisions: the first is the non-vote-dilution provision ("districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process"), and the second is the non-diminishment provision ("districts shall not be drawn . . . to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"). The

Florida Supreme Court has held that the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-23.

When Article III, Section 20(a) is read in this context, it becomes apparent that the group referenced in the latter non-diminishment provision is the very same group of "racial or language minorities" referenced in the former non-vote-dilution provision. The word "their" in the non-diminishment provision necessarily refers back to the "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision. Because the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA, and because Section 2 only applies to districts that contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, the non-diminishment provision should also apply to those kinds of districts. Because Congressional District 3 does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision does not apply.

With this reading, both the non-vote-dilution provision and the non-diminishment provision work in tandem. The non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form geographically compact districts where appropriate. See Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50-51 (requiring, additionally, political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477-80 (1997). In other words, the non-vote-dilution provision goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

This reading of Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision to refer to "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision flows from the text of the Florida Constitution. It also gives the Florida Constitution the best chance to avoid the federal constitutional concerns raised above. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1463-64, 1482 (invalidating two North Carolina congressional districts).

In sum, I respectfully ask that you consider the foregoing legal objections to Congressional District 3. I also respectfully ask that you include in the legislative record Governor DeSantis' advisory opinion request to the Florida Supreme Court and the Governor's brief before the Florida Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

Ryan Newman

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

FL-GOV-22-0226-D-000226

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

My name is Robert D. Popper. I am a Senior Attorney and Director of voting integrity efforts at Judicial Watch, Inc. Judicial Watch is a Washington, D.C.-based public interest nonprofit dedicated to promoting transparency, accountability, and integrity in government, politics, and the law.

I was admitted to the Bar in New York in 1990, and I have been practicing as a litigator for 32 years. I have special knowledge and expertise in the area of voting law and have written both popular and scholarly articles on the subject.[1] I have particular expertise in the areas of racial and political gerrymandering. In 1991, with Professor Daniel Polsby, I wrote an article describing a mathematical way to measure the geographic compactness of congressional districts.[2] This standard is now known as the "Polsby/Popper" criterion and is one of the most widely used tests of district compactness. In 1997, I brought a lawsuit that ultimately led to New York's 12th Congressional District being enjoined as an unconstitutional racial

In 2005, I joined the Voting Section of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, where I worked for eight years. In 2008, I received a Special Commendation Award for my efforts in enforcing Section 7 of the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 ("NVRA"), which requires state offices providing public assistance to offer those receiving it the opportunity to register to vote. That same year, I was promoted to Deputy Chief of the Voting Section. In my time at DOJ, I managed voting rights investigations, litigations, consent decrees, and settlements in dozens of states. I helped to enforce all the statutes the Department is charged with enforcing, including the NVRA, the Help America Vote Act of 2002, the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act of 1986, and the Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment Act of 2009. I managed lawsuits enforcing the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended, including the minority language provisions of Section 203; the preclearance provisions of Section 5; the anti-intimidation provisions of Section 11; and both vote denial and vote dilution claims under Section 2.

In 2013, I joined Judicial Watch. In my time there, I have filed voting rights lawsuits in federal and state courts alleging claims under the First, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments, Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, the NVRA, and a number of state constitutional provisions. Among other things, I am currently representing plaintiffs pursuing gerrymandering claims in Maryland State court.

In preparation for my testimony, I looked at Florida's proposed congressional districts in maps drawn by the Florida House Redistricting Committee (see H000C8011, dated

[3] Diaz v. Silver, 978 F. Supp. 96 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (three-judge court), aff'd mem., 521 U.S. 801 (1997).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

2/10/2022; H000C8003, dated 11/29/2021; H000C8001, 11/29/2021, available at https://redistrictingplans.flsenate.gov/). In sum, my testimony is that proposed Congressional District 3 is highly vulnerable to being enjoined in a lawsuit that could be filed in federal court on the basis of principles embodied in the landmark ruling of Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630 (1993) and its progeny.

In Shaw, the Supreme Court first held that "redistricting legislation that is so extremely irregular on its face that it rationally can be viewed only as an effort to segregate the races for purposes of voting, without regard for traditional districting principles and without sufficiently compelling justification" states a federal, constitutional claim "under the Equal Protection Clause." 509 U.S. at 642. Two years later in Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900 (1995), the Supreme Court upheld a lower court ruling invalidating a Georgia district on the basis of Shaw. The Court explained that "the essence of the equal protection claim recognized in Shaw is that the State has used race as a basis for separating voters into districts." 515 U.S. at 911. Assigning voters on that basis "embod[ies] stereotypes that treat individuals as the product of their race, evaluating their thoughts and efforts—their very worth as citizens—according to a criterion barred to the Government by history and the Constitution." Id. at 912.

The racial intent behind the district challenged in Miller was apparent "when its shape is considered in conjunction with its racial and population densities." Id. at 917. Because "[r]ace was … the predominant, overriding factor" in its design, the district could not be "upheld unless it satisfies strict scrutiny, our most rigorous and exacting standard of constitutional review." Id. at 920. "To satisfy strict scrutiny, the State must demonstrate that its districting legislation is narrowly tailored to achieve a compelling interest." Id. The Court noted in particular that "creating a third majority-black district to satisfy the Justice

Department's preclearance demands" under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act was not enough under the circumstances to justify the challenged district:

> As we suggested in Shaw, compliance with federal antidiscrimination laws cannot justify race-based districting where the challenged district was not reasonably necessary under a constitutional reading and application of those laws. … The congressional plan challenged here was not required by the Voting Rights Act under a correct reading of the statute.

More recently, in Bethune-Hill v. Va. State Bd. of Elections, 137 S. Ct. 788, 797-98 (2017), the Court made clear that a plaintiff challenging a district under Shaw was not required to "establish, as a prerequisite to showing racial predominance, an actual conflict between the enacted plan and traditional redistricting principles." The Court recognized that "the 'constitutional violation' in racial gerrymandering cases stems from the 'racial purpose of state action, not its stark manifestation.'" Id. at 798 (citation omitted). Bethune-Hill is also noteworthy in that the Court, under a deferential review for "clear error," did not overturn the district court's finding that a district with 55% BVAP was necessary to avoid liability under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. But the Court in another case summarized Bethune-Hill's findings as follows:

> [W]here we have accepted a State's "good reasons" for using race in drawing district lines, the State made a strong showing of a pre-enactment analysis with justifiable conclusions. In Bethune-Hill, the State established that the primary mapdrawer "discussed the district with incumbents from other majority-minority districts[,] … considered turnout rates, the results of the recent contested primary and general elections," and the district's large prison population. … The State established that it had performed a "functional analysis," and acted to achieve an "informed bipartisan consensus."

Abbott v. Perez, 138 S. Ct. 2305, 2335 (2018) (emphasis added). Significantly, the Court in Abbott rejected a proposed justification for a race-based district where the State of Texas argued that it was necessary to comply with Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, but had not made the required strong showing. Id. at 2334. Similarly, in Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1470 (2017), the Court rejected a claim that a race-based district was necessary to comply with Section 2 when the State of North Carolina could not show the preconditions required to make such a claim.

Turning to Congressional District 3 in the proposed plan, I believe it will be vulnerable to a serious—and probably a winning—Shaw-type claim under the Fourteenth Amendment. I understand that there will be little dispute that the district was drawn with its racial characteristics as the predominant consideration. I also understand that the shape of the district will be well-explained by the effort to include African-American populations around Tallahassee and Jacksonville. Moreover, the district clearly violates traditional districting criteria. Its Popper-Polsby score is 10%, and its Reock score is 11%. These are very low compactness scores for any U.S. congressional district, and in both cases these are the lowest compactness scores in the State of Florida.[4]

I also believe that the defenders of District 3 will be unable to justify the district so as to satisfy their burden of strict scrutiny. To begin with, I am unaware of the existence of any sort of "a strong showing of a pre-enactment analysis with justifiable conclusions." Abbott, 138 S. Ct. at 2335. But further, even if the race-based character of the districts could be justified under federal or Florida law, the district's noncompactness will compel the legal conclusion that it is not "narrowly tailored" to achieve its goals, as it must be to satisfy strict

[4] District 3 also has the third worst Area/Convex Hull score in the State. However, I do not consider the Area/Convex Hull test to be a reliable compactness measure. There are too many district indentations and distortions it simply cannot "see." Accordingly, it is too forgiving.

scrutiny. See Miller, 515 U.S. at 921 ("The congressional plan challenged here was not required by the Voting Rights Act under a correct reading of the statute.").

As a final point, the fact that the BVAP in District 3 is at around 44% according to the House Committee's online information (or 42% according to the Princeton Gerrymandering Project) will defeat the State's ability to justify the district. The Supreme Court has held that no Section 2 claim is possible where the minority VAP is less than 50%. Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 19-20 (2009) ("It remains the rule … that a party asserting § 2 liability must show by a preponderance of the evidence that the minority population in the potential election district is greater than 50 percent."). The Supreme Court has at least suggested that the same rule applies in the context of Section 5. Perry v. Perez, 565 U.S. 388, 398-99 (2012) ("The court's order suggests that it may have intentionally drawn … a 'minority coalition opportunity district' in which the court expected two different minority groups to band together to form an electoral majority"; and, if so, "it had no basis for doing so. Cf. Bartlett …"). See also In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 625 (2012) ("Just as Section 2 jurisprudence guides the Court in analyzing the state vote dilution claims, when we interpret our state provision prohibiting the diminishment of racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of choice, we are guided by any jurisprudence interpreting Section 5.").

In sum, if I were asked by a client whether Congressional District 3 complies with the federal constitution, my answer would be an emphatic no.

Honorable Tyler Sirois
Member, Florida House of Representatives
Chairman, Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee

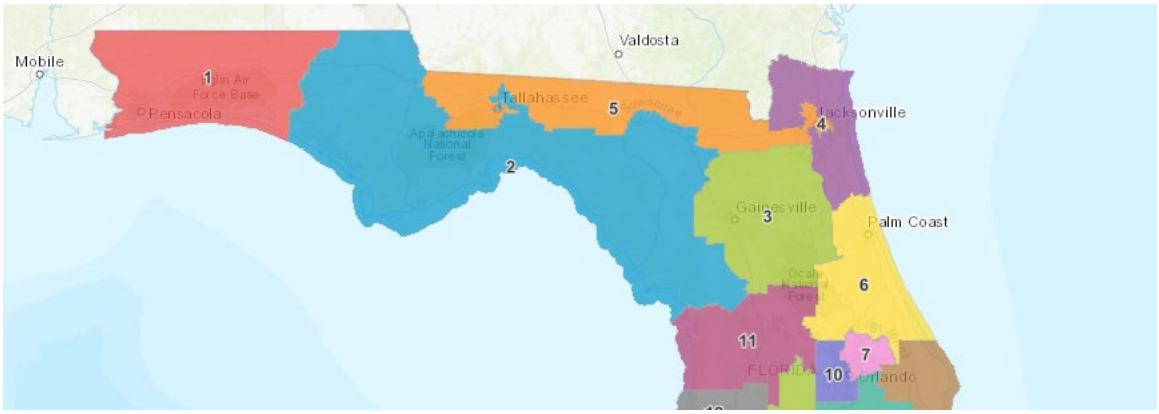
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Dear Chairman Sirois:

I write to convey the legal objections of the Executive Office of the Governor to the inclusion of Congressional District 3 in the maps proposed by the staff of the Florida House Redistricting Committee. The proposed district, which largely tracks current Congressional District 5, spans approximately 200 miles from East to West and cuts across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population in Leon and Gadsden Counties. The district is not compact and does not otherwise conform to usual political or geographic boundaries. Instead, it appears to be drawn solely to combine separate minority populations from different regions of northern Florida in a less than majority-minority district so that together they may have an opportunity to elect a candidate of their choice.



Where race is "the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," the legislature must prove that such "race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463-64 (2017) (citations omitted). Because the Legislature cannot show that the proposed Congressional District 3 would satisfy strict scrutiny, the proposed district violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and should not be included in any map enacted by the Florida House of Representatives.

Proposed Congressional District 3 (Blue)

Current Congressional District 5 (Orange)

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment generally prohibits state laws that separate citizens into groups on the basis of race. A state law that "expressly distinguishes among citizens because of their race" can survive legal challenge only if it is "narrowly tailored to further a compelling governmental interest." Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 (1993). This principle applies not only to a law that "contains explicit racial distinctions, but also to those 'rare' statutes that, although race neutral, are, on their face, 'unexplainable on grounds other than race.'" Id. (quoting Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). Redistricting legislation is treated no differently. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, "redistricting legislation that is so bizarre on its face" that it can only be explained because of race "demands the same close scrutiny that we give other state laws that classify citizens by race." Id. at 644.

To state an equal protection claim, a plaintiff must "show, either through circumstantial evidence of a district's shape and demographics or more direct evidence going to legislative purpose, that race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's [line-drawing] decision." Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 916 (1995). Specifically, the plaintiff must prove that "the legislature subordinated traditional race-neutral districting principles, including but not limited to compactness, contiguity, and respect for political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests, to racial considerations." Id.

Given the foregoing considerations, it is evident that non-racial grounds cannot explain proposed Congressional District 3. First, the district violates traditional districting principles. Far from compact, the district records compactness scores as low as .11 on the Reock test, .63 on the Area / Convex Hull test, and .1 on the Polsby-Popper test. It also does not respect political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests. The district splits four counties and three municipalities, and it stretches across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with minority populations in Leon and Gadsden Counties. These communities are in separate and distinct regions of northern Florida and are not defined by shared interests. With respect to contiguity, the district narrows to a mere three miles wide from North to South when traversing the northernmost precincts of Leon County at the state's northern border in an effort to include the minority populations in western Leon County and Gadsden County while avoiding the non-minority population in eastern Leon County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Second, only two considerations plausibly explain the district's unusual shape—partisanship or race. If the district were drawn to favor partisan interests, it would violate the Fair Districts Amendment of the Florida Constitution. Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution provides that "[n]o apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." If improper partisan interests did not play a role, the only reasonable explanation for the district is race. This conclusion follows from the historical circumstances surrounding the creation of the current district.

The Florida Supreme Court drew the current district—Congressional District 5—in 2015. The Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando because it concluded that such configuration had been unconstitutionally tainted by improper partisan influences. League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 403 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). The Court further held that the North-South version was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. Consequently, the Court adopted the current East-West version. Id. at 405-06. While acknowledging that the new configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), the Court determined that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. at 405. The Court explained that the non-compact shape was necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted). Thus, it is clear that race considerations predominated in the drawing of the current district. And because the proposed reapportionment plan seeks to retain the district in large measure to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, race considerations likewise predominate in the creation of proposed Congressional District 3.

Third, it is obvious, given the location of minority neighborhoods and precincts, that district lines in both Jacksonville and Tallahassee were drawn specifically to capture minority populations and to combine them into one district. But according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "[a] reapportionment plan that includes in one district individuals who belong to the same race, but who are otherwise widely separated by geographical and political boundaries, and who may have little in common with one another but the color of their skin, bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid." Shaw, 509 U.S. at 647. By attempting to connect a minority population in Jacksonville with a faraway minority population in Tallahassee and surrounding areas, proposed Congressional District 3 does precisely what the U.S. Supreme Court has condemned.

Because it subordinates traditional districting criteria to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, Congressional District 3 is a racial gerrymander that can survive constitutional challenge only if the Legislature can prove that "its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1464 (citation omitted). The Legislature cannot meet that exacting burden here.

The U.S. Supreme Court has long assumed, without definitively deciding, that complying with the Voting Rights Act ("VRA") is a compelling interest. Id. at 1464, 1469. In this case, however, there is no good reason to believe that the VRA requires Congressional District 3. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 26 (2009) (plurality), Section 2 is satisfied only when a compact majority of minority citizens can be drawn into a single district. But there is no configuration in any proposal put forward in any public map that we are aware of that has created a majority-minority district in northern Florida.

As both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court have noted, Section 2 prohibits the dilution of minority votes where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1470 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50 (1986); In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 622-23 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I"). Congressional District 3 is not a reasonably configured district, and in any event, it does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority.

Nor does Section 5 of the VRA require Congressional District 3. Before the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the VRA's coverage formula in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553-57 (2013), the State of Florida was not a covered jurisdiction under Section 5, but five Florida counties were: Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe. None of those counties are in Congressional District 3. Moreover, even assuming that compliance with the VRA is a compelling interest, it is doubtful that "continued compliance with [Section] 5 remains a compelling interest" in light of "Shelby County v. Holder." Ala. Legis. Black Caucus v. Alabama, 575 U.S. 254, 276 (2015).

Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA, see Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-20, it should be noted that Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." Shelby County, 570 U.S. at 534-35; see also South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 329-34 (1966). When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

In any event, the non-diminishment provision of the Florida Constitution simply does not require Congressional District 3. Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution provides that "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." This section contains two relevant provisions: the first is the non-vote-dilution provision ("districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process"), and the second is the non-diminishment provision ("districts shall not be drawn . . . to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"). The

Florida Supreme Court has held that the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-23.

When Article III, Section 20(a) is read in this context, it becomes apparent that the group referenced in the latter non-diminishment provision is the very same group of "racial or language minorities" referenced in the former non-vote-dilution provision. The word "their" in the non-diminishment provision necessarily refers back to the "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision. Because the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA, and because Section 2 only applies to districts that contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, the non-diminishment provision should also apply to those kinds of districts. Because Congressional District 3 does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision does not apply.

With this reading, both the non-vote-dilution provision and the non-diminishment provision work in tandem. The non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form geographically compact districts where appropriate. See Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50-51 (requiring, additionally, political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477-80 (1997). In other words, the non-vote-dilution provision goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

This reading of Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision to refer to "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision flows from the text of the Florida Constitution. It also gives the Florida Constitution the best chance to avoid the federal constitutional concerns raised above. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1463-64, 1482 (invalidating two North Carolina congressional districts).

In sum, I respectfully ask that you consider the foregoing legal objections to Congressional District 3. I also respectfully ask that you include in the legislative record Governor DeSantis' advisory opinion request to the Florida Supreme Court and the Governor's brief before the Florida Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

Ryan Newman

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

Honorable Tyler Sirois
Member, Florida House of Representatives
Chairman, Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee
400 South Monroe Street

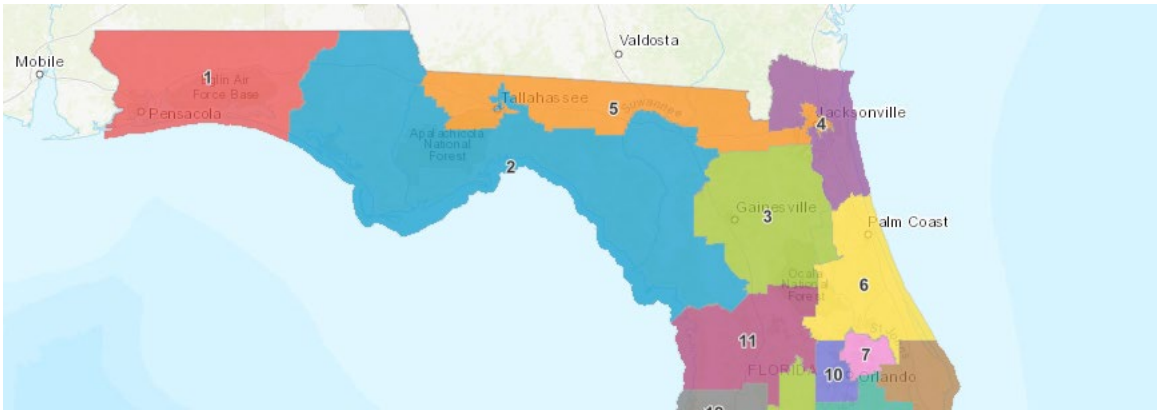
Dear Chairman Sirois:

I write to convey the legal objections of the Executive Office of the Governor to the inclusion of Congressional District 3 in the maps proposed by the staff of the Florida House Redistricting Committee. The proposed district, which largely tracks current Congressional District 5, spans approximately 200 miles from East to West and cuts across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population in Leon and Gadsden Counties. The district is not compact and does not otherwise conform to usual political or geographic boundaries. Instead, it appears to be drawn solely to combine separate minority populations from different regions of northern Florida in a less than majority-minority district so that together they may have an opportunity to elect a candidate of their choice.



Where race is "the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," the legislature must prove that such "race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463-64 (2017) (citations omitted). Because the Legislature cannot show that the proposed Congressional District 3 would satisfy strict scrutiny, the proposed district violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and should not be included in any map enacted by the Florida House of Representatives.

Proposed Congressional District 3 (Blue)

Current Congressional District 5 (Orange)

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment generally prohibits state laws that separate citizens into groups on the basis of race. A state law that "expressly distinguishes among citizens because of their race" can survive legal challenge only if it is "narrowly tailored to further a compelling governmental interest." Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 (1993). This principle applies not only to a law that "contains explicit racial distinctions, but also to those 'rare' statutes that, although race neutral, are, on their face, 'unexplainable on grounds other than race.'" Id. (quoting Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). Redistricting legislation is treated no differently. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, "redistricting legislation that is so bizarre on its face" that it can only be explained because of race "demands the same close scrutiny that we give other state laws that classify citizens by race." Id. at 644.

To state an equal protection claim, a plaintiff must "show, either through circumstantial evidence of a district's shape and demographics or more direct evidence going to legislative purpose, that race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's [line-drawing] decision." Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 916 (1995). Specifically, the plaintiff must prove that "the legislature subordinated traditional race-neutral districting principles, including but not limited to compactness, contiguity, and respect for political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests, to racial considerations." Id.

Given the foregoing considerations, it is evident that non-racial grounds cannot explain proposed Congressional District 3. First, the district violates traditional districting principles. Far from compact, the district records compactness scores as low as .11 on the Reock test, .63 on the Area / Convex Hull test, and .1 on the Polsby-Popper test. It also does not respect political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests. The district splits four counties and three municipalities, and it stretches across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with minority populations in Leon and Gadsden Counties. These communities are in separate and distinct regions of northern Florida and are not defined by shared interests. With respect to contiguity, the district narrows to a mere three miles wide from North to South when traversing the northernmost precincts of Leon County at the state's northern border in an effort to include the minority populations in western Leon County and Gadsden County while avoiding the non-minority population in eastern Leon County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Second, only two considerations plausibly explain the district's unusual shape—partisanship or race. If the district were drawn to favor partisan interests, it would violate the Fair Districts Amendment of the Florida Constitution. Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution provides that "[n]o apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." If improper partisan interests did not play a role, the only reasonable explanation for the district is race. This conclusion follows from the historical circumstances surrounding the creation of the current district.

The Florida Supreme Court drew the current district—Congressional District 5—in 2015. The Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando because it concluded that such configuration had been unconstitutionally tainted by improper partisan influences. League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 403 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). The Court further held that the North-South version was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. Consequently, the Court adopted the current East-West version. Id. at 405-06. While acknowledging that the new configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), the Court determined that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. at 405. The Court explained that the non-compact shape was necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted). Thus, it is clear that race considerations predominated in the drawing of the current district. And because the proposed reapportionment plan seeks to retain the district in large measure to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, race considerations likewise predominate in the creation of proposed Congressional District 3.

Third, it is obvious, given the location of minority neighborhoods and precincts, that district lines in both Jacksonville and Tallahassee were drawn specifically to capture minority populations and to combine them into one district. But according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "[a] reapportionment plan that includes in one district individuals who belong to the same race, but who are otherwise widely separated by geographical and political boundaries, and who may have little in common with one another but the color of their skin, bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid." Shaw, 509 U.S. at 647. By attempting to connect a minority population in Jacksonville with a faraway minority population in Tallahassee and surrounding areas, proposed Congressional District 3 does precisely what the U.S. Supreme Court has condemned.

Because it subordinates traditional districting criteria to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, Congressional District 3 is a racial gerrymander that can survive constitutional challenge only if the Legislature can prove that "its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1464 (citation omitted). The Legislature cannot meet that exacting burden here.

The U.S. Supreme Court has long assumed, without definitively deciding, that complying with the Voting Rights Act ("VRA") is a compelling interest. Id. at 1464, 1469. In this case, however, there is no good reason to believe that the VRA requires Congressional District 3. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 26 (2009) (plurality), Section 2 is satisfied only when a compact majority of minority citizens can be drawn into a single district. But there is no configuration in any proposal put forward in any public map that we are aware of that has created a majority-minority district in northern Florida.

As both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court have noted, Section 2 prohibits the dilution of minority votes where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1470 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50 (1986); In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 622-23 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I"). Congressional District 3 is not a reasonably configured district, and in any event, it does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority.

Nor does Section 5 of the VRA require Congressional District 3. Before the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the VRA's coverage formula in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553-57 (2013), the State of Florida was not a covered jurisdiction under Section 5, but five Florida counties were: Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe. None of those counties are in Congressional District 3. Moreover, even assuming that compliance with the VRA is a compelling interest, it is doubtful that "continued compliance with [Section] 5 remains a compelling interest" in light of "Shelby County v. Holder." Ala. Legis. Black Caucus v. Alabama, 575 U.S. 254, 276 (2015).

Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA, see Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-20, it should be noted that Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." Shelby County, 570 U.S. at 534-35; see also South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 329-34 (1966). When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

In any event, the non-diminishment provision of the Florida Constitution simply does not require Congressional District 3. Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution provides that "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." This section contains two relevant provisions: the first is the non-vote-dilution provision ("districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process"), and the second is the non-diminishment provision ("districts shall not be drawn . . . to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"). The

Florida Supreme Court has held that the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-23.

When Article III, Section 20(a) is read in this context, it becomes apparent that the group referenced in the latter non-diminishment provision is the very same group of "racial or language minorities" referenced in the former non-vote-dilution provision. The word "their" in the non-diminishment provision necessarily refers back to the "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision. Because the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA, and because Section 2 only applies to districts that contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, the non-diminishment provision should also apply to those kinds of districts. Because Congressional District 3 does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision does not apply.

With this reading, both the non-vote-dilution provision and the non-diminishment provision work in tandem. The non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form geographically compact districts where appropriate. See Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50-51 (requiring, additionally, political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477-80 (1997). In other words, the non-vote-dilution provision goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

This reading of Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision to refer to "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision flows from the text of the Florida Constitution. It also gives the Florida Constitution the best chance to avoid the federal constitutional concerns raised above. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1463-64, 1482 (invalidating two North Carolina congressional districts).

In sum, I respectfully ask that you consider the foregoing legal objections to Congressional District 3. I also respectfully ask that you include in the legislative record Governor DeSantis' advisory opinion request to the Florida Supreme Court and the Governor's brief before the Florida Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

Ryan Newman

Supreme Court of Florida

No. SC22-139

ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR RE: WHETHER ARTICLE III, SECTION 20(A) OF THE FLORIDA CONSTITUTION REQUIRES THE RETENTION OF A DISTRICT IN NORTHERN FLORIDA, etc.

February 10, 2022

PER CURIAM.

On February 1, 2022, the Governor of Florida requested an advisory opinion from this Court pursuant to article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution relating to the constitutionality of redistricting congressional District 5. Specifically, the Governor asks, "whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice." The Governor also cites precedent from this Court and the United States Supreme Court pertaining to this issue and seeks further "guidance on what the non-diminishment standard" requires and "clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished." On February 2, 2022, this Court requested "briefs from interested persons addressing whether the Governor's request is within the purview of [article IV, section 1(c)], and if so whether the Court should exercise its discretion to provide an opinion in response to the request."

Several interested persons argue that the Court does not have jurisdiction to render an advisory opinion under the circumstances described by the Governor's request. We need not make that determination because assuming the Court has jurisdiction, which we do not decide, we exercise our discretion to deny the request for an advisory opinion. See Advisory Op. to Governor re Implementation of Amendment 4, The Voting Restoration Amendment, 288 So. 3d 1070, 1074 (Fla. 2020) ("After concluding that the Governor's request was within the purview of article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution, we agreed to exercise our discretion to provide an advisory opinion."); In re Advisory Op. to the Governor, 509 So. 2d 292, 300 (Fla. 1987) ("It is the decision of the Court that this request is answerable under the above-noted section of the Constitution and we exercise our discretion to do so.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

This Court's advisory opinions to the Governor are generally limited to narrow questions. See, e.g., Advisory Op. to Governor re Implementation of Amendment 4, 288 So. 3d at 1075 (answering only "the narrow question of whether the phrase 'all terms of sentence' includes LFOs ordered by the sentencing court"). Here, the scope of the Governor's request is broad and contains multiple questions that implicate complex federal and state constitutional matters and precedents interpreting the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

While this Court acknowledges the importance of the issues presented by the Governor and the expressed need for quick resolution and finality, history shows that the constitutionality of a final redistricting bill for all congressional districts will be subject to more judicial review through subsequent challenges in court. Moreover, the Governor's request might necessitate fact-intensive analysis and consideration of other congressional districts, not just District 5. We have no record before us setting forth a functional analysis of statistical evidence, such as the voting age of minority populations and election results. A record will assist the judiciary in answering the complex federal and state constitutional issues implicated by the Governor's request. See generally Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 671 (Fla. 1980) (a declaratory action challenging the constitutionality of legislative action in circuit court will enable the parties "to develop a full record upon which the court can base an intelligent decision").

Accordingly, we respectfully deny the request for an advisory opinion. No rehearing will be permitted.

It is so ordered.

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the [1] See Qualifying Information, Fla. Div. of Elections, https://dos.myflorida.com/elections/candidates-committees/qualifying (last visited February 7, 2022).

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

Honorable Tyler Sirois
Member, Florida House of Representatives
Chairman, Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee
400 South Monroe Street

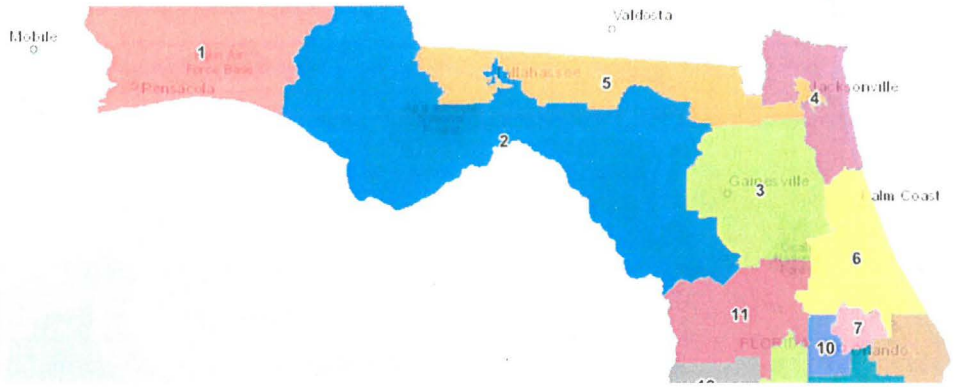
Dear Chairman Sirois:

I write to convey the legal objections of the Executive Office of the Governor to the inclusion of Congressional District 3 in the maps proposed by the staff of the Florida House Redistricting Committee. The proposed district, which largely tracks current Congressional District 5, spans approximately 200 miles from East to West and cuts across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population in Leon and Gadsden Counties. The district is not compact and does not otherwise conform to usual political or geographic boundaries. Instead, it appears to be drawn solely to combine separate minority populations from different regions of northern Florida in a less than majority-minority district so that together they may have an opportunity to elect a candidate of their choice.



Where race is "the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," the legislature must prove that such "race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463-64 (2017) (citations omitted). Because the Legislature cannot show that the proposed Congressional District 3 would satisfy strict scrutiny, the proposed district violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and should not be included in any map enacted by the Florida House of Representatives.

Proposed Congressional District 3 (Blue)

Current Congressional District 5 (Orange)

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment generally prohibits state laws that separate citizens into groups on the basis of race. A state law that "expressly distinguishes among citizens because of their race" can survive legal challenge only if it is "narrowly tailored to further a compelling governmental interest." Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 (1993). This principle applies not only to a law that "contains explicit racial distinctions, but also to those 'rare' statutes that, although race neutral, are, on their face, 'unexplainable on grounds other than race.'" Id. (quoting Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). Redistricting legislation is treated no differently. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, "redistricting legislation that is so bizarre on its face" that it can only be explained because of race "demands the same close scrutiny that we give other state laws that classify citizens by race." Id. at 644.

To state an equal protection claim, a plaintiff must "show, either through circumstantial evidence of a district's shape and demographics or more direct evidence going to legislative purpose, that race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's [line-drawing] decision." Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 916 (1995). Specifically, the plaintiff must prove that "the legislature subordinated traditional race-neutral districting principles, including but not limited to compactness, contiguity, and respect for political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests, to racial considerations." Id.

Given the foregoing considerations, it is evident that non-racial grounds cannot explain proposed Congressional District 3. First, the district violates traditional districting principles. Far from compact, the district records compactness scores as low as .11 on the Reock test, .63 on the Area / Convex Hull test, and .1 on the Polsby-Popper test. It also does not respect political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests. The district splits four counties and three municipalities, and it stretches across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with minority populations in Leon and Gadsden Counties. These communities are in separate and distinct regions of northern Florida and are not defined by shared interests. With respect to contiguity, the district narrows to a mere three miles wide from North to South when traversing the northernmost precincts of Leon County at the state's northern border in an effort to include the minority populations in western Leon County and Gadsden County while avoiding the non-minority population in eastern Leon County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Second, only two considerations plausibly explain the district's unusual shape—partisanship or race. If the district were drawn to favor partisan interests, it would violate the Fair Districts Amendment of the Florida Constitution. Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution provides that "[n]o apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." If improper partisan interests did not play a role, the only reasonable explanation for the district is race. This conclusion follows from the historical circumstances surrounding the creation of the current district.

The Florida Supreme Court drew the current district—Congressional District 5—in 2015. The Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando because it concluded that such configuration had been unconstitutionally tainted by improper partisan influences. League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 403 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). The Court further held that the North-South version was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. Consequently, the Court adopted the current East-West version. Id. at 405-06. While acknowledging that the new configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), the Court determined that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. at 405. The Court explained that the non-compact shape was necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted). Thus, it is clear that race considerations predominated in the drawing of the current district. And because the proposed reapportionment plan seeks to retain the district in large measure to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, race considerations likewise predominate in the creation of proposed Congressional District 3.

Third, it is obvious, given the location of minority neighborhoods and precincts, that district lines in both Jacksonville and Tallahassee were drawn specifically to capture minority populations and to combine them into one district. But according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "[a] reapportionment plan that includes in one district individuals who belong to the same race, but who are otherwise widely separated by geographical and political boundaries, and who may have little in common with one another but the color of their skin, bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid." Shaw, 509 U.S. at 647. By attempting to connect a minority population in Jacksonville with a faraway minority population in Tallahassee and surrounding areas, proposed Congressional District 3 does precisely what the U.S. Supreme Court has condemned.

Because it subordinates traditional districting criteria to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, Congressional District 3 is a racial gerrymander that can survive constitutional challenge only if the Legislature can prove that "its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1464 (citation omitted). The Legislature cannot meet that exacting burden here.

The U.S. Supreme Court has long assumed, without definitively deciding, that complying with the Voting Rights Act ("VRA") is a compelling interest. Id. at 1464, 1469. In this case, however, there is no good reason to believe that the VRA requires Congressional District 3. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 26 (2009) (plurality), Section 2 is satisfied only when a compact majority of minority citizens can be drawn into a single district. But there is no configuration in any proposal put forward in any public map that we are aware of that has created a majority-minority district in northern Florida.

As both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court have noted, Section 2 prohibits the dilution of minority votes where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1470 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50 (1986); In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 622-23 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I"). Congressional District 3 is not a reasonably configured district, and in any event, it does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority.

Nor does Section 5 of the VRA require Congressional District 3. Before the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the VRA's coverage formula in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553-57 (2013), the State of Florida was not a covered jurisdiction under Section 5, but five Florida counties were: Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe. None of those counties are in Congressional District 3. Moreover, even assuming that compliance with the VRA is a compelling interest, it is doubtful that "continued compliance with [Section] 5 remains a compelling interest" in light of "Shelby County v. Holder." Ala. Legis. Black Caucus v. Alabama, 575 U.S. 254, 276 (2015).

Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA, see Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-20, it should be noted that Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." Shelby County, 570 U.S. at 534-35; see also South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 329-34 (1966). When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

In any event, the non-diminishment provision of the Florida Constitution simply does not require Congressional District 3. Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution provides that "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." This section contains two relevant provisions: the first is the non-vote-dilution provision ("districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process"), and the second is the non-diminishment provision ("districts shall not be drawn . . . to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"). The

Florida Supreme Court has held that the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-23.

When Article III, Section 20(a) is read in this context, it becomes apparent that the group referenced in the latter non-diminishment provision is the very same group of "racial or language minorities" referenced in the former non-vote-dilution provision. The word "their" in the non-diminishment provision necessarily refers back to the "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision. Because the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA, and because Section 2 only applies to districts that contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, the non-diminishment provision should also apply to those kinds of districts. Because Congressional District 3 does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision does not apply.

With this reading, both the non-vote-dilution provision and the non-diminishment provision work in tandem. The non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form geographically compact districts where appropriate. See Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50-51 (requiring, additionally, political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477-80 (1997). In other words, the non-vote-dilution provision goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

This reading of Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision to refer to "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision flows from the text of the Florida Constitution. It also gives the Florida Constitution the best chance to avoid the federal constitutional concerns raised above. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1463-64, 1482 (invalidating two North Carolina congressional districts).

In sum, I respectfully ask that you consider the foregoing legal objections to Congressional District 3. I also respectfully ask that you include in the legislative record Governor DeSantis' advisory opinion request to the Florida Supreme Court and the Governor's brief before the Florida Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

Ryan Newman

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

Honorable Tyler Sirois
Member, Florida House of Representatives
Chairman, Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee
400 South Monroe Street

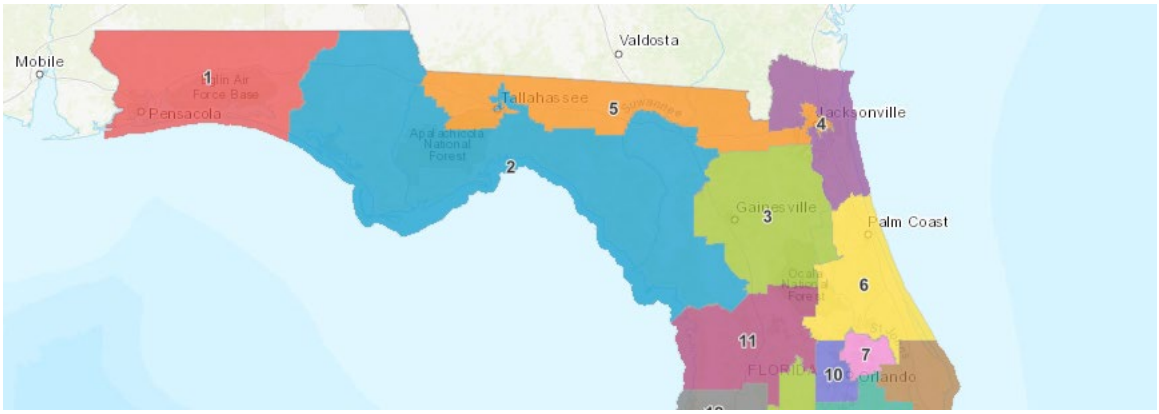
Dear Chairman Sirois:

I write to convey the legal objections of the Executive Office of the Governor to the inclusion of Congressional District 3 in the maps proposed by the staff of the Florida House Redistricting Committee. The proposed district, which largely tracks current Congressional District 5, spans approximately 200 miles from East to West and cuts across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population in Leon and Gadsden Counties. The district is not compact and does not otherwise conform to usual political or geographic boundaries. Instead, it appears to be drawn solely to combine separate minority populations from different regions of northern Florida in a less than majority-minority district so that together they may have an opportunity to elect a candidate of their choice.



Where race is "the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," the legislature must prove that such "race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463-64 (2017) (citations omitted). Because the Legislature cannot show that the proposed Congressional District 3 would satisfy strict scrutiny, the proposed district violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and should not be included in any map enacted by the Florida House of Representatives.

Proposed Congressional District 3 (Blue)

Current Congressional District 5 (Orange)

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment generally prohibits state laws that separate citizens into groups on the basis of race. A state law that "expressly distinguishes among citizens because of their race" can survive legal challenge only if it is "narrowly tailored to further a compelling governmental interest." Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 (1993). This principle applies not only to a law that "contains explicit racial distinctions, but also to those 'rare' statutes that, although race neutral, are, on their face, 'unexplainable on grounds other than race.'" Id. (quoting Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). Redistricting legislation is treated no differently. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, "redistricting legislation that is so bizarre on its face" that it can only be explained because of race "demands the same close scrutiny that we give other state laws that classify citizens by race." Id. at 644.

To state an equal protection claim, a plaintiff must "show, either through circumstantial evidence of a district's shape and demographics or more direct evidence going to legislative purpose, that race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's [line-drawing] decision." Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 916 (1995). Specifically, the plaintiff must prove that "the legislature subordinated traditional race-neutral districting principles, including but not limited to compactness, contiguity, and respect for political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests, to racial considerations." Id.

Given the foregoing considerations, it is evident that non-racial grounds cannot explain proposed Congressional District 3. First, the district violates traditional districting principles. Far from compact, the district records compactness scores as low as .11 on the Reock test, .63 on the Area / Convex Hull test, and .1 on the Polsby-Popper test. It also does not respect political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests. The district splits four counties and three municipalities, and it stretches across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with minority populations in Leon and Gadsden Counties. These communities are in separate and distinct regions of northern Florida and are not defined by shared interests. With respect to contiguity, the district narrows to a mere three miles wide from North to South when traversing the northernmost precincts of Leon County at the state's northern border in an effort to include the minority populations in western Leon County and Gadsden County while avoiding the non-minority population in eastern Leon County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Second, only two considerations plausibly explain the district's unusual shape—partisanship or race. If the district were drawn to favor partisan interests, it would violate the Fair Districts Amendment of the Florida Constitution. Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution provides that "[n]o apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." If improper partisan interests did not play a role, the only reasonable explanation for the district is race. This conclusion follows from the historical circumstances surrounding the creation of the current district.

The Florida Supreme Court drew the current district—Congressional District 5—in 2015. The Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando because it concluded that such configuration had been unconstitutionally tainted by improper partisan influences. League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 403 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). The Court further held that the North-South version was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. Consequently, the Court adopted the current East-West version. Id. at 405-06. While acknowledging that the new configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), the Court determined that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. at 405. The Court explained that the non-compact shape was necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted). Thus, it is clear that race considerations predominated in the drawing of the current district. And because the proposed reapportionment plan seeks to retain the district in large measure to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, race considerations likewise predominate in the creation of proposed Congressional District 3.

Third, it is obvious, given the location of minority neighborhoods and precincts, that district lines in both Jacksonville and Tallahassee were drawn specifically to capture minority populations and to combine them into one district. But according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "[a] reapportionment plan that includes in one district individuals who belong to the same race, but who are otherwise widely separated by geographical and political boundaries, and who may have little in common with one another but the color of their skin, bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid." Shaw, 509 U.S. at 647. By attempting to connect a minority population in Jacksonville with a faraway minority population in Tallahassee and surrounding areas, proposed Congressional District 3 does precisely what the U.S. Supreme Court has condemned.

Because it subordinates traditional districting criteria to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, Congressional District 3 is a racial gerrymander that can survive constitutional challenge only if the Legislature can prove that "its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1464 (citation omitted). The Legislature cannot meet that exacting burden here.

The U.S. Supreme Court has long assumed, without definitively deciding, that complying with the Voting Rights Act ("VRA") is a compelling interest. Id. at 1464, 1469. In this case, however, there is no good reason to believe that the VRA requires Congressional District 3. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 26 (2009) (plurality), Section 2 is satisfied only when a compact majority of minority citizens can be drawn into a single district. But there is no configuration in any proposal put forward in any public map that we are aware of that has created a majority-minority district in northern Florida.

As both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court have noted, Section 2 prohibits the dilution of minority votes where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1470 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50 (1986); In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 622-23 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I"). Congressional District 3 is not a reasonably configured district, and in any event, it does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority.

Nor does Section 5 of the VRA require Congressional District 3. Before the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the VRA's coverage formula in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553-57 (2013), the State of Florida was not a covered jurisdiction under Section 5, but five Florida counties were: Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe. None of those counties are in Congressional District 3. Moreover, even assuming that compliance with the VRA is a compelling interest, it is doubtful that "continued compliance with [Section] 5 remains a compelling interest" in light of "Shelby County v. Holder." Ala. Legis. Black Caucus v. Alabama, 575 U.S. 254, 276 (2015).

Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA, see Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-20, it should be noted that Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." Shelby County, 570 U.S. at 534-35; see also South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 329-34 (1966). When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

In any event, the non-diminishment provision of the Florida Constitution simply does not require Congressional District 3. Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution provides that "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." This section contains two relevant provisions: the first is the non-vote-dilution provision ("districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process"), and the second is the non-diminishment provision ("districts shall not be drawn . . . to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"). The

Florida Supreme Court has held that the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-23.

When Article III, Section 20(a) is read in this context, it becomes apparent that the group referenced in the latter non-diminishment provision is the very same group of "racial or language minorities" referenced in the former non-vote-dilution provision. The word "their" in the non-diminishment provision necessarily refers back to the "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision. Because the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA, and because Section 2 only applies to districts that contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, the non-diminishment provision should also apply to those kinds of districts. Because Congressional District 3 does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision does not apply.

With this reading, both the non-vote-dilution provision and the non-diminishment provision work in tandem. The non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form geographically compact districts where appropriate. See Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50-51 (requiring, additionally, political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477-80 (1997). In other words, the non-vote-dilution provision goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

This reading of Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision to refer to "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision flows from the text of the Florida Constitution. It also gives the Florida Constitution the best chance to avoid the federal constitutional concerns raised above. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1463-64, 1482 (invalidating two North Carolina congressional districts).

In sum, I respectfully ask that you consider the foregoing legal objections to Congressional District 3. I also respectfully ask that you include in the legislative record Governor DeSantis' advisory opinion request to the Florida Supreme Court and the Governor's brief before the Florida Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

Ryan Newman

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

FL-GOV-22-0226-D-000344

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

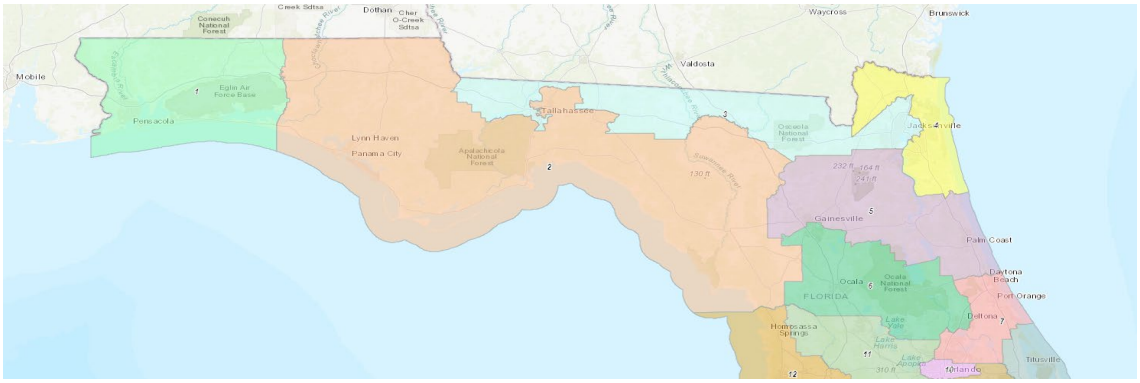
February 18, 2022



Honorable Tyler Sirois
Member, Florida House of Representatives
Chairman, Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee
400 South Monroe Street

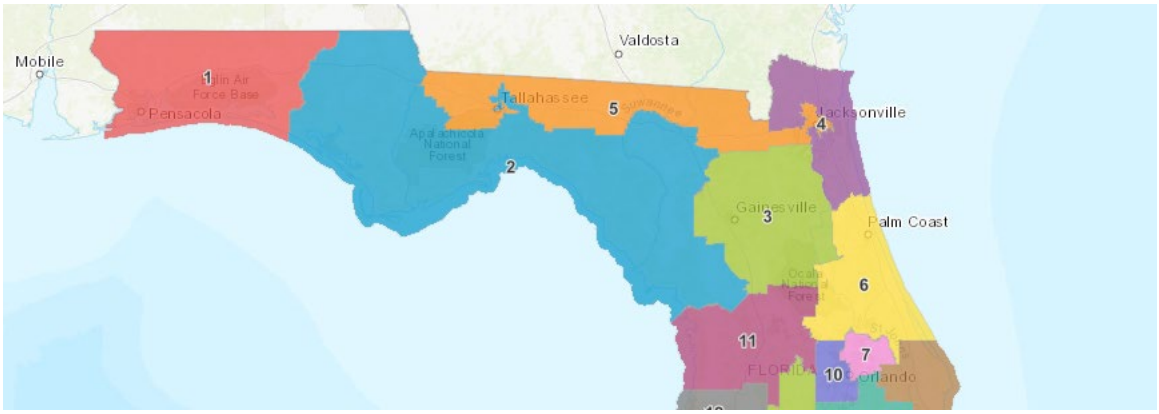
Dear Chairman Sirois:

I write to convey the legal objections of the Executive Office of the Governor to the inclusion of Congressional District 3 in the maps proposed by the staff of the Florida House Redistricting Committee. The proposed district, which largely tracks current Congressional District 5, spans approximately 200 miles from East to West and cuts across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population in Leon and Gadsden Counties. The district is not compact and does not otherwise conform to usual political or geographic boundaries. Instead, it appears to be drawn solely to combine separate minority populations from different regions of northern Florida in a less than majority-minority district so that together they may have an opportunity to elect a candidate of their choice.



Where race is "the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," the legislature must prove that such "race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463-64 (2017) (citations omitted). Because the Legislature cannot show that the proposed Congressional District 3 would satisfy strict scrutiny, the proposed district violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and should not be included in any map enacted by the Florida House of Representatives.

Proposed Congressional District 3 (Blue)

Current Congressional District 5 (Orange)

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment generally prohibits state laws that separate citizens into groups on the basis of race. A state law that "expressly distinguishes among citizens because of their race" can survive legal challenge only if it is "narrowly tailored to further a compelling governmental interest." Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 (1993). This principle applies not only to a law that "contains explicit racial distinctions, but also to those 'rare' statutes that, although race neutral, are, on their face, 'unexplainable on grounds other than race.'" Id. (quoting Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). Redistricting legislation is treated no differently. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, "redistricting legislation that is so bizarre on its face" that it can only be explained because of race "demands the same close scrutiny that we give other state laws that classify citizens by race." Id. at 644.

To state an equal protection claim, a plaintiff must "show, either through circumstantial evidence of a district's shape and demographics or more direct evidence going to legislative purpose, that race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's [line-drawing] decision." Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 916 (1995). Specifically, the plaintiff must prove that "the legislature subordinated traditional race-neutral districting principles, including but not limited to compactness, contiguity, and respect for political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests, to racial considerations." Id.

Given the foregoing considerations, it is evident that non-racial grounds cannot explain proposed Congressional District 3. First, the district violates traditional districting principles. Far from compact, the district records compactness scores as low as .11 on the Reock test, .63 on the Area / Convex Hull test, and .1 on the Polsby-Popper test. It also does not respect political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests. The district splits four counties and three municipalities, and it stretches across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with minority populations in Leon and Gadsden Counties. These communities are in separate and distinct regions of northern Florida and are not defined by shared interests. With respect to contiguity, the district narrows to a mere three miles wide from North to South when traversing the northernmost precincts of Leon County at the state's northern border in an effort to include the minority populations in western Leon County and Gadsden County while avoiding the non-minority population in eastern Leon County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Second, only two considerations plausibly explain the district's unusual shape—partisanship or race. If the district were drawn to favor partisan interests, it would violate the Fair Districts Amendment of the Florida Constitution. Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution provides that "[n]o apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." If improper partisan interests did not play a role, the only reasonable explanation for the district is race. This conclusion follows from the historical circumstances surrounding the creation of the current district.

The Florida Supreme Court drew the current district—Congressional District 5—in 2015. The Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando because it concluded that such configuration had been unconstitutionally tainted by improper partisan influences. League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 403 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). The Court further held that the North-South version was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. Consequently, the Court adopted the current East-West version. Id. at 405-06. While acknowledging that the new configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), the Court determined that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. at 405. The Court explained that the non-compact shape was necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted). Thus, it is clear that race considerations predominated in the drawing of the current district. And because the proposed reapportionment plan seeks to retain the district in large measure to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, race considerations likewise predominate in the creation of proposed Congressional District 3.

Third, it is obvious, given the location of minority neighborhoods and precincts, that district lines in both Jacksonville and Tallahassee were drawn specifically to capture minority populations and to combine them into one district. But according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "[a] reapportionment plan that includes in one district individuals who belong to the same race, but who are otherwise widely separated by geographical and political boundaries, and who may have little in common with one another but the color of their skin, bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid." Shaw, 509 U.S. at 647. By attempting to connect a minority population in Jacksonville with a faraway minority population in Tallahassee and surrounding areas, proposed Congressional District 3 does precisely what the U.S. Supreme Court has condemned.

Because it subordinates traditional districting criteria to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, Congressional District 3 is a racial gerrymander that can survive constitutional challenge only if the Legislature can prove that "its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1464 (citation omitted). The Legislature cannot meet that exacting burden here.

The U.S. Supreme Court has long assumed, without definitively deciding, that complying with the Voting Rights Act ("VRA") is a compelling interest. Id. at 1464, 1469. In this case, however, there is no good reason to believe that the VRA requires Congressional District 3. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 26 (2009) (plurality), Section 2 is satisfied only when a compact majority of minority citizens can be drawn into a single district. But there is no configuration in any proposal put forward in any public map that we are aware of that has created a majority-minority district in northern Florida.

As both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court have noted, Section 2 prohibits the dilution of minority votes where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1470 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50 (1986); In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 622-23 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I"). Congressional District 3 is not a reasonably configured district, and in any event, it does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority.

Nor does Section 5 of the VRA require Congressional District 3. Before the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the VRA's coverage formula in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553-57 (2013), the State of Florida was not a covered jurisdiction under Section 5, but five Florida counties were: Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe. None of those counties are in Congressional District 3. Moreover, even assuming that compliance with the VRA is a compelling interest, it is doubtful that "continued compliance with [Section] 5 remains a compelling interest" in light of "Shelby County v. Holder." Ala. Legis. Black Caucus v. Alabama, 575 U.S. 254, 276 (2015).

Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA, see Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-20, it should be noted that Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." Shelby County, 570 U.S. at 534-35; see also South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 329-34 (1966). When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

In any event, the non-diminishment provision of the Florida Constitution simply does not require Congressional District 3. Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution provides that "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." This section contains two relevant provisions: the first is the non-vote-dilution provision ("districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process"), and the second is the non-diminishment provision ("districts shall not be drawn . . . to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"). The

Florida Supreme Court has held that the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-23.

When Article III, Section 20(a) is read in this context, it becomes apparent that the group referenced in the latter non-diminishment provision is the very same group of "racial or language minorities" referenced in the former non-vote-dilution provision. The word "their" in the non-diminishment provision necessarily refers back to the "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision. Because the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA, and because Section 2 only applies to districts that contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, the non-diminishment provision should also apply to those kinds of districts. Because Congressional District 3 does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision does not apply.

With this reading, both the non-vote-dilution provision and the non-diminishment provision work in tandem. The non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form geographically compact districts where appropriate. See Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50-51 (requiring, additionally, political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477-80 (1997). In other words, the non-vote-dilution provision goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

This reading of Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision to refer to "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision flows from the text of the Florida Constitution. It also gives the Florida Constitution the best chance to avoid the federal constitutional concerns raised above. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1463-64, 1482 (invalidating two North Carolina congressional districts).

In sum, I respectfully ask that you consider the foregoing legal objections to Congressional District 3. I also respectfully ask that you include in the legislative record Governor DeSantis' advisory opinion request to the Florida Supreme Court and the Governor's brief before the Florida Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

Ryan Newman

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

Honorable Tyler Sirois
Member, Florida House of Representatives
Chairman, Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee
400 South Monroe Street

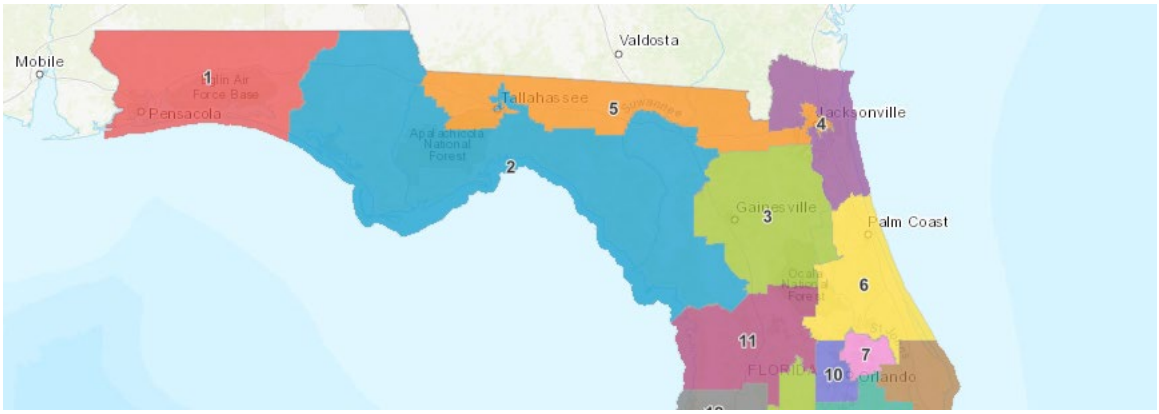
Dear Chairman Sirois:

I write to convey the legal objections of the Executive Office of the Governor to the inclusion of Congressional District 3 in the maps proposed by the staff of the Florida House Redistricting Committee. The proposed district, which largely tracks current Congressional District 5, spans approximately 200 miles from East to West and cuts across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population in Leon and Gadsden Counties. The district is not compact and does not otherwise conform to usual political or geographic boundaries. Instead, it appears to be drawn solely to combine separate minority populations from different regions of northern Florida in a less than majority-minority district so that together they may have an opportunity to elect a candidate of their choice.



Where race is "the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," the legislature must prove that such "race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463-64 (2017) (citations omitted). Because the Legislature cannot show that the proposed Congressional District 3 would satisfy strict scrutiny, the proposed district violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and should not be included in any map enacted by the Florida House of Representatives.

Proposed Congressional District 3 (Blue)

Current Congressional District 5 (Orange)

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment generally prohibits state laws that separate citizens into groups on the basis of race. A state law that "expressly distinguishes among citizens because of their race" can survive legal challenge only if it is "narrowly tailored to further a compelling governmental interest." Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 (1993). This principle applies not only to a law that "contains explicit racial distinctions, but also to those 'rare' statutes that, although race neutral, are, on their face, 'unexplainable on grounds other than race.'" Id. (quoting Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). Redistricting legislation is treated no differently. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, "redistricting legislation that is so bizarre on its face" that it can only be explained because of race "demands the same close scrutiny that we give other state laws that classify citizens by race." Id. at 644.

To state an equal protection claim, a plaintiff must "show, either through circumstantial evidence of a district's shape and demographics or more direct evidence going to legislative purpose, that race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's [line-drawing] decision." Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 916 (1995). Specifically, the plaintiff must prove that "the legislature subordinated traditional race-neutral districting principles, including but not limited to compactness, contiguity, and respect for political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests, to racial considerations." Id.

Given the foregoing considerations, it is evident that non-racial grounds cannot explain proposed Congressional District 3. First, the district violates traditional districting principles. Far from compact, the district records compactness scores as low as .11 on the Reock test, .63 on the Area / Convex Hull test, and .1 on the Polsby-Popper test. It also does not respect political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests. The district splits four counties and three municipalities, and it stretches across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with minority populations in Leon and Gadsden Counties. These communities are in separate and distinct regions of northern Florida and are not defined by shared interests. With respect to contiguity, the district narrows to a mere three miles wide from North to South when traversing the northernmost precincts of Leon County at the state's northern border in an effort to include the minority populations in western Leon County and Gadsden County while avoiding the non-minority population in eastern Leon County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Second, only two considerations plausibly explain the district's unusual shape—partisanship or race. If the district were drawn to favor partisan interests, it would violate the Fair Districts Amendment of the Florida Constitution. Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution provides that "[n]o apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." If improper partisan interests did not play a role, the only reasonable explanation for the district is race. This conclusion follows from the historical circumstances surrounding the creation of the current district.

The Florida Supreme Court drew the current district—Congressional District 5—in 2015. The Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando because it concluded that such configuration had been unconstitutionally tainted by improper partisan influences. League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 403 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). The Court further held that the North-South version was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. Consequently, the Court adopted the current East-West version. Id. at 405-06. While acknowledging that the new configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), the Court determined that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. at 405. The Court explained that the non-compact shape was necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted). Thus, it is clear that race considerations predominated in the drawing of the current district. And because the proposed reapportionment plan seeks to retain the district in large measure to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, race considerations likewise predominate in the creation of proposed Congressional District 3.

Third, it is obvious, given the location of minority neighborhoods and precincts, that district lines in both Jacksonville and Tallahassee were drawn specifically to capture minority populations and to combine them into one district. But according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "[a] reapportionment plan that includes in one district individuals who belong to the same race, but who are otherwise widely separated by geographical and political boundaries, and who may have little in common with one another but the color of their skin, bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid." Shaw, 509 U.S. at 647. By attempting to connect a minority population in Jacksonville with a faraway minority population in Tallahassee and surrounding areas, proposed Congressional District 3 does precisely what the U.S. Supreme Court has condemned.

Because it subordinates traditional districting criteria to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, Congressional District 3 is a racial gerrymander that can survive constitutional challenge only if the Legislature can prove that "its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1464 (citation omitted). The Legislature cannot meet that exacting burden here.

The U.S. Supreme Court has long assumed, without definitively deciding, that complying with the Voting Rights Act ("VRA") is a compelling interest. Id. at 1464, 1469. In this case, however, there is no good reason to believe that the VRA requires Congressional District 3. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 26 (2009) (plurality), Section 2 is satisfied only when a compact majority of minority citizens can be drawn into a single district. But there is no configuration in any proposal put forward in any public map that we are aware of that has created a majority-minority district in northern Florida.

As both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court have noted, Section 2 prohibits the dilution of minority votes where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1470 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50 (1986); In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 622-23 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I"). Congressional District 3 is not a reasonably configured district, and in any event, it does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority.

Nor does Section 5 of the VRA require Congressional District 3. Before the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the VRA's coverage formula in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553-57 (2013), the State of Florida was not a covered jurisdiction under Section 5, but five Florida counties were: Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe. None of those counties are in Congressional District 3. Moreover, even assuming that compliance with the VRA is a compelling interest, it is doubtful that "continued compliance with [Section] 5 remains a compelling interest" in light of "Shelby County v. Holder." Ala. Legis. Black Caucus v. Alabama, 575 U.S. 254, 276 (2015).

Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA, see Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-20, it should be noted that Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." Shelby County, 570 U.S. at 534-35; see also South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 329-34 (1966). When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

In any event, the non-diminishment provision of the Florida Constitution simply does not require Congressional District 3. Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution provides that "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." This section contains two relevant provisions: the first is the non-vote-dilution provision ("districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process"), and the second is the non-diminishment provision ("districts shall not be drawn . . . to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"). The

Florida Supreme Court has held that the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-23.

When Article III, Section 20(a) is read in this context, it becomes apparent that the group referenced in the latter non-diminishment provision is the very same group of "racial or language minorities" referenced in the former non-vote-dilution provision. The word "their" in the non-diminishment provision necessarily refers back to the "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision. Because the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA, and because Section 2 only applies to districts that contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, the non-diminishment provision should also apply to those kinds of districts. Because Congressional District 3 does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision does not apply.

With this reading, both the non-vote-dilution provision and the non-diminishment provision work in tandem. The non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form geographically compact districts where appropriate. See Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50-51 (requiring, additionally, political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477-80 (1997). In other words, the non-vote-dilution provision goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

This reading of Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision to refer to "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision flows from the text of the Florida Constitution. It also gives the Florida Constitution the best chance to avoid the federal constitutional concerns raised above. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1463-64, 1482 (invalidating two North Carolina congressional districts).

In sum, I respectfully ask that you consider the foregoing legal objections to Congressional District 3. I also respectfully ask that you include in the legislative record Governor DeSantis' advisory opinion request to the Florida Supreme Court and the Governor's brief before the Florida Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

Ryan Newman

My name is Robert D. Popper. I am a Senior Attorney and Director of voting integrity efforts at Judicial Watch, Inc. Judicial Watch is a Washington, D.C.-based public interest nonprofit dedicated to promoting transparency, accountability, and integrity in government, politics, and the law.

I was admitted to the Bar in New York in 1990, and I have been practicing as a litigator for 32 years. I have special knowledge and expertise in the area of voting law and have written both popular and scholarly articles on the subject.[1] I have particular expertise in the areas of racial and political gerrymandering. In 1991, with Professor Daniel Polsby, I wrote an article describing a mathematical way to measure the geographic compactness of congressional districts.[2] This standard is now known as the "Polsby/Popper" criterion and is one of the most widely used tests of district compactness. In 1997, I brought a lawsuit that ultimately led to New York's 12th Congressional District being enjoined as an unconstitutional racial

In 2005, I joined the Voting Section of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, where I worked for eight years. In 2008, I received a Special Commendation Award for my efforts in enforcing Section 7 of the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 ("NVRA"), which requires state offices providing public assistance to offer those receiving it the opportunity to register to vote. That same year, I was promoted to Deputy Chief of the Voting Section. In my time at DOJ, I managed voting rights investigations, litigations, consent decrees, and settlements in dozens of states. I helped to enforce all the statutes the Department is charged with enforcing, including the NVRA, the Help America Vote Act of 2002, the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act of 1986, and the Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment Act of 2009. I managed lawsuits enforcing the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended, including the minority language provisions of Section 203; the preclearance provisions of Section 5; the anti-intimidation provisions of Section 11; and both vote denial and vote dilution claims under Section 2.

In 2013, I joined Judicial Watch. In my time there, I have filed voting rights lawsuits in federal and state courts alleging claims under the First, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments, Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, the NVRA, and a number of state constitutional provisions. Among other things, I am currently representing plaintiffs pursuing gerrymandering claims in Maryland State court.

In preparation for my testimony, I looked at Florida's proposed congressional districts in maps drawn by the Florida House Redistricting Committee (see H000C8011, dated

[3] Diaz v. Silver, 978 F. Supp. 96 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (three-judge court), aff'd mem., 521 U.S. 801 (1997).

In sum, my testimony is that proposed Congressional District 3 is highly vulnerable to being enjoined in a lawsuit that could be filed in federal court on the basis of principles embodied in the landmark ruling of Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630 (1993) and its progeny.

In Shaw, the Supreme Court first held that "redistricting legislation that is so extremely irregular on its face that it rationally can be viewed only as an effort to segregate the races for purposes of voting, without regard for traditional districting principles and without sufficiently compelling justification" states a federal, constitutional claim "under the Equal Protection Clause." 509 U.S. at 642. Two years later in Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900 (1995), the Supreme Court upheld a lower court ruling invalidating a Georgia district on the basis of Shaw. The Court explained that "the essence of the equal protection claim recognized in Shaw is that the State has used race as a basis for separating voters into districts." 515 U.S. at 911. Assigning voters on that basis "embod[ies] stereotypes that treat individuals as the product of their race, evaluating their thoughts and efforts—their very worth as citizens—according to a criterion barred to the Government by history and the Constitution." Id. at 912.

The racial intent behind the district challenged in Miller was apparent "when its shape is considered in conjunction with its racial and population densities." Id. at 917. Because "[r]ace was … the predominant, overriding factor" in its design, the district could not be "upheld unless it satisfies strict scrutiny, our most rigorous and exacting standard of constitutional review." Id. at 920. "To satisfy strict scrutiny, the State must demonstrate that its districting legislation is narrowly tailored to achieve a compelling interest." Id. The Court noted in particular that "creating a third majority-black district to satisfy the Justice

Department's preclearance demands" under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act was not enough under the circumstances to justify the challenged district:

> As we suggested in Shaw, compliance with federal antidiscrimination laws cannot justify race-based districting where the challenged district was not reasonably necessary under a constitutional reading and application of those laws. … The congressional plan challenged here was not required by the Voting Rights Act under a correct reading of the statute.

Id. at 921.

More recently, in Bethune-Hill v. Va. State Bd. of Elections, 137 S. Ct. 788, 797-98 (2017), the Court made clear that a plaintiff challenging a district under Shaw was not required to "establish, as a prerequisite to showing racial predominance, an actual conflict between the enacted plan and traditional redistricting principles." The Court recognized that "the 'constitutional violation' in racial gerrymandering cases stems from the 'racial purpose of state action, not its stark manifestation.'" Id. at 798 (citation omitted). Bethune-Hill is also noteworthy in that the Court, under a deferential review for "clear error," did not overturn the district court's finding that a district with 55% BVAP was necessary to avoid liability under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. But the Court in another case summarized Bethune-Hill's findings as follows:

> [W]here we have accepted a State's "good reasons" for using race in drawing district lines, the State made a strong showing of a pre-enactment analysis with justifiable conclusions. In Bethune-Hill, the State established that the primary mapdrawer "discussed the district with incumbents from other majority-minority districts[,] … considered turnout rates, the results of the recent contested primary and general elections," and the district's large prison population. … The State established that it had performed a "functional analysis," and acted to achieve an "informed bipartisan consensus."

Abbott v. Perez, 138 S. Ct. 2305, 2335 (2018) (emphasis added). Significantly, the Court in Abbott rejected a proposed justification for a race-based district where the State of Texas argued that it was necessary to comply with Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, but had not made the required strong showing. Id. at 2334. Similarly, in Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1470 (2017), the Court rejected a claim that a race-based district was necessary to comply with Section 2 when the State of North Carolina could not show the preconditions required to make such a claim.

Turning to Congressional District 3 in the proposed plan, I believe it will be vulnerable to a serious—and probably a winning—Shaw-type claim under the Fourteenth Amendment. I understand that there will be little dispute that the district was drawn with its racial characteristics as the predominant consideration. I also understand that the shape of the district will be well-explained by the effort to include African-American populations around Tallahassee and Jacksonville. Moreover, the district clearly violates traditional districting criteria. Its Popper-Polsby score is 10%, and its Reock score is 11%. These are very low compactness scores for any U.S. congressional district, and in both cases these are the lowest compactness scores in the State of Florida.[4]

I also believe that the defenders of District 3 will be unable to justify the district so as to satisfy their burden of strict scrutiny. To begin with, I am unaware of the existence of any sort of "a strong showing of a pre-enactment analysis with justifiable conclusions." Abbott, 138 S. Ct. at 2335. But further, even if the race-based character of the districts could be justified under federal or Florida law, the district's noncompactness will compel the legal conclusion that it is not "narrowly tailored" to achieve its goals, as it must be to satisfy strict

[4] District 3 also has the third worst Area/Convex Hull score in the State. However, I do not consider the Area/Convex Hull test to be a reliable compactness measure. There are too many district indentations and distortions it simply cannot "see." Accordingly, it is too forgiving.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

scrutiny. See Miller, 515 U.S. at 921 ("The congressional plan challenged here was not required by the Voting Rights Act under a correct reading of the statute.").

As a final point, the fact that the BVAP in District 3 is at around 44% according to the House Committee's online information (or 42% according to the Princeton Gerrymandering Project) will defeat the State's ability to justify the district. The Supreme Court has held that no Section 2 claim is possible where the minority VAP is less than 50%. Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 19-20 (2009) ("It remains the rule … that a party asserting § 2 liability must show by a preponderance of the evidence that the minority population in the potential election district is greater than 50 percent."). The Supreme Court has at least suggested that the same rule applies in the context of Section 5. Perry v. Perez, 565 U.S. 388, 398-99 (2012) ("The court's order suggests that it may have intentionally drawn … a 'minority coalition opportunity district' in which the court expected two different minority groups to band together to form an electoral majority"; and, if so, "it had no basis for doing so. Cf. Bartlett …"). See also In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 625 (2012) ("Just as Section 2 jurisprudence guides the Court in analyzing the state vote dilution claims, when we interpret our state provision prohibiting the diminishment of racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of choice, we are guided by any jurisprudence interpreting Section 5.").

In sum, if I were asked by a client whether Congressional District 3 complies with the federal constitution, my answer would be an emphatic no.

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

THE CAPITOL
TALLAHASSEE, FLORIDA 32399 • (850) 717-9249

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

THE CAPITOL
TALLAHASSEE, FLORIDA 32399 • (850) 717-9249

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

[1] See, e.g., Chiles v. Child. A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. Honorable Charles T. Canady
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); *see also Green v. AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Honorable Tyler Sirois
Chairman, Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee
400 South Monroe Street

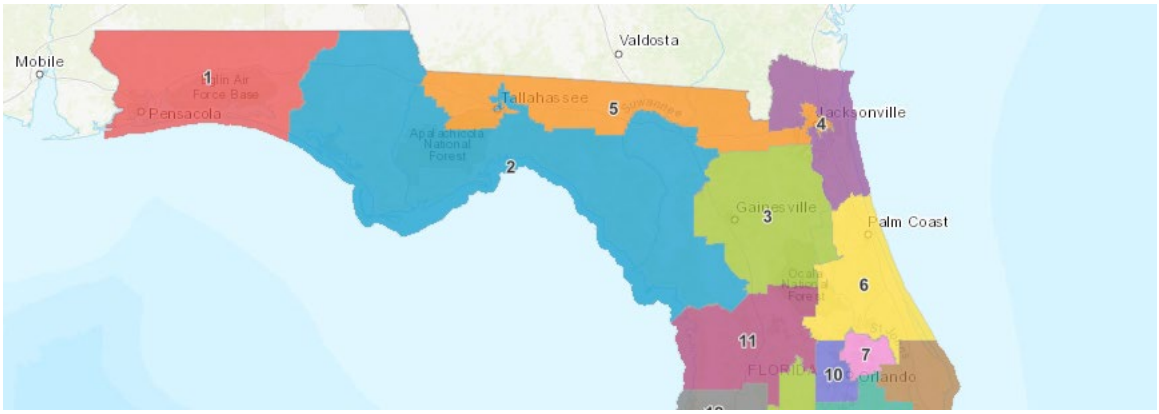
Dear Chairman Sirois:

I write to convey the legal objections of the Executive Office of the Governor to the inclusion of Congressional District 3 in the maps proposed by the staff of the Florida House Redistricting Committee. The proposed district, which largely tracks current Congressional District 5, spans approximately 200 miles from East to West and cuts across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population in Leon and Gadsden Counties. The district is not compact and does not otherwise conform to usual political or geographic boundaries. Instead, it appears to be drawn solely to combine separate minority populations from different regions of northern Florida in a less than majority-minority district so that together they may have an opportunity to elect a candidate of their choice.



Where race is "the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," the legislature must prove that such "race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463-64 (2017) (citations omitted). Because the Legislature cannot show that the proposed Congressional District 3 would satisfy strict scrutiny, the proposed district violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and should not be included in any map enacted by the Florida House of Representatives.

Proposed Congressional District 3 (Blue)

Current Congressional District 5 (Orange)

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment generally prohibits state laws that separate citizens into groups on the basis of race. A state law that "expressly distinguishes among citizens because of their race" can survive legal challenge only if it is "narrowly tailored to further a compelling governmental interest." Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 (1993). This principle applies not only to a law that "contains explicit racial distinctions, but also to those 'rare' statutes that, although race neutral, are, on their face, 'unexplainable on grounds other than race.'" Id. (quoting Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). Redistricting legislation is treated no differently. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, "redistricting legislation that is so bizarre on its face" that it can only be explained because of race "demands the same close scrutiny that we give other state laws that classify citizens by race." Id. at 644.

To state an equal protection claim, a plaintiff must "show, either through circumstantial evidence of a district's shape and demographics or more direct evidence going to legislative purpose, that race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's [line-drawing] decision." Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 916 (1995). Specifically, the plaintiff must prove that "the legislature subordinated traditional race-neutral districting principles, including but not limited to compactness, contiguity, and respect for political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests, to racial considerations." Id.

Given the foregoing considerations, it is evident that non-racial grounds cannot explain proposed Congressional District 3. First, the district violates traditional districting principles. Far from compact, the district records compactness scores as low as .11 on the Reock test, .63 on the Area / Convex Hull test, and .1 on the Polsby-Popper test. It also does not respect political subdivisions or communities defined by actual shared interests. The district splits four counties and three municipalities, and it stretches across eight counties to join a minority population in Jacksonville with minority populations in Leon and Gadsden Counties. These communities are in separate and distinct regions of northern Florida and are not defined by shared interests. With respect to contiguity, the district narrows to a mere three miles wide from North to South when traversing the northernmost precincts of Leon County at the state's northern border in an effort to include the minority populations in western Leon County and Gadsden County while avoiding the non-minority population in eastern Leon County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Second, only two considerations plausibly explain the district's unusual shape—partisanship or race. If the district were drawn to favor partisan interests, it would violate the Fair Districts Amendment of the Florida Constitution. Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution provides that "[n]o apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." If improper partisan interests did not play a role, the only reasonable explanation for the district is race. This conclusion follows from the historical circumstances surrounding the creation of the current district.

The Florida Supreme Court drew the current district—Congressional District 5—in 2015. The Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando because it concluded that such configuration had been unconstitutionally tainted by improper partisan influences. League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 403 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII"). The Court further held that the North-South version was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. Consequently, the Court adopted the current East-West version. Id. at 405-06. While acknowledging that the new configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), the Court determined that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Id. at 405. The Court explained that the non-compact shape was necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted). Thus, it is clear that race considerations predominated in the drawing of the current district. And because the proposed reapportionment plan seeks to retain the district in large measure to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, race considerations likewise predominate in the creation of proposed Congressional District 3.

Third, it is obvious, given the location of minority neighborhoods and precincts, that district lines in both Jacksonville and Tallahassee were drawn specifically to capture minority populations and to combine them into one district. But according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "[a] reapportionment plan that includes in one district individuals who belong to the same race, but who are otherwise widely separated by geographical and political boundaries, and who may have little in common with one another but the color of their skin, bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid." Shaw, 509 U.S. at 647. By attempting to connect a minority population in Jacksonville with a faraway minority population in Tallahassee and surrounding areas, proposed Congressional District 3 does precisely what the U.S. Supreme Court has condemned.

Because it subordinates traditional districting criteria to avoid diminishment of minority voting power, Congressional District 3 is a racial gerrymander that can survive constitutional challenge only if the Legislature can prove that "its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1464 (citation omitted). The Legislature cannot meet that exacting burden here.

The U.S. Supreme Court has long assumed, without definitively deciding, that complying with the Voting Rights Act ("VRA") is a compelling interest. Id. at 1464, 1469. In this case, however, there is no good reason to believe that the VRA requires Congressional District 3. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 26 (2009) (plurality), Section 2 is satisfied only when a compact majority of minority citizens can be drawn into a single district. But there is no configuration in any proposal put forward in any public map that we are aware of that has created a majority-minority district in northern Florida.

As both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court have noted, Section 2 prohibits the dilution of minority votes where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district." Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1470 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50 (1986); In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 622-23 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I"). Congressional District 3 is not a reasonably configured district, and in any event, it does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority.

Nor does Section 5 of the VRA require Congressional District 3. Before the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the VRA's coverage formula in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553-57 (2013), the State of Florida was not a covered jurisdiction under Section 5, but five Florida counties were: Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe. None of those counties are in Congressional District 3. Moreover, even assuming that compliance with the VRA is a compelling interest, it is doubtful that "continued compliance with [Section] 5 remains a compelling interest" in light of "Shelby County v. Holder." Ala. Legis. Black Caucus v. Alabama, 575 U.S. 254, 276 (2015).

Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA, see Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-20, it should be noted that Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." Shelby County, 570 U.S. at 534-35; see also South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 329-34 (1966). When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

In any event, the non-diminishment provision of the Florida Constitution simply does not require Congressional District 3. Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution provides that "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." This section contains two relevant provisions: the first is the non-vote-dilution provision ("districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process"), and the second is the non-diminishment provision ("districts shall not be drawn . . . to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"). The

Florida Supreme Court has held that the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619-23.

When Article III, Section 20(a) is read in this context, it becomes apparent that the group referenced in the latter non-diminishment provision is the very same group of "racial or language minorities" referenced in the former non-vote-dilution provision. The word "their" in the non-diminishment provision necessarily refers back to the "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision. Because the non-vote-dilution provision mirrors Section 2 of the VRA, and because Section 2 only applies to districts that contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, the non-diminishment provision should also apply to those kinds of districts. Because Congressional District 3 does not contain a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority, Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision does not apply.

With this reading, both the non-vote-dilution provision and the non-diminishment provision work in tandem. The non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form geographically compact districts where appropriate. See Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50-51 (requiring, additionally, political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477-80 (1997). In other words, the non-vote-dilution provision goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

This reading of Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision to refer to "racial or language minorities" in the non-vote-dilution provision flows from the text of the Florida Constitution. It also gives the Florida Constitution the best chance to avoid the federal constitutional concerns raised above. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1463-64, 1482 (invalidating two North Carolina congressional districts).

In sum, I respectfully ask that you consider the foregoing legal objections to Congressional District 3. I also respectfully ask that you include in the legislative record Governor DeSantis' advisory opinion request to the Florida Supreme Court and the Governor's brief before the Florida Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

Ryan Newman

ARGUMENT

This Court has jurisdiction to advise on the interpretation of the following phrase: "districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects several of the Governor's executive powers and duties, namely his power to veto the congressional map presented to him, art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and his power to directly supervise his Secretary of State in the administration of elections, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. Section 20(a)'s text is less than clear. There is a textual interpretation of this section, however, that avoids serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution. An advisory opinion confirming that interpretation would help the Governor ensure that the redrawing of congressional boundaries, which must occur every ten years, does not violate the Florida or U.S. Constitutions and is completed in a timely way to provide certainty

to candidates and voters before the qualifying period begins in June.[1] Unlike most other legislation, redistricting is not discretionary and must be completed in short order before the electoral process commences. The unique demands of redistricting justify the Court's exercise of jurisdiction.

I. THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO PROVIDE AN ADVISORY OPINION TO THE GOVERNOR.

Article IV, section 1(c) of the Florida Constitution allows this Court to render an advisory opinion to the Governor concerning "the interpretation of any portion of th[e] constitution" that "affect[s]" his "executive powers and duties." The interpretation of section 20(a) informs, and thus affects, how the Governor will exercise his executive powers and duties with respect to congressional redistricting legislation. Specifically, when the Florida Legislature presents to the Governor a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts, which it must under federal law, the Governor can veto the bill, approve the bill, or take no action. A veto nullifies the bill. Approval or inaction allows the bill to become law, at which point the

Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," particularly his Secretary of State, in carrying out the law, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. These executive powers and duties satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites.

A. The Veto Is an Executive Power.

Article III, section 8 expressly vests the Governor with the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power. (Emphasis added.) If the Governor believes that a bill is "contrary to the public interest," including that it is unconstitutional, he may veto the bill. Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 664 (Fla. 1980). The exercise of that executive power to affect legislation does not convert it into a lawmaking power any more than the judiciary's exercise of judicial review converts the judicial power into a lawmaking power.

The Florida Constitution's structure underscores that the veto is an executive power. The Florida Constitution vests "[t]he legislative power of the state" in the Florida Legislature, art. III, § 1, Fla. Const.; "[t]he supreme executive power" in the Governor, art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and "[t]he judicial power" in the state judiciary, art. V, § 1, Fla. Const. "No person belonging to one branch shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the other branches unless expressly provided herein." Art. II, § 3, Fla. Const. This separation of powers erects "high walls and clear distinctions" between each branch of government. Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, 514 U.S. 211, 239 (1995).

The high walls separating executive and legislative powers are apparent in the lawmaking process. The Florida Constitution gives specific, precise powers to the legislative and executive branches with respect to the lawmaking process. As this Court has noted, "[a]rticle III, sections 1 and 7 assign to the legislature the responsibility for passage of all bills into law, regardless of their subject matter," and "[a]rticle III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation." Chiles v. Children A, B, C, D, E, & F, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991). "These provisions" constitute the "constitutional allocation of the executive and legislative responsibilities concerning legislation generally." Id.

The Florida Constitution thus gives to the Governor the executive power in the legislative sphere, and that executive power includes the veto. See id. ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills." (emphasis added));

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brown, 382 So. 2d at 672 ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 a*re valid as being within the purview of the executive power* granted by article III, section 8(a)." (emphasis added)); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory" because "[t]he placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article . . . and in the legislative article.").

The veto is a "negative power, the power to nullify, or at least suspend, legislative intent." Brown, 382 So. 2d at 664. It is the "[p]rimary . . . executive check[] on unfettered legislative power" and gives the Governor a "stronger bargaining position from which to seek revision or amendment of bills" and a means to "counteract legislative action which he considers to be contrary to the public interest." Id. As such, in the lawmaking process, "the constitutional authority of the legislative department is in part delimited by the scope of executive authority"—as exercised by the veto power. Id. at 663.

By contrast, the Legislature does not have the power to veto bills—it has the power to bicamerally "pass" and "present" them, and to "re-enact" a vetoed bill by supermajority vote. See art. III, §§ 7–8, Fla. Const. So it cannot be said that in exercising the power to "veto" a bill that the Governor is exercising a power that otherwise belongs to the Legislature. It is quintessentially an executive power.

Only when the Governor exceeds his veto power by effectively amending legislative text (as opposed to nullifying it) does the Governor improperly intrude on the legislative power. For example, in the line-item-veto context, this Court has held that a Governor unconstitutionally engages in legislative action when he reduces or modifies an appropriation. See Brown, 382 So. 2d at 666; Fla. House of Representatives v. Martinez, 555 So. 2d 839, 844 (Fla. 1990).

In sum, the Governor's exercise of the veto power to affect the lawmaking process does not make the veto a legislative power. As Justice Ellis explained in 1922, "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily . . . comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922). If that were so, then it follows that a "court acts in a legislative capacity when it

declares an act of the legislature to be unconstitutional." Id. Because the veto is an executive power, this Court has jurisdiction.[2]

B. The Governor's Other Executive Powers and Duties Also Support Jurisdiction.

If the Governor approves or takes no action on the Florida Legislature's redrawn districts, the districts become law, and the Governor must "take care that the laws [are] faithfully executed," art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const., and in so doing, must "direct[ly] supervis[e]" his "administration," namely the Secretary of State, art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const. In Advisory Opinion to the Governor Re: Implementation of Amendment 4, this Court explained that the "Governor's question about the meaning of Amendment 4," the Florida Constitution's voting restoration amendment, "affect[ed]" his "take care" duties and

[2] In 1887, this Court declined to issue an advisory opinion on a former Governor's use of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). This Court concluded that it could not render an advisory opinion because it considered the veto to be a legislative power. Id. This Court is not required to follow its advisory opinions, see In re Advisory Op. of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), and for all the reasons explained, this Court should give little weight to the 1887 response. In fact, fifty years later, a "majority of th[is] Court" stated that it was "of the opinion that the duty imposed on the Governor" to veto legislation "is executive rather than legislative as may be presumed from dicta in In Re Executive Communication." Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 12 So. 2d 583, 584 (Fla. 1943).

his "duty to provide the Department of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of voter registration laws." 288 So. 3d 1070, 1076 (Fla. 2020). So too here.

Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision affects the Governor's take care duties and his duty to provide the Secretary of State with necessary direction regarding the implementation of redistricting maps. The Secretary, of course, serves at the pleasure of the Governor. See §§ 20.02(3), 20.10, Fla. Stat. As the "chief election officer of the state," § 97.012, Fla. Stat., the Secretary must administer future elections under any new congressional map. To administer such elections, among other things, the Secretary must "[o]btain and maintain uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and must certify "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," including congressional candidates, § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ISSUE AN ADVISORY OPINION.

This Court should exercise its discretionary jurisdiction because of its "obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citations omitted). Unlike most other legislation, the State must create new congressional maps. See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969); 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c. The process must also be completed before the candidate qualifying period begins. The redistricting process should therefore proceed under a correct understanding of the law. The failure to do so could result in confusion and chaos in the administration of the state's congressional elections. To avoid that result, a timely advisory opinion on this matter of great public importance is both necessary and appropriate. Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 262; see also In re Advisory Op. to Governor Request of June 29, 1979, 374 So. 2d 959, 962 (Fla. 1979) (providing opinion to prevent the "confusion surrounding [an] important enactment").

The Governor does not seek the Court's opinion on the constitutionality of any proposed legislation or map. To the contrary, the Governor requests guidance on the meaning of section 20(a)'s minority-voting-protection provision, including whether it requires a district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles to connect a black population in Jacksonville with a black population in Gadsden and Leon Counties so that they can elect a candidate of their choice, even though not a majority.

Section 20(a) can be broken into two parts with brackets added for the sake of clarity:

> districts shall not be drawn [with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process] or [to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice.]

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. The first bracketed clause contains the "non-vote-dilution provision," and the second contains the "non-diminishment provision." This Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision mirrors § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 2 case law, and that section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision mirrors § 5 of the Voting Rights Act and should be interpreted consistent with § 5 case law. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 619–27 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I").

Still, section 20(a)'s vote-diminishment provision remains unclear. The text neither says what "diminish" means nor does it clarify whose "ability to elect representatives of their choice" is protected from diminishment. The dictionary defines "diminish" as "to make less or cause to appear less," id. at 702 (Canady, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Diminish, Webster's Third International Dictionary (1993)). But make less than what? Measured how? And if the previous congressional map serves as a baseline, id. at 624, must that baseline itself be constitutionally valid before the vote-diminishment standard applies?

Untangling these questions must begin with the text and, more specifically, the phrase "ability to elect representatives of their choice." The word "their," as used in section 20(a), refers back to "racial or language minorities" in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision—the first bracketed clause. Cases construing § 2 of the Voting Rights Act inform any understanding of the first clause, id. at 619–24, and the federal cases make clear that § 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to "a minority group" that is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in some reasonably configured legislative district. Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50

(1986).[3] Taken together, "their" must then mean "racial or language minorities" within a reasonably cohesive geographic area. See id. It follows that under section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision—the second bracketed clause—districts cannot be drawn to diminish racial or language minorities' ability to elect representatives of these geographically cohesive districts.

By giving meaning to section 20(a)'s text, we seek confirmation that such a reading comports with the rules of construction this Court now uses.[4] Among other things, we seek confirmation that the Governor's understanding of the word "their" comports with the harmonious-reading canon. Per the Governor's reading of Section 20(a), the non-vote-dilution provision allows minority groups to form

[3] In particular, this Court has explained that section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision matches § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 619–24, and § 2 claims are only applicable to districts where (1) the "minority group" is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority," (2) the minority group is "politically cohesive," and (3) the majority "votes sufficiently as a bloc." Gingles, 478 U.S. at 50–51.

[4] See Levy v. Levy, 326 So. 3d 678, 681 (Fla. 2021) (stating that the "words of a governing text are of paramount concern, and what they convey, in their context, is what the text means." (cleaned up)); Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 56, 167 (2012).

geographically compact districts where appropriate consistent with two other preconditions (political cohesion of the minority group and bloc voting of the majority group). See Gingles, 478 at 50–51. The non-diminishment provision allows minority groups to maintain those districts where appropriate. See Reno v. Bossier Parish Sch. Bd., 520 U.S. 471, 477–80 (1997) (explaining the difference between § 2 and § 5 of the Voting Rights Act). Florida's non-vote-dilution provision therefore goes into effect when a reasonably cohesive district could be formed, and the non-diminishment provision goes into effect once the district has been formed.

But this Court has never squarely addressed whether the word "their" constrains the universe of districts to which the non-diminishment provision applies. Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 625.[5] That failure raises serious concerns under the U.S. Constitution.

[5] Giving effect to the word "their" would also be consistent with this Court's prior redistricting cases. The cases note that "[e]very word of the Florida Constitution should be given its intended meaning and effect." Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 614 (referencing In re Apportionment Law–1972, 263 So. 2d 797, 807 (Fla. 1972)). And the cases even suggest that the Gingles preconditions have some import for the second bracketed clause in section 20(a)—the non-diminishment provision. See Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 286 n.11 ("The Gingles preconditions are relevant not only to a Section 2

Decided after this Court's decisions in Apportionments I-VIII, the U.S. Supreme Court recently held that a "State may not use race as the predominant factor in drawing district lines" unless the State first proves "that its race-based sorting of voters serves a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to that end." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1463–64 (2017) (cleaned up). This showing of compelling interest and narrow tailoring must find a "strong basis in evidence." Id. After all, governmental actions based on race are presumptively unconstitutional. See id.; Parents Involved in Cmty. Schs. v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007).

Reading section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision as applying only to minorities groups in geographically cohesive districts in section 20(a)'s non-vote-dilution provision would avoid significant concerns under the U.S. Constitution and would give Florida's congressional maps the best chance of surviving strict scrutiny. As in Cooper, such a reading would find a tether in the first Gingles factor, which is used for purposes of § 2 of the Voting Rights Act, and vote dilution analysis, but also to a Section 5 diminishment analysis.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed that compliance with § 2 would satisfy strict scrutiny. See Cooper, 137 S. Ct. at 1469–72.

Any reading of state law should avoid conflicts with the U.S. Constitution. Florida courts, including this Court, utilize the well-established doctrine of constitutional avoidance: "when two constructions" of state law "are possible, one of which is of questionable constitutionality," the law "must be construed so as to avoid any violation of" the "Florida and the United States Constitutions." State v. Presidential Women's Ctr., 937 So. 2d 114, 116, 120 (Fla. 2006) (quoting Indus. Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kwechin, 447 So. 2d 1337, 1339 (Fla. 1983)) (emphasis added).

In light of the constitutional text and relevant interpretive canon, the best reading of section 20(a)'s non-diminishment standard is that it prevents diminishment of a reasonably cohesive racial or language minority's population. Confirming this interpretation now in an advisory opinion will avoid potential confusion and chaos later.

III. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should provide the requested advisory opinion to the Governor.

Congressional Redistricting Plans in Florida

- Committee staff has produced another series of redistricting plans.
- Staff followed the instruction from the select subcommittee, and looked for improvements and consistency in the application of the various trade-offs presented in the maps.
- Districts retained the same numbers from the original maps.

Congressional Redistricting Plans in Florida

- Plans being presented today:
  - Present policy choices for the Select Subcommittee;
  - Show improvements in Tier Two metrics; and
  - Do not retrogress and maintain the ability to for racial and language minorities to participate in the political process and elect candidates of their choice.
    - S000C8036 – Four African-American districts, and four Hispanic districts.
    - S000C8038 – Four African-American districts, and four Hispanic districts.
    - S000C8040 – Four African-American districts, and four Hispanic districts.
    - S000C8042 – Four African-American districts, and four Hispanic districts.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Congressional Redistricting Plans in Florida

- Consistent application among the various trade-offs results in a narrowing of some of the options previously workshopped.
- Co-equal criteria outlined in the tier-two standards of Article III, Section 20 of the Florida Constitution and the directives issued by the Committee on October 18, 2021 were balanced to be consistent and to apply similar treatment across different areas of the state.
- As with the plans previously workshopped, a functional analysis of the minority districts in each plan confirms that they do not diminish the ability for racial and language minorities to elect candidates of their choice.

MEMORANDUM

To: Mr. Jay Ferrin, Staff Director
From: Senator Ray Rodrigues, Chair
Subject: Committee Directives to Staff on Map-Drawing
Date: October 18, 2021

Senators of the Committee on Reapportionment have reviewed the census data, the features of the map-drawing application, and the relevant criteria, history, and legal standards. I believe that we have the proper foundation upon which to direct you and your staff to produce a series of maps for our consideration.

First and foremost, you are directed to the plain language of the constitution, federal law, and the judicial precedent that exists today in regards to that language. The Constitution sets forth two tiers of redistricting standards, and provides that the Tier-Two standards apply unless complying with them would conflict with the Tier-One standards or with federal law. The Tier-One standards control in the event of a conflict with Tier-Two standards, but in all other circumstances the Tier-Two standards must control the drawing of district lines. Therefore staff is directed to comply with the objective criteria outlined in Tier Two of Article III Sections 20 and 21 of the Florida Constitution, balancing them in a manner that does not establish any priority of one standard over another, unless complying with the Tier-Two standards would conflict with Tier-One standards or federal law.

In accordance with the Tier Two standard of the constitutional requirements related to equal population, you are directed to prepare Senate plans with district population deviations not to exceed 1% of the ideal population of 538,455 people, and to prepare Congressional plans with population deviations of plus or minus one person of the ideal population of 769,221 people.

To comply with the Tier Two standard related to compactness, you are directed to draw districts that are visually compact in relation to their shape and geography, and to use mathematical compactness scores where appropriate.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

To comply with the Tier Two standard related to utilizing existing political boundaries, you are directed to examine the use of county boundaries where feasible. Furthermore, you are directed to explore concepts that, where feasible, result in districts consisting of whole counties in less populated areas, and to explore concepts that, where feasible, keep districts wholly within a county in the more densely populated areas.

With respect to municipal boundaries, you are directed to explore concepts that, where feasible, keep cities whole while also considering the impermanent and changing nature of municipal boundaries.

You are further directed to examine the use of existing geographic boundaries where feasible. Specifically railways, interstates, federal and state highways, and large water bodies such as those that were deemed to be easily recognizable and readily ascertainable by Florida's Supreme Court. We recognize that these geographic features afford us an opportunity to create districts with static boundaries, and would ask that Staff present the boundary analysis report with each plan so that we can determine coincidence of districts' boundaries with these features.

Further, you are directed, when drawing compact districts consistent with the population equality requirements, and that utilize political and geographic boundaries where feasible, to confirm that the districts comply with the Tier-One constitutional standards and with federal law, specifically, that that districts are not drawn with the result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice. You are directed to conduct a functional analysis on relevant districts to confirm that any map presented for consideration by this Committee or its Select Subcommittees complies with these Tier-One requirements of the Florida Constitution and with the federal Voting Rights Act.

Regarding compliance with the Tier One standard related to the intent to favor or disfavor a political party, you are directed to draw districts without reviewing political data other than where a review of political data is required to perform an appropriate functional analysis to evaluate whether a minority group has the ability to elect representatives of choice.

To comply with the Tier One standard related to intent to favor or disfavor an incumbent, you are directly to draw districts without the use of any residence information of any sitting member of the Florida Legislature or Congress and to draw districts without regard to the preservation of existing district boundaries.

We believe that by limiting the considerations to those adopted by the citizens of Florida, this process will produce constitutionally compliant maps. While the standards that are to be considered require a balancing act it, is important to remember that the standards themselves are not optional. Choices made by staff and approved by this committee should be made based on compliance with the objective constitutional criteria.

You are directed to produce a series of plans for each of our Select Subcommittees to workshop. All plans you bring forward must comply with the complex layering of federal and state standards. You will be asked to explain the various trade-offs within the co-equal Tier Two standards presented in each plan. It is within the balancing of these tradeoffs that Senators on the committee must exercise our legislative discretion and produce a constitutionally compliant map.

If staff receives any suggestion that a plan be drafted or changed with the intent to favor or disfavor any incumbent or political party, staff is directed to disregard the suggestion entirely, document the conversation in writing, and report the conversation directly to the Senate President.

Thank you for your attention to these directives. Please notify me, as well as Chairs Bradley and Burgess when you have completed work pertinent to their respective select subcommittees so that workshops can be noticed. Again, thank you and we look forward to reviewing your work.

Legislature approves Gov. DeSantis' controversial congressional redistricting map

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
April 21, 2022

The Legislature has approved a controversial congressional map from Gov. Ron DeSantis, set to take effect ahead of the 2022 midterms unless a court quickly decides otherwise.

The cartography (P 0109), which creates 20 Republican-leaning seats and eight Democratic seats, will next head to the Governor for his signature. Once he approves the map, Florida comes off a list of just three states that have yet to complete their redistricting process.

The House on Thursday picked up the reapportionment bill passed the prior day by the Senate. The lower chamber of the Legislature passed the bill through a party-line vote of 68-34.

That only occurred after a protest disrupted proceedings. As Democratic debate time ran out, Rep. Yvonne Hayes, a Gainesville Democrat, was comparing the fight for minority access seats to the Civil Rights movement. As her mic was cut, Black lawmakers including Reps. Angie Nixon, of Jacksonville, and Tray McCurdy, of Orlando, began a sit-in on the floor, both revealing T-shirts that read "Stop the Black Attack."

That came after just over an hour of debate, primarily dominated by Democrats leveling criticism for the Governor's end-run on the political process.

"We know that this map will pass this Legislature with less than 48 or 72 hours of scrutiny in a Special Session in which this body's own Redistricting Committee did not even meet to consider it," said Rep. Ben Diamond, a St. Petersburg Democrat and congressional candidate. The Governor's map drew Diamond's state House district out of the congressional district where he's running.

The Legislature passed its own redistricting plan during the regular Legislative Session in March. But DeSantis vetoed the map calling a Special Session to produce a new plan.

In a veto message, his General Counsel, Ryan Newman, laid out concerns about the preservation of a North Florida district, represented by Democratic U.S. Rep. Al

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Lawson. Florida's 5th Congressional District spans from Tallahassee to Jacksonville. The Governor's team believes the district was drawn based on racial motivations in violation of the equal protection clause in the U.S. Constitution's 14th Amendment.

Democrats argue that employing that language — inserted in the Constitution during the emancipation era — serves as dark irony as the Governor advances a map that eliminates two Black-performing districts.

"The concept of equal protection under the law is a key underpinning of our modern democracy," said Rep. Susan Valdes, a Tampa Democrat.

Republicans in the House defended the map. Rep. Kaylee Tuck, a Sebring Republican, said the Legislature followed a reliable process in crafting its own maps, and that included the Governor's veto. She praised DeSantis for devoting a qualified staff to participate in hearings.

"How many bills do we encounter where the Governor sends an entire team?" Tuck said.

But that comes after months of tension between the Legislature and the Governor's Office. During Session, Tuck and other Republicans pushed against the Governor's arguments, most notably when the Governor flew in conservative expert Robert Popper to discuss issues with CD 5 at a House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee meeting in February.

Following the Session, redistricting staff worked with the Governor's Office to address concerns and produce maps that complied with state and federal law and that DeSantis would sign. But a week ahead of the Special Session, legislative leaders announced their own staff would not produce new maps, and instead would let the Governor take the lead.

Deputy Chief of Staff Alex Kelly, who drew the Governor's map, presented the proposal in committee this week as a compromise map. He said the plan preserves 10 districts from the primary map approved by the Legislature during Session, but seeks out race-neutral boundaries for CD 5 in the Jacksonville area and Florida's 10th Congressional District in Central Florida.

A partisan performance analysis by MCI Maps shows the Governor's map has 20 congressional districts where Republican Donald Trump won the 2020 Presidential Election and just eight voted for Democrat Joe Biden. It also leaves only two districts the Legislature's analysts believe will be controlled by Black voters.

The Legislature's maps all worked to comply with both federal and state law, most notably the Fair Districts amendment in the state constitution approved by Florida voters in 2010. That amendment prohibits districts drawn to favor or disfavor a political party or candidate, and also prohibits the diminishment of minority communities' ability to elect a Representative of their choice.

DeSantis' team has argued the latter provisions conflict with the U.S. Constitution, which trumps state law.

But Rep. Joe Geller, ranking Democrat on the House Redistricting Committee, argued on the floor that the Legislature must work within the confines of the laws as written. "Members, our job is to pass something that complies with the Florida Constitution, including those Fair Districts provisions, and the federal Voting Rights Act," he said.

He said anyone who feels a redistricting plan violates the Constitution should make that case in court.

A number of Black Representatives suggested the maps overtly attack representation directly and intentionally.

"I've had enough of being kicked around in this building and in this chamber and still being expected to smile and shake your hands and engage in conversation with the same people who are trying to oppress my people," said McCurdy.

But Rep. Randy Fine, a Palm Bay Republican, rather asserted the insistence districts could be drawn with racial concerns in mind. That in fact demonstrates "inherent racism."

"Today, we pass maps that are constitutional, and they will be litigated, and we will learn whether the U.S. Constitution reigns supreme over the Florida State Constitution," he said. "That is the discussion at hand."

Rep. Michele Rayner-Goolsby, who also is running for Congress in a Tampa Bay district redrawn as Republican-leaning on the map, said the map wasn't drawn with noble intent.

"Yes, I have a vested interest," she said. "I have a vested interest because I'm a Black woman in the state of Florida. I have a vested interest because I'm a Black resident in the state of Florida. I have a vested interest because I have Black constituents. I have friends who are Black in Jacksonville and are concerned about what their representation is going to look like.

"I have a vested interest because I know the struggles of Black and Brown folks over the course of 200-plus years in this country, but most certainly in this state. I have a vested interest because I understand it wasn't until the Voting Rights Act that my parents were able to vote."

Florida redistricting gets messy and partisan

Politico Florida Playbook
Gary Fineout
November 30, 2021

Hello and welcome to Tuesday.

That escalated quickly — So it looks like redrawing the lines is going to get a bit messy after all.

Here you go — On the same day Florida state senators met for barely 20 minutes to workshop their proposed congressional map, the Florida House finally released its own map that sent political operatives — especially Democrats — into overdrive.

Poof — The Senate proposals for the most part preserved the status quo, although the addition of a 28th seat netted Republicans an extra spot. But one of two House proposals released on Monday essentially evaporated Rep. Stephanie Murphy's seat. Her Seminole County base was merged into a GOP seat that stretches into neighboring Volusia County, while the rest was folded into African American Orlando neighborhoods that have been part of Rep. Val Demings seat. Demings is leaving her seat to run for U.S. Senate.

Where this could go — The net result is that this "aggressive" House map — as well-known Democratic analyst Matt Isbell put it — would likely allow the Republicans to control 18 of the state's 28 congressional seats, if adopted. It potentially creates a safe space for firebrand state Rep. Anthony Sabatini to run for even though Sabatini has publicly called House Speaker Chris Sprowls a "RINO." The House maintains — in a one-page memo and little other public explanation — that these proposals follow Florida's anti-gerrymandering constitutional standards. But Democrats sure don't see it that way.

It means nothing right now — Of course this all could be performance art, a way to shut down chatter from outside Republicans who wanted to press their advantage in Florida. Or, just as likely, it's the opening offer from the House in a complicated back-and-forth where the maps are used as leverage on other session priorities. We know that Senate President Wilton Simpson and other Senate leaders want redistricting to be done cleanly, quickly and limit the potential for the legal Armageddon that happened last time. Maybe the House wants chaos.

— WHERE'S RON? — Nothing official announced for Gov. DeSantis.

MAPMAKER, MAPMAKER

SLICE AND DICE — “New draft redistricting map in Florida cuts up Murphy’s seat, boosts GOP,” by POLITICO’s Matt Dixon: Democrats and Republicans in Florida had reached an uneasy truce over redistricting, avoiding a major public conflict even weeks after the GOP-led state Senate had released its preliminary maps. That ended Monday. Democrats teed off on new draft congressional maps published by the Republican-led Florida House, accusing the opposing party of playing political games with the redistricting process. The public friction comes after the Republican-led state Senate earlier this month released maps that gave the GOP an additional congressional seat, but faced more criticism from Republicans than Democrats because it was seen as not aggressive enough.

HANDING OUT GRADES — The two new House maps drew an “F” grade from RepresentUS, an outside group analyzing redistricting efforts with the Princeton Gerrymandering Project. The organization has given failing grades to maps drawn in both Democratic and Republican controlled states. “In contrast to the approach taken by their counterparts in the Florida Senate, the Florida House maps clearly will not pass constitutional muster,” said Joe Kabourek, senior campaign director with RepresentUS.

CAMPAIGN MODE

JUST WIN BABY — “Seminoles paying off petition gatherers as part of 2022 Florida gaming turf war,” by POLITICO’s Matt Dixon: The Seminole Tribe of Florida is paying petition gathering firms to not work in Florida during the 2022 midterms as part of an effort to block rival proposed gaming constitutional amendments — a strategy that also includes running a separate informal signature gathering operation and hiring workers that interfere with other petition gatherers. It’s part of a Tribe’s “blocking” campaign that’s designed to keep rival gaming companies from getting provisions on the 2022 midterm ballot. The massive effort, one of the largest ever seen in Florida politics, includes paying petition gathering firms more money than they would likely normally see in an election cycle in return for them signing exclusivity agreements, some of which POLITICO has obtained.

‘A HAIL MARY PASS’ — “Holness asserts Cherfilus-McCormick is ‘ineligible to hold office,’ asks court to overturn congressional voting results," by Sun Sentinel’s Anthony Man: “Dale Holness, who lost the congressional contest to Sheila Cherfilus-McCormick by 0.01% of the votes, wants a court to throw out her victory. In a lawsuit offering three different arguments, Holness asserts she is ‘ineligible to hold office.’ … Additionally, Holness said that at least 18 mail ballots from military voters were improperly rejected by Broward County elections officials and he wants a judge to require their counting. Even a small number of additional ballots could potentially change the result. And, he asserted that Cherfilus-McCormick’s failure to file a required financial disclosure with the Clerk of the U.S. House before people voted disqualifies her. Many candidates don’t file the disclosures.”

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

FOG — “Inside the ‘big wave’ of misinformation targeted at Latinos,” by The Associated Press’ Amanda Seitz and Will Weissert: “Evelyn Pérez-Verdía, a Florida Democratic strategist who watches Spanish misinformation patterns, says many online narratives intentionally stoke ‘fear in the Spanish-speaking communities.’ One conspiracy theory mentioned on talk radio grew out of Lady Gaga’s golden bird brooch at Biden’s inauguration. Some spreading the claim noted a similar brooch once worn by Claudia López Hernandez, the first openly gay mayor of Bogota, Colombia, signaled the new president was working with foreign leftists. ‘They’re not going to stop. They’re going to double down on it,’ Pérez-Verdía said of the misinformation.”

CAMPAIGN ROUNDUP — Sen. Marco Rubio endorsed state Rep. Blaise Ingoglia for the state Senate seat now held by Senate President Wilton Simpson. Simpson is running for agriculture commissioner in 2022. Ingolia is a former chairman of the Republican Party of Florida who got the job instead a candidate backed by then-Gov. Rick Scott. Rubio called Ingoglia a “staunch defender of our values” and an “instrumental part” of GOP success in Florida. … The Republican National Hispanic Assembly of Florida endorsed Amanda Makki for Florida’s 13th Congressional District … Another GOP candidate for the Pinellas County based seat — Anna Paulina Luna — was endorsed by former St. Petersburg Mayor Bill Foster.

... DATELINE TALLAHASSEE ...
WHAT’S IN YOUR WALLET? — “DeSantis reelection pitch now includes big pay raises for troopers and police,” by POLITICO’s Gary Fineout: Gov. Ron DeSantis, eager to brandish his pro-law enforcement credentials ahead of his reelection, called for spending nearly a half billion dollars on everything from bonuses to hefty pay hikes for highway troopers and other law enforcement units. DeSantis made the announcement on Monday at a Florida Highway Patrol station in Orlando, where he also said that concerns about the emergence of a new coronavirus variant will not prompt him to change the state’s ongoing anti-lockdown, anti-mandate stances.

Breaking it down — The governor’s proposal calls for spending $73 million to give a 25 percent pay hike to troopers and other state law enforcement officers, such as those who work at the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, as well as a 20 percent boost in the starting salary. He also recommended $1,000 bonuses for a second year in a row for all first responders, including police, firefighters and paramedics. The total spending recommended includes money for a previously announced plan to offer $5,000 bonuses to first-time police officers, including those who move from another state.

BIDENOLOGY
TOO LATE? — “White House official travels to Miami to smooth over FARC de-listing controversy,” by El Nuevo Herald Nora Gámez Torres and McClatchy DC’s Michael Wilner: “A top White House official is meeting members of the Colombian community in Miami on Monday to smooth over the controversy around the Biden administration’s recent decision to drop the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia from the State Department’s list of terrorist organizations. National Security Council Senior Director for the Western Hemisphere Juan Gonzalez is in Miami 'to engage Colombian diaspora and Colombian-Americans on FARC de-listing and other issues,' a White House official said."

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES
The daily rundown — The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said there were 1,071 Covid-19 infections on Saturday and 1,123 on Sunday. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services reported that 1,228 hospital beds were being used in the state for Covid-19 patients.

LATE NIGHT REQUEST — "Florida attorney general asks federal judge to halt CMS vaccine requirements," by POLITICO's Arek Sarkissian: Florida Attorney General Ashley Moody filed a motion late Monday night asking the federal appeals court in Atlanta to temporarily stop the rollout of new federal vaccine requirements for health care workers. The request comes just hours after a federal judge in Missouri temporarily blocked the Biden administration's plan to require staffers to be vaccinated at all health facilities that receive federal funding in 10 states, including Kansas, Nebraska and New Hampshire.

OH — "New omicron variant is likely in Florida, but it will take some time to confirm that," by Sun Sentinel's Cindy Krischer Goodman: "Omicron may already be circulating in the populous Sunshine State where international travelers, cruise passengers and snowbirds abound in the winter months. While the new omicron variant likely is in Florida by now, it could be weeks before it gets confirmed, said Dr. Glenn Morris, director of the University of Florida Emerging Pathogens Institute. Researchers are testing COVID samples and wastewater to monitor for its presence, but so far, such surveillance hasn't found the variant present in Florida."

TRUMPLANDIA AND THE SWAMP
FLORIDA MAN — "Actor charged in riot almost talked way into staying in jail," by The Associated Press' Jacques Billeaud: "An actor charged with storming the U.S. Capitol as a member of the far-right Oath Keepers militia group nearly talked his way into remaining in jail after a judge heard on Monday that the Florida man was challenging the court's authority over him. A prosecutor said he wasn't planning to seek pretrial detention for James Beeks of Orlando, Florida, until learning in court that the actor didn't accept the court's jurisdiction over him."

IN MEMORIAM — "'A community champion.' U.S. Rep. Carrie Meek remembered by friends, colleagues," by Miami Herald's Bianca Padró Ocasio: "When Dorothy Fields first started gathering ideas from the community for the Black Archives History and Research Foundation in 1977, Carrie Meek — who was then an administrator at Miami Dade College — called to say she had some grant money she could offer the organization. But Fields didn't have a proposal ready to send her. 'She told me, 'Listen, always have a proposal ready because you never know when money is going to be available,'' Fields recalled. 'And she was right.'"

JUMPING IN — "40 states want a say in Florida transgender student bathroom case," by News Service of Florida's Jim Saunders: "A lawsuit about whether a transgender male student should have been allowed to use boys' bathrooms at a Northeast Florida high school has become a battleground for states across the country. In two briefs filed at a federal appeals court, 40 states and the District of Columbia have chosen sides in the case stemming from a St. Johns County School Board policy that prevented Drew Adams from using boys' bathrooms at Nease High School."

He does. He also knows this bird's 13-year-old brother, their parents, grandparents and extended family, thanks to the singular research conducted at Central Florida's Archbold Biological Station. Another lawsuit asks courts to set Florida congressional map

Tampa Bay Times
News Service of Florida
03/14/2022

TALLAHASSEE — With Gov. Ron DeSantis vowing to veto a congressional redistricting plan, a lawsuit filed late Friday asks a federal court to set new U.S. House districts that would be used in this fall's elections.

The lawsuit, filed in the Northern District of Florida by two groups and five voters, is similar to a case filed Friday in Leon County circuit court. The crux is that DeSantis' threat to veto a redistricting plan drawn up by state lawmakers jeopardizes the chances of reaching agreement on a map — and that judges should step in.

"Unlike the Legislature, Governor DeSantis has demonstrated that he is not willing to abide by the law, or sign a congressional plan that does, making an impasse highly likely," said the federal lawsuit, filed on behalf of the groups Common Cause Florida and FairDistricts Now and voters in Leon, Gadsden, Orange, Lee and Miami-Dade counties. "To date, the Legislature and Governor DeSantis have not reached agreement on a congressional district plan."

Lawyers for the plaintiffs wrote that a three-judge panel of the federal district court should implement "a new congressional district plan that complies" with the U.S. Constitution. The lawsuit contends that without a new map, the state could be left with lines based on the 2010 U.S. census rather than the 2020 census, which would be unconstitutional because of population changes.

The lawsuit names as defendants DeSantis, Secretary of State Laurel Lee, Senate President Wilton Simpson, R-Trilby, House Speaker Chris Sprowls, R-Palm Harbor, and four lawmakers who led redistricting committees and subcommittees.

The Leon County case was filed on behalf of nine residents of Orange, Hillsborough, Pinellas, Marion, Lee and Duval counties. It named as defendants Lee and Attorney General Ashley Moody.

The lawsuits are the latest twists in the once-a-decade reapportionment process after DeSantis in January proposed a congressional plan that differed significantly from maps being considered by the Republican-controlled Senate and House. Ultimately, trying to satisfy DeSantis, lawmakers passed an unusual plan that included a primary map and a backup map.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But DeSantis remained dissatisfied and said he would veto the plan. DeSantis wants a map that likely would be more favorable to Republicans. But critics argue that changes sought by DeSantis would be unconstitutional, at least in part because they could lead to fewer minorities getting elected.

Lawmakers have not formally sent their plan to DeSantis, but uncertainty remained Friday as the House and Senate finished most of their work in the annual legislative session.

Simpson told reporters that it's too early to say what will happen if DeSantis vetoes the legislative proposal.

"If the governor vetoes the congressional map, it'll either be handled again through the Legislature or through the court system," Simpson said. "And we don't know the result of that yet. So, I don't really know that it would be proper to comment."

The 25-page federal lawsuit points to a June deadline for candidates to qualify for congressional races. Adding to the questions is that Florida will see its congressional delegation grow from 27 to 28 seats this year because of population growth, requiring a new district to be factored into the map.

"Given the circumstances, it is a near-certainty that there will be an impasse requiring judicial intervention," the federal lawsuit said. "It is highly likely that the Legislature and the governor will fail to pass a lawful congressional redistricting plan in time to prepare for and be used during the upcoming 2022 congressional election, leaving the existing plan in place … and denying Florida voters' fundamental right to vote in equally proportioned districts."

Lawmakers also passed redrawn state House and Senate maps, which did not draw challenges at the Florida Supreme Court — a fact that the federal lawsuit noted. DeSantis did not have veto power over the House and Senate maps.

"The Legislature has shown that it largely has the capacity to comply with state and federal law," the lawsuit said. "For instance, in February 2022, the Legislature passed state legislative maps for the Florida House and Senate, both of which reasonably complied with the law and, for the first time in state history, drew no objections from third parties when they were reviewed by the Florida Supreme Court."

Two Florida Supreme Court justices recuse themselves from issuing redistricting opinion

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
February 3, 2022

Two Florida Supreme Court justices are recusing themselves from issuing an opinion regarding Florida's congressional redistricting map.

According to a scheduling order issued Wednesday night, Chief Justice Charles Canady and Justice Alan Lawson will recuse themselves from an advisory opinion on the legality of a North Florida congressional district.

The order concerns a request from Gov. Ron DeSantis for the Florida Supreme Court to weigh in early on the constitutionality of Florida's 5th Congressional District. A jurisdiction analogous to the Tallahassee-to-Jacksonville district appears on all draft legislative proposals but not on draft cartography submitted by the Governor's office last month.

The Supreme Court requested all parties interested in the issue submit briefs on or before noon Feb. 7.

Five justices issued the order, but the more prominent names had no role in the order.

The absence of Canady, a former Republican U.S. Representative himself, could be particularly impactful. Then-Republican Gov. Charlie Crist appointed Canady in 2008. CD 5 in its current configuration went into effect when the Florida Supreme Court in 2015 threw out a map produced by the Florida Legislature. But Canady wrote the dissent on that ruling.

The decision paved the way for now-U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Tallahassee Democrat, to defeat incumbent Corrine Brown, a Jacksonville Democrat, in a primary in 2016. Rep. Al Lawson is not related to Justice Alan Lawson, appointed by Republican Gov. Rick Scott in 2016.

The order offered no reason why Lawson or Canady recused themselves from this case or whether they intend to stay out of other redistricting matters expected to come before the court soon.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But there has been speculation Canady may have to recuse himself. His wife, Lakeland Republican Jennifer Canady, has filed for a Florida House of Representatives seat. If that's the reason Justice Canady recused from the advisory opinion on the congressional map, it could signal he won't participate in any opinions on redistricting.

Rep. Lawson has signaled he will fight any effort in court to dismantle CD 5.

Gov. DeSantis' office disses Al Lawson district as 'unconstitutional gerrymander'

'It seems unnatural,' said Press Secretary Christina Pushaw.

The Governor's Office on Wednesday labeled Florida's 5th Congressional District an "unconstitutional gerrymander." The harsh assessment comes as draft congressional maps moving through the Florida Legislature all include a similar configuration.

Ryan Newman, general counsel for Gov. Ron DeSantis' office, surprised lawmakers by submitting a draft congressional map on Sunday. The following day, Newman issued a statement to the media expressing "legal concerns with the congressional redistricting maps under consideration in the Legislature."

Christina Pushaw, DeSantis' press secretary, elaborated further in an email to Florida Politics expressing concern with North Florida's current configuration. She defended the proposal from the Governor's Office, saying it creates more minority districts.

"Our map performs better than many of the legislative maps on the Tier 2 constitutional requirements including compactness and preservation of boundaries, all while increasing the number of federally protected minority districts," Pushaw wrote.

The most controversial call by the Governor's Office involved CD 5. Represented today by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Tallahassee Democrat, the current configuration stretches from Tallahassee to Jacksonville, hugging most of the northern Florida state line. The benchmark, which originally appeared in a submission from the League of Women Voters and Common Cause, was put into effect by the Florida Supreme Court when it threw out the map drawn by the Florida Legislature in 2012.

Cartographers in the House and Senate consider the district a protected minority access district, and a similar district appears on every map crafted by staff for the House Redistricting Committee or Senate Reapportionment Committee.

Lawson condemned the Governor's proposal Tuesday. "It is evident that DeSantis is trying to restrict minority representation, specifically African American voters," the Congressman said.

But Pushaw said CD 5 as it exists now should not stand.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“The northern Florida district is an unconstitutional gerrymander that unnaturally connects communities in Jacksonville with communities hours away in Tallahassee and Gadsden counties,” Pushaw wrote. “We eliminated this flagrant gerrymander. We believe our map is within constitutional requirements and performs better than the other maps on the Tier 2 constitutional requirements, including compactness and preservation of boundaries, all while increasing the number of minority districts.”

Asked if the Florida Supreme Court five years ago put an unconstitutional district into play, Pushaw asserted it had.

Pushaw said she came to that conclusion by “looking at the Supreme Court precedent that strongly indicates gerrymandered districts like CD 5 are unconstitutional. It seems unnatural that specific communities in Gadsden and Leon counties would be plucked and tied to a community several hours away in Jacksonville,” she said. “Yes, of course we believe Newman’s proposal is constitutional — he would not have proposed it otherwise.”

Critics of the Governor’s map have said it could reduce the number of Black districts in Florida from four to two and compromise minority representation. But Pushaw argues that’s not the case.

The one majority Black district on the Governor’s map? Florida’s 24th Congressional District, which today is represented by U.S. Rep. Frederica Wilson, a Hollywood Democrat.

A map advanced by the Senate Reapportionment Committee (S 8040) heads to the floor today. Senate cartographers say it keeps four effective Black districts. That includes CD 5 and CD 24, as well as Florida’s 10th and 20th Congressional Districts, represented respectively now by Democratic U.S. Reps. Val Demings and Sheila Cherfilus-McCormick.

The latter districts also significantly change under the Governor’s map, though a proposed Florida’s 23rd Congressional District includes much of existing CD 20 and has a voting age population that is 43.51% Black. A Senate performative analysis of its own proposed CD 20 that looks much like the existing configuration figured just over 50.1% of the voting electorate in the district is Black voters.

Pushaw said the Governor’s map critically enhances other minority representation.

“You probably notice our proposed map actually increases the number of minority districts, specifically districts where the Hispanic voting age population is greater than

50%," Pushaw said. "This is two more districts than in the existing congressional map, and one more district than in either of the proposed House and Senate plans."

The existing congressional map has three districts where Hispanic voters make up the majority of the voting age population: Florida's 25th, 26th and 27th Congressional Districts. Those are represented by three Cuban American Republicans in U.S. Reps. Mario Díaz-Balart, Carlos Giménez and María Elvira Salazar, respectively.

Under the Governor's map, there would be five Hispanic districts out of 28, with Florida picking up a seat this year based on the 2020 Census. Those districts as proposed include Florida's 9th, 20th, 26th, 27th and 28th Congressional Districts. The latter three house the current South Florida incumbents.

CD 9, notably, is represented by U.S. Rep. Darren Soto, a Kissimmee Democrat of Puerto Rican descent. But the proposed CD 20 appears most analogous to the existing Florida's 23rd Congressional District, represented now by U.S. Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, a Weston Democrat. Under the Governor's proposal, the district would be 50.59% Hispanic. A party performance analysis by MCI Maps shows the district would lean Democratic, with 56.78% of voters there supporting President Joe Biden in the 2020 election.

Overall, though, the partisan analysis shows 18 of the 28 draft districts would have been won by former President Donald Trump in 2020. By comparison, 16 of the districts on the Senate congressional proposal went for Trump. Florida has 16 Republicans in its 27-member House delegation now.

While the Senate-proposed map puts the additional Florida district effectively in Central Florida, the Governor's map puts it in South Florida instead. Pushaw said recognizing growth in Hispanic voters justifies that decision.

"Consistent with federal law, the Governor's proposed plan reflects what should be obvious — the growth in the state's Hispanic population," she wrote.

She also said the executive office map reduces the number of split geographical and political boundary lines and improves compactness, and that it boasts fewer county splits. "Its compactness is on par with or an improvement to all the plans under consideration, as well as the benchmark map," Pushaw said.

Mr. Popper,

My name is Ryan Newman, and I am General Counsel to Governor Ron DeSantis. John Gore at Jones Day suggested that I reach out to you.

The Florida House of Representatives has scheduled a committee hearing for this coming Friday, March 18, on its congressional redistricting map. The House proposal retains Congressional District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

We were hoping that you might be interested in serving as a witness at the hearing to educate the committee on why retaining this district would likely violate the U.S. Constitution.

Please let me know if you would be interested in speaking with us. I'm cc'ing Jason Torchinsky and Mo Jazil, who have been representing the Governor's office and the Florida Department of State as outside counsel. Josh Pratt and Nick Meros are Deputy GCs in my office.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Gov. DeSantis' map reshapes Tampa Bay and eliminates a battleground

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
April 18, 2022

Has Gov. Ron DeSantis' congressional map effectively ended one of the hottest races in Florida? A reconfiguration of Tampa Bay — and one that closely resembles a plan tossed out by courts in 2015 — holds immediate political consequences.

DeSantis' Office submitted a map (P 0109) on Wednesday as Republican leaders in the Legislature signaled they would support the plan. The proposal is one that would alter the makeup of Tampa Bay and likely leave it with one Democratic Congressman instead of two.

Right now, U.S. Reps. Kathy Castor and Charlie Crist, both Democrats, represent districts contained respectively within Hillsborough and Pinellas counties. But the DeSantis map combines portions of both seats to include downtown St. Petersburg and downtown Tampa into a single district.

As proposed, Florida's 14th Congressional District within Pinellas County would cover east of U.S. 19 and everything south or east of Interstate 275, while also bringing in Feather Sound north of the interstate. On the Hillsborough County side, it would cover all westerly communities, with U.S. 41 serving as the east border in the south and the Suncoast Parkway doing the same in the north. As for the central portion of the county, everywhere south of Gunn Highway/Busch Boulevard falls in the district.

The result is a seat where 58.8% of voters voted for Democrat Joe Biden in the 2020 Presidential Election and just 39.72% picked Republican Donald Trump, according to an analysis by MCI Maps. But that's the only one of four congressional districts in the metropolitan area where the bulk of voters went for the Democrat.

Most likely, Castor will end up representing the district. The eight-term incumbent and former Hillsborough County Commissioner actually fares better under this map than one originally approved by the Legislature (H 8019). In that plan, she landed in a seat where 54.46% of voters went to Biden and 43.99% voted for Trump. The new seat insulates her even further from a challenge from any of several Republicans filed against her.

Crist, meanwhile, is running against DeSantis for Governor instead of seeking re-election. But instead of leaving behind one of the hottest battlegrounds in the state, Democrats aiming to defend the seat must now decide whether to even run.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The only other Pinellas County seat would be Florida's 13th Congressional District under the new map.

One important question, of course, is where U.S. Rep. Gus Bilirakis will run. Since CD 13 would now reach all the way to the Pinellas-Pasco county line, that would include the current home of the Palm Harbor Republican, as well as the Tarpon Springs community that for years served as home base to the Congressman's father, retired U.S. Rep. Mike Bilirakis. But officials in his House Office say he will run in Florida's 12th Congressional District, which includes his current Pasco County constituency. That means next year, there will be no Bilirakis representing north Pinellas for the first time in decades.

What then? CD 13 looks less like a battleground than it did in the old map or under the Legislature's vetoed plan. MCI Maps shows 52.74% of voters in the jurisdiction voted for Trump and 45.98% went to Biden. By comparison, 51.36% of voters in CD 13 under its current makeup picked Biden and 47.27% voted Trump. That means it has gone from a Biden +4 seat to an almost Trump +7 district.

For Democrats Ben Diamond, Eric Lynn and Michele Rayner, that's a huge change in fortune.

For Diamond and Rayner, state Representatives whose districts lie completely in the existing CD 13 lines, it means they lose much of their current constituency from the congressional voting pool. An official close to one of the campaigns said many candidates are anxious to see if courts quickly throw out the map, noting in 2015 courts tossed a map with a Bay-crossing district and allowed CD 13 to become a battleground in the first place. But it took three years for courts to toss the map last cycle, and the map could stand for a decade.

But the map is good news for Republicans Kevin Hayslett, Anna Paulina Luna and Amanda Makki, who are vying to flip Crist's seat from blue to red.

Over in Hillsborough, a westward shift for Castor's seat means significant changes in two surrounding districts. There's already significant buzz in Southwest Florida about which incumbent may run in Florida's 16th Congressional District as proposed. While that territory includes southeast Hillsborough, it remains anchored by Manatee County.

There are also changes in the other Hillsborough seat, generally considered the new open seat awarded to Florida thanks to the 2020 Census.

Numbered as Florida's 15th Congressional District, the DeSantis map draws the seat to include northeast Hillsborough County north of State Road 60 in Brandon and Valrico, north of Bush Boulevard/Gunn Highway in New Tampa and east of the Suncoast Expressway. It also bleeds into south Pasco County in the Wesley Chapel area and east into Polk County to grab a big part of Lakeland.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

That raises the question of whether U.S. Rep. Scott Franklin, a Republican and former Lakeland City Councilman, will run for that seat, or in the proposed Florida's 18th Congressional District, which covers the rest of Lakeland and spans south all the way to Collier and Hendry counties.

The seat is one of the more closely divided by party on DeSantis' map. About 50.86% of voters went to Trump and 47.74% to Biden. By comparison, neither presidential candidate drew 50% in the district under the Legislature's proposed lines.

But notably, there's already a battle going on as to who will represent that seat, with nine candidates besides Franklin filed there. Republican candidates in the mix include retired U.S. Rep. Dennis Ross and state Rep. Jackie Toledo, and Franklin is a freshman Representative who represents just a portion of the district now.

Gov. DeSantis submits congressional plan favored to pass in Special Session

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
April 13, 2022

'The Governor's map reflects standards the Senate can support.'
Gov. Ron DeSantis' office has submitted the map he wants lawmakers to pass in the upcoming Special Session.

Sen. Ray Rodrigues, an Estero Republican and Chair of the Senate Reapportionment Committee, said he was briefed on the submission (P 0109). He said it's one the Florida Senate can pass.

"After thoroughly reviewing the Governor's submission and a discussion with our legal counsel, I have determined that the Governor's map reflects standards the Senate can support," Rodrigues said. "As such, I intend to introduce the map as a bill for consideration during the Special Session. I have asked Senate Counsel Dan Nordby to prepare a legal memorandum outlining his analysis of the Governor's submission, which we will provide for your review.

"I would like to thank Gov. DeSantis and his staff who have worked very hard to produce a congressional map that incorporates many of the features of the map that previously passed the Senate with bipartisan support. As we have stated from the beginning, the goal is to produce a congressional map for our state that gains majority votes on the House and Senate floors, is signed by the Governor and becomes law according to the consensus process outlined in our constitution."

At the same time, moving forward with the Governor's map means throwing out any work done by mapmakers in the Florida Senate and House. Senate President Wilton Simpson and House Speaker Chris Sprowls announced this week the Legislature would produce no additional maps and will instead defer to DeSantis' team.

DeSantis vetoed a congressional plan containing two maps approved by the Legislature during the regular Session. A Special Session begins Tuesday to consider new cartography.

Rodrigues said the Senate Reapportionment Committee will meet Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. in the Knott building. Among other things, that means the process will bypass the Senate Congressional Reapportionment Subcommittee, which had advanced a version of the map close to one the Senate ultimately passed.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

DeSantis' Office had submitted two maps during Session, a move unprecedented in modern times. The latest map, filed by DeSantis' Deputy Chief of Staff Alex Kelly, appears nearly identical to one submitted by Ryan Newman, General Counsel to the Governor, in February. That's a plan MCI Maps founder Matt Isbell called a "walking lawsuit."

This map has 20 seats where Republican Donald Trump won the 2020 Presidential Election, and just eight seats won by Democrat Joe Biden. Trump won Florida by three percentage points.

By comparison, the map approved by the Legislature (H 8019), and a backup map in case courts threw that out (H 8015), had 18 Trump jurisdictions and 10 Biden seats. One approved by the Senate (S 8060), and which may be submitted as an alternative if federal courts toss a map signed by DeSantis, had 16 Trump seats and 12 Biden districts.

Still, the Governor's Office is defending the constitutionality of his map.

"In preparing this proposal, the Governor's Office has adhered to geographical and political boundaries whenever possible, and indeed did so at a greater rate than the Legislature's primary map," wrote Bryan Griffin, DeSantis' Deputy Press Secretary, in an email to Florida Politics.

DeSantis has stressed his opposition to the configuration of Florida's 5th Congressional District, represented now by Democrat Al Lawson. The Governor believes that was illegally drawn with race as a factor in violation of the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution. The seat spans from Tallahassee to Jacksonville.

But the Legislature initially tried to preserve the seat because of the Fair Districts amendment in Florida's Constitution, which prohibits diminishing the ability of minority communities to elect a candidate of their choice. While the House drafted a compromise map with a more compact seat that in-house analysts believed would still be a Black-performing seat, DeSantis rejected that.

His map instead divides the Jacksonville area in two and produces two Republican seats in northeast Florida, and no Democratic leaning seats north of Orlando.

Lawson has maintained DeSantis' approach violates the law.

"The Florida Legislature is caving to the intimidation of DeSantis and his desire to create additional Republican seats in Congress by eliminating minority-access districts," he said in a prior statement. "Previously, the Florida Supreme Court scolded the Florida Legislature for injecting partisan politics into the reapportionment process. Florida voters were hopeful that legislators would have learned their lesson. They did not."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Florida Supreme Court threw out maps approved by the Legislature in 2012 and implemented the map with the current CD 5 configuration.

But notably, while DeSantis' comments have only ever addressed CD 5, his map is different from the Legislature in radical ways.

The map combines parts of Florida's existing 7th and 10th Congressional Districts — represented now by Democratic U.S. Reps. Stephanie Murphy and Val Demings, respectively — into a geographically small district that runs from Ocoee to Bithlo. That likely would reduce three Democrat-held seats in the Orlando area to two.

The Senate has argued CD 10 was also a protected district. While the House disagreed, Senate analysts said the analogous district on the Legislature's map still would perform for Black voters in the Orlando area.

But DeSantis' map also remakes Tampa Bay's congressional lines dramatically, despite that area having no minority seats. The map combines parts of Democratic Reps. Charlie Crist's and Kathy Castor's districts to have a seat that crosses Tampa Bay, a configuration rejected by the courts and replaced with seats contained respectively to Pinellas and Hillsborough counties. This also may result in reducing the number of Democratic seats by one.

But there are also big impacts in areas of the state where Republicans already dominate.

For example, a district represented by Rep. Vern Buchanan, a Longboat Key Republican, gets cleaved in two, with the Manatee County area central to his district landing in a new district oriented toward Tampa Bay. The Sarasota County portion, meanwhile, joins a seat that significantly overlaps with a district now represented by Republican Rep. Greg Steube. It's unclear where Buchanan would run in such a scenario.

House votes to move ahead with two-map congressional redistricting bill

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
March 3, 2022

The House formally voted to advance a controversial two-map plan as part of Florida's congressional redistricting legislation.

The plan was crafted in response to Gov. Ron DeSantis' expressed concerns about a North Florida congressional district. House leadership argued it's worth taking those concerns into account if lawmakers don't want DeSantis' veto pen to send them back to the drawing board.

"Members, we don't legislate in a vacuum," said Rep. Tyler Sirois, a Merritt Island Republican. "The Governor has provided his own perspective but so have many of you."

Sirois, chair of the House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee, sponsored the actual House legislation (HB 7503) that carries the maps. Lawmakers on the House floor Thursday voted to pass that legislation as an amendment to a bill already passed by the Senate (SB 102).

The Senate in January passed its own map (S 8060). In the upper chamber, Senators ignored any public submissions of cartography by the Governor's office.

None of the maps produced by DeSantis' General Counsel Ryan Newman have included a district analogous to Florida's 5th Congressional District, represented now by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Tallahassee Democrat. But staff for the House and Senate have maintained CD 5 is a Black-performing district protected by the federal Voting Rights Act and the Fair Districts amendment to Florida's Constitution.

DeSantis threatened to veto any map with "unconstitutional districts." In a letter to Sirois, Newman said CD 5 falls in that category.

With those concerns looming, the House produced a primary proposal for Florida's 28 congressional districts (H 8019) that replaces Lawson's seat with a Jacksonville area district that should preserve the ability for Black voters in North Florida to elect a candidate of their choice.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Rep. Tom Leek, House Redistricting Committee chair, said that's practically necessary. But he also said the Governor isn't alone in his desire to see a map without a Tallahassee-to-Jacksonville district.

"There are also many members in the chamber who would like to give the Governor the opportunity to make his legal argument, which is a novel legal argument and an expansion of the law," Leek said. "This map configuration you have before you puts that squarely within his ability to make those challenges."

But in the event the court rejects that argument and holds that CD 5 must be preserved, the legislation offers a fallback map (H 8015).

Democrats argued it's irresponsible to submit a map in response to concerns lawmakers don't all share.

"This is embarrassing," said Rep. Kelly Skidmore, a Boca Raton Democrat. The ranking Democrat on the House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee, Skidmore said the House should submit only one plan, and it should be one the House has confidence would pass legal muster.

"My only comfort is that after we do this, there's still an opportunity to meet with the Senate and try and hash out a map that we can all agree on," she said.

Leek defended the two-map solution.

"The primary map is put forward as a way to address the legal theory raised by the Governor while still protecting a Black minority seat in North Florida," Leek said. "If this configuration of CD 5 in the primary map is struck down by a court, the secondary map is postured to take immediate effect and contains a district configuration similar to the benchmark district."

Sen. Ray Rodrigues, an Estero Republican and Senate Reapportionment Committee chair, expressed some interest in a two-tier bill structure. "I don't think we've seen that done in redistricting, but given a tight timeline, it makes sense to go in with as much preparation as possible," he said.

The House expects to hold a final vote on its map on Friday, and after that, the chambers must come together in conference. From there, both chambers of the Legislature must agree on and pass a final bill that will be sent to DeSantis. He can then sign it, veto it or allow it to become law.

But of note, the Governor's Office has not embraced either map, and DeSantis threatened a veto even after the House Redistricting Committee moved forward with a plan.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Rep. Dan Daley, a Sunrise Democrat, questioned the House plan on the floor. He wondered why, if the House had greater confidence in the secondary map, it wasn't being offered as a first choice. He dismissed the approach as "ranked choice" redistricting.

But Skidmore and Daley ultimately withdrew amendments from consideration that would have favored the Senate map or made the secondary map the primary one.

Through the redistricting process, Democrats have questioned if any maps produce enough minority representation. Rep. Ramon Alexander of Tallahassee said the map reconfiguring Lawson's district presents a whole new set of racial issues. He noted that by condensing the minority seat to the Jacksonville area, it moves Florida A&M University, the state's largest historically Black university, out of a historically Black-held district. It also cuts Gadsden County, the only majority Black county in Florida, from the district.

"Is it safe to say that it would diminish the ability of the only majority African American county in the state of Florida to elect a Representative of their own choice?" Alexander said.

Leek argued the primary map does not diminish overall minority access because it simply shifts the Black seat to the east. He also said the top-tier minority protections in Florida's Constitution aren't based on county lines but population centers.

There are significantly different numbers behind the Black district on each map, however. The primary map produces a district where 35.27% of the voting age population is Black. The secondary map produces a 42.6% Black district.

Separately, Rep. Fentrice Driskell took issue with House language limiting the time frame for parties to challenge maps in court to just 30 days from the maps taking effect. Leek and Republican leadership in the House have argued that's a timeline similar to challenges on ballot language, and said a shortened period makes sense because these maps will go into effect for the 2022 election cycle. The House ultimately shot down amendments from Driskell to leave a four-year statute of limitations in place or to reduce the period to one year.

Mr. Popper,

My name is Ryan Newman, and I am General Counsel to Governor Ron DeSantis. John Gore at Jones Day suggested that I reach out to you.

The Florida House of Representatives has scheduled a committee hearing for this coming Friday, March 18, on its congressional redistricting map. The House proposal retains Congressional District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

We were hoping that you might be interested in serving as a witness at the hearing to educate the committee on why retaining this district would likely violate the U.S. Constitution.

Please let me know if you would be interested in speaking with us. I'm cc'ing Jason Torchinsky and Mo Jazil, who have been representing the Governor's office and the Florida Department of State as outside counsel. Josh Pratt and Nick Meros are Deputy GCs in my office.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Florida Senate releases state redistricting maps as conflicts for incumbents loom
Tampa Bay Times
Mary Ellen Klas
November 10, 2021

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Senate released its first round of draft maps for congressional and state Senate districts on Wednesday, offering eight options for senators to review next week, four for each chamber, that appear to shore up Republican districts but without significant changes to Democratic seats.

“The overall thing I’ve seen is they don’t want lawsuits,’’ said Matt Isbell, a map-drawing expert working with the non-partisan, left-leaning People over Profits organization. A decade ago, after a coalition of groups sued the Legislature for drawing illegal maps, courts agreed and ordered the adoption of the current congressional and state Senate maps.

The four draft congressional maps released “have similar fundamentals” and the same partisan balance, retaining the Republican advantage in Congress, Isbell said. The most obvious change is the shifting of District 27 in Miami, held by Republican U.S. Rep. Maria Salazar. The proposed district goes from narrowly pro-Biden to narrowly pro-Trump by no longer including Miami Beach.

“But you don’t see any effort here to really super-protect anybody,’’ he said.

Drawn behind closed doors by the Senate’s redistricting staff, the eight maps were done without public testimony about how the maps should be drawn but, staff said, they attempted to adhere to the guidelines presented by the committee at its October meeting.

“In drawing draft maps for the select subcommittees to review, staff did not consult with any person other than counsel,’’ said Jay Ferrin, staff director of the Senate Reapportionment Committee in a memo to senators.

“The differences between the draft plans represent trade-offs within co-equal Tier-Two criteria,” he said, referring to the court-approved criteria of equal population, visual compactness, county boundaries, geographic features and attempts to keep cities whole. The proposed maps are available for review under the submitted maps section of the Florida Legislature’s redistricting web site (floridaredistricting.gov).

An early assessment by mapping expert Dave Wasserman of the nonpartisan Cook Political Report was that the congressional maps were not obviously gerrymanders.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“Bizarre: These maps shore up #FL27 Rep. Maria Salazar (R), but otherwise are barely gerrymanders. By my count these maps break down 16-12 Trump-Biden, vs. 15-12 today. Is this a head fake?,’’ Wasserman wrote on Twitter.

“These maps would put #FL15 Rep. Scott Franklin (R) in the new safe R #FL28, but turn #FL15 into a Biden seat in the east Tampa suburbs — effectively creating a new Dem seat. I can’t imagine this is going to be the ultimate GOP plan in FL.”

The House will draw the map for its 120 districts, and it has announced no plans to release drafts.

Because of Florida’s population growth in the last decade, the state will get one additional member of the U.S. House of Representatives starting next year, bringing the total from 27 to 28.

Central Florida’s growth explosion

As a result, the biggest changes to the congressional maps appear to be in Central Florida, where Florida’s congressional District 9, held by Democratic Rep. Darren Soto, grew faster than any other congressional district in the nation over the last decade as the region became home to many new residents who accounted for the state’s 2.7 million net increase in population since 2010.

The four congressional options continue to divide the city of Orlando into three districts but stretch Soto’s District 9 farther south, capturing all of Osceola County.

One area the maps differ from the original is in the Tampa Bay region, where District 13, held by Democratic U.S. Rep. Charlie Crist, is almost 5 percent underpopulated. Under the proposed maps, the seat becomes more Republican, Isbell’s analysis shows, but it remains marginally Democratic.

Meanwhile, Franklin’s district which now stretches from just east of Tampa all the way to the western suburbs of Orlando would shift to Polk County and a new 15th District that narrowly favors Biden would be created in eastern Hillsborough County, Isbell said.

Senate plan S8002 results show “narrowly Trump at 16 districts,’’ Isbell Tweeted Wednesday. “But could easily fall to 15 if Dade swings back. Seems to shore-up Dade as best they can.”

Possible conflict for Pizzo, Jones in Senate

In the Senate, Miami Democrat Jason Pizzo is drawn into the same district as Miami Gardens Democrat Shevrin Jones, a seat that is minority Black, Isbell said. But the maps also open a new Democrat-leaning Broward-based seat that does not appear to have an incumbent, he said.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Miami also retains its four Hispanic-majority seats in the four Senate maps, Isbell said, although Senate District 37, now held by Republican Sen. Ileana Garcia, remains a district that leans Democratic.

The lack of population growth in Southeast Florida will result in Democrats likely losing a seat in Palm Beach County, Isbell's analysis of the four Senate drafts show.

"Palm Beach currently has three Democratic state senators, and in these maps it only has two, so somebody's running against somebody or somebody's retiring,'' he said.

In Central Florida, the geographic size of the district held by Sen. Victor Torres, a Kissimmee Democrat, appeared to retain much of its geographic character although his current District 15 is 33 percent overpopulated.

The staff maps increase the geographic size of districts in less-populated rural areas. For example, Sen. Loranne Ausley, a Tallahassee Democrat, represents District 3, which is 10 percent underpopulated, and it would stretch from the eastern edge of Panama City to the Osceola National Forest, which is between Lake City and Jacksonville.

Isbell's analysis showed that the Senate maps give the GOP the advantage. "The four state Senate plans are all around 23 Trump, 17 Biden. Current breakdown is 22-18,'' he wrote on Twitter.

The Senate refrained from drawing state House maps, leaving that to the leaders in the GOP-led House.

The draft maps will be discussed next week by the Senate's Reapportionment Committee as legislators convene for a week-long special session to make changes to COVID-19 policy.

On Tuesday, in advance of the release of the maps, Senate leaders released a rare, bipartisan warning.

In a joint statement, Senate President Wilton Simpson, R-Trilby, Senate president-designate Kathleen Passidomo, R-Naples, and Senate Democratic Leader Lauren Book, D-Plantation, suggested that the maps may lead incumbent senators to worry about their reelections.

"As senators, we are frequently presented with situations where we must set aside our personal views and make decisions in keeping with the oath we each took to defend the Constitution and laws of this state,'' the leaders wrote. "Nowhere is this responsibility more challenging then in redistricting given that some of us may ultimately decide to vote for a map knowing the realities of that map are such that we will never be reelected."

They suggested that some may conclude they should “defer seeking reelection” or decide to “run against a current colleague who we know and respect.”

The Fair District amendments to the Constitution prohibit legislators from drawing maps to protect incumbents or political parties, while also preserving the ability of minority voters to elect representatives of their choosing.

But because of the closed-door nature of the map-drawing process, and the Legislature’s adherence to a law that exempts them from releasing their drafts and communications under the public records law, there is no way for the public to check their work — unless a lawsuit is filed.

Advancements in technology have made it possible for independent organizations, including university students working with college GIS programs, to provide their own analysis of the Senate’s maps.

Senate Reapportionment Committee chair Ray Rodrigues, R-Estero, however, urged senators not to talk about the maps, or consult with others about them.

“I recognize publishing staff-drawn maps several days in advance of the select subcommittee meetings will likely result in self-appointed redistricting experts from all political persuasions immediately flocking to the media seeking to push their own narrative about our staff work product,’’ he wrote his colleagues in a memo on Monday.

“As we know from our work in other areas of public policy, for-profit activists unlike legislators, don’t have notice requirements. I encourage senators to be respectful of the work of our staff, whose directives came at the behest of this committee, rather than accepting analysis provided by organizations whose goals could be motivated by improper partisan intent.”

The Fair Districts Coalition, a group of voting rights advocates who worked to pass the anti-gerrymandering amendments to the Florida Constitution, on Tuesday released a report card on the Legislature’s attempts at transparency, giving it grades of “D” and “F” in most categories.

Rodrigues, and Rep. Tom Leek, R-Ormond Beach, the chair of the House Redistricting Committee, have said they will follow the Fair Districts constitutional provisions.

Call for more transparency

In the 2012 redistricting cycle, legislative leaders knowingly created a shadow process in violation of the law while vowing to conduct “the most transparent” redistricting process in Florida history. After the maps were challenged, a court ordered them to adopt new maps.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“While legislators have scored points for their promises to not repeat the process and have done a fair job of laying out the requirements of the Fair Districts amendments via their staff and hired attorney — actions speak louder than words,’’ the Fair Districts Coalition wrote. “The actions that have been taken so far are not in-sync with their public narrative.”

Senate spokesperson Katie Betta dismissed the critique by the group. “The Fair Districts Coalition is a Democrat-funded partisan entity, so it is no surprise that the coalition would be unhappy with a process designed to guard against improper partisan infiltration,’’ she said Wednesday.

The coalition has offered a list of suggestions for Florida legislators to employ that would improve public trust in the process. Among them:

▪ Make computer screens used to draft maps viewable online and available in real time. This feature was available for the public in North Carolina, which recently approved its redistricting maps, even while keeping them Republican leaning.

Betta responded that North Carolina live-streamed its map drawing because the state was “ordered to do so by the court as part of the remedial phase of redistricting.” She noted that the Florida Senate also had to take some additional steps last cycle when the court ordered it to impose additional sanctions to avoid outside interference.

“This time, the Senate has created a process insulated against the shadow process that occurred in 2012,’’ she said. “There is no need for staff to live-stream because they are directed not to speak with anyone other than counsel, and they will have to explain the various trade-offs within the co-equal Tier Two standards they present. Senators will then determine how to balance these trade offs as they exercise their legislative discretion and produce a constitutionally compliant map.”

▪ Provide 24/7 audio-video feed in the room(s) where map-drawing computers reside to record conversations and stream in real time, This is a feature currently being offered by the California Citizens Redistricting Commission, which is conducting its map-drawing live this week and providing public access via livestream.

Betta said the legislative meetings “are televised and live-streamed and public comment is received.”

▪ Repeal the 28-year-old law that exempts the Legislature from releasing its redistricting documents and draft maps under the public records law. The law was written before the Fair Districts amendments required legislators to draw maps that do not benefit incumbents or political parties and preserve minority voting access.

Betta did not address, saying only that “any map submitted by senators, staff, or a member of the public is posted to the Joint Legislative Redistricting website.”

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

▪ Take virtual public input during committee meetings and maintain a public comment log so legislators and staff can refer to the public testimony when drawing the maps.

▪ Allow the public to download the same census, political and demographic data used by legislators so that it can both draw and assess alternative maps. The Fair Districts Coalition says that although the Legislature's redistricting tool includes this data, that is not enough.

"Without the ability to download the data the public cannot confirm what data they are actually using. Nor can they use the data to evaluate or draw maps in their tool of choice,'' the coalition wrote.

Betta did not respond to this except to note that the public can create a map on the Legislature's own website or upload a map from another site and "any member of the public can download a map from our site, and upload that map into any third-party application."

The Times/Herald, as well as other outside parties, have requested a copy of this data but, for the last month, the response has been: "We are working to fulfill your request."

House Redistricting Sub Considers Congressional Plan

The House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee is scheduled to meet Friday morning to review a new congressional map released late last week. The new map proposal follows a recent decision made by the Supreme Court that rejected Gov. Ron DeSantis' request to review the legality of a North Florida congressional district. Earlier this week, DeSantis' general counsel submitted a second proposed congressional district map to lawmakers as part of the ongoing process of redrawing the district lines. The governor's office earlier submitted a proposed congressional district that was largely ignored by the Senate in passing its congressional district map. DeSantis has vowed to veto the Legislature's congressional map if it remains as passed by the Senate. Committee Packet

House Tax Package Advances

A House panel on Thursday unanimously supported a broad tax package that would provide what supporters say would be some of the largest tax cuts in Florida history. The House Ways and Means Committee proposed legislation that includes four sales tax holidays, a reduction in property taxes for qualifying individuals, and other tax cuts for consumers. What the bill doesn't include, however, is a gas tax break supported by Gov. Ron DeSantis. PCB WMC 22-01 includes the "Freedom Week" sales tax holiday for the second year in a row, offering a break on purchases such as outdoor gear and tickets to sporting events, state parks and museums. The annual back-to-school sales tax holiday would expand from 10 days to 14 and a new sales tax holiday would be added for skilled workers' tools that would last a week through Labor Day. Additionally, a disaster preparedness sales tax holiday was amended to include pet items necessary for evacuation, such as kennels, carriers and food. The added pet-related items were pushed by a Girl Scouts troop that attended the committee meeting. The proposal would also give Floridians tax cuts on diapers, baby and toddler clothes for one year, children's books for three months to encourage summer reading, and impact resistant windows, doors and garage doors for two years. Floridians purchasing ENERGY STAR refrigerators, washers, dryers and water heaters, would also pay less in sales tax for six months. Provisions in the tax package include bills sponsored by both parties. House Press Release / Florida Politics / Center Square

Tax Break for Teachers, First Responders Clears House Committee

A leadership-backed proposal offering a property tax break for some public service employees passed in its final committee stop on Thursday. HB 1, sponsored by Rep. Josie Tomkow, R-Auburndale, was approved by the House State Affairs Committee on a 20-1 vote and now heads to the floor. It would give an additional $50,000 homestead property tax exemption for public service workers such as teachers and first responders. The joint resolution, if passed by the Legislature, would still ultimately have to be ratified by Florida voters during the next general election. Its companion bill (HB 1563), which provides conditions and requirements for the exemptions along with the ballot language, also passed the committee. The Senate versions, SB 1746 and SB 1748, have one more committee to clear. Orlando Sentinel

Ban on Discussing Sexual Orientation with Younger Students Clears House Judiciary

Republican-backed legislation that would prohibit discussions of sexual orientation and gender identity in kindergarten through third grade classrooms advanced through its final committee of reference. HB 1557 passed the House Judiciary Committee on Thursday on a 13-7 vote and is now ready to be considered on the floor. More than 80 people signed up to testify during the meeting on what some opponents have dubbed the "don't say gay bill." Supporters, including Gov. Ron DeSantis, say the measure is aimed at asserting the rights of parents to control what their kids learn in school. Opponents worry the proposal could be detrimental for some children, especially LGBTQ youth and kids living in abusive households. A Senate version (SB 1834) still has two more committees to clear.

Senate Passes Water Sharing Bill After Assurances on Everglades Restoration Funding

After receiving assurances from the sponsor that a complicated environmental measure that drew intense opposition during the committee process wouldn't jeopardize work on the Everglades Agricultural Area, or EAA, Reservoir and wouldn't unduly shift the balance of how water is used more toward agricultural interests, the Senate easily approved the proposal Thursday. Passage of the bill (SB 2508) on a 37-2 vote came after approval of an amendment meant to try to clarify the measure in the face of a vocal opposition campaign that arose as the bill went through committee and resulted in people who make their livings from the water, including several fishing guides, coming to Tallahassee to lobby against the bill. Gov. Ron DeSantis also criticized the measure and how it was crafted. Senators had several questions on floor, seeking assurance from the bill's main author, Sen. Ben Albritton, on the issues raised by opponents – which Albritton had maintained all along were a misunderstanding of the language in the legislation. Albritton said the amended bill doesn't affect funding for the EAA, which remains at $64 million a year in the under-consideration budget, and said he doesn't believe anything in the bill gives more priority to agricultural water users than they already have. The measure directs state water management officials to follow in-place plans when dealing with the Army Corp of Engineers on managing the flow of water across South Florida. Albritton said there was "potentially" concern that the South Florida Water Management District wasn't protecting state water rights already set out in plans for apportioning use when dealing with the Army Corps of Engineers, cautiously echoing a concern raised by Senate President Wilton Simpson who charged recently that the Biden Administration was trying to change the way the ecosystem is managed. The bill now goes to the House for consideration. Tampa Bay Times / Treasure Coast Newspapers / WPTV / WINK

Immigration

House Panel OKs DeSantis-Backed Immigration Bill

A governor-backed measure aimed at reducing the number of undocumented immigrants in the state cleared the House State Affairs Committee with a 15-8 vote. HB 1355 would require all Florida law enforcement agencies to take part in the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement program known as 287(g), which trains officers to identify and remove unapproved immigrants. The legislation also prohibits local and state governments from contracting with businesses that transport undocumented immigrants, an effort seeking to strengthen Florida's ban on sanctuary cities. The House bill has one more committee stop and an identical Senate version (SB 1808) is scheduled to be heard in its second committee of reference early next week. Florida Politics

House offers new congressional map to appease DeSantis

Miami Herald/Associated Press
Brendan Farrington
February 26, 2022

A Florida House committee proposed a new congressional map on Friday in hopes of appeasing concerns Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis has about the constitutionality of a Black congressman's district while still trying to maintain a Black plurality district.

The map approved by the House Congressional Redistricting Committee would still create difficulties for U.S. Rep. Al Lawson's hopes of being reelected, but would create a Black plurality district in Jacksonville.

Lawson, who lives in Tallahassee, has a district that extends from Jacksonville to Gadsden County to the west of Florida's capital city. DeSantis proposed a map that dismantled Lawson's district, arguing that it is unconstitutionally gerrymandered. The governor's map doesn't contain a Black plurality district in north Florida.

DeSantis has threatened to veto any map he believes to be unconstitutional.

In an unusual move, the committee's bill also contained a backup map that leaves Lawson's district essentially intact in case the primary map is found unconstitutional.

"The primary map was put forward as a way to address the novel legal theory raised by the governor, while still protecting a Black minority seat in North Florida," said Republican committee Chairman Tom Leek. "Having two maps is a unique setup, however we are faced with a unique situation."

Lawson released a statement criticizing the committee.

"Never in our state's history has the Florida Legislature submitted two maps for review — one that is clearly unconstitutional and a second 'in case we get caught' map," he said.

Lawson said the new map is unconstitutional because it divides Black communities of interest in Jacksonville and Gadsden County, the only Black majority county in Florida. He said it would leave "all Black voters west of Jacksonville unrepresented."

The Legislature must draw new maps every 10 years after the federal census. The map also adds a new congressional district in central Florida, which is likely to favor

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Republicans. Florida gained the seat as a result of its population growing by 2.7 million new residents between 2010 and 2020.

Democrats opposed the new map.

The approval of the new map comes late in the legislative process. It needs to be approved by March 11 if lawmakers want to finish their session on time. The full House still needs to approve the map, The Senate has already approved the map with notable differences, and the two chambers need to come to an agreement.

Showtime for DeSantis' battle over mandates

Florida Politico
Gary Fineout
November 15, 2021

Hello and welcome to Monday.

Telegraph Road — Gov. Ron DeSantis wanted a special session. So he got one that starts today.

Sultans of swing — The governor and potential 2024 presidential contender is getting plenty of national headlines and television coverage for his sharp criticism of the Biden administration's mandates about the "jab." (It's no longer a medical procedure, but an assault.) Lost in the blur of this media attention is what the governor is actually getting — and what he isn't.

So far away — Florida's Republican governor won't get the legislative measures he wanted despite his public assertion that he didn't walk back anything. His bid to strip Covid-19 legal protections from mandate-happy businesses fizzled. As did he bid to subject private employers to workers' compensation claims over vaccines. Businesses will be subject to hefty fines if they don't provide exemptions to workers who don't want to get shots.

Down to the waterline — DeSantis will also get legislators to bend the law to fit his administration's interpretation on mask mandates and vaccine requirements for public employers. There won't be any admission that what the governor was doing up to this point was legally dubious. Instead it's being billed as clarifying what school districts and local governments can do.

Fade to black — And to be clear — despite a flurry of legal activity over the last few months — the core legal issues were not completely resolved. Still once this week is over the ambiguity over the governor's actions since August (when he wanted a special session on school mask mandates and was quietly rebuffed) will finally be aligned with the actual law.

Why worry? — But then what happens next? The law that will pass this week sets Florida up on a collision course with the Biden administration. Some business — namely hospitals relying on millions in federal health care funding — have already said they will follow federal vaccine mandates, not whatever the state comes up with.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Brothers in arms — The Biden vaccine mandate for private employers is already under serious legal scrutiny and past fights over emergency workplace standards augur the point of view from DeSantis and Attorney General Ashley Moody and others that they are legally dubious.

Skateaway — One equally important point: The main bill up for consideration this week will sunset all of its important provisions in June 2023. So in other words, this is a fight over the here and now — a battle to be waged ahead of the governor's re-election. It's about trying to win an argument.

— WHERE'S RON? — Gov. DeSantis is scheduled to be the keynote speaker at NFIB's 4th annual Boots and Business dinner in Tallahassee.

DRIVING THE DAY
IT STARTS — "Special legislative session pits Gov. DeSantis, GOP lawmakers against Biden," by USA Today Network-Florida's John Kennedy: "Dismissed mostly as political theater by opponents, Florida lawmakers return Monday to the Capitol for a special session demanded by Gov. Ron DeSantis to break with the Biden administration's push for larger businesses to assure that their employees are vaccinated. DeSantis has condemned Biden's actions as unconstitutional and a federal overreach. But Florida businesses are privately uneasy about the move by their staunch Republican allies – fearing it forces companies to choose between following federal or state law."

BANKROLLING IT — "Special session could add millions of dollars to DeSantis' fight against Biden vaccine mandates," by POLITICO's Arek Sarkissian: If this week's special session goes according to plan for Gov. Ron DeSantis, he'll have $5 million to fight President Joe Biden's vaccine mandates. The Legislature will begin a week-long session on Monday to consider four bills that take aim at the Biden Administration's vaccine requirements for private employees and other Covid-related restrictions. Lawmakers will ask for a total of $6 million, with $5 million for lawsuits filed by General Ashley Moody to stop Biden's vaccine requirements in court. The remaining $1 million will be used by the state to study federal oversight.

Dems respond — But House Minority Leader Evan Jenne said neither the legislative session nor the federal court battles are meant to address policy. "This is political theater, which will become judicial theater, if Donald Trump doesn't run, for the governor to run as president," Jenne said. "But he still has to wait for the green light for that one."

Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis' policies have raised his national profile, turning him into the leading 2024 presidential contender if former President Donald Trump doesn't run. Florida Governor Ron DeSantis flanked by Attorney General Ashley Moody, right, and supporters addresses the media and supporters Thursday, Oct. 28, 2021 in Lakeland Fla. The state of Florida on Thursday sued President Joe Biden's administration over its coronavirus vaccine mandate for federal contractors, opening yet another battleground between Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis and the White House. The lawsuit, announced by DeSantis at a news conference, alleges the president doesn't have the authority to issue the rule and that it violates procurement law. (Calvin Knight/The Ledger via AP) | Calvin Knight/The Ledger via AP

THE AGENDA — “DeSantis talked tough on employer vaccine mandates. Legislators reined him in,” by Miami Herald’s Mary Ellen Klas: "When Gov. Ron DeSantis announced last month that he wanted to call a special session to penalize companies that require employees to be vaccinated for COVID-19, Sen. Aaron Bean, a veteran Republican lawmaker who has spent much of his 17-year legislative career working on healthcare issues, knew the idea was going to have problems. ‘I want to stand for freedom,’ said Bean, of Jacksonville. ‘But there’s also the argument that if I own a small company, and I have underlying health conditions, and I want to make sure all those that interact with me are safe, are vaccinated, who are we to tell that small business owner what they can’t do?’”

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES
The daily rundown — The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said there were 1,414 Covid-19 infections on Friday. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services reported that 1,439 hospital beds were being used in the state for Covid-19 patients.

The toll — The Florida Department of Health reported on Friday that 60,697 have been killed by Covid-19 since the start of the pandemic in March 2020 including 33 deaths recorded in the past week. Nearly 36 percent of the state’s fatalities have been recorded since July 30.

RESPONSE — “Feds push back in vaccination court fight with Florida, Alabama and Georgia,” by News Service of Florida’s Jim Saunders: “Biden administration attorneys late Friday urged a federal appeals court to reject a request by Florida, Georgia and Alabama to put on hold a rule that would require tens of millions of workers nationwide to be vaccinated against COVID-19 or be regularly tested and wear masks. In a 26-page document filed at the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, federal attorneys said the rule, issued this month by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, is expected to save thousands of lives.”

FOLLOW THE MONEY — “Major business lobbies donate heavily ahead of COVID-19 vaccine mandate special session today,” by Orlando Sentinel’s Gray Rohrer: “At the same time, the chamber and another major business lobby, Associated Industries of Florida, were giving large donations to legislative leaders’ political committees and working to fend off one of DeSantis’ most aggressive ideas to thwart COVID-19 vaccine requirements: stripping liability protections away from businesses with mandates. DeSantis has convened a weeklong special session that begins today. But when DeSantis unveiled the bills alongside legislative leaders on Nov. 9, the liability provision wasn’t included. In October alone, Senate President Wilton Simpson, a Trilby Republican who is running for agriculture commissioner in 2022, received $525,000 from committees backed by the chamber and AIF.”

‘IT HITS HOME’ — “Young Floridians and Hispanics saw the greatest increase in COVID vaccinations as thousands died,” by Sun Sentinel’s Cindy Krischer Goodman, Spencer Norris and David Schutz: “With nearly 2,500 people a week in Florida dying during the peak of the delta wave, the groups most devastated saw the largest increase in COVID vaccinations. Two of the groups most hesitant to be vaccinated — 25-to-44-year-olds and the Hispanic population — led the state in new vaccinations while the delta wave took its toll on the state. … The data — obtained by the Sun Sentinel and other news media as a result of a lawsuit against the Florida Department of Health — offers the most comprehensive account yet of how segments of the population in individual Florida counties reacted to the delta wave.”

SHOWDOWN — “This elected leader worked remotely during COVID. Now he may get fired,” by Sun Sentinel’s Lisa J. Huriash and Brittany Wallman: “A 73-year-old elected official who worried about contracting COVID-19 faces losing his job — because he only showed up virtually for business during the pandemic. Miramar city leaders are expected to vote Monday whether to fire Commissioner Winston F. Barnes, concluding that leaders ‘may punish its own members for misconduct,’ according to the city’s documents. Officials said he can be fired because he broke the city’s rules by not attending commission meetings in person for three months.”

CAMPAIGN MODE

EVERY VOTE COUNTS — “Cherfilus-McCormick ‘apparent winner’ of primary, defeating Holness by 5 votes,” by Sun Sentinel’s Anthony Man: “Sheila Cherfilus-McCormick was declared the winner of the South Florida 20th Congressional District Democratic primary on Friday — 10 days after Election Day — finishing five votes ahead of Dale Holness. ‘It still seems like it’s unreal. But I want to thank the voters in Broward and Palm Beach counties,’ Cherfilus-McCormick said Friday evening."

DATELINE D.C.

HIDE AND SEEK — “Demings rips Rubio for skipping 14 Senate hearings amid GOP boycotts," by Orlando Sentinel’s Steven Lemongello: “U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio has missed as many as 14 Senate hearings over the past two months, a practice the Republican was criticized for six years ago as he launched a bid for the presidency. But many of his absences since September have been part of either a GOP boycott of the Small Business Committee or a pledge to not vote for any of President Biden’s State Department nominees.”

VERDICT— “73-year-old Sarasota County man convicted of threatening three members of Congress,” by Sarasota Herald-Tribune’s Earle Kimel: “A south Sarasota County man was found guilty by a federal jury of making threatening calls to three separate members of Congress in early 2020. Frank Anthony Pezzuto, 73, who lives in unincorporated Sarasota County between South Venice and Englewood, was found guilty of 'transmitting in interstate commerce a communication containing a threat to injure the person of another,' following a two-day trial in the U.S. District Court, Tampa Middle District. The verdict was released Monday. Pezzuto is a registered Democrat — as are the three U.S. representatives he is convicted of threatening.”

CGI Merchant Group, a Miami-based investment firm, is in contract to acquire the hotel lease for the Trump International Hotel, which is located a short walk down Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House. CGI intends to remove the Trump name, and it has reached a deal with Hilton Worldwide Holdings Inc. to have the property branded and managed by Hilton’s Waldorf Astoria group, these people said.”

FINALLY RETURNED — “Mar-a-Lago trespasser deported to China 2 years later,” by The Associated Press: “A Chinese businesswoman convicted of trespassing at President Donald Trump’s Mar-a-Lago club and lying to Secret Service agents was deported over the weekend, federal authorities said, more than two years after serving her sentence. Yujing Zhang was turned over to immigration officials in December 2019 after serving her eight-month sentence. But she was held at the Glades County Detention Center for three times as long as her prison term mainly because of deportation delays during the Covid-19 pandemic, immigration authorities told the Miami Herald.”

NEW HIRE FOR BALLARD — Jordan Elsbury, who had been chief of staff for Jacksonville Mayor Lenny Curry since June 2020, is joining Ballard Partners as the managing partner of the firm’s Jacksonville office. Ellsbury previously worked as the mayor’s director of intergovernmental affairs. “Jordan’s pre-eminent public service at the highest levels in the city of Jacksonville will make him an indispensable asset to our firm’s clients in Florida’s most populous city,” said Brian Ballard, the firm’s president and founder. Ellsbury got his start in Louisiana politics in 2014 and worked for the state’s Republican Party. He joined Curry’s 2015 mayoral bid as a campaign coordinator.

Authorities are conducting widespread police interrogations, detentions and so called acts of repudiation in anticipation of an opposition march planned for Monday that the government has said it will not allow because it claims it is part of a U.S. interventionist plan. Cubans in several cities worldwide have organized demonstrations in solidarity with the Cuban people and the young artists and activists of Archiepiélago, the group that called the march.”

Chairman Ge Songtao. The others all took plea deals but Yang insisted on his innocence and stood trial the past two weeks on charges that were separate from the export scheme that put Ge behind bars."

ODDS, ENDS AND FLORIDA MEN

— "Tourist dies in Florida Keys after diving into water for a football," by Sun Sentinel's Susannah Bryan: "A San Diego man died in the Florida Keys after diving into shallow water from a boat to catch a football on Saturday, authorities said. The Monroe County Sheriff's Office identified the 46-year-old man as Liam John Daly. People on the boat told deputies Daly took a diving leap into the water. When he came back up to the surface he was facedown and unresponsive."

Florida House Passes Redistricting Plan Amid DeSantis Veto Threat

CBS Miami
CBS Miami Staff
March 4, 2022

TALLAHASSEE (CBSMiami/NSF) — The Florida House on Friday approved a pair of maps aimed at mollifying Gov. Ron DeSantis' desire to condense a sprawling North Florida congressional district held by a Black Democrat.

But before the House voted on the proposal (SB 102), DeSantis objected to it.

"I will veto the congressional reapportionment plan currently being debated by the House. DOA," DeSantis tweeted.

A short time later during an appearance in Jacksonville, DeSantis added that his "legal folks" have concerns about the House proposal and that he doesn't "bluff."

"What makes you think after seeing me for however many years, what makes you think when I say I'm going to do something that I'm not going to follow through?" DeSantis said.

With the congressional map-making now moving back to the Senate for negotiations, Rep. Carlos Guillermo Smith, D-Orlando, said the House "just got played."

House Redistricting Chairman Tom Leek, R-Ormond Beach, said the House reached a "different conclusion on the same information,"

"Say what you will about the governor's involvement, at least he engaged," Leek said.

Rep. Tyler Sirois, a Merritt Island Republican who chairs the House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee, said the proposal is far from an "embarrassment" and "correctly balances" the concerns and feedback of people who would be affected.

The House voted 67-47 to approve an unusual plan that includes a "primary" map and a "backup" map, which would be used if courts reject the primary version. The plan came as lawmakers try to finish the once-a-decade reapportionment process.

The highest-profile issue has been North Florida's Congressional District 5, which currently sprawls from Jacksonville to west of Tallahassee. It was designed to help elect a minority and is held by Al Lawson, a Black Democrat.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Senate passed a congressional map in January that largely would keep the current design of District 5. But DeSantis contends the design is unconstitutional and wants to dramatically revamp it by condensing the district in the Jacksonville area.

The House's primary map takes a similar approach to DeSantis in putting the district in Northeast Florida. Its backup plan would be more in line with what the Senate proposed, continuing to stretch the district across North Florida.

During a debate Friday, House Democrats argued the maps are unconstitutional because they fail to account for the state's growing minority populations. Also, Democrats contend offering a backup plan could set a precedent for future legislation intended to test state and federal law.

Rep. Dan Daley, D-Sunrise, said the proposal would establish "ranked" legislation. Lawmakers also believe DeSantis is trying to set up a challenge to 2010 voter-approved "Fair Districts" constitutional amendments, which were designed to prevent gerrymandering, and to the federal Voting Rights Act.

"We don't do this with anything else. We don't pass two pieces of legislation and say, 'Well, one may be unconstitutional. The next one may be OK. So, let's just give it a try,'" said Daley. "We don't say, 'Hey, we want the governor to have,' by the sponsor, his own admission, 'the governor's opportunity to challenge the Voting Rights (Act), that's why we're passing this first primary map.' We've never done anything like that, nor do we do it in any way, shape, or form."

Senate President Wilton Simpson, R-Trilby, said Thursday night he had not received a full briefing on the House proposal, but stood up for the plan.

"I believe the House map is in order," Simpson told reporters. "I believe it's constitutional. I believe the speaker (House Speaker Chris Sprowls) and his team have done a tremendous job putting that map together. And so, I don't see any reason why we wouldn't pass that map."

A map needs to be in place before candidate qualifying begins in mid-June. Lawmakers have already approved state House and Senate maps, which received approval Thursday from the Florida Supreme Court.

Florida is adding a congressional seat this year because of population growth, increasing the delegation from 27 to 28 seats.

DeSantis has pushed for new lines that would drop the number of districts that historically have elected Black candidates from four to two and push the number of Republican-held seats from the current 16 to 20, based on 2020 voting patterns.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The House's proposed maps both would give the GOP the advantage in 18 seats, while the Senate map would expand the Republican majority to 17.

Rep. Fentrice Driskell, D-Tampa, argued the House's primary map would diminish the ability of minorities to elect candidates in north and central Florida.

The Senate proposal, approved in January, offers four districts likely to elect Black members and three districts likely to elect Hispanic members, while the House maps are at three Black-performing districts and three Hispanic-performing districts.

Among the differences between the House and Senate plans are the futures of Central Florida's Congressional District 7, held by Democrat Stephanie Murphy, and District 10, held by Democrat Val Demings. Murphy is not seeking re-election this year, while Demings is running for U.S. Senate.

The Senate would keep most of the existing lines for those districts. The House would merge most of the two districts, potentially reducing Democratic seats in the Orlando area from three to two. The change would move Murphy's district from Democratic-leaning to Republican, while slightly increasing Black representation in District 10.

Ron DeSantis Single-Handedly Wipes Out Democrat National Gerrymandering Advantages

Breitbart
Wendell Husebo
April 14, 2022

Gov. Ron DeSantis (R) on Wednesday single-handedly wiped out the Democrats' national gerrymandering advantage by proposing a map that eliminates constitutional infirmities.

Subject to the legislature's approval and likely court challenges, the map will destroy all the hard work Democrats' redistricting machine has created throughout the last months.

The DeSantis-proposed map will yield 20 red districts and 8 blue ones.

Last month Republican establishment House Speaker Chris Sprowls (R) and Senate President Wilton Simpson (R) bucked DeSantis's original map that would have generated 20 red and 8 blue districts. Instead, the lawmakers passed and submitted a subpar map to DeSantis, which created only 18 red and 10 blue districts. Previous maps designed by Sprowls and Simpson were even worse.

In turn, DeSantis vetoed the Democrat-aligned map and announced a special session in April to consider the establishment's map. With the special session occurring next week, the establishment Republicans told DeSantis to submit a map for the legislature to once again consider.

DeSantis's newest map is similar to his original one. The latest version would eliminate a Democrat district near Jacksonville by splitting it in two. It would also create a more favorable district near Tampa Bay and Pinellas County, an area that is turning red, districts that Sprowls and Simpson apparently opposed.
In a letter to the lawmakers, DeSantis's general counsel, Ryan Newman, said the proposed map "is the product of collaboration and consultation with the House and Senate leadership and draws from the maps that were recently passed by the Legislature."

With Sprowls and Simpson falling in line, the map is likely to be approved by the legislature, thus reshaping Florida's political future for the next ten years. Redistricting expert and senior editor of the Cook Political Report David Wasserman tweeted the map would totally destroy the Democrats' nationwide gerrymandering actions since the 2020 census.

"If this 20R-8D FL map passes and withstands court challenges, it could net Republicans four additional seats, entirely wiping out Dems' national redistricting gains thus far," Wasserman said.

Not everyone is impressed with the map. Leading Democrat election lawyer Marc Elias, who played a key role in pushing for vote-by-mail across the nation during the 2020 election and is supporting Democrats' efforts to gerrymander congressional district maps, tweeted the map will face legal challenges, presumably because it deconstructs Democrat-designed districts shaped by race.

Democrats have been very successful in the courts. Former President Barack Obama's one-time attorney general, Eric Holder, has successfully thwarted Republican state lawmakers' redistricting methods by aggressively gerrymandering House districts via the court system.

Holder's success is a result of his "sue to blue" strategy, which he implemented after Obama was destroyed in the 2010 redistricting cycle, the Wall Street Journal reported. Developing the plan under the National Democratic Redistricting Committee he created, Holder was influential in causing Republican legislatures to be less aggressive. Sprowls and Simpson have likely felt the heat.

But DeSantis and his administration are fighting back. General counsel Newman defended the map by arguing race should not take legal precedent over the 14th Amendment provisions of equal protection.

"Because of these adjustments, the new proposed apportionment plan eliminates the federal constitutional infirmities identified by the governor and improves on several metrics relative to the maps passed by the Legislature," Newman wrote.

Earlier this week, DeSantis also defended his map by citing Cooper v. Harris. The 2017 case was decided by a 5-3 majority in the Supreme Court, which held the North Carolina General Assembly engaged in "unconstitutional racial gerrymanders" by leaning on race too heavily when it drew two districts after the 2010 census.

DeSantis's map has wide support among conservative Florida Republicans. Former state senator and current Lake County property appraiser Carey Baker told Breitbart News that DeSantis's map is "absolutely" the "cleanest and least gerrymandered map that possibly has ever been proposed for the state of Florida."

"We know it will be challenged in court by the left, but any fair-minded court should easily come to the conclusion that this map complies with all state and federal redistricting requirements," Baker told Breitbart News. "Governor DeSantis is blessed with a state Supreme Court that isn't an activist court so if this map is considered solely on its merits it should sail through any challenges."

Rory Diamond, conservative Jacksonville City Council member, told Breitbart News the map is an act of "political courage" from DeSantis. Diamond's city of Jacksonville will be favorably impacted by the proposed map.

"Governor DeSantis' map is constitutional and an act of political courage, fighting a half-century of gerrymandering," he told Breitbart News. "Now we need real conservatives to fill these new seats."

The state legislature is poised to pass DeSantis's second map into law next week during its special session.

Congressional redistricting fight: New maps could shake up Broward, Palm Beach counties

Sun Sentinel
Anthony Man
April 10, 2022

There's a battle royal raging over Florida's congressional districts, with most most of the focus on whether a map should or shouldn't be drawn to maximize the chances for electing a Black member of Congress along the state's northern border.

But the outcome of the special legislative session on congressional redistricting that begins April 19 could also impact who wins two Broward-Palm Beach county congressional districts.

One thing is certain: the borders of the six congressional districts that take in all or parts of Broward and Palm Beach counties will change before the August primaries and November general election. Political insiders don't see radical changes that would upend congressional campaigns and dramatically alter the chances of various candidates — but, until a statewide map is finalized, anything is possible.

"I feel genuinely bad for anyone running for Congress," said Florida House Democratic leader Evan Jenne. "It is a hot mess right now."

New districts needed
All states with more than one member of Congress need new districts for the 2022 elections.

The districts are supposed to reflect population changes uncovered in the 2020 Census. Under the one-person, one-vote doctrine handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court, each district is supposed to have an equal population.

Main congressional redistricting plan passed by Legislature and vetoed by the governor »
Florida is also getting one additional district, for a total of 28, because of the state's above-average population growth in the last decade. And within the state, some areas have grown faster than others.

With congressional districts unresolved for the 2022 elections, Florida House Minority Party Leader Evan Jenne, a Broward Democrat, said, "It is a hot mess right now." State Rep. Kelly Skidmore, of Palm Beach County, right, the top Democrat on the House congressional redistricting subcommittee, said Gov. Ron DeSantis is engaged in “a blatant attempt to reduce the Democratic representatives by two African American seats.”

Redistricting isn’t as simple as just dividing the state. Depending on the configuration of a district, it’s likely — in many cases certain — to elect a Democrat or a Republican. Truly competitive districts are rare.

Democrats narrowly control the U.S. House. An extra seat or two from Florida in the Republican party could help the governor’s party take over.

FiveThirtyEight.com, which specializes in analyzing data, found that two maps produced by the Florida Legislature would add one Republican-leaning seat. One map proposed by DeSantis would add three more Republican-leaning seats and a second DeSantis map would add four Republican-leaning seats.

Also, the way district boundaries are drawn, a district can be much more likely to elect a Black or Hispanic member of Congress.

What’s the issue?
Republicans who control the state Legislature passed a plan, containing two possible maps, that was likely to preserve or enhance the Republican domination of the state’s congressional delegation, which currently stands at 16 Republicans and 11 Democrats. Many states where one party is in control do the same thing, trying to enhance their side’s number of members of Congress.

But Gov. Ron DeSantis wanted a plan that would be even more advantageous to Republicans, and he vetoed the congressional redistricting passed by his own party’s legislators. So for now, there’s no congressional map in place; candidates qualify to get on the ballot in mid-June.

As soon as he vetoed the Legislature’s plans, DeSantis immediately scheduled a special legislative session for April 19-22, summoning lawmakers back to Tallahassee for the sole purpose of coming up with congressional districts.

The biggest area of contention, cited by DeSantis, was the drawing of boundaries in north Florida, which are currently configured in a way that greatly increases the chance for a Black member of Congress for the region.

Under mid-1980s revisions to the federal Voting Rights Act, congressional boundaries are drawn with a goal of increasing the chance that someone from a minority group can win an election and bring a voice that otherwise wouldn’t be heard to the halls of Congress. It immediately produced results: In 1992 Florida elected its first Black members of Congress since 1877, when the post-Civil War era of Reconstruction ended.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Currently, Florida has four Black members of Congress, all Democrats: Al Lawson from north Florida, Val Demings from Orlando, Sheila Cherfilus-McCormick from Broward and Palm Beach counties, and Frederica Wilson from Broward and Miami-Dade counties.

Demings is running for U.S. Senate. But reconfiguration of her district would make it harder for a Black candidate to win in 2022.

DeSantis objected so much to preserving Lawson's district that his office took the unusual move of submitting two plans of his own to the Legislature early in the annual session.

DeSantis said the Lawson district — which stretches for 200 miles from Jacksonville to Gadsden County west of Tallahassee — violates the U.S. Constitution. He said it was racially gerrymandered.

An analysis from DeSantis' general counsel, which the governor cited in announcing his veto, said that the Legislature didn't need to draw a minority seat in north Florida, and by setting those boundaries ended up illegally assigning voters primarily on race without showing a compelling state interest in doing so.

State Rep. Kelly Skidmore of Palm Beach County, the top Democrat on the House Congressional redistricting subcommittee, said DeSantis' agenda is something different: "A blatant attempt to reduce the Democratic representatives by two African American seats."

South Florida
Big changes in the political affiliations of the six members of Congress from Broward and Palm Beach counties aren't likely to change when the redistricting is all done.

The territory is so Democratic that it would be difficult for Republicans to increase their numbers (currently they have one).

But new maps could change who gets elected, and upend political careers.

The two versions of maps the Legislature sent the governor didn't differ on how they divided South Florida, though they did make changes in the region. The two plans the governor's office drafted and submitted early in the legislative session, featured significant changes to South Florida districts.

Cherfilus-McCormick district: One of the two top contests this year features U.S. Rep. Sheila Cherfilus-McCormick, and former Broward County Commissioner Dale Holness, both Democrats. Holness lost a 2021 special primary election to Cherfilus-McCormick by just five votes.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Legislature's approved, but vetoed maps, would have a district similar to what it is today, and include most of the African American and Caribbean American communities in Broward and Palm Beach counties.

It would no longer include the heavily Caribbean American city of Miramar, which is where Cherfilus-McCormick is from. Caribbean American voters are important to both candidates. Cherfilus-McCormick is the first Haitian American Democrat elected to Congress. Holness is Jamaican American.

DeSantis' plans would make the district Broward-only. The county's black voters would likely have enough influence in the district to elect a Black member of Congress. But African American and Caribbean American communities in Palm Beach County likely wouldn't have a Black representative.

But the net effect, Cherfilus-McCormick contended when the governor first got involved in congressional redistricting, would be to hurt Black voters in Palm Beach County and violate both the Constitution and the federal Voting Rights Act.

That proposed district, without Palm Beach County, would likely have favored Holness.

In the Broward part of the current district, Holness came in first in 2021, with 29% of the vote to 22% for Cherfilus-McCormick. In Palm Beach County, Cherfilus-McCormick received 30% of the vote and Holness 8%.

Deutch district: Several candidates are running, or considering campaigns, to succeed U.S. Rep. Ted Deutch, a Democrat who isn't seeking re-election, in a district that currently includes most of Broward north of Interstate 595 plus southeast Palm Beach County.

In the Legislature's maps, the district would not change much — a bit more of Palm Beach County and a bit less of Broward, but still it would take in Parkland and most of the coast from Deerfield Beach through Fort Lauderdale.

That version would be good for Jared Moskowitz, the first Democratic candidate to enter the race. His government service includes time as a state representative from northwest Broward and as a Parkland city commissioner.

The governor's proposed maps — both of which were presented before Deutch announced he was leaving and Moskowitz said he was running — would make it a coastal district.

One would include some of Moskowitz's base, along with a long stretch of the coast from Delray Beach south, extending almost to Bal Harbour in Miami-Dade County.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The other proposed map from the governor's office would cut out Moskowitz's base (northwest Broward) and run mostly along the coast, picking up Delray Beach, parts of Broward and extending as far South as Miami Beach.

That kind of a district could be more friendly to a coastal candidate, like Fort Lauderdale City Commissioner Ben Sorensen, who has already announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination, or Democratic state Sen. Gary Farmer, who is considering a run.

A heavily Miami-Dade version might have prompted one of the county's state senators, Democrat Jason Pizzo, to consider running. Pizzo has announced his candidacy for another term in the state Senate, running in a newly configured district that's mostly in Broward County. Farmer might run for the same state Senate seat if he decides against a congressional bid.

The ultimate configuration of the district could determine whether an elected Republican, state Rep. Chip LaMarca, who has a coastal Broward base, makes a run for Congress. LaMarca said recently he and his wife Eileen would decide after new district boundaries are crafted.

Wasserman Schultz district: Under the Legislature-passed and governor-vetoed maps, Democratic U.S. Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz would get an all-Broward district taking in almost everything south of Interstate 595 and a little territory to the north. Currently her district extends southeast into Miami-Dade County.

Under one of the governor's two proposed maps, she'd keep her Weston base, but would lose Hollywood and coastal Miami-Dade County south through Surfside — and pick up vast territory in Palm Beach County west of Florida's Turnpike all the way to Lake Okeechobee.

Under the governor's other proposed map, she'd also keep her Weston base, lose Hollywood and eastern Miami-Dade County — and pick up some of western Miami-Dade County.

Under all four maps, Wasserman Schultz is favored to win. So is U.S. Rep. Lois Frankel, a West Palm Beach Democrat. The Legislature's maps and the governor's would all retain an all-Palm Beach County district, though with some differences in exactly what territory would be included.

In announcing his veto of the lawmakers' plans, DeSantis said he expected that "the Legislature is going to pass something that will get my signature," explaining that the two maps his office proposed earlier this year would get his signature.

They don't have to use any of the previous work product from the Legislature or the governor.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“At the end of the day, it’s in everybody’s best interest to do something, get a product done and just move on with the election season,” he said.

Skidmore said judges would be the ultimate arbiters. “I have my faith and hope in the court system to do the right thing.”

Gov. DeSantis hints at potential veto of Senate's congressional map

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
January 21, 2022

'For the congressional map it requires my signature.'

Gov. Ron DeSantis hinted at a press conference Friday that the congressional redistricting process could cause some tension between Republican leaders.

A day after the Senate passed its cartography for Florida's now-28 congressional districts (S 8060), he fielded a question about the Senate ignoring a map (P 0079) submitted this week by his executive office.

"That's their prerogative," he said.

In fact, a Governor offering a redistricting proposal appears to be unprecedented, and certainly hasn't been done in decades. But DeSantis reminded reporters Friday that his office does have a check on the reapportionment process, at least with the congressional lines.

"You know each chamber is able to weigh in and, of course, for the state maps, those maps go straight to the Supreme Court," he said. "For the congressional map it requires my signature."

He alluded to concerns raised by members of his administration that the congressional district represented by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson represents "an unconstitutional gerrymander."

"We had lawyers who had concerns about what they were doing," he said. "So that process will work itself out and we'll hopefully end up with a product that makes a lot of sense."

The Senate's map includes a district similar to CD 5, as have all maps proposed by legislative staff.

The Senate and House must come together during the Legislative Session to agree on a congressional map and send implementing legislation to the Governor. The bill can become law without his signature, but DeSantis holds veto power as well. In fact, Kentucky Gov. Andy Beshear vetoed a map produced by the Legislature there on Thursday. But that was a Democratic nixing the work of a Republican Legislature. The GOP now controls both Florida's Legislature and Governor's Mansion.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Of note, while the General Counsel for DeSantis' office has said parts of the Senate's congressional map don't make sense, most outside parties disagree.

RepresentUS, a group working with the Princeton Gerrymandering Process, praised the Senate maps and trashed the Governor's plan.

"With the Florida Senate passing today's congressional and state Senate maps with broad bipartisan support, we urge the Florida House to follow their lead and embrace a more bipartisan approach to their process," said Joe Kabourek, senior campaign director for RepresentUS. "While small changes to the Tampa Bay and Jacksonville regions would have resulted in a more perfect and fair map, the Florida Senate maps earned a 'B' from the nonpartisan Princeton Gerrymandering Project because a more fair and transparent process was followed.

"Unlike the Governor's proposed congressional map that runs afoul of the federal Voting Rights Act and makes a mockery of the Florida Constitutional Fair District standards by eliminating minority-access seats, the Florida Senate put forward a set of congressional and state Senate maps that are worthy of the bipartisan vote it received. Floridians would be well served if the Florida Legislature adopted the Senate's work product as new, and final maps."

DeSantis redistricting plan gets key Senate backing

News4Jax
Jim Turner
April 14, 2022

TALLAHASSEE – A Republican-favorable congressional redistricting plan that Gov. Ron DeSantis' office released Wednesday landed quick support from the leader of the Senate's reapportionment efforts.

Democrats, meanwhile, said the once-a-decade redistricting process has gone "extreme partisan" and threatened legal challenges.

State lawmakers will return to Tallahassee next week for a special session after DeSantis vetoed a congressional map passed during this year's regular session. Senate Reapportionment Chairman Ray Rodrigues, R-Estero, found the plan released Wednesday by the governor's office more than acceptable.

"After thoroughly reviewing the governor's submission and a discussion with our legal counsel, I have determined that the governor's map reflects standards the Senate can support," Rodrigues wrote in a memo to senators.

Rodrigues said the "proposal comes following meaningful discussions with our Senate legal counsel" and that he had been brief Tuesday by the governor's staff on the design.

Ryan Newman, general counsel for DeSantis, said in a letter Wednesday to Rodrigues that the proposal incorporated pieces of earlier maps recommended by the governor's office. Newman's letter said the proposal "eliminates the racially gerrymandered" Congressional District 5, which currently stretches from Jacksonville to west of Tallahassee, and makes changes to districts in the Tampa region.

The governor's proposal would go along with new lines that the Legislature pitched for the Panhandle and Southeast Florida.

District 5 in North Florida has spurred the most controversy, as it was drawn in the past to help elect a Black candidate. It is held by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat.

On Tuesday, DeSantis said the district would be redrawn in a "race-neutral manner."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In vetoing the congressional map passed by the Legislature, DeSantis argued that it violated the Equal Protection Clause of the U.S. Constitution, in part because of District 5. He also raised concerns about how lawmakers interpreted the “Fair Districts” constitutional amendments, which voters passed in 2010 to try to prevent gerrymandering.

Senate President Wilton Simpson, R-Trilby, and House Speaker Chris Sprowls, R-Palm Harbor, announced Monday that DeSantis would propose a map for the special session. It is highly unusual for the governor to take the lead on proposing maps.

Florida Democratic Party Chairman Manny Diaz released a statement early Wednesday evening blasting DeSantis’ proposal and legislative leaders.

“It is appalling, but not surprising, that the Republican Legislature has abdicated its constitutional duty to draft and pass congressional maps to the governor,” Diaz said. “As proven by the proposed map released today, Gov. DeSantis is hell-bent on eliminating congressional seats where Florida’s minority communities have the ability to elect representatives of their choice and he is imposing his own partisan political preferences on Florida’s congressional map.”

The congressional redistricting process is already the subject of a federal lawsuit, and more litigation is anticipated once new lines are approved. The special session will start Tuesday.

“If this map is enacted, Florida will be sued.,” tweeted Marc Elias, a Democratic Party elections lawyer.

Matt Isbell, a Tallahassee-based analyst who has worked for Democrats, tweeted Wednesday that with DeSantis’ proposal, the number of Republican-held congressional seats would be expected to grow from the current 16 to 20, based on 2020 voting patterns.

Democrats would have advantages in one district in the Tampa region, two in the Orlando area and five in South Florida. The state’s overall number of congressional seats is increasing this year from 27 to 28 because of population growth.

Sen. Linda Stewart, D-Orlando, tweeted that the redistricting process has gone “from nonpartisan to extreme partisan.”

The maps DeSantis vetoed last month would have led to 18 Republican-friendly districts.

Members of Rodrigues’ committee will get a briefing from the governor’s staff on the proposed map Tuesday afternoon.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee will meet separately Tuesday afternoon.

Rodrigues wrote that the governor's proposal "incorporates many of the features" the Senate approved during the regular session.

"As we have stated from the beginning, the goal is to produce a congressional map for our state that gains majority votes on the House and Senate floors, is signed by the governor and becomes law according to the consensus process outlined in our Constitution," Rodrigues wrote.

When the House and Senate passed their now-vetoed proposal March 4, Rodrigues argued on the Senate floor that the plan would hold up to a review by the Florida Supreme Court, as it followed court guidance on the handling of minority-access seats.

"It is clear that we are preserving the opportunity for minority voters, which makes it constitutional," Rodrigues said at the time.

8. Article III, Section 16 of the Florida Constitution

Here's an additional bit of information that I'm happy to expand on if you think it necessary: The Florida Attorney General has sent the joint resolution of Florida's state house and senate maps to the Florida Supreme Court under article III, section 16 of the Florida Constitution. The joint resolution does not require Governor DeSantis's approval or veto but the joint resolution must abide by standards nearly identical to those for the congressional districts.

Mr. Popper,

My name is Ryan Newman, and I am General Counsel to Governor Ron DeSantis. John Gore at Jones Day suggested that I reach out to you.

The Florida House of Representatives has scheduled a committee hearing for this coming Friday, March 18, on its congressional redistricting map. The House proposal retains Congressional District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

We were hoping that you might be interested in serving as a witness at the hearing to educate the committee on why retaining this district would likely violate the U.S. Constitution.

Please let me know if you would be interested in speaking with us. I'm cc'ing Jason Torchinsky and Mo Jazil, who have been representing the Governor's office and the Florida Department of State as outside counsel. Josh Pratt and Nick Meros are Deputy GCs in my office.

QUINCY, Fla. — When Black business owner Kiara Smith looks across the street from the door of her downtown shop, she sees the grounds of the county courthouse. The building was constructed in 1912, but the site is historic for what happened there decades earlier.

"This was one of the biggest places for the slave trade," Smith, 30, a Quincy native, said of the place where the enslaved were sold. "When you're born in Quincy, there's no doubt your great-great-great grandparents were slaves. And some of the White people here, they're more than likely the descendants of the owners. That's just the reality we live with."

A 200-mile stretch along Florida's northern border is dotted with small cities like Quincy, at its western end, where Black residents have historically made up a third or more of the population. But in the 145 years since the end of Reconstruction, only in the last five years has Quincy and most of North Florida been represented in Congress by a Black politician, Rep. Al Lawson (D).

Now a rancorous and unprecedented battle between the Republican-led Florida legislature and Gov. Ron DeSantis (R) over the decennial redrawing of political maps could wipe out Lawson's district and put Gadsden County, where Quincy is located, and seven other counties with large Black populations back in congressional districts represented by White Republicans.

"This governor is attempting to turn back the hands of time. He's not leading us forward. He's leading us backward," said Ben Frazier, an activist in Jacksonville at the eastern end of the district, who likened DeSantis to Southern segregationist governors who battled the civil rights movement. "He's doing the same thing that Orval Faubus in Arkansas and George Wallace in Alabama did. He's just doing it in a new suit."

The battle over the district lines began in January, just as the Florida Senate was set to vote on its map, which left Lawson's 5th Congressional District intact. On the eve of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, DeSantis complicated what had been a bipartisan process by presenting his own, dramatically more partisan map that boosted Republican seats and erased the 5th District.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The current House seat was created in 2015 after a protracted legal battle over redistricting ended with the state Supreme Court drawing a congressional map that created a new district running east to west along the northern border that would provide an advantage to Black voters.

Earlier this month, Republicans in the state House bent to DeSantis's will and passed two possible congressional maps — one already approved by the state Senate that kept Lawson's seat intact and another that reduced the district to a tiny area around Jacksonville that would be 35 percent Black, displacing all the other Black communities in Northern Florida into districts Donald Trump won in 2020. The Senate quickly passed that second map and the legislature sent both options to DeSantis.

DeSantis has vowed to veto both maps, claiming all versions but his own contain "unconstitutional gerrymanders." As the House was voting on its maps March 4, DeSantis said on Twitter that they were "DOA."

Under DeSantis's map, most of the current 5th District seat would be absorbed into GOP Rep. Neal Dunn's district, taking it from a district Trump won in 2020 by 34 percent of the vote down to one where Trump would have won by 11 percent. Dunn's office did not respond to request for comment.

"We had a lot of legislators who were calling our office saying, well, it's a bluff. I don't bluff," DeSantis said at a news conference after he sent the tweet. "So let's get together and try to have a compromise on some of those issues."

In a letter to the state Supreme Court in February seeking an opinion on his map, DeSantis said the district doesn't conform to "usual political or geographic boundaries." The court rejected DeSantis's request for an advisory opinion.

On Friday, a group of voters represented by Democratic voting rights lawyer Marc Elias filed a lawsuit asking for the court to draw a new map. The lawsuit, filed in Leon County Court in Tallahassee, says "there is no reasonable prospect that Florida's political branches will reach consensus."

DeSantis's effort to purge the district was urged on by Trump's former senior adviser Stephen K. Bannon, who called on supporters of his radio show to flood the governor's office with demands that he oppose any map that doesn't dramatically increase the number of Republican seats in the state's U.S. House delegation. Democrats say DeSantis, who is running for reelection and is considered a potential presidential candidate, may be looking beyond this year's redistricting by picking a fight that helps the Republican Party's goal of taking control of Congress.

DeSantis scrambles Florida's redistricting debate, with an eye to 2022 and perhaps 2024 elections

“The governor keeps saying he thinks the district is unconstitutionally gerrymandered, but this map was drawn by the Florida Supreme Court to comply with the Voting Rights Act,” said state Rep. Fentrice Driskell, a Democrat on the Florida House Redistricting Committee. “I think he’s trying to set up a challenge to the Voting Rights Act, and should he succeed in that, it’s going to be very bad for the country.”

Democratic governors and state Supreme Court judges have thwarted some efforts by Republican-led legislatures to draw maps that minimize the voting strength of minority voters, but there remains an imbalance between the rapid growth of those communities and the number of districts where they can elect a candidate of their choice. Louisiana Gov. John Bel Edwards (D) this week vetoed a GOP-drawn map because it had only one majority-Black district out of six in a state where Black population has grown to one-third of the overall population.

Quincy, which is 25 miles west of Tallahassee, was once one of the most prosperous towns in a vast cotton- and tobacco-growing area that reached east to Jacksonville. White “pioneer entrepreneurs,” as one official Florida account described them, moved from Georgia and other Southern states before the Civil War and built plantations in the region using the labor of enslaved people. Many of the homes and mansions from the 1840s and 1850s still stand, and many of them were built for men who turned against the country during the Civil War and served in the Confederate Army.

The area was called Middle Florida, and at that time, 44 percent of its population was Black.

Lawson, who was born in Midway, said the legislature’s new map would leave “all Black voters west of Jacksonville unrepresented.” The governor’s map would erase that representation entirely.

“Never in our state’s history has the Florida legislature submitted two maps for review — one that is clearly unconstitutional and a second ‘in case we get caught’ map,” Lawson said in a statement after the House passed the second map.

Lawson, 74, like his father and grandfather, worked in the Gadsden County tobacco fields when he was young, and like them, he faced the racism of the Jim Crow South. Once, he recalled, the “colored” public water fountain had a fly in it, so he drank from the “Whites only” one.

“A guy came out and pulled a gun and said, ‘Boy, you can’t drink out of that,’” Lawson recalled. “To be able to remember all of those things, and to be able to come back and represent that same person who pulled out a gun, who would come to me for help and assistance, and I would give them help and assistance.”

In Quincy, Smith said most of her elected officials, from city hall to the statehouse, are Black. She said it makes a difference.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“I feel like the doors are open when I go into an office and I’m speaking to someone that looks like me,” Smith said. “The best representation is someone who knows what it’s actually like to be a Black person in America, and that’s going to be another Black person.”

Londe Mondelus, a sophomore at Florida A&M University in Tallahassee, a historically Black university, is worried her school and the Black communities around it will be overlooked if they are no longer represented by a Black person.

“I love my HBCU, and Al Lawson has done a lot in securing funding for my institution,” said Mondelus, 19, who is also a student government senator. “And that’s good, because we are underfunded in comparison to FSU [Florida State University], which is right across the tracks. Al Lawson gets that, he understands what we need.”

The Rev. Don Tolliver in Tallahassee says he and other Black voters have compromised too much already, referring to the voting restrictions passed by the state legislature last year. Voting rights advocates see new laws that limit ballot box locations or restrict food and water handed out to people waiting in line to vote as efforts to suppress minority voters. DeSantis also is set to sign a new law that will make it a felony to possess more than two ballots at a time, effectively criminalizing the custom at many Black churches of gathering ballots from parishioners and submitting them to the elections office.

“The change that the governor wants will diminish our vote, and we won’t have fair representation,” said Tolliver, a pastor and member of the Equal Ground Action Fund, an advocacy organization for voting rights.

Most Black voters in Florida are registered Democrats. In Gadsden County, for example, there are more than 20,000 Democrats compared with 5,000 Republicans.

Tolliver was at Lawson’s election night victory party in 2016 when it became clear that for the first time since 1877, someone other than a White man would represent the area in Congress. Josiah Wallis, a Black man, represented Florida in Congress from 1871 until 1877.

“It was elation. We were overjoyed,” Tolliver recalled. “It was a feeling of accomplishment.”

Lawson made a short speech that night about “how we need to continue pushing,” as elsewhere around the country Democrats were stunned by Trump’s victory. He and others see support for issues like voting rights protections, child care funding and Medicaid expansion as dependent on electing Black officials.

“We need more districts, we need more representation so that we don’t feel left out of the process of government,” Tolliver said. “And now the governor wants to take that away, using redistricting to keep the minority voice out of the process. That's very discouraging."

Legislation recently signed into law will require health insurance providers to furnish more information regarding step-therapy protocols. Insurance companies and health maintenance organizations can use "step-therapy," which requires patients to try a preferred drug, procedure or treatment prior to using a costlier and riskier service. The new law approved by Gov. Ron DeSantis would require health insurers that use step therapy protocols to post any exemptions to the protocol on their website. Companies that grant exemptions must then specify the medical course of action, and organizations that deny the exemptions must give the reason why in writing, including the clinical rationale for the denial. They must also provide information on how to appeal the denial. The bill (HB 459) takes effect July 1. Florida Politics / House Press Release

The recipient of Thursday's award, 103-year-old Benjamin Ferencz, is the last surviving prosecutor of the Nuremberg war crimes trial. Legislature, Gov. DeSantis split three ways over Florida redistricting maps

Orlando Weekly
News Service of Florida
February 21, 2022

House Republicans advanced a map for new congressional lines Friday that includes a disputed North Florida district closer to what the Senate proposed than what Gov. Ron DeSantis has sought.

Still, the Republican-controlled House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee voted along party lines to approve a plan (PCB CRS 22-01) that could add two seats for the GOP in Florida's congressional delegation.

Democrats and other critics contend the proposed map would not fully reflect the growth of Hispanic and Black populations in Central Florida and South Florida.

But subcommittee Chairman Tyler Sirois, R-Merritt Island, said the House has engaged lawyers and outside experts to provide assistance with statistical analysis in anticipation of litigation.

"This is a legally sound map. It's a constitutionally compliant map," Sirois said.

The proposal would need approval from the House Redistricting Committee, which is scheduled to meet Thursday, before it could go to the full House. Ultimately, the Senate and House will have to reach agreement on a congressional map that then would go to the DeSantis.

Friday's meeting came after the once-a-decade process of redrawing congressional districts stalled because of issues involving Congressional District 5, a minority-access district that stretches across a swath of North Florida and is held by Democrat Al Lawson.

The Senate passed a proposed map that largely would keep the same design of the district, which goes from Jacksonville to west of Tallahassee. But DeSantis offered a proposal that would have dramatically changed the configuration and then sought an advisory opinion from the Florida Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court last week rejected DeSantis' request for an opinion, a move that restarted the House's map-drawing efforts. DeSantis has refused to back down from his push to redraw the North Florida district, though the House's new proposal is similar to the Senate's design.

Robert Popper, a senior attorney for the conservative Washington, D.C.-based group Judicial Watch, appeared at Friday's meeting on behalf of DeSantis and said the House's proposal for the district "will torpedo the ability of Florida to submit a set of districts that it can call narrowly tailored, if the district is submitted, I believe, in its present form."

As lawmakers redraw districts, they have to take into account the 2010 "Fair Districts" constitutional amendments, which set guidelines for reapportionment. In his request to the Supreme Court, DeSantis sought an opinion on a "non-diminishment standard" in the Constitution that prevents districts from being drawn that will hinder the ability of minority voters to elect candidates of their choice.

"The remedy has to be narrowly tailored," Popper said as he discussed District 5. "I do not suggest, and my testimony is not to suggest, that the Fair Districts amendment would be unconstitutional in all its applications. It absolutely wouldn't. It could justify a race-based district. It could. My testimony is just that it doesn't, not with this district."

DeSantis this week released a second map proposal that would drop the number of districts that historically have elected Black candidates from four to two, with both in South Florida. It also would bump up the potential number of Republican districts —- based on 2020 voting patterns —- from 16 to 20, according to data from the online site Redistricting & You.

The House proposal could increase the Republican seats by two to 18. The state's overall number of districts is increasing from 27 to 28 this year because of population growth over the past decade. The Senate's proposal, which was approved last month, could lead to 17 Republican seats.

Among the differences between the House and Senate plans are the futures of Central Florida's Congressional District 7, held by Democrat Stephanie Murphy, and District 10, held by Democrat Val Demings. Murphy is not seeking re-election this year, while Demings is running for U.S. Senate.

The House would merge most of the two districts, potentially reducing Democrat seats in the Orlando area from three to two, while the Senate would keep most of the existing lines in place. Both chambers appear to craft the new 28th district in the Polk County area, which has long elected Republicans.

The Senate considered District 10 as a Black-performing district. The House doesn't consider it a Black-performing district because of what it views as a population that has remained "stagnant."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“That is something that will be reconciled with the Senate, but again, according to our analysis, that has not been recognized as a protected district,” Sirois said.

Miranda Galindo, senior counsel with LatinoJustice PRLDEF, contended the proposal fails to take into account an increase in the number of Hispanic voters, particularly in Central Florida. Galindo also said the House proposal would split dense Latino populations in Hillsborough and Pasco counties and in Hendry and Collier counties, while the Senate map would keep those communities whole.

DeSantis could veto the congressional map that lawmakers ultimately produce. But Senate President Wilton Simpson, R-Trilby, said he wasn’t “concerned at all” about not completing districts before the June candidate-qualifying period for this year’s elections.

“I presume, and this is completely not been decided on, but I presume we will have conferees (legislative negotiators) that will get together with staff and determine if either one of those maps are singularly the one we want to go with, or do we want to make changes to blend those maps,” Simpson said Thursday. “There will be a process there with which we will allow it to play out and happen."

DeSantis' congressional map favors Republicans, likely diminishes Black representation

Miami Herald
Mary Ellen Klas
April 13, 2022

Gov. Ron DeSantis on Wednesday kept his promise and proposed a redistricting map that blows up the state's current congressional districts, creates four additional Republican-leaning seats, and eliminates at least two districts now held by Black Democrats in North and Central Florida.

The map would create 20 Republican-performing districts and eight Democrat-leaning districts and is expected to be quickly approved by the Republican-controlled Legislature next week when it meets in a special session called by the governor. The current split of the Florida congressional delegation is 16 Republicans and 11 Democrats, and the state gets an additional district because of its population growth.

If approved, the map is expected to be swiftly challenged in state and federal court with claims that it violates the anti-gerrymandering provisions of the Florida Constitution and the voting rights provisions in federal law.

Under the proposal, Republicans would have the voting advantage in 20 districts, up from the current 16 and Democrats would have the advantage in eight: one district in the Tampa Bay region, two in the Orlando area and five in South Florida.

DeSantis vetoed a compromise congressional plan approved by lawmakers in March, declaring that their attempt to create a minority-access seat in Jacksonville was an illegal "racial gerrymander." He called lawmakers back into special session to pass a plan that meets his approval and used his political clout to influence legislators, especially Republicans facing primary challenges.

Relying on what Florida House leaders called a "novel" legal theory, DeSantis and Ryan Newman, his general counsel, argued recent court decisions have determined that race should not take precedence over the 14th Amendment provisions of equal protection and changes to the Legislature's map were needed.

"Because of these adjustments, the new proposed apportionment plan eliminates the federal constitutional infirmities identified by the governor and improves on several metrics relative to the maps passed by the Legislature,'' Newman wrote in a letter that accompanied the map submission.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The new map was drawn with the help of the Senate's redistricting staff and "reflects standards the Senate can support,'' said Senate Reapportionment Committee Chair Ray Rodrigues, R-Estero, in a memo to senators. Rodrigues added that he will submit the map as a bill to be considered by the Senate.

This is the third map submitted by the governor, who broke with tradition in January and submitted two of his own congressional maps, only to have them rejected by legislators as potentially violating the Fair Districts provisions of the Florida Constitution. Those provisions prohibit lawmakers from drawing districts that favor incumbents or political parties or reduce the voting strength of racial and language minorities.

Newman said in the letter to Rodrigues that the new plan "eliminates the racially-gerrymandered versions of Congressional District 5," the North Florida district created in 2015 by the courts by linking communities along the former plantation territories. It is held by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat.

In Southeast Florida, Newman said the governor's proposal "retains the exact configuration" of the districts proposed by the House and Senate and does the same in the Florida Panhandle west of Tallahassee. But the governor revises the congressional districts in and around the Tampa Bay region "to align more closely" with the governor's original proposal, he said.

In Orlando, the governor's map dismantles the current District 10, which links Blacks and Hispanic communities and is now represented by U.S. Rep. Val Demings, a Black Democrat.

DEMOCRATS SAY 'IT IS APPALLING'

Florida Democratic Party Chair Manny Diaz immediately responded that the map, which leaves just two districts that would reliably elect Black candidates to office, will be challenged in court.

"It is appalling, but not surprising, that the Republican Legislature has abdicated its constitutional duty to draft and pass congressional maps to the governor," Diaz said in a statement.

"As proven by the proposed map released today, Gov. DeSantis is hell-bent on eliminating congressional seats where Florida's minority communities have the ability to elect representatives of their choice and he is imposing his own partisan political preferences on Florida's congressional map."

He warned that the map violates the Fair District standards of the Florida Constitution, the anti-gerrymandering provisions intended to prohibit lawmakers from approving maps that reduce the ability of minority voters to elect candidates of their choice.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“If this map is enacted, Florida will be sued.,” tweeted Marc Elias, a Democratic Party elections lawyer representing voters who have already filed a lawsuit in federal court.

In the letter to Rodrigues, Newman said that the proposed map “is the product of collaboration and consultation with the House and Senate leadership and draws from the maps that were recently passed by the Legislature.”

According to the documents submitted by the governor, it was drawn by J. Alex Kelly, the governor’s deputy chief of staff who was the director of the House Redistricting Committee in 2010.

Speaking to reporters earlier this week, DeSantis justified his decision to eliminate the districts that have elected Black candidates to office by citing Cooper v. Harris, a 2017 case in which the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-3 that the North Carolina General Assembly engaged in “unconstitutional racial gerrymanders” by relying on race too heavily when it drew two congressional districts following the 2010 Census.

The 2020 Census showed that the percentage of Floridians identifying themselves as from more than one racial or ethnic group increased dramatically over the last 10 years, while the percentage of people who identify as white declined.

To make sure that Florida’s redistricting fairly represented the minority composition of the state, the House and Senate conducted a functional analysis, to review how a district voted in general elections and assessed the demographic makeup of the primary election to determine if the minority population could elect a candidate of their choice as the Florida Constitution requires.

The governor’s submission, however, was absent a functional analysis to determine if it was properly protecting minority voting strength.

Senate spokesperson Katie Betta said that the “Senate staff will perform the functional analysis where required” for the governor’s maps and include the results in the meeting packet when the redistricting committee meets on Tuesday.

DeSantis asks Florida supreme court to weigh in on congressional map
Politico

February 1, 2022

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis, in another sign that he may veto a new congressional map being drawn by the state Legislature, asked the state's highest court on Tuesday to tell him whether or not a 200-mile congressional district linking Black neighborhoods must be kept intact.

DeSantis' recently submitted his own proposed map that throws out the district now held by Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat from Tallahassee.

But so far his proposal — which would likely increase the number of Republican-held congressional seats in Florida if enacted — has gotten a muted reaction from the GOP-controlled Legislature. The state Senate instead last month passed a map that keeps Lawson's seat relatively the same.

In a five-page letter requesting an advisory opinion, DeSantis asked Supreme Court justices whether or not Florida's voter-approved redistricting standards require the seat — which stretches across the northern border from just west of Tallahassee to downtown Jacksonville — to remain as it is currently drawn even though it is not currently a majority Black district. The seat has nearly 44 percent Black voting age population.

"I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice," wrote DeSantis to the high court.

The governor's request acknowledged that it was the state Supreme Court that signed off on a map that included the current configuration for Florida's 5th congressional district.

At the time, the court, which still had a liberal majority, approved a minority-access district that stretched across north Florida instead of one that connected Black neighborhoods in Orlando and Jacksonville. Justices contended that the map initially produced by the Legislature had been tainted by partisan motivations that were barred by the Fair Districts initiative approved by voters in 2010.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But DeSantis has remade the high court with several key appointments since he took office in early 2019. Chief Justice Charles Canady and the court's conservative majority since then have already overturned multiple previous decisions and rulings.

DeSantis' letter also notes that Lawson's district was approved prior to a 2017 U.S. Supreme Court ruling in which two North Carolina congressional districts were thrown out because state legislators relied too heavily on race when drawing them.

He specifically asked for justices to spell out when the rights of minority voters to choose a candidate had been diminished: "But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?"

The governor added that "Florida's non-diminishment standard-like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard-is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions."

During a Tuesday press conference in Miami, DeSantis predicted that he and the Legislature would be able to reach an agreement on a congressional map while at the same time slamming what he called "monstrosities" drawn up in New York and Illinois.

"I think we are going to be able to get to a good spot and have a good product," said DeSantis, who did not note the request to the Supreme Court. "We've got to get a couple of legal issues squared away."

The map that the governor's general counsel submitted to legislators last month would cut in half the number of African American districts from four on current proposed congressional maps to two, while boosting the number of seats Donald Trump would have won in 2020 to 18 from the 16 on the map being considered by the GOP-led Florida Senate.

Lawson blasted the proposal when it was first rolled out, saying it would "negatively affect people of color" and would invite a swift legal challenge.

"My district includes a large minority and urban core, protecting minority voting access is critical to serving the needs of this area. I am confident that this attempt by the Governor to dilute the voting rights of my constituents is in clear violation of the Voting Rights Act and the Constitution," Lawson said.

The threat of legal challenges looms large over Florida's redistricting process, which in 2012 became mired in a four-year legal fight after left-leaning voter groups filed a lawsuit under Florida's Fair District amendments, which are anti-gerrymandering provisions in the state Constitution. As a result, current court-approved state Senate and congressional maps were largely drawn by the groups that challenged the original maps.

The GOP-controlled Florida Senate, led by Senate President Wilton Simpson, has drawn up a congressional map that is attempting to sidestep legal challenge. The Senate's congressional map was overwhelmingly approved last month with both Democrats and Republicans voting yes. Lawmakers have until early March to come to a final agreement on a new map.

Statement by Congressman Al Lawson in Response to Ron DeSantis's Redistricting Loss Before the Florida Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On February 10, 2022, the Florida Supreme Court unanimously denied Ron DeSantis's request for an advisory opinion on whether lawmakers could legally remove one or more minority-access seats from Florida's congressional map. Currently, U.S. Rep. Al Lawson represents Congressional District 5, a minority-access seat created under the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

While the Florida House has not drawn congressional districts, the Florida Senate previously adopted a congressional map that provided representation for African American voters in North Florida by keeping the 5th congressional district largely intact. Ron DeSantis sought to remove Black representation in Congress for North Florida.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Congressman Al Lawson issued the following statement:

“Today, I commend the Florida Supreme Court for making the right decision. Ron DeSantis wanted the Supreme Court to violate the separation of powers and engage the judicial branch in partisan politics. They wisely and correctly rejected his request. Yes, Ron DeSantis lost today, but more importantly, democracy and the Constitution won.”

DeSantis Proposes Budget Increase for Fla National Guard, Wants to Join Other States in Reinstating State Guard

Gov. Ron DeSantis said Thursday that he'll ask lawmakers to boost funding for the Florida National Guard by more than $100 million, but also proposed an additional volunteer "Florida State Guard" that would serve as an adjunct to the National Guard, taking on some of the same duties but without having to answer to federal authority. The move would re-create a force that was disbanded in the 1940s. "Re-establishing the Florida State Guard will allow civilians from all over the state to be trained in the best emergency response techniques and have the ability to mobilize very, very quickly," DeSantis said during a news conference in Pensacola. Such "state defense forces" are allowed by federal law and more than 20 states already have them. Much of the additional National Guard funding – more than $80 million – would go for construction of new armories in Homestead, Gainesville and Malabar and expansion of a readiness center in Miramar. Lawmakers Begin Moving Governor's Proposed Congressional District Map

A map drafted by the governor's office that gets rid of a minority district in North Florida was considered by lawmakers on Tuesday, the first day of a special session on congressional redistricting. The governor's proposed map eliminates a majority African-American district stretching from Duval County to Gadsden County that is currently represented by Democratic Congressman Al Lawson. The boundaries of Congressional District 5 were previously drawn by a state court. Alex Kelly, who drafted the governor's 28-district congressional map, presented the proposal before House and Senate committees on Tuesday. Kelly emphasized that federal law requires minority districts to have compact boundaries, not connect minority populations across distant areas. The DeSantis administration says the long North Florida district currently in place defies federal law. While lawmakers are expected to pass the new map this week, a majority of members on both sides believe the map will be challenged in the courts. The House wants to limit litigation to only Leon County courts and require lawsuits to go through state courts before considering any federal challenges. A nonprofit organization known as Fair Districts has already requested a federal court to intervene in the congressional redistricting process. Democratic opponents of DeSantis' map believe the proposal will be used in this year's elections due to time constraints, even if the governor's map is deemed unconstitutional. Congressional candidate qualifying begins June 13 and DeSantis' map is expected to create more Republican seats. The full Senate is expected to vote on the measure today, and if it passes, send it to the House. Associated Press / Tampa Bay Times-Miami Herald

Local Government

DeSantis v. Disney: Lawmakers Take Up Bill Targeting Disney's Local Government

Just hours before lawmakers convened for a special session on congressional redistricting, Gov. Ron DeSantis announced he was expanding the Legislature's agenda to include repealing local governments known as "special districts" created prior to 1968. The move specifically targets the Walt Disney corporation, which operates its own local government in Central Florida. DeSantis' focus on Disney comes after company executives spoke out in opposition to a new state law that restricts instruction related to sexual orientation in schools, a measure derided by critics as the "don't say gay" bill. The House State Affairs Committee met Tuesday afternoon to consider HB 3C, which passed along party lines with Republicans in favor. The legislation is scheduled to be introduced on the House floor on Wednesday. The identical Senate version, SB 4C, is expected to be voted on by the full Senate on Wednesday after approval on a 6-3 vote Tuesday in the Senate Community Affairs Committee. The proposals would dissolve the Reedy Creek Improvement District by June 2023 but allow for the Legislature to reestablish the special district in the future. In 1967, the Legislature created the special independent governing district after Disney purchased 43 square miles of land, including Reedy Creek. Democratic opponents fear the measure could negatively impact surrounding local governments. Florida lawmakers took up legislation Tuesday that would remove an exemption for Disney from a law that would allow lawsuits against some media companies for content moderation decisions. the outcome of a challenge by two tech groups. The bill was originally touted as a way to let users of social-media platforms such as Facebook and Twitter sue if they've been kicked off the platform, or denied access to its services – such as when former President Donald Trump was banned from Twitter. But lawmakers added a mysterious late carve-out for Disney, reportedly at the request of the company, which raised concerns about its ability to moderate or remove user-generated content on its Disney+ streaming platform. Gov. Ron DeSantis, angered by Disney's opposition to a recent unrelated bill related to teaching about sexual orientation in schools, added to lawmakers' agenda in this week's special session by calling on them to remove the exemption for Disney. Lawmakers approved the proposed legislation (HB 5C, SB 6C) in committees on Tuesday. The full Senate took up its bill on the floor later Tuesday and could pass it today. The House is expected to pass the legislation Thursday. The federal lawsuit over the 2021 law – in which the judge blocking the law cited the Disney carve-out as a concern – continues, and is scheduled to be argued on April 28. DeSantis Signs University Accreditation Measure

Gov. Ron DeSantis signed legislation (SB 7044) into law on Tuesday that makes changes to the way state colleges and universities conduct business. Colleges would be allowed to seek accreditation from their current accreditor if the school fails to find a new accrediting organization. Additionally, the law requires all instructional materials, such as textbooks, to be posted online at least 45 days before the first day of class. "Florida's students deserve a quality, affordable education and don't need ideological activists and political organizations determining what they should learn," said the governor. TALLAHASSEE – When 80-year-old Sam Palmer was growing up in Gadsden County, few Black Floridians were eligible to vote — not in those segregation days.

Because of racial violence and restrictive voting laws, there were only seven Black voters in a county of almost 11,000 Black people. Palmer had just turned 18.

Now, as president of the NAACP in the state's only majority Black county, Palmer fears he's seeing a form of that history of disenfranchisement threatening to repeat itself.

"What I'm hearing out of Tallahassee is that we can pay taxes, but we won't have representation," Palmer said. "The governor wants to turn North Florida Republican red. And if he does, we're going to be an outcast, again."

Florida lawmakers are set to convene Tuesday at the Capitol to redraw boundaries for the state's 28 congressional districts.

Gov. Ron DeSantis last month vetoed an earlier redistricting plan approved by the Republican-led Legislature, condemning it as unconstitutional because of what he called racial gerrymandering.

Instead, DeSantis has advanced plans with more districts likely to elect Republicans to Congress from Florida. But he does this by redrawing two of the four districts represented by Black Democrats, reducing their number of minority voters.

The targeted districts include the seat held by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, which contains Gadsden County, a mostly rural, formerly tobacco-growing region at the Georgia border. With a population of almost 44,000 people, it is 55% Black.

The other district threatened is in the Orlando area where U.S. Rep. Val Demings, a Black Democrat elected in 2016, is leaving to challenge Republican U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

For a state that elected three Black members to Congress 30 years ago for only the first time since shortly after the Civil War, DeSantis' approach is viewed by opponents as turning back the political clock.

"It's about whether these voters get a chance to elect a representative of their choice, whether it's me or somebody else," said Lawson, a Democrat from Tallahassee, first elected in 2016. "The governor is doing this for political reasons, even Republicans are saying that. "

The Legislature refused to go along with the governor's demands during the two-month session, when leaders in both the House and Senate relied on a state constitutional requirement and preserved Florida's minority-heavy districts, four with large Black populations and four where Hispanic voters hold an edge.

The state's Fair Districts amendments, approved by voters in 2010, bar line-drawing that for Black and Hispanic voters would "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice."

Governor seeks legal conflict
DeSantis, though, argues that these Fair Districts standards conflict with the U.S. Supreme Court's interpretation of federal constitutional requirements.

Citing Lawson's current district, which stretches from the Tallahassee area to Jacksonville, DeSantis said on Tuesday that he is intent, instead, on crafting a "race neutral" seat in North Florida.

DeSantis a day later released a proposed map for the special session that would help Republicans capture 20 of Florida's 28 congressional districts and dramatically change the seats now held by Lawson and Demings.

Republicans currently hold 16 seats in Florida's 27-member congressional delegation, with the state adding a seat this year because of population gains in the 2020 Census.

What is now Lawson's district would be confined to Duval County, with its Black voting age population reduced to where it may not elect a Black lawmaker. The Orange County district served by Demings faces a similar challenge in the DeSantis map.

Senate Redistricting Chair Ray Rodrigues, R-Estero, was quick to get on board with what the governor recommended Wednesday.

"I have determined that the Governor's map reflects standards the Senate can support," Rodrigues said.

Florida Democratic Party Chair Manny Diaz lashed out at lawmakers for caving to DeSantis. He called it "appalling but not surprising," that Republican legislative leaders wouldn't try again to craft their own maps.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“Gov. DeSantis is hell-bent on eliminating congressional seats where Florida's minority communities have the ability to elect representatives of their choice and he is imposing his own partisan political preferences on Florida's congressional map," Diaz said.

The governor’s latest pitch is similar to maps he proposed in January and February, which would’ve turned Lawson’s district Republican-leaning. His plans would make every Florida congressional district north of the Orlando and Tampa areas likely to elect Repulblicans.

His earlier maps created 18 and 20 seats likley to be won by a Republican.

DeSantis' plans would help national Republican efforts aimed at regaining control of Congress in this fall’s midterm elections, when the governor also will be on the ballot, seeking re-election.

Once-a-decade redistricting is a pivotal part of the battle for Congress this year, with only Florida, Missouri and New Hampshire not yet approving new maps. With its 28 seats, the outcome in Florida will prove significant for both Democrats and Republicans.

The focus on Florida also intensified after Democrats managed to increase their expected numbers in New York, Oregon and Illinois, while Republicans appear to have bolstered their chance for adding seats from Texas and Georgia.

Florida’s legislative leaders say they don’t plan to present maps of their own for the special session. Instead, they’ll just respond to what the governor proposes.

While Republicans at this stage appear willing to endorse the redrawing of Black-leaning districts in favor of adding GOP seats, the effort is enflaming Black voters, Democrats and allied organizations.

They see the move as a historic marker, and not in a good way.

“It certainly has an impact on Black voters across the state to see this is yet again as another attack on our very existence,” said Jasmine Burney-Clark, founder of Equal Ground Action, a nonprofit which has launched a digital and letter-writing campaign aimed at state lawmakers, demanding they defend Florida minority representation in Congress.

“We went through a very rough legislative cycle this year and last year, and this is one additional knock on Black Floridians,” she added.

North Carolina ruling is key

The governor’s legal argument centers on a 2017 U.S. Supreme Court ruling in a North Carolina case that found it unconstitutional to racially gerrymander a seat, except in narrow instances, which DeSantis says the Black-leaning Congressional District 5 district fails to meet.

That North Carolina ruling came two years after Florida's congressional lines were created by the Florida Supreme Court, which had taken over the map-making in the last round of redistricting because of constitutional violations by Republican lawmakers drawing the plan.

DeSantis said that the two congressional maps endorsed this spring by Republican-led majorities in the state House and Senate violated the U.S. Constitution's equal protection clause.

Lawmakers had attempted placate the governor by recasting Lawson's district into a Duval County-only seat, but one still with a significant Black population. Legislators actually produced two maps, a primary and secondary plan, that left the 5th District with its minority-heavy, Tallahassee-to-Jacksonville contours.

DeSantis said lawmakers were wrong on both.

"They forgot to make sure what they were doing complied with the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution," DeSantis said when he vetoed the Legislature's plan.

History turns
The 14th Amendment, ratified in 1868, was among three post-Civil War amendments that established civil and legal rights for Black Americans. But its equal protection provision has been used by justices to prohibit lawmakers from using race as the predominant motivation to place a significant number of minority voters within a particular district.

The standard usually comes into play when minorities are packed into a district, a common tactic that can "bleach" neighboring seats and make it easier for white lawmakers from either party retain power.

But the governor's plan seems more designed to "crack" Black voters, eroding their influence by scattering them across districts more likely to elect white Republicans, opponents said.

"If they do what DeSantis wants, our only hope may be the courts," said Brenda Holt, a Gadsden County commissioner who has campaigned for Lawson in past elections.

DeSantis acknowledges that whatever map he signs, a court challenge lies ahead.

But the governor's argument could gain traction in a state Supreme Court where he has named three of the seven justices and a U.S. Supreme Court now with a conservative, 6-3 majority.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Court challenge certain
“Obviously, that will be litigated,” DeSantis said. “But I can tell you, the original district would have absolutely been litigated. And if you look at what’s happened in the U.S. Supreme Court over the last four or five years, you know, that would be the case.”

While Florida lawmakers wouldn’t fully endorse the governor’s dismantling of a Black-oriented North Florida district during the legislative session, DeSantis enlisted support for his legal argument from Robert Popper, who is with the conservative activist foundation Judicial Watch.

“In federal law, the district’s in trouble,” said Popper, famous for having created a mathematical standard bearing his name that is used to gauge district compactness.

Popper told a House committee that the Jacksonville-to-Tallahassee boundaries fail to meet the “narrowly tailored,” goal for districts that courts now demand.

But when asked whether the state had a role in protecting minority representation from being diminished, Popper responded, “it can be, if it’s accomplished with a narrowly tailored remedy.”

Still, even when lawmakers turned the Lawson district into Duval-only, it failed to satisfy the governor. Critics say it’s because it was still positioned to elect a Black Democrat.

For Black voters across North Florida and in the Orlando area, reducing their ability to elect a member of Congress they choose is viewed as erasing gains that seem fresh against Florida’s checkered racial history.

When Lawson was elected to the state House in 1982, he became the first Black member of the Legislature in modern times coming from either the Panhandle or Big Bend regions. In Congress, the North Florida counties he represents were home to pre-Civil War plantations and later endured decades of Black voter suppression.

“I’ve seen a lot of progress in Gadsden, compared to yesteryear,” said Palmer, the NAACP president. “But now we’re dealing with something that’s all about politics, and about Republicans trying to increase their clout in Washington.”

Florida Legislature approves congressional redistricting plan despite Gov. DeSantis veto threat

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
March 4, 2022

The full Florida Legislature has now approved a controversial redistricting plan in the face of Gov. Ron DeSantis' threatened veto.

Shortly after the Florida House passed two congressional maps, the Florida Senate took up the same cartography. That proposal passed in the Senate by a 24-15 vote Friday.

"This is a constitutional map. It is a good map," said Sen. Ray Rodrigues, chair of the Senate Reapportionment Committee.

That bill presented a House-drawn map (H 8019) as the Legislature's plan for Florida's now 28 congressional districts. The map controversially reshapes Florida's 5th Congressional District from a Tallahassee-to-Jacksonville configuration to a Duval County-only seat. The seat is represented by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Tallahassee Democrat, who has said this move will break up communities of color.

But analysts from both the House and Senate believe Black voters will still control a Democratic Primary in a seat that ultimately favors Democrats. Lawmakers argue that means courts should not toss the map over concerns about diminishment of racial minority voting power.

But in a seeming acknowledgement of the uncertainty there, the Legislature also approved a secondary map (H 8015). The legislation recommends that backup map be taken up if the first map is found to be unconstitutional.

Of course, that's assuming the bill ever makes it that far. DeSantis on Friday made clear he intends to veto the map approved by the Legislature.

"After seeing me for however many years, what makes you think when I say anything that I'm not going to follow through?" he told a crowd in Jacksonville.

Democrats argue the Legislature made a mistake in entertaining the Governor's objections at all.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“There’s a stain in this whole process. It is an ugly stain and I don’t know how we fix it,” said Sen. Janet Cruz, a Tampa Democrat. “What I don’t want to see is this process hijacked.”

Of note, the Senate’s draft congressional map (S 8060) won approval in January on a 31-4 vote, with even most Democrats voting “yes.” That’s different than in the House, where not one Democrat voted for the House maps sent up from the lower chamber earlier in the day.

Interestingly, one of the Democratic Senators who voted against the Senate map, Sen. Audrey Gibson of Jacksonville, voted in favor of the final pass produced by the House. Meanwhile, Sen. Manny Diaz, a Hialeah Republican, voted against the map.

But Sen. Lori Berman, a Delray Beach Democrat, said while she doesn’t like the final map, she dislikes the Governor’s interference more.

“I can’t support the map today,” she said. “But I am also deeply troubled by the Governor’s efforts to hijack this process. And if the Governor does insist on vetoing this map, I will certainly be with anyone voting to override that veto.”

Memorandum
To: All Senators
From: Ray Rodrigues
Subject: Congressional Map Submission from Governor DeSantis
Date: April 13, 2022

As the President indicated earlier this week, the Office of the Governor has drafted a proposed congressional map for our consideration during next week's special session. This proposal comes following meaningful discussions with our Senate legal counsel. Tuesday afternoon, the Governor's staff briefed me on their submission. You can find the Governor's map here, and I have attached the legal memorandum that accompanied the submission.

The Governor's staff has agreed to provide the same briefing before the Senate Committee on Reapportionment on Tuesday, April 19, at 1:30 p.m. in 412 Knott.

After thoroughly reviewing the Governor's submission and a discussion with our legal counsel, I have determined that the Governor's map reflects standards the Senate can support. As such, I intend to introduce the map as a bill for consideration during the special session. I have asked Senate Counsel Dan Nordby to prepare a legal memorandum outlining his analysis of the Governor's submission, which we will provide for your review.

I would like to thank Governor DeSantis and his staff who have worked very hard to produce a congressional map that incorporates many of the features of the map that previously passed the Senate with bipartisan support. As we have stated from the beginning, the goal is to produce a congressional map for our state that gains majority votes on the House and Senate floors, is signed by the Governor and becomes law according to the consensus process outlined in our constitution.

Thank you for your attention to this important issue. I wish you a restful weekend as we celebrate Easter and Passover with family and friends, and I look forward to seeing you next week.

2022 Session

Legislative Session Opens Today

The House and Senate will meet in joint session this morning to open the 2022 lawmaking session. The joint session will follow floor meetings of the full Senate and House in their respective chambers for opening remarks. Gov. Ron DeSantis is expected to deliver his State of the State address at 11 a.m. eastern time. LobbyTools Calendar

DeSantis Will Have Major Impact on '22 Session

The legislative session that opens today will be dominated by an agenda pushed by Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis, who is under a national spotlight as one of the most prominent GOP governors in the country and considered a possible candidate for president. Emboldened by election success at the presidential level in 2020 in the state and large majorities in both chambers of the Legislature, DeSantis is pushing a staunchly conservative agenda that includes banning critical race theory from schools and workplaces and bolstering efforts to tighten laws around voting. The governor also is pushing a large state budget with new spending for teachers, first responders and a gas tax holiday. Associated Press / WFLA

Democrats Begin Session with Vacancies in Both Chambers, Super-Minority in House

Most of the legislative session that begins today won't include Democratic Sen. Perry Thurston, who resigned to run for a congressional seat and two Democrats in the House, both from South Florida, who also had to resign to seek the same congressional seat. None of the three candidates won in the congressional primary. While primary elections in the three districts are taking place today, the Senate district and House District 88 will remain vacant for most of the session, with a general election not scheduled by Gov. Ron DeSantis until early March, just before the end of the annual session. In House District 94, no Republican is running, so the winner of today's primary could be seated sooner, but that is up to Republican House leaders. While Democrats will have a big minority in the Senate where they'll be outnumbered 24-15, they could have just 40 seats in the 120-member House, creating a Super Majority for Republicans. Bill Toughening Drug OD Law Advances

The Senate Judiciary Committee on Monday approved legislation (SB 190) to make it easier to prosecute capital murder when a defendant provided drugs to someone who then died from an overdose. The panel voted 7-3 in favor of the bill, which would make the law tougher in such cases by no longer requiring prosecutors to prove a particular drug was the sole direct cause of death. The bill would allow a murder conviction if prosecutors prove the drug was a "substantial factor" in producing the user's death.

Drugging for Assault Bill Moving in Senate

A bill seeking to close a sexual battery law loophole unanimously cleared its first committee, the Senate Judiciary Committee, on Monday. Current Florida law offers enhanced penalties for offenders who purposefully intoxicate or drug a victim without their consent, but limits those penalties to when a victim willingly gets drunk or does drugs. SB 868 would update state statutes to reflect that offenders committing sexual assault on any incapacitated person will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. Election to Fill Hastings Congressional Seat to Be Decided in South Florida

Voters in the 20th Congressional District in parts of Broward and Palm Beach counties are voting today in a special election to choose the successor to the late Rep. Alcee Hastings in Congress. Hastings died from cancer last April. Democrat Sheila Cherfilus McCormick defeated several other Democrats in the primary, eeking out the nomination with a five-vote victory over Dale Holness. Primaries Set for SD 33, HD 88, 94

Tuesday is Election Day for primary voters in three South Florida legislative districts where lawmakers resigned to run for the seat in Congress left open by the death of Alcee Hastings. State Sen. Perry Thurston, Rep. Bobby DuBose and Rep. Omari Hardy, all Democrats, all sought the CD 20 seat and had to resign their legislative seats. None of the three made it to the general election. Primaries are Tuesday in Senate District 33, House District 88 and House District 94 to choose nominees for a general election that is scheduled for March 8 to fill the three seats. The timing of the election, chosen by Gov. Ron DeSantis, has been criticized by some Democrats because it will leave at least two of the seats vacant until the legislative session is nearly over. Republicans qualified to run in the Senate district and in House District 88, setting up March general elections. In House District 94, only Democrats were listed as having qualified to run by the Division of Elections. Democratic voters will choose between Jervonte "Tae" Edmonds and Clarence "Chief" Williams in the primary for Palm Beach County's House District 88. The winner will face Republican Guarina Torres in the March 8 general election. The winner of House District 94 could join the Legislature after the primary – but that decision is up to Republican leaders in the House. Four Democrats are vying for that seat: Daryl Campbell, Josephus Eggelletion III, Rod Kemp, and Elijah Manley. Two Democrats, former Broward County School Board Chairwoman Rosalind Osgood and Terry Ann Williams Edden, are running in the Democratic primary for Senate District 33. District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

COVID Liability Protection Extension Advances

Legislation to extend the timeframe of liability protections from COVID-related claims and lawsuits filed against health care providers moved forward in the House on Friday. The Legislature passed the protective measure last year but the law has an expiration date that only grants immunity through March 2022. PCB HHS 22-01 passed the House Health and Human Services Committee with a 15-5 vote. The proposal would extend the liability protections until June 1, 2023, or 14 months after the current statutory protections are slated to expire. Opponents have argued that the immunity was sold as a temporary, emergency measure – and that Gov. Ron DeSantis and others have said the emergency is now over. The Senate version, SB 7014, cleared all of its committees and has been placed on the Senate special order calendar, ready to be considered on the floor later this week.

Administration Pushes Congressional Map

The DeSantis administration released a Congressional map proposal on Sunday. The 28-district map (P 0079) was submitted by Gov. Ron DeSantis' general counsel and accounts for the additional congressional district Florida gained during the 2020 Census due to population growth. The map shows 18 districts with a Republican lean and 10 districts that favor Democrats. DeSantis' map would cut in half the number of Black districts to two, erasing the 5th Congressional District seat held by African-American Rep. Al Lawson. The proposal comes days after the Senate Reapportionment Committee approved a Congressional map (SB 102) producing 16 districts with a slight Republican lean and 12 districts that favor Democrats. The Senate proposal now heads to the floor for a full chamber vote. Although the governor has no say over new legislative maps, the Legislature's congressional map proposals will need his approval. Florida lawmakers wait to hear high court opinion before drawing new voting districts

Libby Hendren
February 3, 2022

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Florida's state lawmakers have been working to create new districts that will determine how you will vote in the next election.

They have been making headway, but they're not on the same page as Gov. Ron DeSantis. He's asking the Florida Supreme Court for an advisory opinion on whether the state can legally change a district in North Florida.

The governor wants to have North Florida divided into more districts than what lawmakers were planning. They want to create more seats for Democrats but secure the Republican majority, while the governor is aiming to have a super majority.

Political Analyst Lars Hafner shared a sharper insight, indicating this challenge could help DeSantis if he is later elected president.

“He wants a majority in Congress to be Republicans and that could come from Florida if he gets more Republican seats,” Hafner said.

When the map was drawn a decade ago, it was deemed constitutional then.

The legislature is halting its work on the redistricting maps until the state's highest court can decide what can be done. State lawmakers are only required to pass a budget each legislative session. They are also tasked with redistricting every 10 years due to the U.S. Census showing changes to the state’s population.

Hafner says the governor can veto the federal maps, but he won’t be able to do that with the ones for the state legislature.

“I think the legislature as a whole probably did a fairly good job on redistricting the house and the senate maps. They allowed Democrats to pick up a seat in the senate and several seats in the house. Democrats pushed back against that simply because by doing that the Republicans have consolidated their seats to where they’re unwinnable for Democrats at all costs, so it’ll keep the majority in the Republican hands for the next 10 years. But overall, they really did their job by using the Fair District Act that was passed 10 years ago to move things forward, and so in that light a success," Hafner said.

Subject:	FlaPol: What does Gov. DeSantis' map mean for Southwest Florida's congressional incumbents?

What does Gov. DeSantis' map mean for Southwest Florida's congressional incumbents?

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
April 14, 2022

There are choices to make for Vern Buchanan, Scott Franklin and Greg Steube.
A congressional map proposed by Gov. Ron DeSantis could result in shuffling the delegation deck in a Republican-heavy region. One political consultant is already calling the cartography a "torpedo to Southwest Florida politics."

Three Republican congressmen — Reps. Vern Buchanan, Scott Franklin and Greg Steube — must reevaluate where to seek re-election to the U.S. House. None have announced a decision yet. That's quite a development after maps under consideration by the Legislature largely left the region alone.
The map submitted by DeSantis' Office (P 0109) would shake up the makeup of the Sarasota-Bradenton area particularly. It's a sign of how the map has rattled the political class in Republican and Democratic areas alike, and barely two months out from a June 17 candidate qualifying deadline.

Buchanan, a Longboat Key Republican seeking his ninth term in Congress, will make a decision in the coming weeks about where to run. Insiders say the less-senior members in flux will likely defer to Buchanan, who is in line to Chair the House Ways and Means Committee if Republicans retake the House in November.

But his decision on where to run isn't obvious, and he seems to be waiting for a Special Session of the Legislature to unfold before making big news.

Buchanan's district today covers all of Manatee County and the northern portions of Sarasota County, as well as part of southeast Hillsborough.

But DeSantis' map reimagines that. Florida's 16th Congressional District as proposed runs from State Road 60 in Brandon, with U.S. 41 on the west, to lump about a third of Hillsborough County with all of Manatee County. But it goes no further south. The majority of Buchanan's constituents do end up in the new CD 16, though Buchanan's South Longboat home does not. That's not a huge deal, as members of Congress, unlike state lawmakers, are not required to live in their districts.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But the proposed seat in Florida's 17th Congressional District covers all of Sarasota County, where Buchanan lives, and Charlotte County, as well as a significant part of Lee County, including North Fort Myers and much of Lehigh Acres. Buchanan represented all of Sarasota County when he was first elected in 2006 and he continued to his first eight years in Congress.

Today, much of that ground is represented by Steube, a Sarasota Republican whose current district covers south Sarasota County but also reaches deep inland to include all of Charlotte, DeSoto, Glades, Hardee, Highlands and Okeechobee counties, along with parts of Lee and Polk. While the Sarasota County portion remains the most populous part of Stuebe's existing district, a majority of his constituents now live outside of his home county.

Many of those more rural counties under DeSantis' map land in the new Florida's 18th Congressional District. That's an expansive seat — with a 181-mile drive from a northwest corner in Polk County to a southeast corner in Hendry County — that includes much of Franklin's Polk County base. Could Franklin, a former Lakeland City Council member, absorb much of the Florida Heartland into his seat?

Much depends on Buchanan, a longtime Sarasota business leader whose name adorns the Greater Sarasota Chamber of Commerce headquarters, just one such structure with his name visible from the road. His son, state Rep. James Buchanan of Venice, also represents Sarasota County and will continue to do so under a state House map already approved for the 2022 midterms.

While the bulk of Buchanan's constituency remains in Manatee under the proposed map, many suspect his heart lies in Sarasota. But if he runs in the more southern CD 17, that begs the question of what would happen with Steube.

Of note, Steube boasts roots in Manatee County, and likely could run in the new CD 16. He first won election to the state Legislature in a Manatee County state House seat and only moved to Sarasota when he ran successfully for the state Senate. He ultimately spent only a short time there before winning his spot in Congress in 2018. His father, Brad Steube, served for years as Manatee County's Sheriff. The Steube name still holds a lot of pull in the Bradenton area, enough so that the Congressman was able to organize a Trump Train out of Manatee County during the 2020 election cycle.

Most expect Buchanan's choice to shape Steube's, but any of the incumbents could lay claim at any moment to one of the proposed seats.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Those decisions will certainly bring ripple effects. Florida House leadership pulled state Rep. Mike Beltran from a redistricting subcommittee over a belief the DeSantis map created an opportunity — in that Hillsborough-Manatee seat where either Buchanan or Steube could run. Of course, it still could remain an open seat if Steube sticks with the inland district.

But that also requires a glance to the north at options for Franklin. The Lakeland Republican currently represents part of Hillsborough County. But much of Lakeland, where Franklin just a couple years ago served on the City Council, lies in the proposed CD 18 made up largely of Steube country.

Franklin also has the option of running in Florida's 15th Congressional District, a seemingly open seat that covers much of northeast Hillsborough County along with a piece of the Lakeland area. But there are already some power players running there, including former U.S. Rep. Dennis Ross and state Rep. Jackie Toledo.

Undoubtedly, there is space on the map for all three incumbent members of Congress, and arguably places where competition will either step aside or offer little threat to a sitting Representative. But decisions have to be made very quickly, and a lot more choices exist than did under a map vetoed by DeSantis which largely left the existing configuration of Southwest Florida's districts intact.

Health and human services are large budget drivers and make up $48.9 billion of the state's $112.1 billion spending plan. Funding in the health and human services budget silo will increase the minimum wage of Medicaid providers and nursing home staff. The Department of Children and

Families (DCF) will receive $4.2 billion in funding, with appropriations going toward community based care, substance abuse and mental health assistance, community based behavioral health services and opioid response.

Public safety is a top priority of the Legislature and the budget reflects that. Under the proposal, state law enforcement officers and state troopers will have their minimum salaries increased to $50,000 per year and $15 million will go toward pay raises for deputy sheriffs and correctional officers working in fiscally-constrained counties.

Additionally, the Legislature's budget contains $11.6 billion for the Department of Transportation's (DOT) Work Program, $175.3 million for library, cultural and historical grants and facilities, $50 million for VISIT FLORIDA and $50 million for the Florida Job Growth Grant Fund. The base student allocation (BSA) will also increase by $214.49 per student. Additionally, $140 million is included in the budget for mental health assistance in school districts and charter schools. Funds for workforce training are also included in the budget, as $390.4 million has been appropriated for career and technical education (CTE) programs within school districts.

Health and human services funding makes up more than a third of the Legislature's budget, as $48.9 billion is appropriated for health care. The Agency for Health Care Administration (AHCA) will receive $38.6 billion under the proposal, with nearly $500 million appropriated to increase the minimum wage of Medicaid providers and nursing home staff. The Department of Children and Families (DCF) is slated to receive $4.2 billion in legislative appropriations, with $158.4 million going toward community based care (CBC) funding increases. Mental health and substance abuse funding is also included in the budget, with $211.1 million going toward community based behavioral health services and $24.6 million going toward the opioid response grant.

The Legislature's budget includes $6.9 billion for civil and criminal justice projects and initiatives. $10.2 million will fund the Offender Based Information System (OBIS) replacement and $15 million will increase the salaries of deputy sheriffs and correctional officers in fiscally constrained counties across the state. Additionally, $5.3 million will increase the Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) provider minimum wage and $1.9 million is provided for recruitment staffing at the Department of Corrections (DOC).

Transportation, tourism and economic development are also portions of the FY 2022-23 that are significantly funded. Highlights include the Department of Transportation's (DOT) Work Program funded at $11.6 billion and $175.3 million for library, cultural and historical grants, facilities and initiatives. The Department of Economic Opportunity (DEO) will receive $50 million for VISIT FLORIDA funding and $50 million for the Florida Job Growth Grant Fund. Additionally, DEO will administer $25 million through the Rural Infrastructure Fund and $20 million for the law enforcement recruitment bonus program. The Department of State (DOS) is scheduled to receive $73.2 million for cultural and museum programs and initiatives and $31.1 million for historical preservation programs and initiatives.

Additionally, the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) will oversee $782.4 million for water quality improvements, including $125 million for the wastewater grant program, $50 million for alternative water supply projects and $10 million for the septic upgrade incentive program. Furthermore, $12 million will go toward small county wastewater treatment grants and $264.8 million will fund the wastewater revolving loan program.

LIBERTY PARTNERS PRESIDENT PARTICIPATES IN FICPA'S "CEO CONVERSATIONS"

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

On Friday, Liberty Partners of Tallahassee President Jennifer Green joined Florida Institute of Certified Public Accountants (FICPA) President & CEO Shelly Weir and FICPA Director of Governmental Affairs Justin Thames to record the latest edition of FICPA CEO Conversations. To begin the episode, Jennifer and Justin reviewed the 2022 Legislative Session and discussed issues that FICPA has engaged on during session, before highlighting where major issues stand in the legislative process.

Following the introductory recap, Jennifer and Justin discussed the status of FICPA's priority legislation. Through collaboration with FICPA's State Tax Committee, Jennifer and Justin were able to work with the Department of Revenue (DOR) on tax administration legislation. Sponsored by fellow CPAs in the Legislature - Senator Joe Gruters (R-Sarasota) and Representative Cyndi Stevenson (R-St. Augustine) - SB 1382 Tax Administration makes changes to DOR's responsibilities and rights before, during and after an audit. The bill is ready for Governor Ron DeSantis' signature and will level the playing field for businesses by punishing bad actors.

FICPA and members of their Common Interest Realty Associations (CIRA) Committee also engaged on legislation dealing with building safety following the Surfside tragedy. CIRA Committee members are considered accounting experts for condo and homeowner associations and lead the way when dealing with specific issues related to community associations. Jennifer and Justin highlighted the CIRA Committee's involvement in the legislative process and how the committee dealt with issues that were presented by the House and Senate. Jennifer and Justin also touched on legislation that was filed that would have a direct impact on the accounting profession, including legislation related to criminal history in professional licensing applications.

To conclude the episode, Jennifer and Justin discussed funding in the FY 2022-23 budget that is important to the Board of Accountancy (BOA). The Unlicensed Activity Fund and Clay Ford Scholarship Fund are two budget priorities for FICPA and FICPA has worked to ensure this funding is included in the budget. Good Tuesday morning.

When Gov. Ron DeSantis called for a Special Session on vaccination and mask mandates, lawmakers were just as surprised as the public.

There's usually a lot of choreography involved in a Special Session, especially one aimed at an issue as fractious as regulating what businesses can and can't require of their employees.

At the very least, Governors want to know that their priorities will pass. In the first days after DeSantis' proclamation, it wasn't a certainty.

Media has focused on the cult of personality surrounding DeSantis, perceived GOP infighting and even a "Republicans are crazy" narrative.

Yet, none of them panned out. In short order the Legislature has come together for what looks to be a smooth, quick victory for the Governor — one could even call it routine.

Members aren't anxious. Both sides have mostly hammered out the final product and it's expected to pass with both chambers with support. And, more importantly for the Governor, the legislation achieves the goals he laid out but in a more sophisticated way than he asked.

For all the talk of dysfunction, the Special Session proves the opposite: Florida has a highly functioning, competent House and Senate with even-handed leaders who know how to cooperate with each other — and do it well.

Here are a few other items that caught my attention:

😈 — Are the bad guys winning?: Anne Applebaum, a writer for the Atlantic, suggests they are in a detailed analysis centering on a stolen election in Belarus. The theme: if the 20th Century marked progress toward democracy over other ideologies, such as communism and fascism, the 21st Century is the opposite. The piece highlights Sviatlana Tsikhanouskaya's plight in Belarus, where she won the 2020 presidential election with more than 80% of the vote, but the nation's dictator who she defeated, Alexander Lukashenko, refused to concede and forced her from the country. The situation that unfolded highlighted “the dictator’s learning curve” — a tactic used in the past to repress crowds. Read more here.

 — When, and how, does COVID end?: The virus, COVID-19 expert Dr. Robert Wachter posits, is unlikely to go away — ever. So the time is now to get back to some sense of normalcy. And that, according to the New York Times, comes from an expert who airs on the side of caution, who believes in the threat of long COVID, thinks people should get booster shots and wears masks regularly (and probably always will). He hopes that while COVID-19 might be here to stay, it will become a manageable virus, like the seasonal flu. And it’s possible even for the weariest of virus worriers — Wachter himself has resumed many normal activities, like dining indoors and playing poker with friends. The trick is to “be thoughtful and careful,” including by continuing to wear masks in high-risk areas, such as on planes, and limiting indoor activities to those who are vaccinated.

💉 — Not everyone wants to brag about their jab: About one in six vaccinated Americans aren’t telling certain people they got the poke, according to a Harris Poll survey conducted for USA TODAY. Further, one in 17 isn’t telling anyone. For many of these secret vaxxers, they’re staying quiet because they know people around them won’t approve. USA TODAY notes the story of one man, who offered only his first name — William — who isn’t telling coworkers he got vaccinated. There, his boss has made false arguments claiming the COVID-19 vaccines were “experimental” and “rushed” and promulgated various conspiracy theories, including that the shots were being used to install tracking chips into recipients. As a result, William scheduled his vaccination off-hours to avoid suspicion from his boss.

 — Information Disorder is a thing: Described as a “crisis that exacerbates all other crises,” the Aspen Institute’s Commission on Information Disorder describes in its newly released report that the problem occurs when “bad information becomes as prevalent, persuasive, and persistent as good information, it creates a chain reaction of harm.” Report co-chairs continued, “Information disorder is a problem that cannot be completely solved. Its eradication is not the end goal. Instead, the Commission’s goal is to mitigate misinformation’s worst harms with prioritization for the most vulnerable segments of our society.” Read more about the issue here.

🖥️ — Andrew Sullivan gets the Scott Pelley profile treatment on 60 Minutes: Sullivan, an often controversial conservative blogger (who is also one of my intellectual heroes), weighed in on 60 Minutes with his thoughts, and fears, about American politics, arguing early in the interview that Americans have become too tribalistic. “This country came to the point where we had violence in the usual peaceful transfer of power. That is a huge warning to how unstable our system can be if we remain tribalists in a system that’s supposed to be designed for reasonable citizens.” Sullivan, who is a married gay man, also weighed in on coming to terms with his sexuality and his controversial decision in 1994 to post an excerpt from the book “The Bell Curve,” implying Black Americans have lower IQs than their White counterparts. But in the end, Sullivan expresses hope for the future. “Maybe there’ll be something in the future, a leader, a figure — or there must be a sort of groundswell of people saying, ‘enough of this.’” See the entire interview here.

— SITUATIONAL AWARENESS —

—@POTUS: It’s official, folks: I’ve signed the Bipartisan Infrastructure Deal into law.

—@EliseSteganik: For years, Democrats baselessly accused President Trump of “weaponizing” the DOJ. In reality, it is the Left that has been weaponizing the DOJ the ENTIRE TIME – from the false Russia Hoax to the Soviet-style prosecution of political opponents.

—@RepGregSteube: -Turkey is up 27%. -Potatoes are up 13%. -Carrots are up 47%. -Cranberries are up 5.2%. You can thank Joe Biden for the most expensive Thanksgiving meal in history!

Tweet, tweet:

—@AnaCeballos: Rep. Thad Altman, an Indialantic Republican, with a different angle to the debate. He says Gov. Ron DeSantis’ push for the bill means he is “willing to relinquish this responsibility and put it in our hands” and that it is a “real compliment” to the Legislature.

—@RepCBenjamin: Florida’s direction can only be to meet or exceed OSHA’s standards; and ETS or not – OSHA can require strict COVID protocols that don’t rise to the level of a direct mandate. So a State OSHA plan doesn’t necessarily mean no vaccine protocols. This action jumps the gun.

“Amid protests in Cuba, Gov. DeSantis announces $25 million proposal to revamp Freedom Tower” via Samantha J. Gross of the Miami Herald — Behind a podium boasting Patria y Vida at the Freedom Tower in downtown Miami on Monday morning, DeSantis announced a $25 million request to make structural repairs to the historic tower. The budget request will be part of DeSantis’ multi-billion dollar proposal for the 2022 Legislative Session, and is subject to approval by state lawmakers. The nearly century-old Freedom Tower, which was built in 1925 as the headquarters for the Miami News, served as the central location for processing and documenting Cuban refugees fleeing to Miami during the Cold War.

“Brave Cubans defy crackdown, show the world just how powerful their voice has become” via Fabiola Santiago of the Miami Herald — The Cuban regime is very, very afraid of a generation that won’t take “No” for an answer from the static patriarchy leading Cuba, island gulag, only 90 miles from Key West. Threats and angry mobs armed by the government with clubs don’t dissuade them. Jail time doesn’t, either. They have truth and a just cause on their side. Accustomed to 62 years of acquiescence by force, the dictatorship run by Miguel Díaz-Canel, the appointed strongman du jour unleashed its considerable repressive apparatus on Cubans intent on staging a second protest Monday, following July 11 demonstrations, to call for change and democracy.

“Cuban security tries to suppress street protests. But people already have made their point” via the Miami Herald editorial board — All eyes are on how the island government will react to these planned and unprecedented acts of civil disobedience. The most likely immediate response by Cuba and its suffocating security apparatus? Shutting off the Internet, which the Cuban government seems able to do at will, as if it had a light switch. No internet removes the outside world from helping protesters on the island or spreading news of it. Arrests are sure to be another feature of the government’s crackdown. Some 700 people were taken into custody during this summer’s protests.

“A Cuban dissident with a rose sends powerful message amid island government’s crackdown” via Nora Gámez Torres of the Miami Herald — The Cuban government has unwittingly created a powerful symbol of its fear of an increasing opposition movement led by young Cubans, after state security agents and government supporters prevented playwright Yunior García from going outside his apartment on a solo walk Sunday carrying a white rose. Instead, García was forced to show the rose through the blinds in his window to journalists standing afar, creating an iconic image for the dissident movement. A white rose is a powerful symbol in Cuban history, harking back to one of the most famous poems by Cuban writer and independence war hero José Martí, who wrote that he would grow a white rose for both friends and enemies.

— SPECIAL SESSION —

“Senate committee advances bill banning vaccine mandates” via Christine Jordan Sexton of Florida Politics — Spurred by a handful of health care workers as well as a group of staunch opponents to COVID-19 vaccines, a Florida Senate panel on Monday voted 7-3 to approve legislation pushed by Gov. Ron DeSantis that would clamp down on private companies mandating employee vaccinations. The bill also would beef up a 2021 law meant to give parents more control over their children at school. “What we are seeking here is to make sure employees are not getting fired,” said bill sponsor Sen. Danny Burgess. Sen. Dennis Baxley said it was “time to act” so that Floridians “are not subjects of a totalitarian national government.” President Joe Biden’s administration is moving forward with vaccine mandates for health care providers, federal contractors and large employers.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“OSHA bill ready for House floor, moves in Senate despite Democrats’ objections” via Renzo Downey of Florida Politics — The full House is ready to consider legislation asking Ron DeSantis to develop a state workplace safety proposal, but Democrats say it’s not a serious proposal. The measure (HB 5B) would ask the Governor’s Office to develop a plan for Florida to seek federal approval for a state counterpart to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. State occupational safety agencies must be at least as strict as the federal OSHA, but leaders in Florida’s Republican-led Legislature have framed the measure as a way to bypass vaccine mandates from a “weaponized” OSHA. During a House Pandemics & Public Emergencies Committee meeting on Monday, lawmakers on both sides of the aisle expressed support for a state-level agency. The bill sponsor, Land O’Lakes Republican Rep. Ardian Zika, said the federal vaccine mandate kicked off discussions asking whether creating a state workplace safety agency would help meet Florida’s growing economy.

“Lawmakers OK bills to limit Surgeon General emergency powers” via Jason Delgado of Florida Politics — Lawmakers moved forward Monday with proposals that strip the surgeon general’s authority to mandate vaccinations during a public health emergency. The House Health and Human Services Committee and Senate Judiciary Committee OK’d the measures (HB 7 & SB 8) with party line votes. Republican Sen. Aaron Bean and Rep. Alex Andrade are the bill sponsors. The proposals are among a handful on the agenda during a five-day Special Session dubbed “Keep Florida Free.” The Session, ordered by Ron DeSantis, aims to thwart COVID-19 vaccine mandates in Florida. “There’s no circumstance I believe where forced vaccination, essentially at gunpoint… would be acceptable,” Andrade said.

“Shielding COVID-19 vaccine complaints ‘unconstitutional,’ First Amendment expert says” via Jeffrey Schweers of USA Today Network — Among other goals of this week’s Special Session on COVID-19 vaccine mandates, Florida lawmakers are looking to punish businesses that fire workers for not wearing masks or getting vaccinated with massive fines. But they want to keep the basis of employee complaints confidential, that is, their religious or medical condition. One of the four pieces of legislation filed for the Special Session would shield from public view all information relating to a complaint or investigation from employees who were not offered a medical or religious exemption from vaccine requirements imposed by their bosses.

“Top Dem calls Special Session a ‘measuring contest’ between two men” via Jason Delgado of Florida Politics — House Democratic Co-Leader Evan Jenne blasted DeSantis on Monday, suggesting the state effort to block the federal COVID-19 vaccine mandate is little more than a testosterone-fueled political stunt. “This is not about guaranteeing anyone’s freedoms,” Jenne told reporters. “This is not about governmental policy. This is about two men having a measuring contest that they should have in private. Instead, they’re letting it spill out in front of the full public view.” Jenne’s remarks chide DeSantis’ ongoing feud with President Biden. The pair spar often on issues ranging from immigration policy to the handling of the COVID-19 pandemic. The political sparks though are seemingly invaluable, resulting in a conflict that boosts DeSantis’s status among conservatives.

"Lawmakers bring back bills to set up regulatory framework for cryptocurrency" via Ryan Nicol of Florida Politics — Republican lawmakers have once again filed legislation to set up a regulatory framework for cryptocurrency in Florida. The filings come after House lawmakers unanimously approved a similar bill last Session, though the bill later died in the Senate. The bill would help clear up some confusion following the 2019 ruling in Florida v. Espinoza, which bucked guidance from the Office of Financial Regulation and "Red, white and yum: Plant City-area lawmaker seeks official status for strawberry shortcake" via Anne Geggis of Florida Politics — A Plant City-area lawmaker believes that it's high time the importance of the strawberry gets acknowledged and strawberry shortcake becomes the official state dessert. The legislation (HB 567) that Rep. Lawrence McClure has filed may go down as the only berry mouthwatering kind this Session. Officially designating strawberry shortcake as the state's primo dessert would recognize the vital role that the hybrid species of the genus Fragaria plays in the state's economy, McClure says. "Strawberries represent about a billion-dollar economic impact," McClure said. The 36-line bill also cites the 2000 Guinness Book of World Records recognition given to Plant City as the home of the most oversized shortcake in the world as evidence the strawberry shortcake should enjoy a higher stature.

"Florida education officials appear to defy feds' cease and desist complaint regarding state funds" via Danielle J. Brown of Florida Phoenix — Despite warnings from federal education officials, Florida Education Commissioner Richard Corcoran has been defiant against the U.S. Department of Education's warnings that Florida could be breaking federal law. But Florida education officials believe that the feds are the problem. The State Board of Education has called a meeting Tuesday "to discuss the federal government's overreach and unlawful behavior," said Cassie Palelis, press secretary for the Department of Education. At issue is the withholding of state funds equal to federal grants intended to help two Florida school boards, Alachua and Broward, cover financial penalties.

"Nikki Fried pursuing rule to phase out foam packaging" via Scott Powers of Florida Politics — Agriculture Commissioner Fried has begun pursuing a new rule-making process to mandate a phase-out of plastic foam packaging by thousands of businesses regulated by the Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services. Fried joined business and environmental leaders after the departments held a rule-making workshop in Orlando on a proposal to force stepped reductions in polystyrene plastic packaging used at grocery stores, food markets, gas station convenience stores and other businesses regulated by her department. The rule, should it be adopted would target the foam packaging that has been at the forefront of environmental and public health concerns for decades, as it is not biodegradable and is made up of chemicals that are poisonous to humans and to animals.

prosecutors investigating the crimes of Greenberg have charged two of Greenberg's associates and accused them of a multimillion-dollar real-estate fraud scheme, according to an indictment unsealed Monday. "Cops find respect, warm welcome, more money in Florida" via Kerry J. Byrne of The New York Post — Lakeland mounted a social media campaign targeting NYC cops earlier this year, and in April, dispatched a delegation to recruit in Times Square. Fourteen former Finest moved to Lakeland in the past year, 12 of them wooed over the past two months thanks to the recruiting trip. The respect accorded cops in Florida "was an eye-opener," former NYPD cop Matthew Spoto said at a September press conference after heeding Lakeland's call of duty. In New York, "it was almost like I was ashamed to be a law enforcement officer," he said. NYPD officers start out earning $42,500 per year. The minimum PD salary in Lakeland is $53,000 following a pay raise earlier this year.

"Seniors looking for relief from high medication costs" via Cait McVey of Bay News 9 — Rheumatoid arthritis treatments are among the most expensive drug costs seniors face today, along with cancer treatments. A plan to bring those prices down made its way back into the social safety net legislation this week, after a brief removal during negotiations. Florida AARP Director Jeff Johnson says this is something the organization has been pushing for – the ability for Medicare to negotiate drug prices and a cap on how much seniors pay out of pocket each year. "The fact that this fell out of the plan a week ago and is back in is solely a testament to the fact that the people who are directly affected have raised their voices," Johnson said.

“Florida COVID-19 update: 1,992 cases, 147 deaths, fewer people in the hospital again” via Michelle Marchante of the Miami Herald — Florida on Monday reported to CDC 1,992 COVID-19 cases and 147 deaths. In all, Florida has recorded at least 3,671,481 confirmed COVID cases and 60,845 deaths. Of the deaths added Monday, about 75% occurred over the past 28 days and about 38% in the last two weeks. In the past seven days, the state has added 61 deaths and 1,471 cases per day. There were 1,374 people hospitalized for COVID-19 in Florida. COVID-19 patients take up 2.43% of all inpatient beds in the latest report’s hospitals.

“Florida reports unprecedented 1.1 million new COVID-19 vaccinations, offers no explanation” via Chris Persaud of The Palm Beach Post — The number of Floridians who have gotten their first shot of the free coronavirus vaccine spiked by more than 1.1 million in the past week, state health officials reported Friday. The total is, by far, the biggest one-week increase recorded in the number of Florida vaccinations since the shots became available. The state Department of Health said in its weekly report that 2,890,568 Florida residents are now awaiting second doses of the two-shot Moderna and Pfizer COVID-19 vaccines. The tally Nov. 5 was 1,740,770.

“Leon County cases fall 21.4%; only 10 people hospitalized in Tallahassee” via Mike Stucka and Christopher Cann of the Tallahassee Democrat — The monthslong trend of plummeting COVID-19 cases, hospitalizations and deaths continues both on a state and local level. As of Monday morning, there were 10 COVID-19 patients between Tallahassee’s two hospitals: Capital Regional Medical Center, with three COVID-19 patients, and Tallahassee Memorial HealthCare with seven. Although, TMH’s case total includes “patients on isolation as well as patients who are no longer infectious but still require hospital care.” In the first two weeks of November, four COVID-19 patients died in TMH. In October, there were 12 COVID-19-related deaths. Both mark significant declines from the hospital’s August and September totals.

“Baptist Health announces 95% of staff vaccinated, unvaccinated staff has 30 days to get vaccine, exemption” via First Coast News — Baptist Health Jacksonville announced Monday that 95% of their staff is vaccinated from COVID-19. In early August, Baptist Health announced all employee must either be fully vaccinated or qualify for an exemption by Nov. 15. Virtually all of the system’s employees have met that deadline. However, Baptist Health is offering one last opportunity for those who are still not vaccinated to get the vaccine or get an exemption. All unvaccinated, non-exempt employees will have 30 days to get an approved COVID-19 vaccine or receive either a medical or religious exemption. The affected employees will no be scheduled to work until one of the requirements is met.

“Palm Beach County teacher at center of ivermectin lawsuit dies after battling COVID-19” via Andrew Marra of The Palm Beach Post — A Palm Beach County teacher at the center of a battle to get a hospital to administer an unproven drug for her worsening COVID-19 symptoms has died from the illness. Tamara Drock, 47, died from complications of COVID-19 on Friday, 12 weeks after being admitted to Palm Beach Gardens Medical Center for treatment, her husband said. As she struggled with the “Fiona Lashells missed two months of school for refusing to wear a mask. Now she’s happy to be back.” via Andrew Marra of The Palm Beach Post — Eight-year-old Lashells walked onto her elementary school campus Monday with a pink backpack and the fanfare of a homecoming war veteran. Family friends waved signs and cheered. A state legislator strode proudly alongside. It was, in a sense, a return from battle. For two months, the second-grader and her mother had waged an increasingly high-profile standoff against the Palm Beach County public schools over their mask mandate. Refusing to wear a facial covering, Fiona amassed nearly 40 days of suspensions in September and October, requiring her to spend weeks doing her classwork at home. She and her mother spoke out at school board meetings and posted videos online, winning plaudits from conservative media and political leaders.

“Republicans gain heavy House edge in 2022 as gerrymandered maps emerge” via Reid J. Epstein and Nick Corasaniti of The New York Times — Republicans are already poised to flip at least five seats in the closely divided House thanks to redrawn district maps that are more distorted, more disjointed and more gerrymandered than any since the Voting Rights Act was passed in 1965. The rapidly forming congressional map, a quarter of which has taken shape as districts are redrawn this year, represents an even more extreme warping of American political architecture, with state legislators in many places moving aggressively to cement their partisan dominance. The flood of gerrymandering, carried out by both parties but predominantly by Republicans, is likely to leave the country ever more divided by further eroding competitive elections.

“Anthony Sabatini skips Special Session for D.C. fundraiser” via Peter Schorsch of Florida Politics — Sabatini pitched a Special Session on vaccine mandates long before Ron DeSantis. When the Governor put out the call, Florida Politics reluctantly gave Sabatini an up arrow because he seemingly had his finger on the pulse for the first time in his political career. Well, the Special Session that Sabatini so badly wanted is happening, yet the Howey-in-the-Hills Republican is 900 miles away. According to House Communications Director Jenna Sarkissian, this is another unexcused absence for the man otherwise known as Rep. Blackface. What’s he doing? Accepting a “Legislator of the Month” award from an organization that could best be described as a conservative knockoff of AARP. It’s worth noting that while Sabatini has a few strengths, getting bills signed by the Governor is not one of them.

“Roger Stone, Michael Flynn endorse CD 16 candidate who called Donald Trump ‘wretched,’ MAGA ‘bigots’” via Peter Schorsch of Florida Politics — How much would it cost to turn your back on a President who granted you a full pardon, sparing you multiple years in the clink? In Stone’s case, we have an answer: $10,000. The Sarasota Herald-Tribune’s Zac Anderson broke the news last week that Stone, a Florida man who just a year ago was facing serious jail time for witness tampering and obstruction of justice, has officially signed on as Martin Hyde’s political consultant for his congressional campaign. Hyde is a man with a long history of publicly denigrating former President Trump and his supporters. Until now, Hyde was most infamous for a viral video where he freaked out and hurled racist insults at young Puerto Rican tennis players. Now, he is challenging incumbent Republican Vern Buchanan in Florida’s16th Congressional District.

“Ileana Garcia, Janelle Perez both surpass $300K raised in shifted Senate race” via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — October was a good fundraising month for Sen. Garcia and her challenger, Perez, who both passed $300,000 in funds raised toward their expected bid next year in a remapped Senate District 40. Garcia added $48,000 last month through her campaign and political committee, No More Socialism, with strong showings from the health care sector and the specialized airport baggage-handling business. She now holds more than $345,000 to defend the seat she won last November by just 34 votes. Garcia accepted fewer than 10 individual contributions in October. They ranged from $100 to $2,500. Perez, conversely, raised $137,000 last month.

“‘We’re going to shoot our shot’: Michael Grieco files for remapped SD 37” via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — Rep. Grieco is officially running for the Florida Senate. After hinting at a potential Senate bid last week, Grieco, a Miami Beach Democrat, told Florida Politics he filed paperwork Monday to vie for Senate District 37. “We’re going to shoot our shot and see how it works out,” he said. Republican Sen. Ileana Garcia now represents SD 37, but redistricting to reflect the 2020 Census could place her in newly remapped Senate District 40, where she’ll still face Democratic challenger Janelle Perez. That leaves SD 37 wide open. The district will shrink to only cover a portion of Miami-Dade County’s coast, including parts of Miami, Miami Beach, Coral Gables, Sweetwater and West Miami.

The freshman lawmaker flipped House District 114 from blue to red in the last election. Donations to her personal campaign account and her committee, People Above Politics, in October show support from the health care sector, the insurance industry and several affiliates of a Miami auto dealership. Between her personal campaign account and her committee, Busatta Cabrera has $152,248 on hand. Simply Healthcare Plans Inc. in Cincinnati gave Busatta Cabrera’s committee $2,500, the biggest donation of the month from a single entity.

Crist, Fried and Sen. Annette Taddeo will all speak at the event. The 2022 candidates will join U.S. Rep. Val Demings, another prominent Democrat running for office in 2022, challenging U.S. Sen. “COVID-19 cases rise in pockets of north and west, halting Delta variant’s decline in U.S.” via Jon Kamp and Kris Maher of The Wall Street Journal — COVID-19 cases are climbing in places like the upper Midwest, Southwest and parts of the Northeast, hindering the nation’s progress in ending a surge triggered by the highly contagious Delta variant of the coronavirus. Nationally, the seven-day average of new cases appears to be edging back up after hovering just above 70,000 for several weeks, according to data from Johns Hopkins University, halting what had been a decline from the Delta-fueled peak that began in September. While the Southeast cools off from its summer surge, other regions are under pressure, including places where colder weather has brought people back indoors where the virus can more easily spread.

adults, states are rushing to encourage vaccinations among newly eligible younger children, despite some questions about the effectiveness of incentive programs. “Oklahoma National Guard rejects Pentagon’s coronavirus vaccine mandate” via Alex Horton and Dan Lamothe of The Washington Post — The Oklahoma National Guard has rejected the Defense Department’s requirement for all service members to receive the coronavirus vaccine and will allow personnel to sidestep the policy with no repercussions, an order from the governor that could serve as a blueprint for other Republican-led states that have challenged Biden administration mandates. Brig. Gen. Thomas Mancino, appointed this week by Republican Gov. Kevin Stitt as adjutant of the state’s 10,000 National Guard soldiers and airmen, on Thursday notified those under his command that they are not required to receive the vaccine and won’t be punished if they decline it.

“Border Patrol vaccination rates increase, but 20% of agency’s workforce has not gotten shots” via Nick Miroff of The Washington Post — Of the agency’s 21,393 employees, 77% were fully vaccinated as of Nov. 10, and an additional 3 percent were partially vaccinated, the figures show. Another 15.5% of agents and employees have sought a religious or medical exemption, while 3.4% have not responded to the internal reporting requirement and 1.1% listed their status as unvaccinated, without seeking an exemption. The roughly 4,000 Border Patrol agents and employees who remain unvaccinated could face disciplinary action if their exemption requests are denied or if they remain out of compliance with the President’s requirement for all federal workers and contractors to be immunized by Nov. 22.

“Democrats, don’t dismiss public’s fear of inflation” via Catherine Rampell of The Palm Beach Post — Let’s talk about why it’s reasonable for ordinary Americans to worry about inflation, and why liberal pundits and politicians should take that pain seriously. There are the raw numbers: Inflation is undoubtedly up. Price growth has been stronger, and lasted longer, than most had predicted earlier this year. In October, prices rose 6.2% compared with the same month a year ago. This was the largest annual increase in about three decades. wages are rising. But … they’re not rising quickly enough to keep pace with consumer prices. If recent job growth has been dominated by lower-wage positions that could skew the average downward.

What Richard Corcoran is reading — “Schools embrace more COVID-19 testing over quarantine to keep kids in class” via Sabrina Siddiqui and Brianna Abbott of The Wall Street Journal — Grant Rivera spent 18 months struggling to conduct school safely during the pandemic before he stumbled upon an op-ed describing a way to keep children in class by testing them frequently for COVID-19. For Dr. Rivera, superintendent of Georgia’s Marietta City Schools, a district northwest of Atlanta with roughly 8,700 students, the strategy was a revelation. Children exposed to a known COVID-19 case could be tested frequently and stay in school if they remained negative. Setting up robust testing routines can be expensive and laborious, some schools have said. Some health departments and officials have been slow to roll out testing programs or to explain the benefits of in-school screening.

“Racial disparities in kids’ vaccinations are hard to track” via The Associated Press — The rollout of COVID-19 shots for elementary-age children has exposed another blind spot in the nation’s efforts to address pandemic inequalities: Health systems have released little data on the racial breakdown of youth vaccinations, and community leaders fear that Black and Latino kids are falling behind. Only a handful of states have made public data on COVID-19 vaccinations by race and age, and the CDC does not compile racial breakdowns either. Despite the lack of hard data, public health officials and medical professionals are mindful of disparities and have been reaching out to communities of color to overcome vaccine hesitancy. That includes going into schools, messaging in other languages, deploying mobile vaccine units and emphasizing to skeptical parents that the shots are safe and powerfully effective.

“Joe Biden signs infrastructure bill into law” via Axios — Biden signed the $1.2 trillion bipartisan infrastructure bill into law on Monday, capping off the hard-fought victory for his domestic agenda. The legislation includes massive investments in roads, bridges, waterways and other “hard infrastructure.” It’s the biggest public-works bill since President Dwight D. Eisenhower created the interstate highway system in 1956. The White House on Sunday named former New Orleans Mayor Mitch Landrieu as the senior adviser responsible for coordinating the implementation of the legislation. Biden held off on signing the bill after it passed the House on Nov. 5 so that a bipartisan group of lawmakers back from congressional recess could join the event.

“The polls are clear: Democratic holdouts are killing Biden” via James Downie of The Washington Post — The new Post-ABC News poll is a brutal read for Democrats. President Biden’s approval rating is at a new low of 41%. Fifty-one percent of registered voters say they’ll vote Republican in the 2022 midterms, the best showing for the GOP in the poll’s 40-year history. The good news is that the poll also provides a screamingly obvious remedy. Perhaps most worryingly for the President, the drop in Biden’s approval rating didn’t come among Republicans or independents, but Democrats, from 86% to 80%. The remaining Democratic support is less enthusiastic as well: The share of Democrats who approve strongly of Biden’s performance has declined from 54% to 44%.

“Dems’ bitter pill: Popular health provisions won’t kick in until after the midterms” via Alice Miranda Ollstein and Laura Barrón-López of POLITICO — Democrats are close to making good on long-held promises to lower prescription drug costs and make health care more affordable. The rub? Voters won’t feel much of it until after the 2022 elections. The party is increasingly banking its midterm prospects on passage of the president’s domestic agenda in the coming weeks, convinced that it can help counteract concerns of inflation and inaction in D.C. House Majority Whip Jim Clyburn said the party’s physical infrastructure bill that Congress recently sent to Biden’s desk isn’t enough and pointed to the health provisions of the still-pending $1.75 trillion social spending bill as the types of measures that could win over voters.

voters which party they preferred, including on several issues. The big headline is that registered voters prefer the GOP by 10 points on what's known as the generic ballot. But it's not the only area in which Democrats seem to be taking on some water; so, too, is education. The poll asked which party voters preferred on that issue, and while 44% chose Democrats, 41% chose Republicans. That's still a narrow edge for Democrats, albeit within the margin of error. What's key here how this compares to how this issue polls historically. The last time the Post-ABC poll surveyed this issue was in the mid-2000s; at the time, Democrats led by more than 20 points.

“In Joe Biden’s sticky inflation crisis, poor families suffer the most” via Rick Scott for National Review — Since August, Biden’s inflation crisis has only grown worse. Government reports show inflation jumped to a 31-year high of 6.2% over the year in October. Here’s what’s clear: Biden’s inflation crisis isn’t transitory. It’s sticky. Trends don’t lie. With inflation surging higher every month of Biden’s presidency, we can’t allow the President and his economic advisers to continue ignoring the obvious. Sticky inflation is dangerous because it has the ability to completely upend the American economy. It has a domino effect. It’s a cycle. Prices go up. Costs go up. Wages go up. Prices go back up and the cycle restarts. What I’m describing here is a downward spiral that hurts families and businesses and kills our economy.

“Republicans must stop defending an ex-President who defends death threats” via the South Florida Sun-Sentinel editorial board — In a newly released interview, former President Donald Trump was asked about the Jan. 6 Capitol rioters who threatened to kill Vice President Mike Pence. Did Trump respond as any responsible adult would, and condemn that threat? Of course not. Repeating his delusional claim that Pence could have overturned the election, Trump defended the rioters’ fury at his Vice President, calling it “common sense.” With the possibility of another Trump presidential run still in play, every Republican officeholder who hasn’t yet disavowed him — which is most of them — should be asked to defend this latest, most grotesque evidence of his unfitness. “Racism and road-building isn’t ‘weird stuff’ — as I-4 shows, it’s reality” via the Orlando Sentinel editorial board — When highway planners were designing a route for Interstate 4 in the 1950s, their first thought was to bring it directly through downtown Orlando via Winter Park. That didn’t sit well with Winter Park’s well-to-do residents, and after a furious lobbying campaign the route was shifted to the west, along the city’s downtown outskirts. Some 550 pieces of property, including homes and businesses, were taken in Parramore, and the highway effectively walled off the predominantly Black neighborhood from Orlando’s downtown district. Pete Buttigieg, the U.S. Secretary of Transportation, said last week that a portion of the recently approved infrastructure bill would address some of the historical inequalities baked into road-building decisions of the past.

“Ron DeSantis reveled in U.F.’s Top 5 status; now his minions threaten its academic freedom” via Diane Roberts of Florida Phoenix — Last Session DeSantis and his legislative minions jammed through a bunch of policies restricting the use of drop boxes, restricting voter registration drives, and making it harder for voters to get absentee ballots. A number of groups have filed suit against this assault on the franchise, and three University of Florida professors, experts in voting rights, were set to testify. But U.F. President Kent Fuchs said no until bad publicity forced him to back down. The damage, however, has been done. “Black voters in District 20 deserved a clear winner. The candidate field was strong with 10 Black candidates, including two Black county commissioners, two Black state representatives, and a Black state senator. This crowded, 11-candidate field was destined to be complicated and confusing from the beginning. In Florida’s 20th, a Ranked Choice Voting victory could have given an inspiring Black leader majority support and a mandate to govern.

“Thanksgiving travel should be almost back to normal, AAA projects” via Scott Powers of Florida Politics — It’s almost time to go back over the hills of Lake County and through the woods of Ocala National Forest to Grandmother’s house in The Villages. And those roads and skies should be crowded again. Travel should increase by 13% overall for this year’s Thanksgiving holiday period, compared to last year. Much of that increase will be through the friendly skies, AAA forecast Tuesday. AAA predicts 53.4 million Americans will travel for Thanksgiving, including 2.9 million Floridians. That would put the upcoming Thanksgiving holiday just 2% below the travel pace of pre-pandemic years. “It’s beginning to look more like a normal holiday travel season, compared to what we saw last year,” AAA Vice President for Travel Debbie Haas said in a news release.

“It’s time to take ‘Star Wars’ movies away from Kathy Kennedy” via Matthew Belloni of Puck News — You’ll forgive my skepticism when it comes to Kennedy’s management of the Star Wars film franchise. Since 2012, when Disney paid $4 billion for George Lucas’ company and installed her as his handpicked steward, Disney has sold billions of dollars in toys, books, games and merchandise; incorporated Star Wars lands into its theme parks; pioneered virtual production techniques at Industrial Light and Magic; and generated a slew of TV projects. But when it comes to the Star Wars films — the basis of the franchise, and the skillset that Kennedy, one of the most successful and prolific film producers of all time, brought to the company — what a mess.

DeSantis Signs Bill to Ban Most Abortions After 15 Weeks of Pregnancy

Gov. Ron DeSantis signed off on legislation Thursday that outlaws abortions in the state after 15 weeks of pregnancy, with no exceptions for rape, incest or human trafficking. The new law, passed as HB 5, offers two exceptions, allowing for abortions in extreme cases of serious medical emergencies affecting the mother or if fatal fetal abnormalities are present. Additionally, it requires two separate physicians to certify in writing that termination of a pregnancy is necessary to save the pregnant woman's life. The new law also includes other pregnancy initiatives, such as requiring a tobacco use prevention program and providing $1.6 million in funding for fetal and infant mortality review committees. "Life is a sacred gift worthy of our protection, and I am proud to sign this great piece of legislation which represents the most significant protections for life in the state's modern history," DeSantis said. The bill follows abortion laws in other GOP-run states awaiting a U.S. Supreme Court decision on their constitutionality, potentially overturning the federal precedent set by 1973's Roe v. Wade case. Democrats and reproductive rights groups oppose the measure, calling the provisions dangerous and another roadblock to the medical procedure. On the other hand, many religious groups have expressed their support. Barring any legal action stopping it, the law goes into effect July 1. SCOFLA Rejects Ballot Effort to Expand Medicaid

The Florida Supreme Court has tossed out an effort to expand Medicaid in the state in the form of a proposed constitutional amendment, ending a two-year legal battle. The vote was 6-1 and followed a long-running series of legal moves over the number of signatures backers needed to get the proposal on the ballot, and the failure by supporters to respond to a Supreme Court request for additional arguments on the issues surrounding the proposal. Governor Ron DeSantis Calls Special Session of the Florida Legislature to Establish Lawful Congressional Districts

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. – Today, Governor Ron DeSantis called a Special Session of the Florida Legislature to produce a new map that will establish lawful congressional voting districts in Florida. Governor DeSantis vetoed CS/SB 102 this morning after reviewing the bill, citing legal concerns. A supporting memorandum can be found here. The Special Session will convene at 12:00 p.m., Tuesday, April 19, and will extend no later than 11:59 p.m., Friday, April 22.

"We have a responsibility to produce maps for our citizens that do not contain unconstitutional racial gerrymanders," said Governor Ron DeSantis. "Today, I vetoed a map that violates the U.S. Constitution, but that does not absolve the Legislature from doing its job. I appreciate the Legislature's willingness to work with me to pass a legally compliant map this Special Session."

Lawson is ready to fight DeSantis over district

Politico
Gary Fineout
February 18, 2022

Hello and welcome to Friday morning.

The coming storm — Rep. Al Lawson, the longtime politician from Tallahassee who spent decades in the Legislature before getting elected to Congress six years ago, contends that he wants to have lunch with Gov. Ron DeSantis so he can ask this question: “What is your problem with minority access districts?”

Context — For those not entirely versed in redistricting speak, Lawson is referring to a congressional district where Black voters have a chance to elect a candidate of their choice even though they do not constitute a clear majority of voters. Lawson’s 5th Congressional District — which stretches across North Florida — is one such district, where 44 percent of those old enough to vote are Black.

Confrontation — DeSantis maintains the district may be unconstitutional and is leaning on Republicans in the Florida Legislature to blow it up as part of a widely watched redistricting gambit — a campaign cheered on by many Republicans outside of the state who don’t understand Florida's voter-approved anti-gerrymandering standards. The Republican governor tried to enlist the state Supreme Court in his effort only for the justices to brush him off last week. Still, DeSantis threatened to veto any map that preserves the current configuration.

Targeted — Lawson returned to his hometown on Thursday for a voting rights rally with the NAACP and several other Democrats where he blasted DeSantis and all but guaranteed a court battle if the governor gets his way: “He asked for the fight, and we said bring it on.” The Democrat also framed the governor’s quest as part of his bid to show the world that he is the “heir apparent” to former President Donald Trump and that this is a “test case” to go after Black districts. “If he’s successful in Florida that means there will be no minority access districts throughout America,” Lawson said.

Flag this — But in his comments to reporters, Lawson also said he’s been talking to “a lot" of legislators about the governor’s proposal, including from “Republican members who say they don’t want to do this.”

What happens next — And that’s what is still unknown. The initial maps from both the state House and Senate keep Lawson’s district intact. The House map, however, is more favorable to Republicans overall than the one that passed the Senate by a veto-proof majority. A House panel is scheduled to take up a new map later this morning, but when asked on Thursday, Senate President Wilton Simpson would only suggest the two chambers are likely to have a conference to hash out their differences. Stay tuned.

They want to take a fight over how Florida's 28 congressional districts are drawn "to the streets, the ballot box" and, if necessary, to the courts."

TRUMPLANDIA AND THE SWAMP
‘I NEED HIS VOTE’ — “How Rubio navigated Trump as he’s favored to keep his seat,” by CNN’s Manu Raju and Steve Contorno: “‘Six years ago, Sen. Marco Rubio offered a blunt warning about the ‘reckless and dangerous’ Donald Trump: He would do ‘damage to America.’ ‘We have a con artist as the frontrunner in the Republican Party,’ said Rubio, a Florida Republican, as he saw Trump steamroll his way to the GOP presidential nomination. But as he now seeks a third term representing Trump's adopted home state, Rubio's tune has markedly changed. ‘I think he helps,’ Rubio told CNN when asked about Trump's effect on his campaign. ‘First of all, he's a Floridian, so I need his vote,’ Rubio said. ‘But beyond that, I mean, he's brought a lot of people and energy into the Republican Party.’”

BUT MEANWHILE — “GOP senators steer clear of Trump as rift deepens,” by POLITICO’s Burgess Everett and Meredith McGraw: The Breakers resort is about 3 miles from Mar-a-Lago in Palm Beach. When more than 20 Republican senators headed there last weekend, though, only three attended an event with Donald Trump. And some say they steered clear of the former president intentionally as they raised money to take back the Senate. “People appreciate his input. But I think a lot of people see a lot of other opportunities elsewhere for 2024,” said one Senate Republican, who was granted anonymity to describe the intraparty dynamics.

Stopping by — National Republican Senatorial Committee Chair Rick Scott (R-Fla.) and Sens. Steve Daines (R-Mont.) and Cindy Hyde-Smith (R-Miss.) were the three senators that did an event with Trump. Daines said the confab was an “intimate” roundtable and described it as a “great event.”

CONFERENCE COMING— "Senate unanimously passes $108B budget proposal, largest in state history," by POLITICO's Matt Dixon: The final weeks of Florida's legislative session could hinge on $3 billion and a handful of political money fights. That's what separates the $108 billion proposed budget, the largest in state history, passed by the Senate during a marathon floor session Thursday, and the $105 billion spending plan proposed by the House and passed one day earlier over contentious pushback from Democrats, a partisan fight that did not mark the Senate's debate.

WATER WARS— "Senate rewrites, passes environmental budget bill that DeSantis opposed," by POLITICO's Bruce Ritchie: The Senate rewrote and voted 37-2 on Thursday to pass a budget conforming bill that Gov. Ron DeSantis last week said threatened a proposed Everglades reservoir. The Senate passed SB 2508 after Sen. Ben Albritton (R-Wauchula), chair of the environmental appropriations subcommittee, told senators and bill opponents in the audience that the "clarifying" language ensures the reservoir will not be affected.

Sugar, sugar — "We listened very closely to what a bunch of you guys were saying about the issues that you had," Albritton told the dozens of charter boat captains in the Senate gallery who opposed the bill. The Everglades Foundation, which opposed the bill at a Feb. 9 appropriations committee hearing, said after the vote that the amendment also removed objectionable bill language that opponents argued would have favored the sugar industry in South Florida water decisions.

WORDSMITHING — "Republicans made changes to 'don't say gay' bill. LGBTQ advocates aren't buying it," by Tampa Bay Times' Kirby Wilson: "When it was first filed, the bill said school districts may not 'encourage classroom discussion' about gender identity or sexuality in a way that is not 'age-appropriate or developmentally appropriate.' The bill's sponsor, Rep. Joe Harding, R-Williston, said he understood how some might find the word 'encourage' to be vague. So on Thursday, a House committee took up — and passed — a new version of House Bill 1557 he hoped would be more specific."

PROMISES, PROMISES — “Lawmaker sponsoring DeSantis’ immigration bill says intent is not to target children,” by Miami Herald’s Ana Ceballos: “But the Republican lawmaker who is sponsoring legislation that is part of DeSantis’ immigration agenda said Thursday that the measure is not intended to impact unaccompanied children or the shelters that care for them as they wait to be reunited with their families or vetted sponsors. ‘The intent certainly is not to target children,’ said state Rep. John Snyder, R-Stuart. ‘But the thing that I’d like to point out is that even if it does, then we are not saying — because we do not have the ability — to tell a common carrier they cannot transport unaccompanied minors.’”

The demonstrators chanted “shame” and “my body, my choice” as debate wrapped up on a bill that would ban most abortions after 15 weeks.”

HURRY UP AND WAIT — “Florida will distribute $676 million in homeowner mortgage assistance, but state isn’t yet saying how you can get it,’ by Sun Sentinel’s Ron Hurtibise: "The good news is the U.S. Treasury Department on Feb. 9 approved Florida’s plan to distribute $676 million in federal homeowner assistance funding included in the $1.9 trillion American Rescue Plan enacted in March 2021. … The not-so-good news: Florida’s program is being administered by the Department of Economic Opportunity — the same agency that runs the state’s troubled unemployment system — and the agency has not yet announced when or how it will begin accepting applications. 'Now that the [plan] has been approved, DEO will launch the program,' department press secretary Morgan Jones said by email."

CRACKDOWN — “Florida Senate unanimously approves retail crime bill,” by POLITICO’s Stephany Matat: The Florida Senate on Thursday unanimously approved legislation that would crack down on retail theft, including creating stricter penalties for people who steal from multiple stores. Bill sponsor state Sen. Jim Boyd (R-Bradenton) said the bill, SB 1534, focuses on the pattern and frequency of thefts. The legislation, part of the Republican-led Legislature’s “tough on crime” agenda, would make stealing from several retail stores within a set period of time into second or third degree felonies and create a new criminal category.

Anthony Sabatini cheers Gov. DeSantis map for helping Republicans

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
April 13, 2022

'That's a huge improvement on the 18-10 map.'
Not everyone is happy with how a Special Session on redistricting appears to be shaking out. But Rep. Anthony Sabatini went on right-wing activist Steve Bannon's show and celebrated it.

The Howey-in-the-Hills Republican, one of seven GOP members of the House to vote against a map approved by the Legislature, cheered a decision to leave cartography to Gov. Ron DeSantis. He spoke at length on the issue on Steve Bannon's War Room podcast.

"Tell every flag-waving American in the country to stay vigilant and to keep their eye on the Legislature and make sure they do the right thing and follow through," Sabatini said.

Sabatini, a candidate for Congress, went on to talk about the maps with Bannon in explicitly partisan terms. Discussing the last submitted map from Gov. DeSantis' Office (P 0094), Bannon raised the topic of how seats went for Republican Donald Trump in the 2020 election compared to Democrat Joe Biden. Sabatini confirmed there were 20 Trump seats and eight Biden districts, a tally confirmed by a partisan performance analysis from MCI Maps. But he suggested in a Republican wave year, the map would produce 21 Republican U.S. Representatives and just seven Democratic ones.

"Of course, that's a huge improvement on the 18-10 map, or even the 16-12 map that the Senate proposed originally," Sabatini said.

It's notable that Sabatini routinely raised the partisan performance, as Florida's Constitution includes an amendment, approved by voters in 2010, that prohibits cartography drawn to benefit a political party.

That amendment says the following: "Congressional districts or districting plans may not be drawn to favor or disfavor an incumbent or political party. Districts shall not be drawn to deny racial or language minorities the equal opportunity to participate in the political process and elect representatives of their choice. Districts must be contiguous. Unless otherwise required, districts must be compact, as equal in population as feasible, and where feasible must make use of existing city, county and geographical boundaries."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The map with 18 Trump seats that Sabatini referenced referred to one passed by the Legislature (H 8019) but vetoed by DeSantis. The Senate previously had passed a map with 16 Trump seats, but that was never considered by the House. Plaintiffs in a federal lawsuit regarding redistricting are expected to submit the Senate map (S 8060) for the courts to consider if judges find the map ultimately signed into law by DeSantis is unconstitutional.

Bannon, a former strategist for former President Donald Trump, took credit for urging listeners to lobby lawmakers and the Governor.

“To get a 100-seat majority, we have to start at redistricting,” Bannon said.

Sabatini said he expects DeSantis to submit a new map or just refer to the last submission from his office when the Special Session on redistricting convenes on Tuesday.

“Give it to Gov. DeSantis, he wasn’t going to accept anything except a strong constitutional map that’s good for the country,” Sabatini said.

Sabatini appeared on Bannon’s podcast weeks ago and spoke in even more outright terms about his problem with the Legislature’s map — and again referred regularly to its partisan composition.

“The single most controversial part of it is a racially gerrymandered Democrat seat that was created by a Supreme Court decision,” Sabatini said.

That’s the part DeSantis has focused on with public criticism, claiming the Legislature’s map would be found in violation of the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution because race was a motivating factor in drawing Florida’s 5th Congressional District. But his maps look dramatically different from the Legislature’s elsewhere in the state too.

Sabatini sided with the Governor on a number of those differences. “Our Governor himself saw that the situation was so bad that he himself had to go and create new congressional maps,” Sabatini said on the March 19 podcast.

The lawmaker described himself as one of only seven to vote against the map, though that only includes Republicans. Every Democrat in the Florida House voted against the Legislature’s map and all but one Senator did as well.

Describing the Legislature’s now-vetoed map, Sabatini said: “I’ve got to tell you they are still not good enough.”

“In fact, even though they are good in my area and would give me an avenue to Congress — it does create a Republican seat in Central Florida in the greater Orlando area — it’s very bad in the Tampa Bay and Jacksonville area,” he said.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

He went on to say that looking at presidential outcomes isn't enough and suggested looking at 2018 gubernatorial results for DeSantis or his Democratic opponent Andrew Gillum.

"If you look and exchange the nominees in each congressional district for DeSantis and Gillum, this (the Legislature's map) would have been an actual 14 and 14 map," Sabatini said. "So if you don't have a big boost in a red year, you are looking at a perfectly so-called equal map that actually gives Democrats way better performance than they have under the current standard. So these are not great maps."

Of note, DeSantis won election in 2018 by a razor thin margin settled only after a legally required machine recount of all votes. That was one of three statewide recounts that year, two of which were won by Republicans. In the congressional elections that cycle, with a map that had 27 districts instead of 28, Democrats won 13 seats and Republicans won 14 seats.

Sabatini railed against establishment Republicans leading the Legislature. He also accused special interests of funneling dark money among legislative leaders to ensure the Republican leadership "helped Democrats out" and produced "such terrible maps."

The Democrat Politician Protection Act's Assault On America's State-Run Elections

Democrats' Partisan Bill 'Usurps States' Authority Over Elections' Forcing A One-Size-Fits-All Dicta From Washington On Everything From Mandating Use Of Technology That Doesn't Yet Exist To Gutting Voter ID Laws To Compelling States To Allow Ballot Harvesting To A New Unaccountable Redistricting Process

SENATE REPUBLICAN LEADER MITCH McCONNELL (R-KY): "In this country, states and localities run elections. Those of us in the federal government do not get a stranglehold over the ways in which voters decide our fates. House Democrats want to change that. Their bill would take prudential questions about early voting, registration, and no-excuse absentee balloting and resolve them one way for the entire nation." (Sen. McConnell, Remarks, 2/25/2021)

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Democrat Politician Protection Act Is An 'Unprecedented Proposal To Federalize Our Nation's Elections' That 'Unconstitutionally And Unwisely Interferes With The Authority Of The States'

SEN. McCONNELL: "H.R. 1, House Democrats' marquee bill for the new Congress … really adds up to one big, expensive partisan power grab. An effort to centralize more control over Americans' speech and Americans' voting here in Washington D.C.… Decision after decision that our Constitution properly leaves to the states just melts away in this proposal. Practically every variable of any consequence to American elections gets a top-down mandate, written by Democrats…. How many days of early voting should there be? Do polls need to be open on Sundays? What's the best way to make absentee ballots available? When can early voting take place, and for how long? And where should those polling places be located? Different states and communities have come to different, legitimate judgments on all these questions. It's a core part of our constitutional system. And the decentralization of our electoral process leads to a more democratic system — with more direct impact on the elections of those decisionmakers." (Sen. McConnell, Remarks, 1/31/2019)

House Democrats Agree That Removing Election Control From States And Giving It To Washington, D.C. Is 'Really What This Bill [H.R.1] Is About'

SEN. McCONNELL: "Perhaps most worrisome of all is the unprecedented proposal to federalize our nation's elections, giving Washington D.C. politicians even more control over who gets to come here in the first place. Hundreds of pages are dedicated to telling states how to run their elections, from when and where they must take place, to the procedures they have to follow, to the machines they have to use." (Sen. McConnell, Remarks, 1/29/2019)

REP. ZOE LOFGREN (D-CA), House Administration Committee Chair: "I would just note that I understand the gentleman's objection to federalizing federal election eligibility, but that's really what this bill is about." (U.S. House of Representatives Administration Committee, Markup, 2/26/2019)

State Officials: The Bill 'Is Bad Policy,' 'Would Federalize State Elections And Impose Burdensome Costs And Regulations On State And Local Officials,' And 'And Restricts The Choices Of Our Citizens In Conducting Elections'

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Democratic state-level election director: "I can't guarantee it's not going to be a total clusterfuck the first election." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

16 CURRENT AND FORMER SECRETARIES OF STATE: "As the chief election officials of our respective states who are responsible for administering the election process, from the registration of voters to their casting of ballots to the counting and tallying of votes, we are writing to express our deep concern over, and opposition to, HR 1. This unnecessary bill federalizes and micromanages state election systems, unconstitutionally and unwisely interferes with the authority of the states, and restricts the choices of our citizens in conducting elections. It also imposes crippling financial mandates on state governments and severely limits our ability to ensure the balance of access and security of the election process, while eliminating the verification of state qualification standards for voters." (16 Secretaries of State, Letter to Speaker Pelosi and Rep. McCarthy, 3/06/2019)

- 16 CURRENT AND FORMER SECRETARIES OF STATE: "HR 1 creates federal mandates for problems that currently do not exist. No provision of federal law requires states to offer registration on the day of election, to preregister minors to vote, to require weeks of early voting, mandatory online registration, or to offer automatic voter registration simply because the person is on a government list. These are extremely costly mandates that should only become the law of a state after the legislatures of those states decide to implement them. The implementation of automatic voter registration has proven to be more complicated and costly than anticipated. The changes in HR 1 would impose extraordinary expenses to our election infrastructure." (16 Secretaries of State, Letter to Speaker Pelosi and Rep. McCarthy, 3/06/2019)

WASHINGTON STATE SECRETARY OF STATE KIM WYMAN: "As the chief election officer of a state which has implemented most of the policies proposed in HR1, I am opposed to the federal overreach of this bill. HR 1 would enact prescriptive and specific federal regulations on election administration by mandating and essentially freezing these 2019 ideas in place for decades. It will dramatically increase the cost of conducting elections, and simply repeat history." (U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Administration Ranking Member, Press Release, 3/06/2019)

TENNESSEE SECRETARY OF STATE TRE HARGETT: "At best, HR1 is nothing more than a federal power grab and an attempt to rewrite the rules regarding the electoral process to benefit one party. This proposed legislation is far over-reaching and infringes on states' rights by transferring control of elections from state and local election officials to bureaucrats in Washington and taking election policy decisions out of the hands of our state leaders…. HR1 is just bad policy and I am urging our delegation to vote against it." (U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Administration Ranking Member, Press Release, 3/06/2019)

20 STATE ATTORNEYS GENERAL: "As the chief legal officers of our states, we write regarding H.R.1, the For the People Act of 2021 (the 'Act') and any companion Senate bill. As introduced, the Act betrays several Constitutional deficiencies and alarming mandates that, if passed, would federalize state elections and impose burdensome costs and regulations on state and local officials. Under both the Elections Clause of Article I of the Constitution and the Electors Clause of Article II, States have principal—and with presidential elections, exclusive—responsibility to safeguard the manner of holding elections. The Act would invert that constitutional structure, commandeer state resources, confuse and muddle elections procedures, and erode faith in our elections and systems of governance." (20 Attorneys General, Letter to Reps. Pelosi and McCarthy and Sens. Schumer and McConnell, 03/03/2021)

- "Despite recent calls for political unity, the Act takes a one-sided approach to governing and usurps states' authority over elections. With confidence in elections at a record low, the country's focus should be on building trust in the electoral process. Around the nation, the 2020 general elections generated mass confusion and distrust—problems that the Act would only exacerbate. Should the Act become law, we will seek legal remedies to protect the Constitution, the sovereignty of all states, our elections, and the rights of our citizens." (20 Attorneys General, Letter to Reps. Pelosi and McCarthy and Sens. Schumer and McConnell, 03/03/2021)

Even Supporters Of The Legislation's Goals Admit 'It's A Bad Bill,' 'Packed With Deadlines And Requirements Election Administrators Cannot Possibly Meet Without Throwing Their Systems Into Chaos'

JESSICA HUSEMAN, NYU Adjunct Journalism Professor: "While the tenets of the bill are laudable … it was written with apparently no consultation with election administrators, and it shows. While the overall message is positive, it comes packed with deadlines and requirements election administrators cannot possibly meet without throwing their systems into chaos." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

- "'I don't know what they were thinking, honestly,' said the head of an elections nonprofit. 'It's a bad bill. The goals might be admirable, but it's a fucking bad bill.'" (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

- "It empowers an agency—the U.S. Elections Assistance Commission—that was criticized less than a year ago for mismanagement and fecklessness by the same Democrats promoting this bill." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

JESSICA HUSEMAN: "The sections of the bill related to voting systems … show remarkably little understanding of the problems the authors apply alarmingly prescriptive solutions to. Many of the changes the bill demands of election administrators are literally impossible to implement. Others would significantly raise the cost of elections but provide no assured long-term funding." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

- "That the Senate did nothing to address the concerns of election officials has justified the feeling of many administrators that congressional Democrats see the bill more as a symbol … and don't seem eager to fix the bill's flaws because of that." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

- "Now that it's official the Senate didn't have any interest in coming to realistic solutions, Senate staffers have told election officials that many of these changes can be made in committee. A lofty goal that is and, based on recent history, completely unrealistic. Even if miraculous changes could be made, election administrators say the structural challenges of the bill would be hard for election administrators to overcome." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

- "The bill explicitly gives voters whose states and counties have not complied with the law the ability to sue their jurisdictions, leaving already-cash-strapped elections offices fearing that they'll be slapped with expensive lawsuits for their failure to leap over goalposts set unrealistically high." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

Democrats' Bill Requires States To Implement Technology And Systems That 'Don't Even Exist Yet'

"In addition, the bill requires states to purchase paper-backed voting machines that are compliant with the brand-new standards passed by the Election Assistance Commission only weeks ago…. The larger problem, however, is that the machines the bill requires don't even exist yet. The Election Assistance Commission's testing labs say they need eight to 12 more months to develop and finalize their new process for certifying vote systems to the new standards." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

"[T]he bill asks states to implement voter registration by 'automated telephone-based system' —a wild, almost certainly nonsecure idea that no state currently uses and that election officials are baffled by. Currently, no voting vendor offers such a system, meaning that states would have to create this from scratch. The bill affords neither the time nor the means to implement this demand." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

The Bill Forces Other States To Implement An Automatic Voter Registration System That Created A Mess In California And Illinois

JESSICA HUSEMAN: "The bill also requires that states implement automatic voter registration (AVR) by 2023 … The process requires not only updating the voter registration system, but the systems of multiple other state and even federal agencies so that the agencies' databases talk to each other." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

- "When California and Illinois rushed the process [of implementing their own automatic voter registration systems], it led to errors like registering ineligible voters, eligible voters registered incorrectly, and security vulnerabilities. Illinois still has not fully complied with its law more than three years later…. H.R. 1 asks us to make that same grave error in more states …" (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

American Elections Are Both More Secure And More Resilient Precisely Because States And Local Governments Are Primarily In Charge Of Elections

SEN. McCONNELL: "In the United States of America it is states and localities, not the feds, who run elections. Period. And our lack of a one-size-fits-all national system isn't just constitutionally appropriate; it also acts as a further safeguard. We lack a single point of failure." (Sen. McConnell, Remarks, 8/03/2020)

BIPARTISAN SENATE INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEE REPORT: "DHS and other federal government entities remain respectful of the limits of federal involvement in state election systems. States should be firmly in the lead for running elections. The country's decentralized election system can be a strength from a cybersecurity perspective, but each operator should be keenly aware of the limitations of their cybersecurity capabilities and know how to quickly and properly obtain assistance." (Report Of The Select Committee On Intelligence, United States Senate, On Russian Active Measures Campaigns And Interference In The 2016 U.S. Election, Volume 1: Russian Efforts Against Election Infrastructure With Additional Views, 7/25/2019)

FORMER ATTORNEY GENERAL BILL BARR, FBI DIRECTOR CHRISTOPHER WRAY, FORMER ACTING HOMELAND SECURITY SECRETARY CHAD WOLF, FORMER ACTING DIRECTOR OF NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE JOSEPH MAGUIRE, AND FORMER CYBERSECURITY AND INFRASTRUCTURE SECURITY AGENCY DIRECTOR CHRISTOPHER KREBS: "The states' autonomy over elections makes our elections more resilient. The diversity of election systems among the states, multiple checks and redundancies in those systems, and post-election auditing all make it

extraordinarily difficult for foreign adversaries to disrupt or change vote tallies." (William Barr, Christopher Wray, Chad Wolf, Joseph Maguire, and Christopher Krebs, Op-Ed, "Help Us Protect The 2020 Elections And Your Vote," USA Today, 2/19/2020)

JESSICA HUSEMAN, NYU Adjunct Journalism Professor: "And, perversely to its purpose, [H.R.1] would make elections less secure by forcing states to rush gargantuan changes on deeply unrealistic time frames." (Jessica Huseman, Op-Ed, "How This Voting Rights Bill Could Turn the Next Election Into a Clusterf*ck," Daily Beast, 3/20/2021)

The Democrat Politician Protection Act 'Would Dismantle Meaningful Voter ID Laws' In State After State

SEN. McCONNELL: "[House Democrats] want to forbid states from implementing Voter I.D. or doing simple things like checking their voter rolls against change-of-address submissions." (Sen. McConnell, Remarks, 2/25/2021)

20 STATE ATTORNEYS GENERAL: "Perhaps most egregious is the Act's limitations on voter ID laws. Fairly considered, requiring government-issued photo identification at the polls represents nothing more than a best practice for election administration. Government-issued photo identification has been the global standard for documentary identification for decades. … Voter ID laws remain popular, with thirty-five states requiring some form of documentary personal identification at the polls. Yet the Act would dismantle meaningful voter ID laws by allowing a statement, as a substitute for prior-issued, document-backed identification, to "attest[] to the individual's identity and . . . that the individual is eligible to vote in the election." This does little to ensure that voters are who they say they are. Worse, it vitiates the capacity of voter ID requirements to protect against improper interference with voting rights. … Robust voter ID laws, however, require all voters to present photo identification, i.e., objective, on-the-spot confirmation of the right to vote that immediately refutes bad-faith challenges based on vaguely articulated suspicions. Fair election laws treat all voters equally. By that standard, the Act is not a fair election law." (20 Attorneys General, Letter to Reps. Pelosi and McCarthy and Sens. Schumer and McConnell, 3/03/2021)

The Democrat Politician Protection Act Would Actually Mandate States Allow Ballot Harvesting

SEN. McCONNELL: "[House Democrats] want to force all 50 states to allow the absurd practice of ballot harvesting, where paid operatives can show up at polling places carrying a thick stack of filled-out ballots with other people's names on them." (Sen. McConnell, Remarks, 2/25/2021)

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL* EDITORIAL BOARD: "H.R.1 would overrule state laws against ballot harvesting, letting Americans nationwide 'designate any person' to return a vote, provided the carrier 'does not receive any form of compensation based on the number of ballots.' Also, states 'may not put any limit on how many voted and sealed absentee ballots any designated person can return.' Yes, paid partisan operatives could go door to door, amassing thousands of votes, as long as they billed by the hour." (Editorial, "Making Every Election Like 2020," The Wall Street Journal, 3/01/2021)

PAGES 199-200: "(2) PERMITTING VOTERS TO DESIGNATE OTHER PERSON TO RETURN BALLOT. —The State— (A) shall permit a voter to designate any person to return a voted and sealed absentee ballot to the post office, a ballot drop-off location, tribally designated building, or election office so long as the person designated to return the ballot does not receive any form of compensation based on the number of ballots that the person has returned and no individual, group, or organization provides compensation on this basis; and (B) may not put any limit on how many voted and sealed absentee ballots any designated person can return to the post office, a ballot drop off location, tribally designated building, or election office." (H.R.1, 117th Congress)

Democrats' Partisan Bill Would Strip Redistricting Powers From Every State And Hand It To Unelected, Unaccountable Commissions That Democrats Have Already Demonstrated Are Easy For Them To Game

SENATE REPUBLICAN LEADER MITCH McCONNELL (R-KY): "How does it affect the House of Representatives? State legislative authority over the redistricting [process] is removed nationwide to so-called independent commissions and if people don't like independent commissions, they can file lawsuits that could end up in the district court of Washington D.C." (Tony Perkins' 'Washington Watch,' 3/10/2021)

REP. BENNIE THOMPSON (D-MS): "My constituents opposed the redistricting portion of the bill as well as the section on public finances… I always listen and vote in the interest of my constituents." ("Mississippi Rep. Bennie Thompson Explains Why He Was Only Dem To Vote Against Massive HR 1 Election Bill," Fox News, 3/04/2021)

16 CURRENT AND FORMER SECRETARIES OF STATE: "HR 1's requirement that all states establish redistricting commissions unconstitutionally strips that authority away from state legislatures, and also imposes an unfunded mandate on the states. It is an antidemocratic provision that removes the ability of the residents of our states to make their own decision on how redistricting should be conducted, be it by the state legislature or by a redistricting commission. This provision may even interfere with states whose voters have already decided to establish their own redistricting commissions and whose rules do not comply with the detailed, specific requirements in HR 1 for how such commissions must be organized, operated, and staffed with commissioners unaccountable to voters." (16 Secretaries of State, Letter to Speaker Pelosi and Rep. McCarthy, 3/06/2019)

20 STATE ATTORNEYS GENERAL: "Next, the Act's mandate that states undertake congressional redistricting by way of so-called 'independent' commissions is profoundly misguided. The aim of this provision—to neutralize 'political' gerrymandering—proceeds from the incoherent supposition that drawing congressional districts is something other than a political act. As with any legislation, drawing boundary lines for congressional districts requires officials to balance legitimate competing considerations, and in so doing advance some political interests over others. Independent commissions do not somehow negate the need for interest balancing and tradeoffs—they merely avoid accountability for the enterprise. At least when legislatures draw boundary lines voters may punish egregious behavior at the next election; not so with government-by-commission, which trades accountability for mythical expertise and disinterest. The republican form of government inherently rejects the idea that elites have some unique capacity to discern and implement the best policies. The American tradition instead embraces political accountability as the best way to advance the public interest. With respect to political redistricting, no ideal, perfectly balanced congressional boundaries exist, so we should let the people decide, through their elected officials, where to place them." (20 Attorneys General, Letter to Reps. Pelosi and McCarthy and Sens. Schumer and McConnell, 3/03/2021)

FLASHBACK: After California Implemented A Supposedly Independent Redistricting Commission In 2010, Democrats Immediately Set To Work Rigging The Results To Their Partisan Advantage

"In previous years, the [Democratic] party had used its perennial control of California's state Legislature to draw district maps that protected Democratic incumbents. But in 2010, California voters put redistricting in the hands of a citizens' commission where decisions would be guided by public testimony and open debate. The question facing House Democrats as they met to contemplate the state's new realities was delicate: How could they influence an avowedly nonpartisan process? … In the weeks that followed, party leaders came up with a plan. Working with the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee — a national arm of the party that provides money and support to Democratic candidates — members were told to begin 'strategizing about potential future district lines,' according to another email. The citizens' commission had pledged to create districts based on testimony from the communities themselves, not from parties or statewide political players. To get around that, Democrats surreptitiously enlisted local voters, elected officials, labor unions and community groups to testify in support of configurations that coincided with the party's interests." ("How Democrats Fooled California's Redistricting Commission," ProPublica, 12/21/2011)

- "When they appeared before the commission, those groups identified themselves as ordinary Californians and did not disclose their ties to the party. One woman who purported to represent the Asian community of the San Gabriel Valley was actually a lobbyist who grew up in rural Idaho, and lives in Sacramento. In one instance, party operatives invented a local group to advocate for the Democrats' map." ("How Democrats Fooled California's Redistricting Commission," ProPublica, 12/21/2011)

"California's Democratic representatives got much of what they wanted from the 2010 redistricting cycle, especially in the northern part of the state. 'Every member of the Northern California Democratic Caucus has a ticket back to DC,' said one enthusiastic memo written as the process was winding down. 'This is a huge accomplishment that should be celebrated by advocates throughout the region.' … 'Very little of this is due to demographic shifts,' said Professor Doug Johnson, a fellow at the Rose Institute in Los Angeles. Republican areas actually had higher growth than Democratic ones. 'By the numbers, Republicans should have held at least the same number of seats, but they lost.'" ("How Democrats Fooled California's Redistricting Commission," ProPublica, 12/21/2011)

- "As part of a national look at redistricting, ProPublica reconstructed the Democrats' stealth success in California, drawing on internal memos, emails, interviews with participants and map analysis. What emerges is a portrait of skilled political professionals armed with modern mapping software and detailed voter information who managed to replicate the results of the smoked-filled rooms of old." ("How Democrats Fooled California's Redistricting Commission," ProPublica, 12/21/2011)

Democrat Incumbents And Their Allies Repeatedly Manipulated The California Commission To Draw Safe Districts For Themselves

"According to an internal memo, Democrats recognized early on that they could protect nearly every incumbent in Northern California if they won a few key battles. First, they had to make sure no district crossed the Golden Gate Bridge.Then, they had to draw a new seat that pulled sufficient numbers of Democrats from Contra Costa County into a district that included Republicans from the San Joaquin Valley." ("How Democrats Fooled California's Redistricting Commission," ProPublica, 12/21/2011)

"The man with the most to lose was Rep. Jerry McNerney, who represented an octopus-shaped district that had scooped in Democrats from the areas east of San Francisco…. [T]hen a previously unknown group calling itself OneSanJoaquin entered the fray…. Democrats were one move ahead and understood that a united valley would inevitably lead to a Democratic-leaning district…. In fact, the only way to make a district with 'one San Joaquin' was to pull in the Democrats in eastern Contra Costa — the far reaches of San Francisco's Bay-area liberals. The author of OneSanJoaquin's maps was not identified on the Facebook page, but ProPublica has learned it was Paul Mitchell, a redistricting consultant hired by McNerney…. After the commission finished, McNerney announced he was moving to the newly created San Joaquin district to run for re-election. It was a huge improvement for him." ("How Democrats Fooled California's Redistricting Commission," ProPublica, 12/21/2011)

"One politician who benefited was Southern California Congresswoman Judy Chu. When it appeared that Chu would get an unfavorable district late in the game, a group with ties to the congresswoman went before the commission in Sacramento and convinced the commissioners to draw a favorable map that included her political stronghold, a town called Rosemead. Chu enjoyed broad support in Rosemead, where she was first elected to the school board in 1992 and later served in the state assembly. The group, which called itself the Asian American Education Institute, worked with Paul Mitchell, the same consultant who helped engineer the triumph of Northern California Democrats. Records show that crucial last-minute testimony in favor of Chu's district was delivered by Jennifer Wada, who told commissioners she was representing the institute and the overall Asian-American community. Wada did not mention that she lives and works as a registered lobbyist in Sacramento, 400 miles from the district, or that she grew up in rural Idaho, where most of her family still lives. Wada says she was hired by the institute to 'convey their concerns about Asian and Pacific Islander representation' to the commission…. Commissioners accepted this map without asking a basic question: Who, exactly, was the Asian American Education Institute representing?" ("How Democrats Fooled California's Redistricting Commission," ProPublica, 12/21/2011)

"Outside Los Angeles, residents of what's known as Little Saigon begged the commission to undo what they saw as decades of discrimination and put the U.S.'s largest Vietnamese community together in one district. Instead, the community was split in two — a result of testimony by supporters of Rep. Loretta Sanchez, including a former staffer and one of her wedding guests, to get her a safe district. A large section of Little Saigon ended up in a district with Long Beach, a town that is 1 percent Vietnamese." ("How Democrats Fooled California's Redistricting Commission," ProPublica, 12/21/2011)

And Sure Enough In The 2012 Election, 'The Redistricting Process Delivered Congressional Districts To Democrats'

"The redistricting process delivered congressional districts to Democrats around Sacramento and in the 31st and 56th in the southern part of the state for a net gain of one seat from the GOP. That margin could grow to a gain of four seats as races in the 7th, 36th and 52nd congressional districts had Democrats leading by narrow margins. Should those wins hold for the Democrats, roughly one in four California congressional seats could change parties, and voters would have sent 13 rookie legislators to Washington." ("How Election 2012, Redistricting Changed California's Congressional Map," KPCC, 11/08/2012)

It Wasn't Until 2020 That Republicans Picked Up A House Seat In California For The First Time Since 1998

"Republican Mike Garcia won the competitive special election to replace a Democrat in California's 25th Congressional District... The outcome marked the first time in 22 years that Republicans picked up a seat in California." ("Republican Mike Garcia Wins Democratic-Held House Seat In California In A Boost For GOP," The Washington Post, 5/13/2020)

- "Republican Mike Garcia claimed victory Wednesday in the race for an open congressional seat north of Los Angeles, the first time the GOP has flipped a California district from blue to red in more than 20 years…. The last time the GOP flipped a Democratic-held California district was 1998, when Republicans Doug Ose and Steve Kuykendall won open seat contests in, respectively, Sacramento and the South Bay." McConnell: Democrats' Power Grab Would Invite "Total Chaos" in Elections

'We cannot afford to go further down this road. We should be finding ways to rebuild trust. Not destroy it further. But that's exactly what a partisan power grab would guarantee. And that's what S. 1 is all about.'

WASHINGTON, D.C. – U.S. Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) delivered the following remarks today at the Rules Committee hearing on S. 1:

"Madam Chair, Senator Blunt, thanks for this important hearing.

"From what the Majority Leaders just said, the state bills that he refers to only two of them have passed, and they had nothing to do with suppressing the vote.

"It's also noteworthy that this is a solution in search of a problem. Turnout in 2020 was up 7%. Turnout in the 2020 election was the rewrite the rules of our political system.

“But even more immediately, it would create an implementation nightmare, as Senator Blunt pointed out, that would drown the state and local officials who run elections.
“This proposal needs all the scrutiny it can get and I’m glad we are all here to give it.

“This legislation would forcibly rewrite the election laws of all 50 states from here in Washington.

“Popular policies like Voter I.D. requirements would be banned, unless states neutered them with loopholes.

“Meanwhile, unpopular and absurd practices like ballot harvesting, where paid political operatives can show up carrying stacks of other people’s ballots, would not just be allowed — they’d be mandatory.

“Washington would mandate that every state and county in America adopt same-day voter registration with minimal safeguards…

“…but would make it incredibly difficult for states and counties to conduct routine voter list maintenance, like removing dead people or voters who’ve moved away.

“Then there is the whole question of political speech.

“Refereeing campaigns and policing speech are sensitive tasks. Appropriately the FEC was designed after Watergate to be bipartisan — an even split, 3 to 3.

“After Watergate, my party, the Republican Party, was just about wiped out. The overwhelming Democratic majorities could have done anything they wanted to. It never occurred to them that the Federal Election Commission, set up to police how we run campaigns, would be a partisan entity.

“Now we’re in a 50-50 Senate, and a narrow majority in the House, and this audacious move wants to turn the judge of our democratic process into a partisan prosecutor.

“Talk about shame. If anybody ought to be feeling any shame around here, it’s for turning the FEC into a partisan prosecutor -- the majority controlled by the President’s party -- to harass and intimidate the other side. That’s what you ought to be ashamed about.

“Over in the House Admin. Committee, we are having an example right now of how that could happen. The Democratic majority is trying to overturn a certified election result.

“I want to ask how many of our friends on the other side here, we were just arguing last month and the month before that certifying a state election was the gold standard. It’s over after certification. Apparently not in the house.

“Of course the constitution gives the House the power to determine who will sit there. That doesn’t mean they should go against everything they’ve been preaching for the last two months about the sanctity of state certification and simply ran through someone who lost the election, according to officials in Iowa.

“That’s what happens when you let partisan bodies regulate elections. And that is certainly not what we need at the FEC and that’s what, among other things, you ought to be ashamed about.

“This bill would also expand the scope of this newly-partisan FEC.

“More power over more of Americans’ speech. More mandates for private groups to publicize their lists of supporters.

“These are big-picture problems. But on a practical level, even if you disagree with everything I just said, the fact is: this legislation is not ready for primetime. It’s an invitation to chaos.
“State-level elections officials, including Democrats, are sounding alarms left and right. This messaging bill would create a nightmare if it actually became law.
“It would mandate brand-new voting machines that have not even been produced yet, let alone certified and approved.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“It would force every state to rush through big changes — like inventing new, unsecure, automated telephone systems to register voters. I’m sure prank callers would have a field day with that.
“This thing even has something to say about the paper on which local officials would be able to print their ballots and the kind of envelope adhesive they have to use. That’s a really important thing for the federal government to dictate: what kind of adhesive they have to use. What a great idea.

“Just the prospect of all these silly new mandates is already keeping local officials up at night, and that includes Democratic local officials who conduct elections.

“This thing would even put American taxpayers on the hook for transfer payments, don’t be kidded into thinking there’s no federal money in this bill, transfer payments that would go directly to fund political campaigns. Taxpayer-funded bumper stickers and attack ads. What a great idea. American people are really going to like that. Taking their money and spending it on attack ads and bumper stickers, buttons, and balloons.

“Even liberals who like this bill better than I do are admitting all the practicalities need to go back to the drawing board.

“This is nowhere near ready for prime time. It’s an invitation to total chaos.

“I’ll close with this. Senator Klobuchar, I had your job after the 2000 election. Chris Dodd and I teamed up and passed the Help America Vote Act.

“It was a major voting bill.

“What it did was to try to encourage making it easier to vote, but harder to cheat. It was a combination of things. Well balanced. Some of us were colleagues back in 2002 when I wrote the Help America Vote Act with Senator Dodd.

“It passed the Senate 92 to 2. That’s the kind of consensus that can be built when you approach a subject, like the one that’s before us today, in the right way.

“By contrast, this bill did not receive a single Republican vote in the House and I predict it will not in the Senate should we, unfortunately, have to vote on it.

“Both Republicans and Democrats voted against it in the House.

“Now, we’ve just seen two consecutive presidential elections, 2016 and 2020, where chunks of Americans on both the left and right took turns refusing to accept the result when their side lost.

“We cannot afford to go further down this road.

“We should be finding ways to rebuild trust. Not destroy it further.

“But that’s exactly what a partisan power grab would guarantee. And that’s what S. 1 is all about.”

McConnell on 'America's Newsroom'

On H.R. 1:

"First of all, it's a federal takeover of the way we conduct elections – every election in America. The first outrage is it takes the Federal Election Commission, which has historically been 3-3 so neither party could take advantage of the other, and turn it into a 3-2 agency to police the speech and political activity of America in a partisan way, and of course, the President would get the tiebreaking vote to appoint number 3. It turns the Federal Election Commission from a judge into a prosecutor.

"Secondly, it provides public money for political campaigns. Americans hate the idea that their money, given to the government, is going to be spent on balloons and buttons and attack ads in campaigns. They prefer to see campaigns financed by people who support the two candidates and not the federal government.

"Number three, it makes mandatory what is called ballot harvesting. That is, somebody can go around – a paid operative of a campaign – and pick up a bunch of other people's ballots and turn them in for them. Rampant fraud potential.

"Fourth, it makes it very difficult for states to clean dead people off the rolls. This bill, obviously, is designed to make it easier to cheat, to subsidize campaigns by the federal government and to have one party take over the enforcement of American elections. It is an atrocity, every Republican opposes it, and we're going to do everything we can to defeat it."

On the Importance of Preserving the Legislative Filibuster:

"It is the essence of the Senate: the fact that you can't pass most legislation with a simple majority in the Senate. You have to have some kind of bipartisan buy-in or the bill doesn't pass. Senator Manchin and Senator Sinema have been rock solid that they are opposed to getting rid of the legislative filibuster. That's the essence of the Senate.

"We could have done that when my party was in the majority. President Trump actually asked us to. I said no, we were not interested in changing the fundamental nature of the United States Senate, which is designed on purpose to kill bad ideas or to reach a compromise so you can reach that supermajority threshold. It keeps America in the political center.

"The filibuster pre-dates the debates over civil rights. It goes back to the beginning of the country. The filibuster started well before we got into the civil rights debates that have occurred off and on over the history of the country. So the derivation of the filibuster was not related to race or civil rights."

On the Biden Administration's Far-Left Agenda:

"I haven't been invited to the White House. So far this administration is not interested in doing anything on a bipartisan basis in the political center. They would be more than happy to pick off a few of our members and do what they would like to do but there has been no effort whatsoever by the President or the administration to do anything in the political center.

"They try to jam through everything on the hard left. You saw that on the $1.9 trillion dollar COVID package, only 1% of which had to do with vaccines and only 9% of which had to do with healthcare. The rest of it was a left-wing wish list.

"They are now cooking up yet another package they're going to call infrastructure. It will be a Trojan horse that includes massive tax increases on Americans. They are going hard-left. They misread the election. It is a 50/50 Senate and a very narrow Democratic majority in the House, not a mandate to turn America into Bernie Sanders' view of what America ought to be."

Mr. Popper,

My name is Ryan Newman, and I am General Counsel to Governor Ron DeSantis. John Gore at Jones Day suggested that I reach out to you.

The Florida House of Representatives has scheduled a committee hearing for this coming Friday, March 18, on its congressional redistricting map. The House proposal retains Congressional District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

We were hoping that you might be interested in serving as a witness at the hearing to educate the committee on why retaining this district would likely violate the U.S. Constitution.

Please let me know if you would be interested in speaking with us. I'm cc'ing Jason Torchinsky and Mo Jazil, who have been representing the Governor's office and the Florida Department of State as outside counsel. Josh Pratt and Nick Meros are Deputy GCs in my office.

I look forward to hearing from you.

All the best,

Sunburn — The morning read of what's hot in Florida politics — 11.10.21

Florida Politics
Peter Schorsch
November 10, 2021

Good morning: Here's your first look at the issues behind today's Florida politics. Good Wednesday morning.

Redistricting is about to get real.

The Senate Reapportionment Committee staff today will release to the public the first draft maps for congressional and legislative districts. That means a first chance to see the direction lawmakers may take in defining the boundaries governing the 2022 midterms, not to mention the next decade of Florida politics.

Ahead of that, Senate President Wilton Simpson issued a joint statement with Senate President-Designate Kathleen Passidomo and Democratic Leader Lauren Book, a sort of bipartisan clarion call to keep calm and put personal politics aside.

"As Senators, we are frequently presented with situations where we must set aside our personal views and make decisions in keeping with the oath we each took to defend the constitution and laws of this state," the memo reads.

"Nowhere is this responsibility more challenging than in redistricting, given that some of us may ultimately decide to vote for a map knowing the realities of that map are such that we will never be reelected. Some of us may choose to defer seeking reelection. Still others may decide to run against a current colleague who we know and respect."

Indeed, the Senate map could well determine whether Book or Passidomo presides over the Senate next November. Passidomo is in line to succeed Simpson in the big office, but only if Republicans win a majority of seats, all 40 of which go up next year once new lines are signed into law.

Expect a host of watchdog groups to feast on the cartography once it reaches the public. The Fair Districts Coalition already has offered failing grades to Florida lawmakers on the transparency of the process thus far. That assessment spurred Sen. Ray Rodrigues, chair of the Senate Reapportionment Committee, to dismiss the feedback as input from a "Democrat-funded partisan entity."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“It is no surprise they are unhappy with the process we have designed to guard against partisan influence,” he said. Notably, he made those comments after attending a fundraiser for Senate Republicans in Naples.

For its part, leadership from that group said the seriousness of lawmakers to remain politically neutral will face its first great test today. The maps drafted within the Legislature hold the answer to just how fair a process led by politicians with great stakes in the outcome can be.

“The proof is in the pudding,” said Ellen Freidin, CEO and general counsel of Fair Districts Now. “The proof is in the maps.”

U.S. Rep. Charlie Crist reeled in another $625,000 last month for his bid to return to the Governor’s Mansion.

The new numbers show a steady stream of funds heading to his campaign and committee accounts — he snagged more than $700,000 in August and reported $655,000 raised in September.

“I remain thankful for the outpouring of support I’ve received from Pensacola to Homestead in our mission to make sure every Floridian’s voice is heard in Tallahassee as we build a Florida that works for all,” Crist said.

“Our current Governor spends his time promoting his own political interests, not the interests of Floridians. Florida needs a Governor with a heart, who is focused on creating good jobs, a cleaner environment, better schools and a better tomorrow. I’m running to bring an end to this regime and put the people back in charge.”

With the October haul, Crist has about $3.18 million in the bank as he seeks to make a one-term Governor out of Republican Ron DeSantis, who formally launched his reelection campaign on Monday. The incumbent has more than $58 million on hand in his political committee.

But first, Crist will need to earn the Democratic nomination. That may be a skosh more difficult now that Sen. Annette Taddeo has made it a three-way race.

On Tuesday, Taddeo, who was Crist’s running mate in the 2014 Governor race, touted $650,000 raised in her first report since filing for Governor. Agriculture Commissioner Nikki Fried, meanwhile, had about $3 million banked between her campaign and political committee at the end of September. Her October report is due today.

Florida LGBTQ rights advocates met White House staffers last week about anti-transgender legislation and the impacts it has had on communities in Florida.

Among the staffers tuned into the virtual round table was Deputy Assistant to the President and Director of the Office of Intergovernmental Affairs Julie Rodriguez.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

She and others heard from Sen. Shevrin Jones, Rep. Carlos Guillermo Smith, Equality Florida TransAction Director Nikole Parker, LGBTQI+ families and equality advocates about anti-trans laws passed in the 2021 Legislative Session.

“Meeting participants expressed the pain and anguish they have felt in recent months and years and detailed the hurt caused by being targeted by their own state’s elected officials,” a White House spokesperson said.

“They also described the courage that many transgender youth and their families have shown advocating for equal rights and fair treatment. White House staff conveyed to the Floridians gathered that the President is on their side and will continue fighting until we reach full equality for all Americans, including the LGBTQI+ community in Florida.”

Fentrice Driskell named NewDEAL Leader — House Democratic Leader Designate Driskell was one of 20 leaders from across the country selected to join NewDEAL, a national network of state and local elected officials focused on passing progressive policy. Driskel was chosen from a pool of more than 1,750 nominations. The group said she stood out from the pack “because of her approach of bringing common-sense solutions to Florida’s most pressing challenges related to issues like public education, public safety, racial justice, and economic opportunity for all.” Driskell and other NewDEALers will gather for the organization’s annual Leaders Conference Nov. 17-19 to “discuss a forward-looking agenda for state and local Democrats and address simultaneous crises around public health, the economy, racial equity, climate change, and our democracy.”

SITUATIONAL AWARENESS —

—@DaveWeigel: Can’t really blame Chris Sununu for wanting to be the god-king of a fun state instead of Vote #51 for some circuit court nominee

—@LPDonovan: My semi-spicy take is that a GOP Senate majority is probably more likely today w/ no Sununu than was evident a week ago with the possibility of Sununu. Macro factors>>silver bullet. Would NRSC prefer to have both? Obviously. But I’d take the environment over the recruit any day.

—@RepJoseOliva: Elected officials, are you advocates of Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau? If you don’t know, you are likely acting Rousseau, which is perpetual revolution. Find a foundational belief, ground yourself, and defend it; all else is a cork floating in a river and a grave danger to civil society.

—@ChristinaPushaw: Last week, restaurant in Tallahassee. Drunk man “involved in The Process” tries to explain to me why I need to bribe pay-for-play Florida blogs for positive coverage. Lol have these folks paid any attention to Governor DeSantis at all?

— TOP STORY —

"Senate leaders issue rare bipartisan call for deliberate, fair redistricting" via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — Senate leaders issued a rare bipartisan message on the redistricting process Tuesday. In short: Stick to the law. In a joint memo from Simpson, Passidomo and Book, the legislative leaders called on Senators to carefully scrutinize and deliberate on proposed boundaries for congressional and House districts, and the lines determining where Senators themselves will run. The message comes a day before Senate Reapportionment Committee staff plans to release the first draft maps generated within the Legislature for the once-a-decade redistricting process.

— STATEWIDE —

"Ron DeSantis announces $481M in water grants, teases 'strong' environmental budget" via Renzo Downey of Florida Politics — DeSantis and top environment officials unveiled $481 million in grants Tuesday to improve water quality and reduce nutrients in Florida waterways. The grants, announced at Weeki Wachee Springs State Park in Spring Hill, cover 103 projects statewide through the Department of Environmental Protection. The Governor told reporters water quality has been one of his top priorities. "We appreciate the fact that from day one of our administration, we've really been proactive," DeSantis said. The vast majority of the spending, $394 million, is through the Wastewater Grant Program for 72 wastewater treatment improvements, including septic to sewer projects and upgrading for "advanced wastewater treatment."

"Florida's share of infrastructure bill is $19 billion, as DeSantis labels it 'pork'" via Steven Lemongello of the Orlando Sentinel — On Monday, DeSantis said the bill seemed to be "a lot of pork-barrel spending." By Tuesday, his comments were largely about how Florida should have gotten more money. "It seems a disproportionate amount of money is going to New York and New Jersey and Florida is not getting a really significant share out of over a trillion dollars," DeSantis said. "They're saying we're going to get, what? $20 billion? That's not a lot compared to how big the state is." DeSantis spokeswoman Christina Pushaw said the Governor's office had not determined yet whether it would decline any specific federal funding, as former Republican Gov. Rick Scott did with a multibillion-dollar Orlando-to-Tampa high-speed rail project in 2011.

"Will DeSantis give Tampa the transportation money it's seeking?" via Charlie Frago of the Tampa Bay Times — Florida could receive $13 billion in federal funds to improve the state's aging highways and $2.6 billion over five years to improve public transportation options, according to the White House. "We talked about mass transit options. We talked about the private CSX rail that we've discussed for years. And also the possibility of Brightline coming in," said Kathy Castor, referring to a private rail operator that has announced plans to expand service to Tampa. Florida will be getting 4% of the infrastructure bill, Castor said, adding that a lot of transportation dollars have been spent in recent years in South Florida and Orlando. "We feel it is Tampa's time. Right now, to get some funding for our transportation solutions," Castor said.

"Ashley Moody says nearly a half-million dollars was recovered from robocall 'charity scam'" via Tampa Bay 10 — The state's attorney general is urging Floridians to look out for scammers posing as charities after nearly half a million dollars was recovered during a deceptive robocall investigation. Attorney General Moody spoke about the alleged scam Tuesday afternoon from her office in Tampa. She explained how she led an effort to redirect funds she says were deceptively taken from generous Floridians. She says the money will now be going to legitimate organizations that will actually help people in need. These robocall scammers promised to give money to causes like helping "cancer patients, homeless veterans, and victims of house fires" when in reality they were keeping $0.90 on the dollar for themselves, the attorney general said.

"Moody breaks with DeSantis, won't say if 'midnight flight' led to Jacksonville killing" via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — Moody would not say Tuesday whether an undocumented immigrant charged with a murder in Jacksonville arrived in Florida on a federal flight, breaking with messaging from the Governor's Office. DeSantis has said murder suspect Yery Noel Medina Ulloa came to America on a "midnight flight" authorized by the Joe Biden administration. However, Moody would not confirm or deny that position while appearing in a nationally televised interview. Instead, Moody offered a "non-answer." "This is part of our suit where we are demanding that the federal government share this information with us," Moody said, an answer that would suggest the state ultimately did not know how the accused murderer came to the state. In a follow-up answer, Moody again tried to deflect.

“Is plan to competitively bid HMO coverage in state group health insurance program back in play?” via Christine Jordan Sexton of Florida Politics — The Department of Management Services has floated a proposal that — for purposes of procuring health maintenance organization coverage for state employees — divides the state into nine different regions. The proposed regulation lays the groundwork necessary to move ahead with a 2019 law that allows the state to competitively bid the HMO contracts in the multibillion-dollar state group health insurance program. The 2019 law allows the state to bid the contracts regionally and limit the number of HMOs awarded the contracts in each region. But Sen. Jeff Brandes, who chairs the Senate Governmental Operations Committee, says the state needs to do more than change its contracting practices. “Somebody needs to show me how we would save a bunch of money this way,” he said.

“UF task force to answer 2 questions over professors’ testimony and conflict policies” via the Miami Herald — The University of Florida group tasked to review the university’s conflict-of-interest policies, following a national uproar when the school initially barred three professors from testifying as paid expert witnesses in a voting rights lawsuit against the state, determined Tuesday they will answer two questions: When should UF allow professors to serve as expert witnesses in lawsuits, and what role do faculty have in reviewing these requests? UF President Kent Fuchs appointed the seven members of the task force last week to quell the uproar, which centered on the professors’ First Amendment rights, and examine the school’s policies. He said he needs initial recommendations from the group by Nov. 29. “That’s about 20 days from now, so it’s not a lot of time to work on this, but that’s what it is,” said UF Provost Joe Glover, chair of the task force.

— DATELINE TALLY —

“Fair Districts leaders unimpressed with redistricting so far” via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — The Fair Districts Coalition issued a report card Tuesday on Florida’s handling of the once-a-decade redistricting process underway. By the organization’s assessment, lawmakers earn a ‘D’ on some fronts, but fail on most. From transparency on the mapmaking process to public data collection, the letter ‘F’ besmirches the process the most. “We have yet to see any evidence that it’s going to change, though we are hoping to see that,” said Ellen Freidin, CEO and General Counsel for Fair Districts Now. “We keep calling it to their attention and giving suggestions to be more transparent.” Sen. Rodrigues, chair of the Senate Reapportionment Committee, openly expressed irritation at the poor assessment. He labeled them a “Democrat-funded partisan entity.”

Former administrator says leaving OSHA would be costly and complicated — Former OSHA administrator David Michaels said ditching the federal workplace safety regulatory agency is essentially doomed from the start. As reported by Matt Dixon of

POLITICO Florida, Michaels said it would be more expensive, complicated and time-consuming for the state to leave — a move being considered as a way to shirk the Biden administration's workplace vaccination mandate. "First off, if the Florida Legislature thinks it can do a state plan to avoid the OSHA [temporary emergency standards] around vaccinations and testing, they have not read the OSHA law very carefully," he said. "This is a waste of taxpayer dollars. It's a waste of $1 million. OSHA would never approve a plan it thought was developed to get around protecting workers under regulations OSHA has already promulgated."

"Bill would require nursing homes to fork over audited financial reports" via Christine Jordan Sexton of Florida Politics — Days after a joint budget committee agreed to allocate another $100 million to Florida nursing homes, a powerful House Republican filed legislation to require skilled nursing facilities to file audited financial reports with state Medicaid officials. House Appropriations Committee Chair Rep. Jay Trumbull filed a bill Monday that would require nursing facilities to file audited financial statements within 120 days of the end of their fiscal year. While the long-term care industry worried last Session that an audited financial report would drive up costs for nursing homes, this year may be different. In a statement to Florida Politics Tuesday, Florida Health Care Association spokesperson Kristen Knapp said her group supports the bill.

"Conservative activists pressure Pinellas Co. Legislative Delegation to support Special Session bills" via Kelly Hayes of Florida Politics — Members of the Pinellas County Legislative Delegation faced pressure from the public Tuesday morning to clear bills proposed in the upcoming Special Session addressing mask and vaccine mandates. The speakers, several representing local fringe-conservative groups, urged lawmakers to pass the Special Session legislation without amendment. The proposed bills include measures to limit federal mandates dealing with COVID-19 vaccinations. One proposal also lays the groundwork for the state to withdraw from OSHA and assert state jurisdiction over occupational safety and health issues.

"Pinellas lawmakers say Eckerd Connects child welfare issues will be legislative priority" via Daniel Figueroa of Florida Politics — It's been a rough and uncertain week for at-risk youth in Pinellas County. But the county's legislative delegation promised Tuesday issues will be addressed. First, the Department of Children and Families fired Eckerd Connects last week. It's a private organization contracted through the state to offer foster and child care in Pinellas and Pasco counties. DCF notified Eckerd it will not renew its contract at the end of the year. Eckerd responded by saying it was quitting and would not seek a contract renewal. It also said it's pulling out of pending contract negotiations in Hillsborough County. Eckerd accused the state of underfunding the agency for years despite repeated asks for more money.

“UCLA sources: Joseph Ladapo did not treat COVID-19 patients” via Scott Powers of Florida Politics — Ladapo did not treat COVID-19 patients at UCLA as he has asserted, charges a report that aired on MSNBC. The liberal show’s host, Rachel Maddow, said the show’s staff spoke with four UCLA sources, whom she did not identify, who disputed Ladapo’s statements that he was a front-line doctor there treating COVID-19 patients during the coronavirus crisis. The 12-minute segment began with Maddow recapping the controversies surrounding the right-wing “America’s Frontline Doctors” group, of which Ladapo was a member, as well as some of his other controversies, including refusing to wear a mask in the office of Sen. Tina Polsky, a cancer patient.

“These are the COVID-19 signs that Floridians need to watch for this winter” via Cindy Krischer Goodman of the South Florida Sun-Sentinel — The U.S. has dropped the pandemic travel ban, which means international travelers can come to Florida, but they will need to show proof of vaccination and a recent negative COVID-19 test. In previous waves, Florida, which attracts international travelers, saw new mutations before most other states. Zucai Suo, a professor of Biomedical Sciences at FSU College of Medicine, said while there are no variants as infectious as delta, visitors who get sick after arrival will need to be tracked. Suo said Florida health officials will need to be aggressive in sequencing positive test results to catch a new variant or more infectious sublineages of a variant in Florida. Because of Florida’s high volume of visitors, Suo said residents cannot rely on herd immunity.

“Leon Schools pulls out of DOAH appeal challenging DeSantis ban on mask mandates” via Ana Goñi-Lessan of the Tallahassee Democrat — In an abrupt about-face, Leon County Schools is withdrawing from an appeal to a judge’s order last week that upheld a Florida Department of Health emergency rule, which banned all mask mandates. Leon County was one of five Florida counties that filed a notice with the 4th District Court of Appeal after Administrative Law Judge Brian Newman with the Division of Administrative Hearings said decisions to opt-out of student mask requirements are at the “sole discretion” of parents or guardians. In a tweet Tuesday morning, before the district sent out the statement, school board member Alva Striplin said she was against the appeal.

"'We lost nine.' Broward Sheriff's Office honors employees who fell victim to COVID-19" via Eileen Kelley of the South Florida Sun-Sentinel — To date, nine employees of the Sheriff's Office have died of COVID-19. Everyone, though, has been impacted in some way. Well over half the 5,600-strong workforce has been exposed to the virus and 32%, a staggering 1,800 employees, have contracted it, Sheriff Gregory Tony said as he stood on the stage of a megachurch in Sunrise and told the family members of the nine who died that their loved ones are greatly missed. "We didn't lose one, two, three — we lost nine," Tony said. Tuesday's memorial service for the three sworn law enforcement officers and six civilians who died of COVID-19 drew several hundred Broward Sheriff's Office deputies, correction workers, firefighters, paramedics, 911 dispatch workers.

"The cruise line boss who is challenging Florida's vaccine passport ban" via WLRN — Norwegian sued over the state's ban on so-called vaccine passports. A law championed by DeSantis prohibits companies from requiring customers to document their vaccine status to receive services. Norwegian is doing just that. Every cruise passenger and crew member on a Norwegian vessel must prove being vaccinated against COVID-19 and be tested for the virus before boarding. In early April, when the vaccines had still only received emergency authorization by the FDA, Norwegian announced its 100% vaccination policy. It would still be months before the company would sail from Florida with paying passengers.

"Rick Scott promises NRSC will fight for 'election integrity,' revisits 2018 recount gripes" via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — Scott promised the National Republican Senatorial Committee will help defend so-called "election integrity" laws in Florida and elsewhere. He also accuses Democratic election officials of trying to illegally count too many ballots in counties favoring his opponent in Florida's 2018 Senate race. "The RNC and the NRSC are doing a lot. We're defending lawsuits in Georgia, Florida, Iowa," Scott said. Scott, this election cycle, chairs the NRSC, which will support Republican Senate campaigns in electoral battlegrounds nationwide. It's a critical cycle for the GOP as it aims to retake the majority in a chamber evenly split 50-50, with Vice President Kamala Harris' tiebreaking vote giving Democrats control.

DeSantis committee snags $200K check from DeVos family — Four members of the DeVos family sent DeSantis' political committee a combined $200,000 last week, bringing its 2022 cycle total to $240,000. Dixon and Andrew Atterbury of POLITICO Florida reported that the Michigan-based GOP megadonors and staunch school choice advocates sent four $50,000 checks to the committee. They came from Amway founder and family patriarch Dick DeVos and his children Doug, Dan and Suzanne DeVos. The committee previously received checks from Doug DeVos' wife, Pamella, and Dick DeVos Jr., who is married to former U.S. Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos. DeSantis has raised more than $50 million for his political committee this year and had $58.3 million in the bank as of Sept. 30.

"'Embodiment of the American dream': Donna Shalala endorses Annette Taddeo for Governor" via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — Sen. "Annette is a lifelong Democrat, community leader, an activist and a state Senator who has always fought for us," Shalala said in a written statement. "I know she will be a Governor who works to improve the lives of all Floridians, and I am proud to support her." Shalala, a former president of the University of Miami who served as U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services under former President Bill Clinton, pointed to Taddeo's background as evidence of her strong, determined spirit.

"Poll shows Rebekah Jones within striking distance of Matt Gaetz" via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — New survey results show Gaetz's popularity slipping to its lowest point in two years. Just under 50% of likely voters in Florida's 1st Congressional District still view Gaetz favorably, marking the first time he's dropped below 50% on the Pensacola polling outfit's trendlines in the past two years. Just over 30% view the incumbent unfavorably or very unfavorably. Pollsters found if the election were held today, about 34% of voters would vote for Jones, and fewer than 42% would vote for Gaetz. That puts the Democrat within eight percentage points of unseating the three-term incumbent, with more than 24% of voters still undecided.

"He will always Protect and Defend our Second Amendment. Gus fights so hard for our brave Military and Veterans, and is very Strong on Border Security. Bilirakis represents Florida's 12th Congressional District, a solidly Republican seat that covers parts of Hillsborough, Pinellas and Pasco counties.

Frost, 24, is running for Florida's 10th Congressional District, being vacated by Democratic U.S. Rep. Val Demings. Initially, the crowded field of Democrats vying for the Democratic stronghold looked topped by three or four others, until Frost pulled off the best fundraising effort of the bunch during the third quarter reporting period last month. In October, Harrell brought in the bulk of her fundraising total through her campaign account, adding nearly $77,000.

"Shevrin Jones adds, spends $50K in October for unopposed SD 35 defense" via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — Jones spent nearly as much as he raised last month in his bid to defend his seat representing Senate District 35. With less than a year to go before Election Day, the Democrat from West Park is rebuilding his war chest while still running unopposed. Since winning his Senate seat in November, Jones has raised more than $290,000 between his campaign and political committee, Florida Strong Finish. Of that, he has about $75,000 remaining. Jones faces a quick turnaround; Florida Senators typically serve four-year terms, but all will be on the ballot in 2022 because of redistricting to reflect the 2020 Census. In October, Jones raised $53,500 and spent about as much.

"Informers key in enforcing Joe Biden vaccine mandate" via Paul Wiseman of The Associated Press — To enforce Biden's forthcoming COVID-19 mandate, the U.S. Labor Department is going to need a lot of help. OSHA doesn't have nearly enough workplace safety inspectors to do the job. So, the government will rely on employees who will presumably be concerned enough to turn in their own employers if their co-workers go unvaccinated or fail to undergo weekly tests. What's not known is just how many employees will be willing to accept some risk to themselves — or their job security — for blowing the whistle on their employers. Without them, though, experts say the government would find it harder to achieve its goal of requiring tens of millions of workers to be fully vaccinated by Jan. 4 or be tested weekly and wear a mask on the job.

"Pfizer and BioNTech ask federal regulators to authorize their boosters for all adults." via Sharon LaFraniere of The New York Times — Pfizer and BioNTech asked federal regulators on Tuesday to expand authorization of their coronavirus booster shot to include all adults, a move that could significantly expand the number of recipients who are eligible for booster shots. The FDA is considered likely to grant the request, perhaps before Thanksgiving, according to people familiar with the situation. If it does so, all adults who have been fully vaccinated with shots made by Pfizer-BioNTech, Moderna or Johnson & Johnson would all be eligible for a Pfizer booster. The federal government intends to broaden the categories of people eligible for additional injections since the first booster shots were authorized for emergency use in late September.

"The U.S. is relying on other countries' data to make its booster shot decisions" via Betsy Ladyzhets of FiveThirtyEight — In the U.S., vaccine research is far more complicated. Rather than one singular, standardized system housing health care data, 50 different states have their own systems, along with hundreds of local health departments and thousands of hospitals. Israel has a universal health care system for all citizens and permanent residents. So does the U.K., another country that the U.S. looks to for COVID-19 data. When every person in the country is plugged into the same health care system, it's very easy to standardize your data. That's why one of the first presentations to the FDA featured scientists from Israel's Ministry of Health and Weizmann Institute. The Israelis shared their findings from the country's Pfizer booster shot campaign.

"No widespread COVID-19 school backlash" via Margaret Talev of Axios — Most Americans, including more than two-thirds of Republicans, give their local schools good marks for balancing public health and safety with other priorities. Other findings from our national survey suggest Americans are less worried about COVID-19 risks and largely feel the Delta variant is behind them. That's a potential path to redemption for Biden after months of sinking approval numbers. Asked how schools in their community had done in terms of balancing health and safety with other priorities since the start of the pandemic, 71% of U.S. adults, and 75% of parents, said schools had done a good job as opposed to a poor job.

"COVID-19 hospitalizations rising in parts of California, a potentially ominous sign" via Luke Money and Rong-Gong Lin II of the Los Angeles Times — Health officials have been warning about a potential new rise in COVID-19 in California as seniors who got their shots last winter — and haven't received a booster shot — may start to see their immunity wane, leaving them exposed to greater risk for infection and hospitalization, and as people gather indoors more as the weather cools and the holidays approach. Demand for booster shots has fallen below expectation in California. And each infected Californian is increasingly spreading the coronavirus to more people; as of Saturday, computer models estimated that every infected Californian was spreading the virus on average to 0.96 other people; if that number rises above 1, that will set the stage for further growth of the pandemic.

"The Biden economy is doing pretty well by the measures Donald Trump used to evaluate his own" via Philip Bump of The Washington Post — During his first year in office, Trump repeatedly emphasized two metrics as he touted his success in turning the economy around: jobs and stock prices. By those two metrics, his successor Biden is doing a pretty good job himself, even despite employment numbers being consistently adjusted upward after initial news reports. I will note at the outset that this is not actually a very good way to evaluate a presidency. Presidents have some connection to the health of the economy, certainly, and it's safe to say that the passage of a major stimulus bill early in Biden's tenure meant his footprint was slightly larger than normal. Beyond that, though, politicians often like to take more credit for the economy than they deserve.

"'Free Biden': Sean Maloney on how Democrats can get back on track" via Trip Gabriel of The New York Times — In the days since Democrats were battered in elections across the country last week, criticism of the party's policies and electoral strategies has rained down, alongside dire forecasts of its prospects in the 2022 midterms. Reasons put forward for the party's losses included Biden's slipping approval in polls, impressions of a party that is incompetent at governing after months of infighting in Congress, rising inflation and crime in big cities, and tin-eared Democratic campaigns. One of the least envied jobs in politics at the moment belongs to Rep. Maloney of New York, who as chair of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee must steer his caucus through the extremely choppy midterm waters. Biden's approval numbers are lower than President Barack Obama's were at the same point in his first term.

"Biden denounces efforts to strip Republicans who supported infrastructure of committee standing" via Claire Rafford of POLITICO — Biden on Tuesday condemned House Republicans who are considering retaliation against the 13 members who voted for the bipartisan infrastructure bill, speaking to the growing partisan divide in American politics. "I've never seen it before. It's got to stop — for the sake of America," Biden said in a virtual town hall. Punchbowl News initially reported Tuesday that some "rank-and-file" Republicans were considering stripping the 13 House Republicans who voted for the bipartisan infrastructure bill on Friday of their committee assignments. "The very people who voted for it initially because it looked like the Democrats were going to be given credit on something are being threatened with their chairmanships," he said. "It's just not right. We're going to change it, though."

"The serendipity of 'let's go, Brandon'" via John McWhorter of The Atlantic — The anti-Biden euphemism is of a meaner tone. This is not your grandfather's darn, heck, shoot, or fudge. Those are polite terms, expressed without the teeth-baring ardor of the words they stand in for, imaginable as things that characters played by Edie McClurg might say in '80s movies such as Ferris Bueller's Day Off. "Let's go, Brandon" springs from the mangier, madder place of euphemisms such as SNAFU, which during World War II everyone in the American military knew was an acronym for "situation normal, all fucked up" or right-wingers' dismissal of conservatives who do not toe the party line as cuckservatives, rooted in the word cuckold.

“Billions of dollars coming to Florida once Biden’s infrastructure bill becomes law” via Alex Daugherty of the Miami Herald — The White House estimates that $13.1 billion would be spent to rebuild and modernize Florida’s highways with an additional $245 million for bridge replacement and repairs. The White House cited data from the American Society of Civil Engineers that said 3,584 miles of highway and 408 bridges in Florida are in poor condition. The White House also said Florida expects to receive $2.6 billion over five years to improve public transit. And the state would get $198 million over five years to expand an electric vehicle charging network, with an opportunity to apply for $2.5 billion more in grants. Florida would get $100 million to expand broadband internet coverage across the state.

“Federal dollars coming to Florida for road fixes” via Ashleigh Mills of Spectrum News 9 — The Sunshine State is set to receive money to fix roads and fund several other projects as part of the $1 trillion federal infrastructure plan Congress just passed. A White House memo reflects some of the dollars flowing to Florida, including $13.1 billion for federal-aid highway apportioned programs, $245 million for bridge replacement and repairs, $2.6 billion for public transportation option improvements, and $198 million to support electric vehicle charging. Much of this funding will come over five years. There are 408 bridges and more than 3,564 miles of highway in poor condition across Florida. In its infrastructure bill memo, the White House goes on to say that driver commute times in Florida have risen by 11.6% on average since 2011; also, that each driver pays $425 on average each year for car repairs due to poor roads.

“The man who made Jan. 6 possible” via Jonathan D. Karl of The Atlantic — The Presidential Personnel Office is a normally under-the-radar group responsible for the hiring and firing of the roughly 4,000 political appointees in the Executive Branch. During the final year of the Trump administration, that office was transformed into an internal police force, obsessively monitoring administration officials for any sign of dissent, purging those who were deemed insufficiently devoted to Trump and frightening others into silence. The office was run by Johnny McEntee. McEntee and his enforcers made the disastrous last weeks of the Trump presidency possible. They backed the President’s manic drive to overturn the election and helped set the stage for the Jan. 6 assault on the Capitol.

“Trump makes — and loses — overnight bid to block Jan. 6 investigators” via Kyle Cheney of POLITICO — Trump filed an emergency request to a federal judge late Monday night to prevent the National Archives from sending sensitive records to Jan. 6 committee investigators by Friday. And just after midnight, Judge Tanya Chutkan rejected it, contending the request itself was legally defective and “premature.” The unusual exchange, which happened over two hours, comes as Chutkan is already considering an earlier request by Trump to prevent Congress from peering into his White House’s records about his attempt to overturn the 2020 election.

“New Jan. 6 subpoenas increase pressure on Merrick Garland to set an example with Steve Bannon” via Stephen Collinson of CNN — The House select committee probing the Jan. 6 insurrection placed its credibility and legal clout deeper into the hands of Attorney General Garland with a new flurry of subpoenas targeting cronies of Trump. For the committee to retain hopes of compelling testimony from the group, it may need the Justice Department to initiate a prosecution against Bannon, who has already defied a subpoena. The former President’s populist alter ego earned a rare contempt of Congress citation for his intransigence. The department has yet to say whether it will act on that gambit and indict Bannon through the Washington, U.S. Attorney’s office. Without such a move, the committee’s enforcement capacity looks in serious doubt.

“Donors threatened to shun the GOP after Jan. 6. "Judge tosses D.C. A.G.'s claim that Trump inaugural committee 'wasted' $1 million at President's hotel" via David A. Fahrenthold of The Washington Post — A D.C. judge on Monday threw out part of a lawsuit that the District's Attorney General filed against Trump's 2017 Inaugural Committee, ruling that the committee had not wasted its money when it rented ballrooms at Trump's own hotel. But D.C. Superior Judge José M. López refused to throw out another allegation from D.C. Attorney General Karl A. Racine that the nonprofit inaugural committee had misused assets for the Trump family's private gain. Racine filed his lawsuit in early 2020, alleging that the inaugural committee had misused its money by spending about $1 million on ballrooms and meeting spaces at Trump's D.C. hotel. Racine said that the inaugural committee was offered rented spaces at other venues at lower costs, or even free.

"At least 13 Trump officials illegally campaigned while in office, federal investigation finds" via Lisa Rein of The Washington Post — At least 13 senior Trump administration officials illegally mixed governing with campaigning before the 2020 election, intentionally ignoring a law that prohibits merging the two and getting approval to break it, a federal investigation released Tuesday found. A report from the office of Special Counsel Henry Kerner describes a "willful disregard for the law" known as the Hatch Act that was "especially pernicious," given that many officials abused their government roles days before the November election. The report says that Trump allowed them to illegally promote his reelection on the job despite warnings to some from ethics officials.

All nine harassers interviewed by Reuters said they believed they did nothing wrong. Just two expressed regret when told their messages had frightened officials or caused security scares. The seven others were unrepentant, with some saying the election workers deserved the menacing messages. Seven of the nine harassed officials in other states. “Donna Deegan announces “change for good” bid for Jacksonville Mayor” via David Bauerlein of The Florida Times-Union — Deegan launched her campaign for Jacksonville Mayor in an announcement Tuesday loaded with calls for a new approach at City Hall that she says will bring “change for good.” “We suffer not so much from a poverty of wealth but from a poverty of will and imagination,” she said in a speech in front of the Karpeles Manuscript Library Museum in Springfield. Deegan is seeking to become the first woman elected Mayor in Jacksonville history and only the second Democrat in the past 30 years. Several dozen supporters cheered her speech as she entered the race for Mayor in the spring 2023 election.

“State, Jacksonville lawyers ask judge to dismiss lawsuit targeting Confederate monuments” via Steve Patterson of The Florida Times-Union — A Jacksonville-area civil rights activist’s lawsuit over using tax money to maintain Confederate monuments should be thrown out of court, lawyers for the state and city are telling a federal judge. Earl Johnson Jr., who organized the nonprofit Take It Down Inc. to champion removing the monuments from public land, argued in a suit filed in July that using taxpayer money for tributes to the Confederacy violated the U.S. Constitution’s 13th and 14th Amendments. Johnson sued DeSantis and Jacksonville Mayor Lenny Curry in their roles as elected leaders, asking for a court order barring the use of public money to maintain or preserve any public tribute to Confederates, from statues to street signs.

"Citrus Commissioners: Voters off the hook for bigger road resurfacing price tag" via Mike Wright of Florida Politics — Citrus County spends about $4 million a year to resurface residential streets and officials say it needs more than twice that to keep pace with repaving needs. Commissioners don't know how they're going to pay for that, but they agreed Tuesday to drop one source: Voters. During a workshop Tuesday morning, Commissioners acknowledged details of a report from County Administrator Randy Oliver that the county has hundreds of miles of crumbling neighborhood roads, and miles more of roads that will become that way if not placed into a regular 20-year repaving cycle. But the idea of asking voters for a penny sales tax increase to cover the cost, as Board Chair Scott Carnahan had predicted in September, was quickly shut down by Commissioners who said the referendum would never garner public support.

Park wars scoop — Former Universal exec claims Disney swiped Rise of Resistance idea" via Gabrielle Russon of Florida Politics — Raven Sun Creative sued Walt Disney Parks and Resorts for patent infringement Tuesday in the U.S. District Court's Orlando Division. Louis Alfieri, the former Universal creative director, is the chief creative officer for Raven Sun Creative. In the lawsuit, Raven Sun says it has a patent for technology that coordinates a vertical-moving rider trolley with videos on a screen. The movement on the tower is synced with the video screen and the seat's movements, making the theme park ride experience feel more immersive and real. The lawsuit alleges Disney used that same technology in the Rise of Resistance scene when theme park-goers feel like they are jettisoning out of an escape pod during the ride's controlled-drop finale.

"SeaWorld still feels pandemic pain, but making progress" via Gabrielle Russon of Florida Politics — SeaWorld Entertainment bought back about $83 million worth of its stock this quarter and spent money on capital projects at its parks, the company's CEO said Tuesday, as the theme park industry continues to rebound from the costly pandemic crisis. Fueled by 7.2 million visitors for the third quarter, the parks generated about $521 million in total revenue, a 10% jump compared to a pre-pandemic 2019 third quarter. CEO Marc Swanson said that bad weather and no international tourists, who normally make up 10% of the annual attendance, hurt the parks for the quarter. Swanson said that season pass sales are booming, saying the pass base rose by 25% this October compared to October 2019. SeaWorld Entertainment, which operates 12 theme parks across the country, is also opening a slew of new rides next year.

this Thanksgiving, an affordable turkey won't be on the list. This Thanksgiving is on track to be the most expensive in holiday history. For this, you can thank Biden's disastrous economic policies. Biden has already spent $1.9 trillion and is on track to spend trillions more on his radical agenda. Americans across the country are feeling it in their paychecks and pocketbooks, with inflation remaining at its highest rate in over a decade. While Americans pay more, they're getting less. Our supply chain crisis is causing empty shelves in grocery stores across America. Shipping delays may prevent families from receiving Christmas gifts on time. "Jan. 6 rioter said her 'white skin blond hair' meant no jail. Wrong, but not totally" via Leonard Pitts Jr. of the Miami Herald — Two months after posting a video of herself in the mob of right-wing thugs who stormed the U.S. Capitol, Jenna Ryan tweeted, "Definitely not going to jail. Sorry, I have blonde hair white skin, a great job, a great future, and I'm not going to jail." Last week, Ryan was sentenced to 60 days in prison. Was Ryan proven wrong? Or did she simply put the court in a position where it had no other choice? Yes, she got 60 days for invading the U.S. Capitol. But Sean Worsley got 60 months for possession of legally-prescribed medical marijuana. Yes, she got 60 days for attempting to overthrow the government. But Fair Wayne Bryant got life for stealing hedge clippers.

"After apologies and pardons, give a final exoneration to the Groveland Four" via the South Florida Sun-Sentinel editorial board — From the outset in 1949, the saga of the Groveland Four was a lynching disguised as a criminal case. History has vindicated them. This ugliest chapter in Florida legal history can finally be closed when a judge grants a new prosecutor's pending motion to set aside their ancient indictments and convictions, restoring their presumption of innocence. State Attorney William Gladson's motion is more than a formality. It teaches lessons, if we can learn from them. In this case, they show how easily justice can be perverted, especially when race is involved; why it is wrong for some politicians to try to erase such history from the American record; and the importance of electing Governors who will commute death sentences when guilt is in doubt and Cabinet members who will support them.

Please explain how Adam Foltz was on contract with the governor's office and helped with the previous maps, yet Mr. Kelly contends that no political operatives were involved in drawing up a "compromise" map that included elements of both legislative proposals and the one from the governor.

And to be clear – the governor's office contends that based on its interpretation – that it does not have to follow Fair Districts when it comes to diminishment based on its interpretation of the U.S. constitution even though there has not been any ruling directly on that point, but instead has to do with other cases outside of Florida. Correct?

GOP legislators bow to DeSantis on new maps for Florida

Politico Florida Playbook
Gary Fineout
April 12, 2022

Good Tuesday morning.

Setting me up — It shouldn't have been a surprise, but the announcement from Florida's Republican legislative leaders that they were defaulting to Gov. Ron DeSantis when it comes to finally sorting out Florida's redistricting mess struck like a thunderbolt.

Communique — Senate President Wilton Simpson and House Speaker Chris Sprowls made it clear on Monday that their staffs were not drawing any maps ahead of next week's planned special session because they were waiting for the DeSantis administration to give them something.

Skateaway — The logic is this: DeSantis submitted his own maps in January and then, late last month, proceeded to veto the one sent to him by the Legislature and ordered legislators back to town. The choices left, then, were to defy a governor who is wildly popular with the Republican base (during an election year) and let the courts sort it all out … or to play along. "Our goal during the special session is to pass a new congressional map that will both earn the governor's signature and withstand legal scrutiny," the two leaders wrote in a memo. So that's that.

The man's too strong — DeSantis is pushing hard on this, after contending that minority access districts (seats that are not minority-majority districts but still elect minority candidates) run afoul of federal laws. A few weeks ago, GOP legislators called DeSantis's position a "novel legal theory" that they suggested does not follow past court decisions — especially at the state level. Now they appear ready to give the governor want he wants.

Telegraph road — Democrats reacted furiously to the news. Abel Iraola, a spokesman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, called it a "unprecedented and shameless abdication" and said that any plan from DeSantis "would be a nonstarter and an attack on Black representation in Florida." Or, read another way: We'll see you in court. Rep. Al Lawson, the Black Democrat from North Florida whose district has been targeted for elimination by DeSantis, criticized legislators to "caving to the intimidation of DeSantis."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Sultans of swing — This is not completely set in stone. It's not clear if the governor wants legislators to use the map his office previously submitted, or if he plans to offer up a new proposal. Plus, there remain outstanding questions as to who helped the governor's office with its maps and whether they were drawn with partisan intent (which would violate Florida's voter approved anti-gerrymandering standards). There are lawsuits pending in both state and federal court — but with the clock ticking ahead of the August primary there may not be enough time for a court to resolve this mess in 2022.

— WHERE'S RON? — Nothing official announced for Gov. DeSantis.

MAPMAKER, MAPMAKER

WAITING — "Florida Legislature won't draft new redistricting map, deferring to DeSantis," by Miami Herald's Ana Ceballos: "In a highly unusual move, Republican legislative leaders on Monday deferred to Gov. Ron DeSantis to draft a new congressional map in an apparent attempt to appease the governor and dissolve intraparty tensions over the redistricting process in Florida. The decision, announced jointly by Senate President Wilton Simpson and House Speaker Chris Sprowls, comes two weeks after DeSantis vetoed a congressional map approved by the Legislature and called state lawmakers back into a special session to craft a new plan that would be to his liking."

CAMPAIGN MODE

IT'S A SMALL WORLD AFTER ALL — "Disney gave $190K to support Florida Republicans as lawmakers met," by POLITICO's Gary Fineout: Weeks before The Walt Disney Co. took a stand against Florida's contentious "Parental Rights in Education" law — which has been called the "Don't Say Gay" bill by its critics — the theme park operator and entertainment conglomerate donated $190,000 to support Florida Republicans.

Heigh-ho — The company gave $125,000 to the Republican Party of Florida and $65,000 to a committee that helps elect GOP state senators, led by incoming state Senate President Kathleen Passidomo. All the donations, which were disclosed in new campaign filings Monday, arrived as the state legislative session was getting underway in January. Disney also donated $25,000 to a leadership fund led by Senate Democratic Leader Lauren Book on the day before the start of the session.

DREAMING — "Nikki Fried says she's not dropping out of governor's race to run for Congress," by Sun Sentinel's Anthony Man: "Asked in a telephone interview about the chatter among some in Broward political circles, she burst out laughing, and emphatically said it's not true. Fried, the only statewide elected Democrat in Florida, was living in Broward before she ran for state agriculture commissioner, the job she currently holds, in 2018. The congressional district — mostly in Broward plus part of Palm Beach County — is represented by U.S. Rep. Ted Deutch will open up this year because the incumbent announced on Feb. 28 he isn't running for re-election."

Cc Steve Geller — "Fried said she's never considered it, and said supporters of one of the other Democratic gubernatorial candidates are responsible for spreading the notion. 'That is an absolute, made-up rumor by the Charlie Crist campaign because that's what they were hoping for,' she said. Some Crist supporters have been open in their desire for Fried to bow out of the primary, but the congressional rumor had circulated recently beyond his camp."

MEANWHILE SHE'S BUILDING A PLATFORM — "Fried outlines affordable housing plan, calls for emergency declaration," by POLITICO's Matt Dixon: Democratic gubernatorial candidate Nikki Fried wants to declare affordable housing in Florida an emergency, amplifying an issue Republican majorities in the state have come under fire for in recent weeks after adjourning the legislative session without doing much to address the issue. Fried, who is also the state's Agriculture Commissioner, rolled out her campaign's platform to fix Florida's worsening affordable housing crisis, which everyone agrees is a problem and is increasingly becoming a keystone issue headed into the 2022 midterms.

CAMPAIGN ROUNDUP — Americans for Prosperity Action announced on Monday it was endorsing the reelection campaigns of Republican Reps. Kat Cammack, Scott Franklin and Maria Elvira Salazar and that the organization will mobilize on their behalf in the 2022 election … The Florida Bail Agents Association announced it has endorsed Republican Chief Financial Officer Jimmy Patronis … state Rep. Kelly Skidmore, who is switching House districts due to redistricting, has picked up the endorsements of 35 elected officials including Agriculture Commissioner Nikki Fried, Rep. Lois Frankel and 24 legislators.

... DATELINE TALLAHASSEE ...

REMEMBER SURFSIDE — Florida Democrats including Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, who represents the South Florida town where a condominium collapse killed 98 people, are calling on Gov. Ron DeSantis to expand next week's special session on redistricting so legislators can enact changes to the state's condominium laws. All 11 Democrats in the state's congressional delegation signed a letter that went to the governor on Monday evening that called on him to focus attention on this "urgent manner."

Dear governor — Ninety-eight people died when the Champlain Towers partially collapsed. But disagreements over a revamp to the state's condominium laws resulted in legislators ending their regular session without taking action. The letter: "In the aftermath of the tragedy, you made a commitment that Florida would take action. On July 8, you stated 'if there is something identified that would have implications broader than Champlain Towers, then obviously we're [going to] take that and act as appropriate.' The letter also notes that last week a 60-unit building in North Miami Beach was evacuated after it was found to be structurally unsound: “Ensuring the safety of condominium residents cannot wait another year. Lives are at stake.”

‘THIS WILL BE TREMENDOUS’ — “DeSantis signs bill aimed at addressing ‘decline of fatherhood,’” by Tampa Bay Times’ Romy Ellenbogen and Rick Stroud: “Gov. Ron DeSantis signed a wide-ranging bill on Monday aimed at supporting fathers and children by connecting men with career services and boys with mentorship. The bill was a priority for outgoing House Speaker Chris Sprowls, who earlier in the year declared that Florida had a ‘fatherhood crisis.’ The bill, HB 7065, directs millions of dollars to initiatives meant to support men in being parents, such as having case managers help fathers find jobs and transition from prison. Money will also go toward distributing information about effective parenting, including a media campaign that hopes to use public figures and influencers as spokespeople.”

COMING SOON?— “Brandes takes first step to force special session on Florida property insurance,” by Tampa Bay Times’ Romy Ellenbogen: “Sen. Jeff Brandes said Monday he’s gotten enough signatures from state legislators to begin the process of calling a special session on Florida’s property insurance woes without the sign-off of legislative leadership. It’s the outgoing St. Petersburg Republican’s latest move to shake up the regular order of Tallahassee after a decade in office where he was known for being willing to buck his party. Brandes sent a letter last week to Senate President Wilton Simpson and House Speaker Chris Sprowls calling for a session dedicated to dealing with the state’s turbulent property insurance market.”

DATELINE D.C.

RUBIO TARGET OF RADIO AD — The Florida Immigrant Coalition is spending $25,000 on radio ads that are launching Tuesday on several Spanish radio stations. The new ad hits Sen. Marco Rubio for supporting immigration policies being pushed by Gov. Ron DeSantis including his administration’s push to stop licensing facilities that house migrant children on behalf of the federal government. The ads include audio from a voicemail from his mother that surfaced amid the immigration debate that occurred in Washington, D.C. nearly a decade ago. In the voicemail, Rubio’s mother tells him “don’t mess with the immigrants, my son.” The ad contends in Spanish that “Marco Rubio reneged where he comes from.” Rubio’s mother died in 2019.

MURPHY VISITS POLAND — “Florida Democrat ‘heartbroken’ by Ukrainian refugees at border with Poland,” by The Hill’s Chloe Folmar: “Rep. Stephanie Murphy (D-Fla.) said Sunday she was ‘heartbroken’ by the scene of Ukrainian refugees flowing across the Polish border, during a bipartisan trip to visit allies in the region. ‘As a refugee, and a mother of two young kids, I’m just heartbroken by what I’ve witnessed,’ Murphy said in a video. ‘I’m also amazed by the resilience of the Ukrainian people and inspired by their strength.’ The congressional delegation is at the Poland-Ukraine border meeting with American and European officials responding to the Ukrainian refugee crisis.”

He scaled a construction crane and hung a banner with a picture of his son, one of the 17 people killed at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in 2018. The banner offered a critical message to Biden that ‘45k people died from gun violence on your watch.’ In a video posted to Twitter, Oliver said he had requested a meeting with Biden a month earlier. Weeks later, Oliver was one of Biden’s invited guests in the White House Rose Garden as the president announced new federal regulations cracking down on ghost guns, untraceable weapons that can be assembled from a kit.”

No, there are no plans to bring back mandates that students wear facial coverings on campus, but at least one school district — Broward County’s — is discussing a legal challenge to a state-funding decision related to mask mandates. The three South Florida school districts — Broward, Palm Beach and Miami-Dade — could be out more than $100 million combined, money that goes directly to schools for employee bonuses.”

THE GUNSHINE STATE

ASKED TO LEAVE — “Entire panel of jurors released when 8 distraught people balk at deciding fate of confessed Parkland killer,” by Sun Sentinel’s Brittany Wallman and Rafael Olmeda: “A judge dismissed an entire panel of 60 jurors Monday afternoon after too many became visibly upset at the prospect of deciding the fate of the Parkland mass shooter. The emotional moment was the most challenging part of a day that otherwise went smoothly, but it served as a reminder of the passionate currents running through the sentencing trial of Nikolas Cruz, who is facing the death penalty for 17 counts of murder.”

SHOWDOWN — “Trial opens in Florida opioid lawsuit case against Walgreens,” by Associated Press’ Curt Anderson: “A trial opened Monday in Florida’s opioid epidemic lawsuit against the Walgreens pharmacy chain, which state officials accuse of prioritizing profits over health by improperly dispensing millions of powerful painkillers that caused tens of thousands of deaths. The trial, in Pasco County north of Tampa, comes after other defendants in the Florida lawsuit including the CVS drug store chain settled for an estimated $870 million. The state could seek similar massive damages from Walgreens in the jury trial expected to last a few weeks.”

Senate Committee Debates, Approves 'Elections Police'

The Senate's election law committee on Tuesday moved forward with legislation (SB 524) creating an Election Crimes and Security Office to pursue tips about possible election fraud in a bid to make voting more secure. The effort was criticized by Democrats on the Senate Ethics and Elections Committee as an ongoing push by Republicans to make voting harder. Opponents said the idea – a scaled-back version of a proposal by GOP Gov. Ron DeSantis – will invite false accusations and complained that they had little time to read through or ask questions about a newly amended version of the proposal. The bill has other changes, including potentially much higher fines for third-party voter registration organizations that break existing election laws, and a provision preventing local communities from using ranked-choice voting systems. It also adds a layer of what the sponsor, Sen. Travis Hutson, said was additional security, requiring people voting by mail to include part of their driver's license, state ID, or social security number with their ballot to have officials match to make sure it's the same as the number given by the person who requested the ballot. Elections officials warn that that part of the proposal may make more work for local officials, because voters often have trouble following detailed instructions for all the things they are supposed to do when returning a ballot. Opponents of the legislation noted that the governor and elections officials have said that Florida ran a very smooth election in 2020, and asked why, especially after the passage last year of a major elections overhaul, officials again needed to make changes in the election process. The measure was approved on a party-line vote, but has two more Senate committee stops before the floor. USA Today Network / Associated Press

House Readies Redistricting Proposal for Floor Vote

The full House on Tuesday began the process of combining both state House and Senate district map proposals into one bill, SJR 100. Representatives brought up on the floor the Senate redistricting map, which was passed by the full Senate just last week. Questions regarding the 40-district Senate map proposal were left mostly unanswered because House Redistricting Committee chair Rep. Tom Leek, R-Daytona Beach, did not help draft the Senate map – it was done by the Senate. Republicans referred Democrats asking questions to their Senate counterparts. Questions relating to the 120-district House map were mostly made by Democrats and focused on the process of how the maps were drawn, centering around minority districts. The House could vote and approve the map and send it back to the Senate as early as Wednesday.

Legislation strengthening building safety inspections in Florida cleared the Senate Regulated Industries Committee on Tuesday. The bills are in response to last year's collapse of the Champlain Towers South in Surfside and include recommendations made by the architects and engineers involved in the Surfside Working Group. SB 1702 and SB 7042 establish mandatory minimum structural inspections and include other inspection requirements relating to the age of the building, how many floors it has, how close to the coastline it is, and how old the structure is. Similar bills in the House have been filed but have yet to be introduced in committee. FES Press Release / Florida Politics

GOP Legislature to deliver for DeSantis, but tensions mount on redistricting, budget

Florida Politics
Gray Rohrer
March 7, 2022

Gov. Ron DeSantis' fellow Republicans in charge of the Legislature are poised to send him most of his top priorities this week, the last week of the regularly scheduled Legislative Session. But they're also bracing to defy him in other key areas, potentially incurring the wrath of his veto pen.

DeSantis-backed bills to ban critical race theory in schools, establish an election fraud police squad, prohibit companies helping the federal government to transport undocumented immigrants to Florida from doing business with the state, roll back high-stakes testing requirements in pre-K-12 schools, and hike pay for state law enforcement officials are on track to clear the Legislature before lawmakers adjourn Friday.

Yet other pieces of his agenda are flailing in the final days. A much-vaunted five-month moratorium on Florida's 25-cent gas tax, something DeSantis said was needed to put a dent in rampant inflation, hasn't been discussed by lawmakers. Money for the Job Growth Grant Fund, a key program for DeSantis that allows him to issue funds to local governments and state colleges for infrastructure and job training projects, is not included in the latest budget talks.

The biggest confrontation between lawmakers and DeSantis, though, is over redistricting. DeSantis said he would veto the congressional redistricting plan the Legislature sent him last week.

"I will veto the congressional reapportionment plan currently being debated by the House. DOA," DeSantis posted on Twitter Friday, as the House was discussing the plan.

The day before DeSantis issued his veto threat, Senate President Wilton Simpson, a Trilby Republican, suggested he focus on the things lawmakers were passing, not what might not get through.

"He's clearly been our Governor for three years. He's had wins. The big winner of these bills that we're doing is the state of Florida, and collectively what the House and Senate will produce are substantial wins for this state," Simpson said. "To single into any one particular thing as a failure is taking the wrong approach."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

DeSantis has been more vocal this year about pushing his agenda than in years past. When the Senate unveiled a budget bill that would divert funding for the Everglades Agricultural Area Reservoir, an infrastructure project in South Florida vital to preventing polluted water from being pumped into estuaries on either side of Lake Okeechobee, DeSantis slammed the proposal, a Simpson priority.

The Senate adjusted the bill to ensure the reservoir's funding, but it wasn't enough for critics of the bill who fear it favors the sugar industry in the management of water at the expense of the general public, and puts South Florida waterways in jeopardy of a repeat of the blue-green algae that polluted waterways in the previous decade. It's unclear whether the change was enough to gain the governor's support.

After DeSantis' veto threat on redistricting, House and Senate budget negotiators have been including many of his recommendations that had been ignored in their initial spending plans.

Sunday night, lawmakers inserted $10 million for DeSantis' plan to reactivate the Florida State Guard, a defunct World War II-era force that would supplement the Florida National Guard, into the latest budget offers. DeSantis' plan had been ignored by lawmakers during the first 54 days of the 60-day Session.

Florida Legislature Blocks DeSantis' Redistricted Map, Proposes Inferior Map

Breitbart

February 11, 2022

The Republican-controlled Florida legislature on Thursday opposed Gov. Ron DeSantis' (R) redistricted map that would have advantaged Republicans in the November midterms.

After Florida's Supreme Court did not render a helpful advisory opinion on DeSantis's proposed 20-8 redistricted map, the establishment Republican leaders of the Florida legislature, House Speaker Chris Sprowls (R) and President of the Senate Wilton Simpson (R), immediately put forward a subpar map that hands Democrats two more seats (18-10).

DeSantis's spokeswoman Taryn Fenske told the Washington Post that state Republicans were "hopeful the Supreme Court would provide clarity to legal questions surrounding the maps," but in the wake of a non-opinion, DeSantis will consider the legislature's weaker map.

The legislature's proposal keeps Rep. Al Lawson's (D) district in North Florida while also being less aggressive in Central Florida:

DeSantis' general counsel Ryan Newman told the Post the current map from 2015, which was drawn by a Democrat judge, is a "flagrant gerrymander." Newman said DeSantis's proposed map was submitted over that concern:

We submitted an alternative proposal, which we can support, that adheres to federal and state requirements and addresses our legal concerns, while working to increase district compactness, minimize county splits where feasible and protect minority voting populations.

Adam Kincaid, executive director of the National Republican Redistricting Trust, reframed from slamming the Florida legislature's weaker map but did call DeSantis's map a "completely legal congressional proposal."

Establishment Republicans in Florida may have produced a weaker map because Democrats have shown a willingness to fight. According to the Wall Street Journal, Barack Obama's former attorney general, Eric Holder, who has successfully defeated

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Republican state lawmakers in the court system by implementing a “sue to blue” strategy, has likely intimidated Republicans. Holder has reportedly been aggressively using the court system to produce state maps that are “gerrymandered” — all the while accusing Republicans of gerrymandering their way to victory.

About 75 congressional districts in seven states will reportedly be settled in the Courts.

Nationwide, Republicans were hoping the Florida legislature would be legally aggressive in state redistricting. But Republicans have done poorly. New York Magazine reported in December that Democrats were doing “weirdly well” in nationwide redistricting battles, echoing Wasserman’s analysis that Democrats have taken a two-to-three seat advantage in the redistricting battle, where Republicans were expected to dominate.

In Missouri, for instance, the Republican-controlled legislature cannot agree on a 7-1 GOP favored map, placing in doubt whether Republicans can expand their delegation by one. If the Republican-controlled legislature does agree and forward the 7-1 map to Gov. Mike Parson (R) to sign, the governor’s communications team has suggested he would veto the map.

Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) controls the speakership’s gavel by five votes. Republicans will need to perform very well in November to take back the House. Generic congressional polling shows Republicans have the momentum heading into the November midterms.

Florida high court refuses DeSantis request on redistricting

Tampa Bay Times
Mary Ellen Klas
February 10, 2022

TALLAHASSEE — In a 5-0 ruling with two justices recused, the Florida Supreme Court on Thursday rejected a request by Gov. Ron DeSantis to provide advice on the legality of changing the configuration of a North Florida congressional district held by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat.

The decision now puts the pressure on the Florida House, which has delayed completion of its congressional map awaiting the court's decision.

Speaking to reporters Thursday afternoon, House Speaker Chris Sprowls, R-Palm Harbor, indicated that his chamber was unlikely to adopt the governor's approach.

"The governor's question about the North Florida district and its contiguous nature raises a novel legal argument,'' he said. "We're probably not in a position to be able to address novel legal arguments in our process, which is why had we had gotten guidance from the Supreme Court that may have enlightened that."

In the absence of that guidance, he said, the House's congressional maps will comply with current law and "you can probably anticipate that that North Florida district that was in a previous House map will be similar or the same."

Less than an hour after he made those remarks, the House posted its proposed congressional redistricting map on the Legislature's joint website. It shows the configuration of District 5 very similar to the one approved unanimously by the Senate last week.

The governor asked the court for a rare advisory opinion in light of a 2017 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court that he said muddled the questions around the Voting Rights Act and whether congressional District 5 was still constitutional. The attorney general and the Republican-controlled Legislature also asked the court to weigh in on the questions.

But Democrat-backed advocacy groups argued in a series of amicus briefs filed Monday that the court did not have jurisdiction and blasted the request as an "ill-conceived attempt to hijack the process" and a partisan attempt to change long-established Florida law.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

They warned that if the court opined on a map that didn't yet exist, it could open the door to unprecedented judicial interference in future legislation at the request of the governor.

In its five-page ruling Thursday, the court did not address the question of jurisdiction but instead rejected the request because it said the issue the governor asked was too broad and required a "fact-intensive analysis and consideration of other congressional districts, not just District 5."

"This court's advisory opinions to the governor are generally limited to narrow questions," the justices wrote in an opinion from the court rather than any specific justice. "Here, the scope of the governor's request is broad and contains multiple questions that implicate complex federal and state constitutional matters and precedents interpreting the Voting Rights Act of 1965."

The court also noted that the governor's request doesn't provide it with the data record that previous courts have ruled is necessary to determine the voting strength of a minority district: "a functional analysis of statistical evidence, such as the voting age of minority populations and election results."

It noted that "a record will assist the judiciary in answering the complex federal and state constitutional issues implicated by the governor's request."

In a statement, the governor's press secretary, Christina Pushaw, said: "While we were hopeful the Supreme Court would provide clarity to legal questions surrounding the maps that are under consideration, we agree with the court's opinion that there are important issues that must be addressed quickly. We look forward to working with the Legislature to finalize a new congressional map for the 2022 election."

Senate Democratic Leader Lauren Book of Plantation, who supported the Senate congressional and legislative maps drawn by staff, commended the court for its "swift review of the governor's unprecedented moves in the legislative redistricting process and for their respect of the separation of powers between branches of government."

The court also said it expects to be engaged in the issue in the future. Under state law, the Florida attorney general petitions the Florida Supreme Court, and the court must approve the congressional and legislative maps before they become law for the 2022 election cycle.

The Legislature has completed its House and Senate maps and is waiting for the attorney general to petition the court.

The once-a-decade process of redistricting has historically led to lengthy legal challenges through both state and federal court.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“While this court acknowledges the importance of the issues presented by the governor and the expressed need for quick resolution and finality, history shows that the constitutionality of a final redistricting bill for all congressional districts will be subject to more judicial review through subsequent challenges in court,” the opinion stated.

It is unknown whether the full court will be involved in a future redistricting ruling.

Chief Justice Charles Canady, whose wife is a candidate for the state House, recused himself, as did Justice Alan Lawson, who is not related to the congressman. Neither provided a reason.

Canady had written the dissenting opinion that rejected the Legislature’s 2015 attempt at redrawing its congressional map.

Subject:	Miami Herald: DeSantis proposes congressional map that dilutes minority voting strength

DeSantis proposes congressional map that dilutes minority voting strength

Miami Herald
Mary Ellen Klas
January 18, 2022

Breaking with tradition, Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis inserted himself directly into the redistricting fight by submitting a map that experts say would reduce Black and Hispanic voting strength in congressional districts and raise new questions about his commitment to the Fair District standards of the Florida Constitution.

The map, posted to the Florida Redistricting web site on Sunday by DeSantis' general counsel, Ryan Newman, would create five districts that are at 50% Hispanic voting age population but experts say that may not be enough to elect Hispanic candidates in districts with high numbers of voting-age Hispanic non-citizens.

The map would also reduce the number of Black-majority districts in Florida from four to two, eliminating Black districts in North Florida and Orlando and leaving two in South Florida.

Those changes came under fire by Democrats and voting advocacy organizations who said they violate both the provisions of the federal Voting Rights Act and the Fair Districts provisions of the Florida Constitution, which bar lawmakers from adopting maps that reduce minority voting strength.

"In stark contrast to the Senate maps, whoever drew these maps seems to have totally disregarded the Fair Districts provisions of the Florida Constitution and federal law,'' said Ellen Freidin, president of Fair Districts Now, the advocacy organization formed to monitor the implementation of the Fair Districts amendments.

"This map dilutes the power of minority voters,'' she said. "It reduces the number of districts in which African Americans could elect a representative of their choice by 50%, and reduces voting power of Hispanic citizens despite the dramatic growth of the Hispanic population in Florida over the last 10 years. In addition, the map appears to have been drawn intentionally to favor Republicans."

Cecile Scoon, president of the League of Women Voters of Florida, which was among the plaintiffs that successfully challenged the congressional and state Senate maps in the 2010 redistricting cycle, said the governor's map raises concerns.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“A preliminary review of the governor’s redistricting plan for congressional maps seems to give inadequate adherence to the Fair Districts created by Floridian Citizen Initiative in 2010 and the VRA [Voting Rights Act] of 1965,’’ she said in a statement.

THE LOGIC BEHIND GOVERNOR’S MAP

The governor’s office did not immediately respond to requests for comment, but Newman said over the weekend that the administration has “legal concerns with the congressional redistricting maps under consideration in the Legislature.” He did not elaborate on his concerns.

“We have submitted an alternative proposal, which we can support, that adheres to federal and state requirements and addresses our legal concerns, while working to increase district compactness, minimize county splits where feasible, and protect minority voting populations,’’ he said, according to a statement published in Florida Politics. “Because the governor must approve any congressional map passed by the Legislature, we wanted to provide our proposal as soon as possible and in a transparent manner.”

The governor’s proposed map creates five Hispanic-majority districts, leaving one district in Orlando but adding a fourth district in South Florida which currently has three. It turns Congressional District 26, now held by Republican Congressman Mario Diaz Balart, into a district that stretches from Hialeah to Collier County. While the proposal is about 40% Hispanic voting age population, it performs as a white district in a primary.

The proposal also changes the composition of current Congressional District 20, the Black majority district previously held by the late Democratic Congressman Alcee Hastings, by adding Hispanics to it, making it around 40% voting age population and diluting the influence of Black voters.

The DeSantis map would also convert Black-majority districts in North and Central Florida into non-majority districts, leaving only two Black-majority districts, both in South Florida.

The partisan breakdown of the map would give Republicans an advantage of 18 to 10, including the new district Florida acquires because of population growth. The current partisan breakdown is 16 to 11.

By contrast, the map the Senate Reapportionment Committee approved last week on a 10-2 bipartisan vote, leaves the Republican advantage where it is today. Under the Senate plan, if the 2020 elections were held today, 16 districts would have voted for former President Donald Trump and 12 would have voted for President Joe Biden. Two Miami-based districts, Congressional Districts 26 and 27, are considered virtual toss-ups and could lean Democratic or Republican.

U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Tallahassee Democrat who represents the Black-majority district that was first drawn with the support of Republicans in 1992, told the Tallahassee Democrat on Tuesday that the governor's plan would wipe out Black access in the region.

"I don't know why the governor wants to pick a fight with me," he said, noting that the plan came out on the Martin Luther King holiday weekend. "In all my years in government I've never seen the governor's office submit a map before."

Unlike the Senate, the governor's map takes an approach similar to one taken by legislators in Texas, where they drew white majority congressional districts in places previously represented by minorities, including in regions with Hispanic and Black minority growth. The map is now being challenged by the U.S. Department of Justice for violating the Voting Rights Act.

"It does have a very similar feel to those Texas maps that came out,'' said state Rep. Evan Jenne, D-Dania Beach, in response to a reporters' question. "I think probably that's where this is coming from."

REDISTRICTING IS A HIGHLY POLITICIZED PROCESS

Every 10 years legislators are required to revise the state's political boundaries for legislative and congressional districts to accommodate changes in population and ensure that every citizen is fairly represented.

Because the political stakes are very high, every map has been subject to intensive litigation and, in every redistricting cycle since the 1990s, courts have concluded that because there are many Hispanics in Florida who are not registered voters, a district must have more than 50% Hispanic voting age population to effectively elect an Hispanic to office.

There are traditionally two approaches partisans have taken to map drawing. One is to draw a favorable district as conservatively as possible to avoid litigation and the other is to maximize representation and take chances in court.

The Senate congressional map, which had been praised by Democrats as fair and reasonable, however was criticized by Republicans.

Steve Bannon, the former Donald Trump chief of staff, posted the governor's number on his Gettr account on Friday with an appeal.

"We need five more MAGA seats in Florida,'' he wrote. "Contact Ron DeSantis' office and tell him to sty focused on redistricting in his state to be sure MAGA gets these seats."

Matt Isbell, a redistricting expert working with Democrats, called the governor's map "a stunt."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“DeSantis wants to appear he’s still the MAGA boy, so he’s proposed a map that is purposely ridiculous — namely destroying minority seats. So this is just a stunt,’’ he said in a post on Twitter. “Feel free to obsess over it. But I recommend ignoring.”

Unlike the legislative maps, the governor has veto power over the congressional map, and this is the first time in Florida history a Florida governor has publicly proposed a congressional redistricting map, experts said.

DeSantis, who has used his three years in office to advance a vigorously partisan agenda and to upset the norms of the office, is also the only governor who served for four years in Congress before being elected as the state’s chief executive.

But it became clear on Tuesday that the Senate, which is scheduled to vote out its proposed map as early as Wednesday, may not be ready to budge from its plan. The Senate had set a 2 p.m. deadline for any amendments to its maps and by the deadline no one had submitted the governor’s map.

“We are confident in the constitutionality of the maps passed by the Senate Committee on Reapportionment,’’ Sen. Ray Rodrigues, chair of the Senate Reapportionment Committee said in a statement to the Herald/Times. “Questions about the governor’s position on the maps should be directed to the Governor’s Office.”

Unlike many Democrats, Scoon of the League of Women Voters of Florida, criticized the Senate’s congressional and state Senate maps saying they do not go far enough to protect minority voting strength.

“It is undeniable that Florida’s minority population has grown since the creation of the current maps in 2016, which used data from the 2010 Census,” she said in a statement. “At this time, it does not appear as if the Senate has explored the possibility that additional minority districts could be created with data from the 2020 Census. The proper steps must be taken before new district lines are approved to ensure that African American and Hispanic voters are fairly represented in the political process.”

Senate redistricting chair vows to redeem process as he plans to limit public's input

Miami Herald
Mary Ellen Klas
September 20, 2021

In an effort to "take steps against the shadow process" that marred legislative redistricting 10 years ago, Senate Reapportionment Committee Chair Ray Rodrigues on Monday announced new rules that put limits on the input the Senate gets from average citizens, political consultants and lobbyists.

The Senate will now require more disclosure from anyone who attempts to address legislators in a public meeting by requiring them to submit a disclosure form that indicates if they are a lobbyist or getting expenses paid. New rules will prohibit legislators from considering maps submitted by the public, unless a lawmaker explicitly requested the map in writing. The Senate will also require legislators to retain all records of communications they get about maps.

And, in what may be the most radical change of all, Rodrigues said the Senate is considering abandoning public meetings to collect citizen input from communities across the state to hear how they would like the maps drawn.

"If you go back and look at the litigation from the last cycle, the [Florida Supreme] Court was very clear that we're no longer allowed to use communities of interest because that was not articulated in the Fair Districts amendments,'' said Rodrigues, R-Estero, during the inaugural meeting of the Senate Reapportionment Committee. The Fair Districts amendments to the state Constitution prohibit legislators from drawing maps intended to protect incumbents or political parties.

Rodrigues said the U.S. Supreme Court in Shelby v. Holder in 2013 removed the requirement that legislators do a "traveling road show" to determine which communities of interest want to be kept together in legislative and congressional districts. Now he questions whether public hearings "makes sense in Florida."

"So, given that the key piece of information that we received from this roads how is no longer applicable to the drawing of the districts, my personal position is I'm not sure we should spend the time to do that," he said.

The House Redistricting Committee, chaired by Rep. Tom Leek, R-Ormond Beach, will hold its first meeting Wednesday. The two committees are expected to launch a website in the next week that will provide map-drawing software for the public to use to draw maps.

GOAL TO REDUCE OUTSIDE INFLUENCE

Rodrigues said the goal of the new Senate rules is to prevent legislators from using political consultants to illegally influence redistricting as they did 10 years ago, when the courts invalidated the legislatively-drawn Senate and congressional maps. Florida's courts ruled that legislators violated the Fair Districts amendments.

"I intend for this committee to conduct the process in a manner that is consistent with case law developed during the last decade, is beyond reproach and free from any kind of unconstitutional intent,'' he said.

Rodrigues said he wants the Legislature to restore public trust so that the courts give it "legislative deference" again, and when the maps are reviewed the court will start with the assumption that the maps are legal.

After the court ordered legislators back to the drawing board in 2015, "the Florida Senate was in a position where they had to record each of their meetings,'' Rodrigues recalled. "They had lost the legislative deference, and they'd lost the presumption that any map they brought forth was constitutional."

He vowed to change that this time.

"This committee will pass maps that are compliant with the Constitution, that are compliant with all of our Florida Statutes, and that meet all federal requirements,'' Rodrigues said. "We're going to be constitutional, and we're going to preserve our legislative deference that exists. We're not going to give the courts any reason to assume that anything we do is unconstitutional."

OUTSIDE MAPS MUST HAVE SENATE SPONSOR

In addition to requiring additional disclosure, the Senate will require any map submitted by the public for inclusion into the Senate proposal to be sponsored by a senator. Publicly submitted maps that do not have a Senate sponsor will be available on the joint website, www.floridaredistricting.gov, for members to review. A similar process was followed last time but many publicly-drawn maps were rejected by Senate leadership in favor of parts of maps drawn by political consultants.

The new appearance form will apply to all committees, not just the Reapportionment Committee. Speakers will be asked to check one of the following: "I am appearing without compensation or sponsorship," "I am a registered lobbyist" or "I am not a lobbyist, but received something of value for my appearance (travel, meals, lodging, etc.)."

It is not clear what kind of enforcement the Senate will employ or what penalties there will be for violations.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Senate committee is comprised of eight Republicans, four Democrats and three senators who are serving in the Senate for the first time. Despite that, two of freshmen, Republican Sens. Danny Burgess, R-Inverness, and Jennifer Bradley, R-Fleming Island, were chosen by Senate President Wilton Simpson to chair the legislative and congressional redistricting subcommittees.

Sen. Lauren Book, the Senate Democratic leader from Plantation, could not be reached for comment on what she thinks of the new rules or whether she had any input on which Democrats were chosen to be members of the committee.

Meanwhile, as redistricting software becomes more accessible for the general public, several groups will be monitoring and analyzing what Florida's legislators draw.

Political students at the University of Florida will download every map proposed by House and Senate leaders to provide the public with an independent analysis of which communities, and incumbents and political parties the maps help and hurt, said UF political science professor Michael McDonald.

He said he has been working with a team of researchers for the last four years to collecting precinct boundaries and data. They have merged the Census data with precinct boundaries and they will be building maps using online map-drawing apps.

UF's political science department will also conduct a map-drawing contest for students, offering up $100 gift cards for those who produce winning maps by Oct. 30, McDonald said.

Another non-partisan group, RepresentUS, has teamed up with the Princeton Gerrymandering Project to create the Redistricting Report Card, an algorithm that identifies gerrymandering as it happens and gives states grades on proposed voting maps.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Supreme Court told Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis on Thursday it will not answer his question on whether a Black congressman's district is unconstitutional, saying it's too complicated to simply answer in an advisory opinion.

DeSantis has interjected himself into the once-a-decade process of drawing new congressional maps, something highly unusual for a governor to do. The House and Senate have considered maps that largely left Democratic U.S. Rep. Al Lawson's district intact, but DeSantis is pushing a map that would make his district lean Republican.

After submitting his map, DeSantis asked the Supreme Court if Lawson's district is unconstitutional. The district runs from Jacksonville to Gadsden County west of Tallahassee, a distance of about 200 miles (about 321 kilometers). DeSantis questioned whether drawing it to contain Black communities so far apart met the state and federal constitutions.

"The scope of the Governor's request is broad and contains multiple questions that implicate complex federal and state constitutional matters and precedents interpreting the Voting Rights Act of 1965," it wrote.

The governor's office accepted the opinion gracefully.

"While we were hopeful the Supreme Court would provide clarity to legal questions surrounding the maps that are under consideration, we agree with the Court's opinion that there are important issues that must be addressed quickly," DeSantis spokeswoman Taryn Fenske said in an email.

Lawson praised the decision in a statement emailed to reporters.

"Ron DeSantis wanted the Supreme Court to violate the separation of powers and engage the judicial branch in partisan politics. They wisely and correctly rejected his request. Yes, Ron DeSantis lost today, but more importantly, democracy and the Constitution won," he said.

Democratic state Rep. Kelly Skidmore, who is on the House congressional redistricting committee, said she was glad the court recognized the separation of powers in the government branches.

“It’s time to set aside this political distraction and get back to work. Floridians expect us to create fair maps that uphold the Florida and U.S. constitutions, and that’s exactly what we plan to do,” she said in an emailed statement.

Mark Lane: Gov. DeSantis rejects redistricting map so let the litigation begin

Daytona Beach News-Journal
Mark Lane
March 24, 2022

This was supposed to be the year of no-drama redistricting. And back in January, when the Florida Legislature convened, that's what it looked like. Now, not so much.

On March 4, the Florida House and Senate paused from the culture wars long enough to pass new maps of U.S. House districts. Two, in fact — a Plan A and a Plan B.

Plan A is closer to what the governor wants. Plan B is what goes into effect should the courts strike down the governor's map. Always good to have a spare.

Redistricting, like locusts, is something that emerges every 10 years. That's when lines for congressional, legislative and even local commission districts are redrawn to reflect population shifts. If this isn't done, voters in high-growth places would have less say than voters in low-growth places. Before this was required in Florida, fast-growing eastern Florida and South Florida were second-class citizens to powerful rural North Florida interests.

The big difference between Plan A and Plan B maps is U.S. House District 5, a North Florida district ably represented by a Black congressman, Rep. Al Lawson, D-Tallahassee. Gov. Ron DeSantis maintains that Lawson's district is an unconstitutional gerrymander even though the map was handed down by the Florida Supreme Court which seemed to know what it was doing in December 2015, during that last drawn-out round of redistricting, after legislators were unable to agree to a map.

But there have been new court rulings since then, and the governor appears to believe that more conservative activist courts might overrule the state's Fair Districting amendments as well as sections of the Voting Rights Act to give Republican candidates a clearer path to victory. A not-unreasonable expectation, but still, no sure thing.

Back-up map drawn

The Legislature's two-map approach, though unprecedented, seemed like a reasonable compromise. (If you put aside what Plan A does to minority-access districts, that is.) We'll use your map, Mr. Governor, but if the courts say no, then we'll just need to use a spare that looks more like the map we use now. An approach that could move things along. Remember that candidate qualifying begins June 13, not so long from now.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But compromise is not the DeSantis Way. He pledged on Twitter to veto the bill the same day it passed. (“I will veto the congressional reapportionment plan currently being debated by the House. DOA.”) The result is likely to be what everyone said they wanted to avoid this year, namely a protracted legal fight that would leave the map uncertain past the next election cycle.

Sure enough, litigants already have lined up to fight over the maps. A federal lawsuit filed the day the Legislature adjourned asked the court to intervene because “there is a significant likelihood that Florida’s political branches will fail to reach consensus to enact a lawful congressional district plan in time to be used in the upcoming 2022 elections.”

Which, whether or not the court takes up the case, seems a fair assessment. Court cases that demand major shifts in established law don’t happen overnight and Florida may once again be in the same situation it was in a decade ago when redistricting dragged on for five long years, through multiple levels of the court system, and multiple Florida Supreme Court actions.

Back in January, legislative leaders were promising a cleaner, faster, fairer process this time around. And up until the governor inserted himself into the process, it looked as though that would happen. But now, at least for the congressional maps, it looks like Florida is in for redistricting 2010 style — contentious, drawn out and nakedly partisan.

One could easily get the impression that almost nothing was learned from that exercise.

Gov. DeSantis urges Legislature to pass his congressional redistricting map

In a visit to the Jacksonville market Thursday, Gov. Ron DeSantis was unambiguous in communicating his expectations about the upcoming Special Session.

Legislators are charged with drawing the once-a-decade congressional redistricting map, and after the Governor vetoed a product he didn't like earlier this month, he laid down some expectations for the legislative meetings commencing Apr. 19.

"I think the Legislature's going to pass something that will get my signature," DeSantis said, responding to a question from WJXT's Jim Piggott.

"At the end of the day, we were very clear about what the Legislature was doing, that that would not get my signature. I think that there was a belief, a mistaken belief that somehow I didn't mean what I said," DeSantis said.

"Guys, I mean what I say," he emphasized. "And so we ended up in this position. And so pass something that will get my signature."

DeSantis signaled proposals from his own Governor's Office as ones that earn his signature, maps that take aim at a traditional minority access district (MAD) in North Florida.

"Those will get my signature. If they depart from that, we'll see. But we know certain things can get my signature."

"At the end of the day," DeSantis added, "it's in everybody's best interest to do something, get a product done, and just move on with the election season."

One particular issue is what happens to Florida's 5th Congressional District, a MAD represented by Rep. Al Lawson extending from Gadsden to Duval Counties.

DeSantis' General Counsel put forth maps that would eliminate CD 5, which protects the interests of Black voters in North Florida by connecting Jacksonville and Tallahassee in what he has said is an "unconstitutional gerrymander."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Governor's map would essentially take Duval County's part of Lawson's district and meld it with Clay and Nassau counties, creating a seat with a Republican advantage.

DeSantis seeks to press the GOP advantage in ways the Legislature did not want to during Session: The Legislature's primary map (H 8019) and the backup maps (H 8015), vetoed by DeSantis, both have 18 districts won by Republican Donald Trump in the 2020 election and 10 won by Democrat Joe Biden. The Governor's last map had 20 Trump districts and eight where Biden won.

A lawsuit asks courts to settle a DeSantis-legislature fight over a North Florida congressional seat

News Service of Florida/WFSU
March 13, 2022

With Gov. Ron DeSantis vowing to veto a congressional redistricting plan, a lawsuit filed late Friday asks a federal court to set new U.S. House districts that would be used in this fall's elections.

The lawsuit, filed in the federal Northern District of Florida by two groups and five voters, is similar to a case filed Friday in Leon County circuit court. The crux is that DeSantis' threat to veto a redistricting plan drawn up by state lawmakers jeopardizes the chances of reaching agreement on a map — and that judges should step in.

"Unlike the Legislature, Governor DeSantis has demonstrated that he is not willing to abide by the law, or sign a congressional plan that does, making an impasse highly likely," said the federal lawsuit, filed on behalf of the groups Common Cause Florida and FairDistricts Now and voters in Leon, Gadsden, Orange, Lee and Miami-Dade counties. "To date, the Legislature and Governor DeSantis have not reached agreement on a congressional district plan."

Lawyers for the plaintiffs wrote that a three-judge panel of the federal district court should implement "a new congressional district plan that complies" with the U.S. Constitution. The lawsuit contends that without a new map, the state could be left with lines based on the 2010 U.S. census rather than the 2020 census, which would be unconstitutional because of population changes.

The lawsuit names as defendants DeSantis, Secretary of State Laurel Lee, Senate President Wilton Simpson, R-Trilby, House Speaker Chris Sprowls, R-Palm Harbor, and four lawmakers who led redistricting committees and subcommittees.

The Leon County case was filed on behalf of nine residents of Orange, Hillsborough, Pinellas, Marion, Lee and Duval counties. It named as defendants Lee and Attorney General Ashley Moody.

The lawsuits are the latest twists in the once-a-decade reapportionment process after DeSantis in January proposed a congressional plan that differed significantly from maps being considered by the Republican-controlled Senate and House. Ultimately, trying to satisfy DeSantis, lawmakers passed an unusual plan that included a primary map and a backup map.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But DeSantis remained dissatisfied and said he would veto the plan. DeSantis wants a map that likely would be more favorable to Republicans. But critics argue that changes sought by DeSantis would be unconstitutional, at least in part because they could lead to fewer minorities getting elected.

Lawmakers have not formally sent their plan to DeSantis, but uncertainty remained Friday as the House and Senate finished most of their work in the annual legislative session.

Simpson told reporters that it's too early to say what will happen if DeSantis vetoes the legislative proposal.

"If the governor vetoes the congressional map, it'll either be handled again through the Legislature or through the court system," Simpson said. "And we don't know the result of that yet. So, I don't really know that it would be proper to comment."

The 25-page federal lawsuit points to a June deadline for candidates to qualify for congressional races. Adding to the questions is that Florida will see its congressional delegation grow from 27 to 28 seats this year because of population growth, requiring a new district to be factored into the map.

"Given the circumstances, it is a near-certainty that there will be an impasse requiring judicial intervention," the federal lawsuit said. "It is highly likely that the Legislature and the governor will fail to pass a lawful congressional redistricting plan in time to prepare for and be used during the upcoming 2022 congressional election, leaving the existing plan in place … and denying Florida voters' fundamental right to vote in equally proportioned districts."

Lawmakers also passed redrawn state House and Senate maps, which did not draw challenges at the Florida Supreme Court — a fact that the federal lawsuit noted. DeSantis did not have veto power over the House and Senate maps.

"The Legislature has shown that it largely has the capacity to comply with state and federal law," the lawsuit said. "For instance, in February 2022, the Legislature passed state legislative maps for the Florida House and Senate, both of which reasonably complied with the law and, for the first time in state history, drew no objections from third parties when they were reviewed by the Florida Supreme Court."

DeSantis Seeks to Boost Law Enforcement Funding, Bump Pay and Increase Bonuses

Gov. Ron DeSantis announced Monday that he is requesting $400 million in new funding to increase pay for Florida law enforcement officers. DeSantis said his budget recommendations to the Legislature will include $73 million to bump entry level law enforcement officer pay by 20% and give a 25% pay increase to current sworn officers. House Releases First Redistricting Maps, One Draft Could Oust Dem US Rep Murphy

The Florida House on Monday released its first proposed redistricting maps for Congress, as well as proposed redistricting maps for the state House of Representatives. House subcommittee staff created two map proposals for Florida's 28 congressional districts and three map proposals for Florida's 120 state House districts. However, some Democrats have voiced concerns of gerrymandering over one of the congressional maps that redraws the district currently represented by Democratic Congresswoman Stephanie Murphy and combines it with a different district which could integrate voters and flip the seat. Florida gained a congressional district due to population growth over the past decade, causing the map drafting to be tricky while attempting to represent communities fairly. Florida's Redistricting Battle Is a Test Case for Racial Gerrymanders

National Review
Dan McLaughlin
February 23, 2022

Florida currently faces a rarity: a showdown between Governor Ron DeSantis and the Republican-controlled legislature, which typically follows the governor's lead. At stake is the state's congressional map, which has to expand by one district to accommodate the Sunshine State's booming population. The main point of contention is whether to keep a long, narrow, lizard-shaped district along the state's northern border. That district exists only for racial purposes: to unite distant African-American communities stretching from Tallahassee in the west to Jacksonville in the east. DeSantis wants to end the racial gerrymander, and he threatens to veto any map that includes it.

The lizard-shaped district is currently Florida's fifth congressional district, and now Florida's third district on the Florida house's maps. It crosses eight counties over 200 miles, narrows to three miles wide at one point, and forms a spur around Jacksonville. The two counties at opposite ends of the state contain 82.77 percent of the district's voters; the voters from the other six counties are, for all practical purposes, just a road to connect the two. As currently drawn, it isn't a majority-black district, and the new version wouldn't be either, but proponents argue that it would have enough black voters to offer an "opportunity" for an effective voting majority, in part because Democrats would be a majority in the district, and black voters would be a majority of the district's Democrats. It is currently represented by Al Lawson, a Democrat and member of the Congressional Black Caucus.

This is the only district on either Florida map that is anywhere near this bizarrely misshapen. Nobody disputes that the requirement that districts be compactly drawn would make this district illegal if it is not required for racial reasons.

The dispute between DeSantis and the legislature is more about law than politics, and it is publicly being argued almost entirely in legal terms. There are a few reasons for that. First, the governor and the majority in the legislature have the same basic incentive: to draw as many Republican districts as possible. Second, neither the governor nor the legislature can admit out loud that they are motivated by partisanship, because a 2010 ballot initiative added to the Florida constitution a ban on district maps drawn "with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent." That ban doesn't require that the final product be fair; it focuses entirely on intent. So, the parties can play all the hardball they want; they just can't admit it.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The difference between DeSantis and the legislature, in a nutshell: After a litigation marathon in the past decade, the legislature is wary of another losing battle in the courts. DeSantis, by contrast, is willing to stand up to a racial gerrymander even if it requires taking aggressive legal positions that will require the courts to wade into some uncharted territory or potentially revisit questionable assumptions. And he has his own arguments for why the racial gerrymander should and may lose in court. With a 7–0 Republican-appointed majority on the Florida Supreme Court (three of them DeSantis appointees) and a conservative majority on the U.S. Supreme Court, DeSantis is betting that the time is ripe to take a harder line against racial discrimination in district lines.

To understand this disagreement, it is necessary to understand the legal landscape, which includes the federal Constitution, the federal Voting Rights Act, and the rules contained in Article III, Section 20, of Florida's constitution.

Step One: Since 1993, the Supreme Court has held that, under the Equal Protection Clause and the 15th Amendment to the Constitution, states are prohibited from using race as "the predominant factor" in drawing district lines, unless the state can show a compelling state interest and that its reasons for doing so are narrowly tailored to pursue that compelling state interest. This is the "strict scrutiny" test, and outside of redistricting litigation, states are almost never able to meet it.

The Supreme Court last waded deeply into these issues in a trio of cases decided before Brett Kavanaugh and Amy Coney Barrett joined the Court: Cooper v. Harris (2017), Bethune-Hill v. Virginia State Board of Elections (2017), and Abbott v. Perez (2018). Cooper struck down racial gerrymanders designed to create majority-minority House districts in North Carolina. Bethune-Hill upheld a majority-minority state legislative district in Virginia, finding that intentional racial line-drawing satisfied the strict-scrutiny standard. Abbott struck down a Texas state house district that was racially gerrymandered, but upheld other such districts. Unless and until the Court changes course, states are running an uncertain risk of having their maps thrown out if they draw racially gerrymandered maps.

The Court is currently considering Merrill v. Milligan, a case involving a lawsuit to force Alabama to create a second black-dominated district. While the issues in Merrill are somewhat different — the state is defending its existing map rather than trying to change it — the Court has framed the question presented in Merrill to include a broad review of what the Voting Rights Act requires in Alabama. What Merrill has in common with the Florida fight is that the plaintiffs in that case are, similarly, trying to build a racially gerrymandered district of a sufficiently bizarre shape that nobody would ever draw it without race in mind. Merrill should be decided before the Florida maps get to court, but likely after DeSantis and the legislature have settled on a final map.

Step Two: How do racial gerrymanders survive strict scrutiny? The Supreme Court has assumed (without ever quite saying so) that (1) the Voting Rights Act sometimes requires drawing racial gerrymanders, and therefore (2) states have a compelling interest in complying with a federal law that is itself an exercise of Congress's power to enforce the 14th and 15th Amendments. A state doesn't have to prove that its racial gerrymander was literally required by the VRA, only that the state had "good reasons" or a "strong basis" to believe that it needed to discriminate on the basis of race in drawing district lines in order to create a VRA district. The state then must meet the "narrow tailoring" requirement — i.e., it must show that the actual district doesn't go too far in packing disparate voters into a district just because they are black. States are more commonly faulted for excessive packing than for the creation of such districts in the first place.

Step Three: In addition to federal law, there is the Florida rule:

(1) Districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory . . .

(2) Unless compliance with the standards in this subsection conflicts with the standards in subsection (1) or with federal law, districts . . . shall be compact; and districts shall, where feasible, utilize existing political and geographical boundaries.

Again: The requirements of compactness and following existing boundaries are flagrantly violated by the lizard-shaped district. Nobody really disputes this. But the Florida rule incorporates language similar to Sections 2 and 5 of the Voting Rights Act and gives those rules preference over compactness. Here is where things get sticky.

The prohibition on districts that "diminish [racial minorities'] ability to elect representatives of their choice" is a state analogue to Section 5 of the VRA. Section 5 was written to apply only to states that were required to "preclear" changes to their voting rules or districts before implementing them. Covered jurisdictions had to show that they were not "retrogressing" — a rule that the courts read to mean, among other things, that states could not reduce the number of majority-minority districts (or minority "opportunity" districts). Proponents have argued this as a version of the Brezhnev Doctrine: Once a VRA district exists, it is VRA territory forever.

But Section 5 no longer applies at the federal level after the Supreme Court in Shelby County v. Holder (2013) threw out the formula for which jurisdictions are covered, finding that Congress had failed to show evidence that these jurisdictions merited preclearance. Congress did not pass a new formula. As a result, the retrogression principle may still surface as a factor in VRA Section 2 cases, but it is no longer binding federal law. The Supreme Court's Brnovich decision last spring, for example, required a holistic look at a state's voting practices in Section 2 cases rather than tying states narrowly into a one-way ratchet on every single aspect of their voting laws.

Florida's "little Section 5" prompts the question: If complying with Section 5 of the VRA is a compelling state interest that justifies racial discrimination, is complying with a state version of Section 5 also enough to justify racial discrimination? DeSantis's general counsel, Ryan Newman, recently submitted to the legislature an analysis arguing that it is not:

The U.S. Supreme Court has never held that compliance with a state non-diminishment requirement is a compelling interest sufficient to withstand strict scrutiny under the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. That is especially so where the state race-based requirement lacks a strong basis in evidence. To the extent that Article III, Section 20(a)'s non-diminishment provision parallels Section 5 of the VRA . . . Congress compiled in 1965 an extensive record of racial discrimination in state electoral processes to justify Section 4 and 5's "strong medicine" and "extraordinary measures to address an extraordinary problem." [quoting Shelby County]. When Florida voters approved Article III, Section 20(a), by contrast, they did not have before them a similar record of pervasive, flagrant, widespread, or rampant discrimination.

This is an unsettled legal question. If DeSantis is right, the federal ban on race discrimination trumps the Florida rule.

DeSantis raises a second legal issue: The district does not actually have a black majority, and it only even approaches one by cobbling together people who do not form any sort of compact or contiguous community. In his view, Section 2 of the VRA does not require a VRA district here because, under Cooper v. Harris, there is only a need for one where a minority group is "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in some reasonably configured legislative district."

Following that line of reasoning, DeSantis argues, the state-law non-diminishment provision does not even apply because the "their" in "their ability to elect representatives of their choice" likewise refers to racial or language minorities who could be drawn into districts that at least vaguely resemble the districts drawn under the rest of the Florida rule: contiguous, compact districts that attempt to use existing political and geographical boundaries. That alternative state-law argument is an aggressive one, given that the little Section 5 rule is given a higher priority in the text. Moreover, DeSantis is swimming against precedent: The district exists only because the Florida Supreme Court in 2015 drew it in a previous case.

That said, the court created the district (promoted by partisan Democratic operatives) only after striking down an even more preposterous district connecting Jacksonville to Orlando, so its analysis of the compactness of the district and its black population was comparative. The court acknowledged at the time that the lizard shape was not a "model of compactness." A key component of the compactness analysis in 2015 was that "as many as seven other districts can be drawn in a more compact manner" by drawing the district to Tallahassee rather than Orlando. DeSantis, however, proposes a much more compact map overall by eliminating the lizard shape altogether. He can reasonably argue that a district drawn by a court as a remedy for an even worse map should not be cast in stone forever by the non-retrogression principle when a more compact map overall can be drawn that adheres more closely to existing communities.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

DeSantis's stronger argument, however, is that perpetuating the lizard-shaped district for explicit racial reasons violates federal law by discriminating on the basis of race. If he can persuade the legislature of that, the inevitable ensuing litigation will be a significant test case for racial gerrymanders.

State courts continue redrawing maps, as Supreme Court backs off

Roll Call
Michael Macagnone
February 10, 2022

Hours after the federal Supreme Court let Alabama keep in place a congressional map that a lower court found in violation of the Voting Rights Act, Ohio's Supreme Court struck down for a second time its state map on gerrymandering grounds.

The Ohio court ordered its legislature to try a third time to redraw its district lines. The ruling came just days after the high court in North Carolina similarly rejected its state's congressional map and ordered boundaries redrawn.

With more than 20 redistricting cases still pending, any other orders to redraw congressional maps are likely to emerge from state courts, after the Supreme Court seemingly bowed out in Monday's decision on Alabama. There, Justice Brett M. Kavanaugh, in a concurring opinion, argued against redrawing the state's map because there wasn't enough time before its May 24 primary.

[Supreme Court signals few map changes before midterms]

Michael Li, senior counsel for the Brennan Center for Justice at New York University Law School, called the recent state court decisions "a bright spot" in this current redistricting cycle.

"As the federal courts seem to be retreating from the democracy space, I think the defenders of democracy may increasingly be the states themselves," Li said.

Redistricting experts have said the process may determine control of the House, which Democrats currently hold by 10 seats. So far, court-ordered redraws of Ohio and North Carolina congressional maps have benefited Democrats, coming in states where Republicans control the mapmaking process.

Litigation over the Voting Rights Act or political gerrymandering is separate from so-called impasse litigation — where both federal and state courts consider how to handle state governments with split partisan control that have not finished the redistricting process. Litigants have such cases ongoing in Pennsylvania, Louisiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

State court successes

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In state courts, litigants have found success in an arena the Supreme Court removed itself from: partisan gerrymandering.

The Supreme Court ruled in Rucho v. Common Cause in 2019 that federal courts could not consider partisan gerrymandering claims because they were best left to the states. So far this year, challengers to GOP-drawn maps have used that to their advantage in Ohio and North Carolina courts.

In its ruling last month, Ohio's high court tossed the map passed last year by the state's Republican-controlled legislature, saying it violated a 2018 constitutional amendment on redistricting. Language barring any plan "that unduly favors or disfavors a political party" means the legislature has to redraw the maps in advance of a March 4 candidate filing deadline, the court ruled.

In North Carolina, the state Supreme Court issued a 4-3 ruling requiring the state to draw a new map with a partisan breakdown more closely resembling the state's overall voting results.

Critics of the map argued it diluted the power of minority voters. Bob Phillips, the executive director of Common Cause North Carolina, one of the map's challengers, told reporters on a call Wednesday that the state wants to be "the leader of the path forward to a better way with regards to redistricting."

"We watched all this train wreck and simply decided we could not sit back and see racist gerrymandered maps locked in for the next decade that will ensure one party in power at the expense of voters of color," Phillips said.

Challengers of North Carolina's map successfully argued that Republicans would likely win 10 or 11 of the state's 14 newly drawn congressional seats — in a state former President Donald Trump won by 1 percentage point in 2020.

Asher Hildebrand, a former Democratic congressional staffer and now a political science professor at Duke University, said the ruling goes beyond a 2019 case that resulted in a new congressional map for the 2020 election.

"It is a really full affirmation of the idea that diluting voting power based on partisan affiliation is a violation of voters constitutional rights," Hildebrand said.

Hildebrand said the ruling could result in significant changes in the state's congressional map, including shoring up a traditionally Black district in the northeast part of the state. Rep. G.K. Butterfield, D-N.C., currently holds the seat and announced his retirement last year, calling the state's new map "racially gerrymandered."

Challengers in other states, including Pennsylvania and Florida, still have state litigation pending.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Allison Riggs, chief counsel for the Southern Coalition for Racial Justice, told reporters on a call Wednesday that Common Cause intervened in a “bizarre” Florida case where Gov. Ron DeSantis asked for the state Supreme Court to preemptively rule a draft map he drew constitutional. The draft would remove a Black-majority congressional district in the northern part of the state, where voting is polarized along racial lines. On Thursday, the state's high court rejected DeSantis' request for an advisory opinion.

Riggs said the governor's map would have violated the state’s fair districts constitutional amendments, an avenue for state courts to address partisan gerrymandering explicitly left open by the Supreme Court.

“We understand the way that race is a proxy for partisanship and partisanship sort of puts a target on the back of voters of color,” Riggs said.

Alabama reversal

The Supreme Court’s 5-4 vote Monday staying the lower court order marks the first time the justices have weighed in on a congressional map this redistricting cycle.

Li noted that litigants challenging federal maps under the Voting Rights Act are increasingly pursuing longer-run strategies that could result in years of delay while the cases play out. In Texas, for example, challengers to the state map have sought a weekslong trial in the fall that would not resolve in time for the midterm elections.

Democrats in Congress seized on the ruling to push for passage of their Voting Rights Act bill, which have stalled in the closely divided Senate.

In a floor speech Tuesday, Sen. Richard J. Durbin, D-Ill., said the Supreme Court decision in the Alabama case undermined the law’s protections. He pointed to the 2013 Supreme Court decision in Shelby County v. Holder that overturned the framework used for Justice Department preclearance of election changes, as well as more recent decisions that curtailed the reach of other parts of the law.

“As a result of these decisions, legal protections for voters of color throughout the country are being systematically dismantled by the Republican Party through state legislatures and, sadly, by our federal courts,” Durbin said.

DeSantis draws congressional map that would dramatically expand GOP's edge in Florida

NBC News
Jane C. Timm and Marc Caputo
April 13, 2022

Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis proposed a new congressional map that would create four more Republican-leaning districts and wipe out Democrats' national redistricting advantage.

The map — which would carve up a Black-held district — was released Wednesday afternoon, just days after state legislators said they would defer to DeSantis, a Republican, on the new congressional boundaries. The Republican-controlled Legislature drew maps that would have created less of a GOP advantage, but DeSantis vetoed them last month.

DeSantis' map would create 20 Republican seats and eight Democratic ones based on 2020 electoral data, according to Matthew Isbell, a leading Florida-based Democratic data consultant who analyzed the maps Wednesday evening. Florida's congressional delegation consists of 16 Republicans and 11 Democrats in the House. The state was apportioned an additional House seat after the 2020 census.

"It's so blatantly partisan," Isbell said. "The only way you can create a 20-and-8 map ... was to basically say, 'Screw Black representation.'"

A top Republican in the Legislature agreed privately, saying the maps were probably drawn with partisan intent by DeSantis — a potential 2024 GOP presidential candidate who is up for re-election this year.

DeSantis has said his administration is complying with the law, which prohibits partisan gerrymandering.

Court challenges appear inevitable, but there is little time to change the map before the August primaries in the lead-up to the November midterm elections.

Daniel Smith, a political science professor at the University of Florida who studies elections, said DeSantis appeared to be inviting lawsuits. The map "is clearly being drawn to challenge the remaining provisions of the Voting Rights Act that the Supreme Court has not struck down," he said.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Despite controlling significantly less of the redistricting process nationally, Democrats had managed to cobble together some gains in states like New York this year. According to the nonpartisan Cook Political Report, Democrats have so far netted 1.5 seats while eliminating 1.5 Republican seats nationally.

While the Republican-controlled Florida Legislature had advanced maps that would have slightly advantaged Republicans, DeSantis sought significant gains for his party; in particular, he demanded that legislators dismantle largely Black congressional districts and argued that the North Florida district that ran from Tallahassee to Jacksonville, represented by Al Lawson, a Black Democrat, was an unconstitutional racial gerrymander.

"We are not going to have a 200-mile gerrymander that divvies up people based on the color of their skin," DeSantis said Tuesday at a news conference in Miami. "That is wrong. That's not the way we've governed in the state of Florida. And obviously that will be litigated."

DeSantis' map would dissolve the seat, the state's 5th Congressional District, into several Republican districts. It would also water down the African American voting population in another district with a significant number of Black voters, currently represented by Senate candidate Val Demings of Orlando. That would leave the state with just one majority Black voting district.

In private moments, Republicans familiar with DeSantis' map say they're uncomfortable with the way he proposed eliminating Lawson's seat. And they think the map probably runs afoul of Florida's prohibition on partisan gerrymandering because of how DeSantis drew the Tampa Bay-area 13th District — a swing seat held by Democrat Charlie Crist in the Pinellas County city of St. Petersburg.

DeSantis' map would make the district more Republican-leaning by removing voters from Democratic areas of St. Petersburg and shipping them across the bay to the Tampa-based 14th District, which covers more of Hillsborough County.

In the last round of redistricting a decade ago, Republicans tried the same maneuver by shifting voters from Democratic areas of St. Petersburg to Tampa. But the state Supreme Court stopped them, ruling that it was evidence of intentional partisan gerrymandering. The court essentially forbade lawmakers from crossing Tampa Bay.

"None of the Legislature's maps did this, and there's a reason for this: The courts told us you can't, and they said we can't because it's for partisan purposes," said a top Republican involved in the redistricting effort.

"If DeSantis wants to go to court and defend this, I hope he doesn't mind getting deposed," the Republican said.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Under the Fair Districts constitutional amendments that Florida voters approved in 2010, legislators are forbidden to draw districts that intentionally favor or disfavor incumbents or parties.

Asked Tuesday what he's doing to ensure that the law is followed, DeSantis deferred to his legal team.

"Everything's been done by our legal office and attorneys and all that," he said. "I mean, the people that were involved will go and testify in front of the Legislature about the product that was created."

Legislative leaders are likely to rubber-stamp the new map because DeSantis has already vetoed their proposals and told them he wants his version with minimal or no changes, according to Republicans familiar with the dynamics in the state Capitol. In addition, DeSantis has sky-high approval ratings with Republican voters, rivaling or surpassing those of former President Donald Trump in some polls, and the Republicans who run the Legislature are keenly aware of his power.

Senate President Wilton Simpson is leaving office because of term limits and running for the statewide post of agriculture commissioner. Republican insiders say he wants DeSantis' endorsement and that he has no desire to cross DeSantis.

"Why would you want to upset the leader of the party?" asked Jamie Miller, a former executive director of the state Republican Party. "I don't know if it has as much to do with the endorsement as the fact that, if you're on the ticket running with the governor, you're going to want to do things like travel, be on stage with him and be on mail with him."

Miller said he believes DeSantis' map is legal and that the existing congressional districts were unfairly drawn to advantage Democrats by a Democratic-leaning state Supreme Court, which is now solidly Republican.

At his news conference in Miami with Simpson on Tuesday, DeSantis was coy when he was asked why he hadn't yet endorsed Simpson.

"Look," DeSantis said as the audience chuckled, "we've got some more work to do."

Florida Playbook

March 14, 2022

Good Monday morning.

— HE'S BACK — "," by ESPN's Jenna Laine

It's All Over Now — Florida lawmakers will return to action for one final day when they convene around noon and give their blessing to a $112 million billion budget. It could be one of the more notable bipartisan moments of an otherwise bitterly divided, partisan session.

And then what?

Departure lounge — After spending two months grappling with issues of race, gender identity and abortion, legislators are leaving town without addressing the meltdown of Florida's property insurance market or passing bills drawn up in the aftermath of the tragic collapse of a condominium in Surfside.

Still pending — Senate President Wilton Simpson acknowledged that legislators may be forced to come back to deal with property insurance. And oh yeah — there's that whole congressional redistricting matter.

Holding back — Legislative leaders still have not sent their proposed maps for Florida's 28 congressional districts to Gov. Ron DeSantis after the governor proclaimed the legislation "DOA." Both Simpson and House Speaker Chris Sprowls late last week sort of sidestepped the showdown.

Not waiting — While the map remains in official limbo, however, two lawsuits were filed on Friday asking state and federal courts to step in and take over amid the apparent stalemate between the Legislature and the governor.

Lawyers, lawyers, lawyers — And that could just be the trigger for a yet another wave of litigation. Just like many of the signature legislative moves of the 2021 session are still tied up in legal challenges, some of the major bills from this year's session appear destined for the courts as well. The flotsam and jetsam from this year will probably keeping washing up all the way into the 2022 elections.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

— WHERE'S RON? — Nothing official announced for Gov. DeSantis.

... DATELINE TALLAHASSEE ...

WRAPPING IT UP — "," by POLITICO's Gary Fineout and Andrew Atterbury: The long line of legislation shows Republicans in the nation's biggest battleground state are focused primarily on appealing to the GOP base in a crucial election when the Governor's Mansion, three Cabinet seats and all 160 seats of the Florida Legislature are up for grabs. The action in Tallahassee is likely an early demonstration of the Republican Party's strategy to win back the White House by focusing on some of the most divisive, hard-right policy bills the nation has encountered in recent times.

What it means for Republicans — For the GOP faithful in the state, the legislative action marks a moment that they have been looking forward to for a long time. They say it explains why DeSantis has burst into the national consciousness as a possible 2024 presidential contender and potential heir to the populism that propelled former President Donald Trump into office.

Touted — "Governor DeSantis hasn't just campaigned and given lip service on issues important to conservatives, but he has led and delivered on those important issues, and along the way shown a principled backbone of steel that conservatives have been begging to see from all of our their local, state and national elected officials," said Christian Ziegler, vice chair of the Republican Party of Florida whose wife was one of the founders of Moms for Liberty.

Response — Democrats see it all as another sign that Florida is trending steadily to the right. "It means that Florida Republicans are gambling it all on DeSantis cruising to re-election in 2022 and that DeSantis himself sees the clearest and safest path to the 2024 Republican presidential nomination as him becoming the Supreme MAGA commander of the culture wars," said Fernand Amandi, a Democratic pollster and consultant.

CLOSING THE CHECKBOOK — "," by POLITICO's Andrew Atterbury: A rift between Walt Disney Co. and Florida's Republican leaders escalated on Friday when the California-based entertainment giant pledged to stop donating to political campaigns in the state over the controversial legislation branded the "Don't Say Gay" bill. The move, announced in a company-wide email from CEO Bob Chapek, marks the most substantial pushback Florida has faced over the bill, officially called "Parental Rights in Education," and comes a day after Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis publicly trashed Disney for being a "woke" corporation by opposing the legislation.

Disney CEO Bob Chapek looks on during an address.

DETAILS — “,” by Miami Herald’s Ana Ceballos: “Disney worked behind the scenes for the past two months to try and convince Florida lawmakers that a bill restricting LGBTQ school lessons was not good policy. The legislation — which Florida Democrats and LGBTQ activists nicknamed the 'don’t say gay' bill — was on the company’s radar since it was filed in January. Three lawmakers, two Republicans and one Democrat, spoke to the Herald/Times on Friday about their role in Disney’s efforts as the company’s stance spilled into public view."

First step — “Disney lobbyists set up a series of calls with Senate Education Committee Chairman Joe Gruters, R-Sarasota, before the bill received a hearing. ‘They said they didn’t think it was the right policy for Florida and that they had a lot of employees that expressed frustration and that they didn’t want the bill,’ said Gruters, who is also the chairman of the Republican Party of Florida. The lobbying effort by one of Florida’s largest employers and political contributors did not work.”

WHAT’S IN YOUR WALLET? — “,” by POLITICO’s Matt Dixon: Florida’s $112 billion budget is not final, but it’s close. In marathon floor sessions Friday, both chambers extensively debated the state’s proposed budget, the largest in state history, setting it up for a final vote likely Monday afternoon. The final scheduled day of the 2022 legislative session was Friday, but lawmakers will do a brief extension after missing their budget deadline. Though no vote was taken during floor consideration, all indications are that the spending plans will be sent to Gov. Ron DeSantis with overwhelming bipartisan support. “I am smart enough to know when to keep my mouth shut and say thank you,” said state Sen. Janet Cruz, a Tampa Democrat who echoed the sentiment of other Democrats who debated the budget.

— “,” by Miami Herald’s Daniel Chang:

ADDING IT UP — “,” by Miami Herald’s Mary Ellen Klas: “Free speech will be undergoing some changes in what Gov. Ron DeSantis has declared the ‘free state of Florida.’ A series of bills sent to the governor this week by Florida’s Republican-led Legislature will impose new sanctions on what is acceptable speech and assembly in schools, communities and businesses. Other bills create new exemptions to the state’s public records law, including in university presidential searches and executions.”

UNFINISHED BUSINESS — “,” by News Service of Florida’s Jim Saunders: “Lawmakers could not reach an agreement Friday on a plan to address problems in Florida’s troubled property-insurance market, while also halting efforts to put additional requirements on condominium buildings after a deadly collapse last year in Surfside. Finishing most of the work in this year’s legislative session, the House and Senate could not work out differences on high-profile insurance and condominium bills. MAPMAKER, MAPMAKER

NEXT STOP: COURT — "," by POLITICO's Gary Fineout: The tug-of-war between Gov. Ron DeSantis and the Florida Legislature over a new congressional map has sparked a push to have the courts step in and resolve the showdown. Two lawsuits were filed on Friday that asked separate courts to take over the redistricting process and draw new maps for the state's 28 congressional districts. The National Redistricting Foundation filed the lawsuit in Leon County on behalf of nine Florida voters who live in nine districts that need to be redrawn because they are overpopulated. Common Cause and Fair Districts, the group that got voters to approve anti-gerrymandering standards, and several voters filed their own lawsuit in federal court and asked a three-judge panel to take over redistricting.

'HE'S NOT LEADING US FORWARD' — "," by Washington Post's Lori Rozsa and Colby Itkowitz: "A 200-mile stretch along Florida's northern border is dotted with small cities like Quincy, at its western end, where Black residents have historically made up a third or more of the population. But in the 145 years since the end of Reconstruction, only in the last five years has Quincy and most of North Florida been represented in Congress by a Black politician, Rep. Al Lawson (D)."

IT'S ALL ABOUT RON — "'," by Sun Sentinel's Anthony Man: "Charlie Crist, Nikki Fried and Annette Taddeo came together over the weekend, united in their diagnosis of the biggest problem they see plaguing Florida: Gov. Ron DeSantis. Healing, they said, requires his removal from office in the November election. THE DESANTIS DOCTRINE — "," by POLITICO's Stephany Matat: Gov. Ron DeSantis on Friday renewed Republican criticism of the Biden administration's talks with Venezuelan President Nicolás Maduro to potentially explore the easing of sanctions on his country's oil exports. DeSantis, who is up for reelection this year and a potential 2024 White House candidate, hosted a roundtable discussion in Doral, a city known for its Venezuelan population, Friday afternoon with Lt. Gov. Jeanette Nuñez, U.S. Rep. Mario Diaz-Balart (R-Fla.) and local Venezuelan community leaders and advocates.

BUT THEN THERE'S THIS — "," by El Nuevo Herald's Nora Gámez Torres, Antonio María Delgado and McClatchy D.C.'s Michael Wilner: "The Biden administration has put oil talks with Venezuela's strongman, Nicolás Maduro, on hold after receiving blowback from bipartisan lawmakers and the Latin American country's democratic opposition. But the prospect of a deal is still on the table, U.S. sources said, as gas prices soar and the administration seeks alternative sources of crude in light of Russia's invasion of Ukraine. Two sources in Venezuela's opposition told the Miami Herald on Friday that the administration was already moving last weekend toward a deal with Maduro on oil imports, and, during a controversial visit to Caracas on March 5, was planning to grant American oil giant Chevron a special license to resume activities in Venezuela."

PUSHING BACK — “,” by Tampa Bay Times’ Ian Hodgson: “When the Florida Department of Health released new guidelines this week suggesting healthy children should not get the coronavirus vaccine, it cited several studies to back up the position. But at least four of the experts whose research was cited say their work was taken out of context. They said they disagreed with Florida Surgeon General Joseph Ladapo’s conclusion that the vaccine was more dangerous than the virus for healthy children. ‘I think there is cherry-picking of sentences to support what (the state) wanted,’ said Kathryn Edwards, a pediatrics professor at Vanderbilt University Medical Center, who co-authored one of the papers cited in the guidance.”

RETURNED — “,” by Orlando Sentinel’s Stephen Hudak: “The top state health officer in Orange County, Raul Pino, who was put on administrative leave after questioning low vaccine rates at his office, will return to work Tuesday. Pino, whose paid leave started as the omicron variant roared through the county, has been out of office for two months. … Pino, 58, who has led the Health Department in Orange County since May 2019, earns about $165,000 a year. He was placed on paid administrative leave Jan. 10, about a week after he sent a staff-wide email Jan. 4 revealing that fewer than 14% of the 568 employees in the office had been fully vaccinated with a complete series and booster shot.”

SNAKES! — “,” by Sun Sentinel’s David Fleshler: “In early February, Florida wildlife officers visited a reptile dealer in Sunrise to investigate illegal possession of snakes, enforcing a new law designed to prevent further infestations of the state by non-native species. Inside the house, in enclosures that resembled fish tanks, they found his collection. They confiscated 26 reticulated pythons, members of the world’s longest snake species, capable of growing to lengths of 20 feet, according to an incident report from the state wildlife commission. They seized nine Burmese pythons, the species that has colonized the Everglades, devastating populations of mammals.”

Axel Giovany Casseus, 21, of Lauderhill, is being charged for drug trafficking, according to the Broward Sheriff’s Office. DeSantis digs in on redistricting fight against fellow Republicans

NBC News
Jane Timm
February 14, 2022

Gov. Ron DeSantis is barreling toward an unusual showdown with Florida Republicans in a redistricting fight that centers on a largely Black congressional district.

Despite controlling both the Legislature and the Governor's Mansion, Republicans are at odds over how Florida's 28 congressional districts should look over the next decade. The intra-party debate is focused on the 5th Congressional District — which is about 46 percent Black — which DeSantis wants to divide up into several GOP-leaning districts instead of one favoring Democrats.

"There's a major difference, disagreement, between the governor and the Legislature and on [the 5th District], and so that's going to be a huge stumbling block moving forward," said Michael McDonald, a political science professor at the University of Florida. "And there's a lot of pressure on DeSantis to show that he's a true Republican looking out for national Republican interests."

The battle lines were drawn last month when DeSantis, who is seeking re-election this year and is widely thought to be considering a 2024 run for president, injected himself into redistricting plans. He took the unorthodox step of proposing his own map even though state Senate Republicans had already released one that would essentially preserve the balance of political power, with 16 Republican-leaning and 12 Democratic-leaning congressional seats.

DeSantis' map would add two more seats to the GOP column and subtract two from Democrats, according to the Princeton Gerrymandering Project, which gave the map an "F" in its redistricting report card. The state Senate map, meanwhile, earned a "B."

Republicans in the state House held off on proposing their own map while DeSantis sought a legal opinion about whether state law required the 5th District to be kept whole. The state Supreme Court gave its answer Thursday, only to say it wouldn't issue an opinion, noting that "the Governor's request is broad and contains multiple questions that implicate complex federal and state constitutional matters and precedents interpreting the Voting Rights Act of 1965."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

But that was enough for state House Republicans to release a map of their own, one that would also keep intact the 5th District, in north Florida, where Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat who has represented the district since 2017, is seeking re-election.

DeSantis responded Friday by indicating he would veto any map that would keep the north Florida district whole.

The dispute is also in the spotlight because of how redistricting has played out in other states following the 2020 census results, which determine the sizes of congressional delegations. Republicans nationally have shored up gerrymandered advantages in states like Texas and Georgia, while Democrats secured some victories in states like New York. According to an analysis by the Cook Political Report, Democrats have netted two seats this election cycle.

Still, Florida state Republican lawmakers have shied from aggressively gerrymandering this year, in part because of the state Constitution's "Fair Districts" amendments from 2010, which sought to improve political boundary lines by limiting gerrymandering.

"Florida has been a little bit of a surprise in that they didn't go out of their way to do damage to Democrats," said Michael Li, a redistricting expert at the Brennan Center for Justice at New York University School of Law.

Li said Florida Republicans likely held back because they felt "safe" — they enjoy majorities in the Legislature and the congressional delegation — and were loath to risk another multiyear court fight like the one that plagued the party in the first half of the previous decade after a map ran afoul of state laws.

But with Democrats making redistricting gains in New York and elsewhere, Florida's map is drawing new attention.

Lawmakers will consider the House Republicans' plan on Friday, and again the following Thursday in committee meetings. The legislature is scheduled to end its session on March 11th.

Democrats, meanwhile, argue that the GOP fight is another sign that DeSantis is looking beyond Florida's borders.

"He wants to weigh in on a congressional map because he wants to run for president," said state Rep. Angie Nixon, of the Jacksonville area. "He is still our governor, and he needs to make sure that he's working to improve the lives of all Floridians — not just a base."

Fine Proposes Criminal Penalties for Providing Gender Assignment Procedures

Rep. Randy Fine said he plans to sponsor legislation that would keep parents and doctors from providing "gender assignment" treatment to minors. Fine, R-Palm Bay, said he'll file a bill for next year's legislative session that would allow for felony child abuse charges to provide drugs or surgery to a minor for gender assignment. Federal Judges Asked to Require Senate-Passed Congressional District Map

Attorneys for plaintiffs suing the state over new congressional maps are urging a federal court to adopt a redistricting plan for the state's congressional districts that has already been passed by the state Senate. The map that passed in the Senate with strong bipartisan support was vetoed by Gov. Ron DeSantis, who said it unconstitutionally gerrymandered the districts to make it likely that a Black candidate would win a seat in North Florida. Lawmakers are slated to meet for a four-day special session beginning April 19 to work on a new congressional map, hoping to reach an accord

"Joe Biden's reckless border policies have allowed more than 2 million foreigners to enter our country illegally via the Southern border," said DeSantis. Lawmakers passed a DeSantis-backed bill (SB 1808) during the recently-ended legislative session that blocks the state from doing business with companies that transport undocumented immigrants into Florida, including $12 million in funding to remove immigrants who have been transported by the federal government into Florida. Gov. DeSantis signals he won't sign Legislature's proposed congressional maps

Jacob Ogles
February 11, 2022

Gov. Ron DeSantis signaled Friday he won't sign any congressional redistricting proposals produced to date by the Florida Legislature

"We will not be signing any congressional map that has an unconstitutional gerrymander in it, and that is going to be the position that we stick to," DeSantis said. "Just take that to the bank."

The statement comes a day after the Florida Supreme Court declined to advise DeSantis on whether a map of Florida's now-28 congressional seats must include a jurisdiction similar to Florida's 5th Congressional District.

The Governor acknowledged that decision, but since the court offered no opinion on the Tallahassee-to-Jacksonville spanning district, he's left with his own judgment.

"We asked the Florida Supreme Court for some guidance on how to interpret a provision of our state constitution related to congressional redistricting. The court declined to take that up but acknowledged that these are really live issues and are unsettled," he said.

DeSantis' office in January took the unprecedented step of submitting its own redistricting proposal (P 0079) for review. The cartography conspicuously included no district analogous to CD 5, which is now represented by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Tallahassee Democrat.

Spokespeople for his office then characterized the district as an "unconstitutional gerrymander that unnaturally connects communities in Jacksonville with communities hours away in Tallahassee and Gadsden counties." The district was implemented by the Florida Supreme Court in 2015 when it tossed out a map approved by the Florida Legislature.

That seems to be the position DeSantis' office still holds.

"Just to let people know, that is not changing my position at all," he said.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

One missing word from the Governor's remarks? Veto. Florida does allow legislation to become law without the Governor's signature if he chooses not to sign or veto it.

The comments drew applause from supporters at a public event in Marianna. But importantly, many watchdog groups have deemed DeSantis' map a GOP-friendly gerrymander.

Democratic attorney Marc Elias, who has sued several Republican-run states over redistricting, posted on Twitter: "I look forward to my team deposing him and his staff to fully understand the illegal partisan motivations of this map."

Lawson has also lashed out at the Governor's proposals and his request of the Supreme Court. Many Democrats categorized that request as an attempt to pre-clear his map before the Legislature could produce a final product. Lawson celebrated the Florida Supreme Court's decision not to issue any advisory.

"Ron DeSantis wanted the Supreme Court to violate the separation of powers and engage the judicial branch in partisan politics," Lawson said in a statement Thursday. "They wisely and correctly rejected his request. Yes, Ron DeSantis lost today, but more importantly, democracy and the Constitution won."

Democrats dislike the Governor's map that apparently makes every district north of Orlando a likely Republican seat. But perhaps more significantly, the Legislature hasn't warmed to the Governor's map either.

While Senate President Wilton Simpson and House Speaker Chris Sprowls both filed briefs supporting the Governor's right to ask for a court opinion, a version of CD 5 appears on every draft map drawn by the Legislature to date. That includes three drafts from the House Redistricting Committee staff and 14 maps produced by the Senate Reapportionment Committee staff or sitting Senators.

Both chambers of the Florida Legislature have presumed CD 5 to be a Black-performing district in staff analyses, and have preserved it in some form. That's because the Fair Districts amendment to Florida's constitution requires the protection of minority communities' abilities to elect candidates of their choice, and protects against diminishment of that ability.

The Senate already approved a map (S 8060) after the Governor's office submitted its proposal, ignoring the submission entirely.

Meanwhile, after the Florida Supreme Court rejection of DeSantis' request, Sprowls made clear his chamber would not pursue the same course as the Governor's Office.

"The Governor's question about the North Florida district and its contiguous nature raised a novel legal argument," Sprowls told press.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“We are probably not in a position to be able to address novel legal arguments in our process, which is why, had we gotten guidance from the Supreme Court, that may have enlightened that. But in the absence of that guidance and the absence of legal precedent, we are going to operate and we are going to follow the law. We are going to come out with a map that complies. I think that you can probably anticipate that North Florida district … in the previous House map will be similar or the same.”

Here's your AM rundown of people, politics and policy in the Sunshine State.
Good Tuesday morning. I just finished Sunburn while waiting for our return flight from Harry Reid International Airport. Forgive me if there are any typos.

Let's start with some good news about a good guy.

Former Deputy Secretary of Business Regulation Michael "MJ" Johnston has joined Shumaker Advisors Florida, the firm announced Tuesday.

Johnston served as Deputy Secretary at the Department of Business and Professional Regulation from 2019 through 2021, providing policy and regulatory guidance related to alcoholic beverages and tobacco; condominiums, timeshares and mobile homes; hotels and restaurants; and pari-mutuel wagering.

He previously served as Chief Information Officer and Director of the Office of Agriculture Technology Services for the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services under former Agriculture Commissioner Adam Putnam.

At Shumaker Advisors Florida, he will help clients navigate government and regulatory matters.

"It is an honor to join Shumaker Advisors and have the opportunity to use my years of experience in policy and regulatory arenas to make a difference and help Florida businesses expand," MJ said. "Empowering clients and entrepreneurs with the insights they need to succeed is a key part of growing our economy, creating jobs, and making the Sunshine State a great place to live for generations to come."

Shumaker Advisors President and CEO Ron Christaldi added, "MJ stands out as a visionary leader, especially in the hardest of times. Throughout the pandemic, he helped Florida industries stay open for business and thrive. We are honored to have MJ join our team and look forward to many more successes to come at Shumaker Advisors."

The ACLU of Florida announced Friday that it tapped Amy Turkel to serve as interim executive director.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Turkel had been working as the organization's director of philanthropy and will serve in her new role during the organization's search process for a permanent executive director.

A native Floridian and longtime ACLU member, Turkel comes from a family of lifelong ACLU members and civil rights activists. Her parents were members of the Greater Miami Chapter before there was a staff-led ACLU affiliate.

She has worked at the ACLU of Florida for almost ten years. She was the organization's director of communications before becoming its director of philanthropy. She has also had an extensive career in marketing and communications, first as the vice president of an advertising agency and then as president of a branding firm.

"I am excited to welcome Amy in her new role. We are fortunate to have so many talented staff at the Florida affiliate. Amy hails from a family dedicated to protecting civil liberties. Her depth of experience will be invaluable to the organization as we search for a new organizational leader," ACLU of Florida President Michael Barfield said.

Turkel's elevation comes as current executive director Dr. Micah W. Kubic is set to leave his position after three years to return to his home state of Kansas and lead its ACLU affiliate.

"It has been a great honor to work with Micah. His engaging leadership and accomplishments have advanced Floridians' rights in every part of the state," Barfield said. "The Florida affiliate is well poised to continue the vital work of securing equity and justice for communities adversely impacted by attacks on freedom. We wish Micah much success and will miss him."

On Monday, Ad Fontes Media released the first edition of its semiannual Media Bias Chart, and Florida Politics was featured front and center. Well, top and center, but that's all the better.

The media watchdog's flagship product rates select news sources on the reliability of their reporting and partisan lean.

Ad Fontes Media's chart includes only a handful of Florida-based publications. That Florida Politics was even included in the chart is an honor.

Being rated as one of the most reliable, least biased news sources on the web is a testament to what our team has accomplished in the nine years since publishing the first post on FloridaPolitics.com.

Since then, Florida Politics' roster has grown to include some of the best state government reporters in the business, and our coverage has expanded into all aspects of Florida government, from campaign finance and committee coverage to wonkish analyses of budget proviso.

— TOP STORY —

“Ron DeSantis touts his state as ‘freedom’s vanguard’ but critics see authoritarianism” via Richard Luscombe of The Guardian — There are still almost 10 months until Florida’s voters elect their next Governor, but the campaign of DeSantis appears well underway. In a red-meat-for-the-base address at the opening of Florida’s Legislature last week, themed around the concept of “freedom” but described by critics as a fanfare of authoritarianism, DeSantis gave a clear indication of the issues he believes are on voters’ minds. They include fighting the White House over COVID-19, ballot box fraud, critical race theory in schools and defunding law enforcement. Yet to opponents of the Trump protégé, who is tipped for his own presidential run in 2024, DeSantis has chosen to focus on problems that don’t exist in Florida, either to distract from real priorities or to bolster the Trumpist base and improve on his narrow victory over the Andrew Gillum in 2018.

— DESANTIS VS. TRUMP —

“Who is King of Florida? Tensions rise between Donald Trump and a former acolyte” via Jonathan Martin and Maggie Haberman of The New York Times — For months, Trump has been grumbling quietly to friends and visitors to his Palm Beach mansion about a rival Republican power center in another Florida mansion, some 400 miles to the north. DeSantis, a man Trump believes he put on the map, has been acting far less like an acolyte and more like a future competitor, Trump complains. With his stock rising fast in the party, DeSantis has conspicuously refrained from saying he would stand aside if Trump runs for the Republican nomination for President in 2024. Last week, Trump seemed to swipe at DeSantis by blasting as “gutless” politicians who dodge the question out of fear of blowback from vaccine skeptics. DeSantis shot back on Friday, criticizing Trump’s early handling of the pandemic and saying he regretted not being more vocal in his complaints.

“DeSantis says he disagreed with Trump’s decision to shut down economy at start of pandemic” via Chloe Folmar of The Hill — DeSantis said he disagreed with then-President Trump’s decision to shut down the economy at the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic. DeSantis appeared on the conservative podcast “Ruthless,” where he claimed that one of his biggest regrets in office is not speaking out “much louder” against the initial COVID-19 shutdown in March 2020. DeSantis worked closely with the Trump administration to determine a response to COVID-19 but was allegedly caught off-guard by the White House’s decision to shut down the economy. DeSantis criticized members of the administration’s COVID-19 response team, including Anthony Fauci, for encouraging economic shutdowns at the beginning of the pandemic.

“DeSantis uses conservative lifeline as Trump sours on him” via Matt Dixon and Gary Fineout of POLITICO Florida — Conservative social media influencers have flocked to Florida for “freedom,” “liberty,” and another reason: DeSantis. The Republican Governor’s team has been courting popular conservative media and online figures, an effort that comes as Trump appears to be turning on DeSantis. Some of those the Governor’s staff are wooing are heavily involved in amplifying the anti-vax movement and downplaying the Jan. 6 attack on the U.S. Capitol. DeSantis hosted nine prominent social media stars in Tallahassee for a night that included stops at DeSantis’ office, dinner at the Governor’s Mansion, and drinks at Level 8 Lounge, a popular downtown rooftop bar near Florida’s statehouse. Almost all of them have recently very publicly announced on social media that they moved to Florida.

“We agree with Trump. Tell us whether you got a booster, DeSantis” via the Miami Herald editorial board — Trump said he has received a COVID-19 vaccine booster and called politicians who refuse to say whether they got one “gutless.” DeSantis, who received the single-dose Johnson & Johnson vaccine last year without any fanfare, has refused to say directly whether he’s gotten a booster shot. DeSantis aggressively promoted vaccinations for seniors when the shots first became available, but you don’t hear the Governor talk about boosters these days. DeSantis understands that vaccine skeptics are his constituency, one he inherited from Trump, who got booed by supporters last year for revealing he got a booster. “You gotta say it, whether you had it or not,” Trump said. We need a Governor who has the guts in this political climate to urge Floridians to roll up their sleeves.

“‘If you cross him once, you’re dead’: DeSantis keeps tight grip on Florida lawmakers” via Gary Fineout of POLITICO — DeSantis has become arguably the most powerful Governor in Florida’s history. This week, the Republican Governor opened Florida’s new Legislative Session by pushing for even more control over state lawmakers and his top priorities, including cracking down on election crimes, spending $8 million to transport “unauthorized aliens” out of state, and targeting “wokeness” in schools. DeSantis’ consolidation of power has become clear: Democrats, who are in the minority, are unable to stop him. And Republicans in the Florida Legislature are enthusiastically carrying out his wishes or are unwilling to buck him.

“DeSantis’ office offers a proposed congressional redistricting map” via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — Ryan Newman, the Governor’s General Counsel, submitted his own proposal for a congressional map in Florida Sunday night. The draft (P 0079) was submitted days after the Florida Senate Reapportionment Committee advanced to the floor its own plan (S 8040) for how to divide Florida into 28 congressional districts. While legislative maps for the House and Senate will be approved without the Governor’s involvement, DeSantis will have the opportunity to sign or veto a congressional map. DeSantis also served in the U.S. House before his election as Governor. An analysis shows the map produces 18 districts with a Republican lean and 10 with a Democratic one. By contrast, the Senate map has 16 districts where Trump won the most votes for President in 2020 and 12 where Biden won.

“Senate redistricting plans keep state’s partisan split, but challenges may emerge” via John Kennedy of USA Today Network — The first redistricting maps for congressional and state Senate seats were approved Thursday by a Senate panel, largely keeping a partisan balance in Florida that currently favors Republicans. This year, Florida gains a new congressional district because of population gains over the past decade. The maps advanced Thursday would create 16 Republican-leaning seats to 12 for Democrats, not varying much from the state’s current 16-11 congressional split. Similarly, in a Senate where Republicans now control 24 seats in the 40-member chamber, the boundaries approved include 23 districts where Trump beat Biden last fall and a Republican would be considered favored.

“Reproductive rights activists, groups vow to take fight over recently filed abortion bill to streets, elections” via James Call of USA Today — On the opening day of the Florida Legislature’s 2022 Session, abortion opponents sparked a battle that reproductive rights activists said will continue until the November election. Encouraged by new restrictions enacted in Mississippi and Texas, and emboldened by the questions justices asked during a U.S. Supreme Court hearing on the Mississippi law, two GOP women lawmakers have filed a 15-week abortion ban for colleagues to consider during the 60-day Session. The legislation (SB 146, HB 5), carried by state Sen. Kelli Stargel and state Rep. Erin Grall comes with exceptions in cases of medical harm for the mother or fatal fetal abnormalities but not for rape or incest. It also proposes to spend $260,000 annually on a fetal and infant mortality review committee.

“‘They’re perhaps 1%’: Ileana Garcia signals support for full abortion ban, even for victims of rape, incest” via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — Sen. Garcia stopped short of fully endorsing a complete abortion ban, including in cases of rape and incest, but what she said about the issue in a Sunday interview indicated if such a law were to come up for a vote today, she would back it. Garcia, the founder of Latinas for Trump, who narrowly won office in November 2020, said the percentage of women seeking abortions because of rape or incest is extremely low. Rather than allow women safe access to abortion, Garcia said, governments should instead focus on prevention and better forms of the birth control pill.

Joe Gruters, Kaylee Tuck look to expand student assistance grant program — Sen. Gruters and Rep. Tuck filed bills (SB 1284/HB 823 to expand eligibility for the Florida Postsecondary Student Assistance Grant Program to students who have been accepted at a competency-based nonprofit virtual postsecondary institution that is accredited by a member of the Council of Regional Accrediting Commissions and is created by the governors of several states. “While attending a traditional, four-year college works for some, many Floridians need more flexible educational opportunities to help them achieve their career goals,” Gruters said. Tuck added, “Students seeking fully virtual college education options that better fit their needs should be provided every opportunity that the state offers to traditional college students, including access to the Florida Postsecondary Student Assistance Grant Program.”

"Casey DeSantis condemns 'disgraceful' Nikki Fried comparison of DeSantis to Hitler" via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — In an email to supporters, First Lady DeSantis condemned a "disgraceful attack" on her husband by Fried. DeSantis was referring to a radio interview last week in which Fried compared Ron DeSantis to Hitler. Fried's comments have become global news since, with Mrs. DeSantis the latest in the Governor's orbit to go on the offensive against Fried. "Just this weekend, Florida Democrats compared Gov. DeSantis to Hitler. This comparison is repulsive, offensive, and minimizes Hitler's evil crimes against humanity," the First Lady wrote. " Such a comparison trivializes Hitler's crimes against humanity. This is not funny; it's sick," DeSantis press secretary Christina Pushaw said on Twitter.

"Jeanette Nuñez condemns 'despicable' Fried comparison of DeSantis to Hitler" via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — Nuñez called the comparison "despicable" and said that "if it wasn't so sad, it would be laughable." Nuñez appeared on "Fox and Friends," when host Rachel Campos-Duffy asked the LG about the Agriculture Commissioner's controversial comments from a radio interview on Friday. "What we've seen in terms of her reference is that she is no student of history. Because Gov. DeSantis has stood "Trustee conflicts at Florida's public universities are starting to bleed over into public view" via Lynn Hatter of WUSF — More than a dozen people at seven of Florida's public universities that are still serving on their boards, despite their terms being over. State law does not address whether trustees have to step down when their terms are up. Ben Wilcox with the government accountability group Common Cause Florida says it's a complicated issue. He also doesn't understand why the Governor and Board of Governors don't just reappoint the trustees whose terms are up. Recently, Fried accused DeSantis of pay-for-play, asking for donations in return for appointments. There's no direct evidence to support that claim, but there are many university employees across the system who are growing increasingly concerned about trustees overstepping their bounds.

"Study: Florida among top migration destinations in 2021; most departures from high-tax blue states" via The Capitolist — While Americans continued to move out of higher-taxed blue states in 2021, migration patterns were different from what they were in 2020. United Van Lines customers primarily moved for new jobs or to be near family, resulting in their destination states being more varied than they were in 2020 when they primarily moved to western and southern states from northern states, its 45th Annual National Migration Study found. Vermont saw the largest percentage of inbound moves compared to outbound, with 74% of movers moving in. New Jersey saw the largest percentage of residents leaving the state, at 71%. New Jersey has been the top outbound state for four consecutive years.

"'People should move on': Garcia says racism isn't an issue because Barack Obama was President" via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — Not only should critical race theory be banned in Florida public schools, but racism against African Americans is no longer an issue in the United States because Obama was elected President and served two full terms, according to Sen. Garcia. Garcia said she believes the Black experience in America is "not at all" different from that of White people. "That's why we had Obama as President," she said. "That's the best example in the world. Obama was President not for four years, for eight." Garcia's comments came shortly after Garcia was asked whether she supported DeSantis' Stop W.O.K.E. Act. The proposed law, which stands for Stop Wrongs Against Our Kids and Employees Act, would, among other things, codify the state Department of Education's June 2021 ban on critical race theory, empower parents to sue districts that implement critical race theory policies and allow the defunding of schools that hire critical race theory "consultants."

"Florida Digital Service launches $15.9M overarching cybersecurity initiative" via Renzo Downey of Florida Politics — The Digital Service is launching a cybersecurity initiative to keep much of the state's cybersecurity services under one roof. Officials from the Department of Management Services touted the $15.9 million program as a "historic" interagency collaboration bringing enhanced, standardized threat protection to more than 20 agencies. By bundling the agencies together under one contract, the Digital Service saved $4 million compared to what it would have cost the state for each agency to work with contractors directly, which officials say is the current standard.

"Ron Howse, Rusty Roberts reappointed to Florida Transportation Commission" via Jason Delgado of Florida Politics — DeSantis has reappointed Howse and Roberts to the Florida Transportation Commission. DeSantis announced the decision Friday. Roberts, of Longwood, is a transportation consultant and previously served as vice president of government affairs for Brightline Trains. Howse, of Cocoa, is the President of Real Deal Development Group and the current Chairman of the Florida Transportation Commission. The appointments are subject to Florida Senate confirmation.

"Florida surpasses 5 million coronavirus cases" via Carl Lisciandrello of WUSF — According to the CDC, the state added 49,339 cases on Saturday to bring the statewide total to 5,041,918. According to the CDC, Florida is the third state to reach 5 million coronavirus cases. As of Saturday, California had the highest number of cases, at 6,789,403, followed by Texas at 5,402,259. While it's previously taken months for the state to add 1 million cases, Florida's total grew from 4 million to past 5 million in less than three weeks. That occurred on Dec. 28, when the state reported 4,032,212 total cases.

"DeSantis announces five new monoclonal treatment sites" via Beth Reese Cravey of The Florida Times-Union — A second monoclonal antibody therapy site will open in Jacksonville Tuesday, two weeks after DeSantis called on the federal government to increase access to the COVID-19 treatment. The new site at the Duval County Senior Center at 10080 Beach Blvd. will be open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week, the Florida Department of Health announced Monday. In early January, DeSantis called on the federal government to increase Florida's supply of "lifesaving" monoclonal antibody treatments to at least 30,000 doses per week. A few days later, he announced the state had obtained 15,000 doses of Regeneron to support new monoclonal antibody sites. The Duval Senior Center is one of five new sites statewide. The others are in Sunrise, Miami, Lake Worth and Altamonte Springs.

“Pressure eases on Florida hospitals as number of infected patients remains stable” via David Schutz of the South Florida Sun-Sentinel — The number of patients with COVID-19 in Florida hospitals declined over the weekend and has remained relatively stable for the past week. Although Florida did not report its weekend numbers to the C.D.C. because of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, data from other agencies continue to show a downward trend in the dramatic omicron surge. Positivity rates are declining in many Florida counties, including Miami-Dade, which dropped below 30% on Sunday for the first time this year. Broward County’s rate was 30.9 and Palm Beach County’s was 31.3%, both at their lowest levels since Dec. 30. The number of patients in the hospital with COVID-19 dropped on Sunday to 11,258, nearly 300 fewer than on Friday. The number of intensive-care beds in Florida occupied by COVID-19-infected adults was 1,506, also down slightly over the weekend.

“The state of Florida promised her help with rent. Then she was evicted.” via Lauren Peace of the Tampa Bay Times — Three days before Christmas, Catherine Owens found the pink notice taped to her door telling her she was being evicted from the Temple Terrace apartment she shared with her 58-year-old mother. The women had five days to vacate, the notice said. Owens had applied for rental assistance three months earlier through Florida’s emergency relief program, called Our Florida. Owens’ application for assistance was approved in September, and she was told she’d receive seven checks totaling more than $8,000. The money was earmarked to cover rent for the last quarter of 2021 and the first two months of 2022. It was also to help her pay a balance owed after she missed rent payments in August and September.

“COVID-19 cases drop week-to-week across South Florida for first time since November” via Ryan Nicol of Florida Politics — For the first time since late November, COVID-19 cases have dropped week-to-week in all three major South Florida counties, confirming trends which showed the omicron surge is peaking in the region. Case counts shot up during the omicron surge. While hospitalizations have not reached the heights seen during prior surges, the huge number of people getting sick has impacted businesses and society in South Florida and across the U.S. The latest report from the Department of Health, released Friday, showed a modest 4% drop in case counts this past week in Broward and Palm Beach counties. Miami-Dade County saw its caseload drop 15% week to week. Of course, those numbers don’t account for at-home tests, which often aren’t reported to the state.

“Tampa Bay schools report 7,100 COVID-19 cases for the week, a pandemic record” via Marlene Sokol and Thomas C. The 7,098 cases reported in Hernando, Hillsborough, Pasco and Pinellas counties topped the previous weekly high of 5,420 recorded during the week ending Sept. 3. "Tampa Bay life carries on amid record COVID-19 infections" via Christopher Spata of the Tampa Bay Times — With the vaccines proving less effective at stopping the current wildfire of infections, and the remaining risk of serious illness or death even among the healthy, you might expect to see public life scaling back. Instead, Tampa Bay may look more "normal" today than it has at any point since March 2020. The Lightning beat the Canucks at Tampa's Amalie Arena in front of 19,092 fans Thursday. International Plaza has been full of shoppers. Brunch on St. Petersburg's Beach Drive appears as slammed as ever. Even Gasparilla, Tampa's massive pirate-themed parade and festival, is set to return on Jan. 29. Work-life remains disrupted, but while many companies still have not returned to the office, many workers went back months ago.

"Vaccinated Jacksonville City Council member Kevin Carrico catches COVID-19 second time in a year" via David Bauerlein of The Florida Times-Union — Even a full round of vaccinations plus a booster shot on top of natural immunity couldn't keep Carrico from getting the COVID-19 virus infection for the second time in a year. Carrico said Monday he is recovering at home after testing positive. He has not had to get hospital treatment the way he did after his first infection from COVID-19 in February 2021. He said he hopes to be back "in full swing by the end of the week." "So far, the symptoms are mild, resembling a cold, so my ask is that you pray that they remain that way," Carrico said.

"Florida restaurant owner fighting for his life after COVID-19" via Carlos Frias of the Orlando Sentinel — Nino Pernetti called his restaurant, Caffe Abbracci, the afternoon of Dec. 31, 2020, to say he was skipping the annual New Year's Eve dinner. Days later, he called his daughter, Tatiana Pernetti. He was at the hospital. Come quickly; he told her: In 40 minutes, he would be transferred to the COVID-19 ward at Mercy Hospital, where no visitors were allowed. More than a year later, Pernetti has not returned home. Pernetti remains in a rehab facility. He needed a tracheotomy to help him breathe with lungs riddled with fibroids and scar tissue caused by the coronavirus. He was denied a lung transplant because of ongoing issues with his heart. And he remains on machine-assisted breathing, while he relearns to speak and walk after spending most of the last year in hospital beds.

"Republicans end 2021 with 43K voter registration advantage over Democrats" via Scott Powers of Florida Politics — After overtaking the Florida Democratic Party in statewide voter registration in October, the Republican Party of Florida (RPOF) finished the year with a voter registration advantage over Democrats of more than 40,000. Republicans' milestone in 2021 was built on nearly a decade of steady progress. Democrats, meanwhile, secured big increases during former President Barack Obama's two campaigns for President. Those gains began steadily eroding after the 2012 election. End of 2021 voter registration numbers posted by the Secretary of State's office show Florida had 5,123,799 registered Republicans, 5,080,697 Democrats, and 4,083,215

“Prediction market proclaims 2022 re-election bid is DeSantis’ ‘race to lose’” via A.G. Gancarski of Florida Politics — The PredictIt platform highlighted an erosion of what little investor confidence exists in the three major Democratic candidates: Agriculture Commissioner Fried, U.S. Rep. Charlie Crist and Sen. Annette Taddeo. DeSantis is trading at 85 cents on the platform Friday, indicating he has an 85% chance of winning in November. Fried is trading at just 8 cents, with Crist at 6 cents and Taddeo at 3 cents. “Overall Trend: This is DeSantis’ race to lose,” PredictIt asserted. “Case in point, over the past 90 days, DeSantis’ contract has gone from 78 cents to 85 cents, while the two Democrat favorites have seen their contracts fall 4 cents for Fried, and 7 cents for Crist.”

“Lindsay Cross reaches $100K campaign benchmark for HD 68 bid” via Kelly Hayes of Florida Politics — Cross surpassed the $100,000 fundraising benchmark in December for her House District 68 campaign. Cross, who is so far the only candidate in the race to succeed Rep. Ben Diamond, hit the milestone after collecting $6,145 last month. She now has raised $102,272 since launching her campaign. Her affiliated political committee, Moving Florida Forward, reported no donations in December. In December, her campaign spent $1,309 split among campaign consulting, software/email services, and processing fees.

“Toby Overdorf hits a personal high, raises $22K to defend House seat” via Anne Geggis of Florida Politics — Rep. Overdorf doesn’t have a challenger to stop him from winning a third term in the House, but he did have his best fundraising month on record in December to defend his seat should one emerge. Overdorf raised $22,200 last month, the most he’s ever raised since opening his current campaign account in November 2020. He won’t be able to raise much money in the next two months, though. Lawmakers are not supposed to collect cash while the Legislature is in Session. Overdorf, an environmental consultant, spent little in December, $400 in bookkeeping services with Renee Rizzuti in Palm City and $375 with GLC Consulting in Stuart for event planning and fundraising.

“Chip LaMarca closes year strong, adds $30K in December for re-election bid” via Ryan Nicol of Florida Politics — Rep. LaMarca added another $30,000 in December, leaving him just shy of $200,000 in cash on hand as the calendar turned to 2022. Last month, LaMarca raised $18,500 through his campaign account and another $11,500 via his political committee, Citizens Helping Improve Policy. In December, Beta Team Investments, a Boca Raton-based firm, donated $10,000 to LaMarca’s PC. That was the largest single donation courted by LaMarca during the month. LaMarca spent light during the month, listing just under $260 in expenses. Most of that went to Xfinity Mobile for campaign communication services. He also paid nominal fees for domain name registration and service fees.

“John Snyder raises $26K to defend House seat representing Martin, Palm Beach counties” via Anne Geggis of Florida Politics — Rep. Snyder raised $26,600 in December for his contest against a Democratic challenger to represent what is now House District 82. Current drafts of the House redistricting maps show HD 82 remaining largely intact, but it would change its number to 86 and lose a slice of the north-central portion of Martin County. According to preliminary plans, that slice, just south of Port St. Lucie and including Palm City, would be part of House District 85. Snyder’s December’s fundraising totals were propelled by donations from firefighters, energy representatives and political committees representing a wide swath of interests. The total comes out to a modest haul for the freshman lawmaker from central Martin County, who owns a payroll and staffing service.

“Rick Roth posts a personal best for December donations as he seeks a fourth House term” via Anne Geggis of Florida Politics — Rep. Roth in December posted his best fundraising performance this cycle, adding $21,650 to his campaign for a fourth term in the Legislature, currently in House District 85. Between his campaign account and his political committee, Palm Beach Prosperity Fund, Roth has $44,861 to spend should a challenger emerge. However, it’s likely the agricultural owner’s district boundaries could be shifting and changing numbers. One map shows him in House District 87, which extends north to the Martin County Line. Another shows him in House District 88, which extends north to Lake Park.

“Alex Rizo posts best fundraising month this cycle to defend Florida House seat” via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — Rep. Rizo of Hialeah raised more than $70,000 in December. That’s his best fundraising month this election cycle, with more than a third of his gains coming from the real estate and development sector. He now has more than $167,000 between his campaign and political committee, Principled Moral Conservatism, to defend the seat he handily won in 2020. Rizo spent more than $8,000 last month, mostly on consulting and party dues. He paid David Custin’s DRC Consulting about $5,800 and another $1,800 to the Republican Party of Miami-Dade. Another expenditure, $408, went to Tony’s Liquors in Hialeah for “promotional items.”

“Grassroots, lawyer support propel Robin Bartleman to new fundraising record” via Anne Geggis of Florida Politics — Rep. Bartleman had her best fundraising performance so far this cycle last month, raising $18,065. That total was fueled mainly by individual donations and support from lawyers. So far, the freshman Democratic lawmaker is facing a rematch with Republican George Navarini in House District 104, which could soon become House District 103. Navarini raised $4,090 in December and spent $4,102, leaving him with $1,314 in cash on hand for the campaign.

“Democrat Jordan Leonard closes 2021 with nearly $180K on hand for House bid” via Ryan Nicol of Florida Politics — Leonard added just under $12,000 in December, allowing him to close the year with nearly $179,000 in available cash as he pursues a House seat this year. Leonard, a Bay Harbor Islands Council member and former Mayor, collected just $1,600 through his campaign account last month. But he also raised $10,000 via his political committee, Americans for Florida. Leonard originally filed to compete in the House District 100 contest to succeed term-limited Democratic Rep. Joe Geller. Geller endorsed Leonard in that pursuit. Until the final maps are approved, Leonard remains listed as a candidate in HD 100.

“Demi Busatta Cabrera welcomes new challenger by raising $32K to defend HD 114” via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — Rep. Busatta Cabrera tapped a broad range of industries to amass $32,000 in her final full fundraising month before the 2022 Legislative Session. Lawmakers are barred from seeking campaign contributions during the two-month Session. That lull could provide some runway for her new Democratic challenger, South Miami lawyer Adam Benna, to catch up to the incumbent. As of Dec. 31, Busatta Cabrera held nearly $147,000 between her campaign and political committee, People Above Politics, to defend her House District 114 seat. Benna, who filed to run on Jan. 2, has raised roughly $46,000. Busatta Cabrera spent just under $4,000 last month. Most of it went to Tampa-based campaign consulting firm Strategic Image Management for a “mass mailout.”

“‘Keep Florida free’: Dennis Cooley files to run for remapped House District 70” via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — Cooley has filed to run for Florida House District 70, whose redrawn borders could provide parts of Hillsborough and Manatee counties with a new state Representative. The Ellington insurance consultant filed to run on Jan. 12. His goal: “to keep Florida free.” “Gov. DeSantis has made Florida the envy of the nation, and I want to keep it that way,” Cooley said in a statement. Born in Bradenton, Cooley developed a payroll software interface in 2000 that, according to a press note from his campaign, has since processed billions of dollars in payroll transactions. He now runs Bridgely Key Options, an insurance company that helps businesses and employees navigate insurance issues.

“Did a Tampa-based political consultant secretly participate in the redistricting of Manatee County?” via Dawn Kitterman of The Bradenton Times — Information gathered by The Bradenton Times raises questions as to whether Commissioner-connected political operative, Anthony Pedicini, played a secretive role in drawing maps submitted in the county’s redistricting process. The Bradenton Times has confirmed that the original Map B submitted by Manatee County Commissioner Vanessa Baugh on Nov. 9 — and subsequently edited and resubmitted by Baugh on Nov. 13 — was drawn by an account registered at davesredistricting.org by someone with the username of “Anthony.” Utilizing publicly accessible HTML code, TBT painstakingly replayed past Commission meetings comparing details in those to the “Anthony” account’s map login activity stored as HTML.

“U.S. reaches 1,819 daily average deaths, the highest since early October” via Meryl Kornfield and Jacqueline Dupree of The Washington Post — For the first time, the U.S. has surpassed the weekly average of 800,000 coronavirus cases a day in an explosive growth of infections fueled by the highly transmissible omicron variant. On Friday, the country’s toll reached 1,819 daily deaths averaged over the past seven days, the highest since early October, according to data compiled by The Washington Post. Meanwhile, eight states and Puerto Rico set records for confirmed and suspected COVID-19 hospitalizations: Delaware, Maine, Missouri, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah and Washington. The latest hot spots are turning up in the West and Midwest, with California, Colorado, Wisconsin, Oklahoma and Arizona experiencing the highest rate of increase of average new cases per capita.

“The CDC’s new challenge? Grappling with imperfect science” via Apoorva Mandavilli of The New York Times — The CDC was long revered for its methodical and meticulous scientific approach. Agencies in other nations modeled themselves after the world’s most highly regarded public health authority, even adopting the name. At the outset of the pandemic, the CDC moved at its accustomed pace. But this time, with a novel virus moving so quickly, the country paid a price: Testing and surveillance lagged as the agency tried to implement dated approaches with creaky infrastructure. Now the contagious omicron variant is pushing the CDC into uncharted territory. Because decisions must be made at a breakneck pace, the agency has issued recommendations based on what once would have been considered insufficient evidence, amid growing public concern about how these guidelines affect the economy and education.

“Just over a third of Americans think the U.S. pandemic response is ‘going well,’ a new poll says.” via Sabrina Imbler of The New York Times — As the anniversary of Biden’s inauguration approaches this week, American opinion of his efforts to contain the pandemic is lower than ever, according to a CBS News/YouGov poll. The poll found just 36% of respondents believed U.S. efforts to deal with the coronavirus were “going well.” Just 49% of Americans approved of the President’s management of the pandemic, compared to 66% of Americans who gave the same response in July, in a previous version of the poll. The poll, of 2,094 adult respondents surveyed between Jan. 12 to 14, found that 35% of Americans believed the administration’s policies were improving the pandemic, compared to 40% who believed the policies made the situation worse.

“Omicron pushes up hospitalizations though pressures ease in early hot spots” via James Hookway of The Wall Street Journal — The omicron variant is continuing to generate high numbers of new infections, with hospitalizations climbing to levels that are threatening to pile more pressure on medical services, while some European countries are seeing a fall in new cases and Chinese authorities worry about the potential for new infections ahead of the busy Lunar New Year travel period. The seven-day average for confirmed and suspected COVID-19 hospitalizations in the U.S. was at the highest recorded level over the weekend, with about 155,958 reported Sunday, after topping old records last week. The seven-day average for newly reported cases also reached nearly 808,000 a day on Saturday, the first time it has breached 800,000.

“California Gov. Gavin Newsom takes aim at DeSantis: ‘We’d have 40,000 more Californians dead if we took his approach’” via Andrew Romano of Yahoo! News — Newsom and DeSantis unveiled their budget proposals for their new year. And while neither mentioned the other by name, both took the opportunity to disparage the other’s COVID-19 policies in the process. Asked to respond to Republican attacks, Newsom didn't mince words. "They're performance artists, some of these people," Newsom snapped. "With respect, we'd have 40,000 more Californians dead if we took [DeSantis'] approach," Newsom continued. This week's split-screen divide between DeSantis and Newsom reflected deeper disagreements over the role of government that have surfaced during the pandemic and may one day resurface if the two politicians, who many believe harbor higher ambitions, ever meet on the presidential campaign trail.

"Omicron, inflation drive down U.S. growth outlook" via Harriet Torry and Anthony DeBarros of The Wall Street Journal — The outlook for economic growth in the first quarter and 2022 is darkening amid the latest wave of COVID-19, as consumers grapple with high inflation and businesses juggle labor and production disruptions. Forecasters slashed their growth expectations in the first quarter by more than a percentage point, to a 3% annual rate from their forecast of 4.2% in the October survey. The combination of higher inflation, supply-chain constraints and the fast-spreading omicron variant caused economists to trim their forecast for growth to 3.3% for the current year as a whole, based on the change in the inflation-adjusted gross domestic product in the fourth quarter of 2022 from a year earlier, from 3.6% in October. Last year, output rose 5.2%, economists estimate.

"Omicron fallout and tough labor talks likely to rattle supply chains and fuel inflation" via David J. Lynch of The Washington Post — Worker shortages caused by the omicron coronavirus variant and haggling over a new dockworkers contract are likely to aggravate costly supply chain jams over the next several months, clouding prospects for quick relief from the highest inflation in four decades. The White House says the worst supply snarls may be in the past, noting that key Southern California ports are shrinking their cargo backlogs, and trans-Pacific shipping costs have plunged by more than one-third from their mid-September peak. But the cost of sending a standard metal container from China to the U.S. West Coast remains more than three times what it was one year ago and is expected to remain elevated through the first half of the year, fueling painful annual inflation readings.

"Omicron surge spurs new COVID-19 relief push in Congress" via Brody Mullins of The Wall Street Journal — Hotels, fitness clubs, tour bus companies, and minor league ballclubs are part of a long line of businesses seeking billions of dollars in new COVID-19 relief aid, if they can overcome opposition from many Republicans who say Congress has already given enough. Lobbyists for the businesses say their campaign has taken on new urgency as the omicron variant sweeps across the country, forcing many companies to scale back or shut down operations as employees call in sick and customers cancel orders and reservations. Efforts to provide COVID-19 relief assistance appear to have support in the House. Nearly 100 Democratic and Republican lawmakers signed a letter in December calling for help for businesses.

"Global tourism about to rebound, luxury hotel operator says" via Randy Thanthong-Knight of Bloomberg — Global tourism is on its way to a "long-term, sustainable recovery" as more travelers and countries recognize the endemic nature of COVID-19. Hotels in tourism-reliant Thailand, which kept its so-called Phuket Sandbox open as a pathway for international travelers to skip quarantine, hasn't seen major cancellations after the emergence of omicron, Banyan Tree Executive Chairman Ho Kwon Ping said. "While the pickup in new bookings is slower because people want to be cautious, there's a recognition that it is going to become endemic and that recognition is changing people's attitude," Ho said. "That's why we're so optimistic."

"China halts Winter Olympics ticket sales as omicron arrives in Beijing" via Eva Dou and Pei Lin Wu of The Washington Post — Last fall, Beijing had already limited tickets to The Games to domestic spectators. On Monday, Beijing's Winter Olympics Organizing Committee said this would be further restricted: Only certain approved groups will be allowed to watch the Olympics in person, after undergoing strict measures to prevent transmission of the virus. The lone case of omicron registered on Saturday in Beijing sparked mass testing of 13,000 residents who might have crossed paths with the patient, who authorities said visited several restaurants and malls before testing positive. It also led Beijing to bar entry to anyone who has visited any Chinese city that recorded even a single case of the coronavirus in the past 14 days.

"Clap, don't chant: China aims for 'Zero COVID-19' Olympics" via Candice Choi of The Associated Press — Athletes will need to be vaccinated take tests daily and wear masks when not competing or training. Clapping is OK to cheer on teammates, not chanting. Anyone who tests positive for COVID-19 will be sent into isolation and unable to compete until cleared for discharge. Welcome to the Beijing Olympics, where strict containment measures will aim to create a virus-proof "bubble" for thousands of international visitors at a time when omicron is fueling infections globally. The prevention protocols will be similar to those at the Tokyo Games this summer, but much tighter. That won't be a stretch in Beijing, with China maintaining a "Zero COVID-19" policy since early in the pandemic.

"What can occur when COVID-19 turns cruise vacations into nightmarish voyages?" via Anna Jean Kaiser of the Miami Herald — With the rapid spread of the omicron variant and multiple outbreaks on cruise ships, vacations turned into nightmares for many people cruising over the recent December and New Year's Day holidays. Becky Brunette went on the Norwegian Joy cruise that left PortMiami on Dec. 23 for an 11-night trip around the Caribbean. She was with her 28-year-old son Cassady. Her son's test came back positive, while her test was negative. The next day, Brunette and her son were forced to leave their balcony room and were escorted by crew members wearing biohazard suits to a small interior room on the ship and remained there for four days. Their room service food often took hours to arrive cold in to-go containers.

“Joe Biden waited too long to engage on voting rights. It’ll cost him — and voters.” via Keith Boykin of The Washington Post — This coming week marks the anniversary of President Biden’s first year in office. His administration so far has focused most of its energy on important issues like the coronavirus, Afghanistan, infrastructure, inflation and an expansion of the social safety net. But the biggest threat to his presidency, his party and his country is the one issue that has only recently become a priority for the White House: voting rights. First, we’ll see more voting restrictions. We’ll also see more partisan election reviews disguised as “audits.” As voter suppression laws become more effective in targeting unwanted voters, Black voter turnout could plummet in this fall’s midterm elections.

“Biden is no Jimmy Carter. He should wish he was.” via Jonathan Alter of The Washington Post — While historical analogies are often glib and partisan, they can also be illuminating. Biden faces challenges that are strikingly similar to those that bedeviled Carter: surging prices for gasoline and other consumer goods, serious new tensions with Iran and Russia, anemic poll numbers. The danger for Biden is that he may follow Carter’s pattern of receiving little credit for his achievements, which already include record job creation, a huge and rapid vaccination campaign, and a long-sought bipartisan infrastructure bill, with the voting rights bills all but dead and his Build Back Better package hanging fire.

“Joint Chiefs Chair Mark Milley tests positive for COVID-19” via Myah Ward of POLITICO — Gen. Milley, chair of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has tested positive for COVID-19, just days after being in contact with Biden. Milley, who attended Gen. Raymond Odierno’s funeral on Jan. 12 with Biden, tested negative every day leading up to Sunday’s positive test, a statement said. He is working remotely and isolating after he tested positive on Sunday. “He is experiencing very minor symptoms and can perform all of his duties from the remote location,” Col. Dave Butler. The statement also noted that all the other Joint Chiefs, except for one, had tested negative.

“Jill Biden: I didn’t expect ‘healing role’ as First Lady” via Darlene Superville of The Associated Press — Her husband campaigned to help unite the country, but Jill Biden says “healing” a nation wounded by a deadly pandemic, natural and other disasters and deep political polarization is among her chief roles as first lady, too. Wrapping up a year in which she saw herself as a key member of President Biden’s team, the first lady said she found herself taking on a role that “I didn’t kind of expect, which was like a healing role, because we’ve faced so much as a nation.” Jill Biden spoke sitting in the sunshine near a swimming pool at a Las Vegas hotel a day after she and the president comforted families in Louisville, Colorado, where a huge swath of homes burned to the ground in a late December wildfire. She hugged people as they stood in front of the charred ruins of their lives and later offered public condolences for dogs and other pets killed in the blaze.

“Vern Buchanan takes over as lead Republican on Ways and Means Health Subcommittee” via Jacob Ogles of Florida Politics — U.S. Rep. Buchanan will take over this week as the top Republican on the Ways and Means Health Subcommittee. Among the hierarchy of panels under the Ways and Means umbrella, the Health Subcommittee is widely considered the most important. Buchanan takes over from former U.S. Rep. Devin Nunes. Buchanan will serve as ranking member of the subcommittee, as Republicans are in the minority in the House. “Health care represents one-fifth of our economy and is enormously important to every family and business in the country,” Buchanan said.

“Val Demings showcases federal money going to repair bridges across Florida” via Kevin Derby of Florida Daily — Continuing her bid for the Democratic nomination to challenge U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio, at the end of last week, U.S. Rep. Demings showcased funds headed to Florida to help repair bridges from the infrastructure package backed by the Biden administration. “Florida will receive $245 million in new federal funding to repair crumbling bridges. The outlay for FY2022 is $49 million. This is new funding on top of other federal funding already available to Florida from the U.S. Department of Transportation,” her office noted. Since 2011, commute times have increased by 11.6 percent in Florida and on average, each driver pays $425 per year in costs due to driving on roads in need of repair,” the congresswoman’s office insisted.

“Stephanie Murphy leaves Congress for now … maybe with an eye on Rick Scott” via Scott Maxwell of the Orlando Sentinel — Murphy takes a swig of her coffee, seeming relieved to sit down for a moment. It’s Monday, and she just finished making the morning run to her two kids’ school. Today she made the run twice, since her 11-year-old son had forgotten his homework binder as 11-year-old boys sometimes do. Murphy has decided to leave Congress, saying she wants to spend more time with her family. But we’ve heard that line before. I figure there must be more to it. And I later learn I’m right … especially when Murphy concedes that she hasn’t ruled out a future run against Scott. Murphy could try to do to Scott what she did to Mica: oust an entrenched incumbent, and compare her record as a do-something deal-maker to Scott’s as a do-little grouser.

“South Florida Congresswoman-elect Sheila Cherfilus-McCormick’s swearing-in set for Tuesday” via Anthony Man of the South Florida Sun-Sentinel — Congresswoman-elect Cherfilus-McCormick is scheduled to take the oath of office on Tuesday, one week after she was elected. The swearing-in will take place Tuesday evening at the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C. Cherfilus-McCormick will fill the year remaining on the term of the late U.S. Rep. Alcee Hastings. "The Justice Dept. alleged Jan. 6 was a seditious conspiracy. Now will it investigate Trump?" via Matt Zapotosky, Josh Dawsey, Tom Hamburger and Rachel Weiner of The Washington Post — The Justice Department's decision to charge Oath Keepers with seditious conspiracy last week makes clear that prosecutors consider the Jan. 6 attack on the Capitol part of an organized assault to prevent the peaceful transfer of Presidential power. But so far, the department does not appear to be directly investigating the person whose desperate bid to stay in office motivated the mayhem, Trump, either for potentially inciting a riot or for what some observers see as a related pressure campaign to overturn the results of the election. FBI agents have not sought to interview or gather materials from some of Trump's most loyal lieutenants about their strategy sessions at the Willard hotel.

"Jan. 6 panel grapples with how to secure testimony from lawmakers, Mike Pence" via Tom Hamburger, Josh Dawsey and Jacqueline Alemany of The Washington Post — The House panel investigating the Jan. 6 insurrection is in the middle of a pivotal debate over how aggressively to seek cooperation from key witnesses who are resisting providing testimony to the committee, including several members of Congress and former Vice President Pence. Pence, along with Minority Leader Kevin McCarthy, and Reps. Scott Perry and Jim Jordan, could help the committee complete a comprehensive picture of Trump's role in the Capitol insurrection and the extent of his influence on efforts to disrupt the official certification of Biden's victory. But all three lawmakers have refused to cooperate, leading the Jan. 6 committee to weigh whether it should issue subpoenas to sitting members of Congress, a step taken only rarely in the past.

"Three Tampa Bay men charged in U.S. Capitol attack" via The Associated Press — Three more Florida men, one with connections to a right-wing extremist group, have been arrested on charges related to storming the U.S. Capitol during the insurrection of Jan. 6, 2021, officials said. According to federal court records, Alan Fischer III, Zachary Johnson, and Dion Rajewski were arrested Thursday and charged with civil disorder. Fischer and Rajewski are additionally charged with assaulting, resisting or impeding certain officers with a dangerous weapon. The men are being prosecuted in Washington, DC, federal court. According to a criminal complaint, Fischer marched to the Capitol with members of the Proud Boys, a group that describes itself as a "pro-Western fraternal organization for men who refuse to apologize for creating the modern world; aka Western Chauvinists."

“Sarasota Oath Keeper charged with seditious conspiracy for actions surrounding Jan. 6” via Zac Anderson of the Sarasota Herald-Tribune — A federal grand jury indictment unsealed Thursday added new seditious conspiracy charges to the case against Sarasota Oath Keeper Joseph Hackett, who already was facing an array of other charges related to the Jan. 6, 2021 storming of the U.S. Capitol. Hackett is among 11 Oath Keepers, including the group’s leader, Elmer Stewart Rhodes III, to be indicted on a charge of seditious conspiracy. The indictment is the first time Rhodes has been charged for involvement in the Capitol riot. “The seditious conspiracy indictment alleges that, following the Nov. 3, 2020, Presidential Election, Rhodes conspired with his co-defendants and others to oppose by force the execution of the laws governing the transfer of presidential power,” according to a United States Department of Justice news release.

— EPILOGUE TRUMP —

“Trump soft-launches his 2024 campaign” via Elaine Godfrey of The Atlantic — Deep in the Arizona desert, thousands of people chanted for Trump. It was Trump’s first public event since July. On paper, the gathering was meant as his response to the anniversary of Jan. 6. Trump chose Arizona for this moment for a reason. In this state, the Big Lie thrives. Trump lost Arizona by only 10,000 votes in 2020, giving him and his supporters the space, apparently, to allege that the close outcome was the result of left-wing chicanery. By the end of the evening, Trump was having trouble pretending that he wasn’t actively running for President. At the rally, as Trump’s fans called for the arrests of poll workers and the reinstatement of the rightful President, I got the sense that this might be just the beginning.

“Some in GOP begin testing party’s lockstep loyalty to Trump” via Jill Colvin of The Associated Press — Trump stepped up his election-year effort to dominate the Republican Party, holding a rally in Arizona on Saturday in which he castigated anyone who dares to question his lie that the 2020 presidential election was stolen, including the state’s GOP governor, Doug Ducey. But 2,000 miles to the east in Washington, there are small signs that some Republicans are tiring of the charade. Mike Rounds, the generally unassuming senator from South Dakota, was perhaps the boldest in acknowledging the reality that the election was in fact fair. Instead of being shunned, he was supported by his GOP colleagues. The recent dynamics bring new clarity to the debate that will likely animate the GOP all year: how closely candidates should align themselves with Trump and his election lie.

"Two favorites emerge among Miami-Dade superintendent candidates" via Jesse Scheckner of Florida Politics — The Miami-Dade County Public School Board will convene to discuss a list of possible replacements for outgoing Superintendent Alberto Carvalho, but two candidates are rumored to be front-runners. They are Collier County Public Schools Deputy Superintendent Jose Dotres, a former MDCPS chief of staff and chief human capital officer who has also served as chief academic officer in Broward County, and Florida Department of Education Senior Chancellor Jacob Oliva, a former Flagler County superintendent. Dotres is an odds-on favorite because of his cross-county experience and administrative history with Miami-Dade Public Schools, while Oliva's background in leading local and statewide education matters also places him atop the list.

"Jane Castor apologizes for past Mayors' roles in erasing Black cemeteries" via Daniel Figueroa of Florida Politics — The last two years have seen a deluge of reports on rediscovered Black cemeteries across the state that led to the creation of the Task Force on Abandoned African American Cemeteries and newly filed legislation to address the issue. Lost and forgotten cemeteries became a focus after Tampa Bay Times reporter Paul Guzzo helped uncover the purposely forgotten Zion Cemetery under an East Tampa housing complex. "We can't right past wrongs," Castor said. "But certainly, we can acknowledge those and apologize for the wrongs of our community in the past." Castor issued the apology from Memorial Park Cemetery. Memorial Park was founded over 100 years ago to serve as the final resting place of Black veterans who fought in World War I.

"FSU Associate Dean James Zedaker resigns amid sexual misconduct investigation" via Tristan Wood of Florida Politics — Zedaker, associate dean of FSU's School of Physician Assistant Practice and head of the university's COVID-19 vaccine and testing administration program, has resigned after an internal investigation found he violated the university's anti-sexual misconduct policy. Investigators found on Jan. 4 that it was more likely than not that Zedaker engaged in "pervasive, unwelcomed behaviors of a sexual and/or romantic nature, creating a hostile work environment," as well as behavior of a romantic and/or sexual nature while in a position of institutional authority with three FSU COVID-19 clinic employees. — TOP OPINION —

— OPINIONS —

“A flailing Biden sold his ‘whole soul’ in political desperation” via Marc A. Thiessen of The Washington Post — During his venomous speech in Atlanta, Biden attacked his fellow Americans who oppose blowing up the Senate filibuster to pass his partisan election law by comparing them to racists and traitors. The Democrats’ federal election takeover has zero chance of passing not because of GOP opposition, but because, thankfully, it does not have enough support among Democrats to get rid of the filibuster to pass it. This was a violation of every principle on which Biden campaigned for the presidency. During his victory speech following his 2020 election, Biden declared that it was “time to put away the harsh rhetoric” and “stop treating our opponents as our enemy.”

“If Democrats want to win, they must change the venue” via Jennifer Rubin of The Washington Post — Our democracy is already badly injured. One political party flirts with violence and seeks to undermine the sanctity of elections. And many voters seem indifferent to the fate of democracy going into this year’s midterm elections. When it comes to voting rights and, frankly, all constitutional rights, Biden must take his case outside the Beltway. That means Democrats need to double down in support of state-level, pro-democracy referendums akin to anti-gerrymandering initiatives that have succeeded in curbing partisan redistricting. Voters can insist on nonpartisan redistricting and shield election workers from removal without cause. They can also block abortion “bounties” and other schemes that impair women’s physical autonomy.

“Bee sweet: Disney Grand Floridian’s iconic gingerbread house feeds insects after holidays” via Michelle Spitzer for Florida Today — Thousands of people flock to Walt Disney World every holiday season to see the iconic gingerbread house at the Grand Floridian Resort and Spa. Even when the holidays are over and cast members dismantle the 600 pounds of sugar, 800 pounds of flour, and more than 10,000 combined pieces, the famous gingerbread house still continues to attract thousands. Although these after-holiday visitors aren’t people, they do create a buzz. In true Disney fashion, the gingerbread house is not merely discarded. DeSantis gets beat back on redistricting

Good Friday morning.

Everyday is a Winding Road — Well, so much for that. The Florida Supreme Court on Thursday soundly rejected Gov. Ron DeSantis' push to draw them into the governor's bid to dismantle the North Florida congressional seat now held by Democratic Rep. Al Lawson, who is Black.

All I Wanna Do — It was a move that veteran court observers — and yes, privately, some Republicans in the Legislature — had expected. DeSantis wanted an advisory opinion to help guide him on whether there was any legal firewall protecting Lawson's seat — where Black voters don't make up the majority but it remains a so-called minority access district — under the voter-approved Fair Districts standards. If the court had accepted the challenge, it would have raised far-flung legal questions for the future on whether a governor could routinely ask a court if the executive should veto a bill ahead of time.

My Favorite Mistake — But the court unanimously and swiftly rejected the request, calling it "broad" and said it could involve evidence and analysis and it was likely there could be future legal challenges that would just put it all back before the court. Also noteworthy: Five justices — including three handpicked by DeSantis — shot down the governor's gambit.

Strong Enough — So what's next? DeSantis had made his request to the court after submitting his own proposal to the Legislature that would have essentially eliminated Lawson's seat. It's clear that Republican leaders have no intention of following the governor's lead on this. House Speaker Chris Sprowls, in discussing the ruling with reporters, even called the governor's rationale for going after Lawson's seat a "novel legal argument."

If it Makes You Happy — But the drama is far from over. The House wheeled out its own map late Thursday, and it's got significant differences with the one already approved by the Senate. While the map preserves Lawson's district, House Republicans are proposing substantial changes to congressional districts in central Florida, including the one held by outgoing Rep. Stephanie Murphy. The House map would likely create an 18-10 GOP edge in Florida compared to the current 16-11 margin. So, in other words, it could be a bumpy ride to the finish line over the next four weeks.

— WHERE'S RON? — Nothing official announced for Gov. DeSantis.

MAPMAKER, MAPMAKER
GOODBYE FOR NOW — "Florida Supreme Court rejects DeSantis' redistricting push," by POLITICO's Gary Fineout: The Florida Supreme Court on Thursday shot down Gov. Ron DeSantis' push to get the high court to rule on whether Rep. Al Lawson's 200-mile congressional district linking Black neighborhoods must be kept intact during the state's redistricting process…."This court's advisory opinions to the governor are generally limited to narrow questions," states the unsigned opinion. "Here, the scope of the governor's request is broad and contains multiple questions that implicate complex federal and state constitutional matters and precedents interpreting the Voting Rights Act of 1965."

Response — Lawson, a former state legislator who was first elected to Congress in 2016, hailed the decision by the high court. "I commend the Florida Supreme Court for making the right decision," Lawson said in a statement. "Ron DeSantis wanted the Supreme Court to violate the separation of powers and engage the judicial branch in partisan politics. They wisely and correctly rejected his request. Yes, Ron DeSantis lost today, but more importantly, democracy and the Constitution won."

Governor's office chimes in — Taryn Fenske, a spokesperson for DeSantis, said the administration will continue working with the legislation on the maps. "While we were hopeful the Supreme Court would provide clarity to legal questions surrounding the maps that are under consideration, we agree with the Court's opinion that there are important issues that must be addressed quickly," Fenske said in an email.

... DATELINE TALLAHASSEE ...
NOT SO SWEET — "DeSantis blasts GOP Senate president's priority legislation on Lake Okeechobee," by POLITICO's Bruce Ritchie: Gov. Ron DeSantis on Thursday broke with Republican Senate President Wilton Simpson, criticizing his priority legislation on Lake Okeechobee water supply that opponents say would benefit the sugar industry. DeSantis took the rare step of issuing a public statement criticizing the GOP-backed measure, SB 2508, which the Senate Committee on Appropriations advanced to the Senate floor Wednesday.

Hmm — Simpson responded that the bill does not hinder Everglades restoration as DeSantis, the South Florida Water Management District and other bill opponents claim. The bill directs the district to protect the water supply of existing users. The agency raised concerns about the bill on Wednesday, and its chair said the agency wasn't consulted before lawmakers filed the bill on Feb. 4.

But wait — District executive director Drew Bartlett told his agency board on Thursday that the bill removes a water storage reservoir south of Lake Okeechobee, which

DeSantis has championed, as a funding priority in state law. He also said the legislation would undermine a proposed new lake management plan that the district has negotiated with the Army Corps of Engineers.

SCHOOL DAZE — “Florida House backs school term limits, textbook examinations,” by POLITICO’s Andrew Atterbury: The Florida House passed a far-reaching education bill Thursday that would install eight-year term limits for local school board members while also ramping up scrutiny around what students are learning and reading on campus. The GOP-led House has sought term limits in the past but broke from previous proposals by introducing them unilaterally instead of posing the question to voters through a constitutional amendment. With this legislation now in the books after a 78-40 vote and Democrats in opposition, it falls on the Senate to rework its bill that differs from the House on key policies.

WHAT WE DO IN THE SHADOWS — “Florida Senate approves secrecy in early stages of university presidential searches,” by Miami Herald’s Ana Ceballos: “The Florida Senate on Thursday approved a proposal to conceal information about applicants vying to become college and university presidents, a move that could change a presidential search system that five of Florida’s 12 universities are preparing to begin. The idea behind the proposal is that secrecy during the early stages of the search process will allow state universities and colleges to draw better candidates who will feel comfortable applying, knowing that their names will not become public — including to their current bosses.”

HANDING OVER THE CHECKBOOK — “Lawmakers pass emergency fund for governor,” by News Service of Florida’s Jim Turner: “A pool of ready cash Gov. Ron DeSantis could dip into when he declares emergencies is headed to his desk. The House on Thursday overwhelmingly passed two linked proposals (SB 96 and SB 98) that would create a $500 million “Emergency Preparedness and Response Fund” that the governor could directly access. The Senate passed the measures last month. Critics questioned the need for the fund. Rep. Anna Eskamani, D-Orlando, said she never heard that money wasn’t available to address emergencies such as the COVID-19 pandemic and massive discharges of contaminated water last year at the former Piney Point phosphate plant in Manatee County."

‘HEARTLESS’ — “‘Simply repugnant.’ Faith leaders, some Pedro Pan Cubans answer DeSantis on immigration,” by Miami Herald’s Bianca Padró Ocasio: “Miami faith leaders and some Cubans who came to Florida through Operation Pedro Pan slammed Gov. Ron DeSantis on Thursday, after he said comparing Pedro Pan kids who arrived in the ‘60s to unaccompanied minors today was ‘disgusting.’ ‘Let me tell you what I think is disgusting: a proposed heartless policy toward immigrant children, defenseless and vulnerable. It’s simply repugnant,’ said Mike Fernandez, a Cuban exile and former Republican donor who left the party. The group of local leaders, which also included immigration advocates and business leaders, hosted a press conference at the Archdiocese of Miami in Miami Shores just days after DeSantis visited the American

DESANTIS HAS $10M MONTH — The latest round of monthly campaign reports showed that incumbent Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis brought in just under $10 million in January. His political committee reported taking in $7.72 million — a sum that included $1.5 million from the Republican Governors Association and $1.7 million from the Republican Party of Florida — while his main campaign account raised $2.26 million. DeSantis had about $81.5 million in the bank at the end of the month.

CRIST LEADS DEMOCRATS — Rep. Charlie Crist once again led among Democratic candidates for governor in fundraising in January. He raised nearly $714,000 between his political committee and campaign — or more than double that of Agriculture Commissioner Nikki Fried. Fried raised slightly more than $313,000 between two accounts while state Sen. Annette Taddeo raised more than $195,000 between her PC and main campaign account. But Taddeo was required to cut off her fundraising efforts on Jan. 11, the first day of session.

$75.5 MILLION TO MISS THE BALLOT — Las Vegas Sands contributed another $24 million in January to a failed effort to place a constitutional amendment on the 2022 ballot that would have cleared the way for a casino in North Florida. The political committee — Florida Voters in Charge — raised $75.5 million between last summer and the end of January with most of the money coming from the gambling company founded by the late Sheldon Adelson, a Republican megadonor. The fallout over the amendment continues amid legal battles over the approval process as well as investigations into how petition signatures were gathered.

MAYBE GET SOME CANDIDATES FIRST — "Gubernatorial candidate Nikki Fried, meeting with Black community activists in Broward, says all-female ticket would help Democrats win everything," by Sun Sentinel's Anthony Man: "Gubernatorial candidate Nikki Fried said Wednesday that Florida Democrats should nominate a female candidate for every statewide office this year, arguing it would help her party win each of the four contests. WHAT'S GOING ON HERE? — "Rubio's CRACK Act bars federal funds for pipes – White House denies it's happening," by Miami Herald's Bryan Lowry: "Florida's Republican senators have introduced legislation to prohibit the use of federal funds for distributing pipes, something the White House disputes was ever on the table as part of a drug harm reduction program. The Cutting off Rampant Access to Crack Kits (CRACK) Act is a response to a Monday report from the conservative Washington Free Beacon that alleged that money from a $30 million grant program could be used to fund the distribution of 'crack pipes,' a claim that has been repeatedly rejected by the Biden administration and fact checkers after it sparked furor among conservative lawmakers and pundits."

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES
The daily rundown — The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said there were 10,142 Covid-19 infections reported on Wednesday. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services reported that 6,741 hospital beds were being used in the state for Covid-19 patients.

A WAY WITH WORDS — "When talking about COVID-19, DeSantis leaves out key facts, experts say," by Orlando Sentinel's Steven Lemongello and Caroline Catherman: "Like many of DeSantis' comments about the coronavirus, it did not tell the whole story. DeSantis' statements about vaccine effectiveness and safety, antibody treatments and the power of natural immunity are cloudy in some cases and absolutely wrong in others, say epidemiologists and other experts interviewed by the Orlando Sentinel. Mac Stipanovich, a Tallahassee consultant and former anti-Trump Republican turned independent, said DeSantis' motivation is political. The governor is courting anti-vax Republicans in advance of the 2024 GOP primary for president, he said."

SOMETHING TO TRACK — "Boynton Beach mayoral candidate is found guilty in anti-mask dispute in West Boca," by Sun Sentinel's Lisa J. Huriash: "A candidate for Boynton Beach mayor who calls COVID-19 a "plan-demic" has been found guilty of trespassing after she refused to wear a mask at a West Boca bagel restaurant in 2021. Cindy Falco-DiCorrado, 63, was found guilty Tuesday by a six-member jury of two misdemeanor counts of trespassing and resisting an officer without violence. 'I'm disappointed, I feel this is all a political ploy,' she said Thursday. 'This all stems from a mask. ... This is wrong on every level.'"

Taking it to governor — “Her sentencing is scheduled for Feb. 28, and anti-mask organizers are planning a demonstration to get Gov. Eric Holder-backed group sues Florida over Gov. DeSantis' congressional map

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
April 22, 2022

Minority advocacy groups filed a lawsuit Friday challenging Florida's congressional map approved this week by the Legislature.

The case will be funded by the National Redistricting Foundation, a group led by former U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder. Plaintiffs represented by prominent Democratic voting rights attorney Marc Elias filed suit claiming a map (P 0109) submitted by Gov. Ron DeSantis violates Florida's Fair Districts provisions in the state constitution.

"Republicans across the country tried — and completely failed — to gerrymander their way to a congressional majority," Holder said. "In response to this defeat, DeSantis has bullied the Legislature into enacting a map that does not allow for a fair electoral contest, and instead draws Republicans an illegitimate and illegal partisan advantage that they have not earned from the voters. And it does so at the expense of Black voters in Florida who are being denied fair representation in Congress."

A performance analysis by MCI Maps shows the Governor's cartography draws Florida with 20 congressional districts where Republican Donald Trump won the 2020 Presidential Election and just eight seats where Democrat Joe Biden won. Trump won Florida in 2020 by just three percentage points.

A release from the foundation notes the disparity.

"President Biden won 47.9 percent of the vote statewide in Florida, but he would win just over a quarter of the congressional seats because of the map's extreme gerrymander," it states.

The targeting of Black voting districts also plays prominently in the complaint, which was filed in Leon County circuit court.

The lawsuit leans heavily on the language of the Fair Districts amendment to Florida's Constitution passed in 2010. That prohibits the drawing of maps that favor or disfavor a political party, and it requires the protection of an ability for minority communities to elect candidates of their choice. The complaint says the just-passed map violates both those requirements.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Fair Districts provisions led to the last congressional map drawn by the Legislature being thrown out by the Florida Supreme Court. In 2015, the court replaced that map with one that had a minority-performing district stretching from Tallahassee to Jacksonville.

The district, Florida's 5th Congressional District, is represented by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Tallahassee Democrat and a Black man.

DeSantis vetoed prior maps approved by the Legislature for trying to keep that Black access seat in North Florida. He has alleged drawing districts motivated primarily by race violates the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution, and said the North Florida seat won't meet strict scrutiny in court because it is not even a majority Black district.

His map disassembles Lawson's district and leaves the Jacksonville area with two Republican-leaning seats.

"He unilaterally declared the Fair Districts amendment unconstitutional," the complaint alleges. "He vetoed the Legislature's congressional plan and convened a Special Legislative Session, leaving the Legislature little choice but to consider and pass his own redistricting scheme."

That overstepped his authority as Governor and the law, the complaint states.

"The DeSantis Plan does not comply with the Fair Districts amendment," the lawsuit reads. "It does not even purport to."

Plaintiffs also complain the DeSantis plan pulls 300,000 voters from Florida's 10th Congressional District, most of them people of color. That seat was also considered by the Florida Senate to be a Black-performing seat. It's represented now by U.S. Rep. Val Demings, an Orlando Democrat and a Black woman.

Several organizations and individuals are listed as plaintiffs in the lawsuit. Associations include the Black Voters Matter Capacity Building Institute, Equal Ground Education Fund, the League of Women Voters of Florida, the League of Women Voters Education Fund and Florida Rising Network.

The individual plaintiffs, all Florida residents, include Beatriz Alonso, Ileana Caban, Anaydia Connolly, Pastor Reginald Gundy, Andrea Hershorin, Kisha Linebaugh, Cynthia Lippert, Brandon Nelson, Gonzalo Alfredo Pedroso, Phyllis Wiley, Katie Yarrows and Sylvia Young.

Gundy, Wiley and Young live in CD 5, while Nelson lives in CD 10.

Democrats blast Gov. DeSantis' congressional map, praise GOP legislature's redistricting efforts

WFSU

Democratic state lawmakers continue to blast Gov. Ron DeSantis' proposed congressional map, while crediting Republicans in the legislature for their openness to passing a fair U.S. House map.

DeSantis' plan would cut the number of districts where African American voters can elect a candidate of their choice in half.

One of the most controversial aspects of his map is that it would carve up African American Congressman Al Lawson's north Florida district.

"I appreciate wholeheartedly that district being protected and being seen in maps," said Rep. Tracie Davis (D-Jacksonville) during a House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee meeting on Friday.

On Thursday, Davis decried DeSantis' proposal to eliminate Congressional District 5, where African American voters make up 44% of the constituency, giving them enough voting power to elect a candidate of their choice.

"It is insulting. We have never had a governor take part in redistricting," Davis said at the rally.

DeSantis has the power to veto the legislature's congressional map, but state lawmakers are tasked with drawing the lines.

Speaking at the rally, Rep. Al Lawson said that keeping his district intact isn't about him. "It's about those who come behind me and have the opportunity to represent minority interests in the state."

Unlike DeSantis' map, both the Senate and House plans keep Lawson's district largely intact. The Senate has already passed its map, and the House plan is still under review in committee.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

During the House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee on Friday, the chamber's proposed map passed (14-7) with Democrats voting against it. They argue Democratic Rep. Val Demings' Orlando district — Congressional District 10 — should remain intact.

The Senate's plan keeps that district, while the House plan reconfigures the district's lines. The two chambers must negotiate a final plan before they send it to DeSantis for approval.

Rep. Kelly Skidmore, the House Redistricting Committee's ranking Democratic member, was among those voting against the plan. "I do also love and respect and admire the legislative process that allows us to start at a point where we might be in disagreement and at a point where we are all on the same page," Skidmore said. "I'm looking forward to that process."

Hinting veto, DeSantis pressures lawmakers to reduce Black-held congressional districts

Florida Times-Union
John Kennedy
February 11, 2022

Gov. Ron DeSantis is heightening tension over Florida's congressional redistricting, indicating he still wants fellow Republican leaders in the Legislature to craft new boundaries that would eliminate half of the state's districts now held by Black members of Congress.

DeSantis challenged lawmakers Friday, a day after the Florida Supreme Court refused to provide him with a requested advisory opinion on the constitutionality of erasing a Jacksonville-to-Tallahassee district represented by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson.

Lawson's district and another now held by Orlando U.S. Rep. Val Demings would be dramatically reshaped under a proposed map put forward by DeSantis.

Demings and Lawson are both Black Democrats elected in 2016. Their districts are among four in Florida where Black voting populations are considered by courts to be large enough for minority voters to elect a representative of their choice.

DeSantis, speaking Friday in Marianna, restated his view that Lawson's district could be considered unconstitutional.

"We will not be signing any congressional map that has an unconstitutional gerrymander in it, and that is going to be the position that we stick to," DeSantis said, adding, "take that to the bank."

DeSantis apparently felt the need to flex over redistricting, following a Hurricane Michael relief aid ceremony, because the Legislature is moving ahead and showing no interest in his call for a congressional map that could reduce Black representation in Florida.

The governor is authorized to veto a congressional plan not to his liking. The state constitution doesn't give him that power over state House and Senate maps.

The governor had asked the Supreme Court earlier this month for an opinion on whether the state constitution expressly prohibits the redrawing of congressional boundaries that could diminish the number of seats held by minorities.

House moved ahead with its own map after judges turned down DeSantis
But when the court, in a 5-0 decision Thursday, answered the governor by turning down his request for guidance, the House raced ahead. Hours later, lawmakers there unveiled a congressional map that largely maintains Lawson’s current Jacksonville-to-Tallahassee district and the relatively large Black population in Demings’ district.

House Speaker Chris Sprowls, R-Palm Harbor, said after the ruling by justices that he considers it important to the constitutional integrity of the map to preserve the four Black-leaning congressional districts and another four that favor the election of Hispanic representatives to Congress.

Now, however, DeSantis appears intent on pressuring lawmakers to recast congressional boundaries to where they test both the state constitution’s Fair Districts standards and the federal Voting Rights Act.

Any reduction of minority representation is certain to draw legal challenges from civil rights and voter organizations closely watching the once-a-decade redistricting in Florida and other states. The Florida Senate has already approved a congressional plan that maintains the state’s minority districts.

US Congressman Al Lawson, Jr.
Based on results in the 2020 presidential race in Florida, the Legislature’s congressional maps also create boundaries likely to elect 16 Republicans to 12 Democrats, compared with the state’s current 16-11 Republican edge in Congress from Florida.

The state is gaining a congressional seat this year because of population gains, with a big increase in Florida Hispanics a driver of the increase.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

DeSantis, though, in the map his general counsel, Ryan Newman, submitted last month, would create district lines that could lead to Republicans electing 18 members from Florida, compared to 10 Democrats.

Eliminating two of the state's four Black members of Congress accomplishes that goal. Republicans are eager to regain control of Congress in this fall's elections, and winning additional seats in Florida would help the party on that path.

DeSantis also seems to be relying heavily on a 2017 U.S. Supreme Court ruling in a North Carolina case that found it unconstitutional to racially gerrymander a seat, except in narrow instances, which Lawson's district may not meet.

U.S. Rep. Val Demings
Lawson's seat was created by the Florida Supreme Court in 2015 — two years before the U.S. Supreme Court decision came down. Florida's congressional districts were crafted by state justices after three years of legal fights over the last round of map-drawing in 2012.

Texas, where Gov. Greg Abbott, like DeSantis, is viewed as a Republican White House contender in 2024, has already approved redistricting maps that reduce minority representation, drawing a lawsuit from the U.S. Justice Department under President Biden.

Florida's legislative leaders have insisted that they are intent on following state and federal law in redistricting this year, unlike a decade ago when unconstitutional steps by Republican leaders spawned years of court contests.

But DeSantis' push for reducing minority seats to improve the state's Republican performance could spark another courtroom battle over redistricting.

Florida lawmakers resume work on US House map

WFSU
Valerie Crowder
February 10, 2022

Florida House lawmakers are preparing to move forward with passing a congressional map after Gov. Ron DeSantis' request for judicial guidance on one of the state's minority access districts was denied.

The House Redistricting Committee submitted its version of a new U.S. House map on Thursday — soon after the state's highest court rejected DeSantis' request for an advisory opinion on the constitutionality of maintaining north Florida's African American opportunity district. House lawmakers paused progress on finalizing its congressional map last week after DeSantis asked the state Supreme Court to weigh in on Congressional District 5, which stretches from Gadsden County to the western part of Jacksonville.

Next Friday, the House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee will take up the proposed map, which keeps the district largely intact.

"We are going to follow the law," said Republican House Speaker Chris Sprowls, speaking to reporters on Thursday. "We are going to come out with a map that complies."

Democratic Rep. Al Lawson, an African American congressman, represents the eight-county district. In 2015, the state Supreme Court cited the district as a possible minority access district. Black voters make up 44% of the district's constituency.

The state Senate has already passed a congressional map that largely maintains the district's lines. After the House passes its version, the two chambers must negotiate a final plan before sending it to the governor for approval. DeSantis may veto the plan or choose not to sign it. If lawmakers can't reach an agreement, then the state Supreme Court will have the final say on how the lines are drawn.

Before DeSantis asked the court to issue guidance, he submitted his own version of a congressional map that carves up the district into four compact districts, effectively diminishing Black voters' ability to elect a congressional candidate of their choice.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

In a 5-0 ruling, the court said DeSantis' question was too broad and would require a "fact-intensive analysis." The court also noted that questions about the state's congressional map are likely to arise later in the process.

"History shows that the constitutionality of a final redistricting bill for all congressional districts will be subject to more judicial review through subsequent challenges in court."

Staff proposals to redraw Florida's congressional lines for the next decade, including adding a new Republican-leaning district in Polk County, drew bipartisan praise from senators Tuesday.

Sen. Linda Stewart, D-Orlando, said after a staff presentation on differences in four nearly identical staff proposals that, "from where I stand right now, it's really a good plan on almost all of them."

"It's been out in the public for seven or eight days now, I have heard no negative feedback on any of these," Stewart said, before adding, "to date. We may hear some as more people have an opportunity to look at it."

Sen. Gayle Harrell, R-Stuart, said she is setting up a Zoom meeting with constituents from the Treasure Coast and Palm Beach County to gather input and encouraged other lawmakers to do the same, as the Senate and House have not announced plans to hold hearings across the state.

"I hope that they (Harrell's constituents) will take the time to look at them (the maps) in detail," she said.

The once-a-decade redistricting process will be a major issue during the 2022 legislative session, which will start Jan. 11. New congressional, state Senate and state House maps must be completed before qualifying for next year's elections begins June 13.

Senate staff members last week released initial proposals for congressional and Senate districts. The House has not released drafts.

Jennifer Bradley, a Fleming Island Republican who chairs the Senate Select Subcommittee on Congressional Reapportionment, directed Senate staff members to consider further “improvements and consistency” before the panel meets again Nov. 29.

Meanwhile, League of Women Voters of Florida President Cecile Scoon said more data analysis is needed on precinct level impacts “so that we can look at all the minority access districts and the majority-minority districts.”

Scoon added that Senate staff members need to conduct a “functional analysis” of every district due to the state’s growing population to determine if there have been decreases in the ability of minority voters to elect candidates of their choosing.

AD: Coalition for the National Infrastructure Bank (NIB) Jay Ferrin, staff director of the Senate Reapportionment Committee, said staff followed U.S. Census blocks, not precincts to set up the new lines. And while saying staff will consider district-by-district functional analyses, Ferrin said he isn’t sure “the population growth across the state compels us to do that.”

The initial Senate proposals would accommodate the new Polk County congressional district by condensing districts to the east around Orlando and to the west in the Tampa region. The changes, however, wouldn’t vastly alter two districts —- District 7 held by Democratic Congresswoman Stephanie Murphy and District 13 held by Democratic Congressman Charlie Crist —- that have received the most attention from pundits as potential targets for the Republican-dominated Legislature to help flip U.S. House seats.

In South Florida, the maps would move lines throughout Miami-Dade County, as District 24 covering Miami, Miami Gardens, Miramar and Hollywood would be pushed east away from Miramar to the shoreline, including Miami Beach, North Bay Village and Sunny Isles Beach. The seat is held by Democrat Frederica Wilson.

Also, two of the proposals would move District 21 in Palm Beach County further inland. The district is held by Democrat Lois Frankel. In those maps, District 22, held by Democrat Ted Deutch, would move up the coastline to include Palm Beach, Delray Beach, Boynton Beach and Lake Worth Beach.

In the 2020 presidential election, former President Donald Trump won 15 of the state’s 27 congressional districts. Under the draft proposals, which include the added seat, it appears the Trump win total would have been 16 districts.

Florida is gaining a 28th U.S. House seat because of population growth over the past decade.

The state’s congressional delegation is currently made up of 16 Republicans and 10 Democrats, with one open seat in a heavily Democratic South Florida district.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Ferrin said a “functional analysis” has been conducted on a number of districts, including District 9 in Osceola County, held by Democrat Darren Soto, and District 10 in Orange County, held by Democrat Val Demings.

Ferrin said District 9, due to an increase in the Hispanic population, is now a majority-minority district, while changes to District 10 wouldn’t diminish the ability of African-Americans to participate in the political process or elect candidates of their choice.

Similar analysis affirmed the majority-minority status of District 20 in Palm Beach and Broward counties, formerly represented by the late-Congressman Alcee Hastings, and the Hispanic majority-minority status for every district covering Miami-Dade County.

House approves new state districts, awaits word from Supreme Court on congressional lines

Orlando Sentinel
News Service of Florida
February 3, 2022

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida House on Wednesday approved new legislative districts over the objections of Democrats, who anticipate legal challenges about minority representation and how the lines were drawn.

House members voted 77-39 along party lines to approve the plan (SJR 100), which likely will allow Republicans to maintain control of the Legislature into the 2030s. The plan will go back to the Senate for a final vote before being sent to the Florida Supreme Court for review.

But while lawmakers are close to finishing state House and Senate maps as part of the once-a-decade reapportionment process, new congressional maps remain unresolved.

Gov. Ron DeSantis on Tuesday sought an advisory opinion from the state Supreme Court about his effort to eliminate what is now Congressional District 5, which strectches from Jacksonville to west of Tallahassee. The district is held by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat, and was designed to help with minority representation.

The Senate has approved a proposed congressional map that would follow the same general design of the current District 5. The House has not produced a congressional map, but House Speaker Chris Sprowls, R-Palm Harbor, said Wednesday that DeSantis' request was "appropriate.

The new legislative and congressional districts need to be in place before qualifying for this year's elections begins June 13.

House Democrats argued Tuesday and Wednesday they were unable to offer alternative maps to the House legislative proposal. They said they were offered little input in the redistricting process, despite having seats on committees that worked on the maps.

"We were told that the maps were drawn by somebody. I stand here today, and I still don't know who was in the room," Rep. Joe Geller, D-Aventura, said. "We're told that counsel is shown on the House website. And yes, it is. Three sets of law firms. That's a fact. It's there. Which of them, and who from them, was substantively in the room when the policy decisions were made, I'm not clear on."

House Redistricting Chairman Rep. Tom Leek, R-Ormond Beach, defended the process, saying the House didn't employ "outside or political operatives," which was an issue a decade ago that led to lawsuits and the need to redraw the lines

"This is not the same process we had, you know, 10 years ago, 20 years ago, or 30 years ago," Leek added, nodding toward 2010 constitutional amendments — known as the Fair Districts Amendments — that were aimed at preventing gerrymandering.

"This is a new process," Leek continued. "We have the benefit of our prior history."

The reapportionment process occurs after U.S. Census data is released. But the data was late this year because of the coronavirus pandemic, which shortened the amount of time lawmakers had to put together the maps. Lawmakers did not follow the past practice of holding public meetings across the state to seek input.

The House crafted its own lines while signing off on new district layouts for the 40 Senate seats, which were approved Jan. 20 by the Senate. The plan has to go back to the Senate for a final vote because the Senate has not approved the new House districts.

House Republicans currently hold 78 of the 120 seats. The new map would carve 71 districts where voters supported former Republican President Donald Trump in 2020 and 49 that favored Democratic President Joe Biden.

Minority Leader Evan Jenne, D-Hollywood, termed the House Republicans' response to Democratic questions on the maps "a song and dance."

"I have a feeling people in the federal courts will probably have a little bit of a different view, once that tap dancing occurs in their courtroom," Jenne said.

An issue for Democrats is that the House map maintains 18 protected Black districts and 12 protected Hispanic districts.

Democrats contend benchmarks used by the House failed to address increases in Black, Hispanic and Creole-speaking residents over the past decade.

DeSantis vows veto of Congress maps; House seeks to break up Murphy, Demings seats

Orlando Sentinel

February 11, 2022

Gov. Ron DeSantis on Friday threatened to veto any congressional map coming out of the Legislature that doesn't eliminate a Black district in North Florida.

But the compromise congressional map released late Thursday by the Republican-led state House, while less extreme than DeSantis' proposal, would still dramatically alter Central Florida's congressional districts, experts said.

"This is a mess at the moment," said Michael McDonald, a professor of political science at the University of Florida. "This is a train wreck that's in motion, and we're going to have to see if they can somehow avoid derailing the whole process."

Both DeSantis' map and the House map would turn Democrat Stephanie Murphy's district into a Republican-leaning one and create a plurality-white Democratic primary in the district held by Val Demings, now a candidate for U.S. Senate. That could greatly reduce the odds that a Black candidate will succeed her.

The House map also sets up a showdown with the GOP-controlled state Senate, which passed its own plan and considers Demings' District 10 in west Orange County as designed to give African Americans representation under state and federal law.

And both chambers could soon face the wrath of DeSantis.

"We will not be signing any congressional map that has an unconstitutional gerrymander in it," DeSantis said Friday of District 5 in North Florida, historically an African American seat. "And that is going to be the position that we stick to, so just take that to the bank."

DeSantis' campaign to eliminate District 5 came after he faced pressure from a key figure in Donald Trump's orbit.

According to the Washington Post, former Trump adviser Steve Bannon began publicly pressuring DeSantis and state legislators to draw more districts that would have voted for Trump.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Just days before DeSantis dropped his surprise map on Martin Luther King Day weekend, Bannon's podcast's account on Gettr, a right-wing social media site, asked followers to contact DeSantis "and tell him to [stay] focused on redistricting in his state to be sure MAGA gets these seats," the Post reported.

DeSantis was dealt a setback Thursday in his attempt to eliminate District 5 when the state Supreme Court refused to issue an advisory opinion on whether the district's majority-minority status was required under the law.

The House's release of its own map hours later came after Speaker Chris Sprowls defied DeSantis and announced District 5 would remain intact despite DeSantis' wishes.

The House map, which has yet to come up for a vote, would give Republicans an 18-10 advantage in congressional seats compared to a 16-12 GOP advantage in the Senate map.

The DeSantis map has a similar 18-10 GOP advantage to the House map, according to the last presidential results. But with tighter margins in some districts, it's "realistic" the GOP could have as much as a 20-8 advantage, said Matt Isbell, an elections expert who runs the MCIMaps website.

"Compared to the DeSantis plan, it looks like a compromise," Isbell said of the House map. "But it's actually still a plan that was pretty bad when it came out. It was just DeSantis somehow made it worse."

In attempting to win back U.S. Rep. Murphy's District 7 in Seminole and parts of Orange counties, Isbell said, the Republican-drawn House map removes Orange and adds much of GOP-leaning Volusia County.

But in doing so, Isbell said, the map also splits up Orange County's Black voters, most of which are currently in District 10, and disperses them among three districts, one of which strongly leans Republican and none of which would automatically favor a Black candidate.

"It'd be so easy to grab basically every African American voter in western Orange," Isbell said. "It's a nice, compact community. … You have this split of the African American community that is so easy to avoid."

In a seat such as District 10 in which Democrats would be overwhelmingly expected to win, the Democratic primary is the de facto election and African Americans currently have a 70% majority there among Democratic primary voters.

The House map, however, would create a district in which whites would become the plurality Democratic primary voters, with 41% of voters compared with African Americans' 37% of the vote.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“The Senate has staked out a legal position that the district in Orlando, the 10th District, is [legally] protected,” Isbell said. “So by that logic, theoretically, they should not be willing to accept the House map ever.

“That’s a real conflict,” he continued. “That’s not just about, ‘Oh, maybe we could do the lines here or here.’ This is a pretty fundamental question about protected districts.”

Republicans in the Legislature could have been emboldened by last week’s U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing Alabama’s redistricting map to go forward despite a legal challenge over lack of minority representation. That decision was on top of previous rulings that allow partisan gerrymandering as long as it isn’t along racial lines.

They could also be responding to heavily skewed maps in Democratic-led states.

While Democrats at the national level have pushed for gerrymandering reforms, only to be blocked by Senate Republicans, Democrats on the state level have taken advantage of the gridlock by pushing through maps including a 22-4 Democratic-leaning map in New York and a 14-3 Democratic-leaning map in Illinois.

But, McDonald said, the situations with federal law and in other states are very different than in Florida, which has its own legal protections for minorities.

“That Alabama case actually has no bearing on Florida’s constitution,” he said. “... It’s up to the Florida Supreme Court to look at its own state constitution. And we have pretty strong language compared with some other states about what can and can’t be done.”

McDonald said the Senate map and the alternative House map both finding ways to easily preserve District 10 would be “compelling evidence” against the House map.

“That said, we have a Republican-majority state Supreme Court,” he said. " … I think what the House is banking on is that that the Court is going to give them wide latitude.”

And DeSantis’ veto threat still looms over everything.

“So we’re in a three-way tug of war here,” McDonald said.

DeSantis Opposes Budget Cut for Mask Mandate Districts

Gov. Ron DeSantis said he doesn't support a House budget move to cut the amount of money going to 12 school districts that required students to wear masks during the height of the COVID pandemic. The governor said Friday that a better way to continue to punish those districts would be to allow parents to sue over the mask mandates, which could end up costing districts more. The House budget includes a provision that cuts $200 million from the budgets of the 12 districts that defied a state rule with mask mandates and redistributes the money to the state's other 55 districts. DeSantis said that the budget penalty could end up penalizing teachers or students "because of the actions of some union-controlled school board members, (so) let's not do that." Instead, the governor said, "what you could do is say, any parent whose kid was illegally force-masked this year in Florida in any of those districts, they should have the right to sue if their kids have any negative effects of it – if they have speech problems, if they have emotional problems, physical problems." Mr. Popper,

My name is Ryan Newman, and I am General Counsel to Governor Ron DeSantis. John Gore at Jones Day suggested that I reach out to you.

The Florida House of Representatives has scheduled a committee hearing for this coming Friday, March 18, on its congressional redistricting map. The House proposal retains Congressional District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

We were hoping that you might be interested in serving as a witness at the hearing to educate the committee on why retaining this district would likely violate the U.S. Constitution.

Please let me know if you would be interested in speaking with us. I'm cc'ing Jason Torchinsky and Mo Jazil, who have been representing the Governor's office and the Florida Department of State as outside counsel. Josh Pratt and Nick Meros are Deputy GCs in my office.

I look forward to hearing from you.

DeSantis' latest congressional map divides Polk County into 4 districts

The Ledger
Gary White
April 14, 2022

For months, the Florida Legislature signaled that it would create a new congressional district covering all of Polk County.

Now that the Legislature has given Gov. Ron DeSantis full control of the redistricting process, it appears Polk County will be split into four congressional districts — with the boundary between two slicing through the center of Lakeland. North Lakeland would be represented by three different representatives.

DeSantis' staff submitted a proposed map Wednesday for Florida's 28 districts in the U.S. House of Representatives. The state is gaining one seat because of population growth, and the Legislature is charged with crafting new district boundaries every 10 years.

DeSantis vetoed maps that the Legislature adopted in this year's session, objecting to districts in North Florida that he asserts are unconstitutional. The Legislature will hold a special session on redistricting next week, and Republican leaders have said that they will not prepare new maps but instead defer to DeSantis.

Deadline too tight? Polk supervisor of elections warns state's deadline on congressional maps is too late

Previously:Polk legislators confident they'll reach a deal on maps

In Gov. Ron DeSantis' latest proposed congressional map, two districts cut Lakeland directly down the middle.

Divided among four districts

The map DeSantis revealed Wednesday drastically changes the boundaries of districts in Central Florida, contrasting sharply with versions the Legislature had been considering for months. Instead of being contained within one district, Polk County is divided among four, one of them extending from Lakeland south to Collier County, near Naples.

In DeSantis' latest map, the largest segment of Polk County lies within District 18. That district has a northern border mostly along Interstate 4, though it juts up toward Polk City.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The district extends eastward to encompass almost all of eastern Polk County, including Davenport, Haines City and Lake Wales. It stretches south to the Big Cypress National Preserve, containing all or part of Highlands, Hardee, DeSoto, Glades, Okeechobee, Hendry and Collier counties.

Most notably for local residents, the western border of District 18 runs along U.S. 98 North and South Florida Avenue through the heart of Lakeland. That means that people living on opposite sides of Lakeland's main thoroughfare would be in different congressional districts.

In DeSantis' map, District 15 borders District 18 to the west. That district contains Lakeland Linder International Airport and western Lakeland, zigzagging south to State Road 60 near Willow Oak.

In the proposed map released Wednesday, a portion of North Lakeland around US 98 and Marcum Road is split between three congressional districts.
District 15 stretches west to include Brandon, Temple Terrace and northern Hillsborough County and north to cover southern Pasco County, including Zephyrhills.

District 11 contains most of Polk County north of Interstate 4 as well as parts of Lake, Sumter and Orange counties. District 9 covers just a small section of northeast Polk County in the Poinciana area, along with Osceola County and southern Orange County.
Polk County is currently divided into three congressional districts. Rep. Scott Franklin, R-Lakeland, represents District 15, which covers Lakeland and northern Polk County, eastern Hillsborough and southern Lake.

Rep. Darren Soto, D-Kissimmee, represents District 9, which encompasses eastern Polk County (including Winter Haven and Haines City), and parts of Osceola and Orange counties. Rep. Greg Steube, R-Sarasota, represents District 17, which covers southern Polk County and all or part of eight other counties, stretching as far south as Lee County.

Melissa Kelly, a spokeswoman for Franklin, said Thursday that if DeSantis' map is adopted, he will run in District 18.

An overview of congressional districts as they appear in a new map proposed by Gov. Ron DeSantis on Wednesday.
Lakeland has been contained within a single congressional district for decades, according to Ledger research. Polk County had also confined to one district for decades until the last round of redistricting, which divided the county into three.

Florida's Fair Districts Amendments, passed by state voters in 2010, created guidelines for lawmakers to follow in drawing congressional districts. The law resulting from those amendments says that districts should respect city, county and other geographical boundaries as much as possible.

The Ledger emailed DeSantis' office Thursday morning to ask how the map, which divides Lakeland down the middle, follows the guidelines for geographic integrity. The office did not immediately respond.

DeSantis calling the shots?
DeSantis has taken a far more active role in redistricting than any previous Florida governor. The state constitution assigns the Legislature the responsibility for formulating congressional districts, with no formal role assigned to the governor.

The Legislature began accepting public submissions last fall for potential district maps. Redistricting committees in the state House and Senate then prepared their own maps during the session that ran from January to March.

In an unprecedented action, DeSantis' office submitted its own suggested maps during the session. The governor has repeatedly said that he considers House District 5 in North Florida to be an unconstitutional example of "racial gerrymandering."

That district, shallow but wide and stretching from Jacksonville to west of Tallahassee, has a nearly majority Black population and is now represented by Rep. Al Lawson, D-Tallahassee.

In response to DeSantis' threat of a veto, the Legislature adopted two maps. The primary design has District 5 contained in Duval County, and a secondary map shows the district in essentially its current form.

Legislative leaders said they included the alternate version to be used in case a court invalidates the primary map. But DeSantis still vetoed the maps, leading to the call for a special session for April 19-22.

Earlier this week, Senate President Wilton Simpson, R-Trilby, and House Speaker Chris Sprowls, R-Palm Harbor, announced that the Legislature would not prepare its own congressional maps but instead work with whatever design DeSantis' office proposed.

Analyses show that DeSantis' map would likely result in two fewer Black members of Florida's House delegation and increase Republicans' advantage by at least two seats. If the Legislature adopts the design, legal challenges are almost certain to follow, and courts could end up deciding on Florida's congressional boundaries.

House differs from DeSantis, Senate on congressional map

February 18, 2022

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (NSF) - House Republicans advanced a map for new congressional lines Friday that includes a disputed North Florida district closer to what the Senate proposed than what Gov. Ron DeSantis has sought.

Still, the Republican-controlled House Congressional Redistricting Subcommittee voted along party lines to approve a plan (PCB CRS 22-01) that could add two seats for the GOP in Florida's congressional delegation.

Democrats and other critics contend the proposed map would not fully reflect the growth of Hispanic and Black populations in Central Florida and South Florida.

But subcommittee Chairman Tyler Sirois, R-Merritt Island, said the House has engaged lawyers and outside experts to provide assistance with statistical analysis in anticipation of litigation.

"This is a legally sound map. It's a constitutionally compliant map," Sirois said.

The proposal would need approval from the House Redistricting Committee, which is scheduled to meet Thursday, before it could go to the full House. Ultimately, the Senate and House will have to reach an agreement on a congressional map that then would go to the DeSantis.

Friday's meeting came after the once-a-decade process of redrawing congressional districts stalled because of issues involving Congressional District 5, a minority-access district that stretches across a swath of North Florida and is held by Democrat Al Lawson.

The Senate passed a proposed map that largely would keep the same design of the district, which goes from Jacksonville to west of Tallahassee. But DeSantis offered a proposal that would have dramatically changed the configuration and then sought an advisory opinion from the Florida Supreme Court.

TALLAHASSEE — The balance of power in Florida, and maybe even in Washington, lies in the hands of 160 state lawmakers who have already begun the process to redraw congressional and legislative boundaries.

Redistricting is inherently political, as any change in the lines can mean the difference between winning or losing a U.S. House or legislative seat. That's especially true in Florida, a historic swing state whose constant population surges mean the 2020 U.S. Census data used to capture the changes will reshuffle the political calculus.

The stakes are high. Democrats hold a slender 220-212 advantage on the U.S. House over Republicans, so a map that helps elect one or two more Republicans could help push the GOP over the top to control the chamber after the 2022 midterm elections.

"It can make the difference," said Matt Isbell, an elections expert who runs the MCIMaps website, of Florida's redistricting. "With the House as close it is, every state's redistricting process really matters here."

Republicans' advantage over Democrats in the Legislature, which stands at 78-42 in the House and 24-16 in the Senate, is unlikely to be overcome by changes in the maps.

Lawmakers held their first meetings on redistricting in September but won't hold floor votes on new maps until the next regular session begins Jan. 11.

The 'shadow process'
On the surface, the task is simple: redraw boundaries to account for the uneven population growth since 2010. The current maps were drawn to have 696,345 people in each congressional district; the new maps, which will include an additional 28th district, will need to have 769,221 people in each.

But there are plenty of laws, rules and guidelines that govern where lawmakers can draw the new lines. The most recent are the Fair District Amendments passed by voters in 2010, which prohibit drawing lines to favor or disfavor political parties, incumbents or ethnic groups.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Those amendments tripped up Republicans in charge of the Legislature during the last redistricting cycle, leading to a drawn-out court battle that ended with the Florida Supreme Court adopting state Senate and U.S. House maps drawn by the League of Women Voters in 2015.

In the subsequent 2016 elections with the new maps, Democrats gained one seat in the Florida congressional delegation and one seat in the state Senate.

The court found some GOP state senators and consultants engaged in a “shadow process” to pass maps that were favorable to Republicans. This time around, Republicans leading the redistricting process have pledged to follow the law and stamp that out by requiring each person who submits a map to reveal whether they’re a lobbyist or have been paid or reimbursed by an outside group.

“[House Speaker Chris Sprowls] and I have made it consistently and abundantly clear that the House will conduct this process in compliance with the Florida Constitution and relevant federal and state legal standards, including relevant court precedent,” House Redistricting Committee chairman Tom Leek, R-Ormond Beach, said at the outset of the panel’s first meeting on Sept. 22.

Nevertheless, Democrats are wary that Republicans will bend or break the Fair Districts amendments this time because the makeup of the Florida Supreme Court has switched from a 5-2 liberal majority to a 6-1 conservative bench.

“My biggest concern is individual members doing something that violates the constitution,” said House Democratic Leader Evan Jenne. “That’s my biggest worry for the entire process — Democrats and Republicans — is somebody trying to influence the maps so that it benefits them, somebody they know.”

If lawmakers are given more leeway within the bounds of the Fair Districts amendments, it would be only the latest erosion of federal laws and court precedents governing redistricting.

‘Pork Chop Gang’: Florida’s past

Before the 1960s, lawmakers redrawing political boundaries was a foregone conclusion. White, male Democrats from rural districts drew lines without regard for equalizing the populations allowing them to remain in control of the Legislature.

Prior to the Civil Rights Era, a group of 20 conservative Democrats known as the “Pork Chop Gang” held power in the Legislature at the expense of urban areas. At times, a minority of 12% of voters could elect a majority to the state Senate.

There were no minority access districts to worry about to make sure African-Americans got a chance to vote in a Black lawmaker. Through a series of Jim Crow laws, Blacks were effectively barred from the polling booth anyway.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Historically, the courts had little say in how districts were drawn, as the U.S. Constitution gives the power to the state legislatures. Then in the 1960s, the Voting Rights Act and a series of U.S. Supreme Court decisions opened the door to greater review by the courts, gave protections against racial gerrymandering and required states to divide districts with an equal or approximate equal population.

Some of those precedents, however, have been eroded in the past decade. In 2013, the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Shelby County v. Holder found that section 5 of the Voting Rights Act was invalid.

That provision had required federal Department of Justice approval of voting law changes and redistricting plans in jurisdictions with a history of racist voting laws. In Florida, it had applied to Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough and Monroe counties.

Another U.S. Supreme Court decision in 2019, Rucho v. Common Cause, renounced the federal courts' power to review claims that state maps excessively favor one party.

State Rep. Geraldine Thompson, D-Windermere, said she'll be looking to ensure Republicans don't pack African-American voters who largely vote Democratic in districts as a way of improving GOP performance in surrounding districts.

She said her victory as a Black woman in House District 44, which was 60% white and 10% Black as of the 2010 Census, shows diminishing the Black vote doesn't equate to a reduction in Black lawmakers.

"There is concern that will be an excuse for packing and therefore bleaching everything around the few minority districts that are carved out," Thompson said. "You don't have to pack minority individuals in single one or two districts in order to have minority representation."

'Like a meteor': The future

One thing that is certain is Thompson's district, which now covers western Orange County and includes Winter Garden, Windermere and Disney World, will change. That district saw the greatest growth of any House seat in the last 10 years at 51%. It has 237,174 people or 57,689 more than the ideal population of 179,485 per district.

And it's not just her district.

All of Central Florida is where most of the action will be when it comes to drawing the new lines, experts said, thanks to its booming population, growing Hispanic numbers and a potential GOP target in Democratic U.S. Rep. Stephanie Murphy's swing seat.

But those situations all intersect with each other, meaning Republicans in the Legislature will have to make a choice. Do they focus on squeezing as many GOP seats as they can out of a new map, helping the party win back Congress in 2022? Or do they look at long-term trends and focus on protecting their incumbents with the safest seats?

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

“It’s going to come down to how much risk Republicans are willing to accept,” said Michael McDonald, a political science professor at the University of Florida.

Osceola County saw an almost 73% increase in the Hispanic population from 2010 to 2020, according to the U.S. Census, and Hispanics now make up more than half the total population. Orange and Polk counties saw similar increases, with Hispanics making up 33% and 25% of the populations of those counties, respectively.

That means a majority Hispanic district could be drawn in Central Florida, a major milestone but also one that might have to be drawn according to federal law. While the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that partisan motivation could now be used to draw maps, ethnic representation is still protected under the Civil Rights Act.

District 9, which stretches from Orange County through Osceola to Polk and is currently held by Democratic U.S. Rep. Darren Soto, the first Congress member from Florida with a Puerto Rican background.

“You can’t really change its Hispanic character, since it’s currently electing a Hispanic candidate,” McDonald said. “You’re not going to radically carve it up, because that would just be an entree for the Department of Justice to come in with a lawsuit.”

But Florida could follow the lead of Texas, where the newest announced maps seemed to flaunt the Civil Rights Act by keeping heavily Hispanic areas split. Even so, Isbell agreed with McDonald that Florida Republicans probably don’t want to start a fight over the issue.

“It’s one thing to raise a lawsuit under Fair Districts,” Isbell said. “It’s a whole other can of worms to trigger a Voting Rights Act lawsuit. … In 2014 and 2015, there’s this history of these folks being dragged through depositions and being embarrassed about what was going on. So if you’re a current lawmaker, do you really want to put up with all that?”

Targeting Rep. Murphy?
A better option for Republicans, he said, plays into a potential attack on Murphy by moving Democratic voters into a largely African American 10th District and a majority Hispanic 9th and leaving fewer Democrats in her 7th district in Seminole and Orange counties. That would alter a seat that Murphy won handily three times but is considered evenly split among Democrats and Republicans by Cook Political Report.

“It’s the smarter political move to just pack up the 9th and 10th as much as possible and see if you can keep the rest of Orlando out of the 7th,” Isbell said.

But, both Isbell and McDonald said, there could just be too many Democrats in Orange County, and eventually even Seminole County, for that to work.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

There were 367,994 registered Democrats and 215,154 registered Republicans in Orange County as of Oct. 1. In Seminole, Democrats were just behind Republicans with 115,090 registered voters to the GOP's 115,334. Many Democratic-leaning Puerto Rican and Hispanic voters also register as unaffiliated.

In addition, breaking up Murphy's seat could mean dispersing Democratic voters into neighboring Republican-held districts, a potentially dangerous strategy for GOP lawmakers when the area is likely to trend even more Democratic over the next 10 years.

Texas again provides a potential guide. Instead of extreme gerrymandering by the GOP Legislature to gain even more GOP seats, McDonald said, it ultimately ended up protecting incumbents by shoring up their Republican-leaning seats instead of radically breaking up Democratic ones.

"Republican incumbents didn't want to draw down the partisan strength of their districts in order to help the potential possibility of electing another Republican," McDonald said.

The kind of suburban areas in Orange and Seminole counties that could be parceled out into safe GOP seats, he said, "have been trending Democratic within the last few election cycles. And that could make Republicans pause. … I think there's some reason to think that Republicans might not be so aggressive."

Another possible movement of Democratic votes would be to recreate the infamous District 5 that stretched from Jacksonville to Orlando, grabbing up Black neighborhoods along the way. But McDonald said that not only would that potentially cause Civil Rights Act problems by breaking up the largely Black 10th District, it would also bring back what Democrats and voting experts pointed to as the "linchpin" of past GOP gerrymandering.

Doing so also would probably violate Fair Districts in that legislators are supposed to consider county lines when drawing districts.

"I don't think that they'll do it," McDonald said. "But I would imagine that it's one of those scenarios that the Republicans are taking a look at."

One seat almost certainly to be gained by Republicans in Central Florida is the new 28th District added this year following the 2020 Census. But even that was one less new seat for Florida than had been predicted leading up to the census, giving Republicans less leeway in where they put it.

"When you drop that rock into Central Florida, it's going to be like a meteor and it's going to create a huge hole," McDonald said of the new district. "And it's going to upset a lot of the other surrounding districts because of the debris."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The Villages, the retirement mecca that stretches across Lake, Marion and Sumter counties, was the fastest-growing metropolitan area in the United States from 2010 to 2020, growing by 39% from about 93,000 to about 130,000 people.

But by itself, the heavily Republican-leaning area probably wouldn't be the basis of a new seat, Isbell and McDonald said. Instead, it's likely to be somewhere along the I-4 Corridor between Orlando and Tampa.

"You can see Polk maybe finally getting a district that's just Polk," Isbell said of the county with a population of 725,000. "Right now it's split between all these different districts."

McDonald said he could envision I-4 as the dividing line for a new district that stretches horizontally to include booming areas around Tampa as well as in Polk.

"As I like to say, and people don't realize this, there are more redistricting plans for a state like Florida than there are quarks in the universe," McDonald said. "It's a huge mathematical partitioning problem. And there are so many different ways in which you can draw a state that it boggles the mind."

The Florida redistricting site, www.floridaredistricting.gov, is available for residents to have access to the same redistricting data and map-drawing application used by the Legislature. Lawmakers say opportunities also will be available for public feedback.

Florida’s No-Show Congressman Could End Up a Redistricting Casualty

Washington Free Beacon

April 14, 2022

A Florida Democrat absent from Congress and his Jacksonville office for nearly two years may come to regret it, as newly proposed district lines imperil his once-safe seat.

Rep. Al Lawson, who has represented Florida's Fifth Congressional District since 2017, has not voted in person for the past year and a half of the coronavirus pandemic. In 2021, he cast 435 proxy votes and missed 3 altogether. This year, he's voted only by proxy so far. His district office in Jacksonville remains closed "out of an abundance of caution," according to images obtained this week by the Washington Free Beacon.

The longtime Florida lawmaker has won each of his three congressional elections by more than 30 percentage points. But that could change if Republican governor Ron DeSantis passes a district map that slices Lawson's constituency in half. The new district, according to a political analysis by FiveThirtyEight, will favor a Republican over Lawson.

Lawson's constituents, especially in the veteran community, said he has stifled their voice in Congress. Steve Adams, a retired Navy commander, told the Free Beacon the congressman's absence made it difficult for "any veteran trying to get any kind of help."

"When disabled or retired veterans need help navigating the Veterans Affairs' bureaucracy, their congressman's office can help get them past the red tape," Adams said. "They don't need even more government offices not returning their calls. Veterans are left high and dry without the assistance of their congressman."

The criticism was echoed by David Trotti, chairman of the Veterans Council of Duval County, which encompasses Jacksonville.

"We need representation in the Jacksonville, Duval County area," Trotti said during a hearing on redistricting. "It's like having a football team in the Super Bowl, but your defensive coordinator works for a different team. He's not at your practices."

Lawson served in the Florida legislature for decades before he defeated Democratic congresswoman Corinne Brown in the 2016 primary. Federal prosecutors charged Brown with corruption during the primary, and she lost her seat. In 2017, she was sentenced to five years in prison on fraud and tax charges. Lawson has not faced a challenger since.

The only members of Congress whose absence is on par with Lawson are Reps. Albio Sires (D., N.J.), Lucille Roybal-Allard (D., Calif.), Rep. Kai Kahele (D., Hawaii), and Frederica Wilson (D., Fla.). All fill seats without a competitive Republican opponent.

Lawson's office did not respond to a request for comment.

Florida's redistricting session: Quick, partisan, and bitter

Politico
Gary Fineout
April 19, 2022

Hello and welcome to Tuesday.

Tick, tick, boom — In the next 48 hours, Florida's Republican-controlled Legislature will likely take up a new congressional map for the state proposed by Gov. Ron DeSantis, muscle it through over the loud opposition of Democrats, and go back home.

Here's your hat, what's your hurry? — The session schedule has lawmakers coming in at noon today and potentially working until Friday. But don't expect them to hang around that long. Instead it will be a drive-by moment of legislating where the Senate will be ready to take up DeSantis' map by late afternoon and then place it in a posture to have both chambers pass it sometime on Wednesday and legislators will then head to the exits. (Worth noting: Legislators running in nonfederal races can't accept campaign donations as long as they are in session.)

Sharp criticism — Black Democrats on Monday decried the proposed map — which completely dismantles the seat held by Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat, and changes the demographic makeup of the one now held by Rep. Val Demings — with state Sen. Shevrin Jones calling it a "racist tactic." Protesters are scheduled to hold a rally on the Capitol steps this morning where they will blast the governor, who contends that recent court decisions justify his proposal to draw up what he calls "race neutral" boundaries.

You have one minute to comment — The timeline laid out means that there will be limited time for the public to weigh in on the maps. And it probably means that the governor's staff won't have to spend too much time explaining unanswered questions about who helped them draw it up and whether it was done for partisan gain. Florida's constitution says legislators can't draw maps designed to favor one party, yet the DeSantis map would create a scenario where Republicans pick up four seats this fall.

Lawyer up — Once all of the finger-pointing and arguing is over there will likely be a race to the courthouse door. But looming deadlines for this year's election means that the map passed in the next two days will probably be the one that is locked in place for 2022. Supposedly, legislative leaders wanted to avoid the knockdown legal battles of the last decade that resulted in previous GOP legislators acknowledging they violated the constitution. But that's all gone now.

How we got here — The reason Florida legislators are at this moment is because DeSantis vetoed the last map that was sent to him. So this time around GOP leaders such as House Speaker Chris Sprowls and Senate President Wilton Simpson threw in the towel and decided to defer to the governor. Sure, there may be a moment of discomfort or two for Republicans over the next two days as they try to explain how this latest map is suddenly legal when a few weeks ago it was a "novel legal theory." Republicans will probably also just shrug as Democrats call them "sheep" or that they have abdicated all power to DeSantis.

Flashback — Just remember this January quote from a current Republican legislator who was granted anonymity: "They are not going to embarrass Ron DeSantis. Ron DeSantis is essentially the speaker of the House, the president of the Senate and the chief justice of the Supreme Court right now."

— WHERE'S RON? — Gov. DeSantis will hold a press conference in The Villages with Education Commissioner Richard Corcoran, Senate President Wilton Simpson and House Speaker Chris Sprowls.

MAPMAKER, MAPMAKER
'WE WILL SEE HIM' — "Black lawmakers call DeSantis for 'racist' actions in redrawn congressional map," by Miami Herald's C. Isaiah Smalls II: "State Sen. Shevrin Jones said that the framing of Florida's last legislative session as "culture wars" masked what was really happening. 'We're using culture wars as a nice way to call out what's actually happening,' Jones said. 'Let's be clear and call it what it is: It's racist.' In an email response, DeSantis spokesperson Christina Pushaw wrote that they 'won't be responding to unsubstantiated allegations from partisan critics.'"

THE NEW MATH — "DeSantis defends math textbook rejection as Dems seek proof of critical race theory lessonss," by POLITICO's Andrew Atterbury: Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis on Monday defended the state's decision to disqualify dozens of proposed math textbooks for broaching critical race theory and other "impermissible" topics while fending off demands from Democrats to release examples of allegedly "indoctrinating" information. "We want kids to learn to think so they get the right answer," DeSantis told reporters Monday at an event in Jacksonville.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

X+Y = ? — The Florida Education Association, the state's largest teachers union, joined Democrats in calling for more transparency over the textbook decisions. "The state has an obligation to ensure that every child is getting the math instruction they need with the highest quality materials," FEA president Andrew Spar said in a statement. DeSantis said he would be open to the state making public examples of the textbooks, but maintained that the content is considered "proprietary information" as publishers weigh possible appeals to the rejections. "I would like it to be released, but I also respect the process," DeSantis told reporters Monday.

MEANWHILE — "School districts 'taken aback' over state's banning of math books," by Orlando Sentinel's Leslie Postal: "Every Central Florida school district recently selected new elementary school math textbooks, then learned Friday their choices had been rejected by the state, which accused publishers of trying to "indoctrinate" students by mixing "critical race theory" and other objectionable content into math lessons. The announcement from the Florida Department of Education surprised educators who selected textbooks from a state list and worked for months to review the various publishers' offerings to pick ones they thought best met Florida's new math standards."

REAP THE WILD WIND — "DeSantis calls for May property insurance special session," by POLITICO's Gary Fineout: "Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis abruptly announced on Monday that he will call state legislators back to Tallahassee in May for a special session to deal with the state's ongoing property insurance crisis. DeSantis' move comes as homeowners' insurance rates are spiking in the state as some providers are teetering amid multiple problems, including ongoing lawsuits and troubles obtaining affordable backup insurance. Lawmakers failed to come up with a legislative solution during the regular session because Republicans were at odds over what steps to take — and whether to require consumers to bear more costs as part of the solution."

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES
SUSPENDED — "TSA won't enforce mask mandate for travel, following Florida ruling," by POLITICO's Alex Daugherty and Erin Banco: The administration said Monday evening that it will stop enforcing the federal mask mandate for travel — for now — after a federal judge in Florida earlier in the day struck down the CDC's mask requirement for planes and trains, ruling that the agency overstepped its statutory authority. An administration official said the federal government is still determining how it will respond to the ruling, but that the CDC masking order, which is enforced by the TSA, "is not in effect at this time."

Reaction — Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis praised the ruling minutes after it was announced. The state of Florida has sued the federal government over various Covid-related restrictions throughout the pandemic, but Monday's ruling was based on a lawsuit by the Health Freedom Defense Fund, a nonprofit that has brought legal challenges to Covid restrictions across the country, and two women in Florida who said the mask mandate led to anxiety and medical issues. "Great to see a federal judge in Florida follow the law and reject the Biden transportation mask mandate," DeSantis tweeted. "Both airline employees and passengers deserve to have this misery end."

CAMPAIGN MODE
MAKING THE GRADE — Much is riding on the 2022 midterm elections: the fate of President Joe Biden's agenda, leadership in state capitals across the country and a potential 2024 comeback by former President Donald Trump.

In the House, Democrats' five-seat majority is highly endangered. In the Senate, Democratic control of the 50-50 chamber hinges on Vice President Kamala Harris' tie-breaking vote.

Use our Election Forecast to see which races you need to watch this year — and who we think will win each one.

For Florida, the forecast has both the governor's race and Senate race as "likely Republican." There are no forecasts for House races because there is still not a final congressional map. POLITICO's Steve Shepard lays out why he thinks Gov. Ron DeSantis and Sen. Marco Rubio will win this fall.

CAMPAIGN ROUNDUP — Maxwell Alejandro Frost, a Democratic candidate for Florida's 10th Congressional District, has picked up multiple endorsements for his campaign including from California Rep. Ro Khanna, State Sen. Victor Torres, the Black Lives Matter PAC, Florida Young Dems, Orange County Young Dems and the Florida Immigration Coalition. … Americans for Prosperity Action Florida announced it was endorsing a list of 13 Republican legislative candidates including Rep. Paul Renner, the next House speaker.

WHAT'S IN YOUR WALLET? — POLITICO Influence delved into what lobbyists are giving money to Republicans in the running for the highly coveted spot as Ways and Mean chair, should the GOP regain control of the House. POLITICO's Caitlin Oprysko reports that Florida Rep. Vern Buchanan, who has seniority over the Smiths on the panel and is seen as the frontrunner, pulled in $1.1 million in the first three months of the year, filings show, compared to $439,000 during the same period in 2020. The haul included contributions from more than three dozen registered lobbyists looking to get — or stay — in Buchanan's good graces. Several lobbyists contributed the maximum amount of $2,900 but Buchanan also received cash from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's political action committee.

And an increasing number of Democrats say the whole thing needs to be paused.

Among the group — Rep. Val Demings of Florida, who is challenging Sen. Marco Rubio (R-Fla.), seemed to defend the Biden administration’s move earlier this month, but her campaign said on Monday that until there is “a plan to put more boots on the ground and support our law enforcement officers at the border, Chief Demings does not support lifting Title 42.”

DeSantis says he wants 'race-neutral' map of congressional districts

Tampa Bay Times
Mary Ellen Klas
April 12, 2022

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Ron DeSantis confirmed Tuesday that the congressional redistricting map he is proposing will dismantle a congressional district designed to help Black voters living in the former plantation territories of North Florida.

"I think that what they'll produce will be something that will be acceptable to folks and obviously we'd get my signature for proposing it," he said at a bill-signing news conference in Miami. "It will, though, have North Florida drawn in a race-neutral manner."

DeSantis has called legislators back into a special session on redistricting next week to redraw Florida congressional districts, and on Monday House and Senate leaders announced that, after successfully passing a legislative map that the court has approved, they will leave the map-drawing work on the congressional plan to the governor.

He cited Cooper v. Harris, a 2017 case in which the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-3 that the North Carolina General Assembly engaged in "unconstitutional racial gerrymanders" by relying on race too heavily when it drew two congressional districts following the 2010 Census.

DeSantis said the current Congressional District 5, which stretches across North Florida from Tallahassee to Jacksonville, linking urban and rural Black voters in a region that was home to the slave plantations of the 1800s, "divvies up people based on the color of their skin."

"That is wrong," he said. "That is not the way we've governed in the State of Florida. ... There has never been a district of that length and that shape that has been justifiable."

DeSantis argued that if legislators retained Congressional District 5, which is held by U.S. Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat, the map will be challenged as unconstitutional, and if legislators dismantle the district, as he wants, the map will also face litigation.

"You're gonna have litigation either way," he said. "... But I think the odds are higher that a map that is race-neutral will be approved. And I think it's more likely that one that did that kind of intentional drawing would be ruled to violate the 14th Amendment."

Governor, Legislature at odds over this map

The governor's comments were the most explicit yet as tensions over the fate of redistricting have been festering for months. In January, the Republican governor broke with tradition and proposed his own congressional redistricting map that gave Republicans a 20-8 advantage over Democrats. It also contradicted the legal approach embraced by House and Senate Republican leaders, which preserved the four Black congressional districts approved by the courts in 2015.

By contrast, DeSantis' proposal eliminated the North Florida Black congressional district, weakened a Black district in Orlando, and left the state with just two districts that would reliably elect Black candidates to office.

Legislators attempted to appease the governor by passing a map that created a Jacksonville-centric district in North Florida while dismantling the current district that stretches across the top of the state. But DeSantis vetoed the congressional redistricting plan and argued that the protections the map afforded Black voters in Jacksonville and Orlando were an "illegal gerrymander" under the 14th Amendment provisions of equal protection.

This week, legislators signaled they are prepared to let the governor have his way as long as he takes the lead. In a memo released publicly on Monday by House Speaker Chris Sprowls, R-Palm Harbor, and Senate President Wilton Simpson, R-Trilby, said legislators would not propose their own congressional redraw, but instead would use whatever the governor proposes.

Meanwhile, voters and advocacy groups Common Cause Florida and FairDistricts Now have criticized the governor's interpretation of the law and have asked a federal court to declare Florida's congressional redistricting at impasse. The state must have its congressional map in place in time for candidates to qualify for congressional districts by the June 17 deadline.

A three-judge panel on Monday scheduled a trial to start May 12 in the federal lawsuit if the Legislature and governor don't agree. The court also rejected a motion by Secretary of State Laurel Lee for a stay in the case. Both sides have proposed the names of redistricting experts whom the court could appoint as special masters to draw the maps.

Was legislative memo a surprise?

Ellen Freidin, chief executive officer of FairDistricts Now, a nonpartisan organization that worked to pass the 2010 constitutional amendment to impose new redistricting standards in Florida, has said DeSantis' approach to redistricting was "trampling on rights of minority voters and turning back the clock" in an effort to "enhance his standing with Florida and national voters.''

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

DeSantis on Tuesday seemed surprised by the Sprowls and Simpson memo, indicating that he had expected his staff to be talking behind the scenes with legislative staff to come to a consensus on a plan that they would propose.

“I thought that my legal office had been working with the House and Senate to try to kind of have a compromise that everyone would agree on,” he said.

After legislators were caught a decade ago allowing political operatives to influence the redistricting process in violation of the Constitution, lawmakers established a strict protocol for restricting public input and limiting access to the redistricting process this time.

DeSantis was asked Tuesday if he will be preserving the document record to show “what your intent was or what the intent is in drawing these districts.” Instead of responding, the governor pivoted.

“The people that were involved will go and testify in front of the Legislature about the product that was created,” he said. “And so, you know, this is kind of my first foray, and I don’t really know how all this stuff works.”

Governor Ron DeSantis Calls Special Session of the Florida Legislature to Establish Lawful Congressional Districts

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. – Today, Governor Ron DeSantis called a Special Session of the Florida Legislature to produce a new map that will establish lawful congressional voting districts in Florida. Governor DeSantis vetoed CS/SB 102 this morning after reviewing the bill, citing legal concerns. A supporting memorandum can be found here. The Special Session will convene at 12:00 p.m., Tuesday, April 19, and will extend no later than 11:59 p.m., Friday, April 22.

"We have a responsibility to produce maps for our citizens that do not contain unconstitutional racial gerrymanders," said Governor Ron DeSantis. "Today, I vetoed a map that violates the U.S. Constitution, but that does not absolve the Legislature from doing its job. I appreciate the Legislature's willingness to work with me to pass a legally compliant map this Special Session."

All,

The hearing is scheduled for 8 am to 12 pm on Friday, February 18. The witness need not submit written testimony.

But I think it may nevertheless be helpful for the Governor's office to submit a memo explaining our position on why the proposed CD3 is unconstitutional. Let's discuss in the morning.

Mr. Popper,

My name is Ryan Newman, and I am General Counsel to Governor Ron DeSantis. John Gore at Jones Day suggested that I reach out to you.

The Florida House of Representatives has scheduled a committee hearing for this coming Friday, March 18, on its congressional redistricting map. The House proposal retains Congressional District 5 in northern Florida, which we believe is an unconstitutional racial gerrymander. It stretches roughly two hundred miles to connect a minority community in Jacksonville with a minority community in Tallahassee and Gadsden County to create a district with a BVAP of only 44%.

We were hoping that you might be interested in serving as a witness at the hearing to educate the committee on why retaining this district would likely violate the U.S. Constitution.

Please let me know if you would be interested in speaking with us. I'm cc'ing Jason Torchinsky and Mo Jazil, who have been representing the Governor's office and the Florida Department of State as outside counsel. Josh Pratt and Nick Meros are Deputy GCs in my office.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Florida Senate serves up a second round of draft redistricting maps

Florida Politics
Jacob Ogles
November 29, 2021

New cartography creates subtle shifts but could contain significant political consequences.
Before breaking for the Thanksgiving holiday, the Senate Reapportionment Committee dished out a fresh serving of redistricting maps to devour.

Four newly proposed congressional maps and five potential Senate maps were published Wednesday on FloridaRedistricting.gov.

Granted, these particular cuts of cartography may have seemed a tad like leftovers. The drafts for the most part introduced only small tweaks to the first round of maps published earlier this month. But this second serving of proposed political boundaries comes before the House Redistricting Committee cooks up its first offering.

The Senate Congressional Reapportionment Subcommittee will hold a workshop on maps at 10 a.m. on Monday to discuss progress on redrawing Florida's 28 congressional districts. Also, the Senate Legislative Reapportionment Subcommittee meets at 2 p.m. to discuss the future of Florida's 40 Senate districts, all of which will host elections next year to determine the future of the very senators approving the lines.

So what's changed? Actually not much. In fact, Senate staff cracks wise about the subtle shifts that come with the second round of maps compared to the first ones. "

Changes may not be visible from space, but are measureable," reads a PowerPoint presentation prepared for Monday's workshops.

Jay Ferrin, staff director for the Senate redistricting efforts, explained what is driving most of the changes that can be seen.

"In revising the plans, staff followed the instructions from the Select Subcommittees, and looked for improvements and consistency in the application of the various trade-offs presented in the maps," Ferrin wrote in a memo. "Impacts of the revisions are mainly to the utilization of political and geographic boundaries, with some improvements in visual compactness and cities kept whole."

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Four draft congressional maps released by Senate staff on Nov. 24.

However small, most of the districts do change in all four new drafts of federal lines; at least 25 of the 28 districts reflect some shift. The drafting of federal lines remains the most delicate, as every district must ultimately come within a single person of the state's ideal Congressional district size of 769,221 people.

The changes on maps can be as small as making sure all voters living north of the Fuller Warren Bridge in Jacksonville end up in Florida's 5th Congressional District instead of Florida's 4th Congressional district.

Matt Isbell, founder of MCI maps, says none of the shifts represented in the new maps show a radical departure in approach for the Senate, nor do they deliver much in terms of political consequence. He characterized alterations as "minor changes that don't shift partisan nature much."

Based on performance in the last presidential election, there's still 16 proposed districts that were carried by Republican Donald Trump and 12 carried by Democrat Joe Biden. Trump notably won Florida by 3 percentage points.

Most changes visible in maps reflect close adherence to physical features or existing political boundaries, and those changes show up across all drafts.

For example, the boundary between Florida's 11th Congressional District and the newly drawn Florida's 28th Congressional District turns State Road 50 into a firmer boundary instead of allowing some neighborhood south of the road to be included in the northern district. That's consistent with legal advice stressed ahead of the drafting of maps, basically holding to the principal voters should know the landmarks that mark political bounds.

That's not to say mapmakers aren't still working out kinks, and with the population requirements with one-person-one-vote federal requirements, it may be impossible to completely smooth out the lines. One shift in the maps in the Glendale area in Florida's panhandle makes it so most property west of County Road 83 falls in Florida's 1st Congressional District while early drafts had a boundary with Florida's 2nd Congressional district that weaved back and forth around that round. Still, even in the latest maps, some Census blocks east of the road fall in CD 2.

But comparing the first rounds of drafts to the second ones, there's five fewer cities that get divided between multiple congressional districts.

Left unresolved are questions like the geographic puzzle of Florida's 21st and 22nd Congressional districts. Two maps effectively imagine these districts stacked, with one located entirely to the north of the other, but two drafts present side-by-side districts, with one away from the coast and running north-south parallel to the neighboring jurisdiction.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

And map-makers have made no moves to try and leave Florida's 14th Congressional District out of Pinellas County, despite a push for that by Sen. Darryl Rouson as a subcommittee meeting earlier this month.

Similar changes take place as far as correcting geography in the Senate drafts. But here, there are even more debates that seem to continue to rage in the cartography offices.

"It looks like the staff have agreement on many districts but otherwise have sandboxes for alternative borders for specific seats," Isbell said.

Those sandboxes, contained areas where the drafts reflect different concepts, seem more varied when it comes to Senate boundaries. Isbell notes that the greatest disagreements seem to surround Democrat-dominated South Florida. There's now three distinctly different make-ups for this region reflected in drafts when it comes to Senate Districts 31 through 38.

All of the maps shift Senate District 38, represented now by Sen. Jason Pizzo, a Miami Democrat, further to the north. There's now one map that shows the district hugging the coast closely and reaching all the way to the Palm Beach County line, including Lighthouse Point, home of Democratic Sen. Gary Farmer.

That's just one potential primary matchup Farmer could find himself in. He now represents SD 34, where Sen. Tina Polsky, a Boca Raton Democrat, has already indicated she intends to run based on the first round of drafts.

Another area of disagreement, if a less radical one, seems visible in the bounds of Senate Districts 9, 11, 12 and 13. The districts round downtown Orlando All but SD 9 are overpopulated now, and they must also absorb parts of Senate District 15, which has more than 175,000 too many residents under the current lines. But there are three different versions of where new lines on this cluster of Senate districts should fall.

Unresolved, there's been a push by lawmakers, including Sen. Randolph Bracy, to see if a second minority-controlled district could arise in Tampa Bay. Senate maps appear to continue placing a priority on preserving existing districts without diminishing minority representation in St. Petersburg-based Senate District 19, represented now by Rouson.

Florida Democrats shut down state House over DeSantis-drawn congressional map

NBC News
Jane Timm and Marc Caputo
April 21, 2022

TALLAHASSEE — Florida House Democrats shut down a special session for approving a new congressional map by holding a pray-in and sit-in inside the chamber Thursday, causing Republican lawmakers, who control the Legislature, to leave the floor.

Florida Republicans were set to approve a congressional map that Gov. Ron DeSantis demanded they pass, the latest in an unusual standoff between the state legislators, who typically control redistricting, and a governor who inserted himself into the process to secure a significant political gain for his party nationally.

DeSantis' map carves up a Black-held congressional seat, which Democrats condemned for unraveling Black political power in the state.

The surprising act of defiance happened at a little before noon, when Rep. Yvonne Hinson went over her allotted speaking time and had her microphone cut, prompting other Black lawmakers to stand without being recognized and gather in the center of the chamber, showing off shirts that said “Stop the Black Attack” and sitting on the state seal of the House floor's blue carpet.

In all, four Black lawmakers and one Hispanic representative — Hinson, Angie Nixon, Travaris McCurdy, Felicia Robinson and Susan Valdés — occupied the center of the chamber as bewildered Republicans looked on.

House Speaker Chris Sprowls tried to rule them out of order, and when they refused to comply, the session was gaveled into an indefinite recess. The Republicans then left; the TV feed to the Florida Channel, which was broadcasting the session, was cut; an Associated Press photographer was kicked off the floor by the sergeant-at-arms and had his media pass taken away; and the top security official also kicked out the few members of the public observing in the gallery and barred others from entering.

"We're on lockdown right now," one sergeant explained.

Democrats, alone in the chamber, prayed and chanted.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Rep. Dotie Joseph led a prayer suggesting Republicans were under the sway of Satan, whom she called "the Adversary."

“Right now, we've lined up all of the works of the Adversary — all of the works of the Adversary — seeking to divide us, seeking to distract us with a culture war," she said. "We refocused us on your two highest and greatest commandments: that we would love you and that we would love each other, and that people would know you by our works and how we treat one another."

Rep. Anna Eskamani led a chant as Rep. Carlos Guillermo Smith appeared to livestream from the House floor.

Get the Morning Rundown

Under Florida House rules, the speaker has the right to have the members forcibly removed but after an hour of the sit-in, he had not exercised that authority.

Republicans in the Legislature previously passed two different maps that secured Republicans a slight political advantage while preserving a most of the current 5th Congressional District, a Black-held seat with a politically powerful number of Black voters. The lawmakers' maps were an effort to comply with the state's anti-gerrymandering constitutional amendments, which bar favoring one party or another and denying minority representation.

Parents challenge Alabama law banning treatment of trans kids
But DeSantis said the congressional seat in northern Florida is a racial gerrymander that violates the U.S. Constitution's 14th Amendment and vetoed the plans, going on to call this week's special session to pass another map. His office proposed one that creates four new Republican seats while eliminating three Democratic seats, including the current 5th district.

GOP legislators, with little incentive to continue fighting with their popular governor, advanced the governor's map rapidly this week.

During debate on Thursday morning, Democrats lambasted the plan for defying state and federal law.

“Our job is to pass something that complies with the Florida constitution, including those Fair Districts provisions, and with the federal Voting Rights Act,” said state Rep. Joseph Geller, a Democrat who represents parts of Broward and Miami-Dade counties. “Our job is to comply with the law as it exists and this map plainly does not do that.”

State Rep. Kelly Skidmore, a Democrat from Boca Raton, argued that passing the maps was a violation of the oath of office the lawmakers took.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

"You know this is unconstitutional. I know this is unconstitutional," she said. "Your failure to uphold your oath and stand up to the bully in chief is shameful."

Republicans defended the process, arguing the involvement of the governor did not harm the resulting maps and that DeSantis was entitled to propose maps, just as all members of the public are.

"It's been an open and transparent process the entire time, even before the governor quote-unquote got involved," state Rep. Kaylee Tuck, a Republican from Lake Placid area.

State Rep. Randy Fine, a Republican representing parts of Brevard County, argued that his party hadn't caved to the governor because they had initially passed plans he opposed.

"We are not mindless automatons. We don't do this because we were bullied. We do this because we think it is right," he said. "Today, we pass maps that are constitutional, and they will be litigated, and we will learn whether the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution reigns supreme over the Florida state constitution. That is the discussion at hand."

Good Wednesday morning.

Limbo — We're just 23 days into this year's legislative session and — thanks to a new skirmish over congressional maps — there's no sense of when and how it will end.

First try — Gov. Ron DeSantis tried to jump into the redistricting process last month when he rolled out his own proposed map, one that gave Republicans a better advantage than the one being considered in the state Senate. The state Senate responded by ignoring the governor and passing their own map, which will likely increase the GOP margin by one if it becomes law.

Second try — Well, the governor decided to get some backup. On Tuesday, he asked the Florida Supreme Court — which automatically reviews legislative redistricting maps, not congressional — whether the 200-mile-long district now held by Rep. Al Lawson, a Black Democrat from Tallahassee, needed to be kept intact to meet the voter-approved Fair Districts standards designed to prevent the "diminishment" of districts with large concentrations of minority voters.

Do not go — The Florida House responded to the governor's actions by essentially shutting down any consideration of a congressional map until the court rules. Well now… how long will that be? Let's understand: The justices on the court could tell the governor that it has no reason to dive into redistricting right now. The governor requested an advisory opinion, and he even he acknowledged in his filing the court could refuse to consider it. But the court could also order up legal briefs and hold a hearing, which just delays final resolution.

Taking a chance — It's still an interesting play of course. DeSantis knows he's changed the composition of the court, and that some of the conservative justices there — such as Chief Justice Charles Canady and Justice Ricky Polston — did not agree with the map approved by the court back in 2015 that included the current configuration of Lawson's district. If the court agrees with the governor, it gives the Legislature a green light to tamper with it.

In the air tonight — Lawson called the governor's action "an assault on the rights of Black and minority voters" and vowed to fight. Yes, it can be argued redistricting was always destined to wind up in court. But the bottom line is that Senate President Wilton Simpson and Senate Republicans wanted redistricting to go as smoothly as possible so legislators could end session on time and start campaigning. Well, so much for that.

NEW DRAMA — "Florida halts redistricting effort after DeSantis asks Florida Supreme Court to weigh in," by POLITICO's Gary Fineout: Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis, in another sign that he may veto a new congressional map being drawn by the state Legislature, asked the state's highest court on Tuesday to tell him whether or not a 200-mile congressional district linking Black neighborhoods must be kept intact. The governor's move brought ongoing redistricting efforts in Florida to a screeching halt as the Republican-controlled state House said it would not move forward on a new draft congressional map while it waits until the Florida Supreme Court "issues any guidance."

PUSHING AHEAD ON LEGISLATIVE MAP — "House sets up maps for final vote over Democrats' race concerns," by POLITICO's Matt Dixon: The Florida House on Tuesday set up for a final vote the redrawn version of its political lines, a vote likely to come with overwhelming opposition from Democrats, who are vastly outnumbered in the chamber. The proposal would enshrine another 10 years of GOP dominance in the Florida House, which was an expected outcome in a chamber that has seen Republican control for more than three decades. The final draft map recommended by the House redistricting committee, however, includes 71 seats that would have been won by former President Donald Trump in 2020, a decrease from the current 78 Trump won that year

ALL TOGETHER NOT — "GOP to Tucker Carlson: We're the decision makers on Ukraine, not you," by POLITICO's Andrew Desiderio: Tucker Carlson has even defended Moscow's buildup of troops along the border with Ukraine — and President Vladimir Putin's rationale for it — in a stark departure from the tough-on-Russia posture that has defined the Republican Party since the start of the Cold War. Meanwhile, Ukraine remains under active threat from an invasion that some are warning could be just the first domino to fall in Eastern Europe.

Rubio's response — "I don't agree with those views," Florida Sen. Marco Rubio, the top Republican on the Senate Intelligence Committee, said when asked about Carlson's

Among the measures: A scaled-back version of an Election Crimes and Security office sought by Gov. SECOND EFFORT — “Lawmakers advance juvenile record expungement bill through its final committee stop,” by POLITICO’s Stephany Matat: Christian Minor, the executive director of the Florida Juvenile Justice Association, said that his group is “heartened” to see HB 195 and its companion bill, SB 342, moving quickly through the legislative process with unanimous bipartisan support. “This great piece of workforce development legislation strikes a perfect balance between protecting public safety and affording our youthful offenders a second chance to lead a life of success,” Minor told POLITICO.

WATCH THIS — “Las Vegas Sands-backed group sues to extend petition gathering deadline,” by POLITICO’s Matt Dixon: Supporters of a Las Vegas Sands-backed proposed 2022 ballot measure on Tuesday filed a last-minute lawsuit against Secretary of State Laurel Lee to try and extend time for local elections officials to continue processing signatures needed to get their measure on the ballot. Details: The casino giant has spent nearly $50 million in support of a change to the state Constitution that would allow existing card rooms to offer Las Vegas-style gaming as long as they are not within 130 miles of a Seminole-owned facility to offer casino gaming.

TREND LINES — “Felon voting rights failed in Washington — but not in the states,” by POLITICO’s Zach Montellaro: Some activists attribute the dramatic increase in states restoring voting rights to a victory in 2018 in Florida, where a measure to automatically restore voting rights to those convicted of a felony was overwhelmingly passed by voters, although a successful push from Republicans to make it contingent upon paying court debts and other fines tempered that victory there. “The 2018 ballot measure really created a groundswell of attention not just in Florida, but nationally,” said Nicole D. Porter, who manages state and local advocacy drives at The Sentencing Project.

THE PATH — "The GOP's midterm playbook: Flip the script on COVID," by NBC News' Marc Caputo and Natasha Korecki: "One Republican model for running on Covid was established early in the pandemic by Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis, who is looking to ride the strategy to a second term. Calling it "the Free State of Florida," DeSantis reopened his state early, was among the first to reopen the doors of public schools in 2020, banned mask mandates and outlawed vaccination passports. He became a darling of conservatives after months of doom-and-gloom predictions about the state failed to materialize, and then, when the situation became grim last summer during the surge of the delta variant, his standing held among them because he refused to change course."

RED STATE — "Who will win Florida in 2024? A new poll has Biden losing to these two prominent Republicans," by USA Today's David Jackson: "A new poll says President Joe Biden is struggling in the politically pivotal state of Florida, where more than half of potential voters disapprove of his handling of the economy and of his job overall. The Suffolk University/USA TODAY Network poll of likely Florida voters suggests only 39% of respondents approve of the job Biden is doing, while 53% disapprove. By a 30-point margin – 58%-28% – the poll says voters in Florida believe the nation as a whole is on the wrong track, and a full 57% disapprove of the president's handling of the economy. The new survey also reports that two prominent Florida Republicans – Gov. Ron DeSantis and Sen. Marco Rubio – are leading in their re-election bids, but not without potential danger signals."

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

The daily rundown — The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said there were 20,071 Covid-19 infections reported on Monday. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services reported that 8,798 hospital beds were being used in the state for Covid-19 patients.

Now Florida has two cases," by Tampa Bay Times' Christopher O'Donnell and Ian Hodgson: "The highly contagious omicron variant set pandemic infection records in Florida and the U.S. and is still spreading across many states and the rest of the world. But coming up fast behind it is a subvariant that early studies suggest is even more infectious, may cause more breakthrough infections in the vaccinated — and now it's in Florida. The COVID-19 subvariant is designated as BA.2 but is better known by its nickname 'stealth' omicron."

PENINSULA AND BEYOND

HMM — "Gov. DeSantis on Sheriff Gregory Tony: 'We're going to review everything' now that state found he concealed his past on forms," by Sun Sentinel's Lisa J. Huriash: "The Florida Department of Law Enforcement confirmed Tuesday that it will send the results of an investigation to the Florida Commission on Ethics at the suggestion of the State Attorney's Office in Fort Myers. The ethics commission could take no action — or it could recommend that Gov. Ron DeSantis remove the sheriff from office, among other potential penalties. DeSantis told reporters Tuesday at a news conference in Miami that he has seen the outcome of a state investigation into Tony's falsehoods on official applications. When asked about Tony, DeSantis replied, 'We're going to review everything ... in the coming days.' DeSantis didn't elaborate."

GENTLE GIANTS — "Manatee deaths lead to lawsuit from conservation groups," by Sun Sentinel's David Fleshler: "Conservation groups sued the federal government Tuesday over last year's record manatee deaths, saying the government failed to follow the law by designating protected habitat for the marine mammals. Manatees starved to death by the hundreds on Florida's east coast last year, largely due to the loss of seagrass in the polluted Indian River Lagoon. The famine led to a record number of deaths, with more than 1,100 dying from starvation, boat strikes, cold stress and other causes."

BIG PRICE TAG — "Florida gets another $404 million for climate change prep. It needs billions more," by Miami Herald's Alex Harris: "The most vulnerable state in the nation is finally getting a billion-dollar boost to its plans to protect itself against the rising sea, the tip of the trillion-dollar iceberg of climate change expenses the state faces."

Washington on your side — "On Tuesday, Gov. Ron DeSantis announced funding for another 113 projects that will install new stormwater pumps and drains in flood-prone cities, convert leaky septic tanks to sewer lines, elevate and flood-proof critical buildings and restore wetlands over the next three years. It's the largest amount of money for climate change preparation ever seen in Florida — and the $404 million is all from the federal American Rescue Plan, the $1.9 trillion-dollar COVID-19 relief act championed by the Biden administration."

The 58-page lawsuit — which was filed jointly by Wigdor LLP and Elefterakis, Elefterakis & Panek in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York — claims Flores, who was fired Jan. 10 after three seasons in Miami, was dismissed because of his reluctance to ‘tank’ during the 2019 NFL season and his unwillingness ‘to recruit a prominent quarterback in violation of League tampering rules.’”

Judge Voids Parts of 2021 Election Law, Citing Racial Discrimination

A federal judge on Thursday struck parts of an expansive election law passed by lawmakers last year, finding that the new law put the right to vote "under siege," and required pre-clearance of any new law that affects the ability of Florida residents to cast a ballot. The court found the law, passed last year as SB 90 and signed by Gov. Ron DeSantis, discriminated against minority voters with its restrictions on third-party voter registration organizations, on the use of drop boxes, and on efforts to make voting easier, such as allowing groups to provide food and water to voters waiting in line. U.S. District Judge Mark Walker ordered future laws involving drop boxes, third-party voter registration and other specific issues to be approved by the court for the next 10 years. DeSantis said he had expected Walker would find against the law, and said the only question was not if the decision would be overturned on appeal but how quickly. House Speaker Chris Sprowls said the judge's ruling amounted to support of a "conspiracy theory," and was "an egregious abuse of his power." Opponents of a new Florida law prohibiting instruction in grades K-3 related to sexual orientation or gender identity have sued to block the law from going into effect. DeSantis said those who opposed the law "support injecting woke gender ideology into second-grade classrooms (and) support enabling schools to 'transition' students to a 'different gender' without the knowledge of the parent." Law Enforcement, First Responders to Get More Money

Florida's firefighters, law enforcement officers and EMTs will get another round of $1,000 bonuses. Gov. Ron DeSantis highlighted the plan, which was included in the budget and in a bill (HB 3) aimed at increasing the recruitment and retention of deputies in Florida that arrived on the governor's desk on Thursday. Last year, DeSantis used federal COVID relief funds to give first responders $1,000 bonus checks for their work during the pandemic. He said Thursday that bonuses are needed again this year due to rising inflation. The bill now awaiting the governor's signature includes $5,000 bonuses to recruit and retain both state and local law enforcement officers. It also provides for another year of $1,000 bonuses for all first responders. The legislation also includes a provision that gives sheriffs the ability to move money between budget categories at their discretion without seeking approval from their county commission. The governor has until Friday, April 15 to act on the bill. Florida Politics / News4Jax / Click Orlando / WPTV / DeSantis Press Release / LobbyTools Governor's Activity

DeSantis: End Special Privileges for Disney, Other Companies

Gov. "We're certainly not going to bend a knee to woke executives in California," DeSantis said. "That is not the way the state's going to be run. So I would say, reevaluate any special privileges in the law." The governor specifically mentioned a bill he signed last year that targeted social media platforming that had a carve-out for theme park owners. "The one time they got something when I've been governor was that Big Tech carve-out," DeSantis said. "That was wrong at the time, and it should be repealed." Florida Politics

New Gaming Control Commission Meets, Hires Director

The state's new Gaming Control Commission met for the first time on Thursday. The commission, created during a special session by the Legislature last year, hired Louis Trombetta as executive director. Trombetta is the current Director of the Division of Pari-mutuel Wagering at DBPR, which will be folded into the commission along with its 109 employees. The law required the commission to select an executive director by April 1 and also provides for a gaming law enforcement division. The new commission is in charge of regulating most gaming in Florida, including casinos and horse racing. The commission's chair, Julie Brown, previously Secretary of DBPR, was appointed by the governor. Plan Approved to Close Piney Point Facility

A plan to permanently close the Piney Point facility in Manatee County was approved on Thursday, the Florida Department of Environmental Protection announced. The move comes a year after a state of emergency was issued in response to a massive leak in the reservoir when millions of gallons of polluted water were discharged from the abandoned phosphate plant. In an effort to help mitigate adverse impacts to the surrounding environment, the state allocated $15.4 million to treat the water for nutrients and shut down the facility. DEP filed a lawsuit in August against the owner of Piney Point, HRK Holdings. The agency alleges the owner failed to comply with state environmental laws. "We are in a significantly better place than we were then, and this approval marks a key milestone in ensuring this is the last chapter in the long history of Piney Point," said DEP Secretary Shawn Hamilton. Memorandum
To: All Senators
From: Ray Rodrigues
Subject: Congressional Map Submission from Governor DeSantis
Date: April 13, 2022

As the President indicated earlier this week, the Office of the Governor has drafted a proposed congressional map for our consideration during next week's special session. This proposal comes following meaningful discussions with our Senate legal counsel. Tuesday afternoon, the Governor's staff briefed me on their submission. You can find the Governor's map here, and I have attached the legal memorandum that accompanied the submission.

The Governor's staff has agreed to provide the same briefing before the Senate Committee on Reapportionment on Tuesday, April 19, at 1:30 p.m. in 412 Knott.

After thoroughly reviewing the Governor's submission and a discussion with our legal counsel, I have determined that the Governor's map reflects standards the Senate can support. As such, I intend to introduce the map as a bill for consideration during the special session. I have asked Senate Counsel Dan Nordby to prepare a legal memorandum outlining his analysis of the Governor's submission, which we will provide for your review.

I would like to thank Governor DeSantis and his staff who have worked very hard to produce a congressional map that incorporates many of the features of the map that previously passed the Senate with bipartisan support. As we have stated from the beginning, the goal is to produce a congressional map for our state that gains majority votes on the House and Senate floors, is signed by the Governor and becomes law according to the consensus process outlined in our constitution.

Thank you for your attention to this important issue. I wish you a restful weekend as we celebrate Easter and Passover with family and friends, and I look forward to seeing you next week.

Senate Appropriations Considers Change to Bill on Teaching Sexual Orientation, Takes up BIDEN Inflation Fund

The Senate Appropriations Committee has 60 bills on its agenda for its meeting on Monday as lawmakers try to get as much legislation to the floor as possible with time winding down on the 2022 session. Among the many measures the panel could consider is the heavily-contested measure (HB 1557) already passed in the House that seeks to give parents more control over what their kids learn in school and has become controversial in part because of a provision that puts limits on instruction about sexual orientation in younger grades. The committee is expected to consider an amendment to the bill, that would replace a sentence that says instruction "on sexual orientation or gender identity may not occur in kindergarten through grade 3 or in a manner that is not age appropriate," with a sentence instead saying that instruction "on human sexuality or sexual activity" may not occur in grades K-3. The committee also could take up legislation (HB 5011) that calls for the transfer of $2 billion from general revenue to a fund for budget amendments that may be necessary this year after the Legislature adjourns because of inflation. The measure is an attempt by House Republicans to make a political statement about inflation – the account would be called the "Budgeting for Inflation that Drives Elevated Needs," fund, an acronym for Biden. Another measure (SB 1940) that could come before the committee today would create a statewide Chief Resilience Officer and a new Statewide Office of Resilience to help ensure the state prepares adequately for sea level rise and flooding as a result of changes to the climate. Nearly half the bills on the agenda, those that have been relatively uncontroversial and haven't received any "no" votes in other committees, will be handled as part of a consent agenda. House Panel Approves Congressional Map and Backup Map

The House's Congressional Redistricting Committee on Friday took the unusual step of approving two maps for congressional districts in Florida, one aimed at appeasing Gov. Ron DeSantis' desire to move away from a map with a racially preferential set-aside likely ensuring an African-American congressman in North Florida, and one that would allow for a minority district that could be put in place if the courts reject the first one. HB 7503 includes a primary map that redraws an African-American Congressional district in North Florida that stretches from Jacksonville to Gadsden County. Under the primary map, Congressional District 5 – which is currently represented by Democrat Al Lawson – would entirely be within Duval County and reduce the district's current Black population from 43% to 35.5%. Opponents of the change reminded committee members that the state constitution requires some districts to be drafted in a way that permits minorities to elect candidates of their choice. The "back-up map" includes the current Congressional District 5 boundaries which were previously adopted by the courts. Other changes were also included in the new House maps in order to better align with the Senate's map proposal. The Senate already passed its 28-district Congressional map but the governor has vowed to veto it if it remains in its current form. The House maps are now ready to be considered on the floor. Florida Legislature to vote on DeSantis' congressional map
Brendan Farrington
April 19, 2022

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. – Florida lawmakers will return to the Capitol Tuesday to begin a special session to approve a new congressional map after Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis vetoed the previous GOP-backed boundaries that preserved minority districts.

The work should be easy, given that Republican leaders have already conceded the once-a-decade process to DeSantis.

Much to the dismay of Democrats and voting rights groups, House Speaker Chris Sprowls and Senate President Wilton Simpson told lawmakers last week that neither chamber was going to try to draw a new map, but rather vote on the heavily pro-GOP map DeSantis gave them.

"They're giving up their right to make a decision and they are relenting to a governor who is essentially a narcissistic autocrat," said Democratic state Rep. Michael Grieco during a Monday news conference.

The map DeSantis submitted would likely create more Republican seats than the maps approved by the Legislature. It would also likely reduce Black representation in Florida's delegation from four to two.

While DeSantis, who is a potential 2024 presidential candidate, said his map is "race neutral," Black lawmakers say it is racist.

"To Gov. DeSantis, I'm not going to call what you're doing a culture war anymore, I'm going to call it just what it is: It's a racist tactic that you're doing. And you know what you're doing," Democratic Sen. Shevrin Jones said at a news conference with other Black elected officials and community leaders.

He said it will be an incentive to get people to vote when DeSantis is up for reelection in November.

"When you come for one of us, you come for all of us, and we will not allow you to dilute our districts with representation for your own political gain. You lose," Jones said.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The governor's communications office didn't immediately respond to an email seeking comment.

Florida is adding a 28th congressional district because of population growth over the decade. The vote this week on the DeSantis map won't be the end of the process since it will be the focus of legal challenges.

Qualifying for federal office will run from June 13-17.

It won't be the only special session held this year. DeSantis on Monday said he would sign an order this week to bring the Legislature back in May to address rising property insurance rates.

The League of Women Voters of Florida said the DeSantis map violates the state constitution, which requires contiguous districts that don't benefit or hurt a political party, incumbent or candidate. It also says districts can't be drawn to reduce minority access to elect representatives.

But DeSantis argues that since the provision was passed by voters in 2010, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled race can't be a primary factor in drawing districts.

The League of Women Voters of Florida issued a news release calling on lawmakers to find courage and do their jobs instead of conceding to DeSantis.

“The legislature’s irresponsible plan to capitulate to the aggression of the Governor nullifies the constitutionally mandated separation of the three branches of government and is moving in the direction of an autocracy,” said league President Cecile Scoon.

RON DESANTIS
GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

GOVERNOR

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.

In particular, the Florida Constitution vests the State's legislative power in the Florida Legislature. See Art. III, § 1, Fla. Const. It follows, therefore, that the Governor's exercise of what the Constitution characterizes as the power of "[e]xecutive approval and veto," Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., is not a legislative power. Rather, the veto power is an executive check on the legislative power; "[e]ach branch of the government necessarily at times, either by express provision of the Constitution or in the orderly administration of the state's affairs, comes in contact with one or the other branch, but such contact in n[o]wise merges the functions of one into that of the other." Amos v. Gunn, 94 So. 615, 627–28 (Fla. 1922) (Ellis, J., on pet. for reh'g). This Court's more recent opinions thus acknowledge that the exercise of the veto is an executive power.[1]

A, B, C, D, E, & F*, 589 So. 2d 260, 264 (Fla. 1991) ("Article III, section 8 sets forth the procedure for the executive power to approve or veto legislation of both nonappropriations and appropriations bills."); Brown v. Firestone, 382 So. 2d 654, 672 (Fla. 1980) ("We hold further that the vetoes identified herein as 2, 4, 5 and 6 are valid as being within the purview of the executive power granted by article III, section 8(a)[.]"); Owens v. State, 316 So. 2d 537, 538 n.4 (Fla. 1975) ("Although article IV of the constitution deals with the executive branch, the placement of a legislative power in one subsection of that article does not render the delegated power nugatory. The placement is functional, as with executive powers conferred in the judicial article (art. V, [§] 11) and in the legislative article (art. III, [§] 8)."); In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 239 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1970) ("The Legislature may not validly so draft a general appropriations bill as to unduly and unreasonably preclude the exercise of the executive power to 'veto any specific appropriation in a general appropriation bill.'" (quoting Art. III, § 8(a), Fla. Const.)); see also Green v. Rawls, 122 So. 2d 10, 13 (Fla. 1960) ("[U]nder our tripartite division of the powers of government, and the checks and balances designed to be accomplished thereby, the chief executive must have the power and the opportunity to veto

Third, the question affecting my executive powers and duties concerns Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution, which provides that:

> No apportionment plan or individual district shall be drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or an incumbent; and districts shall not be drawn with the intent or result of denying or abridging the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or to diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice; and districts shall consist of contiguous territory.

Art. III, § 20(a), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). I limit my request to the phrase "diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice"—the State's non-diminishment standard. Except where it may be necessary to inform your interpretation of the Florida Constitution, I do not ask for your opinion on any issues of federal law. Cf. In re Senate Joint Resolution of Legislative Apportionment 1176, 83 So. 3d 597, 620-21 (Fla. 2012) ("Apportionment I") (recognizing that the non-diminishment standard borrows from § 5 of the Voting Rights Act but "nonetheless recogniz[ing] our independent constitutional obligation to interpret our own state constitutional provisions").

Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard mandates a sprawling congressional district in northern Florida that stretches hundreds of miles from East to West solely to connect black voters in Jacksonville with black voters in Gadsden and Leon Counties (with few in between) so that they may elect candidates of their choice, even without a majority. This Court has previously suggested that the answer is "yes." Apportionment VIII, 179 So. 3d at 271 ("Although District 5 was required to be drawn from East to West, no specific configuration was mandated in Apportionment VII," and this Court did not "specify a certain Black Voting Age Population (BVAP) or black share of registered Democrats as a 'floor' below which the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of choice was certain to be diminished.").

In 2015, this Court rejected a North-South configuration of the district that ran from Jacksonville to Orlando. The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional legislative action, subject to the power of the legislature to override the executive veto by the vote of a specified number of the legislature.").

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

The Court held that the North-South version had been unconstitutionally tainted by partisan and other improper influences and that such a configuration was not "necessary to avoid diminishing the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice." Apportionment VII, 172 So. 3d at 403. Consequently, the Court adopted the East-West configuration that exists today. Id. at 405–06. In so doing, this Court acknowledged that this configuration was not a "model of compactness," id. at 406 (internal quotation marks omitted), but nevertheless concluded that it was "visually less 'unusual' and 'bizarre' than the meandering North-South version," id., and that it would not "diminish the ability of black voters to elect a candidate of their choice," id. at 405. This Court indicated that the non-compact shape of the East-West district was nevertheless necessary because of "geography" and "other constitutional requirements such as ensuring that the apportionment plan does not deny the equal opportunity of racial or language minorities to participate in the political process or diminish their ability to elect representatives of their choice." Id. at 406 (citation omitted).

This Court's prior guidance, however, pre-dates relevant decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that where "racial considerations predominate[] over others, the design of the district must withstand strict scrutiny." Cooper v. Harris, 137 S. Ct. 1455, 1464 (2017). To satisfy this test, and thus pass muster under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a state must "prove that its race-based sorting of voters serves a 'compelling interest' and is 'narrowly tailored' to that end." Id. (citations omitted). While the U.S. Supreme Court "has long assumed that one compelling interest is complying with operative provisions of the Voting Rights Act," a state must show "that it had 'a strong basis in evidence'" to conclude that the Act required race-based sorting of voters. Id. (citation omitted). In Cooper, North Carolina did not meet its burden when arguing that compliance with § 2 of the Voting Rights Act served as a compelling reason. Id. at 1469–72. Specifically, North Carolina could not satisfy § 2's threshold conditions: (1) that the "minority group" was "sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority" in a reasonably compact legislative district, (2) that the minority group was "politically cohesive," and (3) that the district's majority group voted "sufficiently as a bloc" to "defeat the minority's preferred candidate." Id. at 1470 (quoting Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30, 50–51 (1986)).

If this Court advises that the non-diminishment standard does not specifically require that an East-West district be drawn to connect minority voters in Jacksonville with minority voters in Leon and Gadsden Counties, I nevertheless request guidance on what the non-diminishment standard does require. Specifically, I ask whether the Florida Constitution's non-diminishment standard requires that congressional districts be drawn to connect minority populations from distant and distinct geographic areas if doing so would provide the assembled minority group sufficient voting strength (although not a majority of the proposed district) to elect a candidate of its choice. Or, conversely, does the non-diminishment standard merely require that a minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area, where the population is not a majority but is nevertheless large enough to elect candidates of its choice, continue to be able to elect such candidates?

Relatedly, to make sense of the non-diminishment standard, I ask for clarification from this Court on what constitutes a proper benchmark for determining whether a minority group's ability to elect a candidate of its choice has been diminished. This Court has said that the "existing plan of a covered jurisdiction serves as the 'benchmark' against which the 'effect' of voting changes is measured.'" Apportionment I, 83 So. 3d at 624 (citation omitted). But is that so even if the district in the existing plan was designed solely to cobble together enough minority voters from distant and distinct geographic areas to elect candidates of their choice despite not constituting a majority? Or must the benchmark be confined to the minority population in a reasonably cohesive geographic area?

Florida's non-diminishment standard—like the Voting Rights Act's non-diminishment standard—is a potent, race-based solution to a race-based problem. I ask for your opinion to help me be sufficiently conscious of race to comply with the Florida Constitution's anti-diminishment provision but avoid being so conscious of race that my actions could violate the U.S. and Florida Constitutions.

Because the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions inform, but do not definitively resolve, issues of state law, I ask for you to exercise your "independent constitutional obligation" to interpret Florida law, id. at 621, and to guide me in exercising my executive powers as Governor. See Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. I respectfully request your assistance as expeditiously as possible given that March 11, 2022, is the last day of the legislative session and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives will need to qualify under a new map in June.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

GOVERNOR

February 1, 2022

Honorable Charles T. Canady
Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court
Florida Supreme Court, 500 S. Duval St.
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Mr. Chief Justice and Justices of the Florida Supreme Court:

In the coming weeks, the Florida Legislature must present to me a bill that redraws Florida's congressional districts consistent with the most recent decennial census, see 2 U.S.C. §§ 2a–2c, and the one-person, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution, see Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526, 530–31 (1969). All maps that have been published by the Legislature and are currently under consideration retain, for the most part, the current Congressional District 5. The district stretches over 200 miles from East to West across eight counties without conforming to usual political or geographic boundaries, solely to connect a minority population center in Jacksonville with a separate and distinct minority population center in Leon and Gadsden Counties so that, together, these minority populations may elect a candidate of their choice. It is a narrow district that compresses to only three miles wide, North to South, when traversing a string of the northernmost precincts in Leon County so the district can connect with the minority population in western Leon County without including the non-minority population in eastern Leon County. Similarly, in Duval County, the district narrows to about a mile and a half in width. As of the 2020 Census, two counties, Duval to the East and Leon to the West, alone contribute 82.77% of the district's population. These counties are in two completely different regions of the State.

I seek this Court's opinion on whether Article III, Section 20(a) of the Florida Constitution requires the retention of a district in northern Florida that connects the minority population in Jacksonville with distant and distinct minority populations (either in Leon and Gadsden Counties or outside of Orlando) to ensure sufficient voting strength, even if not a majority, to elect a candidate of their choice.

This Court's constitutional power to render an advisory opinion is quite broad. Upon my request, this Court may opine as to "the interpretation of any portion of [the] constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties." Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. (emphasis added). The Florida Constitution provides that "[t]he supreme executive power shall be vested in a governor." Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const. That executive power includes the "[e]xecutive approval and veto" power over bills the Florida Legislature presents to me, Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const.; the duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," Art. IV, § 1(a), Fla. Const.; and the power of "direct supervision" over the "administration" of the Department of State, Art. IV, § 6, Fla. Const.; see also § 20.02(3), Fla. Stat. (providing that "[t]he administration of any executive branch department . . . placed under the direct supervision of an officer . . . appointed by and serving at the pleasure of the Governor shall remain at all times under the constitutional executive authority of the Governor"); § 20.10, Fla. Stat. (creating the Department of State, which is headed by the Secretary of State, who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Governor).

Once presented with a congressional redistricting bill, I must decide whether to approve or veto it, and even if I take no action and the law goes into effect, I must nevertheless take care that the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida are faithfully executed. The Secretary of State, whom I direct and oversee, is the chief election officer of the State, § 97.012, Fla. Stat., and is responsible for, among many things, "[o]btain[ing] and maintain[ing] uniformity in the interpretation and implementation of the election laws," id. § 97.012(1), and certifying "the names of all duly qualified candidates for nomination or election who have qualified with the Department of State," § 99.061(6), Fla. Stat. The Department of State will also be responsible for defending any legal challenges to the new congressional redistricting map. In deciding whether to exercise my veto power once the Legislature's congressional redistricting bill is presented to me, and how best to faithfully implement the law if enacted, I now seek your "opinion . . . as to the interpretation of [a] portion of [the] constitution" that applies to the congressional redistricting process. Art. IV, § 1(c), Fla. Const. Such an opinion is both necessary and appropriate in this instance.

First, the once-in-a-decade congressional redistricting process is a unique circumstance: it is required by the U.S. Constitution, and it must be completed before upcoming congressional elections. With the qualifying period for election to the U.S. House of Representatives quickly approaching, the voters and candidates have a pressing need for certainty regarding the meaning of the State's non-diminishment standard. See § 99.061(9), Fla. Stat.; https://dos.myflorida.com /elections/candidates-committees/qualifying/. In contrast, most legislation is neither constitutionally mandated nor of the sort where prolonged uncertainty regarding the meaning of such text may adversely affect the State's elections. See League of Women Voters of Fla. v.

Detzner, 172 So. 3d 363, 372 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VII") ("We emphasize the time-sensitive nature of these proceedings, with candidate qualifying for the 2016 congressional elections now less than a year away . . . ."). I make my request in the spirit of seeking as much guidance as possible from you consistent with "[t]his Court['s] . . . obligation to provide certainty to candidates and voters regarding the legality of the state's congressional districts." League of Women Voters of Fla. v. Detzner, 179 So. 3d 258, 262 (Fla. 2015) ("Apportionment VIII") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Second, I am aware that on one occasion well over a century ago, the members of this Court declined to opine on a constitutional question in aid of my predecessor's exercise of the veto power. See In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. 925 (Fla. 1887). Notwithstanding that the Florida Constitution assigns to the Executive the power to approve or veto legislation, see Art. III, § 8, Fla. Const., this Court concluded that "any act which is an essential prerequisite" to the enactment of a law "is legislative" and is performed by the Executive "as a part of the lawmaking power." In re Exec. Commc'n, 6 So. at 925. This reasoning, which you are not bound to follow, see In re Advisory Opinion of Governor Civil Rights, 306 So. 2d 520, 523 (Fla. 1975), conflicts with the separation of powers enshrined in Article II, Section 3 of the Florida Constitution, and I respectfully request that you give the 1887 response no weight.
