Will,

The following is the response we received from DHHS staff:

Planned Parenthood of Utah has applied for and received this funding for decades---since the 80s.

We don't fully know or understand federal statute and pre-emption factors well enough to know how they interact with state law. Planned Parenthood would be better positioned to speak for themselves about their legal authority to accept these funds, but believe the precedence comes from these two cases:
Planned Parenthood Association of Utah v. Matheson
Planned Parenthood Association of Utah v. Dandoy

Will,

I am so sorry for the delay in responding. That is my fault.

While our staff did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. I suspect you are aware of these but they are listed below. Our previous recommendation to amend the confidentiality language to allow states to access the funds at a prorated amount is still a good possible solution. The two regulations relevant are as follows:

Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A
(https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). :

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

> (4) Provide services in a manner that does not discriminate against any client based on religion, race, color, national origin, disability, age, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, sex characteristics, number of pregnancies, or marital status.
> § 59.10 Confidentiality
> (b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: "The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver." Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

I hope this is helpful. Again, I apologize for the delay in getting you this information. Between travel and COVID, this response was not as timely as is typical for our department or for me.

Hey there,

Tracy – if there are any specific changes to the regs in Title X family planning grants that you would suggest that would ameliorate the fact that Utah is ineligible, that would be very helpful. Additionally, I think we may have an interest in expanding Title X grants to allow for adoption costs to be included in what the funds could be used for. If you have recommendations on how the grant could be amended to allow for this given the funding stream is currently more narrow, that would be helpful as well.

I think it would be a worthy effort to alter federal law in such a way to allow states like Utah to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing us to change our parental consent law. As you know, the HHS leadership under the prior administration was eager to get those funds to us but couldn't find a way to do so without a change in Utah law, something our legislature was understandably wary of doing. I think the first step would be a conversation with the leadership of Utah's Department of Health and Human Services. I've copied Tracy Gruber, the Executive Director of the Department. She may want to pull in Lynne Nilson and others from our Bureau of Maternal and Child Health, who were involved in our Title X application a few years ago and could help us in drafting appropriate language, but I'll defer to Tracy on whom to pull into that meeting.*

Hi Will,

Thanks for reaching out, and congratulations on the new job with Rep. Moore. I'd be happy to chat next Tuesday. I'm pretty flexible between 10-12 MT and after 2:30 MT. Do any of those times work for you?

And yes, we went through quite a process over the past several years to apply for the Title X funding, in part based on the strong encouragement of the Trump Administration HHS. However it was always understood that we couldn't get around the statutory requirements surrounding our parental consent requirements, and the legislature had no interest in adjusting or loosening that requirement. So my understanding is that we would not pursue Title X again, but I'll check. If anything has changed then I can connect you with our Department of Health staff who worked on the application.

On a more specific note, my understanding is that the Utah Department of Health may have applied for a Title X Family Planning Grant last year. I know that Utah would have to be granted an exemption to accommodate state law mandating minors have parental consent to access contraceptive services. I was curious if there was a contact at the Utah Department of Health I could connect with to discuss if the Department plans to apply again. Do you know of anyone I could chat with on this topic?

SUPREME COURT COULD SHIFT MORE CONTROL OVER WETLANDS TO STATES

DANIEL C. VOCK | The court will begin its new term with a long-running dispute over when wetlands fall under the nation's main water quality law. Depending on how the justices rule, it could leave federal regulators with less authority and states taking up the slack.

DECIDING HOW TO USE $41B IN REMAINING STATE ARPA AID

KERY MURAKAMI | States have already chosen where to spend the bulk of $195 billion in pandemic funding from the American Rescue Plan Act. A think tank is weighing in on what to do with the money that's left.

THE PLACES WHERE REMOTE WORK BECAME MOST COMMON

MOLLY BOLAN | In regions around over 40 cities, at least one in five people were working remotely last year, according to a new study.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- A Health and Human Services Department report found that 1,216 drugs were priced over the inflation rate of 8.5% between July 2021 and July 2022, with an average price increase of 31.6%. The report, released ahead of the Oct. 1 implementation of an Inflation Reduction Act measure to set an inflationary cap on Part D prices, also found that spending on specialty drugs climbed to $301 billion in 2021, a 43% increase since 2016. (Fierce Healthcare)

- The Federal Trade Commission is investigating whether U.S. Anesthesia Partners, which has 4,500 anesthesia providers across nine states, has accumulated too much power in some markets via acquisitions, people familiar with the matter said. The probe into USAP, founded in 2012 by the private-equity firm Welsh, Carson, Anderson & Stowe, falls in line with growing agency scrutiny under FTC Chair Lina Khan into private equity's role in health care. (The Wall Street Journal)

- The spread of monkeypox is slowing in the United States, but Marc Lipsitch, director of science in the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's disease-forecasting center, said in an interview that "there's no clear path in our mind to complete elimination domestically." (The Associated Press) HHS said monkeypox vaccines can now be given by pharmacists, dentists and other licensed medical providers. (Bloomberg Law)

- Overseas baby-formula manufacturers who wish to keep selling their products in the United States following this year's shortage must send the Food and Drug Administration a letter by Dec. 5 that declares their intent to stay in the market and pledges that they will meet all regulatory requirements. The FDA will make decisions on those applications by Jan. 6, 2023, and allow foreign manufacturers to continue selling in the U.S. market in the meantime while they pursue a permanent path past the original Nov. 14 deadline. CORONAVIRUS

U.S. Covid-19 Vaccine Donations to Poor Countries Fall Short of Target
Gabriele Steinhauser and Stephanie Armour, The Wall Street Journal
The U.S. has fallen far short of its own target of donating some 1.1 billion Covid-19 vaccines to developing countries by the end of September, as many recipient governments, particularly in Africa, wrestle with low demand for the shots and limited funding to distribute them.

How the CDC's communication failures during Covid tarnished the agency
Erika Edwards, NBC News
In the early days of Covid, staffers at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention sought to give Americans guidance about maintaining some semblance of normalcy during a once-in-a-century pandemic that had upended daily life. One recommendation? Play basketball with your friends — online.

Less than 4% of U.S. adults have gotten updated Covid booster shots
Aria Bendix, NBC News
At least 7.6 million people have received an updated Covid booster since the start of September, according to data released Thursday by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. That number represents around 3.6% of people currently eligible to receive the shots in the U.S.

Moderna refused China request to reveal vaccine technology
Sun Yu et al., Financial Times
Pharma company still 'eager' to collaborate with Beijing, despite collapse of initial talks.

America Is Choosing to Stay Vulnerable to Pandemics
Ed Yong, The Atlantic
Despite gross undercounting, more than 50,000 infections are being recorded every day. The CDC estimates that 19 million adults have long COVID. Things have undoubtedly improved since the peak of the crisis, but calling the pandemic "over" is like calling a fight "finished" because your opponent is punching you in the ribs instead of the face.

Wastewater monitoring is the 'public health dream' that helped fight COVID. But it also raises big ethical questions about privacy and consent
Erin Prater, Fortune
Scientists have spent an inordinate amount of time during the COVID pandemic sifting through sewage—an attempt to consult the so-called "oracle in the toilet" as to what the virus holds next.

What to Do if You're Experiencing Hair Loss After Covid
Knvul Sheikh, The New York Times
Increased shedding after illness is not unusual. The good news is that it's most likely temporary.

Long Covid: What we know about the loss of smell and taste
Sandee LaMotte, CNN
Imagine waking up one morning after recovering from Covid-19 to find that your coffee smells like unwashed socks, your eggs reek of feces and your orange juice tastes metallic. Oddly, that's a good thing: It's a sign you still have a working sense of smell - even if it's miswired in your brain.

'4-alarm blaze': New York's public health crises converge
Erin Banco, Politico
This past winter, as Covid cases were beginning to decline, state health officials in New York were expecting a respite after two exhausting years and a chance to refocus on run-of-the-mill public health duties. Almost a year later, they are still waiting.

Arizona judge rejects request to pause abortion ban
The Associated Press
An Arizona judge on Friday declined to put her order that allowed enforcement of a pre-statehood law making it a crime to provide an abortion on hold, saying abortion right groups that asked her to block the order are not likely to prevail on appeal.

More states are allowing children to take mental health days
Andrea Atkins, The Washington Post
A dozen states already have measures in place that allow kids to take off for mental health and not just physical health reasons. A handful of others* are considering making similar changes to school absentee rules.

Siga's Tpoxx Study Enrollment Slows as Monkeypox Cases Wane
Jeannie Baumann, Bloomberg Law
Enrollment in Siga Technologies Inc.'s monkeypox treatment trial is facing a slowdown as a decline in cases makes it more difficult to recruit volunteers.

Fentanyl Test Strips Highlight Rift in Nation's Struggle to Combat Drug Deaths
Jan Hoffman, The New York Times
Proponents say the ability to check drugs for the presence of lethal fentanyl may save lives. But critics say the strips enable drug use.

What 5 major payers have planned for MA open enrollment
Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare
Medicare Advantage (MA) is a hot market for insurers, and there's significant growth potential for plans who come out strong in the AEP, which begins on Oct. 15. The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services predicts that 31.8 million people will enroll in MA for 2023, and the program is projected to serve more than half of all Medicare beneficiaries in short order.

Republicans abandon Obamacare repeal
Sahil Kapur, NBC News
Republicans are abandoning their long crusade to repeal the Affordable Care Act, making the 2022 election the first in more than a decade that won't be fought over whether to protect or undo President Barack Obama's signature achievement.

Insurer 'FOMO' driving healthcare bidding wars
Nona Tepper and Caroline Hudson, Modern Healthcare
Earlier this year, Amazon and CVS Health sparred over One Medical, with Amazon in August announcing it planned to buy the primary care operator for $3.9 billion. The same month, CVS, Amazon, UnitedHealth Group and Option Care Health fought for ownership of Signify Health, the nation's largest health risk-assessment provider. CVS announced plans to buy Signify Health for $8 billion in September.

There's a big disparity in the number of Latino doctors and surgeons. Advocates are working to change that.
Edwin Flores, NBC News
Latinos account for almost 1 in 5 Americans but represent 7% of the nation's physician and surgeon workforce. "It's a crisis," one Latino doctor said.

Threats prompt hospitals to strip websites of info on gender-affirming care
Tara Bannow and Kate Sheridan, Stat News
Children's hospitals that have been targeted on social media for providing gender-affirming care — and even some that haven't — are stripping information about those services from their websites. Advocates fear the changes could make it even harder for transgender adolescents to get care.

Mental health crisis programs face challenges in rural areas
Tony Leys and Arielle Zionts, Kaiser Health News
Programs to send mental health professionals instead of police to answer crisis calls are harder to set up in rural areas. But agencies across the country are making it work.

The war against superbugs caught in congressional quagmire
Lauren Gardner and Krista Mahr, Politico
Lawmakers are on the brink of missing a critical window to fix America's broken antibiotic market — and to prepare for the growing crisis of superbugs that federal officials say is a national security threat and experts warn is already a silent pandemic.

Walgreens Turns to Prescription-Filling Robots to Free Up Pharmacists
Sharon Terlep, The Wall Street Journal
The nation's second-largest pharmacy chain is setting up a network of automated, centralized drug-filling centers that could fill a city block. Rows of yellow robotic arms bend and rotate as they sort and bottle multicolored pills, sending them down conveyor belts. The company says the setup cuts pharmacist workloads by at least 25% and will save Walgreens more than $1 billion a year.

Price of New A.L.S. Treatment Will Be $158,000 Per Year, Maker Says
Pam Belluck, The New York Times
A new medication for A.L.S., the devastating neurological disorder that causes paralysis and death, will have a list price of $158,000 a year, its manufacturer disclosed Friday.

Pharma-Funded FDA Gets Drugs Out Faster, But Some Work Only 'Marginally' and Most Are Pricey
Arthur Allen, Kaiser Health News
The FDA's accelerated approval is usually based on a "surrogate marker" of effectiveness — evidence of lower viral loads for HIV, for example, or shrinking tumors for cancer. Debate rages over the validity of some of these stand-ins, and some of the drugs.

A Message From the Modern Medicaid Alliance:

Medicaid provides an essential safety net for those who need it most. From the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, Medicaid and managed care have played a critical role in delivering high-quality, affordable coverage for a growing number of Americans. In fact, Medicaid enrollment has grown by more than 17.5 million people since the onset of COVID-19.

Long Covid Has Become a Parallel Pandemic
Lisa Jarvis, Bloomberg
The price of "living with Covid" in a free and open society is turning out to be much heftier than public health experts predicted.

Will there be a Supreme Court assault on public health this term?
Michelle A. Williams and Lawrence O. Gostin, Stat News
In just seven days last June, the U.S. Supreme Court set back public health by 50 years. The court's conservative majority rolled back efforts to address the pressing threat of climate change, expanded access to deadly firearms, and eliminated the right to abortion by overturning Roe v. Wade. Earlier, it had eviscerated public health powers to curb the Covid-19 pandemic. We fear this is just the start.

ECHO's popular Adolescent Reproductive Health in Primary Care is now an online course! ECHO On-Demand: Adolescent Reproductive Health in Primary Care is a new course designed to fit your schedule and pace. This 6-session series is for primary care providers who want to build, expand and improve care to preteens through young adults. Once completed, participants will be able to evaluate and manage common conditions in adolescent reproductive health. In addition to a didactic teaching video, each session offers relevant clinical resources that support providers in integrating best practices immediately.

Dr. Eliza Buyers created both the synchronous and the asynchronous courses. We asked her a few questions about it.

Why did you decide to go asynchronous with this content?
We typically do the live, 6-week series from 7am-8am for six consecutive weeks. We know that this schedule does not work for many people. Our goal is to offer the same content but allow providers to choose the time and pace that works for them.

How can this course help improve the lives of adolescent patients?
Reproductive health is an essential aspect of a person's life and their healthcare. Providers who take care of teens are perfectly poised to support healthy relationships, offer contraception and recommend routine STI screening and treatment. And we know that parents and guardians want this kind of support from their child's provider.

Is there anything else you'd like to say about the course?
In addition to providing practical information that can improve your practice, we hope the content is fun and interesting. If it isn't already, taking care of teens is going to be one of the best parts of your day!

Thank you Elizabeth! This is incredibly helpful.

When I oversaw the Intergenerational Poverty Initiative, home visiting was a prime policy recommendation we supported each year but it just continually eroded and fewer and fewer families were able to receive the services and attain the benefits of this evidence-based intervention. I look forward to discussing this further.

We would need $597,396 (or an increase of $75,396) by FY2026 and $987,752 by FY2027 (with a total increase from current funding levels of $390,356). However, based on this current bill, this would require us to shift our standard of service provision to meet the MIECHV standard (with the same required performance measures). That's definitely possible and since the match won't be required for a few years, we have a great running start. It will take work on our end to do, but the payoffs will be great in the long run, as we'll then be able to have a more robust picture of the impacts of visiting across the state (i.e. I want to do this anyway, regardless of home visiting's funding future).*

I would suggest we move forward with the definition MIECHV uses, since we'll need to increase all service provision to this standard as a result of the match requirement:*

> A child with developmental delays or disability
> A household member who is serving or has served in the U.S. armed forces
> If the Home Visiting Program has an open caseload for enrollment, priority should be given to those who meet multiple MIECHV Eligibility Criteria.
> The various home visiting models use more nuanced definitions, but I suggest we leave that to our contractors to work through, as they receive targeted technical assistance from model implementation specialists.

[redacted]

However, because home visiting is a long-term intervention (2+ years, depending on the model), families only have to qualify (or meet the definition above) at the time of enrollment. Ideally, we should see changes to income and stressors over time, which would actually increase the need.
We would also need to increase our intake and referral processes to account for expansion--we have to find these families somewhere and we need to strengthen our early childhood infrastructure to do this. I'm already talking to Help Me Grow Utah about how they can support this.

Estimated Costs & ROI:

The following are current annual costs for PAT and NFP. Many programs supplement with local tax dollars, so adjustments for inflation are likely needed:

PAT: $5,880 per family

NFP: $6,935 per family

The cost to serve 10% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah would be around $15.5 million.
With the proposed formula in MIECHV reauthorization, by FY2027, we would have $8.375 million--this would enable us to serve approximately 1,300 families, or 5.5% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah.

While 5.5% may be sufficient, the ROI for home visiting is very strong ($5.70 in savings for every $1 of taxpayer dollars spent). As a result, we should push to get closer to that 10%.

ROI for 5.5% (current projected funding): $47.738 million

ROI for 10%: $88.35 million

Side note: As home visiting expands, the team at the state level will need to expand as well to ensure we're able to conduct appropriate contract monitoring processes. I currently have 2 program specialists positions on my team. If we are to expand into each LHD, I would estimate we need 5-6.

Other Considerations:

While Heather didn't ask about this, I want to share some very important considerations to keep in mind for any home visiting expansion conversations that I may not be a part of:

Voluntary Participation: Participation in evidence-based home visiting services requires at least 2 year commitment from families to ensure outcomes (depending upon the home visiting model used)--if families feel pressure to participate, this undermines the relationship-based approach of the service, thus undermining the ability of home visitors to impact parent, child, and family outcomes.*

Sustainable funding is critical: I understand this is not always a guarantee for grand-funded work, but short-term or one-time funding undercuts contractors' ability to implement the model with fidelity, thus compromising the outcomes guaranteed by the evidence-base.*

A bit of a history lesson: Utah received one-time competitive federal funding for home visiting back in 2014-ish. This had disastrous impacts for the field--programs had to close, people lost jobs, and stakeholder confidence in DOH and OHV was badly damaged (I still hear concerns about this 6 years later and am continuing to repair relationships across the state from this. Some LHDs have said they will never work with home visiting again!). This was a learning on the federal government's part as well and they no longer provide short-term funding for home visiting. Each MIECHV reauthorization is in 5-year increments and it is now exclusively formula-based and doesn't vary more than 5% each year to ensure sustainability of service provision. We should approach any funding opportunities for home visiting with the same mindfulness.

Let me know if you have any further questions.

Good morning,

I've been following the development of this bill closely and I've been waiting for you all to ask for my thoughts! Overall, this bill is really really great! Here are some quick bullet points of how this will impact Utah:

Maintenance of Effort: The maintenance of effort requirements will continue. However, this will be based on the past MOE, which is $0. This is incredibly beneficial for Utah, as the MOE requirement will be set for 5 years (the entire period of reauthorization).

Needs Assessment: We will not need to update the needs assessment. While the current needs assessment quickly became outdated (it was completed in 2020), I believe we have sufficient data in other areas of DFH to help inform home visiting expansion. I've been in conversations with the DRP program manager about how we can plug in one of their epidemiologists into our work a bit more!

Reduction of administrative burden: The intense levels of administrative work and reporting for MIECHV is unlike many other federal grants. It's becoming a common complaint amongst MIECHV awardees and some states are starting to turn down this funding as a result. In this bill, they'll be working to reduce the hours by at least 15%. This has incredible implications for Utah's home visiting team and the DFH finance team. Currently the admin work impedes our ability to fully dive into the significant amount of data we have to really push toward more meaningful outcomes.

Virtual Home Visiting: As we've all learned virtual services are here to stay, but the current rules last only until the public health emergency ends. This means that we will be able to better serve families in the ways that they want and better accommodate their needs and schedules.

Match requirements: This is a big shift! Currently we do not have a match requirement for MIECHV. This proposal is 25% (or for every $3 in federal funds, the state must spend $1), but it's tiered up over time (I'll explain below what that looks like for Utah). Regardless of whether this bill is passed or not, a match is very likely in the future for MIECHV. The following is not public, but was made available to state home visiting administrators via a membership organization called the Association of State and Tribal Home Visiting Initiatives (ASTHVI--we're a member):

It's unclear if the match can be any state funds.

Any match will likely need to be for home visiting provided at the MIECHV standard of service provision (this includes all the data collection, screening, and reporting).

- While this is a concern for some state administrators, I think this is actually a good thing. It will allow us to better report on the same metrics across the state to have a better sense of where we are. Currently, we collect very little data for state-funded home visiting.

New funding in this upcoming federal fiscal year will likely count for the match requirement.

- This is great timing with all of the conversations happening with home visiting in the state right now!

How much funding and what's Utah's share?: I received a memo from the Congressional Research Service, via ASTHVI, regarding the estimates of program funding with this current proposal. Again, I was told this is not publicly available, but okay to share it within my agency. Let me know if you'd like to see the full 11 page document, but here's the summary for us:

FY2021: (for comparison, this is our current annual award amount--MIECHV awards have 2 years of availability)

- $3.162 million

FY2023:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $0
- Required match spending from Utah: $0
- Total: $4.451 million

*FY2024: *match requirement starts

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $776,000
- Required match spending from Utah: $258,758
- Total: $5.227 million

FY2025:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $1.195 million
- Required match spending from Utah: $398,264
- Total: $5.646 million

FY2026:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $1.792 million
- Required match spending from Utah: $597,396
- Total: $6.243 million

FY2027:

- Match: $2.936 million

[redacted]

- Required match spending from Utah: $987,752

LEGISLATIVE ALERT

Sept. 22, 2022

Federal Home Visiting Reauthorization Bill Moves Forward

This week, leaders in both the House Ways and Means Committee and Energy and Commerce Committee introduced the Jackie Walorski Maternal and Child Home Visiting Reauthorization Act (H.R. 8876), which reauthorizes the Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting (MIECHV) program. The bill passed out of the House Ways and Means Committee by a vote of 41-0 with one abstention.

It is essential to note that the MIECHV program is a mandatory program, and this bill proposes significant changes to its overall funding. After a careful review by the ASTHO government affairs team, we strongly encourage that state legislative staff and maternal and child health teams carefully review the bill text and summary. This legislation is complex with new maintenance of effort, state matching requirements for a new grant program, and changes to an administrative cap that could uniquely impact state and territorial federal home visiting programs.

The press release, summary of the legislation, section-by-section summary, and bill text are available for review.

Outlook: The full House of Representatives will consider the bill, then move it to the Senate. Offsetting the program's costs is yet to be addressed and is a priority for Congress. However, this legislation was approved with broad bipartisan support, and the government affairs team believes it may be signed into law before the end of the calendar year. Funding for the current MIECHV program expires at the end of the month. Advocates expect Congress to approve a short-term extension of MIECHV as part of the continuing resolution bill that needs to pass before Sept. 30.

Questions: Considering this bill proposes changes to the MIECHV program, if S/THOs have any questions or concerns, please contact Carolyn McCoy.

Detailed Summary:
Currently, the MIECHV program receives approximately $400 million per year.

- This legislation proposes an increase in base funding to $500 million for FY23-FY27. The minimum base grant for an entity is $1 million.
- Starting in FY24-FY27, federal matching grant funds—in addition to base funding—are available to every eligible entity, guided by a formula that will focus on the number of children under five in poverty if they comply with specific statutory requirements on an increasing scale:
  - FY24 $50 million.
  - FY25 $100 million.
  - FY26 $150 million.
  - FY27 $300 million.
- To draw down its full allotment of federal matching grant funds, an entity must provide non-federal funds above their maintenance of effort requirement such that 25% of the total spending consists of non-federal funds.
  - Unobligated matching funds can be redistributed to another entity that can contribute to the non-federal matching funds.
  - The ASTHO government affairs team recommends carefully reviewing the legislation to see what funds can contribute to this new matching requirement.
- New maintenance of effort requirement for states and territories is based on the lesser total of non-federal funds expended in 2019 or 2021. The entity is not eligible for base or matching grants if this is not met.
  - The secretary may allow a grace period for an entity to come into compliance.
- Phased-in additional federal matching funding starting in FY24 is part of the requirement for entities to be eligible for the new federal matching grants, which requires a 25% state match (i.e., for every $1 in state funds, there is a $3 federal contribution). The non-federal matching funds are not applied to the maintenance of effort requirement.
  - The minimum state matching funds are as follows:
    - FY23: Federal matching funds are not required.
    - FY24: $776,000.
    - FY25: $1,000,000.
    - FY26: $1,500,000.
    - FY27: $2,000,000.
  - If a state cannot reach the required amount, the secretary of HHS can proportionately reduce the federal matching amount for that fiscal year.
- Limits state administrative spending to 10% of grants and an exception for not more than 5% at the discretion of the secretary of HHS.
  - This applies to an entity that directly provides home visits to families and not through a sub-recipient.
  - The entity is expanding services to a new community and has been providing services for fewer than three years.
- Allows limited ability to conduct virtual home visits and requires entities to demonstrate that they have met specific conditions. Service delivery models must include at least one in-person visit a year to qualify for federal funding.
- Doubles the tribal set-aside (from 3% to 6%) starting in FY23.
- Dedicated funding (2% set aside) for workforce support, retention, and case management.
- Set aside funding for research, evaluation, administration, and technical assistance.
- Establishes an outcomes dashboard and annual report to Congress on the program.
- Requires HHS to work with partners to reduce administrative burden.
- Maintains a strong focus on evidence-based home visiting models and practices.

COVID-19 Is Dimming as an Election Issue

When voters head to the polls next month, just 31% now say COVID-19 will be a "very important" issue when considering their ballots, the lowest point since Morning Consult began tracking the topic. Meanwhile, 51% say abortion is a top issue when considering their midterm votes. Check out more insights from Morning Consult senior politics reporter Eli Yokley in our freshly updated Midterm Tracker.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- Federal Trade Commission Chair Lina Khan signaled additional agency scrutiny into the practices of pharmacy benefit managers, saying in a fireside chat that the FTC is "looking at middlemen across the board to try to understand, how could we be making sure that these markets are really serving people and not just the narrow self interests of gatekeepers?" When asked whether existing antitrust laws could be used against PBMs, Khan cited two, including the Robinson-Patman Act of 1936, which the agency is now looking at whether it can be applicable in cases of commercial bribery and rebating practices after it was regularly deployed by the FTC in the 1950s and 1960s. (Endpoints News)

- At a meeting of the White House's reproductive rights task force today, President Joe Biden will detail how abortion rights have been stripped away in the 100 days since Roe v. Wade was overturned, in addition to announcing new Department of Education guidance shielding university students who get an abortion from discrimination and $6 million in Health and Human Services Department grants to protect access to reproductive health care services. (Bloomberg) Planned Parenthood said its first mobile clinic to provide abortion care will launch in southern Illinois, making it accessible to patients in nearby Missouri and Kentucky. (Axios)

- The Supreme Court declined to hear a challenge from 10 mostly GOP-led states on Biden's COVID-19 vaccine requirement for employees of federally funded health care facilities. (Reuters)

- UnitedHealth Group Inc. said yesterday that it has officially completed its roughly $8 billion acquisition of Change Healthcare Inc., two weeks after a federal judge rejected the Department of Justice's challenge to the merger. (The Associated Press)

When I oversaw the Intergenerational Poverty Initiative, home visiting was a prime policy recommendation we supported each year but it just continually eroded and fewer and fewer families were able to receive the services and attain the benefits of this evidence-based intervention. Happy to provide any updates, Tracy. I'd say just keep your fingers crossed that this is what passes in December. Anything past December will be MUCH more difficult to get through Congress, as most home visiting champions are retiring.

Heather asked a couple of other questions in chat today, so I'll provide my responses here so everyone can reference them later as needed (but don't hesitate to ask at any time! I can easily pull this information again):

Match Requirement:
If we are able to count our current funding, which is $522,000 annually, we will be fine to meet these requirements until FY2026. We would need $597,396 (or an increase of $75,396) by FY2026 and $987,752 by FY2027 (with a total increase from current funding levels of $390,356). However, based on this current bill, this would require us to shift our standard of service provision to meet the MIECHV standard (with the same required performance measures). That's definitely possible and since the match won't be required for a few years, we have a great running start. It will take work on our end to do, but the payoffs will be great in the long run, as we'll then be able to have a more robust picture of the impacts of visiting across the state (i.e. I want to do this anyway, regardless of home visiting's funding future).

Who is best served by/benefits from home visiting?
It's important to remember that we must reference the evidence-base for home visiting (otherwise, we cannot guarantee the amazing outcomes and ROI that makes this a compelling service/intervention--it then would not fall under my program, as it would be more broad case management). I would suggest we move forward with the definition MIECHV uses, since we'll need to increase all service provision to this standard as a result of the match requirement:

Pregnant parents or families with a child age 5 and younger

Priority should be given to families that meet at least one (1) of the following MIECHV Eligibility Criteria:

- Low income (at or below 100% of the Federal Poverty Level)
- Pregnant and under the age of 21
- History of child abuse or neglect, or history of interactions with child welfare services
- History of substance abuse or in need of substance abuse treatment
- Tobacco use
- Low student achievement
- A child with developmental delays or disability

[redacted]

A household member who is serving or has served in the U.S. armed forces

If the Home Visiting Program has an open caseload for enrollment, priority should be given to those who meet multiple MIECHV Eligibility Criteria.

The various home visiting models use more nuanced definitions, but I suggest we leave that to our contractors to work through, as they receive targeted technical assistance from model implementation specialists.

Optimal Coverage:

Currently, we have funding and capacity to serve 2.6% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah (611 families). If we could reach, at minimum, 10% of these children (2,317), I'd say we'd be doing a great job!

However, because home visiting is a long-term intervention (2+ years, depending on the model), families only have to qualify (or meet the definition above) at the time of enrollment. Ideally, we should see changes to income and stressors over time, which would actually increase the need.

We would also need to increase our intake and referral processes to account for expansion--we have to find these families somewhere and we need to strengthen our early childhood infrastructure to do this. I'm already talking to Help Me Grow Utah about how they can support this.

Estimated Costs & ROI:

The following are current annual costs for PAT and NFP. Many programs supplement with local tax dollars, so adjustments for inflation are likely needed:

PAT: $5,880 per family

NFP: $6,935 per family

The cost to serve 10% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah would be around $15.5 million.

With the proposed formula in MIECHV reauthorization, by FY2027, we would have $8.375 million--this would enable us to serve approximately 1,300 families, or 5.5% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah.

While 5.5% may be sufficient, the ROI for home visiting is very strong ($5.70 in savings for every $1 of taxpayer dollars spent). As a result, we should push to get closer to that 10%.

- ROI for 5.5% (current projected funding): $47.738 million
- ROI for 10%: $88.35 million

Side note: As home visiting expands, the team at the state level will need to expand as well to ensure we're able to conduct appropriate contract monitoring processes. I currently have 2 program specialists positions on my team. If we are to expand into each LHD, I would estimate we need 5-6.

Other Considerations:

While Heather didn't ask about this, I want to share some very important considerations to keep in mind for any home visiting expansion conversations that I may not be a part of:

Voluntary Participation: Participation in evidence-based home visiting services requires at least 2 year commitment from families to ensure outcomes (depending upon the home visiting model used)--if families feel pressure to participate, this undermines the relationship-based approach of the service, thus undermining the ability of home visitors to impact parent, child, and family outcomes.*

Sustainable funding is critical: I understand this is not always a guarantee for grand-funded work, but short-term or one-time funding undercuts contractors' ability to implement the model with fidelity, thus compromising the outcomes guaranteed by the evidence-base.*

A bit of a history lesson: Utah received one-time competitive federal funding for home visiting back in 2014-ish. This had disastrous impacts for the field--programs had to close, people lost jobs, and stakeholder confidence in DOH and OHV was badly damaged (I still hear concerns about this 6 years later and am continuing to repair relationships across the state from this. Some LHDs have said they will never work with home visiting again!). This was a learning on the federal government's part as well and they no longer provide short-term funding for home visiting. Each MIECHV reauthorization is in 5-year increments and it is now exclusively formula-based and doesn't vary more than 5% each year to ensure sustainability of service provision. We should approach any funding opportunities for home visiting with the same mindfulness.

Let me know if you have any further questions.

Good morning,

I've been following the development of this bill closely and I've been waiting for you all to ask for my thoughts! Overall, this bill is really really great! Here are some quick bullet points of how this will impact Utah:

Maintenance of Effort: The maintenance of effort requirements will continue. However, this will be based on the past MOE, which is $0. This is incredibly beneficial for Utah, as the MOE requirement will be set for 5 years (the entire period of reauthorization).
Needs Assessment: We will not need to update the needs assessment. While the current needs assessment quickly became outdated (it was completed in 2020), I believe we have sufficient data in other areas of DFH to help inform home visiting expansion. I've been in conversations with the DRP program manager about how we can plug in one of their epidemiologists into our work a bit more!
Reduction of administrative burden: The intense levels of administrative work and reporting for MIECHV is unlike many other federal grants. It's becoming a common complaint amongst MIECHV awardees and some states are starting to turn down this funding as a result. In this bill, they'll be working to reduce the hours by at least 15%. This has incredible implications for Utah's home visiting team and the DFH finance team. Currently the admin work impedes our ability to fully dive into the significant amount of data we have to really push toward more meaningful outcomes.
Virtual Home Visiting: As we've all learned virtual services are here to stay, but the current rules last only until the public health emergency ends. This means that we will be able to better serve families in the ways that they want and better accommodate their needs and schedules.
Match requirements: This is a big shift! Currently we do not have a match requirement for MIECHV. This proposal is 25% (or for every $3 in federal funds, the state must spend $1), but it's tiered up over time (I'll explain below what that looks like for Utah). Regardless of whether this bill is passed or not, a match is very likely in the future for MIECHV. The following is not public, but was made available to state home visiting administrators via a membership organization called the Association of State and Tribal Home Visiting Initiatives (ASTHVI--we're a member):

It's unclear if the match can be any state funds.
Any match will likely need to be for home visiting provided at the MIECHV standard of service provision (this includes all the data collection, screening, and reporting).

- While this is a concern for some state administrators, I think this is actually a good thing. It will allow us to better report on the same metrics across the state to have a better sense of where we are. Currently, we collect very little data for state-funded home visiting.

New funding in this upcoming federal fiscal year will likely count for the match requirement.

- This is great timing with all of the conversations happening with home visiting in the state right now!

How much funding and what's Utah's share?: I received a memo from the Congressional Research Service, via ASTHVI, regarding the estimates of program funding with this current proposal. Again, I was told this is not publicly available, but okay to share it within my agency. Let me know if you'd like to see the full 11 page document, but here's the summary for us:

FY2021: (for comparison, this is our current annual award amount--MIECHV awards have 2 years of availability)

- $3.162 million

FY2023:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million

LEGISLATIVE ALERT

Sept. 22, 2022

Federal Home Visiting Reauthorization Bill Moves Forward

This week, leaders in both the House Ways and Means Committee and Energy and Commerce Committee introduced the Jackie Walorski Maternal and Child Home Visiting Reauthorization Act (H.R. 8876), which reauthorizes the Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting (MIECHV) program. The bill passed out of the House Ways and Means Committee by a vote of 41-0 with one abstention.

It is essential to note that the MIECHV program is a mandatory program, and this bill proposes significant changes to its overall funding. After a careful review by the ASTHO government affairs team, we strongly encourage that state legislative staff and maternal and child health teams carefully review the bill text and summary. This legislation is complex with new maintenance of effort, state matching requirements for a new grant program, and changes to an administrative cap that could uniquely impact state and territorial federal home visiting programs.

The press release, summary of the legislation, section-by-section summary, and bill text are available for review.

Outlook: The full House of Representatives will consider the bill, then move it to the Senate. Offsetting the program's costs is yet to be addressed and is a priority for Congress. However, this legislation was approved with broad bipartisan support, and the government affairs team believes it may be signed into law before the end of the calendar year. Funding for the current MIECHV program expires at the end of the month. Advocates expect Congress to approve a short-term extension of MIECHV as part of the continuing resolution bill that needs to pass before Sept. 30.

Questions: Considering this bill proposes changes to the MIECHV program, if S/THOs have any questions or concerns, please contact Carolyn McCoy.

Detailed Summary:
Currently, the MIECHV program receives approximately $400 million per year.

- This legislation proposes an increase in base funding to $500 million for FY23-FY27. The minimum base grant for an entity is $1 million.
- Starting in FY24-FY27, federal matching grant funds—in addition to base funding—are available to every eligible entity, guided by a formula that will focus on the number of children under five in poverty if they comply with specific statutory requirements on an increasing scale:
  - FY24 $50 million.
  - FY25 $100 million.
  - FY26 $150 million.
  - FY27 $300 million.
- To draw down its full allotment of federal matching grant funds, an entity must provide non-federal funds above their maintenance of effort requirement such that 25% of the total spending consists of non-federal funds.
  - Unobligated matching funds can be redistributed to another entity that can contribute to the non-federal matching funds.
  - The ASTHO government affairs team recommends carefully reviewing the legislation to see what funds can contribute to this new matching requirement.
- New maintenance of effort requirement for states and territories is based on the lesser total of non-federal funds expended in 2019 or 2021. The entity is not eligible for base or matching grants if this is not met.
  - The secretary may allow a grace period for an entity to come into compliance.
- Phased-in additional federal matching funding starting in FY24 is part of the requirement for entities to be eligible for the new federal matching grants, which requires a 25% state match (i.e., for every $1 in state funds, there is a $3 federal contribution). The non-federal matching funds are not applied to the maintenance of effort requirement.
  - The minimum state matching funds are as follows:
    - FY23: Federal matching funds are not required.
    - FY24: $776,000.
    - FY25: $1,000,000.
    - FY26: $1,500,000.
    - FY27: $2,000,000.
  - If a state cannot reach the required amount, the secretary of HHS can proportionately reduce the federal matching amount for that fiscal year.

- Limits state administrative spending to 10% of grants and an exception for not more than 5% at the discretion of the secretary of HHS.
  - This applies to an entity that directly provides home visits to families and not through a sub-recipient.
  - The entity is expanding services to a new community and has been providing services for fewer than three years.
- Allows limited ability to conduct virtual home visits and requires entities to demonstrate that they have met specific conditions. Service delivery models must include at least one in-person visit a year to qualify for federal funding.
- Doubles the tribal set-aside (from 3% to 6%) starting in FY23.
- Dedicated funding (2% set aside) for workforce support, retention, and case management.
- Set aside funding for research, evaluation, administration, and technical assistance.
- Establishes an outcomes dashboard and annual report to Congress on the program.
- Requires HHS to work with partners to reduce administrative burden.
- Maintains a strong focus on evidence-based home visiting models and practices.

NIHCM FOUNDATION October 2022

Washington, DC, October 4, 2022 - The National Institute for Health Care Management Foundation (NIHCM) is pleased to announce that the Honorable Alex Azar II, Pam Kehaly, and Michael J. Mizeur have joined NIHCM's Advisory Board and Board of Directors.

[redacted]

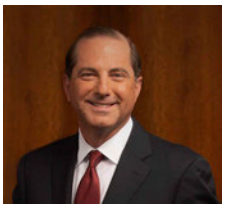
“We are delighted to welcome Alex, Pam, and Michael to NIHCM. They are experienced leaders who bring unique perspectives to our highly-accomplished Board and Advisory Board. Their insights will advance NIHCM’s mission to improve health care for millions of Americans,” said Nancy Chockley, Founding President and CEO of NIHCM.

NIHCM Foundation is a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization dedicated to transforming health care through evidence and collaboration.

The Honorable Alex Azar II
24th Secretary
U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services



Alex Azar II has extensive healthcare experience in the senior-most levels of the U.S. government and the private sector. He is currently an advisor to Foresite Capital, an Adjunct Professor of Business and Senior Executive-in-Residence at the University of Miami Herbert Business School, and he is a member of the American Task Force on Lebanon’s Policy Advisory Board. He serves on several corporate boards.

Azar served as the 24th Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS - 2018-2021), leading over 85,000 employees with a budget of over $1.4 trillion. He was the architect of Operation Warp Speed, delivering COVID-19 vaccines and therapeutics and led the historic transformation of the healthcare system and HHS’s response to the unprecedented COVID-19 pandemic. He drove U.S. Government efforts to tackle the opioid crisis, increase private insurance options, bring transparency of price and quality information to healthcare, expand telehealth, and give patients ownership of their health records. Azar also led key public health initiatives, such as banning flavored e-cigarettes, reducing youth tobacco use by nearly one-third in one year, creating and implementing the program to end the HIV epidemic in America in 10 years, responding to public health threats, crafting the first rural health initiative to improve access and quality of care, and launching a program to dramatically reduce maternal mortality.

He was President of Lilly USA, LLC, from 2012 to 2017. Prior to that, Azar was the Deputy Secretary of HHS.

Azar joins an exceptional group of health care experts on the Foundation’s Advisory Board:

- Katherine Baicker, PhD
- Donald M. Berwick, MD
- James C. Capretta, MA
- Michael E. Chernew, PhD
- Karen DeSalvo, MD
- Paul B. Ginsburg, PhD
- Scott Gottlieb, MD
- Robert P. Kocher, MD
- Gov. Mike Leavitt
- Robert Reischauer, PhD
- James C. Robinson, PhD
- Avik Roy

Pam Kehaly
President and CEO
Blue Cross Blue Shield of Arizona

Pam Kehaly is President and Chief Executive Officer of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Arizona (BCBSAZ). With more than 30 years of experience in the health insurance industry, she is leading the 2,700-employee company to inspire health through inventive programs, services, and health insurance products. Kehaly joined BCBSAZ in 2017 and was quickly recognized by the Phoenix Business Journal as one of the state’s “Most Admired Leaders” and made Arizona Business Magazine’s “Most Influential Women in Arizona” list. In 2021, she was named Leader of the Year by Arizona Capitol Times. Through Kehaly's leadership, BCBSAZ has secured a spot on Modern Healthcare’s Best Places to Work in Healthcare list. Since joining BCBSAZ, Kehaly has led the company to number 1 market share, with 23% growth by focusing on consumer needs and company culture.

[redacted]

Among the many initiatives Kehaly is spearheading is the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Arizona Foundation for Community Health & Advancement, which began operations in January 2022, to enhance the company's commitment to the public good by focusing on the critical health issues impacting Arizona, including mental health, substance use disorder, chronic health conditions, and health equity.

Michael J. Mizeur
President and CEO
BlueCross BlueShield of South Carolina

Michael J. Mizeur is committed to serving the people of South Carolina as the leader of the health plan that has offered security to Palmetto State citizens for more than 75 years. As the President and CEO, Mizeur leads more than 20 companies, with over 15,000 employees, involved in health insurance services, U.S. DoD health program and Medicare contracts, Medicaid plans and a philanthropic foundation that funds programs to improve health care and access to health care for South Carolinians.

Mizeur began his career with BlueCross in 1998 and has held a number of senior leadership positions with the company, most recently president and chief operating officer in 2021.

Kehaly and Mizeur join NIHCM's powerful Board of Directors:

- Curtis Barnett
- Gail K. Boudreaux
- Gregory E. Deavens
- Andrew Dreyfus
- Patrick Geraghty
- Cory Harris

39th Annual Jefferson B. Fordham Debate –

The Post-Dobbs Landscape: States' Abortion Shield Laws

Be it resolved that states' abortion "shield laws" run contrary to principles of U.S. federalism and constitutional law

October 17, 2022

5:30 p.m. Reception, 6:00 p.m. Debate & Q&A, Register Here »
Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization held that abortion was not a constitutionally protected right under the Due Process Clause, and, in the absence of federal constitutional protection, state laws now govern access to abortion from the earliest stages of pregnancy. Whereas some states have passed laws severely restricting or banning abortion, other states have passed "shield laws"—laws which protect abortion providers from civil and criminal liabilities stemming from abortion care provided to out-of-state residents. Proponents of abortion shield laws argue that such laws are necessary to assure in-state abortion providers that they will not be penalized by another state for providing care to residents from those states. Shield laws, they argue, are a constitutionally permitted way to provide safety from prosecution under the laws of another state. Opponents of shield laws may counter that such laws undermine U.S. notions of comity and federalism as well as test constitutional principles underpinning states' sovereignty over its own citizens.

The University of Utah S.J. Quinney College of Law will host a debate to consider the consequences of states' abortion shield laws to federalism and the U.S. constitution.

Enforcement of the antitrust and consumer protection laws in the United States has experienced significant fluctuations over time. While enforcement activity by the Department of Justice (DOJ) and Federal Trade Commission (FTC) was vigorous from World War I through the post-war years, the emergence of the “Chicago School” in the 1970s resulted in a narrowed, efficiency-oriented focus that, with a few notable exceptions, resulted in diminished agency enforcement and judicial narrowing of key legal doctrines. 6 hours CLE (pending). Water Markets: the Good, the Bad, and the Ugly

19th Annual Stegner Center Young Scholar Lecture

12:15-1:15 p.m., Register Here »
This lecture will analyze recent developments in water marketing. The term water market refers to many different types of transactions, from a water lease between neighboring farmers to the trading of water futures in the Chicago Mercantile Exchange or the investment of Wall Street firms in irrigation mutuals in Colorado. Unfortunately, not every market may fulfill our efficiency and fairness expectations. Critics of water markets usually consider all water markets to be tainted because they commodify a valuable resource. 1 hour CLE (pending). More Info

Welcoming Utah Law's newest students

This month we welcomed our new JD and MLS classes to the S.J. Quinney College of Law. We're thrilled to celebrate their academic achievements, as well as the diversity of backgrounds and experiences that they bring to our community.

In terms of academic credentials, this is the strongest JD class to ever join the college: Their 3.87 median GPA is the highest in our history, and their 163 median LSAT is in the top 15% nationally. We are also proud that 94% of our 1Ls received merit scholarships—our highest percentage ever, and a reflection of our commitment to keeping legal education affordable and accessible for all students.

Similarly, our new MLS class boasts an abundance of talent and a wide range of personal and professional experiences. Among incoming MLS students, 61% identify as female and 24% identify as students of color. Further, 39% were the first generation in their families to earn an undergraduate degree, and fully 19% already have at least one graduate degree. This is a testament to their drive and dedication—and to the richness of perspective that they bring to the college.

Health Community Updates

Friends – Please join us for our next bi-weekly White House Health Community Call tomorrow, Wednesday, October 5th at 2:30pm ET. You can RSVP here. Please invite colleagues and members of your community – all are welcome.

Below are several important updates. Have a wonderful rest of the week.

FDA Infant Formula Update: Agency Taking Steps to Support the Infant Formula Supply

"We've made important progress toward improving the infant formula supply in the U.S. and paving the way for a more robust and diverse marketplace for the future. However, the FDA can't do it alone. We'll need to work with all stakeholders to evaluate what other steps could be taken to encourage a more diverse and resilient infant formula marketplace," said FDA Commissioner Robert M. Califf, M.D. "Manufacturers from around the world have demonstrated their commitment to helping bolster U.S. supply and, in turn, we are committed to continuing these flexibilities for their products to safely remain on the market while ensuring they meet our standards." You can read more about the pathway published by the FDA to provide a pathway for infant formulas operating under enforcement discretion in the U.S. to remain on the market here.

POTUS and VPOTUS convene the Task Force on Reproductive Healthcare Access

Today, President Biden and Vice President Harris are convening the second meeting of the President's Task Force on Reproductive Healthcare Access since the Dobbs decision. In the 100 days since Dobbs, we've seen a wave of Republican officials taking radical steps at the national and state level that jeopardize women's health and rights. As a result, millions of women cannot access critical health care and doctors and nurses are facing criminal penalties – including being thrown in jail – for providing health care.

These extreme abortion bans also have consequences that extend beyond abortion, including reports of women being denied prescriptions at pharmacies to treat miscarriage and conditions like arthritis and cancer, and threats to contraception, including for college students. The Biden Administration is committed to doing everything in its power to protect women's rights for no matter where they live. But the President has been clear: the only way to fully protect a woman's right to choose is for Congress to act by codifying Roe v. Wade into law.

In today's Task Force meeting, the President and Vice President will hear directly from healthcare providers in states that have banned abortion and states experiencing an influx of women seeking reproductive health care because of abortion bans in surrounding states. Coinciding with the Task Force meeting, the Administration is taking a series of steps to affirm women's rights and access to reproductive health care services, including:

[redacted]

- The Department of Education is releasing a new resource to colleges and universities reminding them of their obligation under Title IX to protect students from discrimination based on pregnancy related conditions, including termination of pregnancy.
- The Department of Health and Human Services is awarding $6 million in new Title X family planning grants to protect access to affordable, quality family planning services and other preventive health care, including contraception.

New York Times Article: A Public Health Success Story

"In the spring of 2021, several months into the mass vaccination program, white Americans were significantly more likely to have been vaccinated than Black or Latino Americans. By late 2021, the Hispanic rate was higher than the white rate, and the Black rate was almost as high as the white rate, according to the C.D.C. As a result, the racial gap in death rates has also disappeared.

That disappearance is arguably one of Biden's biggest accomplishments — one that would not have happened, to be clear, without passionate advocacy and hard work by many community health officials. In a country with deep racial inequities, where Covid was initially another tragic example, the virus is no longer disproportionately harming Black and Hispanic Americans."

Dr. Eliza Buyers created both the synchronous and the asynchronous courses. We asked her a few questions about it.

Why did you decide to go asynchronous with this content?
We typically do the live, 6-week series from 7am-8am for six consecutive weeks. We know that this schedule does not work for many people. Our goal is to offer the same content but allow providers to choose the time and pace that works for them.

How can this course help improve the lives of adolescent patients?
Reproductive health is an essential aspect of a person's life and their healthcare. Providers who take care of teens are perfectly poised to support healthy relationships, offer contraception and recommend routine STI screening and treatment. And we know that parents and guardians want this kind of support from their child's provider.

Is there anything else you'd like to say about the course?
In addition to providing practical information that can improve your practice, we hope the content is fun and interesting. If it isn't already, taking care of teens is going to be one of the best parts of your day!

The High Court Cases Threatening Big Tech Immunity

The tech world has been waiting with bated breath to see whether the U.S. Supreme Court would reconsider the broad immunity currently enjoyed by internet giants like Google and Twitter under Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act. But now that the justices have decided to review the protections, the industry must wait to find out what that means for the companies and the millions who use them.

In State Court Elections, Few Step Up To Take On Incumbents
After record cash was spent in state high court elections two years ago, contentious issues like COVID-19 health rules, state gun laws, and the right to abortion promise to keep public attention on dozens of seats up for grabs this November. But nationwide, a heavy advantage for sitting judges, sky-high campaign costs, and other factors discourage challengers, leaving voters without a choice in thousands of races.

No-Poach Plea Hiccups Point To DOJ's Unsound Theory

After a series of setbacks, the U.S. Department of Justice could soon obtain its first no-poach conviction, but complications in a recent change-of-plea hearing demonstrate that the government's problems may continue as long as it incorrectly insists that labor cases are the same as any other antitrust conspiracy, say Mark Butscha and Matthew Ridings at Thompson Hine.

In State Court Elections, Few Step Up To Take On Incumbents

After record cash was spent in state high court elections two years ago, contentious issues like COVID-19 health rules, state gun laws, and the right to abortion promise to keep public attention on dozens of seats up for grabs this November. But nationwide, a heavy advantage for sitting judges, sky-high campaign costs, and other factors discourage challengers, leaving voters without a choice in thousands of races.

FRAC Report: WIC Enhancements Critical to Keeping Millions of Young Children Fed During the First Two Years of the Pandemic

North Carolina, California, Kentucky, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts Show Highest Increases in Participation

WASHINGTON, October 5, 2022 – More families with young children are taking part in the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC), according to a report released today by the Food Research & Action Center (FRAC).

The WIC During COVID-19: Participation and Benefit Redemption Since the Onset of the Pandemic report finds that the program had 6.2 million participants in February 2022, an increase of 1.2 percent from February 2020, the baseline month before COVID-19.

The change in WIC participation varies widely between WIC agencies based on a variety of factors, including the degree of uptake and implementation of pandemic-related WIC flexibilities and WIC agency outreach and capacity.

The report examines changes in WIC participation and food costs for benefit redemption over the first two years of the pandemic among WIC agencies located in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and Tribal organization WIC agencies, and provides recommendations for strengthening the program.

Key findings:

- Local economies benefited by $7 billion as a result of WIC food redemption over the first two years of the COVID-19 pandemic.
- The states that experienced the greatest increases in participation during COVID-19 were North Carolina (21.0 percent), Kentucky (16.6 percent), New Hampshire (15.7 percent), California (13.9 percent), and Massachusetts (13.9 percent).
- The states that saw the biggest drops in participation were New Mexico (-19.7 percent), Missouri (-18.9 percent), Pennsylvania (-17.7 percent), Ohio (-14.5 percent), and Arkansas (-14.0 percent).
- The change in WIC participation varies widely between WIC agencies based on a variety of factors, including the quality of implementation of pandemic-related WIC flexibilities and WIC agency outreach and capacity.

WIC waivers initiated at the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic have dramatically improved the program and its service.

Participants have been able to enroll and re-enroll in WIC without going to a WIC clinic. For states with Online EBT, WIC participants also have been able to receive their monthly food package benefits and attend appointments off-site via video chat and phone.

The monthly fruit and vegetable benefit boost for WIC participants also has played a key role in keeping hunger at bay for children and expectant or postpartum individuals. Through December 2022, participants can receive additional fruits and vegetables each month: about three times more for children and about four times for pregnant and postpartum individuals.

“Despite modest growth in participation, too few eligible individuals are receiving WIC benefits,” said Luis Guardia, president of FRAC. “More needs to be done to enhance participation to address the alarming spikes in hunger caused by the pandemic. A complete range of crucial improvements is required to modernize and strengthen WIC to ensure families eligible for the program get the nutrition they need for their health and well-being.”

For states with low participation, FRAC advises WIC agencies to offer a full range of WIC services and benefit issuance options, including maximizing remote access to WIC through phone appointments and remote benefit issuance; maximizing partnerships and data sharing with health care providers, Medicaid, and other program operators to streamline processes at WIC clinics, limit unnecessary paperwork, and reduce participant burden; and coordinating with community partners to conduct community-centered and innovative WIC outreach.

Congressional action is needed to make permanent the improvements that have bolstered WIC services and improved access for families with young children during the COVID-19 pandemic. This includes continuing the enhanced value of WIC's fruit and vegetable benefit at the levels recommended by the National Academies of Science, Engineering and Medicine.

The Healthy Meals, Healthy Kids Act offers a chance to broaden access to and strengthen WIC by maximizing remote access to WIC through phone appointments and remote benefit issuance; requiring WIC clinics to provide services over the phone and via video alternatives; and allowing for online and mobile payments in WIC.

THE SIMMERING GOP CRITICISM OF STATE AND LOCAL ARPA SPENDING

KERY MURAKAMI | Republican lawmakers in the House and Senate have been bashing projects paid for with American Rescue Plan Act dollars that they see as wasteful. It could be a sign of further scrutiny to come if they take back one or both chambers of Congress.

THE STATES THAT SAW A RISE IN PEOPLE MOVING IN (OR OUT) DURING THE PANDEMIC

MOLLY BOLAN | Overall state-to-state migration in the U.S. decreased after Covid hit. But new research shows the states that saw notable upticks with inbound and outbound movers.

DRIVERS WANTED ELECTRIC VEHICLES EVEN BEFORE GAS PRICES SKYROCKETED

JEAN DIMEO | But barriers remain to widespread adoption, a new survey finds, including lacking awareness about state and federal purchase incentives and a limited charging network.

Opportunities to Leverage Federal Funds for State and Local Technology Improvements

COVID-19 pandemic, the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act (IIJA) and the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) provide state and local governments with a unique opportunity to invest in new, transformational cloud technologies. These technologies will help ensure not only the successful implementation of many wide-ranging projects and programs under the IIJA but also set a solid and resilient foundation for future infrastructure-focused innovations unachievable with current fiscal resources, technology tools, and business processes. Consider investing a portion of the funds in these five technology modernization opportunities.

TOP STORIES

- President Joe Biden said he is considering declaring a public health emergency in the wake of the Supreme Court striking down Roe v. Wade, which would free up federal resources to better promote abortion access. The White House previously said such a declaration did not seem like "a great option," but Biden noted that he asked officials to "to look at whether I have the authority to do that and what impact that would have," and a public health emergency is one of many approaches his administration is mulling "to accommodate the rights of women." (The Associated Press)

[redacted]

- Senate Democrats are expected to resume talks on their new spending package early this week, with tax credits that lower health insurance premiums for approximately 13 million Americans standing out as one of the most pressing unresolved issues. One person familiar with the matter said Sen. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.) has rebuffed a Democratic proposal to extend the credits, which cover insurance plans purchased through Affordable Care Act exchanges, though the conservative Democrat and party leaders have talked about the possibility of limiting eligibility based on income to reduce overall costs. (The Washington Post)

- HRA Pharma has asked the Food and Drug Administration to authorize its birth control pill for over-the-counter sales, the first such application in the United States, which comes just weeks after the fall of Roe v. Wade. The French drugmaker's chief strategic and innovations officer said the timing of the application is "a really sad coincidence," while Cadence Health said it is also in contact with the FDA about converting its pill to over-the-counter sales, with an application likely slated for the coming year. (The New York Times)

- Abbott Laboratories has restarted production of its EleCare baby formula at its plant in Sturgis, Mich., following a three-week shutdown due to flooding from severe thunderstorms. The plant was at the center of the nationwide formula shortage after a monthslong shutdown over contaminants and unsanitary conditions, but the FDA said the long-awaited resumption of production "will mean more and more supply is on the way or on store shelves moving forward." WHAT ELSE YOU NEED TO KNOW

CORONAVIRUS

As the BA.5 variant spreads, the risk of coronavirus reinfection grows

Joel Achenbach, The Washington Post

America has decided the pandemic is over. The coronavirus has other ideas. The latest omicron offshoot, BA.5, has quickly become dominant in the United States, and thanks to its elusiveness when encountering the human immune system, is driving a wave of cases across the country.

Could a universal coronavirus vaccine be the silver bullet that ends this pandemic—and the next?

Erin Prater, Fortune

Could a so-called "pan-coronavirus" vaccine be the long-awaited silver bullet that ends the COVID pandemic—and the next one, too? Answer: It's complicated.

Your COVID protection outside isn't what it was in 2020. Here's why it's time to think more critically about outdoor gatherings

Erin Prater, Fortune

Spreading COVID outside was possible, but not probable, experts advised in 2020, urging cooped-up citizens to turn to Mother Nature as an antidote to the isolation of lockdowns. Events, dining, and even entire classrooms were moved outside, when feasible. But Omicron was a game changer, in more ways than one.

Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer tests positive for covid

Marianne Levine, Politico

He is fully vaccinated and double boosted with minor symptoms, spokesperson Justin Goodman said in a statement. He will quarantine and work remotely.

GENERAL

Two long weeks: Inside Biden's struggle to respond to abortion ruling

Ashley Parker et al., The Washington Post

To many increasingly frustrated Democrats, Biden's slow-footed response on abortion was just the latest example of a failure to meet the moment on a wave of conservative rollbacks, from gun control to environmental protections to voting rights. Some aspects of the White House reaction have felt to some Democrats like a routine response, including stakeholder calls and the creation of a task force, to an existential crisis.

U.S. scientists enroll nearly 40,000 patients in high-stakes, $1.2 billion study of long Covid

Spencer Kimball, CNBC

The National Institutes of Health is rolling out one of the largest studies in the world to understand long Covid in a high-stakes effort to find definitive answers about a multitude of seemingly unrelated and sometimes debilitating symptoms that have plagued patients and confounded physicians.

Vice President Kamala Harris stresses need for "pro-choice Congress" to protect abortion rights

Melissa Quinn, CBS News

Vice President Kamala Harris underscored the importance of voters casting their ballots in the November midterm elections for a "pro-choice Congress" that will enshrine the right to an abortion into law after the Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade.

The U.S. May Be Losing the Fight Against Monkeypox, Scientists Say

Apoorva Mandavilli, The New York Times

As epidemics go, the monkeypox outbreak should have been relatively easy to snuff out. The virus does not spread efficiently except through intimate contact, and tests and vaccines were at hand even before the current outbreak.

One in Six Calls to National Suicide Prevention Lifeline End Without Reaching a Counselor

Brianna Abbott et al., The Wall Street Journal

Health officials preparing to broaden the reach of a national mental-health crisis line are working to strengthen an overstretched network of call centers that didn't connect with about one in six callers in recent years, a Wall Street Journal data review showed.

Floating abortion clinic proposed in Gulf to bypass bans

The Associated Press

A California doctor is proposing a floating abortion clinic in the Gulf of Mexico as a way to maintain access for people in southern states where abortion bans have been enacted.

FDA appears to hold off on crackdown on synthetic nicotine products, despite calls from Congress

Nicholas Florko, Stat News

Congress gave the Food and Drug Administration a clear directive to crack down on vape companies skirting the agency's rules. But there are growing signs the agency is not ready to do as instructed. Now, advocates are apoplectic.

The Vasectomy Influencers

Kaitlyn Tiffany, The Atlantic

Doctors who have spent their careers promoting vasectomies are finding themselves thrust into the spotlight.

Pregnant woman given HOV ticket argues fetus is passenger, post-Roe

Timothy Bella, The Washington Post

A pregnant Texas woman who was ticketed for driving in the HOV lane suggested that Roe v. Wade being overturned by the Supreme Court means that her fetus counted as a passenger and that she should not have been cited.

In America, Cancer Patients Endure Debt on Top of Disease

Noam N. Levey, Kaiser Health News

About two-thirds of adults with health care debt who've had cancer themselves or in their family have cut spending on food, clothing, or other household basics, a poll conducted by KFF for this project found. About 1 in 4 have declared bankruptcy or lost their home to eviction or foreclosure.

Economic fallout from abortion bans will hit the poor hardest

Caitlin Gilbert, Financial Times

Research shows denying access worsens inequality and creates financial hardships for women and their families.

U.S. health laws don't always protect abortion information, but new bills could fill the gaps

Lily Yang and Lauren Feiner, CNBC

The Supreme Court's decision to overturn Roe v. Wade last month raised concerns that data collected by tech companies and clinics could be used to criminally charge people who seek abortions or experience pregnancy loss.

Texas Judge Extends Ban on Transgender Children Care Probes

Shira Stein and Laurel Calkins, Bloomberg Law

A state judge extended a ban on Texas authorities investigating some members of an LGBTQ group who arrange gender-affirming care for children, as the politically fraught issue makes its way through the courts.

Judge allows Louisiana abortion ban to go into effect

Oriana Gonzalez, Axios

A state judge on Friday lifted an order temporarily blocking Louisiana's abortion trigger bans from being in effect — nearly all abortions are now illegal in the state.

Epilepsy patients navigate a murky, unregulated CBD market

Eric Berger, The Washington Post

The FDA does little to regulate CBD, so trade groups admit that the marketplace includes potentially harmful products and that quality varies widely. They say pending bipartisan federal legislation would protect those who use CBD. But some consumer advocacy groups say the bills would have the opposite effect.

PAYERS

Medi-Cal's Reliance on Prisoners to Make Cheaper Eyeglasses Proves Shortsighted

Colleen DeGuzman, Kaiser Health News

To dodge hefty costs for eyewear, California's health insurance program for low-income people, Medi-Cal, has an innovative strategy: It contracts exclusively with the state's prisons, and inmates make glasses for its beneficiaries.

PROVIDERS

AHA blasts 'deeply flawed' proposed HHS post-acute care model

Robert King, Fierce Healthcare

The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation released a report to Congress (PDF) outlining a unified payment model for long-term care hospitals, rehab facilities, nursing homes and home health agencies. But the American Hospital Association (AHA) said the draft model has major flaws.

Doctors Struggle With State Abortion Restrictions at Odds With Federal Law

Melanie Evans, The Wall Street Journal

Doctors and hospitals are rushing to reconcile laws in their states barring abortion with a federal law that may require the procedure as part of emergency treatment.

Hospitals led healthcare hiring surge in June

Mari Devereaux, Modern Healthcare

Employers in the sector added an estimated 56,700 jobs, up from 15,300 in May, preliminary data show. The industry contributed 15.2% of the 372,000 hires made across the economy in June and added the third-most jobs among all categories.

PHARMA, BIOTECH AND DEVICES

Trump-era federal Covid contract recipient has yet to meet major deadlines

Katherine Ellen Foley, Politico

A pharmaceutical startup that received one of the largest-ever federal pandemic preparedness contracts championed by senior-level Trump White House officials has yet to fulfill its promise to bring cheap, generic drug manufacturing to the U.S.

Some cancer patients forgo life-saving medications because of high cost

Berkeley Lovelace Jr. and Meg Tirrell, NBC News

About one in three Americans on Medicare who don't qualify for low-income subsidies don't fill prescriptions for their cancer drugs, according to a recent study in the journal Health Affairs. Low income is defined as around $15,000 a year for an individual or about $30,000 a year for a married couple, according to the Social Security Administration.

Long Covid Is an Elusive Target for Big Pharma

David Wainer, The Wall Street Journal

The drug industry developed Covid-19 vaccines and treatments at breakneck speed, saving millions of lives in the process. Yet treatments for the post-viral illness known as long Covid, which is afflicting millions, are nowhere close to being developed.

HEALTH TECHNOLOGY

Abortion providers embrace virtual assistants and automation to prepare for new flood of patients

Mohana Ravindranath, Stat News

Clinicians at brick-and-mortar and virtual abortion sites tell STAT they're using and exploring technology like virtual assistants, online scheduling, increased virtual visits, and asynchronous messaging to ensure more convenient access to abortion care. Ideally, these tools could minimize the need for patients traveling from other states to visit clinics and keep wait times low, they say.

CVS names new chief data, digital and technology officer

Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare

CVS Health has tapped Tilak Mandadi as its executive vice president and chief data, digital and technology officer, a newly created role.

Signify Health exits bundled payment program to focus on future growth

Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare

Signify, a platform that leverages analytics and nationwide networks to build and back value-based care programs, will exit the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services' Bundled Payments for Care Improvement-Advanced (BPCI-A) model. The main hurdle, the company said, is CMS' newly-released retrospective trend calculations, which reduced the opportunity for savings.

Scientists design a cheap device that can detect ear problems with the help of a smartphone

Edward Chen, Stat News

In a preliminary new study, published last month in Communications Medicine, the researchers report that their smartphone-based device performed nearly as well as commercially available tympanometers that can cost thousands of dollars.

Lobbying heats up to protect evidence in potential abortion cases

Ben Leonard, Politico

Pressure is growing on President Joe Biden to safeguard abortion patients' data, as concerns rise that prosecutors could deploy the information as evidence in states that have banned the procedure.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Dobbs decision will rob many medical students of essential abortion training

Kellen Mermin-Bunnell and Ariana M. Traub, Stat News

As medical students — the next generation of physicians — we believe that the Supreme Court's Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health decision, which overturns Roe v. Wade and Planned Parenthood v. Casey, undermines the health of our future patients and our ability to become competent physicians.

We Are Developing New Male Contraceptives. Our Work Has Never Been More Critical.

Stephanie Page and John Amory, The New York Times

As researchers developing male hormonal contraception, we believe that to reduce unplanned pregnancy and the need for abortion, men need to become more engaged in contraception. Men are involved in 100 percent of unintended pregnancies, and most men remain fertile for much of their lives.

The vaccines were a biomedical triumph. They reached too few.

Editorial Board, The Washington Post

Stop and reflect on the success of the coronavirus vaccines. While most vaccines take five to 10 years to develop and manufacture, the remarkable mRNA shots appeared in less than a year. They were safe, efficacious, free, and dramatically reduced serious illness and death, one of the great biomedical achievements of all time. Yet their results could have been even better.

RESEARCH REPORTS

When Medicaid's COVID-19 Pandemic Continuous Enrollment Guarantee Unwinds, Safety-Net Providers Will Play a Critical Role

Sara Rosenbaum et al., The Commonwealth Fund

When the Secretary of Health and Human Services declares an end to the COVID-19 public health emergency (PHE) period, it also will mark the end of Medicaid's continuous enrollment guarantee that protects beneficiaries from coverage interruptions. Between 2020 and 2022, Medicaid's continuous enrollment protection contributed to a 25 percent increase in Medicaid enrollment, ensuring initial and stable coverage for the pandemic's highest-risk populations, disproportionately people of color.

CMS proposes Medicare PFS rules for 2023

The CMS has released a draft Medicare physician fee schedule for 2023, and it includes proposals to reduce the PFS conversion factor from $34.61 to $33.08, allow marriage and family therapists and licensed professional counselors to provide behavioral care services under general supervision, and allow mobile services to provide opioid use treatment and recovery services. The proposal also would make changes to Medicare Shared Savings Program payments, give smaller ACOs more time to shift to downside risk and introduce a health equity adjustment to reward ACOs that deliver high-quality care to underserved groups, among other changes. Full Story: Healthcare Finance (7/8), Becker's Hospital Review (7/8)

US COVID-19 cases, deaths down from previous week

The US seven-day average for newly reported COVID-19 cases dropped 3.9% to 106,549 as of Wednesday, while the weekly average for COVID-19 deaths declined by 20.9% to 273 from the prior week, according to the CDC. The seven-day average for COVID-19 hospitalizations rose 3.1% to 5,080 for the week ending Tuesday, and estimates suggest the Omicron BA.5 subvariant caused 53.6% of all COVID-19 cases in the US for the week ending July 2, while 20.7% of US communities had high levels of COVID-19 as of Thursday. Full Story: Becker's Hospital Review (7/8)

How health insurers support women's contraceptive access

AHIP President and CEO Matt Eyles and Senior Vice President of Clinical Innovation and Strategic Partnership Kate Berry say health insurance providers are fully committed to women's health care, and they have supported and delivered on Affordable Care Act provisions involving access to contraception. "We continue to work hard every day to ensure that people have access to many affordable contraception choices," Berry said, noting that many plans go well beyond the ACA requirements that members have access to one product within each contraceptive category without cost-sharing. Full Story: Apple Podcasts (7/8)

Study: Weekend-only exercise still confers benefits

Adults who only have time to exercise on the weekends can still reap benefits from the physical activity, researchers reported in JAMA Internal Medicine. They examined data on nearly 351,000 adults who took part in the National Health Interview Survey from 1997 to 2013, followed participants for a median of 10.4 years, and found that weekend exercisers and those who worked out more often had similar all-cause mortality hazard ratios, especially compared with people who were inactive. Full Story: The Hill (7/7)

Kanoe Namahoe

I was in high school when my parents brought home a gal named Linda to live with us for a short time. Linda had recently been released from prison and was part of a rehabilitation program at our church. It was my first time meeting someone who had been incarcerated.

Linda fascinated me. She was young -- in her 30s -- and covered in tattoos. She looked hard but was very kind and humble. And protective of our family. When a neighbor boy stopped by to see me, she sized him up and told him he'd have to come back when my parents were home. (He didn't.) She had brains and street sense and was determined to rebuild her life to get her children back.

I thought of Linda when I read today's Recruiting & Retention story about reentry programs -- like Mississippi Center for Re-entry and MagCor -- aimed at helping people who were formerly incarcerated find work. Programs like these are doing great work helping folks like Linda and Tyrone "TMan" Gladney -- another former felon who I covered -- get back on their feet and build new careers. "If you give somebody who's been incarcerated a chance at a job, eight times out of 10 they will prove to be one of the most loyal persons to you because you were actually looking out for them and giving them a chance," Gladney told me.

To be clear, giving people second chances doesn't overlook the fact that they committed a crime. That is fair. Gladney made that clear to me in our interview. He knew he had an uphill climb in gaining trust from potential employers. So did Linda. They didn't dwell on this or complain that it was unfair. They seemed to accept that this was part of the process of rebuilding their lives. I can respect this.

I don't know where Linda is today. I like to think she's doing well and has established new relationships with her children and family. Gladney did. He has a lucrative trucking business and enjoys spoiling his grandchildren. Second-chance programs can work.

Are you working with reentry programs or employing ex-felons? Let me know! And if you enjoy this brief, tell others so they can benefit also.

REPORT: Think Globally, Adapt Locally: Colorado Counties Health and Climate Index

This 2022 Health and Climate Index, the first update to the original report released in 2019, analyzes the risks Colorado counties face in four areas:

1. Exposure to climate-related hazards
2. Health outcomes and access to care
3. Social factors that have been linked to climate vulnerability
4. Plans and perceptions related to climate change and health

Minimizing climate change-related harm to human health requires reducing greenhouse gas emissions and taking steps to adapt to a changing environment.
The Index highlights a need for more targeted climate adaptation planning and capacity building across Colorado to respond to the changes that are already occurring and prepare for future impacts. Much of this work must take place at a local level and reflect local needs and realities.

The Health and Climate Index can help Coloradans identify vulnerabilities and develop approaches to supporting health equity in a changing climate that reflect their area's unique needs.

Health Community Updates

Friends – Please join us for our next bi-weekly White House Health Community Call on Wednesday, July 13th at 2:30pm ET. You can RSVP here. Please invite colleagues and members of your community – all are welcome. We also want to share updated guidance on the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA) and an invite to a stakeholders call to learn more, included below.

Following President Biden's Executive Order to Protect Access to Reproductive Health Care, HHS Announces Guidance to Clarify that Emergency Medical Care Includes Abortion Services

Today, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) announced new guidance and communication to ensure all patients — including pregnant women and others experiencing pregnancy loss — have access to the full rights and protections for emergency medical care afforded under the law. This announcement follows President Biden's executive order on reproductive health issued Friday. HHS, through the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), issued clarifying guidance on the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA) and reaffirmed that it protects providers when offering legally-mandated, life- or health-saving abortion services in emergency situations. In addition to the guidance, Secretary Xavier Becerra, in a letter to providers, made clear that this federal law preempts state law restricting access to abortion in emergency situations - PDF*.

The EMTALA statute requires that Medicare hospitals provide all patients an appropriate medical screening, examination, stabilizing treatment, and transfer, if necessary, irrespective of any state laws or mandates that apply to specific procedures. Stabilizing treatment could include medical and/or surgical interventions, including abortion. If a state law prohibits abortion and does not include an exception for the health or life of the pregnant person — or draws the exception more narrowly than EMTALA's emergency medical condition definition — that state law is preempted.
Read the Secretary's letter to health care providers - PDF*.
Read the EMTALA guidance issued.
EMTALA Policy Call
CMS leadership invites you to a call to discuss our policy with respect to hospitals, staff, and physicians regarding their obligations and protections under the Emergency Medical Treatment and Labor Act (EMTALA). The purpose of this meeting is to discuss EMTALA with the provider community and to answer questions.
Date: Tuesday, July 12, 2022
Time: 1:00 PM ET
Who should attend: This webinar is designed for hospitals, clinicians, related professional associations, and State Agencies, particularly those in states enacting or implementing restrictions to the provision of reproductive care services including abortion.
RSVP: https://cms.zoomgov.com/webinar/register/WN_34Nk0d1vQiW5-V3DL_eZiQ
After registering, you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the webinar. Your link will include an email for questions, please use this for logistical questions only – we will not be able to respond to policy questions via that email address.
This meeting is closed to press.

All best,

- The Biden administration is eyeing a second round of COVID-19 booster shots for all adults, a plan that has the support of Dr. Anthony Fauci and White House coronavirus coordinator Dr. Ashish Jha, according to five officials familiar with the discussions, though the move would still require formal approval from regulators and public health officials. (The Washington Post) The discussions come amid rising cases of the omicron BA.5 subvariant and as the Department of Health and Human Services is set to renew the public health emergency designation for COVID-19, with the extension scheduled to take effect Friday, a person familiar with the matter said. (Bloomberg)

- HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra said federal law supersedes state abortion bans when emergency care for the mother is necessary, adding that the federal government can levy penalties on providers or institutions that refuse to perform abortions as needed in the case of medical emergencies such as ectopic pregnancies or miscarriages. Becerra cited the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act, which protects providers over clinical actions they take with pregnant people in emergencies. (CNN)

- A Government Accountability Office report said the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's system for tracking international air passenger contact information for public health purposes is in need of "substantial improvement," highlighting an "outdated data management system" that hinders "the agency's ability to monitor public health risks and facilitate contact tracing." HHS said the CDC is in the early stages of a "complete redesign" of its reporting system, in addition to pursuing a project to improve travel data collection and compatibility with public health departments. (Reuters)

- The Biden administration said it will buy 3.2 billion doses of Novavax Inc.'s protein-based COVID-19 vaccine, which is expected to be authorized by federal regulators soon. Terms of the deal were not immediately disclosed by the federal government. (The New York Times)

WHAT ELSE YOU NEED TO KNOW

CORONAVIRUS

Moderna to advance two Omicron vaccine candidates against newer variants

Reuters

Moderna Inc said on Monday it was advancing two Omicron vaccine candidates for the fall, one designed against the BA.1 variant and another against the BA.4 and BA.5.

Is BA.5 the 'Reinfection Wave'?

Ed Yong, The Atlantic

Well, here we go again. Once more, the ever-changing coronavirus behind COVID-19 is assaulting the United States in a new guise—BA.5, an offshoot of the Omicron variant that devastated the most recent winter. The new variant is spreading quickly, likely because it snakes past some of the immune defenses acquired by vaccinated people, or those infected by earlier variants. Those who have managed to avoid the virus for close to three years will find it a little harder to continue that streak, and some who recently caught COVID are getting it again. "People shouldn't be surprised if they get infected, and they shouldn't be surprised if it's pretty unpleasant," Stephen Goldstein, a virologist at the University of Utah, told me.

When will you get COVID again? If you haven't had the new Omicron yet, it could be any day now

Erin Prater, Fortune

Those who had the original strain of COVID were able to be reinfected with Delta. Those who had Delta were able to be reinfected with Omicron. And now, this: If you've had COVID in the past but haven't had Omicron subvariants BA.5 or BA.4, coming down with one of the two is possible, if not likely—even if you've had another version of Omicron in the past, experts tell Fortune.

Hopes of Covid-19 Reprieve Fade as BA.5 Subvariant Takes Over

Jon Kamp and Jared S. Hopkins, The Wall Street Journal

Covid-19 levels are high in a fifth of U.S. counties, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's metric based on case and hospital data, a share that has been mostly rising since mid-April. BA.5 is estimated to represent more than half of recent U.S. cases that are averaging just more than 100,000 a day, CDC data show. The true number of infections may be roughly six times as high, some virus experts said, in part because so many people are using at-home tests state health departments largely don't track.

Undercounted Covid-19 cases leave US with a blind spot as BA.5 variant becomes dominant

Deidre McPhillips, CNN

Official Covid-19 case metrics severely undercount the true number of infections, leaving the United States with a critical blind spot as the most transmissible coronavirus variant yet takes hold.

Michigan advocates submit signatures for abortion rights ballot measure

Nathaniel Weixel, The Hill

A coalition of advocacy groups, including the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) of Michigan and Planned Parenthood Advocates of Michigan, said it secured nearly 754,000 signatures to put an abortion rights constitutional amendment on the ballot in November.

Weed-killing chemical found in majority of U.S. urine samples

Kate Gibson, CBS News

A widely used but controversial herbicide linked to cancer is showing up in people, with a government study finding glyphosate in more than 80% of urine samples from U.S. kids and adults.

Scientists are searching for solutions after studies show pulse oximeters don't work as well for people of color

Jacqueline Howard, CNN

On a person of color, the pulse oximeter could indicate a patient's oxygen levels are normal, suggesting they could be discharged home — but then their blood samples might show low oxygen levels, suggesting they not only needed additional care but also oxygen support.

District court temporarily blocks Arizona law granting "personhood" rights to fetuses

Shawna Chen and Oriana Gonzalez, Axios

A U.S. district court on Monday temporarily blocked a 2021 Arizona law that grants "personhood" rights to fetuses, embryos and fertilized eggs.

In the label 'adult failure to thrive,' medicine reveals its own failures

Eric Boodman, Stat News

The death certificate made everything worse. Seth Fischer was already angry: a physical feeling, an overwhelming internal buzz. He would go for runs, only to find himself passing the white bulk of mobile morgues, refrigeration whirring — and his mind would end up back on his dad, in respiratory distress, dying of Covid or Alzheimer's, he'd never know which. He'd requested a post-mortem coronavirus test, and had been told there weren't enough. I don't want to be offensive, someone from the health department had said, but he's already dead, what good's it going to do?

Insurers propose premium increases as subsidy cliff looms

Jessie Hellmann, Roll Call

Insurers in the individual market are proposing significant rate increases for 2023 — a move that will add more pressure for Congress to extend subsidies that help people buy health insurance.

Supreme Court to decide if Medicaid providers, patients can sue states

Nona Tepper, Modern Healthcare

A federal court's ruling that a Chicago hospital can sue the state Medicaid agency for allegedly failing to ensure proper payment from private insurers sets the stage for a deluge of similar suits from providers—if the nation's highest court preserves Medicaid participants' right to sue.

Business Group: These are employers' key concerns following Supreme Court abortion ruling

Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare

The Business Group on Health issued a letter to the departments of Health and Human Services, Labor and the Treasury outlining four steps the agencies could take to make it easier for employers to navigate challenges that could arise following the Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization ruling.

Hospital price data reveals wide variation in facility fees

Alex Kacik, Modern Healthcare

Larger, for-profit hospitals charged patients higher facility fees for emergency care than not-for-profit hospitals, a new study found.

Hospital-Acquired Pneumonia Is Killing Patients. Yet There Is a Simple Way to Stop It.

Brett Kelman, Kaiser Health News

Hospital patients not getting their teeth brushed, or not brushing their teeth themselves, is believed to be a leading cause of hundreds of thousands of cases of pneumonia a year in patients who have not been put on a ventilator. Pneumonia is among the most common infections that occur in health care facilities, and a majority of cases are non-ventilator hospital-acquired pneumonia, or NVHAP, which kills up to 30% of those infected, Giuliano and other experts said.

TikTok doc makes physicians laugh at themselves

Dawn Fallik, The Washington Post

Emergency room doctors savor adrenaline and bike helmets. Orthopedic doctors are bros who love the gym. Neurosurgeons are just a tad confident. And medical students are living in a special kind of hell, from match day to rotations. They have one thing in common — being mocked by Will Flanary, an ophthalmologist known to millions in the medical world as "Dr. Glaucomflecken," a term for a sign of glaucoma.

Teva lied about opioid role, New York says

Jonathan Stempel, Reuters

New York's attorney general on Monday said Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd (TEVA.TA) lied to evade accountability for helping fuel the state's opioid crisis, and should be restored to litigation where the Israeli company's U.S. unit had been found liable.

Sanofi's New Jevtana Patent Claims Should Be Barred, Judge Says

Christopher Yasiejko, Bloomberg Law

Sanofi's allegations that generic versions of Jevtana proposed by Apotex Inc. and Sandoz Inc. infringe "substitute" claims of a patent for the prostate cancer treatment should be dismissed because Sanofi already sued them over the patent and lost, a Delaware federal magistrate judge recommended.

Primary care company Forward cuts 5% of workforce amid 'extremely tough' market conditions

Heather Landi, Fierce Healthcare

Primary care company Forward, reportedly worth more than $1 billion, is the latest digital health startup to feel pressure from the current market downturn. The company confirmed to Fierce Healthcare it cut 5% of its workforce.

Using Artificial Intelligence to Predict the Next Covid Variants

Riley Griffin, Bloomberg

As pharmaceutical companies struggle to keep up with the rapidly mutating coronavirus, a startup in Cambridge, Mass., says it can help them by using artificial intelligence to predict future variants. Apriori Bio models the ways a virus might change and predicts how it will behave. The company says it's harnessing that information to design "variant-proof" vaccines and treatments that can fight current and future strains—and provide an early warning to governments, sort of like a hurricane alert, to guide the public-health response.

Market downturn dampens digital health funding, M&A in 2022. These sectors raked in the most cash

Heather Landi, Fierce Healthcare

After reaching a fever pitch in 2021, digital health funding cooled down in 2022, raising $10.3 billion across 329 deals in the first six months.

In Defense of Pharmacy Benefit Managers

Joe Grogan and Casey B. Mulligan, The Wall Street Journal

Washington is a town not known for bipartisan agreement. But its swarms of drug-company lobbyists appear to have united both parties in opposition to pharmacy benefit managers. PBMs are taking the blame for high drug prices.

FDA rule would facilitate prescription-to-OTC switches but nix a third class of drugs

Martha Rumore, Stat News

After a decade-long wait, the Food and Drug Administration finally issued a proposed rule in late June that would make it easier for pharmaceutical companies to switch products from prescription-only to over-the-counter status while still retaining a prescription version.

Contact Tracing for Air Travel: CDC's Data System Needs Substantial Improvement

Government Accountability Office

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention collects information on air passengers to help local public health authorities trace the potential spread of communicable diseases (e.g., COVID-19). But some of the ways in which CDC collects and manages passengers' information make it harder to effectively facilitate contact tracing. For example, the outdated data management system CDC uses doesn't allow it to connect related cases or easily report the number of passengers exposed to a single infected person on a flight. We recommended ways to improve CDC's air passenger data system.

Administration mulls 2nd booster dose for all adults

(Joe Raedle/Getty Images)

The Biden administration is considering a plan to allow all American adults to receive a second round of COVID-19 vaccine boosters, pending authorization from the FDA and the CDC, as the contagious BA.5 and other Omicron subvariants continue to spread. New COVID-19 cases have held relatively steady, but hospitalizations have been rising, and the plan under discussion would allow administration of second boosters of existing vaccines this summer, as well as with reformulated versions of the vaccine this fall. Full Story: Politico (7/11), The Washington Post (tiered subscription model) (7/11)

COVID-19 cases are severely undercounted, experts say

The US has been reporting a daily average of about 107,000 new COVID-19 cases for the past two weeks, but the actual case count may be around seven times higher, according to the Institute for Health Metrics. Health experts say the underreporting, driven by increased reliance on at-home COVID-19 tests and shifting attitudes among the public, could make it difficult to direct resources, manage public health responses to emerging variants and limit the spread of disease. Full Story: CNN (7/11)

How health system leaders can reduce inequality

(Pixabay)

The fee-for-service health care system subtly encourages bias, but inequity costs the US some $320 billion in health care spending each year, according to a Deloitte report. Health system leaders can use data and technology to improve both financial stability and health equity by eliminating barriers to care for the patient populations they serve, forming cross-sector partnerships, measuring inequality and progress, addressing individual and community barriers to equality, and building public trust, Deloitte researchers say. Full Story: HealthLeaders Media (7/7)

Study: Regularly adding salt to food may raise mortality risk

(Pixabay)

Regularly adding salt to food was associated with a 28% greater risk of premature death, compared with rarely adding salt, according to a study published in the European Heart Journal. The study took into account dietary, exercise, smoking and drinking habits, as well as weight and health conditions like diabetes. Registered dietitian Whitney Linsenmeyer, a spokesperson for the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics, said people often add salt out of habit and sometimes "it just takes a bit of raised consciousness to break that habit." Full Story: HealthDay News (7/11), MedPage Today (free registration) (7/10)

Hormone therapy, oral contraceptives may up stroke risk

Research published in the journal Stroke suggests that oral contraceptives and hormone therapy may contribute to an increased risk for stroke in women who use them. Researchers examining data from more than 250,000 patients in the UK Biobank found higher hazard rates of any type of stroke and cause-specific stroke in the first year of hormone use compared to nonusers, and they also found a higher risk of stroke during hormone therapy and after its discontinuation. Full Story: Healio (free registration)/Cardiology Today (7/9)

EMERGING TRENDS: SOCIAL DETERMINANTS OF HEALTH

Inaccurate pulse oximeter readings lead to care disparities for people of color

A study of 3,069 ICU patients at a Boston hospital from 2008 to 2019 showed Black, Asian and Hispanic patients received significantly less supplemental oxygen than white patients due to inaccurate pulse oximeter readings of their blood oxygen levels related to their skin pigment. The findings were published in JAMA Internal Medicine. Full Story: Boston (7/11), Reuters (7/11)

Telemedicine effective for thoracic cancer care, but access is uneven

Unsuccessful telemedicine visits were associated with poor clinical outcomes for patients with thoracic cancer, and patients who are Black, are covered by Medicaid or live in areas with high cancer mortality rates are the least likely to complete an audio-visual telemedicine visit, researchers reported in JAMA Network Open. Patients who did not complete a scheduled telemedicine visit had a higher likelihood of visiting an emergency department or urgent care clinic or being hospitalized than patients who completed a visit, while patients with successful telemedicine visits were less likely to die than patients with in-person visits only. Full Story: Healio (free registration)/HemOnc today (7/7)

Racial disparities seen in outcomes among patients with leukemia

A study in the journal Blood Advances found that Black patients with acute myeloid leukemia had poorer responses to clinical trial treatments compared with white patients. The analysis of data for 89 Black patients and 566 white patients found that white patients had a median survival of 10.2 years compared with Black patients at 1.3 years. Full Story: HealthDay News (7/7)

Report: Focus on SDOH may lead to better T2D outcomes

Nonmedical interventions that target social determinants of health -- such as food supplementation with referral and diabetes support, skills training to improve financial status and housing relocation -- may help reduce risks and improve outcomes for individuals with type 2 diabetes, according to researchers at the Medical College of Wisconsin. These strategies "may be used as a guide to build that empirical foundation to improve clinical outcomes for adults with type 2 diabetes," they wrote in a literature review published in Health Affairs.

TODAY'S NEWS - July 12th, 2022

Reports and Announcements

- Authors from CDC's Division of Nutrition, Physical Activity, and Obesity recently published Trends in Anemia Among Pregnant Women Participating in the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC), United States 2008-2018, in the Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. This study found that anemia prevalence increased significantly in 36 (64%) of the 56 agencies in states, DC, and territories, and decreased significantly in 11 (20%).

- Supported by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Raising the Bar provides an actionable framework for the entire healthcare sector—from providers, to payers, to the public health community—to embed equity throughout its work and help achieve optimal health for all. Raising the Bar worked with healthcare leaders and those who experience inequities to craft foundational, central principles that can serve as healthcare's gravitational force to continuously center equity work. Essential roles healthcare must play revolve around these principles, each with corresponding concrete actions that can improve equity.

- Applications for the The Culture of Health Leadership Institute for Racial Healing (CoHLI) close on July 14th. CoHLI is an 18-month leadership experience supported by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation that uses the Truth, Racial Healing and Transformation (TRHT) framework to strengthen the ecosystem of practitioners who are advancing racial and health equity in their work. The program is designed to shift narratives about racial hierarchy and expand the network of practitioners putting the TRHT framework into practice. The program provides participants with opportunities to connect with a national community of like-minded people who support and help one another as they gain tools and resources that accelerate actionable and transformative change.

- The New York Academy of Medicine (NYAM) has announced Ann Kurth, PhD, MPH, MSN, CNM, FAAN, FACNM, as its next President, effective January 1, 2023. Dr. Kurth, who currently serves as Dean of the Yale School of Nursing, will be the first non-physician and first nurse to lead the organization in its 175-year history. Read more.

- Reminder - Join TFAH and Well Being Trust on July 14th for a national webinar on our recently released report, Pain in the Nation: The Epidemics of Alcohol, Drug, and Suicide Deaths. The report is the latest in a series of reports tracking the nation’s deaths of despair crisis. Deaths associated with alcohol, drugs, and suicide took the lives of 186,763 Americans in 2020, a 20 percent one year increase in the combined death rate and the highest number of substance misuse deaths ever recorded for a single year.

- The Bipartisan Policy Center is hosting the National Convening to Inform the White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition, and Health on July 14th. This event, in advance of the White House Conference this fall, will help develop a roadmap to improve nutrition, end hunger, and reduce diet-related chronic diseases in the United States by 2030.

- Reminder - TFAH's next Age-Friendly Public Health Systems Training will take place on July 21st and focus on the importance of data in addressing social determinants of health among older adults. This session will also highlight how some states have developed and used data on older adults to advance healthy aging in their communities. You can register here and view June's training session on food security and nutrition here.

- The National Indian Health Board (NIHB) and the Alzheimer's Association invite you to join the July 26th National Brain Health Webinar, Four Paths to Addressing Dementia in Tribal Communities, highlighting the work of four Tribal sub awardees in addressing Alzheimer's disease and related dementias (ADRD) in their communities.

Take Action

- The Protecting the Health of America's Older Adults Act (H.R. 6302) would create a healthy aging program at CDC, including grants to states for public health approaches to healthy aging. A fact sheet to the bill, which includes a list of endorsing organizations, can be found here. To endorse the bill, fill out this form (no need to fill it in if your organization is already listed).

- The Improving Social Determinants of Health Act of 2021 (S. 104/H.R. 379) would create a SDOH program at CDC, including grants to states for a public health approach to SDOH. A fact sheet to the bill, which includes a list of endorsing organizations, can be found here. To endorse the bill, fill out this form (no need to fill it in if your organization is already listed).

Opportunities and Deadlines

Sign On Documents and Opportunities for Input

- The Office of Minority Health (OMH) at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has released a funding opportunity announcement soliciting applications from public and non-profit private entities to be demonstration sites that identify and implement innovative strategies to enhance language access services through (1) policy development and implementation; (2) technology utilization; (3) education for individuals with limited English proficiency (LEP); and (4) education for providers, including medical support staff. The deadline to apply is July 15th.

- The Art & Science of Health Promotion Conference is now accepting proposals for the 2023 conference. Proposals are welcome for sessions that present health promotion strategies and programs that produce the best outcomes from a science and practice perspective, also address how to develop, implement and measure programs as well as explore emerging concepts. The 2023 Conference theme is The Wisdom of Rethinking: Promoting & Practicing Intellectual Humility to Advance Health & Well-Being. The deadline to submit a proposal is July 31st.

- USDA is interested in learning from stakeholders how we can better meet the needs of customers seeking kosher or halal foods through The Emergency Assistance Food Program (TEFAP). So far, USDA has held discussions with several advocacy organizations, 9 State Agencies, and food banks in those states that serve communities with kosher and/or halal food needs. USDA is reviewing the information gathered through these conversations to determine some actions and next steps we can take to better meet the needs of customers seeking kosher and halal foods. USDA is interested in feedback from States and food banks in all States and territories about how to best meet their customers' needs. Feedback can always be shared with your State Agency or sent to USDAFoods@usda.gov.

- U.S. Surgeon General Vivek Murthy is calling for research, data, and personal experiences related to health misinformation, in an effort to deepen our collective understanding of its sources and impact. In 2021, the Surgeon General released a Surgeon General's Advisory on Confronting Health Misinformation, accompanied by a toolkit for community leaders. As the next step in this work, and as part of an ongoing dialogue with the American public, the Surgeon General is now putting out a Request for Information (RFI) on the Impact of Health Misinformation in the Digital Information Environment in the United States Throughout the COVID-19 Pandemic.

- The Asian & Pacific Islander American Health Forum (APIAHF) has launched a crowdsourcing project to collect Asian American and Native Hawaiian & Pacific Islander in-language COVID-19 resources. APIAHF will gather all of the responses and organize them by language here so that people can see the variety of available resources. Please fill out the form here to submit a resource. Resources will be compiled on a rolling basis.

- Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Health and the de Beaumont Foundation recently released the report Seven Ways Business Can Align with Public Health for Bold Action and Innovation. To support collaboration between business and public health, the organizations are collecting endorsements and stories of alignment, which are reflections on how organizations are applying recommendations from the report as well as endorsements, which will be accepted on a rolling basis.

Funding Opportunities and Awards

- EPA has launched the Let's Talk About Heat Challenge, a national competition to identify innovative and effective communication strategies that inform people of the risks of extreme heat and offer ways to keep safe during the hottest days. The challenge was developed in support of the National Climate Task Force's Extreme Heat Interagency Working Group, which is being led by EPA, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) with support from the White House. Winning solutions will include identification of and engagement with people known to be most susceptible to extreme heat risks, including but not limited to underserved and overburdened communities. The challenge will award up to 10 prizes from a total prize pool of $120,000. Submissions are due by July 22nd.

- The National Headache Foundation is seeking nominations of Headache Heroes, a campaign to recognize people who have made a difference in the headache and migraine community, in the following categories. Nominations are due July 31st.
    - Healthcare Professional: Any healthcare provider who has made a difference.
    - Patient: Someone living with migraine disease or headache disorders.
    - Caregiver: The unsung hero caring for someone living with migraine disease or headache disorders.
    - Advocate: An individual or organization that is pursuing legislative, regulatory, or funding opportunities on behalf of the headache and migraine community.

- CDC recently announced a Notice of Funding Opportunity for Strengthening U.S. Public Health Infrastructure, Workforce, and Data Systems Department of Health and Human Services. This funding is a first of its kind, non-categorical and cross-cutting programs, intended to help meet critical infrastructure and workforce needs in the short-term; and it should also make possible strategic investments that will have lasting effects on public health agencies across the United States. To that end, it will support strategically strengthening public health capacity and systems related to the workforce, foundational capabilities, data modernization, physical infrastructure and support from national public health partners. The deadline to apply is August 15th.

- The National Headache Foundation (NHF) announced a new annual award, the Ellen Aubry Memorial Award, to recognize the accurate depiction of headache and migraine disorders in film and television. Nominations are now being accepted and can be submitted by both viewers and producers for consideration until August 15, 2022. The winners will be recognized at the NHF's 36th Annual Gala on October 8, 2022, in Chicago, Ill.

- Applications are open for the de Beaumont Foundation's Modernized Anti-Racist Data Ecosystems (MADE) for Health Justice grant opportunity. The grants seek to accelerate the development of health-focused local data ecosystems that center principles of anti-racism, equity, justice, and community power. Through MADE for Health Justice, non-profit organizations will be funded to build and facilitate multi sector teams tasked with creating local data ecosystems. These ecosystems must focus on improving community health, connecting data across multiple sectors of local government, prioritizing the needs and voices of communities oppressed by structural racism, and ultimately driving just and equity-centered decision making. The deadline to apply is August 31st.

- NIH's Office of Nutrition Research (ONR) has issued the notice of special interest (NOSI) Stimulating Research to Understand and Address Hunger, Food and Nutrition Insecurity. The purpose of this NOSI is to encourage research on the efficacy of interventions that address nutrition security and the mechanisms of food insecurity on a variety of health outcomes. It also calls for the development of new measures for nutrition security and assessment of food insecurity that are broadly applicable. It was developed by the ONR Implementation Working Group on Nutrition and Health Disparities in collaboration with NIH Institutes and Centers (ICs) and Offices in support of the goals and objectives of the Strategic Plan for NIH Nutrition Research. Deadline, October 5th.

- The Center for Science in the Public Interest's (CSPI's) first round of grantmaking for 2022 is now open. CSPI seeks to support communities as they explore local, state, and federal policy interventions to elicit systemic change and advance a just and equitable food environment. CSPI is focused on identifying strategies and passing policies aimed at increasing purchasing power for, and access to, nutritious food that meets people's needs, supporting a healthier food environment, and reducing health disparities across demographic groups. Several opportunities are currently open, with details available here.

- Evidence for Action's released an open and rolling call for proposals, Innovative Research to Advance Racial Equity. Through this CFP they seek to fund researchers, practitioners, community leaders, advocates, policymakers, and/or other stakeholders to investigate the impacts of various social interventions on health and racial equity outcomes. They are interested in projects that develop and disseminate evidence about what works to advance racial equity and improve health and well-being outcomes for people and communities of color.

Other

- Learn how your health department can protect workers and diners from COVID-19 with a new, video-based, interactive training developed by the Public Health Foundation, in partnership with the Food and Society Program at the Aspen Institute. The training, Safety First: Helping Restaurants Reduce the Spread of COVID-19, is now available through the TRAIN Learning Network.

- The National Headache Foundation (NHF) launched Primary Care Migraine, a new educational training program available at no cost to health practitioners. The program was announced by Tom Dabertin, Executive Director and Chief Executive Officer of the National Headache Foundation. The course also offers a diagnosis tool to assist one in quickly diagnosing migraines while interviewing and examining patients.

- Prevent Blindness is seeking applicants for the A.S.P.E.C.T. (Advocacy, Support, Perspective, Empowerment, Communication, and Training) Program, which aims to equip participants with the knowledge, skills, and confidence to become advocates for vision and eye health- at the individual, peer-to-peer, community, state, or national levels via an 8-week educational series.

Statue actually requires that we have four representatives on the Council:

(b)the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee;
(c)the director of the Division of Substance Abuse and Mental Health or the director's designee;
(d)the director of the Division of Child and Family Services or the director's designee;
(e)the director of the Division of Juvenile Justice Services or the director's designee;

It appears that the statute ((5)(a-g)) purposefully created the Advisory Council in a way that had a majority of the members with expertise in Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention. If we were to consolidate these four into just one, it would disrupt the make-up of the body and leave Superintendents and State School Board members without the full scope of subject matter experts statute tries to create.

I have added David and Heather to this thread to get their thoughts. It seems like Al's group has focused specifically on preventing maternal alcohol consumption. I'm not sure if that is the best fit as the aim of this Advisory Council is to help give input as the Program is taught to kids three different times:

- 4th or 5th grade
- 7th or 8th grade
- 9th or 10th grade

[redacted]

[redacted]

I'll let David and Heather chime in to see if Al or another staff from the "health prevention" side might be a best fit as the Executive Director's designee.

I'm not sure if deputy directors wanted to attend, or if you wanted to keep it at the program level.

Hi Brook -

I am reaching out to you for help because we have been attempting to contact someone from DOH to be a part of the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council as described in 53G-10-406(5). The statute requires USBE to include "the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee" as a part of the council. I am wondering if you can help us identify who at DHHS may be able to fulfill this requirement for us and help us contact them.

By way of background and context, the Botvin LifeSkills Training program was selected as the approved Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention program, and since that five-year contract will end June 30, 2023, the Utah State Board of Education is getting ready to put out another Request for Proposals (RFP). In preparation for the RFP process, we would like to bring the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council together this summer so we can gather their input for the RFP.

USBE's Substance Use Prevention Specialist, Clarissa Stebbing (who is cc'd on this email), has reached out several times to different people in DOH trying to contact someone to fulfill this requirement and has not received any responses. She is trying to get the council put together so that she can get a summer meeting on the council members' schedules and move forward with the new RFP. We would like to be able to identify who is going to be on the council by the end of the week, if possible.

We are also wondering, now that UDOH and DHS have merged, do you think we still need to have someone who was part of UDOH as a participant on the council or can Craig Povey (who has already agreed to participate) serve as the representative for both roles?

[redacted]

Feel free to contact us with any questions or forward this email to someone who may be more appropriate to help us with this. I am just not sure who else to reach out to at this point. I would generally reach out to the DHS Education Liaison, but I have heard that the person that was formerly in that position has since left. Thanks in advance for any help you can provide.

Most State-Level Abortion Restrictions Are Unpopular

Republican-led states have rushed in the aftermath of the Supreme Court's Roe v. Wade decision to restrict abortion, enacting bans and pursuing efforts to criminalize those who seek care.

In this week's Morning Consult/Politico survey, we asked voters whether they supported or opposed 13 state-level anti-abortion initiatives, and found that almost across the board, majorities were against such measures. About 7 in 10 voters said they are opposed to absolutist abortion bans, travel restrictions and criminalizing those who pursue abortion care.

Check out the full story here: Republican-Led States Are Pushing Through Abortion Restrictions Opposed by Most Voters.

TOP STORIES

- The Department of Justice announced the creation of a Reproductive Rights Task Force, an initiative tied to President Joe Biden's executive order on abortion that will focus on ways to protect reproductive rights following the Supreme Court's ruling to overturn Roe v. Wade. The task force will "monitor and evaluate" legislation and enforcement at the state and local levels that impede a person's ability to seek reproductive care, ban medication abortion or levy criminal or civil penalties on federal workers who provide abortion services that are legal under federal law. (CNN)

- Superbug infections and deaths in U.S. hospitals jumped approximately 15% in 2020, a surge fueled by the COVID-19 pandemic that reversed years of progress in the fight against antimicrobial resistance, a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention analysis found. From 2012 to 2017, a public health push to stamp out superbug infections in hospitals resulted in a 30% decline, but CDC Director Rochelle Walensky said the pandemic pushed health systems "near their breaking points," with hospitals overwhelmed by sicker patients and an overreliance on antibiotic prescriptions, which put patients at risk of developing a resistance to drugs. (The Washington Post)

- Disproportionate levels of "excess deaths" unattributed to COVID-19 were found in states with high uninsured rates during the pandemic, a White House Council of Economic Advisers report found, with lackluster care in overwhelmed hospitals among the primary reasons. The CEA estimated that an increase of 10 percentage points in the pre-COVID-19 uninsured rate was connected with a 4.8-point jump in excess mortality. (Axios)

- Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. and AbbVie Inc.'s Allergan unit will pay $34 million in cash and $20 million worth of overdose reversal drug Narcan to settle a federal lawsuit brought by San Francisco alleging that the drugmakers fueled the opioid surge, creating a public nuisance in the city. San Francisco, which is also pursuing action against Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc., saw a roughly 500% increase in opioid-related overdose deaths between 2015 and 2020, according to the city attorney's office. (The Associated Press)

White House urges caution on COVID variants, pushes boosters

Zeke Miller, The Associated Press

The Biden administration is calling on people to exercise renewed caution about COVID-19, emphasizing the importance of getting booster shots for those who are eligible and wearing masks indoors as two new highly transmissible variants are spreading rapidly across the country.

White House: COVID booster "will not preclude" shot for later variants

Oriana Gonzalez, Axios

People who get boosted for COVID-19 now will still be eligible to get a variant-specific vaccine in the fall, the White House COVID-19 Response Team said Tuesday.

If you were infected with the original Omicron, you don't have 'a lot of good protection against BA.4 and BA.5,' Fauci says

Erin Prater, Fortune

Those who were infected with COVID during the first wave of Omicron "really don't have a lot of good protection" against dominant U.S. subvariants BA.4 and BA.5, Dr. Anthony Fauci, chief medical adviser to the president, said Tuesday.

WHO Chief Warns of Rising Infections, Deaths From New Covid Wave

Andy Hoffman, Bloomberg

Sub-variants of the omicron strain are lifting case numbers and leading to further fatalities, Director General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said at a briefing in Geneva on Tuesday. Tedros, as the head of the WHO is known, recommended the revival of protocols like mask-wearing to stop the spread.

US pins faith on Pfizer's 'living with Covid' pill

Senate Judiciary kicks off series of abortion policy hearings

Sandhya Raman, Roll Call

An hour before the Supreme Court issued its June 24 decision overturning the national right to an abortion, the chief medical officer for Planned Parenthood of the St. Louis Region and Southwest Missouri issued a personal plea to Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra: Please declare a public health emergency related to abortion.

Pig organ transplants inch closer to success as doctors test operation in brain-dead people

The Associated Press

New York researchers transplanted pig hearts into two brain-dead people over the last month, the latest in a string of developments in the long quest to one day save human lives with animal organs.

Where Biden and Dems stand on abortion access 3 weeks into the deadlocked fight

Olivia Olander and Matt Berg, Politico

Updated guidance assuring doctors they can perform abortions in emergencies. A "first step" executive order critics say didn't go far enough. But perhaps most prominently, a stalemate seemingly across the federal government, as Democrats both lack the votes to codify changes and fear rocking the boat under a conservative Supreme Court.

Brain-eating amoeba that infected a swimmer in Iowa is increasingly found in northern states

Elisha Fieldstadt, NBC News

The brain-eating amoeba that sickened a Missouri resident who'd recently visited Iowa has been found in northern states more often in recent years as air and water temperatures rise, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Americans support extending child support payments to pregnancy, survey finds

Mariel Padilla, The 19th

About half of surveyed Americans favor laws that would require child support payments to begin at the moment of conception, a stance that demonstrates the breadth and complexity in how policymakers may have to reconcile the concept of personhood before birth and determine when and how to establish rights in the aftermath of the Supreme Court case that overturned Roe v. Wade.

Liver disease, deaths fall with lowered barriers to hepatitis drugs

Arielle Dreher, Axios

Treating intravenous drug users with hepatitis drugs at the community level significantly drove down liver disease and deaths over more than a decade, researchers reported in the Annals of Internal Medicine.

Amended veterans toxic exposure bill teed up in House

Roll Call

The core of the veterans bill would make servicemembers who contracted any of 23 conditions — from brain cancer to hypertension — after being deployed to an Iraq or Afghanistan combat zone automatically eligible for veterans health care and disability benefits. That's a change from current law, which requires veterans to prove their illnesses were a direct result of their deployments rather than some other factor.

Sen. Hawley accused of transphobic questioning at abortion hearing

Mariana Alfaro, The Washington Post

Sen. Josh Hawley (R-Mo.), during a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing Tuesday on the legal impact of the end of Roe v. Wade, was accused by a congressional witness of employing a transphobic line of questioning.

Democrats race to reach deal to prevent spike in health premiums

Tony Romm and Rachel Roubein, The Washington Post

Roughly 13 million Americans could see their health insurance costs rise next year — and millions more may not have care at all — unless congressional Democrats can reach agreement over a critical portion of their long-stalled economic spending legislation. The uncertainty loomed over lawmakers as they huddled again on Tuesday in pursuit of a wide-ranging deal that can balance the promises they made during the election with winning support from Sen. Joe Manchin III (D-W.Va.), the crucial swing vote in the narrowly divided chamber.

The cost of giving birth with insurance: $2,854, a new study says

Shefali Luthra, The 19th

The out-of-pocket costs represent insurance-related bills related to pregnancy, labor and delivery, and postpartum care. And "this is maybe the smallest of the costs."

Intellectual property rights need stronger global protections

Stephen Ubl, Modern Healthcare

Top trade officials from countries all over the world, including the U.S., recently gathered in Geneva, Switzerland, and waived certain intellectual property protections on COVID-19 vaccines. Their decision undermines the very IP rights that enabled hundreds of collaborations to produce vaccines on a global scale.

The Biden administration's bold embrace of harm reduction will save lives

Leana S. Wen, The Washington Post

"Harm reduction" is a phrase previous administrations have used sparingly, if at all, when discussing drug policy. But the Biden administration not only uses it often regarding the escalating epidemic of overdose deaths, which claimed more than 100,000 lives last year; it has made it the centerpiece of its national drug control strategy.

Expanding Capacity for Vaccines Against Covid-19 and Future Pandemics: A Review of Economic Issues

We review economic arguments for using public policy to accelerate vaccine supply during a pandemic. Rapidly vaccinating a large share of the global population helps avoid economic, mortality, and social losses, which in the case of Covid-19 mounted into trillions of dollars. However, pharmaceutical firms are unlikely to have private incentives to invest in vaccine capacity at the socially optimal scale and speed.

antiretroviral (ARV) treatment history or to replace the current ARV regimen in those who are virologically suppressed (HIV-1 RNA <50 copies/mL) on a stable ARV regimen with no history of treatment failure and no known resistance to any component of DOVATO.

IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION

BOXED WARNING: PATIENTS CO-INFECTED WITH HEPATITIS B VIRUS (HBV) AND HIV-1: EMERGENCE OF LAMIVUDINE-RESISTANT HBV AND EXACERBATIONS OF HBV

All patients with HIV-1 should be tested for the presence of HBV prior to or when initiating DOVATO. Emergence of lamivudine-resistant HBV variants associated with lamivudine-containing antiretroviral regimens has been reported. If DOVATO is used in patients co-infected with HIV-1 and HBV, additional treatment should be considered for appropriate treatment of chronic HBV; otherwise, consider an alternative regimen.

Severe acute exacerbations of HBV have been reported in patients who are co-infected with HIV-1 and HBV and have discontinued lamivudine, a component of DOVATO. Closely monitor hepatic function in these patients and, if appropriate, initiate anti-HBV treatment.

Please see full Prescribing Information, including Boxed Warning, for DOVATO.

ABOUT 66% OF PEOPLE DIAGNOSED WITH HIV-1 ARE VIROLOGICALLY SUPPRESSED[1]

IT'S IMPORTANT TO MAKE SURE ALL YOUR MEMBERS WITH HIV-1 HAVE ACCESS TO DOVATO, IF APPROPRIATE*

The TANGO clinical study shows that DOVATO—a complete 2-drug HIV regimen for virologically suppressed adults—is clinically proven to control HIV as effectively as TAF-containing regimens.[2,3†]

AS THE LOWEST-PRICED, INSTI-BASED STR AT WAC,‡ DOVATO OFFERS STRONG SUPPORT FOR INCLUSION ON YOUR FORMULARY

Learn more about how DOVATO, a complete, single-tablet, 2-drug regimen, has durable virologic suppression and a high barrier to resistance for both treatment-naïve and virologically suppressed adults with HIV-1.[4]

*As determined to be medically eligible by the patient's prescriber/prescribing HCP.

†TANGO is an ongoing Phase 3, noninferiority trial in virologically suppressed (HIV-1 RNA <50 copies/mL) adults with HIV-1 in which all participants were on a TCR and stable for >6 months. At baseline across both treatment arms, 98% had CD4+ T-cell count ≥200 cells/mm^3. Participants had no history of virologic failure, no documented NRTI or INSTI resistance, and were HBV negative. This trial included 39% of patients with unknown genotypic resistance history. Primary endpoint: Proportion of participants with HIV-1 RNA ≥50 copies/mL at Week 48 using

FDA Snapshot analysis (ITT-E) with 4% noninferiority margin, -8% noninferiority margin for secondary endpoint. Primary endpoint results: <1% vs <1% for DOVATO (N=369) and TCR (N=372) arms, respectively (treatment difference: -0.3% [95% CI; -1.2%, 0.7%]). From Week 148 onward, all patients were switched to DOVATO. In TANGO, no treatment-emergent resistance was detected. Only participants meeting CVW criteria (0 for DOVATO, 3 for TCR) were evaluated for treatment-emergent resistance. CVW was defined as HIV-1 RNA ≥50 copies/mL followed by a second consecutive HIV-1 RNA ≥200 copies/mL.[2,5]

IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION (cont'd)

Contraindications

- Do not use DOVATO in patients with previous hypersensitivity reaction to dolutegravir or lamivudine
- Do not use DOVATO in patients receiving dofetilide

Warnings and precautions

Hypersensitivity Reactions:

- Hypersensitivity reactions have been reported with dolutegravir and were characterized by rash, constitutional findings, and sometimes organ dysfunction, including liver injury
- Discontinue DOVATO immediately if signs or symptoms of severe skin or hypersensitivity reactions develop, as a delay in stopping treatment may result in a life-threatening reaction. Clinical status, including liver aminotransferases, should be monitored and appropriate therapy initiated

Hepatotoxicity:

- Hepatic adverse events have been reported, including cases of hepatic toxicity (elevated serum liver biochemistries, hepatitis, and acute liver failure), in patients receiving a dolutegravir-containing regimen without pre-existing hepatic disease or other identifiable risk factors
- Patients with underlying hepatitis B or C or marked elevations in transaminases prior to treatment may be at increased risk for worsening or development of transaminase elevations with use of DOVATO. In some cases, the elevations in transaminases were consistent with immune reconstitution syndrome or hepatitis B reactivation, particularly in the setting where anti-hepatitis therapy was withdrawn
- Monitoring for hepatotoxicity is recommended

Embryo Fetal Toxicity:

- Assess the risks and benefits of DOVATO and discuss with the patient to determine if an alternative treatment should be considered at the time of conception through the first trimester of pregnancy due to the risk of neural tube defects
- Pregnancy testing is recommended before initiation of DOVATO. Individuals of childbearing potential should be counseled on the consistent use of effective contraception

Lactic Acidosis and Severe Hepatomegaly With Steatosis:
Fatal cases have been reported with the use of nucleoside analogs, including lamivudine. Discontinue DOVATO if clinical or laboratory findings suggestive of lactic acidosis or pronounced hepatotoxicity develop, including hepatomegaly and steatosis in the absence of marked transaminase elevations.
Adverse Reactions or Loss of Virologic Response Due to Drug Interactions with concomitant use of DOVATO and other drugs may occur (see Contraindications and Drug interactions).
Immune Reconstitution Syndrome, including the occurrence of autoimmune disorders with variable time to onset, has been reported with the use of DOVATO.

Adverse reactions

The most common adverse reactions (incidence ≥2%, all grades) with DOVATO were headache (3%), nausea (2%), diarrhea (2%), insomnia (2%), fatigue (2%), and anxiety (2%).

Drug interactions

- Consult full Prescribing Information for DOVATO for more information on potentially significant drug interactions
- DOVATO is a complete regimen. Coadministration with other antiretroviral medications for the treatment of HIV-1 infection is not recommended
- Drugs that induce or inhibit CYP3A or UGT1A1 may affect the plasma concentrations of dolutegravir
- Administer DOVATO 2 hours before or 6 hours after taking polyvalent cation-containing antacids or laxatives, sucralfate, oral supplements containing iron or calcium, or buffered medications. Alternatively, DOVATO and supplements containing calcium or iron can be taken with food

Use in specific populations

- Pregnancy: There are insufficient human data on the use of DOVATO during pregnancy to definitively assess a drug-associated risk for birth defects and miscarriage. An Antiretroviral Pregnancy Registry has been established. Advise individuals of childbearing potential of the potential risk of neural tube defects. Assess the risks and benefits of DOVATO and discuss with the patient to determine if an alternative treatment should be considered at the time of conception through the first trimester of pregnancy or if pregnancy is confirmed in the first trimester

- Lactation: Breastfeeding is not recommended due to the potential for HIV-1 transmission, developing viral resistance in HIV-positive infants, and adverse reactions in a breastfed infant

- Females and Males of Reproductive Potential: Pregnancy testing is recommended before initiation of DOVATO. Counsel individuals of childbearing potential taking DOVATO on the consistent use of effective contraception

- Renal Impairment: DOVATO is not recommended for patients with creatinine clearance <30 mL/min. Patients with a sustained creatinine clearance between 30 and 49 mL/min should be monitored for hematologic toxicities, which may require a dosage adjustment of lamivudine as an individual component

- Hepatic Impairment: DOVATO is not recommended in patients with severe hepatic impairment (Child-Pugh Score C)

dolutegravir 50 mg/
lamivudine 300 mg tablets

States with more uninsured see more excess mortality

A report from the White House Council of Economic Advisors found substantial variation in excess mortality across the US from March 2020 to March 2022, ranging from a high of 27.4% in Arizona to a low of 5.7% in Hawaii. States with greater percentages of uninsured residents reported more excess non-COVID-19 deaths attributed to poor access to care as hospitals were overwhelmed during the first two years of the pandemic. Full Story: Axios (7/12)

The Omicron BA.5 variant of SARS-Cov-2 is spreading quickly, and while people who have been vaccinated or recovered from COVID-19 are unlikely to experience severe effects, the subvariant evades some vaccine- and infection-induced antibodies, and infection rates are rising. Experts say allowing the variant to spread unchecked will result in more deaths, hospitalizations and cases of long COVID, but the public and political will for preventive measures, such as wearing masks and ventilating spaces, has waned. Full Story: The Atlantic (tiered subscription model) (7/12)

Utah Public Health Association

JULY 2022 NEWSLETTER

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

UPHA President Letter July 2022

As I write this article, the news that Roe v. Wade has been overturned by the Supreme Court has recently been announced. I'm feeling discouraged by the dismantling of evidence-based public health practices and threats to public health infrastructure. We've seen over the past several years this happening both in Utah and nationally. Local government overturning sound public health recommendations, an exodus of experienced public health workers to early retirement or career shifts, burnout among staff and partners. My heart goes out to all of us, the public health workforce who has been in the thick of it for years.

But I also feel encouraged as the UPHA board has risen to the challenges public health is facing. We are developing a strategic plan to strengthen our organization. We are working hard to build relationships with policy makers and other stakeholders. We are advocating to fortify public health, both in funding and regard. I invite you to join with us, not just as a member, but also as an advocate. We are stronger together and we need your voice. The Utah Public Health Association is a place we can come together, strategize, recommend, and speak out. We are a safe space to express your thoughts and feelings and we are in this for the long haul.

Over the next few months, there will be several opportunities for UPHA members to participate in surveys. We want to know how you are doing and how we can help. I also encourage you to join a committee if you are able. UPHA will continue advocating for public health and its workforce, because we know that public health is the foundation for a healthy Utah.

I welcome your thoughts and feedback. You can email me at president@upha.org.

SUPPORTING THE MENTAL HEALTH AND EMOTIONAL WELL-BEING OF RACIAL AND ETHNIC COMMUNITIES

Join APHA and the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention (CDC) for a webinar highlighting the key aspects of the mental health challenges that racial and ethnic communities are currently facing and what CDC and its partners are doing to support communities in need.

As a participant, you will hear from the CDC regarding recent data on mental and behavioral health trends. You will also hear from the How Right Now/Qué Hacer Ahora (HRN) communications campaign, which is supported by CDC and CDC Foundation, on its latest formative work that has informed new campaign messages and materials. The event will be moderated by Dr. Hazel Dean, editor-in-chief of Public Health Reports, the official scientific journal of the Office of the U.S. Surgeon General and U.S. Public Health Service.

This session will allow ample time for questions and discussion.

BOARD MEMBER SPOTLIGHT: NICKEE ANDJELIC

Role on UPHA Board: Nominations Unit
Tell us about your talents/skills/superhero powers: I am not sure this is much of a skill, but I am good at naming songs, mainly from the 90s, in a few notes. I have developed presentation and public speaking skills throughout my career, and I have grown to love talking with people and helping them develop healthier habits and lifestyles.
Favorite hobbies: I enjoy reading and hiking.
Lesson you have learned in your career: Sometimes, it is not about helping everyone but knowing that you're helping one or two people improve their lives and health is enough.
Why you enjoy working in public health: I like working with the people of Utah. I hope that when interacting with them through classes, social media posts, or health fairs, they leave the conversation with a little more knowledge and the skills necessary to become the best version of themselves they can be.
What book has influenced your career, or you wish everyone in public health would read and why? I am currently reading Your Body Keeps the Score by Bessel Van Der Kolk, M.D. It is an excellent book about trauma and how it impacts so much of our life, relationships, and health. We are all coming off two years of trauma. This book has helped me understand my own trauma from the pandemic but has given me hope that it will get better.

Synopsis for July 15, 2022

Public Health Surveillance and Reporting for Human Toxoplasmosis — Six States, 2021
A review of state surveillance systems for toxoplasmosis found that case definitions are not standardized across states, which makes it hard to know how much disease there is in the United States, what the sources are, or who is affected.
Toxoplasmosis, a disease caused by the parasite Toxoplasma gondii, is generally mild or asymptomatic in people with healthy immune systems but can be severe in people with weakened immune systems. Women who are infected during or shortly before pregnancy can pass the infection to their fetuses, potentially resulting in a range of adverse outcomes. Based on estimates from 2011 to 2014, around 11% of the U.S. population has been infected. Toxoplasmosis is not a nationally notifiable illness in the United States, so no standardized national-level surveillance data are available. It is, however, a reportable disease in eight states. This review sought to better understand how toxoplasmosis surveillance data are collected and utilized in states where the disease is currently reportable. Case definitions varied across states, highlighting the need for a standardized surveillance case definition. Standardized case definitions are important so that cases are classified and counted consistently, regardless of jurisdiction, making it easier to compile or compare data across states. As a result of this review, the participating states are pursuing the creation of a standardized surveillance case definition, which would be available to any state that wants to make toxoplasmosis a reportable disease.

Pediatric HIV Case Identification Across 22 PEPFAR-Supported Countries during the COVID-19 Pandemic, October 2019–September 2020
Data from 22 countries supported by the U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR) show reduced pediatric HIV testing and diagnoses during the COVID-19 pandemic. However, some testing strategies increased, suggesting these strategies reduced the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on pediatric HIV case identification.
During 2020, an estimated 150,000 children aged 0-14 years acquired HIV globally. Case identification is the first step to ensure children living with HIV are linked to life-saving treatment, achieve viral suppression, and live long, healthy lives. In this study, changes in HIV testing and diagnoses in children aged 0-14 years were assessed in 22 PEPFAR-supported countries during October 2019-September 2020. During the first 3 months of the COVID-19 pandemic, HIV testing and case identification among children in these countries decreased by 40% and 29%, respectively. Although outpatient testing decreased, testing increased for other strategies, including mobile testing, facility-based index testing (offering an HIV test to partners and biological children of HIV-positive individuals), and testing children with signs or symptoms of malnutrition, suggesting these strategies can be used to reduce the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on pediatric case identification. To sustain and accelerate progress toward global targets for controlling HIV, HIV programs can use programmatic, surveillance, and financial data to determine the optimal mix of testing strategies during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Safety Monitoring of COVID-19 mRNA Vaccine First Booster Doses Among Persons Aged ≥12 Years with Presumed Immunocompromise Status — United States, January 12, 2022–March 28, 2022
A new CDC study found that among people aged 12 years or older with weakened immune systems, reactions were less frequently reported to v-safe after the first mRNA booster (dose 4) than after dose 3 of the primary series. In the United States, during January 12, 2022–March 28, 2022, more than 5000,000 people aged 12 years and older received a fourth dose. Serious reactions after the first mRNA booster (dose 4) were rare. People aged 12 years and older with weakened immune systems should receive a first booster (dose 4) at least 3 months after a 3-dose primary COVID-19 vaccination series and a second booster (dose 5) at least 4 months after the first booster (dose 4).

People with moderate-to-severe immunocompromising conditions are at risk for severe COVID-19, and their immune response to COVID-19 vaccination might not be as robust as the response in people who have healthy immune systems. The Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices recommends that immunocompromised people aged 12 years and older complete a 3-dose primary mRNA COVID-19 vaccination series followed by a first booster dose (dose 4) at least 3 months after dose 3 and a second booster dose (dose 5) at least 4 months after dose 4. To characterize the safety of a booster dose among people with weakened immune systems aged 12 years and older, CDC reviewed reports received to v-safe and VAERS during the week after receipt of a first mRNA COVID-19 booster dose (dose 4). Data identified no unusual or unexpected patterns of adverse events. Mild-to-moderate reactions, such as injection site pain, fatigue, headache, and muscle pain, following their first booster dose were similar to those among people with healthy immune systems. Reactions were less common following the booster dose (dose 4) than following the last dose of a primary series (dose 3). CDC will continue to monitor vaccine safety and provide updates as needed to guide COVID-19 vaccination recommendations.

[redacted]

Notes from the Field: Outbreak of Salmonella Enteritidis at a Correctional Facility Using Mechanically Separated Chicken — Nebraska, 2022
Mechanically separated chicken products are more often contaminated with Salmonella bacteria compared to other poultry products and pose a greater food safety risk if handled improperly. Providing greater oversight of food safety procedures can reduce the likelihood of foodborne illness in correctional settings.
On January 14, 2022, the Lincoln-Lancaster County (Nebraska) Health Department notified the Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services (NDHHS) of two cases of laboratory-confirmed Salmonella in inmates at a correctional facility. The county health department initiated an investigation in collaboration with NDHHS to identify the source of the outbreak and develop recommendations. The investigation linked consumption of mechanically separated chicken to illness. Mechanically separated chicken is a poultry product produced by separating edible chicken from bone and cartilage under pressure and is purchased for use in prisons, jails, and correctional facilities due to its affordability. Substandard cooking processes were identified. Mitigating the risks of food handling and processing and cooking in vulnerable populations and institutions requires two key actions: 1) providing a less highly contaminated poultry product in the absence of contamination threshold regulatory requirements for poultry products and 2) implementing a preventive food safety management system to ensure thawing, cooking, and cooling processes meet food safety requirements.

New Data: Democrats' Drug Pricing Measures Are Broadly Popular

As Senate Democrats furiously negotiate a number of policy items as part of a revamped reconciliation package, a new Morning Consult/Politico survey finds the drug pricing-related provisions under consideration to be especially popular.

Morning Consult senior editor Cameron Easley writes that at least 7 in 10 voters support the following measures: Allowing Medicare to negotiate some prescription drug prices; placing caps on prescription drug price increases; and limiting annual out-of-pocket prescription drug costs to $2,000. And all three measures have broad, bipartisan support.

- As Senate Democrats eye a slimmer reconciliation package that is likely to include an agreement on drug pricing reforms, Sen. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.) said that he's wary of adding an extension for enhanced subsidies for Affordable Care Act plans to the deal, citing a fear of anything he believes would contribute "to the horrible inflation triggers we have." Insurers and regulators hope for clarity on ACA subsidies soon, given that rates for 2023 need to be locked in well ahead of the Nov. 1 open enrollment period and no extension would result in substantial premium hikes. - The Department of Health and Human Services is sending guidance to more than 60,000 retail pharmacies, warning that refusal to fill orders for contraception or medication abortion, or discriminating based on pregnancy, is a violation of federal civil rights. (Politico) White House officials, meanwhile, are said to be continuing discussions on whether to declare abortion access a public health emergency, with several top aides to President Joe Biden expressing reservations over the lack of fresh funding and powers that would result from the move, a White House official and two people familiar with the talks said. (The Washington Post)

- The Food and Drug Administration authorized Novavax Inc.'s two-dose COVID-19 shot for emergency use for adults, putting Americans one step away from a fourth vaccine option. Novavax, whose COVID-19 vaccine is the first in the United States that uses traditional protein-based technology as opposed to mRNA, now awaits clearance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. (CNBC)

- Reckitt Benckiser Group PLC flew the equivalent of 2 million 8-ounce servings of its Enfamil baby formula from its Singapore plant to Chicago, a move that Robert Cleveland, the company's senior vice president for North America and Europe Nutrition, said would help "play a significant role in putting an end" to the country's monthslong shortage. The formula is scheduled to hit retail shelves in the United States by early August. (Reuters)

CORONAVIRUS

Low demand for young kids' Covid vaccines is alarming doctors

Krista Mahr and Lauren Gardner, Politico

States where parents have hesitated to inoculate their children against Covid-19 are now ordering fewer doses of the vaccines for children under 5 than others, underscoring the challenge facing the Biden administration as a highly transmissible variant sweeps the nation.

Covid emerges as a complication for a Democratic economic deal

Mike DeBonis, The Washington Post

In recent months, the members of Congress who have publicly reported coronavirus cases overwhelmingly have been Democrats — including the party's two top leaders on Capitol Hill — posing a big and ironic problem for the majority party.

How Novavax is different from other coronavirus vaccines

Bonnie Berkowitz et al., The Washington Post

The newest entry into the U.S. arsenal of coronavirus vaccines uses the oldest technology of the bunch.

Astra's Covid Vaccine Saved Over Six Million Lives in First Year

James Paton, Bloomberg

Covid vaccines from AstraZeneca Plc and Pfizer Inc. had the biggest impact in preventing deaths in the first year of the global rollout, saving an estimated 12 million lives.

Health systems watch for next COVID surge amid rising cases

Caroline Hudson, Modern Healthcare

After a short lull in cases, healthcare systems are once again reviewing the COVID-19 playbook as new strains of the omicron variant cause a steady rise in hospitalizations nationwide.

WHO Panel Advises Against Generic Antidepressant to Treat Covid

Marthe Fourcade, Bloomberg

A generic antidepressant and a gout medicine that garnered some popularity as Covid-19 treatments shouldn't be used for mild infection because there's no evidence they help, according to a panel of experts advising the World Health Organization.

GENERAL

Durbin, Collins blast FDA for failure to ban certain synthetic e-cigarettes

Nicholas Florko, Stat News

Two key senators say the FDA "appears to be on the brink of failing yet again at protecting our nation's children," because the agency has not yet taken action against certain illegal vaping companies despite a clear congressional directive to pull these products off the market.

FDA issues more than 100 warnings over new synthetic nicotine law

Julia Shapero and Rebecca Falconer, Axios

The FDA said it has issued warnings to two manufacturers for marketing synthetic vaping products without authorization and sent 107 other warning letters to retailers for illegally selling such products to underage buyers in recent days.

House Democrats advance bills to bolster abortion access

Mychael Schnell, The Hill

House Democrats on Wednesday advanced two bills that seek to bolster abortion rights, less than one month after the Supreme Court issued a ruling that reversed Roe v. Wade.

Democratic cities in Republican states seek ways around abortion bans

Scott Wilson, The Washington Post

Democratic-controlled cities within Republican states have launched improvisational efforts to preserve abortion services, even as officials acknowledge they will probably fall short of protecting doctors and patients sufficiently to serve as a substitute for a constitutional right to the procedure.

Doctors worry that online misinformation will push abortion-seekers toward ineffective, dangerous methods

Naomi Thomas, CNN

Now that Roe v. Wade has been overturned and some states are putting strict limits on abortions, there's widespread confusion about whether the procedures are available and to whom. Physicians and poison control officials say they're worried that people seeking abortions will turn to ineffective and dangerous methods shared online, potentially delaying or preventing safe, proven abortion care.

Over 80 House Democrats urge Biden to declare public health emergency on abortion

Oriana Gonzalez, Axios

More than 80 House Democrats sent a letter to President Biden urging him to issue a national emergency declaration and a public health emergency declaration in response to the Supreme Court overturning Roe v. Wade.

FTC commits to enforcing privacy laws after Roe falls

Arielle Dreher, Axios

The Federal Trade Commission reaffirmed it would protect consumers who share sensitive health information or location data with mobile apps or websites, threatening to use federal privacy laws against companies that exploit personal data.

Republican Senator Richard Burr Slams US Monkeypox Response

Madison Muller, Bloomberg

A fierce critic of the US Covid-19 strategy, Republican Senator Richard Burr condemned the Biden administration's response to the outbreak of monkeypox virus and called again for the creation of a new government office to deal specifically with pandemics.

Monkeypox vaccine appointment website crashes in New York City

Caroline Vakil, The Hill

New York City's monkeypox vaccine appointment website crashed on Tuesday "due to overwhelming traffic," the city announced as the nation sees an uptick in cases.

Relaxed methadone rules appear safe, researchers find

Carla K. Johnson, The Associated Press

As the coronavirus pandemic shut down the nation in March of 2020, the U.S. government told methadone clinics they could allow stable patients with opioid addiction to take their medicine at home unsupervised.

Compromise veterans bill passes House, heads back to Senate

David Lerman, Roll Call

On a 342-88 vote, the House sent back to the Senate — as an amendment to an unrelated bill — legislation to provide easier access to health care and disability benefits to more than 3.5 million veterans who were exposed to toxic substances while serving overseas.

Studies Probe Adenovirus Link to Childhood Hepatitis Cases

Emily Anthes, The New York Times

For months, scientists around the world have been investigating cases of severe, unexplained hepatitis, or liver inflammation, in previously healthy children. At least 920 probable cases have been detected in 33 countries since October, according to the World Health Organization. About 5 percent have required liver transplants, and 18 deaths have been reported.

Voters, Prosecutors Back Abortion Rights as States Get Grilled

Jalen Brown, Bloomberg Law

Prosecutors refusing to enforce anti-abortion laws and voters campaigning to put reproductive rights on the ballot are just some of the efforts that communities and advocates are taking to defend abortion rights statewide as Congress holds a series of hearings on the matter this week.

PAYERS

Navitus Health Solutions signs on with CivicaScripts to address high-cost generics

Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare

Pharmacy benefit manager Navitus Health Solutions will join CivicaScript as a founding member, the company announced Wednesday.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

BA.5 should not change how Americans think about living with covid

Leana S. Wen, The Washington Post

A new variant of the coronavirus, even more contagious than previous strains, is now dominant in the United States. But rising cases should not prompt calls for most Americans to hunker down or policymakers to reimpose restrictions. Instead, the rapid spread of the BA.5 omicron subvariant is a window into what the future with this coronavirus looks like.

Empower primary care with adequate payments and technology

Hoangmai Pham and Michael O. Leavitt, Stat News

The resilience of primary care cannot be taken for granted. Signs abound of the strain on many practices under current financing and payment arrangements. Primary care lost an estimated $15 billion in 2020 and, a year later, fully one-third of practices reported not having recovered financially. As a result, a growing number of once-independent practices have been acquired by hospitals or private equity firms.

Medicare Cuts for Diagnostic Tests Would Show the Government Has Taken the Wrong Lessons from COVID-19

Matt Sause and William Morice II, Real Clear Policy

COVID-19 has had a profound impact on the world and taught all of us critical lessons. Chief among these is the importance of ensuring everyone has access to affordable, reliable testing when they need it most. For a highly contagious disease like COVID-19, testing wasn't simply important for individual health. It was essential to minimize community spread, especially while treatments and vaccines were limited or not yet available.

RESEARCH REPORTS

How Well-Targeted are the American Rescue Plan Act's Premium Tax Credits?

Michael Simpson et al., Urban Institute and Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Extending the American Rescue Plan Act's (ARPA) enhanced premium tax credits would primarily benefit those living at or below 400 percent of the federal poverty level. Over three million more people with incomes at or below 400 percent of the FPL would see reduced monthly marketplace premiums in 2023 if the credits are extended into 2023. Currently, the credits are set to expire at the end of the year.

Associations between low Apgar scores and mortality by race in the United States: A cohort study of 6,809,653 infants

Emma Gillette et al., PLOS Medicine

Apgar scores measure newborn health and are strongly associated with infant outcomes, but their performance has largely been determined in primarily white populations. Given the majority of the global population is not white, we aim to assess whether the association between low Apgar score and mortality in infants varies across racial groups.

Responding to Audit Findings

Thursday, July 21 at 1 PM ET

MONTHLY HEALTH CENTER COMPLIANCE WEBINAR

Throughout the public health emergency, health centers received billions of dollars in federal funds. As the audits of CARES Act funds and others begin, health centers may face audit findings, despite paying careful attention to complying with federal grant terms and conditions. Understanding the purpose of the audit and the role of the auditor, along with risk areas in the audit will help health centers evaluate possible courses of action at each stage of the audit process.

On Thursday, July 21 at 1 PM ET, join FTLF attorney Ted Waters as he covers:

- The do's and don'ts in the audit process
- Resources and opportunities available during the audit
- Strategies and practical guidance for audit resolution

Dems mull extending ACA enhancements in spending package

Senate Democrats are exploring their options for passing an extension of enhanced Affordable Care Act premium subsidies, which are set to expire by year-end, as part of a broad spending package they hope to pass before leaving Washington, D.C., in August. Millions of Americans could lose health insurance coverage and face higher premiums if the enhancements are not extended, but supporters must allay concerns from Sen. Joe Manchin, D-W.Va., whose vote could block the measure. Full Story: The Washington Post (tiered subscription model) (7/13)

Bill would close tax loophole to shore up Medicare

Rep. Lloyd Doggett, D-Texas, introduced legislation this week that would close a tax loophole and direct the resulting revenue to the Medicare Hospital Insurance Fund. Estimates suggest the fund's reserve will be exhausted in 2028, at which point the program's income will allow it to pay out only 90% of total scheduled benefits. Full Story: Healthcare Finance (7/12)

Better dental hygiene may cut hospital-acquired pneumonia

Lack of dental care during inpatient stays may be responsible for hundreds of thousands of hospital-acquired infections each year, including nonventilator hospital-acquired pneumonia, which can be fatal in up to 30% of infected patients, especially those lying flat or staying immobile for long periods of time. A greater focus on brushing patients' teeth regularly during hospital stays is needed, some experts say. Full Story: Kaiser Health News (7/12)

Adult visceral adiposity tied to higher mortality risks

Data from the UK Biobank show that adults who have a higher visceral adiposity index score could be at greater risk for all-cause mortality and some mortalities with specific causes. A large study published in the journal Nutrition, Metabolism & Cardiovascular Diseases showed that adults in the highest VAI quartile had greater risk for all-cause, cancer and cardiovascular mortality than those in the lowest quartile, and people in the highest quartile also demonstrated greater risk for lung and bronchial cancer death and ischemic heart disease mortality. Full Story: Healio (free registration) (7/13)

EXPERT ANALYSIS

EPA Ruling Signals Arrival Of 'Major Questions Doctrine'
While the specific subject of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in West Virginia v. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency was how the EPA may regulate greenhouse gas emissions under the Clean Air Act, the ruling's lasting legacy will be the elevation of the so-called major questions doctrine, which could constrain federal regulatory authority in many areas, says Allison Wood at McGuireWoods.

- Sen. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.) reportedly told Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.) that he is prepared to support a two-year extension of subsidies for Affordable Care Act plans as part of Democrats' reconciliation spending bill, in addition to measures aimed at lowering prescription drug prices for seniors, for which he has previously expressed support. Manchin also said he would not back a reconciliation bill in August on climate change or new taxes of any kind, according to a Democratic source, despite having recently signed on to a plan to address Medicare solvency by closing a loophole that allows high-income Americans to shield their income. its Optum health care services unit. UnitedHealth noted that the strong sales from Optum helped the company weather turmoil in its insurance business due to pandemic-spurred changes in consumers' use of medical services. (Reuters)

- Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton filed a lawsuit against the Biden administration over recent guidance warning providers that refusing to provide abortions in emergency situations is a violation of federal law. The lawsuit claims that the guidance "forces hospitals and doctors to commit crimes and risk their licensure under Texas law," while the White House said in a statement that the action amounts to "yet another example of an extreme and radical Republican elected official." (Politico)

- Sen. James Lankford (R-Okla.) blocked a request from Sen. Catherine Cortez Masto (D-Nev.) and other Senate Democrats to unanimously pass a bill that would protect interstate travel for abortion, saying "there's a child in this conversation as well." The measure would have also protected those who provide abortions to out-of-state patients. (The Hill)

CORONAVIRUS

The BA.5 Wave Is What COVID Normal Looks Like

Katherine J. Wu, The Atlantic

After two-plus years of erupting into distinguishable peaks, the American coronavirus-case curve has a new topography: a long, never-ending plateau. Waves are now so frequent that they're colliding and uplifting like tectonic plates, the valleys between them filling with virological rubble.

More than 1 in 2 Americans now live in an area where CDC urges indoor masking to curb COVID-19 surges

Alexander Tin, CBS News

More than half of Americans now live in communities where the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention urges indoor masking and other measures to curb a surge in COVID-19, according to figures published Thursday by the agency.

WHO: COVID-19 cases rise for the 5th week, deaths stable

The Associated Press

In the U.N. health agency's weekly review of the COVID-19 pandemic, WHO said there were 5.7 million new infections confirmed last week, marking a 6% increase. There were 9.800 deaths, roughly similar to the previous week's figure.

A Twitter 'rando' named a new coronavirus variant Centaurus and it stuck

Ellen Francis, The Washington Post

"I have just named BA.2.75 variant after a galaxy," wrote Xabier Ostale, who often uses his Twitter account to share coronavirus news. He dubbed the latest coronavirus subvariant that's drawing attention from scientists "Centaurus."

Virus that can cause severe illness in babies seen in multiple states, CDC cautions

Tim Stelloh, NBC News

Health care providers in multiple states have reported a virus that can cause seizures, meningitis and other severe illnesses in infants under 3 months old, federal officials said Thursday.

Indiana AG eyes criminal prosecution of 10-year-old rape victim's abortion doc

Alice Miranda Ollstein, Politico

Indiana Attorney General Todd Rokita is threatening criminal charges against the doctor who performed an abortion on a 10-year-old rape survivor from Ohio — a major escalation in the ongoing saga that has put the midwestern state on the frontlines of the post-Roe war.

National Right to Life official: 10-year-old should have had baby

Megan Messerly and Adam Wren, Politico

The 10-year-old Ohio girl who crossed state lines to receive an abortion in Indiana should have carried her pregnancy to term and would be required to do so under a model law written for state legislatures considering more restrictive abortion measures, according to the general counsel for the National Right to Life.

Indiana asks Supreme Court to let it enforce parental-notice abortion law

John Kruzel, The Hill

Indiana asked the Supreme Court on Thursday to let it enforce a law that would stiffen parental notice requirements in cases where a minor seeks an abortion.

Steven Ross Johnson, U.S. News & World Report

Starting Saturday, the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline - funded through the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration and administered by the nonprofit Vibrant Emotional Health - is scheduled to expand and receive calls or texts sent to the new three-digit, 988 emergency number, along with fielding calls and messages to its prior hotline at 1-800-273-8255.

US regulators clear way for more monkeypox vaccine shipments

Matthew Perrone, The Associated Press

Thousands more doses of monkeypox vaccine are expected to soon begin shipping to the U.S. after federal health officials said they had completed an inspection of the overseas plant where they were manufactured.

Doctors warn US monkeypox response is lagging

Ariel Cohen, Roll Call

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has identified more than 1,000 cases of monkeypox in the United States, but even though the federal government has ample treatments and vaccinations on hand, physicians say bureaucratic red tape is hindering their ability to respond to and contain the outbreak.

Tobacco-Free Vape Makers Face First FDA Enforcement Moves

Celine Castronuovo, Bloomberg Law

The FDA said it's issued warnings to more than 100 retailers for illegally selling synthetic nicotine products to underage Americans, marking its first enforcement steps in an area that has long gone without federal oversight.

Baby-Formula Shortage Deepens, Defying Replenishment Efforts

Jesse Newman and Jaewon Kang, The Wall Street Journal

Availability of powdered formula products in U.S. stores earlier this month dropped to the lowest level so far this year, with about 30% of products out of stock for the week ended July 3, according to the market-research firm IRI. While availability improved slightly last week, out-of-stock levels remain higher than in recent months, and shortages remain acute in states including Alaska, Utah and Wyoming, IRI data showed.

Vaccine coverage continued to decline worldwide in 2021, with 25 million children missing out on lifesaving vaccines, according to data published Thursday by the World Health Organization and UNICEF.

Senate Democrats call on Biden to declare public health emergency on abortion

Oriana Gonzalez, Axios

Nearly 20 Senate Democrats are urging President Biden to "immediately" declare a public health emergency on abortion following the Supreme Court's ruling overturning Roe v. Wade.

Taking On Chicago's Gun Violence With Public-Health Strategies

Madison Muller, Bloomberg Businessweek

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has begun backing programs such as ShootSafe, an interactive website that aims to teach children how to avoid accidental shootings. And researchers are collecting surveillance data with the aim of reducing injuries in large urban communities with high levels of gun violence. Others are looking at hospital-based prevention programs that connect gun violence victims with firearm safety counseling.

As Y Chromosomes Vanish With Age, Heart Risks May Grow

Gina Kolata, The New York Times

A new study using male mice genetically engineered to lose their Y chromosomes provides insight. The paper, published on Thursday in the journal Science, found that when the Y chromosome was gone from blood cells in those mice, scar tissue built up in the heart, leading to heart failure and a shortened life span.

TeamHealth sues UnitedHealthcare over denied payments for emergency services in Nevada

Samantha Liss, Healthcare Dive

TeamHealth filed suit in federal court on Wednesday alleging that UnitedHealthcare wrongly denied and underpaid for services its emergency physicians provided to patients in Nevada.

Clover to enter 13 new markets for 2023 amid rising expenses

Rebecca Pifer, Healthcare Dive

Clover plans to offer Medicare Advantage plans in 13 new counties across Georgia, South Carolina and Tennessee next year as the insurtech, facing rising expenses, zeroes in on growth markets.

Molina to acquire Wisconsin Medicaid plan in $150M deal

Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare

The Medicaid managed care organization has offered services in the state for 22 years and, as of May, covered 44,000 Medicaid and managed long-term services and supports (MLTSS) members. That accounts for about $1 billion in premium revenue in the 12 months ending March 31.

AIDS Healthcare Foundation sues Express Scripts over Medicare 'clawbacks'

Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare

In the lawsuit, filed in Missouri federal court, AHF alleges that the pharmacy benefit manager manipulates Medicare star ratings to ensure participating pharmacies get unfairly low scores. Thanks to these scores, the PBM then claws back Medicare benefits from pharmacies to pad its bottom line.

Women's Coverage Losses in 2023 If the American Rescue Plan Act's Premium Tax Credits Expire

Jessica Banthin et al., Urban Institute

About 850,000 additional adult women of reproductive age (19 to 44) will be uninsured in 2023 if the enhanced premium tax credits (PTCs) passed under the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) are allowed to expire at the end of 2022 as they are slated to under current law. Uninsured women are at higher risk than insured women of having an unintended pregnancy due to more limited access to free or low-cost reproductive health services, including the most effective forms of contraception.

Profits, medical loss ratios, and the ownership structure of Medicare Advantage plans

Richard G. Frank and Conrad Milhaupt, USC-Brookings Schaeffer Initiative for Health Policy

There is a great deal of controversy and uncertainty regarding profits in the Medicare Advantage (MA) program. Interest in these issues is growing as the share of beneficiaries grows. The Medicare Payment Advisory Commission, or MedPAC, recently reported that MA enrollment grew 10% from July 2020 to July 2021. This means MA accounted for 46% of all Medicare beneficiaries in 2021, with payments to MA plans totaling $350 billion.

Good Morning Laurie -

I hope you are doing well. I have a clarifying question regarding the Abortion Education Module post-SB 174. If the new law goes into effect, will individuals seeking an abortion due to rape or incest be required to complete the Abortion Education Module as it is currently or will the individual be required to review only certain sections of the module? If only certain sections will be required to be completed, do you know which sections they are?

As context, this question came-up in a recent meeting with the Lt. Governor and she would appreciate clarification on the Abortion Education Module for victims of rape and incest if the new law takes effect.

I hope my question makes sense. When I look at the FAQs it does not sound like there will be any changes to what sections of the education module will be required, but I do want to clarify and provide that information to the Lt. Governor.

Thank you!

Social Mission in Health Professions Education

Beyond Flexner Alliance Summer 2022 Newsletter

"Or when I would feel overwhelmed by what was going on in the world, I would just say to myself: "Hope is a discipline."... the practice of making a decision every day, that you're still gonna put one foot in front of the other, that you're still going to get up in the morning…we have an opportunity at every moment to push in a direction that we think is actually a direction towards more justice." - Mariame Kaba, Organizer and Transformative Justice Practitioner, Author of, "We Do This 'Til We Free Us"

These are trying times for many of us in the health professions committed to social mission. The Supreme Court's verdict gutting Roe v. Wade has been a massive blow to the rights of women and pregnant people to access safe abortion care. With abortion care no longer a guaranteed right, women and pregnant people lose a crucial safety net on which they can fall back on in unforeseen circumstances. In a country where the maternal mortality rate reaches unimaginably high levels, outlawing abortion ignores the larger picture relating to healthcare access. The reversal of this protection from a federal to a states' rights issue has implemented trigger laws in a handful of states, making abortion a criminal medical procedure, putting both patients and practitioners at risk of criminalization. Our institutions have been impacted as well, as the training of our learners in these states that criminalize abortion are now jeopardized. Now, many of our future providers are faced with an uphill battle to receive the education they need around family planning and abortion care.

President Biden's most recent federal declaration to protect abortion rights for medical emergencies has been welcome news for many providers, many of whom have their hands tied when it came to whether they could provide life saving care for unsafe pregnancies. However, even with this silver lining, it is hard not to acknowledge how daunting the situation has felt in a situation that many feel as hopeless. But we cannot stop now. In the words of organizer Mariame Kaba, "Hope is a discipline". It is not the feeling of hope that sustains us through difficult times, it is the practice of struggle that brings us over towards the change that we seek. Our commitment to social mission, our commitment to improving the institutions we are a part of and the clinical settings in which we operate, is an unwavering one. Through this practice of hope, we implore you to take up the mantle to continue advancing the work of transforming our institutions, both for the providers we and our learners want to become, and to serve as entities that can step up to the plate in advocating for the needs of our patients. We hope that in this newsletter you may find ways in which we may take those first steps, together.

In solidarity,

The Beyond Flexner Alliance Team

Health Justice Fellowship

The Beyond Flexner Alliance's Health Justice Fellowship Program aims to nurture the talents of trainees who already show promise and commitment to advancing health justice in health professional training. Within this space, fellows hone their skills and broaden their networks in ways that will sustain them in pushing health professional institutions to be more socially accountable. The Inaugural Health Justice Fellowship has concluded for the year and this year our fellows had a chance to hone in their Op-Ed writing skills, social media advocacy skills, and organizing skills! See what some of our fellows had to say about this year's program:

"The community, the guest speakers, camaraderie, our trip to Arizona for the conference, and the student assembly were some of the most valuable aspects! It is hard to pick one part since the entirety of the fellowship was invaluable and one of the best decisions I've ever made."

"There was a strong sense of community throughout the entire fellowship and for the first time in what feels like forever, I found a group of people who supported me like we didn't just meet. I found a group of people that I know will support me forever and with all the ideas I want to bring to life."
We'll be recruiting for 6 positions in next year's cohort in mid-late August. The application for the 2022-2023 cohort of fellows is now open and more information can be found here. Fellows Daniel Tounsel, JD, NP and Zena Ahmed, MTM, MPH will be staying on to assist in running the fellowship in the next academic year.

Health Workforce Diversity Tracker

The Health Workforce Diversity Tracker Initiative continues to push for equity and diversity through the creation of research reports, data collection partnerships, and presentations. After its launch in the fall of 2021, the initiative has continued its efforts on improving its Health Workforce Diversity Tracker, through the addition of new data. One recent update includes the release of the California Health Workforce report, prepared with the support from the California Endowment. Along with the release of this report, the team held 2 webinars to share the findings with key stakeholders in California. Meetings were also held with leaders at the University of California and the California Health Care Access and Information (HCAI) agency to discuss the findings and the need for action to make the health workforce more representative of the CA population.

The team is also working with the National Association of Community Health Centers (NACHC) and an advisory committee of health centers to design a data collection instrument to support the development of a Diversity Index that would show the diversity of the health center workforce compared to the population being served and similar health centers. A pilot test of the survey instrument is scheduled for the coming months.

Lastly, the team made two presentations to the Clinicians of Color Task Force established by the Louisiana Department of Health to develop a strategic plan to increase the diversity of the health workforce in the state to make it more reflective of the diversity of the population in the state.

Social Mission Metrics Initiative

Social Mission Metrics Initiative

Thirty dental, medical and nursing schools received summary reports for their field test participation of the Social Mission Metrics Self-Assessment. The research team presented on social mission at the Beyond Flexner Conference and the Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) Health Workforce Research Conference. Concurrently, our newest manuscript, “Analysis of Social Mission Commitment at Dental, Medical, and Nursing Schools in the US,” was published in JAMA Network Open.

Hi David -

We don't have a clear answer to this question. There is no language in the current code that specifically provides direction on who and who is not required to view the module, the language is about what the physician is required to provide and document. SB174 does not repeal any of the requirements related to the informed consent module.

In 76-7-305, Informed Consent Requirements (https://le.utah.gov/xcode/Title76/Chapter7/76-7-S305.html), subsection 8 states:
(8) A physician is not guilty of violating this section for failure to furnish any of the information described in Subsection (2) (information module) or (3) (face to face consultation), or for failing to comply with Subsection (5) (ultrasound), if:
(a) the physician can demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that the physician reasonably believed that furnishing the information would have resulted in a severely adverse effect on the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman;
(b) in the physician's professional judgment, the abortion was necessary to avert: (i) the death of the woman on whom the abortion is performed; or (ii) a serious risk of substantial and irreversible impairment of a major bodily function of the woman on whom the abortion is performed;
(c) the pregnancy was the result of rape or rape of a child, as described in Sections 76-5-402 and 76-5-402.1;
(d) the pregnancy was the result of incest, as defined in Subsection 76-5-406(2)(j) and Section 76-7-102; or
(e) at the time of the abortion, the pregnant woman was 14 years old or younger.

Section 76-7-305.5 of the Utah Code (https://le.utah.gov/xcode/Title76/Chapter7/76-7-S305.5.html) outlines the requirements of the informed consent module. This section of the statute notes that the Department may develop a version of the module that omits the information about the responsibility of the father and child support (2)(j) and (2)(k) if the pregnancy is the result of rape. The rest of the module components are left for viewing. We did incorporate this into the development. The module asks the viewer if the pregnancy is a result of rape and if they respond "yes", they skip these sections as they progress through to the completion certificate. There is no reference to incest in this section of the code.

I consulted with Clover Meaders and the interpretation of these codes is that viewing of the module is still in effect (unless the code is changed), but that a physician will not be be guilty of violation for not providing information about the module if the pregnancy is a result of rape or incest.

(c) the pregnancy was the result of rape or rape of a child, as described in Sections 76-5-402 and 76-5-402.1;
(d) the pregnancy was the result of incest, as defined in Subsection 76-5-406(2)(j) and Section 76-7-102; or
(e) at the time of the abortion, the pregnant woman was 14 years old or younger.

Section 76-7-305.5 of the Utah Code (https://le.utah.gov/xcode/Title76/Chapter7/76-7-S305.5.html) outlines the requirements of the informed consent module. This section of the statute notes that the Department may develop a version of the module that omits the information about the responsibility of the father and child support (2)(j) and (2)(k) if the pregnancy is the result of rape. The rest of the module components are left for viewing. We did incorporate this into the development. The module asks the viewer if the pregnancy is a result of rape and if they respond "yes", they skip these sections as they progress through to the completion certificate. There is no reference to incest in this section of the code.

I consulted with Clover Meaders and the interpretation of these codes is that viewing of the module is still in effect (unless the code is changed), but that a physician will not be be guilty of violation for not providing information about the module if the pregnancy is a result of rape or incest.

Good Morning Laurie -

I hope you are doing well. I have a clarifying question regarding the Abortion Education Module post-SB 174. If the new law goes into effect, will individuals seeking an abortion due to rape or incest be required to complete the Abortion Education Module as it is currently or will the individual be required to review only certain sections of the module? If only certain sections will be required to be completed, do you know which sections they are?

As context, this question came-up in a recent meeting with the Lt. Governor and she would appreciate clarification on the Abortion Education Module for victims of rape and incest if the new law takes effect.

I hope my question makes sense. When I look at the FAQs it does not sound like there will be any changes to what sections of the education module will be required, but I do want to clarify and provide that information to the Lt. Governor.

Thank you!

Health Community Updates

Friends – Please join us for our next bi-weekly White House Health Community Call on Tuesday (note: this is a change from our typical Wednesday calls, but only for this particular call), July

[redacted]

[redacted]

26th at 2:30pm ET. You can RSVP here. Please invite colleagues and members of your community – all are welcome.

Below are several important updates from this week. Have a wonderful weekend.

Statement: President Biden Calls for Senate to Pass Legislation to Reduce Health Care Costs for Families

Today, President Biden issued this statement urging the Senate to pass legislation to reduce health care costs for American families before the August recess. This is a concrete step Congress can take to fight inflation. Families will sleep easier if Congress takes this action. Please read and share with members of your community.

988 Announcement and Briefing Invitation

On July 16, 2022, the ten-digit suicide prevention lifeline will be transitioning to a three-digit number, 9-8-8, where compassionate, accessible care and support is available for anyone experiencing mental health-related distress. Americans can also dial 988 if they are worried about a loved one who may need crisis support.

To help YOU, our partners, communicate about 988, we have developed a downloadable print files for wallet cards, magnets, and posters to its 988 Partner Toolkit. The toolkit already includes logo and brand guidelines, key messages, frequently asked questions, fact sheets (English and Spanish), radio PSA scripts (English and Spanish), and more.

You are also invited to join Secretary Becerra, Assistant Secretary for Mental Health and Substance Use Dr. Miriam Delphin-Rittmon, and HHS senior leadership on Monday, July 18th at 3:00PM ET for a briefing on the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline's transition to 988 this upcoming weekend. All information is below.

Date: Monday, July 18
Time: 3:00 PM ET

This Week's Administration Policy Announcements on Reproductive Rights

- Emergency Care: On 7/11/22, HHS issued guidance affirming that the Emergency Medical Treatment Active Labor Act (EMTALA) protects providers that offer abortion services in emergency situations. Secretary Becerra also issued a letter to providers making clear that federal law preempts state law restricting access to abortion in emergency situations.
- DOJ Reproductive Rights Task Force: On 7/12/22, the DOJ announced a Reproductive Rights Task Force, which will monitor and evaluate state and local actions that infringe on federal protections relating to the provision or pursuit of reproductive care, impair women's ability to seek reproductive care where it's legal, impair individuals' ability to inform and counsel each other about the reproductive care that is available in other states, ban medication abortion, or impose criminal or civil liability on federal employees who provide legal reproductive health services.
- The FTC: On 7/12/22, the FTC committed to fully enforcing the law against illegal use and sharing of highly sensitive data, including location and health information contained in fertility and period tracking data. The FTC urged companies to consider that sensitive data is protected by numerous state and federal laws, claims that data is "anonymous" are often deceptive, and the FTC has a track record of cracking down on companies that misuse consumer data.
- Federal Law: On 7/12/22, the White House released Statements of Administration Policy on H.R. 8296 – Women's Health Protection Act of 2022 and H.R. 8297 – Ensuring Access to Abortion Act of 2022.

[redacted]

- Guidance to Retail Pharmacies: On 7/13/22, HHS issued guidance to roughly 60,000 U.S. retail pharmacies to remind them of their obligations under federal civil rights laws to ensure access to comprehensive reproductive health care services. The guidance makes clear that as recipients of federal financial assistance, pharmacies are prohibited under law from discriminating on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, age, and disability in their programs and activities. This includes supplying medications; making determinations regarding the suitability of a prescribed medication for a patient; and advising patients about medications and how to take them.

FDA Educational Resources for Parents and Caregivers to Support Confidence for Imported Infant Formula Products

Yesterday, the FDA announced the availability of educational resources for parents and caregivers with questions about using the hundreds of millions of bottles worth of imported infant formula headed to the U.S. Increased flexibilities regarding infant formula products announced by the FDA on May 16 have resulted in the infant formula products from nine countries, with a total estimated quantity of 23 million cans, or 35 million pounds or more than 520 million full-size, 8-ounce bottles, headed to the U.S.

The FDA has created resources, including infographics and a Consumer Update for parents and caregivers to learn more about the factors the agency considered in determining whether to exercise flexibilities for these products and how they should be used. Additionally, the agency has created a series of short consumer videos of consumers' most frequently asked questions.

Consumers should have confidence that the infant formula that is being imported to the U.S. through FDA flexibilities involved a thorough review of the information provided by the companies, including details about the product's nutritional adequacy and safety, microbiological testing results, labeling information, and importantly, details about the manufacturing facility's food safety production practices and inspection history.

Additionally, because formula that is available in the U.S. under FDA flexibilities is primarily coming from other countries, the labels and directions may have terms not normally used in the U.S., such as metric measurements. To help safely prepare imported infant formula, consumers are encouraged to use the FDA's conversion chart to convert milliliters to fluid ounces and common conversions from Celsius (°C) to Fahrenheit (°F).

Biden Administration Outlines Strategy to Manage BA.5

This week, the White House COVID-19 Team announced its strategy to manage BA.5. The strategy relies on ensuring that Americans continue to have easy and convenient access to the vaccines, treatments, tests, and other tools that protect against and treat COVID-19. These tools – even in the face of BA.5 – work to prevent serious illness, keep people out of the hospital, and save lives – and we can prevent nearly all COVID-19 deaths with them. You can read more here.

To confront BA.5, the Administration will continue mobilizing the full strength and capabilities of the federal government and working with state and local leaders, health care workers, the private sector, and community- and faith-based organizations to ensure that the American people have easy and convenient access to and use vaccines, tests, and treatments.

Recap: White House Cancer Cabinet Meeting

On Wednesday, July 13th, the Biden-Harris Administration made progress toward realizing the goals for the re-ignited Cancer Moonshot – to reduce the death rate from cancer by at least 50 percent over the next 25 years, and improve the experience of people and their families living with and surviving cancer. Leaders came together from across the Cabinet and the White House joining the First Lady to unveil priority actions for the Cancer Cabinet – the realization of President Biden's vision for a whole-of-government approach to end cancer as we know it. These include: (1) close the screening gap, (2) understand and address environmental exposure, (3) decrease the impact of preventable cancers, (4) bring cutting edge research through the pipeline to patients and communities, and (5) support patients and caregivers. This Cancer Cabinet also added the Departments of Commerce and Labor, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and the White House Gender Policy Council. You can read more details in the fact sheet including the announcement a new slate of experts appointed to the President's Cancer Panel and highlights of progress made by agencies as part of the Cancer Moonshot over the last few months.

The Cancer Moonshot goals are big and bold and to get there, we know it will take all of us, working together, and working hard in every way we can, to move the mission forward. Join us at wh.gov/cancermoonshot by sharing your story, your ideas, or new actions and collaborations you will contribute. Let's end cancer as we know it, together.

All best,

Women's Community Update

All,

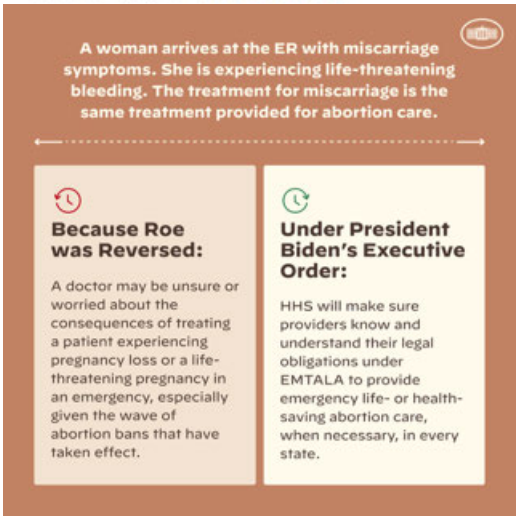
Wade,* Commemoration of the Passage of the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act, and the Fourth Convening of the Trilateral Working Group on Violence Against Indigenous Women and Girls.

Administration Actions on Protecting Reproductive Rights

Since President Biden signed his Executive Order Protecting Access to Reproductive Health Services on July 8, his Administration has announced further actions to protect reproductive rights:

Protecting Emergency Medical Care

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), through the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), announced new guidance affirming that the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA) protects providers when offering legally-mandated, life- or health-saving abortion services in emergency situations. Secretary Becerra also issued a letter to providers making clear that federal law preempts state law restricting access to abortion in emergency situations.



Guidance to Retail Therapies

HHS issued guidance to roughly 60,000 U.S. retail pharmacies, reminding them of their obligations under federal civil rights laws. The guidance makes clear that as recipients of federal financial assistance, including Medicare and Medicaid payments, pharmacies are prohibited under law from discriminating based on race, color, national origin, sex, age, and disability in their programs and activities. This includes supplying prescribed medications; making determinations regarding the suitability of prescribed medications for a patient; and advising a patient about prescribed medications and how to take them.

Department of Justice Announces Reproductive Rights Task Force

The Department of Justice (DOJ) announced a Reproductive Rights Task Force, which will monitor and evaluate state and local actions that infringe on federal protections relating to the provision or pursuit of reproductive care, impair women's ability to seek reproductive care where it's legal, impair individuals' ability to inform and counsel each other about the reproductive care that is available in other states, ban medication abortion, or impose criminal or civil liability on federal employees who provide legal reproductive health services.

Federal Trade Commission Commits to Protecting Privacy and Sensitive Health Data

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) committed to fully enforcing the law against illegal use and sharing of highly sensitive data, including location and health information contained in fertility and period tracking data. The FTC urged companies to consider that sensitive data is protected by numerous state and federal laws, claims that data is "anonymous" are often deceptive, and the FTC has a track record of cracking down on companies that misuse consumer data.

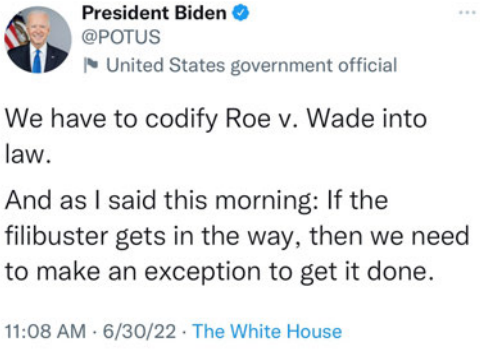
ICYMI: President Biden Signed Executive Order Protecting Access to Reproductive Health Care Services

Last week, President Biden signed an Executive Order Protecting Access to Reproductive Health Care Services. This Executive Order builds on the actions his Administration has already taken to defend reproductive rights by:

- Safeguarding access to reproductive health care services, including abortion and contraception;
- Protecting the privacy of patients and their access to accurate information;
- Promoting the safety and security of patients, providers, and clinics; and
- Coordinating the implementation of Federal efforts to protect reproductive rights and access to health care.

Calling for the Establishment of Abortion Rights into Federal Law

President Biden continues to call on Congress to codify the right to abortion into federal law. On June 30th, 2022, the President made clear he would support an exception to the filibuster in order to codify a woman's right to choose into law. This week, the White House released Statements of Administration Policy on H.R. 8296 – Women's Health Protection Act of 2022 and H.R. 8297 – Ensuring Access to Abortion Act of 2022.



ICYMI: Administration Engagements and Convenings

Commemoration of the Passage of the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act

This week, the White House commemorated the passage of the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act. In his remarks, President Biden made clear that this law saves the lives of Americans and noted: "If we keep guns out of the hands of domestic abusers, we can save the lives of their partners, and we can also stop more mass shootings." Read the President's full Remarks here.

Fourth Convening of the Trilateral Working Group on Violence Against Women and Girls

This week, the United States hosted the fourth convening of the Trilateral Working Group on Violence Against Indigenous Women and Girls (TWG). The TWG is an initiative between the governments of the United States, Canada, and Mexico to reaffirm and advance our respective national and regional commitments to prevent and respond to gender-based violence impacting Indigenous peoples in North America through increased access to justice and services, with an intersectional, gender-responsive, human rights and culturally-responsive approach. See the full Readout here.

Vice President Harris in Florida

Yesterday, Vice President Harris traveled to Florida to meet with state legislators on reproductive rights.

Mayors on Reproductive Rights

Wednesday, White House Senior Officials met with mayors on reproductive rights – as seen in Axios.

Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Organizations

White House Officials convened a listening session on the impact that abortion bans and other restrictions have on survivors of sexual assault and/or domestic violence.

Upcoming: Vice President Harris in Pennsylvania

Tomorrow, Saturday, July 16 Vice President Harris will travel to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania to meet with state legislators and other leaders to discuss the fight to protect reproductive rights.

Statue actually requires that we have four representatives on the Council:

(d)the director of the Division of Child and Family Services or the director's designee;

(e)the director of the Division of Juvenile Justice Services or the director's designee;

It appears that the statute ((5)(a-g)) purposefully created the Advisory Council in a way that had a majority of the members with expertise in Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention. If we were to consolidate these four into just one, it would disrupt the make-up of the body and leave Superintendents and State School Board members without the full scope of subject matter experts statute tries to create.

I have added David and Heather to this thread to get their thoughts. It seems like Al's group has focused specifically on preventing maternal alcohol consumption. I'm not sure if that is the best fit as the aim of this Advisory Council is to help give input as the Program is taught to kids three different times:

- 4th or 5th grade
- 7th or 8th grade
- 9th or 10th grade

I'll let David and Heather chime in to see if Al or another staff from the "health prevention" side might be a best fit as the Executive Director's designee.

My preference would be for us to have one representative from DHHS. Do we know if this is a statutory requirement that DOH and DHS have a representative? If it's statutory, we need to let Marc Watterson (cc'd) know so that we can have the code changed to only specify the DHHS ED or designee. I don't think we need two representatives. Craig can represent the department as my designee. However, if the code requires one from DOH and one from DHS, Craig can serve as well as Al.

Since this overlaps with the Healthcare Administration Section, I cc'd Nate.

Please let me know what we find out and how I can support. I think someone needs to get in touch with USBE as soon as possible to let them know that we are comfortable with Craig serving while we try to sort out the legal requirements.

Hi Brook -

I am reaching out to you for help because we have been attempting to contact someone from DOH to be a part of the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council as described in 53G-10-406(5). The statute requires USBE to include "the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee" as a part of the council. I am wondering if you can help us identify who at DHHS may be able to fulfill this requirement for us and help us contact them.

By way of background and context, the Botvin LifeSkills Training program was selected as the approved Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention program, and since that five-year contract will end June 30, 2023, the Utah State Board of Education is getting ready to put out another Request for Proposals (RFP). In preparation for the RFP process, we would like to bring the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council together this summer so we can gather their input for the RFP.

USBE's Substance Use Prevention Specialist, Clarissa Stebbing (who is cc'd on this email), has reached out several times to different people in DOH trying to contact someone to fulfill this requirement and has not received any responses. She is trying to get the council put together so that she can get a summer meeting on the council members' schedules and move forward with the new RFP. We would like to be able to identify who is going to be on the council by the end of the week, if possible.

We are also wondering, now that UDOH and DHS have merged, do you think we still need to have someone who was part of UDOH as a participant on the council or can Craig Povey (who has already agreed to participate) serve as the representative for both roles?

Feel free to contact us with any questions or forward this email to someone who may be more appropriate to help us with this. I am just not sure who else to reach out to at this point. I would generally reach out to the DHS Education Liaison, but I have heard that the person that was formerly in that position has since left. Thanks in advance for any help you can provide.

MORNING CONSULT

Health

Essential health care industry news & intel to start your day.

JULY 17, 2022

BY MATT BRACKEN

Twitter Email

[redacted]

Good morning to you, health readers. It was a busy week on Capitol Hill, as Senate Democrats resumed their rush to negotiate an economic spending package ahead of the August recess (more on that below). One item that appears to be a safe bet for said package: allowing Medicare to negotiate some prescription drug prices. What share of voters said they support that measure?

A: 47%
B: 53%
C: 64%
D: 76%

You can find the answer at the bottom of the newsletter.

WHAT'S AHEAD

Senate Democrats are moving forward with their extremely slimmed-down reconciliation bill after President Joe Biden urged them to accept Sen. Joe Manchin's demands for a limited measure to provide a two-year extension of subsidies for Affordable Care Act plans and grant Medicare the power to negotiate lower prescription drug prices for seniors. The conservative Democrat from West Virginia spared those health priorities after telling Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.) that he wouldn't back climate change provisions or tax hikes on the wealthy or corporations before he sees the inflation report for July.

The Hill's Future of Health Care Summit on Tuesday features a who's who of current and former federal health officials and industry leaders. Among those scheduled to speak are National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases Director Anthony Fauci, Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services Administrator Chiquita Brooks-LaSure, former Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Stephen Hahn, former CMS Administrator Mark McClellan and Dr. Atul Gawande, assistant administrator for USAID's Bureau for Global Health, among others. The policymakers and health experts will cover myriad health topics, ranging from pandemic preparedness to technology and care delivery.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Ron Wyden (D-Ore.) will join Stat News on Wednesday at 1 p.m. for a discussion on drug pricing and whether this is Democrats' last chance for reform. There should be plenty of ground for Wyden to cover after last week.

Three health-related hearings on the Hill to watch this week: The House Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Crisis will address long COVID and its consequences on Tuesday at 10 a.m.; the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations will hold a hearing on Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. on the impact of the Supreme Court's decision to overturn Roe v. Wade; and FDA Commissioner Dr. Robert Califf and three agency officials will testify about food and safety before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee on Wednesday at 10:10 a.m.

Earnings season is heating up again. On Wednesday, the insurer formerly known as Anthem Inc. will report its second-quarter earnings under its new Elevance Health Inc. corporate rebrand. Abbott Laboratories, fresh off the reopening of the troubled Michigan plant where it makes EleCare baby formula, is also scheduled to report Wednesday. Quest Diagnostics Inc. and Tenet Healthcare Corp. are among those on the docket for Thursday.

WEEK IN REVIEW

COVID-19 vaccines: The Biden administration is eyeing a second round of COVID-19 booster shots for all adults, a plan that has the support of Fauci and Dr. Ashish Jha, the White House's coronavirus coordinator, according to five officials familiar with the discussions, though the move would still require formal approval from regulators and public health officials.

The FDA authorized Novavax Inc.'s two-dose COVID-19 shot for emergency use for adults, putting Americans one step away from a fourth vaccine option. Novavax, whose COVID-19 vaccine is the first in the United States that uses traditional protein-based technology as opposed to mRNA, now awaits CDC clearance. Earlier in the week, the administration said it would buy 3.2 billion doses of Novavax's vaccine.

Abortion battles continue: White House officials are said to be continuing discussions on whether to declare abortion access a public health emergency, with several top Biden aides expressing reservations over the lack of fresh funding and powers that would result from the move, a White House official and two people familiar with the talks said. In a 219-210 vote Friday, the House passed a bill to protect abortion access, though the legislation has no chance of advancing in the Senate.

Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra said federal law supersedes state abortion bans when emergency care for the mother is necessary, adding that the federal government can levy penalties on providers or institutions that refuse to perform abortions as needed in the case of medical emergencies such as ectopic pregnancies or miscarriages.

Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton filed a lawsuit against the Biden administration over the HHS guidance, claiming that it "forces hospitals and doctors to commit crimes and risk their licensure under Texas law." The White House said in a statement that Paxton's move amounts to "yet another example of an extreme and radical Republican elected official."

The Department of Justice announced the creation of a Reproductive Rights Task Force, an initiative tied to Biden's executive order on abortion that will focus on ways to protect reproductive rights.

HHS sent guidance to more than 60,000 retail pharmacies, warning that refusal to fill orders for contraception or medication abortion, or discriminating

TRUMP AGENDA

DANIELA ALTIMARI | Recent polls suggest former President Donald Trump is losing support among Republican voters. But his appeal remains strong with conservative candidates running for governor this year. Republicans from Arizona to Wisconsin have sought Trump's support, embraced his platform and even borrowed his campaign rhetoric. But will it work?

TOP STORIES

- National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases Director Anthony Fauci said he'll retire from the administration by 2025, noting that if he stepped down as President Joe Biden's chief medical adviser "when we don't have Covid anymore, then I will be 105." Fauci also expressed some uncertainty over how a regular cadence of COVID-19 booster shots might look, but said he thinks that "over the next cycle or so, we'll be getting towards a once a year boost, like flu." (Politico)

- The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services proposed a 2.7% boost to outpatient hospital payment rates for next year in addition to an enhanced payment for facilities that purchase N95 masks that are manufactured in the United States. CMS Administrator Chiquita Brooks-LaSure said the proposed rules, which also include modifications to payment policies for rural hospitals and the 340B drug pricing program, would "expand access to care options in rural communities and permanently allow behavioral health services to be provided to people in their homes." (Fierce Healthcare)

- GSK PLC completed the spinoff of Haleon PLC, a stand-alone consumer health care business that features products ranging from toothpaste and mouthwash to over-the-counter drugs such as Advil. GSK has said that the move will make it possible for the pharma giant to focus more on the development of new medicines and explore more deals. (The Wall Street Journal)

- A Stat News analysis of hundreds of financial filings found that chief executives of roughly 300 health care companies earned more than $4.5 billion in 2021 altogether, often boosted by soaring stock holdings, and more than 100 of those CEOs pulled in at least eight figures last year. CORONAVIRUS

New COVID Vaccines Will be Ready This Fall. America Won't Be.

Katherine J. Wu, The Atlantic

Not so long ago, America's next COVID fall looked almost tidy. Sure, cases might rise as the weather chills and dries, and people flock indoors. But Pfizer and Moderna were already cooking up America's very first retooled COVID vaccines, better matched to Omicron and its offshoots, and a new inoculation campaign was brewing. Instead of needing to dose up three, four, even five times within short order, perhaps Americans could get just one COVID shot each year, matched roughly to the season's circulating strains.

White House COVID-19 coordinator says virus 'still evolving rapidly'

Julia Mueller, The Hill

As variants continue to circulate and develop, White House COVID-19 response coordinator Ashish Jha says the U.S. has "got to stay on top of this virus" as it quickly evolves.

Covid Rises Across U.S. Amid Muted Warnings and Murky Data

Julie Bosman et al., The New York Times

BA.5, a highly transmissible variant, is dominating a surge of new infections. Many health officials say the wave is cause for caution, not alarm.

BA.5 spurs new calls to fund next-generation COVID-19 vaccines

Peter Sullivan, The Hill

The rise of the BA.5 variant is spurring new calls for funding for an Operation Warp Speed 2.0 to accelerate development of next-generation COVID-19 vaccines that can better target new variants.

HHS renews COVID-19 public health emergency another three months

Robert King, Fierce Healthcare

HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra announced on Friday that the emergency, first issued in January 2020, will be extended again for another 90 days.

COVID reinfection has a silver lining—one that may help tame the pandemic

Erin Prater, Fortune

It's the summer of reinfection, with the likelihood of getting COVID yet again higher than ever, thanks to an ultra-transmissible, immune-evading subvariant. Those variants have mutated what should have been a light, breezy summer to be enjoyed into yet another heavy season to be endured—with few opportunities for reprieve, even outdoors.

Kids' coronavirus vaccines are hard to find in Fla. Many blame DeSantis.

Lori Rozsa, The Washington Post

When coronavirus vaccines for infants and young children were authorized for the first time last month, Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis warned parents against the "baby jabs," saying regulators had done insufficient testing and trials.

Largest Study to Date Shows How Covid Vaccines Affect Periods

Knvul Sheikh, The New York Times

Nearly half of the participants of a recent study who were menstruating regularly at the time of the survey reported heavier bleeding during their periods after receiving the Covid-19 vaccine. Others who did not typically menstruate — including transgender men, people on long-acting contraceptives, and post-menopausal women — also experienced unusual bleeding.

GENERAL

Anti-abortion memo to Republicans: Don't leave it to the states

Alexi McCammond, Axios

A leading anti-abortion rights group is urging Republicans in Congress to stay away from phrases like "nationwide ban" and make clear they won't criminalize pregnant people's own actions.

Abortion laws spark profound changes in other medical care

Lindsey Tanner, The Associated Press

A sexual assault survivor chooses sterilization so that if she is ever attacked again, she won't be forced to give birth to a rapist's baby. An obstetrician delays inducing a miscarriage until a woman with severe pregnancy complications seems "sick enough." A lupus patient must stop taking medication that controls her illness because it can also cause miscarriages.

Confusion post-Roe spurs delays, denials for some lifesaving pregnancy care

Frances Stead Sellers and Fenit Nirappil, The Washington Post

A woman with a life-threatening ectopic pregnancy sought emergency care at the University of Michigan Hospital after a doctor in her home state worried that the presence of a fetal heartbeat meant treating her might run afoul of new restrictions on abortion.

After New Abortion Laws, Some Patients Have Trouble Obtaining Miscarriage Treatment

Pam Belluck, The New York Times

Surgical procedures and medication for miscarriages are identical to those for abortion, and some patients report delayed or denied miscarriage care because doctors and pharmacists fear running afoul of abortion bans.

Abortion foes move to block online ads for reproductive services

Ruth Reader, Politico

The National Right to Life Committee is lobbying states to enact legislation it's drafted that would make it a crime to advertise information about abortion pills or other methods of ending a pregnancy. The model bill treats abortion like organized crime, by using a combination of civil and criminal penalties in the same way that the 1970 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act does. The scope is broad and suggests penalizing anyone who even conveys information about the procedure. State lawmakers in Indiana and South Carolina have already shown interest.

Abortion-Pill Orders Increase, Even In Restrictive States

Brianna Abbott and Juan Montes, The Wall Street Journal

U.S. companies that prescribe abortion pills after telehealth consultations are expanding, but only in states that allow the practice, after the Supreme Court last month removed constitutional protections for abortion. Nonprofits based abroad, meanwhile, are mailing more pills to women across the U.S., including patients in states that have banned or restricted medication abortion.

Conservative Blocs Unleash Litigation to Curb Public Health Powers

Lauren Weber and Anna Maria Barry-Jester, Kaiser Health News

Through a wave of pandemic-related litigation, a trio of small but mighty conservative legal blocs has rolled back public health authority at the local, state, and federal levels, recasting America's future battles against infectious diseases.

Why aren't there hormone-free birth control pills? Roe puts spotlight on contraceptives

Caroline Hopkins, NBC News

The overturn of Roe v. Wade has put a spotlight on the availability of affordable, highly effective birth control in the U.S. Many younger women, however, don't want their mothers' contraceptives.

U.S. House passes bill to protect right to travel for abortion

Rose Horowitch, Reuters

The U.S. House of Representatives on Friday passed legislation to safeguard the right to travel across state lines to seek an abortion after several states banned the procedure in the wake of last month's Supreme Court ruling.

Democrats Plan House Vote on Contraceptive Access

Emily Wilkins et al., Bloomberg Law

The House will vote on creating a statutory right to contraception after the Supreme Court opinion overturning Roe v. Wade prompted concerns that legal cases that have guaranteed access could be reexamined.

CDC expects monkeypox cases will continue to climb through August

Alexander Tin, CBS News

Federal health officials are warning that they now expect that the number of monkeypox cases will continue to swell through at least August, as the Biden administration says it is changing the way it will ration out vaccines to combat the growing outbreak.

As Fauci warns monkeypox needs to be taken more seriously, former FDA commissioner says the window to control it 'probably has closed'

Carma Hassan et al., CNN

Former US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) Commissioner Dr. Scott Gottlieb warned it may be too late to control and contain the virus. "I think the window for getting control of this and containing it probably has closed. If it hasn't closed, it's certainly starting to close," Gottlieb told CBS' Margaret Brennan Sunday on "Face the Nation."

For Monkeypox Patients, Excruciating Symptoms and a Struggle for Care

Sharon Otterman, The New York Times

As the city and federal government strain to supply enough vaccines, patients face a private battle to find treatment and relief from serious symptoms.

Bombshell alcohol study funded by Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation finds only risks, zero benefits for young adults

Chloe Taylor, Fortune

People under the age of 40 start risking their health if they consume any more than two teaspoons of wine or two and a half tablespoons of beer per day, a new study suggests.

UnitedHealth Group says Medicare Advantage saves money, but the data say otherwise

Bob Herman, Stat News

This past June, UnitedHealth Group's top two executives, Andrew Witty and John Rex, told a crowd at an investor conference that Medicare Advantage — the booming government program that outsources Medicare coverage to health insurance companies — saves the federal government money. But Witty's and Rex's claims don't hold water.

Most health insurers have released their rates. Now, experts detail what they are doing with the data

Robert King, Fierce Healthcare

Major health insurers have released massive reams of data detailing their in- and out-of-network rates to comply with a new rule. Now, experts are sifting through those data to identify trends that could affect contract negotiations with providers.

Clinical Labs Win Challenge to Medicare Reimbursement Rule

Christopher Brown, Bloomberg Law

An HHS rule used to calculate Medicare reimbursements for clinical laboratories was flawed because it exempted most hospital labs from data-reporting requirements, creating the risk that reimbursement levels were too low, a federal appeals court said Friday.

Biden's FTC Has Blocked 4 Hospital Mergers and Is Poised to Thwart More Consolidation Attempts

Harris Meyer, Kaiser Health News

Fresh off the Federal Trade Commission's successful challenges to four hospital mergers, the Biden administration's new majority on the commission is primed to more aggressively combat consolidation in the health care industry than it has in past years.

FTC Official: Antitrust Push in Health Care Must Focus on a Merger's 'Human Impact'

Harris Meyer, Kaiser Health News

President Joe Biden has ordered the Federal Trade Commission to combat consolidation in the health care industry, saying that it is driving up prices for consumers and limiting their access to care.

Hospital Chain Blocks Fertility Coverage for Its LGBT Employees

Shira Stein, Bloomberg Law

An Illinois-based Catholic hospital system that employs more than 24,000 people will only cover fertility treatment for workers in opposite-sex marriages, a policy some lawyers say could run afoul of federal discrimination laws.

HCA Healthcare, Cigna chiefs top the lists of best-paid CEOs among providers, insurers

Bob Herman, Stat News

Health insurers and providers often argue over payments at the negotiating table, but in the boardroom, top executives on each side continue to reap some of the largest pay of anyone in the industry.

Nurse Midwives Step Up to Provide Prenatal Care After Two Rural Hospitals Shutter Birthing Centers

Tony Leys, Kaiser Health News

The nurse midwife team's work includes crucial prenatal checkups. Most pregnant people are supposed to have a dozen or more such appointments before giving birth. Health care providers use the checkups to track how a pregnancy is progressing and to watch for signs of high blood pressure and other problems that can lead to premature births, stillbirths, or even maternal deaths. The midwives also advise women on how to keep themselves and their babies healthy after birth.

Tracy -

I am just reviewing this now.

Based on the statute and the DHHS organizational chart, I would recommend that we designate Craig Povey as your designee (since prevention is a part of the Office of Health Prevention & Promotion) and request that Brent Kelsey participate or designate someone from the Office of Substance Abuse & Mental Health (perhaps, Leah Coburn as Brook recommended). What I like about Brook's suggestion is it can help ensure a connection between prevention of substance use and treatment.

Just my immediate thoughts.

Statue actually requires that we have four representatives on the Council:

(d)the director of the Division of Child and Family Services or the director's designee;
(e)the director of the Division of Juvenile Justice Services or the director's designee;

It appears that the statute ((5)(a-g)) purposefully created the Advisory Council in a way that had a majority of the members with expertise in Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention. If we were to consolidate these four into just one, it would disrupt the make-up of the body and leave Superintendents and State School Board members without the full scope of subject matter experts statute tries to create.

I have added David and Heather to this thread to get their thoughts. It seems like Al's group has focused specifically on preventing maternal alcohol consumption. I'm not sure if that is the best fit as the aim of this Advisory Council is to help give input as the Program is taught to kids three different times:

- 4th or 5th grade
- 7th or 8th grade
- 9th or 10th grade

I'll let David and Heather chime in to see if Al or another staff from the "health prevention" side might be a best fit as the Executive Director's designee.

To: Brook Dorff <bdorff@utah.gov>

Cc: Stebbing, Clarissa <Clarissa.Stebbing@schools.utah.gov>

Hi Brook -

I am reaching out to you for help because we have been attempting to contact someone from DOH to be a part of the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council as described in 53G-10-406(5). The statute requires USBE to include "the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee" as a part of the council. I am wondering if you can help us identify who at DHHS may be able to fulfill this requirement for us and help us contact them.

By way of background and context, the Botvin LifeSkills Training program was selected as the approved Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention program, and since that five-year contract will end June 30, 2023, the Utah State Board of Education is getting ready to put out another Request for Proposals (RFP). In preparation for the RFP process, we would like to bring the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council together this summer so we can gather their input for the RFP.

USBE's Substance Use Prevention Specialist, Clarissa Stebbing (who is cc'd on this email), has reached out several times to different people in DOH trying to contact someone to fulfill this requirement and has not received any responses. She is trying to get the council put together so that she can get a summer meeting on the council members' schedules and move forward with the new RFP. We would like to be able to identify who is going to be on the council by the end of the week, if possible.

We are also wondering, now that UDOH and DHS have merged, do you think we still need to have someone who was part of UDOH as a participant on the council or can Craig Povey (who has already agreed to participate) serve as the representative for both roles?

I have added David and Heather to this thread to get their thoughts. It seems like Al's group has focused specifically on preventing maternal alcohol consumption. I'm not sure if that is the best fit as the aim of this Advisory Council is to help give input as the Program is taught to kids three different times:

- 4th or 5th grade
- 7th or 8th grade
- 9th or 10th grade

I'll let David and Heather chime in to see if Al or another staff from the "health prevention" side might be a best fit as the Executive Director's designee.

If it's statutory, we need to let Marc Watterson (cc'd) know so that we can have the code changed to only specify the DHHS ED or designee. I don't think we need two representatives. Craig can represent the department as my designee. However, if the code requires one from DOH and one from DHS, Craig can serve as well as Al.

I'm not sure if deputy directors wanted to attend, or if you wanted to keep it at the program level.

Hi Brook -

I am reaching out to you for help because we have been attempting to contact someone from DOH to be a part of the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council as described in 53G-10-406(5). The statute requires USBE to include "the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee" as a part of the council. I am wondering if you can help us identify who at DHHS may be able to fulfill this requirement for us and help us contact them.

By way of background and context, the Botvin LifeSkills Training program was selected as the approved Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention program, and since that five-year contract will end June 30, 2023, the Utah State Board of Education is getting ready to put out another Request for Proposals (RFP). In preparation for the RFP process, we would like to bring the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council together this summer so we can gather their input for the RFP.

[redacted]

USBE's Substance Use Prevention Specialist, Clarissa Stebbing (who is cc'd on this email), has reached out several times to different people in DOH trying to contact someone to fulfill this requirement and has not received any responses. She is trying to get the council put together so that she can get a summer meeting on the council members' schedules and move forward with the new RFP. We would like to be able to identify who is going to be on the council by the end of the week, if possible.

We are also wondering, now that UDOH and DHS have merged, do you think we still need to have someone who was part of UDOH as a participant on the council or can Craig Povey (who has already agreed to participate) serve as the representative for both roles?

Feel free to contact us with any questions or forward this email to someone who may be more appropriate to help us with this. I am just not sure who else to reach out to at this point. I would generally reach out to the DHS Education Liaison, but I have heard that the person that was formerly in that position has since left. Thanks in advance for any help you can provide.

FRAC Commends USDA for Efforts to Strengthen WIC and Address National Formula Shortage

Statement attributable to Luis Guardia, president, Food Research & Action Center (FRAC)

WASHINGTON, July 18, 2022 — Food Research & Action Center (FRAC) commends the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) for its latest announcement to strengthen the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) by testing and launching online shopping for infant formula for WIC participants, requiring strong state disaster plans, and allowing for infant formula contract transparency and bidding flexibilities.

This news comes as WIC participants, who purchase nearly half of infant formula, face ongoing challenges when accessing infant formula. WIC participants have been at a disadvantage during the infant formula shortage due to their inability to redeem their WIC formula benefits online. USDA's new rule will make WIC more equitable for households with low incomes.

USDA plans to make the procurement bidding process more transparent. USDA will also require WIC state agencies to include a provision in future infant formula rebate contracts to include remedies in the event of an infant formula recall to ensure WIC participants can continue to access formula during a crisis.

For years, FRAC has called on USDA to make WIC available online to ensure households with low incomes have equitable access to the nutritious foods they need. WIC directly supports individuals who are low-income and pregnant, postpartum, or breastfeeding, or have infants and children up to 5 years old, and these investments will go a long way in making sure that millions of women, infants, and children can access nutritious foods.

USDA will now require states to submit a disaster plan to remain prepared for future supply chain disruptions and preserve access to WIC food benefits, including infant formula, nutrition and breastfeeding support, and referrals. FRAC believes access to services when a disaster strikes, such as public health emergencies, hurricanes, floods, wildfires, earthquakes, and tornados, is critical for existing recipients, as well as outreach to potential newly eligible individuals in the event of an emergency.

All of these necessary adjustments will ensure families have the purchasing power to provide their infants and children with the nutrients necessary for early development.

FRAC applauds Secretary Vilsack for his ongoing commitment to supporting federal nutrition programs and looks forward to working with USDA as it leverages the power of this program to improve food equity.

My preference would be for us to have one representative from DHHS. Do we know if this is a statutory requirement that DOH and DHS have a representative? If it's statutory, we need to let Marc Watterson (cc'd) know so that we can have the code changed to only specify the DHHS ED or designee. I don't think we need two representatives. Craig can represent the department as my designee. However, if the code requires one from DOH and one from DHS, Craig can serve as well as Al.

Since this overlaps with the Healthcare Administration Section, I cc'd Nate.

Please let me know what we find out and how I can support. I think someone needs to get in touch with USBE as soon as possible to let them know that we are comfortable with Craig serving while we try to sort out the legal requirements.

Hi Brook -

I am reaching out to you for help because we have been attempting to contact someone from DOH to be a part of the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council as described in 53G-10-406(5). The statute requires USBE to include "the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee" as a part of the council. I am wondering if you can help us identify who at DHHS may be able to fulfill this requirement for us and help us contact them.

By way of background and context, the Botvin LifeSkills Training program was selected as the approved Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention program, and since that five-year contract will end June 30, 2023, the Utah State Board of Education is getting ready to put out another Request for Proposals (RFP). In preparation for the RFP process, we would like to bring the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council together this summer so we can gather their input for the RFP.

USBE's Substance Use Prevention Specialist, Clarissa Stebbing (who is cc'd on this email), has reached out several times to different people in DOH trying to contact someone to fulfill this requirement and has not received any responses. She is trying to get the council put together so that she can get a summer meeting on the council members' schedules and move forward with the new RFP. We would like to be able to identify who is going to be on the council by the end of the week, if possible.

We are also wondering, now that UDOH and DHS have merged, do you think we still need to have someone who was part of UDOH as a participant on the council or can Craig Povey (who has already agreed to participate) serve as the representative for both roles?

Feel free to contact us with any questions or forward this email to someone who may be more appropriate to help us with this. I am just not sure who else to reach out to at this point. I would generally reach out to the DHS Education Liaison, but I have heard that the person that was formerly in that position has since left. Thanks in advance for any help you can provide.

I am just reviewing this now.

Based on the statute and the DHHS organizational chart, I would recommend that we designate Craig Povey as your designee (since prevention is a part of the Office of Health Prevention & Promotion) and request that Brent Kelsey participate or designate someone from the Office of Substance Abuse & Mental Health (perhaps, Leah Coburn as Brook recommended). What I like about Brook's suggestion is it can help ensure a connection between prevention of substance use and treatment.

Just my immediate thoughts.

Statue actually requires that we have four representatives on the Council:

(d)the director of the Division of Child and Family Services or the director's designee;

(e)the director of the Division of Juvenile Justice Services or the director's designee;

It appears that the statute ((5)(a-g)) purposefully created the Advisory Council in a way that had a majority of the members with expertise in Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention. If we were to consolidate these four into just one, it would disrupt the make-up of the body and leave Superintendents and State School Board members without the full scope of subject matter experts statute tries to create.

I have added David and Heather to this thread to get their thoughts. It seems like Al's group has focused specifically on preventing maternal alcohol consumption. I'm not sure if that is the best fit as the aim of this Advisory Council is to help give input as the Program is taught to kids three different times:

- 4th or 5th grade
- 7th or 8th grade
- 9th or 10th grade

I'll let David and Heather chime in to see if Al or another staff from the "health prevention" side might be a best fit as the Executive Director's designee.

TOP STORIES

- Democratic leaders are reportedly pushing for the inclusion of fresh funding for COVID-19 tests, therapeutics and vaccines in the party's reconciliation bill to reduce prescription drug costs and extend Affordable Care Act subsidies for two years, though Sen. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.) hasn't indicated if he'd support including such funding. Democrats' drug pricing proposal is expected to be reviewed by the Senate parliamentarian on Thursday. (Punchbowl News)

[redacted]

- Independent advisers to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention will meet today to discuss Novavax Inc.'s protein-based COVID-19 vaccine. If the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices votes to endorse the vaccine's use, the final hurdle for Novavax to clear will be signoff from CDC Director Rochelle Walensky, with approval in these instances typically happening quickly. (The New York Times)

- In a letter, 181 House lawmakers called on the Department of Health and Human Services to penalize drugmakers that have lowered or completely eliminated price breaks through the federal 340B Drug Discount program, saying "vulnerable communities, federal grantees, and safety net health care providers are deprived of resources Congress intended to provide." At this point, 18 top drug companies have cut discounts or limited the number of contract pharmacies that are allowed to distribute their products, and several have already been warned by HHS' inspector general that penalties could be levied if discounts aren't reinstated. (Stat News)

- Johnson & Johnson's net earnings fell to $4.81 billion in the second quarter, down from $6.28 billion a year ago, though total sales climbed 3% to $24.02 billion, with $544 million coming from its COVID-19 vaccine. J&J exceeded second-quarter profit estimates based on the strength of its pharmaceuticals unit, particularly in sales of cancer drug Darzalex and Crohn's disease drug Stelara. (Reuters)

CORONAVIRUS

With a sniff or a swallow, new vaccines aim to put the brakes on Covid-19 spread

Brenda Goodman, CNN

Injected vaccines against the coronavirus that causes Covid-19 have been hugely successful, saving nearly 20 million lives globally in their first year of use and slashing the pandemic's death toll by an estimated 63%, according to a recent study. Yet good as these shots are, they have not stopped the virus from spreading from person to person.

Officials fret over highly infectious BA.5 as national COVID-19 hospitalizations tick upward

Dave Muoio, Fierce Healthcare

U.S. hospitals have seen a steady uptick in COVID-19 during the past few weeks as public health leaders warn of the now-predominant BA.5 omicron lineage and the need for continued booster vaccination.

Nasal vaccines may stop Covid infections. Will we get them soon?

Berkeley Lovelace Jr., NBC News

Research on nasal vaccines is mostly in its early phases in the U.S., though many scientists believe this twist on vaccination could prove to be an effective way to block infections.

CDC stops reporting coronavirus cases on cruise ships

Amanda Finnegan and Gabe Hiatt, The Washington Post

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has stopped reporting coronavirus levels for cruise ships in U.S. waters, ending a pandemic-era program that allowed the public to monitor the spread of the virus at sea.

GENERAL

The politics of passing a major FDA funding bill just got complicated

Nicholas Florko, Stat News

For the last six months, Congress seemed to be sailing towards the uncharacteristically smooth passage of a massive, multi-billion dollar bill to fund the Food and Drug Administration. That all changed late last week when one powerful lawmaker, Sen. Richard Burr (R-N.C.), came out in opposition to the so-called user fee reauthorization bill he helped craft — and supported throughout the committee process.

Walensky pushes back on Gottlieb's criticism of CDC monkeypox response

Katherine Dillinger, CNN

Former US Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Dr. Scott Gottlieb's interview in which he criticized the federal response to the ongoing monkeypox outbreak was "misinformed and off base," says Dr. Rochelle Walensky, director of the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Data breach at debt collector affects almost 2M healthcare patients

Rebecca Pifer, Healthcare Dive

A ransomware attack that hit a debt collections agency in February potentially exposed the data of almost 2 million patients, according to an update on HHS' breach reporting portal.

As Demand for Medication Abortion Increases, Facebook Allows Ads for Potentially Dangerous "Abortion Reversal" Procedure

Lauren Kirchner et al., The Markup

The Markup has found that Facebook is serving up ads and posts for the so-called "abortion pill reversal" procedure, a medically unapproved and potentially dangerous process that the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists says is "not based on science."

Supreme Court lets Indiana's parental consent abortion law take effect

Oriana Gonzalez, Axios

The Supreme Court issued an order on Monday letting Indiana officials enforce a law requiring a minor to have parental consent to get an abortion.

Idaho GOP rejects platform change allowing abortion to save person's life

Brad Dress, The Hill

Idaho's Republican Party adopted language to their platform that supports the criminalization of abortion in all cases, rejecting an amendment that would have supported allowing a person to get an abortion to save their life.

West Virginia Abortions May Go On, With 150-Year-Old Law Blocked

Jennifer Kay, Bloomberg Law

A county judge said Monday that she would block West Virginia from enforcing a 150-year-old law criminalizing abortions, according to attorneys fighting in state court in the wake of the US Supreme Court's decision to overturn Roe v. Wade.

NIH Privacy Certificates Shield Reproductive Research Post-Roe

Jeannie Baumann, Bloomberg Law

Reproductive health researchers shouldn't have to turn over their data to law enforcement in states with post-Roe abortion bans thanks to a federal statute—although legal experts caution it's an added layer of protection and not a guarantee.

D.C. leads the nation in monkeypox cases per capita

Jenna Portnoy, The Washington Post

D.C. has more cases of monkeypox per capita than any state, prompting public health officials to launch an aggressive vaccination campaign aimed at blanketing the most at-risk communities.

Women denied abortion rarely choose adoption. That's unlikely to change.

Sydney Trent, The Washington Post

Experts say there are powerful reasons why the 1 million-plus waiting list to adopt a U.S. infant will not shrink much, despite the end of Roe v. Wade.

Regular coffee drinkers had lower chance of dying in 7-year period

Linda Searing, The Washington Post

People who drink a moderate amount of coffee — up to 3½ cups a day — might have a better chance at a longer life span, even if their coffee is lightly sweetened with sugar, according to research published in Annals of Internal Medicine.

A deadly virus was just identified in Ghana: What to know about Marburg

Adela Suliman, The Washington Post

After the coronavirus pandemic and the rise of monkeypox cases, news of another virus can trigger nerves globally. The highly infectious Marburg virus has been reported in the West African country of Ghana this week, according to the World Health Organization.

GE reveals new company names as it approaches historic split

Jack Stebbins, CNBC

GE HealthCare will encompass the company's health-services branch and will be listed on the Nasdaq Stock Market under the symbol "GEHC," the company said in a release. That spinoff is expected to be completed early next year.

3M Earplugs Fight Stems From Self-Made Legal Battle

Austen Hufford, The Wall Street Journal

A long-running legal battle over allegedly defective earplugs made by 3M Co. arose after the company initiated a separate dispute against a smaller competitor, court documents showed.

What Pregnancy and Childbirth Do to the Bodies of Young Girls

Stephanie Nolen, The New York Times

An Ohio 10-year-old's recent abortion has generated fierce debate. Doctors in countries where pregnancy is common in adolescents say the toll of childbirth on young bodies is brutal.

Some Students Want Colleges to Provide the Abortion Pill. Schools Are Resisting.

Anemona Hartocollis and Stephanie Saul, The New York Times

Many colleges pride themselves on providing a range of sexual and reproductive health services for their students, including birth control, screenings for sexually transmitted diseases and even insurance coverage to terminate a pregnancy. What they do not tend to provide is abortion, either by pill or through a procedure. For that, they refer students to other clinics or doctors' offices.

Centene completes sale of PANTHERx subsidiary

Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare

Centene has completed its divestiture of one of its pharmacy subsidiaries, the company said. The insurer announced in May that it will sell off PANTHERx to the Vistria Group, General Atlantic and Nautic Partners.

New Jersey's Disputed $34 Million Insurance Program Failed to Stem Rising Health Costs

John Tozzi, Bloomberg

Last year, New Jersey officials in charge of the state employee health plan sought a major refund from their insurer for failing to deliver on a money-saving program, but their complaint stalled. Now outside consultants confirm the program yielded no apparent savings, one reason New Jersey's health-care expenses are rising.

Why Does Disability Increase During Recessions? Evidence from Medicare

Colleen Carey et al., National Bureau of Economic Research

Social Security Disability Insurance (DI) awards rise in recessions and fall in expansions, especially for older adults. Using Medicare administrative data for DI entrants between 1991 and 2015, we provide new evidence on the health of DI recipients who enter at different ages and points in the business cycle. We find that each percentage point increase in unemployment at the time of application corresponds to 4.2% more awards and 0.4% lower Medicare spending among new entrants.

It appears that the statute ((5)(a-g)) purposefully created the Advisory Council in a way that had a majority of the members with expertise in Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention. If we were to consolidate these four into just one, it would disrupt the make-up of the body and leave Superintendents and State School Board members without the full scope of subject matter experts statute tries to create.

I have added David and Heather to this thread to get their thoughts. It seems like Al's group has focused specifically on preventing maternal alcohol consumption. I'm not sure if that is the best fit as the aim of this Advisory Council is to help give input as the Program is taught to kids three different times:

My preference would be for us to have one representative from DHHS. Do we know if this is a statutory requirement that DOH and DHS have a representative? If it's statutory, we need to let Marc Watterson (cc'd) know so that we can have the code changed to only specify the DHHS ED or designee. I don't think we need two representatives. Craig can represent the department as my designee. However, if the code requires one from DOH and one from DHS, Craig can serve as well as Al.

Since this overlaps with the Healthcare Administration Section, I cc'd Nate.

Please let me know what we find out and how I can support. I think someone needs to get in touch with USBE as soon as possible to let them know that we are comfortable with Craig serving while we try to sort out the legal requirements.

Hi Brook -

I am reaching out to you for help because we have been attempting to contact someone from DOH to be a part of the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council as described in 53G-10-406(5). The statute requires USBE to include "the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee" as a part of the council. I am wondering if you can help us identify who at DHHS may be able to fulfill this requirement for us and help us contact them.

By way of background and context, the Botvin LifeSkills Training program was selected as the approved Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention program, and since that five-year contract will end June 30, 2023, the Utah State Board of Education is getting ready to put out another Request for Proposals (RFP). In preparation for the RFP process, we would like to bring the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council together this summer so we can gather their input for the RFP.

USBE's Substance Use Prevention Specialist, Clarissa Stebbing (who is cc'd on this email), has reached out several times to different people in DOH trying to contact someone to fulfill this requirement and has not received any responses. She is trying to get the council put together so that she can get a summer meeting on the council members' schedules and move forward with the new RFP. We would like to be able to identify who is going to be on the council by the end of the week, if possible.

We are also wondering, now that UDOH and DHS have merged, do you think we still need to have someone who was part of UDOH as a participant on the council or can Craig Povey (who has already agreed to participate) serve as the representative for both roles?

Feel free to contact us with any questions or forward this email to someone who may be more appropriate to help us with this. I am just not sure who else to reach out to at this point. I would generally reach out to the DHS Education Liaison, but I have heard that the person that was formerly in that position has since left. Thanks in advance for any help you can provide.

Looking back at the original email request from USBE, it looks like they were looking to get the name/contact info specifically for the individual listed as the "DOH Director or Designee". It sounds like that person is going to be Craig PoVey.

I would assume since USBE only inquired about that one position that they already have others identified to fill the other three roles from DHHS? Jenny, I think you are good to go with reaching out to USBE and letting them know that Craig PoVey will be the DOH designee.

(b)the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee; (Craig PoVey)

I would assume since USBE only inquired about that one position that they already have others identified to fill the other three roles from DHHS? Jenny, I think you are good to go with reaching out to USBE and letting them know that Craig PoVey will be the DOH designee.

Statue actually requires that we have four representatives on the Council:

(e)the director of the Division of Juvenile Justice Services or the director's designee;

It appears that the statute ((5)(a-g)) purposefully created the Advisory Council in a way that had a majority of the members with expertise in Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention. If we were to consolidate these four into just one, it would disrupt the make-up of the body and leave Superintendents and State School Board members without the full scope of subject matter experts statute tries to create.

I have added David and Heather to this thread to get their thoughts. It seems like Al's group has focused specifically on preventing maternal alcohol consumption. I'm not sure if that is the best fit as the aim of this Advisory Council is to help give input as the Program is taught to kids three different times:

- 4th or 5th grade
- 7th or 8th grade
- 9th or 10th grade

I'll let David and Heather chime in to see if Al or another staff from the "health prevention" side might be a best fit as the Executive Director's designee.

Subject: Underage Drinking Advisory Council

To: Brook Dorff <bdorff@utah.gov>

Cc: Stebbing, Clarissa <Clarissa.Stebbing@schools.utah.gov>

Hi Brook -

I am reaching out to you for help because we have been attempting to contact someone from DOH to be a part of the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council as described in 53G-10-406(5). The statute requires USBE to include "the executive director of the Department of Health or the executive director's designee" as a part of the council. I am wondering if you can help us identify who at DHHS may be able to fulfill this requirement for us and help us contact them.

By way of background and context, the Botvin LifeSkills Training program was selected as the approved Underage Drinking and Substance Abuse Prevention program, and since that five-year contract will end June 30, 2023, the Utah State Board of Education is getting ready to put out another Request for Proposals (RFP). In preparation for the RFP process, we would like to bring the Underage Drinking Prevention Program Advisory Council together this summer so we can gather their input for the RFP.

USBE's Substance Use Prevention Specialist, Clarissa Stebbing (who is cc'd on this email), has reached out several times to different people in DOH trying to contact someone to fulfill this requirement and has not received any responses. She is trying to get the council put together so that she can get a summer meeting on the council members' schedules and move forward with the new RFP. We would like to be able to identify who is going to be on the council by the end of the week, if possible.

We are also wondering, now that UDOH and DHS have merged, do you think we still need to have someone who was part of UDOH as a participant on the council or can Craig Povey (who has already agreed to participate) serve as the representative for both roles?

[redacted]

Feel free to contact us with any questions or forward this email to someone who may be more appropriate to help us with this. I am just not sure who else to reach out to at this point. I would generally reach out to the DHS Education Liaison, but I have heard that the person that was formerly in that position has since left. Thanks in advance for any help you can provide.

Majority of Voters Back ACA Subsidies, View Extension as Important

A renewal of Affordable Care Act subsidies survived Sen. Joe Manchin's trims from Democrats' reconciliation bill, with the conservative Democrat from West Virginia saying he'd back a two-year extension of the lowered premiums.

While Manchin's colleagues stew over his refusal to sign off on tax and climate provisions in the plan, they can take solace in the fact that ACA subsidies are broadly popular, per a new Morning Consult/Politico survey. Two in 3 voters support an extension of those subsidies and 7 in 10 said they view them as important to lower health care costs for plan participants.

Check out the full story here: Most Voters Back ACA Subsidy Extensions, Say They're Important to Lower Costs.

TOP STORIES

- Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Director Rochelle Walensky endorsed Novavax Inc.'s COVID-19 vaccine following a 12-0 vote recommending the traditional protein-based shot by the agency's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices. Novavax's vaccine will hit the market in the coming weeks, the CDC said, giving U.S. adults a fourth option and the first COVID-19 shot that does not use mRNA technology. (CNN)

- The White House is considering a limited public health directive intended to protect nationwide access to abortion medication, according to three people familiar with the discussions, a move that would rely on Public Readiness and Emergency

Preparedness Act powers. Following the Supreme Court's Roe v. Wade reversal, Democratic lawmakers and reproductive rights groups have urged the White House to utilize PREP Act authority, which would safeguard physicians, pharmacies and others from liability for providing abortion pills to people throughout the United States, even to those living in states with bans or major restrictions on the procedure. (Politico)

- The rate of fatal drug overdoses jumped 30% from 2019 to 2020, with fentanyl fueling what the CDC said is the largest year-over-year increase in U.S. history. The agency's report, which included data from 25 states and Washington, D.C., found that overdose death rates among Black Americans and Indigenous populations saw especially sharp increases, at 44% and 39%, respectively. (NBC News)

- Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Robert Califf said the nonprofit Reagan-Udall Foundation will team up with outside experts in a thorough review of the agency's food and tobacco programs, acknowledging that the FDA "has confronted a series of challenges that have tested our regulatory frameworks and stressed the agency's operations, prompting me to take a closer look at how we do business." The comments from Califf, who has ardently defended the agency in previous congressional hearings and public appearances, come after the nationwide baby formula shortage and controversies tied to the regulation of Juul Labs Inc. and other e-cigarette manufacturers. WHAT ELSE YOU NEED TO KNOW

Top House Democrats are sounding cool to stalled-out coronavirus aid being included in the party's slimmed-down health care bill.

Jordain Carney and Sarah Ferris, Politico

Majority Leader Steny Hoyer (D-Md.) and Appropriations Chair Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.) both tamped down the likelihood that the Covid-19 aid gets folded into the party line spending package. Asked about the chances that the two issues are merged, Hoyer told reporters that, "that's one alternative. I don't think it would be my alternative."

Gawande warns USAID COVID response quickly running out of money

Stephen Neukam, The Hill

The U.S. Agency for International Development's global coronavirus response will run out of money in the coming weeks without new funding from Congress, USAID Assistant Administrator for Global Health Atul Gawande warned on Tuesday.

Covid cases are skyrocketing again. States have no new plans.

Megan Messerly et al., Politico

As the latest and most transmissible Covid-19 variant has sent case numbers skyward, with hospitalizations and deaths also rising, the response from state officials has been largely muted, a concession to the reality that their messages rarely resonate and that most people — even, and sometimes especially, politicians — are ready to move on.

Covid-19 Complication Among Children Fades in Latest Wave of Virus

Denise Roland, The Wall Street Journal

A serious inflammatory complication that strikes some children in the weeks following a Covid-19 infection has almost disappeared. A buildup of immunity and changes to the virus both likely play a part, pediatric infectious-disease doctors and researchers said.

'None of us has a crystal ball': Scientists try to keep up with faster coronavirus evolution.

Adeel Hassan, The New York Times

The rapid evolution of the coronavirus into an alphabet soup of subvariants presents a vexing challenge to health officials: They must make far-reaching policy decisions based on little biological certainty of which viral variants will be dominant this fall or winter.

Omicron BA.5 makes up nearly 78% of COVID variants circulating in U.S. - CDC

Reuters

The BA.5 subvariant of Omicron was estimated to make up 77.9% of the circulating coronavirus variants in the United States for the week ended July 16, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) said on Tuesday.

As BA.5 Spreads, How Long Will a Prior Covid-19 Infection Protect You?

Sumathi Reddy, The Wall Street Journal

If you have had Covid-19, how long can you expect to be protected from another infection? Doctors say the window between infections might be shrinking, fueled in part by the immune-evading Omicron BA.5 subvariant, although researchers are still gathering data.

Fauci shrugs off talk of retirement from government after Biden's term ends

Robert King, Fierce Healthcare

Fauci said in an interview in Politico on Monday that he is leaving by the end of Biden's first term in 2025. However, Fauci elaborated on Tuesday during a session at The Hill's Health Summit that he may step down from his current position, most likely as the head adviser to Biden. "I don't know where the word retirement came in," Fauci said of the fallout from the interview. "I'm not going to retire. I may step down from my position at some time."

Partisan lines form over Dem drug price curbs, economic plan

Alan Fram, The Associated Press

Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell is warning that Democrats' plans to curb drug prices would insert "socialist price controls" between Americans and the treatments they need as partisan battle lines form over a shrunken economic package that President Joe Biden wants Congress to complete within weeks.

Post-Roe Medical Care Delays Worry Democratic Lawmakers

Maia Spoto, Bloomberg Law

Patients are facing long delays for miscarriage care, and medical professionals are deferring to hospital attorneys to make treatment calls, doctors and abortion advocates testified to members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee's oversight panel. Medical professionals are advised to wait until a patient's life is in danger before providing care in some cases, some said.

The 2021 rise in U.S. births is likely a baby blip, not a boom

Bill Chappell, NPR News

The gain was modest, with the National Center for Health Statistics announcing on Tuesday that the 1% rise in U.S. births in 2021 "was the first increase in births since 2014." But the agency added a caveat, noting that the U.S. birth rate fell to a record low in 2020, the first year of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Doctor who treated 10-year-old rape victim moves to sue state AG for defamation

Oriana Gonzalez, Axios

Caitlin Bernard, the OB-GYN who provided an abortion on a 10-year-old girl from Ohio who was raped, took the first legal step to sue Indiana's attorney general for defamation over his comments alleging medical misconduct.

Texas Officials Celebrated End of Abortion Rights After Cutting Back Postpartum Medicaid Extension

Lomi Kriel, ProPublica and The Texas Tribune

Gov. Greg Abbott claimed Texas provides expectant mothers "necessary resources so that they can choose life for their child," but it is now one of a dwindling number of states not to offer Medicaid coverage for a full year after residents give birth.

Another Likely Effect of the Roe Reversal: Higher Health-Care Costs

Sheelah Kolhatkar, The New Yorker

Abortion bans could lead to more high-risk pregnancies, which could raise the price of providing health care to women.

As diabetes during pregnancy grows more common, experts point to a need for preventive care

Edward Chen, Stat News

Gestational diabetes is on the rise, climbing 30% between 2016 and 2020, according to a new study published Tuesday by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Abortion pills are becoming more commonly used but won't be a post-Roe 'panacea'

Deidre McPhillips, CNN

Medication abortion has steadily grown in acceptance since it became an option about 20 years ago and is now used in more than half of abortions, outpacing the aspiration, or surgical, procedure for the first time in 2020, according to data from the Guttmacher Institute, a research group that supports abortion rights.

NYC monkeypox numbers are 'definitively' not the full picture, health official says

Naomi Thomas, CNN

New York City's monkeypox case numbers don't show the full picture of how bad the outbreak is, and demand for vaccines in the city is outstripping supply, city Health Commissioner Dr. Ashwin Vasan said Tuesday.

These docs have the highest starting salaries as demand for medical specialists rebounds

Heather Landi, Fierce Healthcare

Specialist physicians are in the strongest demand with rising in interest in hiring gastroenterologists, orthopedic surgeons, oncologists, pulmonologists, neurologists, and psychiatrists. Meanwhile, demand for primary care physicians such as family physicians and internists has declined, according to a new report from Merritt Hawkins, the physician search division of AMN Healthcare.

Nursing home staffing rule could cost $10B a year, AHCA says

Ginger Christ, Modern Healthcare

President Joe Biden's proposal to mandate staffing levels and nursing homes would require providers to hire 187,000 new nurses at a cost of up to $10 billion a year, and displace nearly 1 in 5 residents, according to a report the American Health Care Association released Tuesday.

Health reform may be making gender wage gaps worse for female docs

Tina Reed, Axios

It's no secret that gender pay disparities are a problem in medicine, but it turns out reforms to how we pay doctors — specifically in primary care — could make the problem worse.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Covid 'Viral Load' Is a Meaningless Distraction

Cathy O'Neil, Bloomberg

When a person is exposed to Covid, does quantity matter? The conventional wisdom has long been that French-kissing a highly contagious person in a bar will lead to a much worse case than inhaling a few bits of virus on a walk in the park. The higher the initial "viral load," the sicker you'll become. Actually, probably not. Judging from new research, the math doesn't work out.

Keep equity in mind when moving to value-based payment

Lora Council, Stat News

Value-based care champions health and justice by focusing on outcomes rather than on units of service. As this type of payment reform expands, implementing the necessary changes to enable it must operate from a frame of equity rather than equality.

RESEARCH REPORTS

Effects of Churn on Potentially Preventable Hospital Use

Medicaid and CHIP Payment and Access Commission

Many Medicaid and State Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) beneficiaries lose coverage and subsequently re-enroll in the program within a short period of time, a phenomenon often referred to as churn. Temporary or long-term gaps in coverage can hinder beneficiaries from accessing preventive care, other needed care and treatment, and prescription drugs that are necessary for managing and treating health conditions.

Transitions Between Medicaid, CHIP, and Exchange Coverage

Medicaid and CHIP Payment and Access Commission

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (ACA, P.L. 111-148, as amended) requires states to coordinate eligibility and enrollment processes between Medicaid, separate State Children's Health Insurance Programs (CHIP), and subsidized coverage on health insurance exchanges. These policies aim to reduce coverage gaps when a beneficiary experiences changes in income or other circumstances.

Healthy Meals, Healthy Kids Act Introduced in Congress Today

From the Food Research & Action Center (FRAC) and Representative Bobby Scott (D-VA)

[redacted]

The Healthy Meals, Healthy Kids Act was introduced in Congress today, Wednesday, July 20, by House Education and Labor Chairman Bobby Scott. The legislation represents the Committee's much-anticipated Child Nutrition Reauthorization bill, a comprehensive plan that will increase access to school meals, summer meals, and child care meals. FRAC lauded the bill's efforts to heed the calls of anti-hunger organizations from across the country to "address the rising rates of child hunger, support access to and participation in the federal child nutrition programs, and continue improving the nutritional quality of the meals served."

If passed, the Healthy Meals, Healthy Kids Act would:

- Expand access to school meals
- Preserve the future of school meal programs
- Modernize the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC)
- Address food insecurity during the summer
- Improve school meal capacity and sustainability
- Strengthen the Child and Adult Care Food Program (CACFP)

Over $1.5 Million Awarded by the Chicago Region Food System Fund to 48 Grantees

This week, the Chicago Region Food System Fund awarded $1.52 million to 48 grantees as part of its continuing efforts to bolster Chicago's local food system against systemic shocks like COVID-19 and ongoing economic upheaval. Many Consortium to Lower Obesity in Chicago (CLOCC) partners are among the funding recipients. This round of grants prioritizes projects that further cultivate existing community assets to aid in long-term food system transformation.

Funding in this round focuses on two areas: building on the resources and capacity of individual organizations, and on strengthening partnerships between organizations and institutions across size, geography, and type that implement community-led food initiatives. With the grants announced today, the total support granted by the Fund is $11,438,150 to 156 non-profit organizations.

CDOT Launches Program to Distribute 5,000 Free Bikes and Safety Equipment By 2026

Program open to Chicagoans age 14 and up

The Chicago Department of Transportation (CDOT) has announced the launch of Bike Chicago, a new program that will provide 5,000 free bikes, as well as maintenance and safety equipment, to Chicagoans by 2026. Supported by a $188 million investment in climate mitigation and environmental justice initiatives through the Chicago Recovery Plan, Bike Chicago will kick off this summer with at least 500 bikes distributed to age and income-eligible Chicagoans throughout the program's first year. Over the next four years, CDOT will gradually increase distribution until 5,000 free bikes have been provided, as part of Chicago's goal to increase affordable and climate friendly mobility options.

TOP STORIES

- The Biden administration will spin off the Department of Health and Human Services' Office of the Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response into an independent division charged with coordinating the U.S. pandemic response, according to seven people briefed on the matter, a move that comes as frustrations with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's handling of COVID-19 mount. The Administration of Strategic Preparedness and Response will be phased in over two years and led by Dawn O'Connell, who oversees the current ASPR operation as an assistant HHS secretary. (The Washington Post)

- The Department of Justice charged 36 people with health care fraud totaling $1.2 billion, with alleged wrongdoing including labs' payment of bribes for referrals from providers working with telehealth companies and a "burgeoning scheme" involving cardiovascular genetic testing. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, meanwhile, announced administrative actions against 52 providers, while HHS' watchdog said telehealth fraud efforts have resulted in at least $7 billion in fraud claims to the federal government. (Modern Healthcare)

- Senate Finance Chairman Ron Wyden (D-Ore.) said Democrats' plans to allow Medicare to negotiate drug prices and to fine drugmakers that hike prices at a faster pace than inflation "is a strong start" but "there's plenty more to do" after the party passes its reconciliation bill, including changes to how pharmacy benefit managers operate. Wyden also endorsed legislation from Sens. Jeanne Shaheen (D-N.H.) and Susan Collins (R-Maine) to lower insulin costs for certain consumers, calling for a Senate vote on the bill. (Stat News)

- Attorney General Merrick Garland said the federal government could sue states that have banned or limited abortion in the aftermath of the Supreme Court's overturning of Roe v. Wade, noting that it "could not be more straightforward" that hospitals "must provide the abortion" when the procedure is the "stabilizing treatment." Garland also said the DOJ will ask a judge to throw out a Texas lawsuit aiming to block HHS guidance requiring physicians to perform abortions in the cases of emergency. (The Wall Street Journal)

Laura Reiley, The Washington Post

The commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday that the agency is preparing for a shake-up of its food-safety program, four months after a nationwide shortage of baby formula drew attention to shortcomings in the program.

As heat waves kill thousands, Biden's office for climate health risks is broke

Josh Lederman, NBC News

As deadly heat waves bear down across the globe, the Biden administration is warning that its office for dealing with climate change's health impacts has no money.

U.S. abortion ruling will not affect overseas aid - diplomat

Reuters

Calling the decision "sobering" domestically, Loyce Pace, Assistant Secretary for Global Affairs at the U.S Department of Health, said it would not affect the country's position as the largest bilateral donor to family planning services globally.

Republicans Mull Birth Control Vote as Democrats Highlight Issue

Emily Wilkins, Bloomberg Law

House Republicans will be allowed to vote today to codify access to contraception if they want to as Democrats are poised to use votes against birth control access against the GOP in the midterms.

Senate Health chair says she's 'concerned' about U.S. monkeypox response

Joseph Choi, The Hill

Sen. Patty Murray (D-Wash.), chairwoman of the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions, said she is "concerned" by the state of the U.S. monkeypox response in a letter to Health and Human Services (HHS) Secretary Xavier Becerra.

Data privacy, abortion limits set to collide post-Roe

Sandhya Raman and Gopal Ratnam, Roll Call

The Supreme Court's decision to overturn the federal right to abortion is likely to create a clash between state-by-state abortion restrictions and the patchwork of data privacy laws that are being legislated in the absence of a federal privacy law.

Georgia's Six-Week Abortion Ban Can Take Effect, Court Rules

Celine Castronuovo, Bloomberg Law

A Georgia law banning abortions after a fetal heartbeat is detected can now be enforced, the Eleventh Circuit held Wednesday, citing the US Supreme Court's ruling finding no constitutional right to the procedure.

Critics Worry Government Surveillance of HIV May Hurt More Than It Helps

Sam Whitehead, Kaiser Health News

Molecular surveillance is part of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's HIV cluster detection and response program. It uses different kinds of surveillance data, including genetic changes in the virus, to identify networks of HIV transmission and tailor interventions to emerging outbreaks. HIV changes quickly, the CDC says, and finding similar viral strains in people can be a sign of rapid transmission.

To fight inequity, Africa wants to produce its own vaccines. First, it needs to find buyers.

Carmen Paun, Politico

Governments on the continent and international donors must be ready to pay higher prices for African-made shots, experts and pharma industry representatives said.

Gun violence costs U.S. more than $1 billion a year in hospital bills

Kate Gibson, CBS News

That figure only accounts for the initial health costs of hospital care for people who are shot, according to a report released by the U.S. Congress Joint Economic Committee ahead of a Wednesday hearing on the economic impact of gun violence.

PAYERS

Health insurer Elevance raises annual profit forecast

Reuters

Net profit for Elevance, which was previously known as Anthem, fell to $1.65 billion, or $6.79 per share, in the three months ended June 30, from $1.79 billion, or $7.25 per share, a year earlier.

Elevance steps away from New York Medicare Advantage contract amid continued litigation

Samantha Liss, Healthcare Dive

Elevance will no longer provide group Medicare Advantage coverage to the retirees of the city of New York City amid ongoing litigation over the switch to privatized plans.

PROVIDERS

Hospitals need 'transformational changes' to stem margin erosion

Susan Kelly, Healthcare Dive

Nonprofit hospitals are reporting thinner margins this year, stretched by rising labor, supply and capital costs, and will be pressed to make big changes to their business models or risk negative rating actions, Fitch Ratings said in a report out Tuesday.

Post-Roe, doctors worry about what constitutes lifesaving care

Sandhya Raman, Roll Call

Health care providers say the decision to overturn Roe v. Wade has led to increased confusion over what sort of emergency and life-giving care they can provide to patients facing a pregnancy-related health crisis.

In some states, doctors weigh 'ruinous' litigation against proper care for women who have miscarriages

Elizabeth Cohen et al., CNN

When Marlena Stell had a miscarriage, she says she begged her doctor for help but instead was forced to walk around for at least two weeks with fetal remains inside her because of strict anti-abortion laws. Stell, who was 9½ weeks pregnant at the time, said she was "blindsided" when her doctor showed her an ultrasound image showing the fetus was no longer alive, and then refused to do the standard surgery to remove the fetal remains.

A slew of abortion clinics are opening in New Mexico. Crisis pregnancy centers are, too.

Shefali Luthra, The 19th

The influx of these centers, which have been criticized by physicians and other medical experts, is part of an effort to prevent out-of-state travelers from accessing abortions.

More physicians seek unions amid changing landscape, COVID-19

Ginger Christ, Modern Healthcare

The culture of medicine also contributes to physicians' evident disinterest in banding together in the workplace. Doctors learn from medical school on that they must pay their dues to advance, and are loath to complain about long hours or difficult circumstances. And a go-it-alone mindset pervades the profession, said Rachel Flores, organizing director for the Union of American Physicians and Dentists, which represents 5,000 professionals. The labor organization added 250 members and organized another 200 in the past year.

Nurse diversity linked to a reduced risk of maternal health issues, study finds

Tat Bellamy-Walker, NBC News

Hiring a more diverse nurse workforce may help address "racial and ethnic disparities in maternal health outcomes" and improve maternal health, according to a report from Columbia University researchers.

As health care faces nursing shortages, burned-out nurses are flocking to remote jobs

Katie Palmer, Stat News

Burned out and fed up with their work conditions, nurses are leaving the bedside in droves, leaving empty positions and for-hire signs lingering in hospitals and clinics around the country.

PHARMA, BIOTECH AND DEVICES

Biogen agrees to pay $900 million to settle whistleblower case alleging kickbacks and sham speaking events

Ed Silverman, Stat News

After a decade of legal squabbling, Biogen has agreed in principle to pay $900 million to settle a lawsuit filed by a former employee who alleged the company paid kickbacks to hundreds of physicians to boost sales of its multiple sclerosis drugs.

Biogen leans on new Alzheimer's drug to calm investor worries

Manas Mishra, Reuters

Biogen Inc (BIIB.O) on Wednesday tried to assuage investor worries by laying out a plan for its Alzheimer's disease drug being developed with Eisai Co Ltd (4523.T) and promising to draw lessons from the setbacks to its treatment Aduhelm.

Abbott aims to recapture baby formula market share

Leroy Leo and Amruta Khandekar, Reuters

Abbott Laboratories (ABT.N)said on Wednesday it was set to recapture some of the market share in the baby formula business as the company restarts manufacturing at its troubled Michigan facility in the United States.

Merck's Keytruda fails head and neck cancer trial

Reuters

Merck & Co Inc (MRK.N) said on Wednesday its cancer therapy Keytruda failed to meet the main goal of a late-stage trial testing it in patients with head and neck cancer.

HEALTH TECHNOLOGY

Apple Argues It's Now a Major Force in the Health-Care World

Mark Gurman, Bloomberg

Apple Inc. published a nearly 60-page report Wednesday outlining all its health features and partnerships with medical institutions, arguing that such offerings are key to the tech giant's future.

Patient safety issues with VA Cerner EHR caused harm to veterans, federal watchdog says

Heather Landi, Fierce Healthcare

An inspection by the VA Office of the Inspector General (OIG) found that a new Cerner electronic health record (EHR) system, now owned by Oracle, failed to deliver more than 11,000 orders for specialty care, lab work and other services at Mann-Grandstaff VA Medical Center, the first VA facility to roll out the new technology.

Researchers tried to calculate the impact of health tech companies. It sent startups into a tizzy

Mohana Ravindranath, Stat News

As Johns Hopkins gastroenterologist Simon Mathews has watched scores of digital health upstarts collect hundreds of millions of dollars in venture funding in recent years, he's had one key question: "If we're putting in all this money, shouldn't it be linked to making a difference?"

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Doctors must get political to get the politics out of medicine

Kathryn Brandt, Fortune

I am trained to educate and prescribe but, most importantly, to listen and to align a patient's care plan with their values. The Supreme Court's decision on Roe v. Wade severely compromises this central tenet of the practice of medicine: By returning the authority to regulate abortion to the people and their elected representatives, the court removes the ability to align patient care to the individual patient's values, opens a way for medical decisions to be legislated, and politicizes the patient-physician relationship.

Endemic Covid-19 Looks Pretty Brutal

David Wallace-Wells, The New York Times

It may surprise you to learn, given the mood of the country — and indeed the world — about the pandemic that probably half of all Covid infections have happened this calendar year — and it's only July. By December, the figure could be 80 percent or more. The gap between cases and severe outcomes is bigger than it has ever been, with the fraction of infections ending in deaths one-tenth that of the pandemic's early stages. But simply in terms of infection, this year towers over each of the previous two.

RESEARCH REPORTS

The Impact of Pharmaceutical Wholesalers on U.S. Drug Spending

Elizabeth Seeley, The Commonwealth Fund

The wholesaler industry influences the purchase and distribution of prescription drugs in four key areas: setting generic drug prices, leveraging list price increases, competing in specialty drug distribution, and mitigating or exacerbating drug shortages. An understanding of wholesalers' broad impact would inform policymakers' efforts to reform pharmaceutical payment practices, reduce drug spending, and ease drug supply shortages.

Reports and Announcements

- Vaccinate Your Family has a toolkit of graphics, talking points, and FAQs on the COVID-19 vaccine recommendation for kids under 5. The organization also has a toolkit to address common questions and concerns about vaccines during pregnancy. Both toolkits are available in English and Spanish.
- The National Indian Health Board (NIHB) invites Tribal leaders, health directors, policy specialists, advocates, and allies to submit presenter abstracts for the 39th Annual National Tribal Health Conference on September 26-28, 2022. The National Tribal Health Conference explores health policy, Tribal health equity, and its impact on American Indian and Alaska Native (AI/AN) Tribal nations. The Conference seeks to advance Tribal capacity to influence federal law and policies and serves as a forum to discuss Tribal health care, public, behavioral, and environmental health, legislative and policy priorities.
- Yesterday, CDC published a Vital Signs today on overdose disparities by race, ethnicity, and other important social determinants. In just one year, overdose death rates increased 44% for Black people and 39% for American Indian and Alaska Native (AI/AN) people. Most people who died by overdose had no evidence of substance use treatment before their deaths. These findings give serious cause for concern, but more importantly action. The report proposes numerous opportunities to close the gap in overdose disparities while simultaneously lowering the rate of all overdoses. Approaches include expanded access to telehealth and insurance coverage, reduce criminalization, provision of culturally appropriate practices and support groups, stigma reduction, and more.
- CDC has launched two new data dashboards that make fatal and nonfatal overdose data more accessible and customizable:
    - DOSE Dashboard includes monthly and annual nonfatal overdose data from syndromic surveillance systems in 42 states, including the District of Columbia. This represents the most up to date data that CDC's DOSE system has available and is updated shortly after new data are made available each month.The dashboard provides data visualization that responsively adjusts to your selection of drug, state, month/year, age, and sex.
    - SUDORS Dashboard includes comprehensive drug overdose data from 2020, from funded jurisdictions that met inclusion criteria. Participating jurisdictions provided data from death certificates and medical examiner/coroner reports (including scene findings, autopsy reports, and full postmortem toxicology findings). The dashboard provides a downloadable dataset that includes annual counts, percentages, and rates of drug overdose deaths per 100,000 persons.

- USDA is interested in learning from stakeholders how we can better meet the needs of customers seeking kosher or halal foods through The Emergency Assistance Food Program (TEFAP). So far, USDA has held discussions with several advocacy organizations, 9 State Agencies, and food banks in those states that serve communities with kosher and/or halal food needs. USDA is reviewing the information gathered through these conversations to determine some actions and next steps we can take to better meet the needs of customers seeking kosher and halal foods. USDA is interested in feedback from States and food banks in all States and territories about how to best meet their customers' needs. Feedback can always be shared with your State Agency or sent to USDAFoods@usda.gov.

- Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Health and the de Beaumont Foundation recently released the report Seven Ways Business Can Align with Public Health for Bold Action and Innovation. To support collaboration between business and public health, the organizations are collecting endorsements and stories of alignment, which are reflections on how organizations are applying recommendations from the report as well as endorsements, which will be accepted on a rolling basis.

Funding Opportunities and Awards

- EPA has launched the Let's Talk About Heat Challenge, a national competition to identify innovative and effective communication strategies that inform people of the risks of extreme heat and offer ways to keep safe during the hottest days. The challenge was developed in support of the National Climate Task Force's Extreme Heat Interagency Working Group, which is being led by EPA, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) with support from the White House. Winning solutions will include identification of and engagement with people known to be most susceptible to extreme heat risks, including but not limited to underserved and overburdened communities. The challenge will award up to 10 prizes from a total prize pool of $120,000. Submissions are due by tomorrow, July 22nd.

- The National Headache Foundation is seeking nominations of Headache Heroes, a campaign to recognize people who have made a difference in the headache and migraine community, in the following categories. Nominations are due July 31st.
    - Healthcare Professional: Any healthcare provider who has made a difference.
    - Patient: Someone living with migraine disease or headache disorders.
    - Caregiver: The unsung hero caring for someone living with migraine disease or headache disorders.
    - Advocate: An individual or organization that is pursuing legislative, regulatory, or funding opportunities on behalf of the headache and migraine community.

- CDC recently announced a Notice of Funding Opportunity for Strengthening U.S. Public Health Infrastructure, Workforce, and Data Systems Department of Health and Human Services. This funding is a first of its kind, non-categorical and cross-cutting programs, intended to help meet critical infrastructure and workforce needs in the short-term; and it should also make possible strategic investments that will have lasting effects on public health agencies across the United States. To that end, it will support strategically strengthening public health capacity and systems related to the workforce, foundational capabilities, data modernization, physical infrastructure and support from national public health partners. The deadline to apply is August 15th.

- EPA is soliciting applications to provide training and technical assistance to rural, small, and tribal municipalities, publicly owned wastewater treatment works, and decentralized wastewater treatment systems for the prevention, reduction, and elimination of pollution. Applications must address one, and only one, of the following priority areas: acquisition of finance/funding, protecting water quality and compliance assistance, tribal communities, decentralized systems, and lagoon systems. The deadline to apply is August 22nd.

- The National Headache Foundation (NHF) announced a new annual award, the Ellen Aubry Memorial Award, to recognize the accurate depiction of headache and migraine disorders in film and television. Nominations are now being accepted and can be submitted by both viewers and producers for consideration until August 15, 2022. The winners will be recognized at the NHF's 36th Annual Gala on October 8, 2022, in Chicago, Ill.

- Applications are open for the de Beaumont Foundation's Modernized Anti-Racist Data Ecosystems (MADE) for Health Justice grant opportunity. The grants seek to accelerate the development of health-focused local data ecosystems that center principles of anti-racism, equity, justice, and community power. Through MADE for Health Justice, non-profit organizations will be funded to build and facilitate multi sector teams tasked with creating local data ecosystems. These ecosystems must focus on improving community health, connecting data across multiple sectors of local government, prioritizing the needs and voices of communities oppressed by structural racism, and ultimately driving just and equity-centered decision making. The deadline to apply is August 31st.

- NIH's Office of Nutrition Research (ONR) has issued the notice of special interest (NOSI) Stimulating Research to Understand and Address Hunger, Food and Nutrition Insecurity. The purpose of this NOSI is to encourage research on the efficacy of interventions that address nutrition security and the mechanisms of food insecurity on a variety of health outcomes. It also calls for the development of new measures for nutrition security and assessment of food insecurity that are broadly applicable. It was developed by the ONR Implementation Working Group on Nutrition and Health Disparities in collaboration with NIH Institutes and Centers (ICs) and Offices in support of the goals and objectives of the Strategic Plan for NIH Nutrition Research. Deadline, October 5th.

- The Center for Science in the Public Interest's (CSPI's) first round of grantmaking for 2022 is now open. CSPI seeks to support communities as they explore local, state, and federal policy interventions to elicit systemic change and advance a just and equitable food environment. CSPI is focused on identifying strategies and passing policies aimed at increasing purchasing power for, and access to, nutritious food that meets people's needs, supporting a healthier food environment, and reducing health disparities across demographic groups. Several opportunities are currently open, with details available here.

- Evidence for Action's released an open and rolling call for proposals, Innovative Research to Advance Racial Equity. Through this CFP they seek to fund researchers, practitioners, community leaders, advocates, policymakers, and/or other stakeholders to investigate the impacts of various social interventions on health and racial equity outcomes. They are interested in projects that develop and disseminate evidence about what works to advance racial equity and improve health and well-being outcomes for people and communities of color.

SUBJECT: The importance of Medicaid coverage in a post-Dobbs world

Advances
Building a Culture of Health by Working Together
Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

More than 80 million people in the United States rely on Medicaid for health coverage — making it the largest healthcare insurance provider in the country. The Supreme Court's recent decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization means that people in states that haven't expanded Medicaid need access to comprehensive health coverage now more than ever.

[redacted]

[redacted]

Many of the states enacting abortion bans already have high maternal mortality rates. Some have also failed to expand Medicaid, leaving mothers and families without access to essential care. It's more important than ever to expand Medicaid to protect women's health.

[redacted]

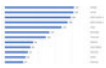
Share this message on Twitter >>

These states face the most gaps in covering women of reproductive age:



Threats to coverage and reproductive freedom will deepen the inequities inherent in the post-Dobbs world, where low-income women, predominantly women of color, will be most likely to suffer the consequences. New estimates project that nearly 1 million women of reproductive age risk loss of coverage if Congress does not act to extend the expanded premium tax credits created by the American Rescue Plan Act.

Medicaid research roundup

Failure to Close Coverage Gap Would Leave Millions Uninsured and Facing Worse Health Outcomes

Center

on Budget and Policy Priorities

A new brief shows that including a provision to close the Medicaid coverage gap in the reconciliation package Congress is currently considering would expand access to health insurance, improve health equity, and protect access to contraceptive and reproductive care. If Congress doesn't include the provision, more than 2 million people — disproportionately people of color —will continue to be denied affordable healthcare.

Medicaid Expansion Increased Pre-conception Counseling and Healthy Behaviors

Health Affairs

The time just before pregnancy is critically important for the health of a woman and her baby, making access to health insurance crucial. This study finds low-income women in states that expanded Medicaid had better health across multiple indicators, including greater use of health counseling, increased folic acid intake, and increased use of effective postpartum birth control.

Availability of Contraceptive Access Policies Across the United States from 2006 to 2021

Preventive Medicine Reports

For tens of millions of people in America, access to contraception promotes health, well-being, and autonomy. This resource outlines policies in place to support contraceptive access, including Medicaid expansion and insurance coverage, in all 50 states.

One-Third of Women With Prenatal Medicaid Remained Uninsured Before Or After Pregnancy

Health Affairs

Health insurance coverage and access to care before, during, and after pregnancy are important in supporting maternal and infant health. Medicaid provides health coverage to women during pregnancy, but research shows more than one-third are not eligible for the program prior to pregnancy or after 60 days postpartum.

Variation in Severe Maternal Morbidity Linked to Expenditures by Communities

JAMA Network Open

The United States has one of the highest maternal mortality rates among high-income countries, and cities may play a key role in addressing the crisis, researchers say. An analysis of New Jersey cities finds spending on both health and non-health services — including education, housing, and transportation—is linked to rates of severe maternal morbidity, a key risk factor for maternal mortality.

Closing the Medicaid coverage gap is a health, economic, and moral imperative

Healthcare is a human right. But more than two million people — disproportionately people of color —are being denied life-saving coverage because 12 states have refused to expand their Medicaid programs. Dr. Avenel Joseph discusses the incredible opportunity Congress now has to correct this injustice once and for all.

The Rulings That Quickly Made 2022 Huge For Health Law

A spree of remarkable rulings has already made 2022 a jaw-dropping year for health care and pharmaceutical law, where the U.S. Supreme Court reshaped abortion rights, opioid crisis prosecutions, Medicare's rulemaking powers and vital sources of hospital income. At the midyear mark, Law360 recaps the rulings and analyzes their implications.

TOP STORIES

- Amazon.com Inc. is buying 1Life Healthcare Inc., the operator of One Medical primary-care clinics, for $3.9 billion, giving the e-commerce giant access to a practice with more than 180 offices in 25 U.S. markets and a foothold with 8,000 companies that provide health benefits to workers through the provider group. The acquisition could represent a pivot from its Amazon Care service, which launched in 2019 and has struggled to expand beyond its own employee network. (The Wall Street Journal)

- President Joe Biden tested positive for COVID-19 and is isolating at the White House while continuing to "carry out all of his duties fully during that time," press secretary Karine Jean-Pierre said. Biden, who is experiencing "very mild" symptoms, according to the White House, is fully vaccinated, has received two booster shots and has begun a course of Pfizer Inc.'s antiviral treatment Paxlovid. (Politico)

- In a 228-195 vote, the House passed a bill to codify the federal right to contraception by penalizing those who restrict access to oral, emergency and long-acting reversible contraceptives, in addition to other birth control methods. Eight Republicans joined 220 Democrats in the vote, which came weeks after the Supreme Court's ruling to overturn Roe v. Wade, but the legislation faces tougher odds in the Senate, where GOP lawmakers have expressed concerns about the breadth of the bill. (Roll Call)

- State and local health officials in New York said an unvaccinated 20-year-old man in Rockland County, N.Y., contracted polio, the first U.S. case in almost a decade. The patient, who has been discharged from the hospital but has had trouble walking since his release, traveled to Poland and Hungary earlier this year, and testing indicated that the transmission occurred outside the United States. WHAT ELSE YOU NEED TO KNOW

Of Course Biden Has COVID

Katherine J. Wu, The Atlantic

Perhaps the most notable aspect of these high-profile cases is not that they happened, but when. Though certainly on the front lines of the country's COVID response, these officials have enjoyed the privilege of protection throughout the pandemic, with access to masks, tests, vaccines, and, most recently, antivirals; the comfort and security of jobs that can be done while in isolation; the socioeconomic means to separate themselves from colleagues and loved ones, and the support staff to alert close contacts about exposures.

Biden's Covid Diagnosis Shows How Far We've Come Since Trump's

Robert Langreth and Crayton Harrison, Bloomberg

Back when former President Donald Trump came down with Covid-19 in October 2020, the world was a lot different than today, when the White House announced President Joe Biden had contracted the illness.

America Was in an Early-Death Crisis Long Before COVID

Ed Yong, The Atlantic

Even before the pandemic began, more people here were dying at younger ages than in comparably wealthy nations.

'There's no one long Covid': Experts struggle to make sense of the continuing mystery

Elizabeth Cooney, Stat News

To a person, scientists expressed eagerness for better studies, better funding, better participation, with urgency bubbling up from specialists in cardiology, neuroscience, epidemiology, pulmonology, and immunology. Yet these are still early days for research into long Covid. Recognized since 2020, its definition is still sometimes debated, although most definitions include symptoms that persist weeks or months after acute infection and include fatigue, headache, shortness of breath, memory problems, GI issues, and joint and muscle pain.

As new variant spreads, a crucial drug to protect the most vulnerable goes vastly underused

Jason Mast, Stat News

Jennifer Padgett has spent 2 1/2 years terrified for her immunocompromised daughter, Hannah. Hannah catches pneumonia like mosquito bites; what could Covid wreak? Their whole family locked down in the early days, rushed to get vaccines when they became available and kept masking and avoiding indoor dining in their small southern town even after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention loosened restrictions.

The Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation partly funded a study with a surprising conclusion about boosters

Christine Mui, Fortune

The latest Omicron subvariant may be a master at evading the immune response our bodies produce from the vaccine or previous COVID-19 infection, but a new study suggests existing booster shots will still help.

Meet the covid super-dodgers

Ellen McCarthy, The Washington Post

There are no winners in a pandemic. That said, if you've made it to the summer of 2022 without yet testing positive for the coronavirus, you might feel entitled to some bragging rights. Who's still in the game at this point?

GENERAL

Amazon Faces Fierce Competition in Health Ambitions After One Medical Deal

Melanie Evans and Sebastian Herrera, The Wall Street Journal

Amazon Chief Executive Andy Jassy and other executives have declared their intent to disrupt healthcare. But the industry is in some ways more complex and diffuse than other areas into which Amazon has grown recently, such as entertainment, advertising or grocery businesses. Success will require beating entrenched rivals with long experience navigating industry regulations and competing for physicians who are key to growth.

Youtube says it will start removing misinformation about abortion

Brad Dress, The Hill

Youtube on Thursday said it will begin removing content that spreads misinformation about abortion safety or gives instructions for unsafe abortion procedures.

WHO reconsiders whether to declare monkeypox a public health emergency

Shawna Chen, Axios

The World Health Organization (WHO) on Thursday reconvened an emergency committee to reconsider whether it should declare monkeypox a public health emergency.

After STAT report, GOP lawmakers seek answers about defunct NIH oversight committee

Lev Facher, Stat News

A trio of congressional Republicans wants to know why a committee tasked with oversight of the National Institutes of Health hasn't met since 2015.

More Americans who want abortions are turning to Mexico for help

Catherine E. Shoichet, CNN

For decades abortion rights advocates in Mexico looked to the United States as an example of what was possible. The recent US Supreme Court decision left many of them stunned — and determined to show solidarity and take action.

We're Testing for Monkeypox the Wrong Way

Benjamin Mazer, The Atlantic

More than 15,000 monkeypox cases have been confirmed around the world since the outbreak began in May, but the condition, which spreads through close contact with the rash or body fluids of an infected individual, has been difficult to diagnose because of a lack of available testing.

House Oversight chair calls on HHS to address 'barriers' to monkeypox treatments

Joseph Choi, The Hill

Rep. Carolyn Maloney (D-N.Y.), chair of the House Oversight and Reform Committee, asked the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to address the "barriers" to monkeypox treatment that people have reported dealing with so far.

Nearly 1 in 10 people traveled out-of-state to get an abortion in 2020, report finds

Oriana Gonzalez, Axios

Almost 10% of abortions in the U.S. in 2020 were obtained by people who traveled out-of-state, and researchers say it's likely that the number will increase as more states ban or restrict access following the overturning of Roe v. Wade.

GOP AGs ask Google not to limit anti-abortion center results

Sarah Rankin, The Associated Press

A month after some members of Congress urged Google to limit the appearance of anti-abortion pregnancy centers in certain abortion-related search results, 17 Republican attorneys general are warning the company that doing so could invite investigations and possible legal action.

Warren, Markey press student surveillance platforms on reproductive health data

Rebecca Klar, The Hill

Sens. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) and Ed Markey (D-Mass.) sent letters to four student surveillance programs Thursday asking if they flag search terms related to reproductive health, over concerns the data could be used to punish the students for seeking information about abortion access.

New Senate bill aims to provide veterans with a 'private, hygienic place to nurse their children'

Mariel Padilla, The 19th

Only half of VA medical facilities currently provide designated nursing rooms, and those that exist are only for employees — not for veterans or their partners receiving care.

PAYERS

Employer-sponsored premiums expected to jump 'significantly'

Tina Reed, Axios

"Even in the fall, we were hearing concerns around 2023 with rate increases ranging from 10% to 12%. And we have a member who just a 12% increase in their premiums," Randa Deaton, vice president of purchaser engagement for the Purchaser Business Group on Health, told Axios.

Insurers, providers exposed as clock winds down for enhanced ACA subsidies

Nona Tepper and Lauren Berryman, Modern Healthcare

Health insurance companies, providers, and millions of policyholders would suffer significant disruptions if President Joe Biden and congressional Democrats fail to extend the enhanced subsidies that drove record enrollment on the health insurance exchanges.

Contraceptive coverage gaps under scrutiny post-Roe v. Wade

Nona Tepper, Modern Healthcare

Twelve years after the ACA became law, patients still struggle to get the appropriate medicine or device at no cost thanks to inconsistent insurance coverage. And the Supreme Court ruling that ended the federal right to abortion made access to affordable birth control and emergency contraception even more urgent for people seeking to prevent pregnancy.

High childcare stress linked with health worker burnout, JAMA study finds

Hailey Mensik, Healthcare Dive

Healthcare workers reporting high levels of stress over personal child care responsibilities are more likely to experience burnout and express intentions to reduce work hours or leave their roles altogether, according to a study published this week in JAMA Network Open.

Planned Parenthood Workers at 28 Clinics Vote to Unionize

Kelsey Butler, Bloomberg

A group of Planned Parenthood workers in five states have voted to unionize, as part of an effort to address staffing shortages, low pay and burnout among staff.

Tenet posts $38M profit for Q2 as major cyber attack drags earnings

Robert King, Fierce Healthcare

Tenet reported $38 million in net income for the second quarter of 2022, down from the previous quarter's profits of $130 million as a disruptive cyber attack impacted admissions.

Feds disrupt North Korean hackers that targeted hospitals, seize $500K in ransom

Heather Landi, Fierce Healthcare

The U.S. government disrupted the activities of a ransomware group connected to the North Korean government that targeted hospitals, ultimately recovering half a million dollars in ransom paid by a Kansas hospital and other medical facilities.

PHARMA, BIOTECH AND DEVICES

CVS seeks verification on drugs with possible abortion use

Tom Murphy, The Associated Press

CVS Health is asking pharmacists in some states to verify that a few of the prescriptions they provide will not be used to end a pregnancy. A spokesman said Thursday that the drugstore chain recently started doing this for methotrexate and misoprostol, two drugs used in medication abortions but also to treat other conditions.

HEALTH TECHNOLOGY

Serving as a 'clinical colleague,' AI shows potential to reduce sepsis deaths in real-world studies

Akila Muthukumar, Stat News

Three studies published Thursday found that an AI platform developed by Bayesian Health and Johns Hopkins University reduced deaths from sepsis by 18.2% in real-world use when physicians responded promptly to its alerts, a finding that suggests AI has potential to become an important tool in battling a leading cause of deaths in hospitals.

Some ultraviolet wands pose risk of radiation injury, FDA says

Kate Gibson, CBS News

Americans are being urged against using eight ultraviolet wands used to disinfect surfaces because of high levels of radiation the products emit that can cause injuries to the skin and eyes of those nearby.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Biden's covid diagnosis is a teaching moment for the country

Leana S. Wen, The Washington Post

President Biden's covid-19 diagnosis is an opportunity for his administration to demonstrate the success of his leadership on the pandemic and what living with the coronavirus looks like.

New price transparency regulations for hospitals, insurers empower patients

Seema Verma and Aneesh Chopra, Stat News

Many Americans are accustomed to shopping around for the best deal. We can access reams of information that help us make smarter decisions — except when it comes to health care services. For too long, we have been left in the dark when it comes to the cost of medical treatments and procedures. Without a true health care marketplace based on price transparency, Americans will continue to make uninformed decisions that result in spiraling costs for everyone.

RESEARCH REPORTS

In sickness and in health: How health is perceived around the world

Clément Desmouceaux et al., McKinsey Health Institute

The McKinsey Health Institute (MHI) has found that countries and societies would benefit from adopting a modernized, holistic framework for health that encompasses multiple dimensions. Such a broad definition of health, with a greater emphasis on well-being, was proposed as far back as 1948 by the World Health Organization (WHO), which defined health as "a state of complete physical, mental, and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity."

Repeat COVID-19 cases nearly double as BA.5 spreads

A new analysis from gene sequencing firm Helix found that 6.4% of US COVID-19 cases have been reinfections this month as the Omicron BA.5 variant spreads, up from 3.6% as Omicron BA.2 was spreading in May. However, the average time between infections for the same person has increased to about nine months or 270 days during the BA.5 wave, compared with about 230 days during the BA.2 wave.

Nurses across the globe experience increasing violence

A worldwide rise in workplace violence against nurses and other health care professionals has been seen since the coronavirus pandemic began, according to a large international survey by four health organizations. All survey respondents said they had seen verbal aggression, 82% cited physical aggression, 36% reported care obstruction, 35% reported discrimination, and 27% said they had seen weapon-related threats, and International Council of Nurses CEO Howard Catton said the results show a worsening trend during the COVID-19 pandemic. Full Story: Nursing Times (U.K.) (free registration) (7/21)

MEDICAL UPDATE

First polio case in the US since 2013 reported in N.Y.

The New York State Department of Health announced Thursday the first confirmed case of polio in the US since 2013 in an unvaccinated young adult from Rockland County with no recent history of foreign travel. The patient, who experienced paralysis and developed symptoms a month ago, is no longer believed to be contagious, and he is thought to have contracted the revertant polio Sabin type 2 virus from a person who received an older form of oral polio vaccine that hasn't been used in the US since 2000. Full Story: The Associated Press (7/21), United Press International (7/21)

PCP follow-up may reduce medically complex readmissions

Reduced 90-day readmissions were seen in people with COPD, cardiovascular disease and other complex health conditions when they received early physician follow-up including transitional care and disease management post-discharge, according to a 450,746-person study published in JAMA Network Open. Researchers looked at data from medically complex patients who followed up with a primary care physician or specialist within a week after discharge and found that they had higher rates of collaborative and specialist care than those who did not have early follow-up. Full Story: Healio (free registration) (7/19)

Gestational diabetes on the rise, CDC analysis shows

A CDC analysis of 3.25 million birth records found that the percentage of expectant women with gestational diabetes increased 30% between 2016 and 2020, which researchers say may be explained by the rising age of mothers, changing demographics, and sedentary lifestyles and stress in the first year of the pandemic. Gestational diabetes is "a growing problem, and one that requires focused attention and increased awareness," said Dr. Sadiya Khan of Northwestern University, adding "[t]his issue does not resolve with the pregnancy and is really one that we need to focus on before, during, and after pregnancy for those at risk." Full Story: STAT (tiered subscription model) (7/20), The Hill (7/21)

EMERGING TRENDS

Health info should be easily accessible to improve literacy

Studies have shown a large proportion of adults in the US lack a basic understanding of medical terminology, and health education "should start where people are looking for it," such as online, in schools and in primary care offices, says Steven Sheets, president and CEO of Southwest Behavioral & Health Services. Sheets and other literacy advocates say health care providers should encourage patients to ask basic questions, and health information should be translated accurately into the patient's preferred language and should be available through their preferred media. Full Story: AZ Big Media (Phoenix) (7/21)

Executive Summary: Town hall focused on addressing challenges to public health authority released
In February, APHA hosted a town hall, Keeping our Communities Safe & Thriving: The Role of Public Health, with the COVID Collaborative and the Alliance for Disease Prevention and Response, to discuss how to address the recent nationwide attacks on public health and its authority. The newly released Executive Summary is an effective guide for future action that highlights key messages from the speakers, including the importance of allocating resources, guiding public health with science rather than politics, and needing effective public health communication. Please reach out to the Alliance at alliance@apha.org or the Act for Public Health initiative—a collaborative of public health law partners—for more information or to be connected with resources and partners focused on these critical issues.

Connect with public health partners using the Public Health and Equity Resource Navigator
The Alliance for Disease Prevention and Response has partnered with the Institute for People, Place, and Possibility to create the Public Health & Equity Resource Navigator. In addition to PHERN, a network map was launched in June that captures Alliance partners like APHA as well as public health colleagues, their work and location. These resources are for the field and should allow change makers and practitioners to search for public health and equity resources, share their own resources and connect with partners.

Watch and share APHA's "That's Public Health" web series
APHA's web series that explains the basics of public health wrapped up its first season last month. Available on APHA's YouTube Channel, the 20th episode of "That's Public Health" focuses on the people that make up the public health workforce. Created by APHA and Complexly Media, the series features short, easy-to-understand videos on topics that range from chronic diseases and injuries to racism and health equity.

Read the latest from the Healthiest Cities & Counties Challenge

On Wednesday, the House voted 220-207 to pass a six-bill appropriations package totaling more than $400 billion, which is about one-fourth of overall discretionary spending for fiscal year 2023. Initially, House Democrats had hoped to hold a vote on the Labor-HHS appropriations bill (which includes CDC funding) next week, but House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer (D-MD) has not announced a timeline for a floor vote. On the Senate side, appropriators still plan to release their versions of the funding bills by the end of July.

This Week's News

More states are forgoing extra federal food aid
Over 18 million Americans did not eat enough food last month, but it would have been higher without pandemic-related policies expanding the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP). At least 16 states have decided to opt out of expanded SNAP benefits due to some policymakers arguing that enhanced benefits are contributing to labor shortages.

As diabetes during pregnancy grows more common, experts point to a need for preventive care
According to the CDC, gestational diabetes climbed 30% between 2016 and 2020. Researchers attribute this increase to long-term trends like women giving birth at an older age, changing demographics, and the growing rate of twin births. In addition to earlier diagnosis, experts argue that greater public awareness of gestational diabetes is needed.

COVID-19 tied to new-onset, short-term heart disease, diabetes
According to a recent study, individuals diagnosed with COVID-19 are six times more likely to develop cardiovascular disease (CVD) and two times as likely to develop diabetes. COVID-19 patients had 81% more diabetes diagnoses within the first four weeks of infection and diagnoses were 27% higher for up to 12 weeks. However, researchers noted that "people without preexisting CVD or [diabetes] who suffer from COVID-19 do not appear to have a long-term increase in incidence of these conditions."

Higher cardiovascular health may partially offset increased genetic risk for stroke
A new analysis of a long-term, community-based study has found that maintaining optimal cardiovascular health by following the American Heart Association's Life's Simple Seven (LS7) protected people from stroke, regardless of their genetics. Researchers found that maintaining optimal cardiovascular health in people with a genetic risk for stroke translated into about six additional years of life without stroke incidence.

People with diabetes are more vulnerable to heart disease: How to reduce risk
Diabetes is strongly associated with comorbidities like hypertension, obesity, and adverse health events (e.g., heart attack and stroke). To address the health risks posed by this disease, the American Diabetes Association partnered with the American Heart Association to spread awareness of the ABCs of diabetes. These include managing A1C levels, blood pressure, and cholesterol.

Women's Community Update

All,

Read below for updates on the Biden-Harris Administration's response to the Supreme Court's decision overturning Roe v. Wade, Release of the Women, Peace, and Security Report to Congress, Administration Engagements and Convenings on Reproductive Rights, and more.

Biden-Harris Administration Efforts to Protect Access to Reproductive Healthcare

Calling for the Passage of the Right to Contraception Act

The Administration strongly supports passage of H.R. 8373, the Right to Contraception Act, which passed the U.S. House of Representatives this week. Access to the full range of reproductive health care services—including all FDA approved forms of contraception—is critical and essential to ensuring all people have control over personal decisions about their own health, lives, and families. After the overruling of Roe, which rested on the fundamental right to privacy in matters of health, bodily autonomy, and family, it has never been more important to protect and expand access to family planning services. See the Statement of Administration Policy here.

Calling for the Passage of the Respect for Marriage Act

The Administration strongly supports passage of H.R. 8404, the Respect for Marriage Act, which passed the U.S. House of Representatives this week. The right to marriage confers vital legal protections, dignity, and full participation in our society. No person should face discrimination because of who they are or whom they love, and every married couple in the United States deserves the security of knowing that their marriage will be defended and respected. See the Statement of Administration Policy here.

Vice President Harris Meeting with North Carolina Governor Roy Cooper, State Legislators, and Advocates on Reproductive Rights

Yesterday, Vice President Kamala Harris met with Governor Cooper and more than 20 North Carolina state legislators, local leaders, and advocates who are fighting on the frontlines to protect reproductive rights.

The Vice President thanked North Carolina Governor Roy Cooper for using every tool to protect access to reproductive health care, including a recent state executive order issued to protect patients seeking care from harassment and intimidation, and his veto of extreme legislative attacks on reproductive rights.

The Vice President shared actions the Administration is taking on a national level in response to the Supreme Court overturning Roe v. Wade, including protecting access to medication abortion, defending the Constitutional right to travel, and addressing patient privacy. The Vice President encouraged the state legislators to keep defending the rights of women in North Carolina and said she looks forward to continuing to fight alongside them. See the full Readout here.

Vice President Harris Meeting with New Jersey Legislative Leaders and Advocates on Reproductive Rights

This week, Vice President Kamala Harris convened more than 20 New Jersey state legislators, local leaders, and advocates who are fighting on the frontlines to protect reproductive rights.

The Vice President thanked the state legislators for their work protecting abortion access, highlighting the legislation passed so far to codify the right to abortion, provide funding to support reproductive health care services, and protect providers and privacy. The Vice President also thanked the leaders for pursuing further action to protect access to care, including by passing additional legislation. She also encouraged the legislators to look for ways to support and coordinate with state legislators from other states as part of a broad coalition to protect abortion access. See the full Readout here.

Vice President Harris Meeting with Pennsylvania State Legislators on Reproductive Rights
Last week, Vice President Kamala Harris convened more than 30 Pennsylvania state legislators who are fighting on the frontlines to protect reproductive rights.

The Vice President thanked the legislators for defending reproductive rights and freedoms, particularly with the advancement of a proposed state constitutional amendment that will open the door to an abortion ban in Pennsylvania. She conveyed the Administration's commitment to protecting access to reproductive health care and patient privacy, and she encouraged the state legislators to keep defending the rights of women in Pennsylvania and to work with leaders from states across the country who are experiencing similar challenges. See the full Readout here.

Vice President Harris Meeting with Florida State Legislators on Reproductive Rights

Last week, Vice President Kamala Harris convened Florida state legislators who are fighting on the frontlines to protect reproductive rights. The Vice President was joined by Secretary of Health and Human Services Xavier Becerra for the meeting which took place in Orlando, Florida. During the meeting, the Vice President conveyed the Administration's commitment to protecting access to reproductive health care, including abortion access, and she encouraged the legislators to continue fighting to protect reproductive rights in Florida. She emphasized that the government should not interfere with the right of every American to make the most intimate decisions about "heart and home" – including reproductive health care access. See the full Readout here.

White House Meeting with Mayors on Reproductive Rights

Last week, Jennifer Klein, Director of the White House Gender Policy Council Director, and Julie Chavez Rodriguez, Director of the White House Intergovernmental Affairs, met with women and allied mayors from across the country to discuss reproductive rights. In the meeting, which was co-hosted by the Women Mayors Network, mayors shared what they are seeing and hearing on the ground as patients from states that ban abortion travel to seek care. The mayors also discussed actions they have taken to support reproductive rights, as well as key messaging and outreach strategies. White House Senior Officials thanked the mayors for their leadership and reinforced the Administration's commitment to working together to protect access to abortion. See the full Readout here.

Biden-Harris Administration Actions on Advancing Gender Equity

Release of the U.S. Government Women, Peace, and Security Report to Congress

The Women, Peace, and Security Act of 2017 (P.L. 115-68) (WPS Act) codified the United States Government's decades-long, sustained commitment to the principles of the Women, Peace, and Security Agenda. This Agenda stemmed from the historic 2000 United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325, which has since been further supported by a growing body of policies to affirm gender equity and equality in security, peacemaking, and peacekeeping, here in the United States and globally.
The report issued this week is the second report to Congress evaluating the USG's progress towards advancing the goals of 2019 U.S. Women Peace and Security Strategy and includes overview of efforts undertaken by the four departments and agencies involved in the Strategy: the Department of Defense (DoD), the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), the Department of State (State), and the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID). The reports summarize progress made in the WPS Strategy's four Lines of Effort: 1) Participation; 2) Protection; 3) Internal Capabilities; and 4) Partnerships. See full Fact Sheet here.

Department of Health and Human Services Announces Historic Investments to Increase Health Care Coverage

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), through the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), this week awarded $49 million to organizations on the frontlines of reducing uninsured rates and connecting more children, parents, and families to health care coverage. In support of President Biden's Executive Orders on Strengthening Medicaid and the Affordable Care Act, and HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra's priority of expanding access to affordable, quality health care, these awards represent the largest investment CMS has ever made in outreach and enrollment through the Connecting Kids to Coverage program.

ICYMI: Administration Actions on Protecting Reproductive Rights

Since President Biden signed his Executive Order Protecting Access to Reproductive Health Services on July 8, his Administration has announced the following actions to protect reproductive rights:

Protecting Emergency Medical Care

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), through the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), announced new guidance affirming that the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA) protects providers when offering legally-mandated, life- or health-saving abortion services in emergency situations. Secretary Becerra also issued a letter to providers making clear that federal law preempts state law restricting access to abortion in emergency situations.

Guidance to Retail Therapies

HHS issued guidance to roughly 60,000 U.S. retail pharmacies, reminding them of their obligations under federal civil rights laws. The guidance makes clear that as recipients of federal financial assistance, including Medicare and Medicaid payments, pharmacies are prohibited under law from discriminating based on race, color, national origin, sex, age, and disability in their programs and activities. This includes supplying prescribed medications; making determinations regarding the suitability of prescribed medications for a patient; and advising a patient about prescribed medications and how to take them.

Department of Justice Announces Reproductive Rights Task Force

The Department of Justice (DOJ) announced a Reproductive Rights Task Force, which will monitor and evaluate state and local actions that infringe on federal protections relating to the provision or pursuit of reproductive care, impair women's ability to seek reproductive care where it's legal, impair individuals' ability to inform and counsel each other about the reproductive care that is available in other states, ban medication abortion, or impose criminal or civil liability on federal employees who provide legal reproductive health services.

Calling for the Passage of the Women's Health Protection Act

The Administration strongly supports the passage of H.R. 8296, the Women's Health Protection Act of 2022, passed by the U.S. House of Representatives on July 15, 2022. The protections that the Women's Health Protection Act would ensure are essential to the health, safety, and progress of our nation. Congress should advance this important bill with the utmost urgency this moment demands. The Administration looks forward to working with Congress throughout the legislative process to ensure that this bill is consistent with the protections established by Roe. The President stands ready to sign the Women's Health Protection Act into law. See the Statement of Administration Policy here.

Calling for the Passage of the Ensuring Access to Abortion Act

The Administration strongly supports House passage of H.R. 8297, the Ensuring Access to Abortion Act of 2022, passed by the U.S. House of Representatives on July 15, 2022. In the face of this un-American threat to fundamental freedoms, this bill explicitly protects the right to travel across state lines for medical care—and makes clear the federal government's responsibility to safeguard that right for all Americans. The bill reflects the fact that women who reside in states that have banned access to comprehensive reproductive health care must remain free to seek that care in states where it is legal—and providers must remain free to treat patients from out of state who need medical care. This bill also protects interstate access to FDA approved medication abortion, the method used by more than half of those exercising their right to choose. See the Statement of Administration Policy here.

Calling for the Establishment of Abortion Rights into Federal Law

President Biden continues to call on Congress to codify the right to abortion into federal law. On June 30th, 2022, the President made clear he would support an exception to the filibuster in order to codify a woman's right to choose into law. See the Statements of Administration Policy on H.R. 8296 – Women's Health Protection Act of 2022 and H.R.8297 – Ensuring Access to Abortion Act of 2022.

Inside An Atty's Plan To Get 2 Wrongfully Jailed Men Justice

Two Black men from Buffalo, New York, spent more than two decades in prison for a murder they likely didn't commit before a state trial court overturned their conviction last year. Now, they're suing Erie County for civil rights violation, helped by a savvy attorney who pioneered a legal strategy to pierce through prosecutors'

MORNING CONSULT

Health

Essential health care industry news & intel to start your day.

JULY 24, 2022

BY MATT BRACKEN

Twitter Email

Good morning to you, health readers. Senate Democrats reached the acceptance stage with Sen. Joe Manchin last week, resigning themselves to a reconciliation bill without the climate and tax priorities that the conservative Democrat from West Virginia axed and moving forward with their health-centered package of drug pricing reforms and a two-year extension of Affordable Care Act subsidies. Our question for the day: What share of Republican voters say it's important to renew those ACA subsidies?

A: 25%
B: 35%
C: 45%
D: 55%

WHAT'S AHEAD

The Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee is holding a hearing on the federal response to fentanyl on Tuesday at 10 a.m. Officials from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, the Health Resources and Services Administration, the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control and the White House's Office of National Drug Control Policy are slated to testify. The hearing comes after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported last week that the rate of fatal drug overdoses jumped 30% from 2019 to 2020, with fentanyl fueling what the agency said is the largest year-over-year increase in U.S. history. Overdose death rates among Black Americans and Indigenous populations saw especially sharp increases.

Dr. Rachel Levine, assistant health secretary and the first transgender official confirmed by the Senate, is scheduled to take part in Stat News' "Spotlight Series" on Tuesday at 2 p.m. Levine, a pediatrician and former Pennsylvania secretary of health, will discuss her work to protect the rights of trans people as many Republican-led states introduce legislation barring access to gender-reaffirming care.

The Medicaid and CHIP Payment and Access Commission will hold a public meeting Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. The meeting's focus will be "Medicaid and the Public Health Emergency." Public comments will be taken during the meeting, which will be held virtually.

Pfizer Inc. is set to report its second-quarter earnings Thursday. The drugmaker was in the news last week when it was revealed that President Joe Biden tested positive for COVID-19 and had immediately started a course of the company's antiviral treatment Paxlovid. Pfizer also said last week that it is pumping $470 million into new and improved research facilities in New York to further pursue its work with mRNA technology. Other health care companies on the earnings docket this week include Centene Corp. and Stryker Corp. on Tuesday; Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., Molina Healthcare Inc., Teladoc Health Inc. and Humana Inc. on Wednesday; and Abbvie Inc. on Friday.

WEEK IN REVIEW

COVID-19 vaccines

The Biden administration is reportedly pausing plans for a second round of COVID-19 booster shots for people younger than 50, as federal health officials instead work to reformulate shots targeting the newly dominant omicron subvariants for a fall campaign. According to three officials, the administration is hopeful that Moderna Inc. and Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech SE will be able to update their shots as soon as September.

CDC Director Rochelle Walensky endorsed Novavax Inc.'s COVID-19 vaccine following a 12-0 vote recommending the traditional protein-based shot by the agency's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices. Novavax's vaccine will hit the market in the coming weeks, the CDC said, giving U.S. adults a fourth option and the first COVID-19 shot that does not use mRNA technology.

Monkeypox

With more than 16,500 monkeypox cases reported in 74 countries, the World Health Organization declared the outbreak a global emergency, a move that will likely mobilize governments in the fight and lead to fresh funding. The designation of a Public Health Emergency of International Concern is the highest threat level the WHO can issue. In the United States, 2,800 monkeypox infections have been reported, including in two children.

Biden administration

National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases Director Anthony Fauci said he'll retire from the administration by 2025, noting that if he stepped down as Biden's chief medical adviser "when we don't have Covid anymore, then I will be 105."

The Biden administration will spin off the Department of Health and Human Services' Office of the Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response into an independent division charged with coordinating the U.S. pandemic response, according to seven people briefed on the matter, a move that comes as frustrations with the CDC's handling of COVID-19 mount.

The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services proposed a 2.7% boost to outpatient hospital payment rates for next year in addition to an enhanced payment for facilities that purchase N95 masks that are manufactured in the United States. CMS Administrator Chiquita Brooks-LaSure said the proposed rules would "expand access to care options in rural communities and permanently allow behavioral health services to be provided to people in their homes."

Drug pricing

Senate Finance Chairman Ron Wyden (D-Ore.) said Democrats' plans to allow Medicare to negotiate drug prices and to fine drugmakers that hike prices at a faster pace than inflation "is a strong start" but "there's plenty more to do" after the party passes its reconciliation bill, including changes to how pharmacy benefit managers operate. Wyden also endorsed legislation from Sens. Jeanne Shaheen (D-N.H.) and Susan Collins (R-Maine) to lower insulin costs for certain consumers, calling for a Senate vote on the bill.

In a letter, 181 House lawmakers called on HHS to penalize drugmakers that have lowered or completely eliminated price breaks through the federal 340B Drug Discount program, saying "vulnerable communities, federal grantees, and safety net health care providers are deprived of resources Congress intended to provide."

Roe v. Wade fallout

Attorney General Merrick Garland said the federal government could sue states that have banned or limited abortion, noting that it "could not be more straightforward" that hospitals "must provide the abortion" when the procedure is the "stabilizing treatment." Garland also said the DOJ will ask a judge to throw out a Texas lawsuit aiming to block HHS guidance requiring physicians to perform abortions in the cases of emergency.

The White House is considering a limited public health directive intended to protect nationwide access to abortion medication, according to three people familiar with the discussions, a move that would rely on Public Readiness and Emergency Preparedness Act powers. Democratic lawmakers and reproductive rights groups have urged the White House to utilize PREP Act authority, which would safeguard physicians, pharmacies and others from liability for providing abortion pills to people throughout the United States, even to those living in states with bans or major restrictions on the procedure.

In a 228-195 vote, the House passed a bill to codify the federal right to contraception by penalizing those who restrict access to oral, emergency and long-acting reversible contraceptives, in addition to other birth control methods. Eight Republicans joined 220 Democrats in the vote, which came weeks after the Supreme Court's ruling to overturn Roe v. Wade, but the legislation faces tougher odds in the Senate, where GOP lawmakers have expressed concerns about the breadth of the bill.

STAT OF THE WEEK

TOP STORIES

- The White House will host a summit tomorrow to kick off a new phase in COVID-19 immunizations, convening top federal officials, scientists and pharmaceutical executives from Pfizer Inc. and Moderna Inc. to plot a course for the development of vaccine technologies that target new variants and lower infection and transmission rates. Ashish Jha, the White House's COVID-19 response coordinator, acknowledged that more money from Congress will be required to launch a campaign for the next generation of vaccines, which he said "are going to be far more durable, that are going to provide far longer-lasting protection, no matter what the virus does or how it evolves." (Stat News)

- The Health and Human Services Department is considering whether to declare monkeypox a public health emergency, Jha said, though he believes the outbreak "can be contained" in the country with testing and vaccines. The World Health Organization on Saturday labeled the outbreak a public health emergency of international concern, while Dr. Anthony Fauci said the United States should have an additional 750,000 monkeypox vaccine doses by the end of July. (Bloomberg)

- Sen. Amy Klobuchar (D-Minn.), chair of the Senate Judiciary antitrust subcommittee, asked the Federal Trade Commission to investigate Amazon.com Inc.'s proposed $3.9 billion acquisition of One Medical, the network of primary-care clinics. Klobuchar said in her letter to the FTC that the deal "raises questions about potential anticompetitive effects related to the pharmacy services business Amazon already owns and about preferencing vendors who offer other services through Amazon." (The Hill)

- Long COVID could affect between 5% and 10% of children who are infected with the virus, according to estimates from an international study published in the JAMA Network Open journal, far less than the roughly 1 in 3 adults who will go on to have long-term symptoms. Some predictive factors for whether children will suffer from long COVID include having at least seven symptoms during the initial infection phase and being hospitalized for more than two days, while kids 14 and older are higher risk than their younger counterparts. WHAT ELSE YOU NEED TO KNOW

White House COVID chief confirms Biden has BA.5 subvariant, says he's "feeling much, much better"

Melissa Quinn, CBS News

Dr. Ashish Jha, the White House COVID-19 response coordinator, confirmed Sunday that President Biden was infected with the highly transmissible BA.5 subvariant of the coronavirus but said the president is "doing just fine" as he continues to isolate.

Think You've Never Had Covid-19? Think Again.

Julie Wernau, The Wall Street Journal

For many, the explanation is likely that they have in fact been infected with the virus at some point without realizing it, said Susan Kline, professor of medicine at the University of Minnesota Medical School. About 40% of confirmed Covid-19 cases are asymptomatic, according to a meta-analysis published in December in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Scientists are narrowing in on why some people keep avoiding Covid. BA.5 could end that luck.

Aria Bendix, NBC News

Beyond behavior, a person's genetics, T cells and the effects of inflammatory conditions like allergies could influence their Covid risk — but only to a point.

Covid-19 Lab Companies Retrench as Rapid Tests Take Over

Brianna Abbott, The Wall Street Journal

More people checking for Covid-19 infections are choosing rapid, at-home antigen tests over PCR tests processed at laboratories, making variant-driven waves harder to track and helping to spur a retrenchment in testing capacity that labs had built up over the pandemic.

America Is Running Out of 'COVID Virgins'

Yasmin Tayag, The Atlantic

The Institute of Health Metrics and Evaluation suggests that as of earlier this month, 82 percent of Americans have been infected with the coronavirus at least once. Some of those people might still think they're never had the virus: Asymptomatic infections happen, and mild symptoms are sometimes brushed off as allergies or a cold. Now that we're battling BA.5, the most contagious and vaccine-dodging Omicron offshoot yet, many people are facing their second, third, or even fourth infections.

Slow patient uptake of Pfizer's Covid drug hints at end to sales boom

Jamie Smyth, Financial Times

Paxlovid dominates antiviral treatment market but weak demand could cause supply glut, health data group Airfinity says.

GOP plots Fauci probe after midterms

Nathaniel Weixel, The Hill

Congressional Republicans are eagerly floating investigations into Anthony Fauci and the Biden administration's response to the coronavirus pandemic if they win back control of the House or Senate in the midterm elections.

GENERAL

Why is insulin still so expensive for diabetes patients in the U.S.?

Berkeley Lovelace Jr., NBC News

More than 1 in 10 patients who use insulin report spending a significant part of their incomes on the drug.

Monkeypox is being driven overwhelmingly by sex between men, major study finds

Benjamin Ryan and Matt Lavietes, NBC News

Of the 528 confirmed cases reviewed, 95% are believed to have transmitted during sex between men, according to a new paper in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Collateral damage of the Fed's interest rate hikes: People who put medical bills on credit cards

Bob Herman, Stat News

There's a new wrinkle for patients who use plastic: Under new federal monetary policy, they will likely be saddled with higher interest rates and tighter credit limits. That will jeopardize their creditworthiness, increase their costs, and potentially lead to more debt collection lawsuits and wage garnishments for people who can't keep up, said Erika Rickard, an attorney who studies the civil legal system for the Pew Charitable Trusts.

FDA Moves to Boost Food, Drug Safety Via Remote Review Tools

Celine Castronuovo, Bloomberg Law

The FDA plans to increase its use of remote assessments across all product areas to supplement in-person inspections and other regulatory activities beyond the Covid-19 public health emergency.

Napping regularly linked to high blood pressure and stroke, study finds

Sandee LaMotte, CNN

Study participants who typically napped during the day were 12% more likely to develop high blood pressure over time and were 24% more likely to have a stroke compared with people who never napped.

After Roe, Pregnant Women With Cancer Diagnoses May Face Wrenching Choices

Gina Kolata, The New York Times

Urgent questions arise about how care of pregnant women with cancer will change in states where women are unable to terminate pregnancies

Interstate Abortion Travel Is Already Straining Parts of the System

Margot Sanger-Katz et al., The New York Times

The reversal of Roe v. Wade did not affect the legal status of abortion in New Mexico, where seven clinics are still operating. But that does not mean an abortion is easy to obtain there.

Advocates call for better messaging for minority groups as White House rolls out post-Roe response

Candice Norwood, The 19th

Lawmakers and organizations are asking officials to keep in mind some of the country's most vulnerable communities: immigrants and people of color.

Georgia Prosecutors Stand Firm Against Abortion Ban After Ruling

Jalen Brown, Bloomberg Law

Georgia's elected prosecutors and a state lawmaker said they stand by their commitments against criminalizing reproductive health decisions after a federal appeals court allowed the state's six-week abortion ban to take effect.

Cautious optimism from PE investors in fertility care

Sarah Pringle, Axios

Private equity owners of the country's leading IVF treatment platforms tell us they are getting educated on state laws and preparing for the aftermath of the June 24 Dobbs ruling.

Acne bacteria, study suggests, thrive when skin oil turns infection-fighting cells into accomplices

Isabella Cueto, Stat News

Cutibacterium acnes, a crunchy Cheeto-shaped bug that lives on human skin, loves the oily pocket around hair follicles. No face is quite as greasy as that of adolescents, flooded with hormones that grow hair, deepen voices, and ramp up production of sebum, a secretion that makes the skin a moist and protective barrier.

PAYERS

Health disparities percolate into work-based coverage

Adriel Bettelheim, Axios

The more than 150 million Americans who get their health coverage through work face significant inequities by race and ethnicity while managing complex health conditions, a new analysis from Morgan Health and NORC at the University of Chicago finds.

Hospitals across the country are grappling with widespread staffing shortages, complicating preparations for a potential Covid-19 surge as the BA.5 subvariant drives up cases, hospital admissions and deaths.

Tenet reins in Q2 labor costs, stock jumps

Sydney Halleman and Hailey Mensik, Healthcare Dive

Lower expenses for labor costs for salaries, wages and benefits cushioned Tenet's earnings, falling 6.8% year over year in the second quarter. Tenet's labor expenses also fell in the first quarter this year, making it an outlier among other for-profit peers as labor costs at hospitals have been spiking across the country.

HCA beats Wall Street expectations in Q2 after earlier dip in guidance

Hailey Mensik and Sydney Halleman, Healthcare Dive

The Nashville, Tennessee-based for-profit chain reported $14.8 billion in revenue compared to $14.4 billion in the second quarter of 2021, beating expectations by 0.6%, according to a report by SVB Securities. Adjusted EBITDA came in at $3.04 billion, nearly 10% above SVB's model.

Amazon already knows a lot about me, but One Medical takes it to a whole new level

Ari Levy, CNBC

One Medical knows a lot about me. In addition to many years of clinic visits and virtual chats, I use the mobile app to record my blood pressure and resting heart rate, check my lab results and renew prescriptions as needed. For that, I pay a membership fee of $199 a year. But I never took into account the possibility that Amazon may one day own One Medical.

Deal between Amazon and One Medical has massive implications for the future of primary care

Katherine A. Gergen-Barnett and Russell S. Phillips, Stat News

Amazon's announcement that it would acquire One Medical, a primary care provider, for $3.9 billion — its largest health care acquisition to date — was for many Americans likely just another item on the ever-expanding news ticker tape. But an acquisition of a primary care company of this size by a tech giant like Amazon should be taken seriously because of its massive implications for the future of primary care, health care delivery, and health equity.

TOOLKIT: 988 Suicide & Crisis Lifeline Partner Toolkit

This 988 Partner Toolkit by Substance Abuse and and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) recognizes the need for governments, states, territories, tribes, crisis centers, and partners to speak with one voice to ensure there is a clear understanding about what 988 is and how it will work.

The 988 dialing code operates through what was formerly known as the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline. It is a network of over 200 locally operated and funded crisis centers around the country.

988 offers 24/7 access to trained crisis counselors who can help people experiencing mental health-related distress. That could be:

- Thoughts of suicide
- Mental health or substance use crisis, or
- Any other kind of emotion distress

SAMHSA sees 988 as a first step towards a transformed crisis care system in much the same way as emergency medical services have expanded in the US.

3 in 4 Voters Back Federal Protections for Birth Control Access
The House last week narrowly passed a bill to federally protect a person's right to access contraception, with eight Republicans joining Democrats in legislation that appears likely to fail in the Senate. A new Morning Consult/Politico survey found that voters are much less divided on the issue.

Congressional passage of a federal law to protect birth control access is supported by 75% of registered voters, including 87% of Democrats, 75% of independents and 62% of Republicans. Read more from Morning Consult senior politics reporter Eli Yokley here: Congress Should Act to Protect Same-Sex Marriage Nationwide, Most Voters Say.

TOP STORIES

- Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra said the agency will restore health care nondiscrimination rules on gender identity and sexual orientation that the Trump administration scrapped two years ago, in addition to issuing new protections that ensure access to care for members of the LGBTQ community. The new regulations would reinstate Affordable Care Act nondiscrimination requirements for providers, payers and other groups that participate in federal health care programs, as well as introducing a new rule to label Medicare Part B as federal financial assistance. (Modern Healthcare)

- The White House is planning to name a national monkeypox coordinator, with expertise in epidemic response and government operations among the primary qualifications it seeks for the role, according to two people familiar with the plan. Federal officials are also aiming to make a decision this week on whether the outbreak should be declared a public health emergency, a move that could come alongside a planned announcement of the distribution of 800,000 monkeypox vaccine doses, two sources said. (The Washington Post)

- A federal appeals court in New York upheld a lower-court ruling against Pfizer Inc. that said the drugmaker's Direct Copay Assistance Program — an effort to cover patient co-pays on the heart medicines Vyndaqel and Vyndamax — violated an anti-kickback law. The federal government had argued that Pfizer's financial support for reimbursable drugs would result in Medicare having to cover "astronomical" drug prices, while Pfizer said in a statement that the program "would represent a fair and effective way to lower out-of-pocket costs and help ensure affordable access to this important medicine." (Reuters)

- Centene Corp. said it is selling its Spanish and Central European businesses to French private hospital company Vivalto Santé for an undisclosed amount as the country's largest Medicaid managed care organization looks to boost its profit margin and use those funds to repurchase stock and lower debt. (Healthcare Dive) Centene reported $35.94 billion in revenue for the second quarter, surpassing analysts' expectations. (The Associated Press)

CORONAVIRUS

Could Genetics Be the Key to Never Getting the Coronavirus?

Katherine J. Wu, The Atlantic

Scientists have known for decades that some people can be resistant to HIV infection. Why not the coronavirus, too?

Biden's Covid symptoms 'almost completely resolved,' doctor says

Shannon Pettypiece, NBC News

Biden will continue to isolate at the White House for at least five days from his diagnosis and only leave isolation when he has received a negative Covid test, the White House has said.

Encouraged by right-wing doctor groups, desperate patients turn to ivermectin for long Covid

Olivia Goldhill, Stat News

A horse dewormer and treatment for some human parasites, ivermectin was initially promoted, despite the lack of research, as a way to treat or prevent Covid infections. Now it is increasingly being marketed for long Covid, pushed by physicians with ties to political groups spreading anti-vaccine and anti-science messaging.

More than 40% of parents of young kids say they will not get their child a Covid-19 vaccine, survey finds

Virginia Langmaid, CNN

New survey results published Tuesday by the Kaiser Family Foundation indicate that 43% of parents of children under 5 in the US say they will not get their child vaccinated against Covid-19, the highest percentage in the year that KFF's Vaccine Monitor survey has been asking the question.

Senators demand answers about federal prisons' scant use of Covid therapeutics

Nicholas Florko, Stat News

Fourteen senators are demanding that the federal Bureau of Prisons explain its scant use of Covid-19 therapeutics. The letter is based on STAT's May reporting showing that the agency used just a fraction of the Covid-19 drugs it was allotted by the federal government. It urges the bureau's leadership to revamp its approach toward Covid-19 testing in an effort to catch more infections that could benefit from these drugs, which need to be given early in a person's illness.

Fauci holds up BA.5 booster as best approach to handling COVID this fall

Joseph Choi, The Hill

Anthony Fauci, President Biden's chief medical adviser, said on Monday that a COVID-19 vaccine booster specific to the BA.5 omicron subvariant — which is currently dominant in the U.S. — is the "best guess" for dealing with the virus this fall amid the ever-evolving coronavirus pandemic.

How to Live With Covid When You Are Tired of Living With Covid

Knvul Sheikh and Hannah Seo, The New York Times

The BA.5 surge is a reminder that we need to take precautions to avoid illness, slow the relentless cycle of new variants and minimize the disruption to our daily lives.

GENERAL

House Democrats add child nutrition to legislative menu

Ellyn Ferguson, Roll Call

The House Education and Labor Committee is making a late-session push to renew child nutrition programs and incorporate changes made to cope with the pandemic, but disagreements could slow the reauthorization of a nutrition law that expired in 2015.

Biden's Drug Czar Is Leading the Charge for a 'Harm Reduction' Approach

Noah Weiland, The New York Times

Experts describe the president's drug control strategy as the most progressive since Richard Nixon appointed the nation's first drug czar in 1971.

Inside America's obesity epidemic: How America's weight (and weight loss) aren't so simple

Karen Weintraub, USA Today

More than 4 in 10 Americans now fit the medical definition for having obesity, putting them at risk for serious health problems, including diabetes, heart disease and some types of cancer. The pandemic increased the stakes. In its first year, nearly one-third of severe COVID-19 cases were blamed on excess weight.

Monkeypox could spread well beyond communities of gay and bisexual men, WHO says

Karen Gilchrist, CNBC

The World Health Organization on Monday cautioned against complacency in the rapidly escalating monkeypox outbreak, saying there is no guarantee that the virus will continue to spread within specific communities.

Epidemiologists warn the U.S. reaches a critical moment to contain monkeypox

Becky Sullivan, NPR News

On the heels of a public health emergency declaration from the World Health Organization, epidemiologists and public health experts warn the U.S. is running out of time to contain a monkeypox outbreak that has infected nearly 3,000 Americans.

The U.S. rate of C-section births continues to climb

Linda Searing, The Washington Post

Births by Caesarean section increased to about 32 percent of all U.S. births last year, continuing what has been a small but steady increase for much of the past 25 years, according to a new report from the National Center for Health Statistics, which is part of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

People with disabilities weigh medication, pregnancy in post-Roe world

Meena Venkataramanan, The Washington Post

After the Supreme Court struck down federal abortion protections, people with disabilities are considering the risks of pregnancy while taking medications that could harm a fetus.

Dozens of University of Michigan medical students walk out on anti-abortion keynote speaker

Brad Dress, The Hill

Throngs of incoming medical students, known as white coats, stood up as soon as Kristin Collier, an assistant professor of medicine at the University of Michigan, began speaking at the Hill Auditorium during the white coat ceremony in the city of Ann Arbor.

Indiana abortion debate draws protest crowds, vice president

Tom Davies and Arleigh Rodgers, The Associated Press

Vice President Kamala Harris said a proposal from Indiana Republicans to ban nearly all abortions in the state reflects a health care crisis in the country and she met Monday with Democratic state legislators on the first day of a contentious special legislative session on the issue.

Studies find more clues to potential cause of severe hepatitis cases in children

Jennifer Rigby, Reuters

The recent rise in cases of acute hepatitis among children is likely linked to a common childhood virus, two independent studies from British researchers have suggested.

Allegations of fabricated research undermine key Alzheimer's theory

Aria Bendix and Denise Chow, NBC News

A six-month investigation by Science magazine uncovered evidence that images in the much-cited study, published 16 years ago in the journal Nature, may have been doctored.

McDonald's is criticized for leaving antibiotic reduction targets off its menu

Ed Silverman, Stat News

The fast-food giant is being accused of backtracking on a commitment made four years ago to set targets for reducing the use of medically important antibiotics by the end of 2020. Late last year, the advocacy groups were upset that McDonald's had not yet followed through, but they now argue the company has quietly altered its policy in way that targets are no longer being established at all.

PAYERS

Health insurance is not a proxy for good health, study says

Nona Tepper, Modern Healthcare

Health inequities and access issues exist among individuals who receive health insurance through their employer, despite arguments that access to commercial insurance acts as a great equalizer among patients, according to a study published Monday by NORC at the University of Chicago.

Affordable Care Act lawsuit threatens contraception access

Caitlin Owens, Axios

The Affordable Care Act is once again being challenged in federal court, this time with big implications for the private insurance market that dovetail with concerns about contraception access in the post-Roe world.

PROVIDERS

Big Hospitals Provide Skimpy Charity Care—Despite Billions in Tax Breaks

Anna Wilde Mathews et al., The Wall Street Journal

Nonprofit hospitals get billions of dollars in tax breaks in exchange for providing support to their communities. A Wall Street Journal analysis shows they are often not particularly generous.

CMS fix for 340B Supreme Court ruling divides providers

Maya Goldman, Modern Healthcare

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services's potential response to a Supreme Court decision that invalidated cuts to 340B payments spotlights the divide between providers that participate in the drug-discount program and those that don't.

Post-Roe drug delays weigh on patients, providers

Arielle Dreher, Axios

The post-Roe battlefield is spreading to pharmacies, where drugs that can cause fetal abnormalities or that have multiple uses that include ending pregnancies are being put through more scrutiny.

PHARMA, BIOTECH AND DEVICES

'What can we do?': Pharma lobbyists face their biggest test in a decade, as Democrats barrel toward a vote on drug pricing

Rachel Cohrs, Stat News

The pharmaceutical industry, notorious for its deep pockets and aggressive lobbying tactics, has a nearly spotless record dominating policy fights. Now, the sector is staring down its biggest test in at least a decade.

Monkeypox Vaccine Maker Considers 24-Hour Emergency Production

Christian Wienberg, Bloomberg

Bavarian Nordic A/S, the only company with a vaccine approved for monkeypox, said it's preparing to run production through the night to meet surging demand after the virus outbreak was declared a global emergency.

Despite their anger over high drug prices, Americans are giving pharma credit for helping contain Covid-19

Nicholas Florko, Stat News

Nearly three quarters of Americans give the pharmaceutical industry credit for helping contain Covid-19 — and for a sector that's been roundly criticized for nearly a decade, that's a reason to celebrate.

Amazon will see you now: reading between the lines of the One Medical acquisition

Rebecca Pifer, Healthcare Dive

The acquisition, which brings almost 190 clinics, a subscription telehealth service, an electronic health record and contracts with thousands of employer clients under Amazon's umbrella, should fast-track the e-commerce giant's goal of assembling a vertically integrated healthcare business to penetrate the employer market, experts said.

Digital health company Included Health cuts workforce as part of restructuring move

Heather Landi, Fierce Healthcare

Virtual care company Included Health, which was formed through the merger of Grand Rounds Health and Doctor on Demand last year, recently reduced its headcount by less than 6%, a company spokesperson confirmed to Fierce Healthcare.

ADHD Startup's Business Surged, Followed by Complaints and Concerns

Ike Swetlitz and Jackie Davalos, Bloomberg

Mental-health startup Done grew quickly by offering online prescriptions for ADHD, touting "worry free" refills and "next day" appointments. But in recent months, an influx of patients and a focus on growth has overwhelmed the company's clinicians and exacerbated their concerns about Done's ability to properly look after patients.

It's time to expose the secret drug scam at the heart of American health care

Howard Dean, Fortune

A drug's out-of-pocket cost is mostly the result of decisions made by insurance companies and the "pharmacy benefit managers" (PBMs) they hire to administer prescription drug plans and haggle with pharmaceutical firms for discounts.

The Latest Legal Challenge to the Affordable Care Act's Preventive Services Guarantee

The Commonwealth Fund

Filed by a group of employers and individuals who object to providing certain kinds of preventive care or simply don't want to pay for preventive care they feel they don't need, the suit argues that the ACA's requirement for insurers and health plans is unconstitutional. If it succeeds, millions of Americans could lose access to all preventive care guaranteed by the ACA or be forced to pay out of pocket for these vital services.

Free Preventive Services Improve Access to Care

Urban Institute and Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Access to preventive services like cancer screenings, vaccinations, and contraception plays a key role in advancing public health. If the ACA's preventive services coverage requirement is overturned, millions could lose access to no-cost preventive healthcare.

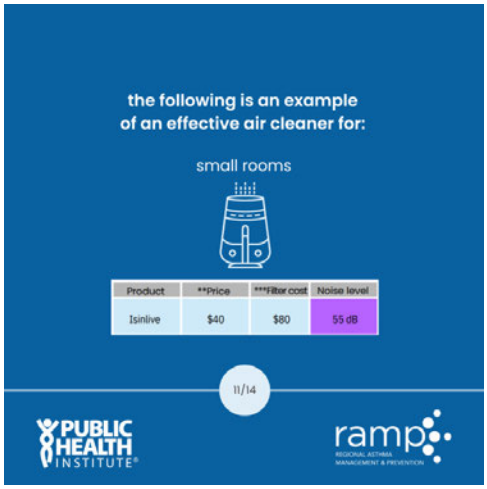
Below, we're highlighting some of the PHI experts and programs working to address the health impacts of wildfires, extreme heat and climate change. Plus, you'll find more tools, resources and examples to help you better prepare, including strategies to reach systemically excluded communities with key resources and information—and invest in transformative solutions to promote safety, equity and resiliency.



Gina Solomon, MD, MPH

Director, Achieving Resilient Communities (ARC); Science for Toxic Exposure Prevention

Farmworker communities are hit especially hard by climate change. "We rely on farmworkers for our food, and what we need to do is make sure that they're protected from heat and wildfire smoke—that they're informed about what to do, and that they're actually paid for the days when it's not safe for them to work," says PHI's Dr. Gina Solomon.

Anne Kelsey Lamb, MPH

Director, Regional Asthma Management and Prevention (RAMP)

"When we think about the recommendations that experts make during wildfire smoke events, a lot of those simply aren't feasible for low-income residents," explains PHI's Anne Kelsey Lamb, highlighting how social determinants like substandard housing, limited transportation options and cost of air filtration units contribute to increased smoke exposures for low-income communities.

Designing Inclusive, Accessible Emergency Planning for All

As part of a statewide campaign in 2020, PHI's Center on Disability engaged residents in three California counties to make emergency preparedness inclusive of people with disabilities, seniors and older adults, and people in poverty. Using a people-centered approach, the Center connected more than 300,000 people to emergency planning information, and created written and online inclusive planning tools to help individuals prepare for emergencies including wildfires, extreme heat and more.

Videos: Farmworkers on Heat, Wildfires & Health

Farmworkers are 20 times more likely to die from heat stress than the US workforce overall. As climate change exacerbates heat and wildfire smoke, resilience efforts in farmworker communities will be crucial. To help increase awareness and push for action, farmworker leaders from PHI's Achieving Resilient Communities farmworker advisory committee participated in a digital storytelling workshop to develop short videos, in Mixteco and Spanish, that share their personal lived experiences with heat and wildfire smoke.

Tips: Choosing A Safe, Effective Air Cleaner

Air cleaners can help clear out wildfire smoke particles and other asthma triggers, but finding the right purifier can be confusing and expensive. See tips to choose safe, effective and affordable air cleaners, released in partnership by PHI's Regional Asthma Management and Prevention and PHI's Dr. Gina Solomon. The fact sheet includes tips for selecting an air cleaner based on room size, cost considerations, CARB and other certifications to look for, noise level and more.

Researching Wildfires & Water Contamination

After California's 2018 Paradise Fire, residents were concerned about drinking water safety in their homes. In response, PHI's Gina Solomon, our Tracking California and UCSF researchers tested water samples, and provided easy-to-understand results directly to participants and residents—helping to mitigate some of the trauma from the wildfire and support rebuilding a sense of community and personal agency.

Helping Communities Monitor Air Quality in Real-Time

In 2015, PHI's Tracking California partnered to install 40 low-cost, community managed air monitors across Imperial County. They discovered that the state's monitors had likely been missing many pollution events for years: in the first five months, the community monitors detected 1,426 high air pollution episodes—more than twelve times as many as the state system detected.

Fact Sheet: How Schools Can Protect Kids from Wildfire Smoke

Schools have a role in protecting kids, staff and communities against wildfire smoke. In this resource, PHI's Regional Asthma Management and Prevention and partners share guidance for California schools. One tip: If there's smoke outside, the best place to be is an indoor space with good air quality. If outdoors for brief periods, kids should wear NIOSH-certified N95 masks.

How to Prepare for Wildfire Smoke Events

Find tips, tools and resources to prepare for and stay safe during wildfire smoke events, created by PHI's Regional Asthma Management and Prevention. Designed for asthma educators to use with clients, the tips can also be used by individuals to learn how to minimize exposure to smoke and harmful air pollutants. For example, if you have a central ducted air conditioning and heating system, set the system to "on" rather than "auto."

Building a Multi-Sector, Community-Driven Movement for Climate, Health & Equity

Climate change is one of the greatest public health challenges of the 21st century. PHI advocates for healthy and climate-resilient communities that have the right tools to mitigate and adapt to climate change, while promoting strategies to reduce the overall factors which drive climate change in the first place—focusing on the vulnerable communities impacted worst and first. Explore our most popular tools and resources to guide your work:

- Climate Change, Health, and Equity: Opportunities for Action: PHI's Center for Climate Change and Health presents a conceptual framework to demonstrate how climate change, health and equity are linked, and identifies opportunities and recommendations for action.
- Policy Agenda: Green Infrastructure, Public Health and Equity: Green infrastructure can address climate change, promote community resilience and invest in neighborhoods that have been harmed by disinvestment, redlining and other racist policies. PHI's Public Health Alliance of Southern California looks at the existing barriers and local, state and federal policy opportunities to expand the use of green infrastructure.
- A Physician's Guide to Climate Change, Health and Equity: Doctors are often trusted voices on health issues, making them invaluable messengers on climate change. This guide from PHI's Center of Climate Change and Health explores climate change and topics like food security, infectious diseases and mental health; and the impacts on vulnerable populations including pregnant people, workers and children.

A Slight Rise in Omicron Concern Among the Vaccinated
Over the past month, the country has experienced a surge in COVID-19 cases thanks to the BA.5 omicron subvariant. If you squint, that rise is reflected in Morning Consult's latest tracking data — at least among some sections of the public.

The share of vaccinated U.S. adults who say they're concerned about omicron has inched up 4 percentage points to 69%. Over the same period, unvaccinated adults were essentially unmoved, with 42% expressing concern over the variant.

You can find more freshly updated data on public attitudes toward COVID-19's continuing impacts on health, politics and the economy here: Return to Normal: Views on the Pandemic.

TOP STORIES

- The price tag to fight the country's monkeypox outbreak could be nearly $7 billion, according to Biden administration estimates detailed in a memo to the president and shared with lawmakers, though a formal request for those funds — which would cover monkeypox tests, vaccine doses and treatments — was not made. The administration has also sought up to $31.4 billion in new COVID-19 aid, though previous efforts to secure those funds in Congress have been thwarted by Republicans, an obstacle that could also emerge for future monkeypox aid requests. (The Washington Post)

- Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. agreed to a tentative settlement of up to $4.25 billion with about 2,500 local governments, states and tribes over the Israeli drugmaker's role in the opioid epidemic. The deal, which won't be finalized until a strong majority of those entities vote in favor of it, requires Teva to make payments over the course of 13 years, giving states and communities the option to accept parts of those payouts in overdose reversal drugs instead of cash. (The New York Times)

- The Department of Justice has launched a criminal investigation into Cassava Sciences Inc. over allegations that the Austin, Texas-based biotech manipulated and misrepresented research on its experimental Alzheimer's drug, according to two people familiar with the probe. Cassava, which has received more than $20 million from the National Institutes of Health to support the development of simufilam, the Alzheimer's drug in question, is also being investigated by the Securities and Exchange

Commission over claims it made in a Food and Drug Administration petition, the sources said. (Reuters)

- 3M Co. said its health care business, which generated about $8.6 billion in sales last year and includes products for wound care, oral care, information technology and biopharma filtration, will be spun off into a public company. The St. Paul, Minn.-based conglomerate also said it was seeking bankruptcy protection for a subsidiary that previously manufactured military earplugs, which thousands of veterans say damaged their hearing. Facebook considers relaxing COVID-19 misinformation policies

Chris Morris, Fortune

Facebook was flooded with misinformation about COVID-19 in the early days of the pandemic and quickly adopted a policy to remove it. But as the virus evolves, the company is wondering if it should be less hands on.

New studies agree that animals sold at Wuhan market are most likely what started Covid-19 pandemic

Jen Christensen, CNN

In June, the World Health Organization recommended that scientists continue to research all possible origins of the Covid-19 pandemic, including a lab leak. Two newly published studies take totally different approaches but arrive at the same conclusion: The Huanan Seafood Market in Wuhan, China, was most likely the epicenter for the coronavirus.

Levine, assistant secretary for health, said the move represents another important step toward securing more equitable care.

How Polio Crept Back Into the U.S.

Robin Fields, ProPublica

U.S. public health agencies generally don't test wastewater for signs of polio. That may have given the virus time to circulate silently before it paralyzed a New York man.

High potency cannabis linked to increased risk of psychosis and addiction, study suggests

Linda Carroll, NBC News

The high potency cannabis that is now widely available may raise the risk of both psychosis and addiction, a report published Monday in The Lancet Psychiatry finds.

Exercise more than the recommended amounts for the longest life, study says

Madeline Holcombe, CNN

Adults should get 150 to 300 minutes of moderate physical activity or 75 to 150 minutes of vigorous physical activity a week, according to the World Health Organization. But people who surpass those levels live longer than those who don't.

How will the obesity epidemic end? With kids.

Karen Weintraub, USA Today

More than half of adolescents with obesity had met the criteria by age 5, according to one 2018 study. And adolescents were more likely to have obesity if they were relatively large at birth, the study found, meaning risk starts before a child is even born.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

We must contain monkeypox before it becomes a broader threat

Leana S. Wen, The Washington Post

Most Americans do not have to worry about contracting monkeypox right now. But we cannot discount the possibility that it becomes a broader threat. That's why the World Health Organization was right to declare the disease a global health emergency and why containing it must be a top priority for the Biden administration.

RESEARCH REPORTS

SARS-CoV-2 mRNA vaccination elicits robust antibody responses in children

Yannic C. Bartsch et al., Science Translational Medicine

Although children have been largely spared from coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19), the emergence of severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) variants of concern (VOC) with increased transmissibility, combined with fluctuating mask mandates and school re-openings, have led to increased infections and disease among children. Thus, there is an urgent need to roll out COVID-19 vaccines to children of all ages.

  - Truth Initiative provides three lessons learned from failures of past tobacco regulations to prevent loopholes in its final rules that would remove menthol cigarettes and flavored cigars from the market.
  - Truth Initiative research published in Nicotine & Tobacco Research concludes that almost an entire sample of mailed ads (96%) for tobacco products included price incentives like coupons and discount codes.

- The American Journal of Public Health features a special section on FDA's 2020 Guidance for Industry about marketing flavors for e-cigarettes in its July issue.

- The American Lung Association developed a brief, which assists public health staff in understanding the role of state insurance commissioners and leveraging relationships with important stakeholders.

- SAMHSA provides behavioral health agencies with a step-by-step guide to becoming a tobacco-free facility and treating tobacco use in clients and staff.

State News

- A Washington County, Oregon judge issued an opinion on the law prohibiting the sale of flavored tobacco products, stating that the county cannot immediately require stores to stop stocking their shelves with flavored tobacco products, since the county had no immediate plans to enforce the ordinance.

- A Prevention Medicine Reports analysis of cross-sectional 2004 and 2013-2014 New York City Health and Nutrition Examination Survey data concluded that secondhand smoke exposure among New York City non-smokers has declined over time and odds of

ABOUT THE TOBACCO CONTROL NETWORK
The TCN's mission is to improve the public's health by providing education and state-based expertise to tobacco prevention and control at the state and national levels.

The TCN is a network of tobacco program managers and staff from state and territorial health departments as well as Funder's Alliance organizations, and a peer group of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officials (ASTHO) on behalf of the CDC's Office on Smoking and Health.

ABOUT ASTHO
The Association of State and Territorial Health Officials is the national nonprofit association representing the state and territorial public health agencies of the United States, the U.S. Territories, and the District of Columbia. ASTHO members, the chief health officials of these jurisdictions, are dedicated to formulating and influencing sound public health policy and to ensuring excellence in state-based public health practice.

IN THE NEWS

- Intelligencer sheds light on efforts to close the synthetic-nicotine loophole and how many companies, Air Bar included, remain in stores though they've already been told by FDA to stop selling in the United States.

Research

- A Nicotine & Tobacco Research sequential analysis of data collected from 34 NCI-designated cancer centers concluded that the proportion of centers offering remote treatment services increased each year for Quitline referrals, telephone counseling, and referrals to Smokefree TXT, while centers offering video-based counseling increased 41% from 2020 to 2021.

- A Nicotine & Tobacco Research analysis of advertisement data from 106 convenience stores and gas stations around 42 middle and high schools found that schools with a higher enrollment of Hispanic/Latino and economically disadvantaged students were surrounded with significantly greater advertising at TROs than schools with lower enrollment of these groups.

- An analysis published in Tobacco Control, which used estimates from a recent expert elicitation on behavioral impacts of a menthol cigarette ban on the non-Hispanic Black population, found that under the menthol ban scenario, smoking- and vaping-attributable deaths are estimated to fall by about 18.5%, while life years lost will decline by 22.1%, which translate to 255,895 premature deaths averted, and 4.0 million life years gained, over a 40-year period.

- A Tobacco Control analysis an online 3x2 within-subjects experiment testing the effects of cigarillo pack size (1, 2, 5) and price (actual price, standardized price per stick) on intentions to purchase and smoke cigarillos concluded that intentions to buy and smoke were strongest for lower priced singles and

- A three-year extension of Affordable Care Act subsidies and a measure to allow Medicare to negotiate the prices of some prescription drugs officially made the cut in Democrats' reconciliation bill, as Sen. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.) and Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.) stunned Capitol Hill with the announcement that they had reached a deal on a package that also resurrected several climate and tax priorities. The Inflation Reduction Act of 2022 adds an additional year of ACA subsidies to the previously negotiated terms, pushing the next expiration date past the 2024 midterm elections, while a summary of the legislation said the drug pricing provision would save the government $288 billion. (The Wall Street Journal)

- The Department of Health and Human Services will likely declare monkeypox a public health emergency within the next several days, two people with knowledge of the matter said, a move that comes after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention designated the disease as a nationally notifiable condition to standardize case identification and bolster data-sharing among states. (Politico) HHS said it will make available about 786,000 monkeypox vaccine doses, after the Food and Drug Administration signed off on the Danish-made Jynneos vaccine for distribution. (CNBC)

- In a 416-12 vote, the House passed a bill to extend telehealth reimbursement flexibilities for two years, sending the legislation, which was endorsed by powerful trade groups such as the American Medical Association and the Connected Health Initiative, to the Senate. Introduced in 2021 by Reps. Liz Cheney (R-Wyo.) and Debbie Dingell (D-Mich.), the rule prolongs Medicare flexibilities in telehealth payments that were enacted during the COVID-19 pandemic. (Modern Healthcare)

- AbbVie Inc.'s Allergan division has struck a deal to pay over $2 billion to settle more than 3,000 lawsuits filed by state and local governments over the drugmaker's marketing of its Kadian opioid painkiller, people familiar with the matter said, though the timeline of payouts and other details are still being finalized. The agreement, part of consolidated opioid litigation before a federal judge in Cleveland, comes days after Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. reached a $4 billion settlement, which the Israeli drugmaker said was contingent on Allergan — whose generics line was bought by Teva in 2016 — also striking a deal. Health care budget bill to face open-ended 'vote-a-rama'

Paul M. Krawzak, Roll Call

The Senate may be preparing to take up a single-issue, health care budget package under the jurisdiction of a single committee — Finance. But the nature of the budget reconciliation process means the bill will be open for amendment on virtually any topic the original legislation was intended to address, from climate change to taxes to child care.

Struggle to protect gay, bisexual men from monkeypox exposes inequities

Fenit Nirappil, The Washington Post

The struggle for limited resources as tens of thousands of at-risk gay and bisexual men try to get vaccinated, tested and treated during the growing monkeypox outbreak has exposed deep disparities in the gay community. While urban professionals scramble to protect themselves from a disease that can cause searing symptoms and force weeks of isolation, people of color, lower-income individuals and those living outside large cities face even greater challenges accessing care for the latest viral threat hanging over gay life.

Daily Vitamin D supplements don't lower risk of bone fractures, study finds

Elissa Welle, Stat News

Whether created from sunlight or taken in by food, vitamin D assists in the mineralizing and maintenance of bone. It is also thought to keep bones healthy as they age, prompting one in three adults aged 60 and older in the U.S. to take a vitamin D supplement and another third to take a multivitamin. Yet, it has long been unclear just how beneficial the vitamin is in preventing the bone fractures that many older adults dread as they age.

UnitedHealth Plans on Eliminating Out-Of-Pocket Costs for Some Drugs, Raises Financial Guidance

by Tim Casey

Starting as early as next year, UnitedHealth Group expects to have no co-pays or out-of-pocket costs for members in its UnitedHealthcare division's standard fully insured group plans who take several medications, including insulins. The managed care organization made the announcement on July 15, coinciding with the release of the company's second quarter financial results that beat Wall Street analyst expectations.

UnitedHealth targets insulin and epinephrine, among other drugs

- The company's announcement about eliminating out-of-pocket costs for some drugs comes as the company looks to increase its members' medication adherence and reduce their risk for severe illness and hospitalizations. That, in turn, would lower the costs for UnitedHealth and its Optum Rx PBM and improve their financial footing.
- Besides insulin, UnitedHealth will eliminate out-of-pocket costs for epinephrine, which is used to treat severe allergic reactions; glucagon, which is used to treat hypoglycemia; naloxone, which is used to treat opioid overdoses; and albuterol, which is used to treat acute asthma attacks. The plan is subject to customary approval from state regulators and is intended to be implemented as early as Jan. 1, 2023.
- "You've got to think about the consequences of folks who are unfortunately affected by the conditions that these meds address," UnitedHealth CEO Andrew Witty told analysts on a conference call on July 15. "If they don't get the meds when they need them, they're going to end up in the emergency room or worse. And that brings with it enormous personal human consequences and, of course, cost….We believe this is a really appropriate place for us to lean in and address that."

Firm sees lower MLR in 2Q

- For the second quarter, UnitedHealth generated $80.3 billion in revenue, a 12.6% increase from a year ago. The company also had an adjusted net EPS of $5.57, a 19% increase from the same time period last year and easily beating Wall Street's consensus of $5.19, per Bloomberg. In a July 15 note to investors, Barclays analysts Steve Valiquette and Tiffany Yuan attributed the higher adjusted net EPS in large part to UnitedHealth's 81.5% medical loss ratio (MLR), which was better than the 82.5% consensus.
- Valiquette and Yuan noted that the insurer's 82% MLR in the first quarter was offset by a higher-thanexpected selling, general and administrative (SG&A) expense.
- "However, with 2Q22 results today, SG&A was more under control, which allowed for lower-than-expected medical costs to flow directly to the [earnings before interest and taxes] line to drive operational upside," Valiquette and Yuan wrote.
- Evercore ISI analyst Michael Newshel wrote in a note to investors on July 15 that UnitedHealth was being conservative in raising its adjusted net EPS guidance by only $0.20 per share.
- "We view the guidance raise as conservatism given lingering uncertainty about utilization recovery and COVID trends, and note last year [UnitedHealth] also made guidance raises in Q1 and Q2 below the magnitude of quarterly beats but still ended up beating expectations in the back half of the year as well," Newshel wrote.

The FDA last week granted tentative approval to Avadel Pharmaceuticals' narcolepsy drug Lumryz, a potential rival to Jazz Pharmaceuticals' Xyrem, pending the resolution of a patent dispute between the two companies. Lumryz's main advantage over Xyrem is its extended-release formula, whereas Xyrem requires two nightly doses. For the treatment of narcolepsy, Xyrem currently holds covered or better status for 96% of all insured lives in the U.S. under the pharmacy benefit. About 20% of insured lives have preferred access to Xyrem, largely with utilization management restrictions applied.

CMS raises 2023 payment rates for inpatient rehab facilities

The CMS has issued a final rule raising Medicare payment rates for inpatient rehabilitation facilities by 3.9%, or around $275 million, for fiscal 2023. Under the final rule, inpatient rehab facilities must collect patient data, regardless of insurer, starting in 2026, while providers must collect patient assessment instrument data on all inpatient rehab facility patients starting Oct. 1, 2024. Full Story: Becker's Hospital Review (7/27)

USPSTF: Match behavioral counseling to CVD risk

For the 12.2% of the US adult population that does not have cardiovascular disease risk factors, the US Preventive Services Task Force has recommended individual behavioral counseling to help ensure adherence to guidelines for physical activity and healthful eating. A USPSTF report at the Journal of the American Medical Association noted individualized counseling yields "small but statistically significant benefits across a variety of important intermediate health outcomes" for those without CVD risk factors, while intensive behavioral counseling to improve diet quality and physical activity is recommended for those with CVD risk factors. Full Story: Healio (free registration) (7/26)

Adults who exceed exercise guidelines may live longer

Research published in the journal Circulation suggests that adults who get more than the recommended amount of weekly physical activity may have greater longevity than those who don't exceed recommendations. Researchers analyzed self-reported activities of more than 116,000 adults over three decades and found the greatest reduction in early mortality among people who got 150 to 300 minutes of vigorous physical activity per week, or 300 to 600 minutes of moderate activity, or a combination of the two, nor was there harm associated with those who got more than four times the recommended amount. Full Story: CNN (7/26)

BA.5 is dominant coronavirus subvariant in US

Statistics from the CDC show that as of July 23, the BA.5 subvariant of the Omicron coronavirus strain represented just under 82% of circulating variants in the US. EMERGING TRENDS: SOCIAL DETERMINANTS OF HEALTH

Low socioeconomic status tied to CPS reporting

A 14-year study that followed nearly 4,000 children with a history of child maltreatment hospitalization before they were age 3 found that those with public health insurance were more likely to be reported to child protective services compared to those with private insurance, according to research published in the journal Pediatrics. "This suggests that children and families of a lower socioeconomic status may be more closely scrutinized for child maltreatment in hospital settings than those with more means," said lead author Rebecca Rebbe.

Fall booster campaign could avert over 48M COVID-19 cases

An analysis from the Commonwealth Fund estimates that implementing an early fall COVID-19 booster vaccine campaign in the US could save nearly 160,000 lives and avert more than 48 million COVID-19 infections and over 1.7 million hospitalizations if 80% of eligible people get their booster shots. Under the same scenario, the US could save more than $109 billion in direct medical costs by March 2023 compared with the current rates. Full Story: The Hill (7/27), The Commonwealth Fund (7/26)

INDICATION

CAMZYOS is indicated for the treatment of adults with symptomatic New York Heart Association (NYHA) class II-III obstructive hypertrophic cardiomyopathy (HCM) to improve functional capacity and symptoms.

SELECT IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION

WARNING: RISK OF HEART FAILURE

CAMZYOS reduces left ventricular ejection fraction (LVEF) and can cause heart failure due to systolic dysfunction.

Echocardiogram assessments of LVEF are required prior to and during treatment with CAMZYOS. Initiation of CAMZYOS in patients with LVEF <55% is not recommended. Interrupt CAMZYOS if LVEF is <50% at any visit or if the patient experiences heart failure symptoms or worsening clinical status.

Concomitant use of CAMZYOS with certain cytochrome P450 inhibitors or discontinuation of certain cytochrome P450 inducers may increase the risk of heart failure due to systolic dysfunction; therefore, the use of CAMZYOS is contraindicated with the following:

- Moderate to strong CYP2C19 inhibitors or strong CYP3A4 inhibitors
- Moderate to strong CYP2C19 inducers or moderate to strong CYP3A4 inducers

Because of the risk of heart failure due to systolic dysfunction, CAMZYOS is available only through a restricted program under a Risk Evaluation and Mitigation Strategy (REMS) called the CAMZYOS REMS PROGRAM.

Please see additional Important Safety Information for CAMZYOS, including Boxed WARNING, below, and U.S. Full Prescribing Information for CAMZYOS here.

CAMZYOS Is Now Approved

The first and only cardiac myosin inhibitor for the treatment of symptomatic NYHA class II-III obstructive HCM in adults to improve functional capacity and symptoms[1,2]

CAMZYOS is the first and only approved cardiac myosin inhibitor that targets HCM at the source.[1,2]

WARNING: RISK OF HEART FAILURE

CAMZYOS reduces left ventricular ejection fraction (LVEF) and can cause heart failure due to systolic dysfunction.

Echocardiogram assessments of LVEF are required prior to and during treatment with CAMZYOS. Initiation of CAMZYOS in patients with LVEF <55% is not recommended. Interrupt CAMZYOS if LVEF is <50% at any visit or if the patient experiences heart failure symptoms or worsening clinical status.

Concomitant use of CAMZYOS with certain cytochrome P450 inhibitors or discontinuation of certain cytochrome P450 inducers may increase the risk of heart failure due to systolic dysfunction; therefore, the use of CAMZYOS is contraindicated with the following:

- Moderate to strong CYP2C19 inhibitors or strong CYP3A4 inhibitors
- Moderate to strong CYP2C19 inducers or moderate to strong CYP3A4 inducers

Because of the risk of heart failure due to systolic dysfunction, CAMZYOS is available only through a restricted program under a Risk Evaluation and Mitigation Strategy (REMS) called the CAMZYOS REMS PROGRAM.

CONTRAINDICATIONS

CAMZYOS is contraindicated with concomitant use of:

- Moderate to strong CYP2C19 inhibitors or strong CYP3A4 inhibitors
- Moderate to strong CYP2C19 inducers or moderate to strong CYP3A4 inducers

WARNINGS AND PRECAUTIONS

Heart Failure

CAMZYOS reduces systolic contraction and can cause heart failure or totally block ventricular function. Patients who experience a serious intercurrent illness (e.g., serious infection) or arrhythmia (e.g., atrial fibrillation or other uncontrolled tachyarrhythmia) are at greater risk of developing systolic dysfunction and heart failure.

Assess the patient's clinical status and LVEF prior to and regularly during treatment and adjust the CAMZYOS dose accordingly. New or worsening arrhythmia, dyspnea, chest pain, fatigue, palpitations, leg edema, or elevations in N-terminal pro-B-type natriuretic peptide (NT-proBNP) may be signs and symptoms of heart failure and should also prompt an evaluation of cardiac function.

Asymptomatic LVEF reduction, intercurrent illnesses, and arrhythmias require additional dosing considerations.

Initiation of CAMZYOS in patients with LVEF <55% is not recommended. Avoid concomitant use of CAMZYOS in patients on disopyramide, ranolazine, verapamil with a beta blocker, or diltiazem with a beta blocker as these medications and combinations were excluded from EXPLORER-HCM. Concomitant use of CAMZYOS with disopyramide in combination with verapamil or diltiazem has been associated with left ventricular systolic dysfunction and heart failure symptoms in patients with obstructive HCM.

CYP 450 Drug Interactions Leading to Heart Failure or Loss of Effectiveness

CAMZYOS is primarily metabolized by CYP2C19 and CYP3A4 enzymes. Concomitant use of CAMZYOS and drugs that interact with these enzymes may lead to life-threatening drug interactions such as heart failure or loss of effectiveness.

Advise patients of the potential for drug interactions, including with over the counter medications (such as omeprazole, esomeprazole, or cimetidine). Advise patients to inform their healthcare provider of all concomitant products prior to and during CAMZYOS treatment.

CAMZYOS Risk Evaluation and Mitigation Strategy (REMS) Program

CAMZYOS is only available through a restricted program called the CAMZYOS REMS Program because of the risk of heart failure due to systolic dysfunction. Notable requirements of the CAMZYOS REMS Program include the following:

- Prescribers must be certified by enrolling in the REMS Program.
- Patients must enroll in the REMS Program and comply with ongoing monitoring requirements.
- Pharmacies must be certified by enrolling in the REMS Program and must only dispense to patients who are authorized to receive CAMZYOS.
- Wholesalers and distributors must only distribute to certified pharmacies.

Further information is available at www.CAMZYOSREMS.com or by telephone at 1-833-628-7367.

Embryo-Fetal Toxicity

CAMZYOS may cause fetal toxicity when administered to a pregnant female, based on animal studies. Confirm absence of pregnancy in females of reproductive potential prior to treatment and advise patients to use effective contraception during treatment with CAMZYOS and for 4 months after the last dose. CAMZYOS may reduce the effectiveness of combined hormonal contraceptives (CHCs). Advise patients using CHCs to use an alternative contraceptive method that is not affected by CYP 450 enzyme induction or to add nonhormonal contraception. Advise females of reproductive potential about the potential risk to the fetus with maternal exposure to CAMZYOS during pregnancy.

ADVERSE REACTIONS

In the EXPLORER-HCM trial, adverse reactions occurring in >5% of patients and more commonly in the CAMZYOS group than in the placebo group were dizziness (27% vs 18%) and syncope (6% vs 2%).

Effects on Systolic Function

In the EXPLORER-HCM trial, mean (SD) resting LVEF was 74% (6) at baseline in both treatment groups. Mean (SD) absolute change from baseline in LVEF was -4% (8) in the CAMZYOS group and 0% (7) in the placebo group over the 30-week treatment period. At Week 38, following an 8-week interruption of trial drug, mean LVEF was similar to baseline for both treatment groups. In the EXPLORER-HCM trial, 7 (6%) patients in the CAMZYOS group and 2 (2%) patients in the placebo group experienced reversible reductions in LVEF <50% (median 48%: range 35-49%) while on treatment. In all 7 patients treated with CAMZYOS, LVEF recovered following interruption of CAMZYOS.

DRUG INTERACTIONS

Potential for Other Drugs to Affect Plasma Concentrations of CAMZYOS

CAMZYOS is primarily metabolized by CYP2C19 and to a lesser extent by CYP3A4 and CYP2C9. Inducers and inhibitors of CYP2C19 and moderate to strong inhibitors or inducers of CYP3A4 may affect the exposures of CAMZYOS.

Impact of Other Drugs on CAMZYOS:

- Moderate to Strong CYP2C19 Inhibitors or Strong CYP3A4 Inhibitors: Concomitant use increases CAMZYOS exposure, which may increase the risk of heart failure due to systolic dysfunction. Concomitant use is contraindicated.
- Moderate to Strong CYP2C19 Inducers or Moderate to Strong CYP3A4 Inducers: Concomitant use decreases CAMZYOS exposure, which may reduce CAMZYOS' efficacy. The risk of heart failure due to systolic dysfunction may increase with discontinuation of these inducers as the levels of induced enzyme normalizes. Concomitant use is contraindicated.
- Weak CYP2C19 Inhibitors or Moderate CYP3A4 Inhibitors: Concomitant use with a weak CYP2C19 inhibitor or a moderate CYP3A4 inhibitor increases CAMZYOS exposure, which may increase the risk of adverse drug reactions. Initiate CAMZYOS at the recommended starting dose of 5 mg orally once daily in patients who are on stable therapy with a weak CYP2C19 inhibitor or a moderate CYP3A4 inhibitor. Reduce dose of CAMZYOS by one level (i.e., 15 to 10 mg, 10 to 5 mg, or 5 to 2.5 mg) in patients who are on CAMZYOS treatment and intend to initiate a weak CYP2C19 inhibitor or a moderate CYP3A4 inhibitor. Schedule clinical and echocardiographic assessment 4 weeks after inhibitor initiation, and do not up-titrate CAMZYOS until 12 weeks after inhibitor initiation. Avoid initiation of concomitant weak CYP2C19 and moderate CYP3A4 inhibitors in patients who are on stable treatment with 2.5 mg of CAMZYOS because a lower dose is not available.

Potential for CAMZYOS to Affect Plasma Concentrations of Other Drugs

CAMZYOS is an inducer of CYP3A4, CYP2C9, and CYP2C19. Concomitant use with CYP3A4, CYP2C19, or CYP2C9 substrates may reduce plasma concentration of these drugs. Closely monitor when CAMZYOS is used in combination with CYP3A4, CYP2C19, or CYP2C9 substrates where decreases in the plasma concentration of these drugs may reduce their activity.

Hormonal Contraceptives: Progestin and ethinyl estradiol are CYP3A4 substrates. Concomitant use of CAMZYOS may decrease exposures of ethinyl estradiol and progestin, which may lead to contraceptive failure or an increase in breakthrough bleeding. Advise patients to use a contraceptive method that is not affected by CYP 450 enzyme induction (e.g., intrauterine system) or add nonhormonal contraception (such as condoms) during concomitant use and for 4 months after the last dose of CAMZYOS.

Drugs That Reduce Cardiac Contractility

Expect additive negative inotropic effects of CAMZYOS and other drugs that reduce cardiac contractility. Avoid concomitant use of CAMZYOS with disopyramide in combination with verapamil or diltiazem. If concomitant therapy with a negative inotrope is initiated, or if the dose of a negative inotrope is increased, monitor LVEF closely until stable doses and clinical response have been achieved.

SPECIFIC POPULATIONS

Pregnancy

CAMZYOS may cause fetal harm when administered to a pregnant female. Advise pregnant females about the potential risk to the fetus with maternal exposure to CAMZYOS during pregnancy. There is a pregnancy safety study for CAMZYOS. If CAMZYOS is administered during pregnancy, or if a patient becomes pregnant while receiving CAMZYOS or within 4 months after the last dose of CAMZYOS, healthcare providers should report CAMZYOS exposure by contacting Bristol Myers Squibb at 1-800-721-5072 or www.bms.com.

Lactation

The presence of CAMZYOS in human or animal milk, the drug's effects on the breastfed infant, or the effects on milk production are unknown. The developmental and health benefits of breastfeeding should be considered along with the mother's clinical need for CAMZYOS and any potential adverse effects on the breastfed child from CAMZYOS or from the underlying maternal condition.

Females and Males of Reproductive Potential

Confirm absence of pregnancy in females of reproductive potential prior to initiation of CAMZYOS. Advise females of reproductive potential to use effective contraception during treatment with CAMZYOS and for 4 months after the last dose. Use of CAMZYOS may reduce the effectiveness of CHCs. Advise patients using CHCs to use an alternative contraceptive method or add nonhormonal contraception.

INDICATION

CAMZYOS™ (mavacamten) is indicated for the treatment of adults with symptomatic New York Heart Association (NYHA) class II-III obstructive hypertrophic cardiomyopathy (HCM) to improve functional capacity and symptoms.

CAMZYOS is available in 2.5 mg, 5 mg, 10 mg, and 15 mg capsules.

Stigma Around Substance Use During Pregnancy: A Louisiana Response

Opioid use disorder during pregnancy contributes to maternal death and poor birth outcomes. Although prenatal care can reduce these effects, pregnant individuals may delay care due to concerns about stereotyping and stigmatizing by providers.

Joseph Kanter, MD, MPH, (SHO-LA) and Amy Ladley, PhD, discuss Louisiana's approach to reducing stigma and fears of criminalization around opioid use in pregnant and postpartum individuals, and the importance of partnerships. Learn more in this new episode of the Public Health Review podcast.

TOP STORIES

- Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.) said Democrats "will be adding things on insulin" to the reconciliation package he negotiated with Sen. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.), a move that comes as a bipartisan effort from Sens. Jeanne Shaheen (D-N.H.) and Susan Collins (R-Maine) to lower insulin costs appears to have hit Republican roadblocks. It's unclear whether insulin cost reduction measures would survive the arcane Senate rules on reconciliation, while Shaheen said she'd back the move but will also continue working with "Collins to address the full scope of the skyrocketing costs to bring relief to American families." (The Hill)

- The Biden administration is planning a September campaign for reformulated COVID-19 booster shots after Pfizer Inc. and Moderna Inc. said they could deliver the millions of required doses on that timeline, people familiar with the deliberations said. The shots, which would be available for all adults and potentially children, are expected to fare better against the omicron BA.5 subvariant, though additional data is pending. (The New York Times)

- Senate Democrats are seeking $21 billion in new emergency spending on COVID-19 as well as preparedness measures for additional outbreaks, monkeypox potentially among them. The bill would appropriate $16 billion for a key Health and Human Services program to be used in the fight against COVID-19 via tests, vaccines, supplies and research on current and future strains, while another $5 billion would support other countries in their pandemic battle. (The Washington Post)

- Pfizer reported second-quarter revenue of $27.7 billion, a year-over-year jump of 47% fueled by better-than-expected sales of the drugmaker's COVID-19 vaccine and antiviral treatment Paxlovid, which generated global sales of $8.1 billion. Pfizer's vaccine, developed in partnership with BioNTech SE, saw a 13% rise in sales to $8.8 billion. (The Wall Street Journal)

CORONAVIRUS

How Long Can the Coronavirus Keep Reinfecting Us?

Sarah Zhang, The Atlantic

When the original Omicron variant swept across the country this winter, it launched America into a new COVID era, one in which nearly everyone—95 percent of adults, according to one CDC estimate—has some immunity to the virus through vaccines, infection, or both. Since then, however, Omicron subvariants have still managed to cause big waves of infection. They've accomplished this by eroding our existing immunity.

Drug companies could create new drugs to protect the Covid vulnerable. Why aren't they?

Jason Mast, Stat News

Although the problem is now eight months old, few other prophylactic drugs for people with compromised immune systems are on the horizon. Several companies have announced plans to bring forward new Covid-19 antibodies, but they virtually are all either still in animal studies or are being principally developed as therapeutics.

Drugmakers are waging a 'Hail Mary' campaign to sink reconciliation bill

Megan R. Wilson, Politico

"The ground is shifting. It's starting to sink in for them, what the bill does," one industry lobbyist told POLITICO about the sentiment among pharmaceutical executives at a recent gathering. "The CEOs who have significant concerns are very engaged."

Drug industry poised for rare political loss on prices

Christopher Rowland, The Washington Post

Year after year for most of two decades, proposals to allow the government to negotiate lower prices from drug companies for Medicare recipients have wound up dead in Congress, defeated by the powerful pharmaceutical industry and its allies. Now the Washington drug lobby is on the cusp of a rare political loss.

Biosimilars to curb drug price hikes next year, report shows

Alex Kacik, Modern Healthcare

Pharmaceutical prices are projected to increase 3.26% in 2023, marking a steep decline from the 6% price hike in 2017, according to the group purchasing organization Vizient, which forecasts what its member hospitals and health systems might pay for drugs after discounts and rebates. Vizient predicted a 3.3% increase last year; the actual price change was 2.8%. The 2017 spike was the highest in the last five years.

Merck CEO concerned about proposed drug pricing bill hurting innovation

Reuters

Merck & Co (MRK.N) Chief Executive Rob Davis on Thursday raised concerns that a proposed bill to curb drug prices would hurt innovation, but said it would not impact sales of the company's top-selling drug and vaccine in the near-term.

An Alternative to Expanded ObamaCare Subsidies

Brian Blase, The Wall Street Journal

The new Democratic reconciliation bill includes a three-year extension of enhanced ObamaCare subsidies—which is bad policy motivated by election politics. It's part of the Inflation Reduction Act, hashed out by Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer and Sen. Joe Manchin (D., W.Va.). Mr. Manchin is ostensibly concerned about rising prices and the deficit. But this expanded-subsidies extension would raise inflation and increase the deficit. Democrats want it because the original expanded subsidies, established by the American Rescue Plan in 2021, expire after 2022. If nothing is done, enrollees will receive notice of large premium increases right before the midterm elections.

The Effectiveness of Digital Interventions on COVID-19 Attitudes and Beliefs

Susan Athey et al., National Bureau of Economic Research

During the course of the COVID-19 pandemic, a common strategy for public health organizations around the world has been to launch interventions via advertising campaigns on social media. Despite this ubiquity, little has been known about their average effectiveness. We conduct a large-scale program evaluation of campaigns from 174 public health organizations on Facebook and Instagram that collectively reached 2.1 billion individuals and cost around $40 million.

LEGISLATIVE & POLICY NEWS

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CHRONIC DISEASE DIRECTORS
Promoting Health. Preventing Disease.

On Thursday, the Senate Appropriations Committee released a $1.7 trillion FY23 spending package. The package includes a total of $10.5 billion for the CDC, a 23.5 percent increase from the FY22 enacted level and $231 million below President Biden's budget request. See the attached chart for a comparison between proposed House funding levels and proposed Senate funding levels for chronic disease programs.

The Senate package also includes investments in public health infrastructure, including:

- $600 million, an increase of $400 million, to strengthen core public health capacity and enable health departments to assess and respond to specific health needs in their communities.
- $200 million, an increase of $100 million, to modernize the United States Public Health Surveillance Enterprise core systems, ensure innovation and interoperability, and develop needed workforce skills.
- $100 million, an increase of $92 million, to address social determinants of health.
- $132.07 million, an increase of $18.5 million, to strengthen the CDC's communication to the public, key partners, and Congress.

The spending package confirms previous speculation that Senate funding levels would be lower than the appropriations bills introduced by the House. However, a few exceptions include comprehensive cancer, heart disease and stroke prevention, breast and cervical cancer, and tobacco control. With the September 30 deadline approaching, it remains likely that Congress will pass a continuing resolution to avoid a government shutdown. This means that pre-existing spending levels will be maintained until legislators can come to an agreement on permanent funding.

This Week's News

Potent tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) concentrations creating cannabis addicts

A new review of studies found that higher concentrations of THC – the chemical compound in cannabis that gets you high – is causing more people to become addicted worldwide. THC levels increased by about 5.7 milligrams (mg) annually between 1975 and 2017. In addition to a higher risk of becoming addicted, regular users of cannabis products with over 10mg of THC have an increased chance of experiencing negative mental health outcomes.

The latest legal challenge to the Affordable Care Act's (ACA) preventive services guarantee

Plaintiffs in a lawsuit in Texas, Kelley v. Becerra, are arguing that the ACA's preventive services requirement violates the Constitution. Currently, the ACA requires most private health insurance plans to cover preventive services without cost sharing measures like copayments and deductibles. The preventive services requirement covers over 100 services like cancer screenings, tobacco cessation, infectious disease immunizations, and FDA-approved contraception. If the preventive services requirement were to ultimately be declared unconstitutional, insurers would have the option to introduce cost sharing or drop coverage for preventive services entirely.

Exercise more than the recommended amounts for the longest life

The World Health Organization (WHO) recommends that adults get 150 to 300 minutes of moderate physical activity or 75 to 150 minutes of vigorous physical activity per week. However, a new study published by the American Heart Association says that individuals who exceed the WHO's recommendations live longer than those who don't. Researchers analyzed more than 116,000 adults over the course of 30 years and found that the greatest reductions in early deaths were amongst those who reported 150 to 300 minutes a week of vigorous physical activity or 300 to 600 minutes of moderate physical activity per week.

Spending on insulin in the United States reaches "catastrophic" levels

Insulin is an essential medicine for people with diabetes, but costs pose significant financial barriers for patients living in the United States. A recent Health Affairs study found that about 14.1 percent of Americans who use insulin reached "catastrophic" levels of spending, defined as spending at least 40 percent of post-subsistence income on just insulin, between 2017 and 2018. Two-thirds of patients experiencing catastrophic spending were Medicare beneficiaries. Medicaid beneficiaries were 61 percent less likely to experience catastrophic spending, which suggests that factors other than income (e.g., insurance type) influence the affordability of insulin.

Food insecurity, missed workdays, and hospitalizations among working-age U.S. adults with diabetes

According to new research, food insecurity is associated with increased chances of both missing work and having to stay overnight at a hospital. In fact, odds were twice as high compared to missing work for health-related reasons. Such findings show that food insecurity negatively impacts economic productivity in addition to immediate consequences like an individual's overall health and well-being.

Inside America's obesity epidemic: How America's weight (and weight loss) aren't so simple

Over 40 percent of Americans are obese, which places them at greater risk of developing other complications like diabetes and heart disease. A diverse array of factors is contributing to America's current obesity epidemic. One reason is that human biology has evolved to hold extra calories, thus making it challenging to lose weight independently. Human evolution is compounded by additional factors such as stigmatization, poor diet, and the prohibitive cost of healthy food options.

NO MORE VICTIMS

TAKE ACTION

Dear Utah Department Of Health,
Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) needs your help. Senator Mike Rounds has introduced legislation (Senate Bill 4647) that would reverse a 2021 law to eliminate impaired driving.

Please click here to email your Senators to urge them to oppose Senate Bill 4647. Taking action is quick and easy.

Please also consider calling your Senators to urge them to oppose Senate Bill 4647. You can find out your Senator's phone number by going here. In your message, please say you are with MADD and that you oppose Senate Bill 4647 as it removes anti-drunk driving provisions in the 2021 bipartisan Infrastructure Law.

Why Senate Bill 4647 is bad in the fight against drunk driving? The bipartisan HALT (Honoring Abbas Family Legacy to Terminate) Drunk Driving Act was signed into law in November as part of the bipartisan infrastructure law. The provision requires the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) to issue a rulemaking by 2024 to make passive drunk driving prevention technology standard in new cars, which could save 9,400 lives a year and prevent countless injuries. For more information, please visit madd.org/haltact.

Please email and call your Senators today.

Sincerely,
Alex Otte

Update for Clinicians on Monkeypox in People with HIV, Children and Adolescents, and People who are Pregnant or Breastfeeding

Summary
As of July 29, 2022, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and state and local public health partners are reporting 5,189 cases of Monkeypox virus infections in the United States across 47 states, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico. CDC is also reporting multiple outbreaks of monkeypox have also been reported globally in 72 countries that do not normally report monkeypox activity. On Friday, July 22, CDC reported the first two cases of monkeypox in children in the United States during the current outbreak.

This Health Alert Network (HAN) Health Update serves to alert clinicians to clinical considerations for preventing, diagnosing, and managing monkeypox in people with HIV, children, adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding.

Background
Since May 2022, CDC has been urging healthcare providers in the United States to be on alert for patients who have rash illnesses consistent with monkeypox. People with HIV, individuals who are immunocompromised, children, adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding may be at risk for increased disease severity and adverse health outcomes associated with monkeypox infection. Clinicians should be familiar with unique clinical considerations for monkeypox in these patient populations. A broad diagnostic approach is encouraged to distinguish Monkeypox virus infection from other causes of fever and rash illness. Testing should be performed on persons for whom monkeypox is suspected based on clinical presentation or epidemiologic criteria. Clinicians should consult their state or territorial health department (State Contacts) or CDC through the CDC Emergency Operations Center (770-488-7100) as soon as monkeypox is suspected.
CDC has issued clinical considerations for monkeypox infection in multiple populations including: people with HIV, children and adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. These newly released clinical considerations complement existing clinical guidance for managing monkeypox and provide information on signs and symptoms of Monkeypox virus infection; pre- and post-exposure prophylaxis; treatment; and infection control in these populations.

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in People with HIV
In the current outbreak, available international summary surveillance data in the CDC-issued clinical considerations for people with HIV indicate 30-51% HIV prevalence among persons with monkeypox for whom HIV status was known. It is currently unknown whether HIV infection affects a person's risk of acquiring Monkeypox virus infection and developing disease after exposure.

Persons with advanced and uncontrolled HIV might be at higher risk for severe or prolonged monkeypox disease. Therefore, prophylaxis (e.g., vaccination), medical treatment and close monitoring are a priority for this population. Compared with other persons with monkeypox, case reports among persons with inadequately treated HIV who have CD4 counts ≤350 per mm^3 reported higher rates of secondary bacterial infection, more prolonged illness (and thereby also longer period of infectiousness), as well as a higher likelihood of a confluent or partially confluent rash, rather than discrete lesions. In contrast, recent reports of patients with HIV infection and monkeypox who are on effective antiretroviral therapy (ART) have noted no deaths or evident excess hospitalizations to date. Providers should consider both viral suppression and CD4 count in weighing the risk of severe outcomes from monkeypox for any patient with HIV.

The rash of monkeypox can be confused with other rash illnesses that are considered in people with HIV, including herpes zoster (shingles), scabies, molluscum contagiosum, herpes, syphilis, chancroid, lymphogranuloma venereum, allergic skin rashes, and drug eruptions. Immunocompromised persons, including persons with advanced, untreated or inadequately suppressed HIV, may present with an atypical rash, including a disseminated rash that may make diagnosis more challenging.

Prevention of monkeypox and infection control practices in the home or healthcare setting are the same regardless of peoples' HIV status. Post-exposure prophylaxis (PEP) and antiviral treatments, including tecovirimat, are available for persons exposed to monkeypox or with Monkeypox virus infection. The safety and immunogenicity of JYNNEOS, a live, non-replicating viral vaccine, has been specifically established in people with HIV; however, immunogenicity among persons with HIV who have CD4 counts below 100 cells/mm^3 or who are not virologically suppressed remains unknown. ACAM2000, a replicating viral vaccine, should not be given to people with HIV (regardless of immune status). Antiviral treatments for monkeypox have few interactions with antiretroviral therapy. ART and opportunistic infection prophylaxis should be continued in all people with HIV who develop monkeypox.

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in Children and Adolescents
Limited pediatric data on infection with the Congo Basin clade of Monkeypox virus suggest increased risk of severe disease in children younger than 8 years of age. Rare complications of monkeypox include abscess, airway obstruction due to severe lymphadenopathy, cellulitis, corneal scarring, encephalitis, keratitis, pneumonia, and sepsis. The West African clade of Monkeypox virus involved in the current outbreak typically causes less severe disease than the Congo Basin clade.
Monkeypox virus can spread to children through contact with infectious body fluids (e.g., lesion exudates and respiratory secretions) of people or animals or through contact with fomites, as may occur in households and other close contact settings. The number of monkeypox cases among children in the United States is currently low; however, CDC acknowledges that the expanding U.S. outbreak and the possible risk for transmission in households and other settings may result in additional pediatric cases. Pediatric providers should be familiar with prevention, recognition, and testing considerations for monkeypox in children and adolescents.
Families should be counseled about preventing the spread of Monkeypox virus between children, caregivers, and household members in the home, including avoidance of contact with persons who have monkeypox, the body fluids of an infected person, and fomites (e.g., clothing, towels, bedding); wearing a well-fitting mask or respirator by the person with monkeypox and the contact (for children over 2 years of age) when interaction is unavoidable; and minimizing the number of caregivers for children with monkeypox. Particular attention should be made to keep children with monkeypox from scratching lesions or touching their eyes to prevent auto-inoculation and more severe illness. Caregivers should cover areas of broken skin with bandages to the extent possible and avoid direct skin-to-skin contact with the rash.
Children and adolescents who are close contacts of a person with monkeypox (e.g., household contact, other family member, caregiver, or friend) should be evaluated for illness and offered post-exposure prophylaxis with JYNNEOS or ACAM2000 (for children older than 12 months) or treatment when indicated. Monkeypox should be considered when children or adolescents present with signs or symptoms that could be consistent with the disease, especially if epidemiologic criteria are present. The rash of monkeypox can be confused with other rash illnesses that are commonly considered in children including varicella (chickenpox); hand, foot, and mouth disease; measles; scabies; molluscum contagiosum; herpes; allergic skin rashes and syphilis (including congenital syphilis); and drug eruptions.
Data are limited on the effectiveness of PEP for children who have been exposed to monkeypox or treatment for children with illness, and no vaccines or other products are currently licensed for monkeypox prevention or treatment in children or adolescents. However, PEP should not be withheld from children or adolescents who are otherwise eligible. Decisions about whether to offer PEP should take into account the patient's degree of exposure and the patient's individual risk of severe disease.

Prophylactic therapeutics that can be administered include vaccination, Vaccinia immune globulin, and antiviral medication. For almost all children and adolescents, vaccination is the preventive treatment that should be administered. Immune globulin or antivirals may also be considered for infants under 6 months of age, given their immature immune systems and possible decreased responses to vaccination.

Tecovirimat is currently being used as the first-line treatment for infection with Monkeypox virus, including for children and adolescents with severe disease or underlying medical conditions that may increase risk for severe disease and those with complications from monkeypox. Individual risks and benefits must be considered prior to initiating tecovirimat. Other treatments such as Vaccinia immune globulin may be considered in unusual circumstances.

In pediatric inpatient care settings, infection control procedures for children with monkeypox infection should also consider the child's age and caregiving needs; family and caregiver preferences; the extent, severity, and course of the child's illness; and risks for severe monkeypox disease in exposed caregivers (e.g., pregnancy or immunocompromising conditions).

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in People who are Pregnant or Breastfeeding

Data regarding Monkeypox virus infection during pregnancy are limited. It is unknown if pregnant people are more susceptible to acquiring Monkeypox virus infection or if illness is more severe during pregnancy. Other poxviruses cause more severe infection during pregnancy. Monkeypox virus can be transmitted to the fetus during pregnancy and to the newborn by close contact during and after birth. There are few case reports of spontaneous pregnancy loss and stillbirth, preterm delivery, and neonatal monkeypox infection; the frequency and circumstances for these outcomes are unknown. Whether Monkeypox virus is present in breast milk is unknown; however, it may be transmitted through close contact during breastfeeding.

Prevention measures for monkeypox infection are similar for pregnant and non-pregnant people. Pre- or post-exposure prophylaxis should be offered to people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. When pre- or post-exposure prophylaxis by vaccination is chosen, JYNNEOS, a live, non-replicating viral vaccine, can be used. ACAM2000, a replicating viral vaccine, should not be used in people who are pregnant or breastfeeding.

During pregnancy, the cause of fever may be difficult to differentiate from other infections, such as intraamniotic infection (chorioamnionitis), until the monkeypox rash appears. Pregnant patients with rashes initially considered characteristic of dermatoses of pregnancy (e.g., polymorphic eruption of pregnancy) or of more common infections (e.g., varicella zoster or sexually transmitted infections) should be carefully evaluated for a monkeypox rash, and submission of specimens of lesions for monkeypox diagnosis should be considered, especially if the person has any epidemiologic risk factors for monkeypox infection.

While most adults with Monkeypox virus infection experience self-limiting infection and recover within 2–4 weeks, pregnant and breastfeeding people should be prioritized for medical treatment, if needed, due to the probable increased risk of severe disease during pregnancy, risk of transmission to the fetus during pregnancy or to the newborn by close contact during and after birth, and risk of severe infection in newborns. Treatment for Monkeypox virus infection should be offered to people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. The risks and benefits of treatment options should be discussed with the patient.

Recommendations for infection prevention and control of monkeypox in healthcare settings are the same for pregnant and non-pregnant patients. Newborns born to people with monkeypox should be placed in isolation, and healthcare personnel should follow infection prevention and control recommendations. Patients with monkeypox should be counseled about measures to prevent risk of transmission of Monkeypox virus to their newborn from close contact and breastfeeding.

performed on persons for whom monkeypox is suspected based on clinical presentation or epidemiologic criteria. Clinicians should consult their state or territorial health department (State Contacts) or CDC through the CDC Emergency Operations Center (770-488-7100) as soon as monkeypox is suspected.
CDC has issued clinical considerations for monkeypox infection in multiple populations including: people with HIV, children and adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. These newly released clinical considerations complement existing clinical guidance for managing monkeypox and provide information on signs and symptoms of Monkeypox virus infection; pre- and post-exposure prophylaxis; treatment; and infection control in these populations.

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in People with HIV
In the current outbreak, available international summary surveillance data in the CDC-issued clinical considerations for people with HIV indicate 30-51% HIV prevalence among persons with monkeypox for whom HIV status was known. It is currently unknown whether HIV infection affects a person's risk of acquiring Monkeypox virus infection and developing disease after exposure.

Persons with advanced and uncontrolled HIV might be at higher risk for severe or prolonged monkeypox disease. Therefore, prophylaxis (e.g., vaccination), medical treatment and close monitoring are a priority for this population. Compared with other persons with monkeypox, case reports among persons with inadequately treated HIV who have CD4 counts ≤350 per mm^3 reported higher rates of secondary bacterial infection, more prolonged illness (and thereby also longer period of infectiousness), as well as a higher likelihood of a confluent or partially confluent rash, rather than discrete lesions. The rash of monkeypox can be confused with other rash illnesses that are considered in people with HIV, including herpes zoster (shingles), scabies, molluscum contagiosum, herpes, syphilis, chancroid, lymphogranuloma venereum, allergic skin rashes, and drug eruptions. Immunocompromised persons, including persons with advanced, untreated or inadequately suppressed HIV, may present with an atypical rash, including a disseminated rash that may make diagnosis more challenging.

Prevention of monkeypox and infection control practices in the home or healthcare setting are the same regardless of peoples' HIV status. Post-exposure prophylaxis (PEP) and antiviral treatments, including tecovirimat, are available for persons exposed to monkeypox or with Monkeypox virus infection. The safety and immunogenicity of JYNNEOS, a live, non-replicating viral vaccine, has been specifically established in people with HIV; however, immunogenicity among persons with HIV who have CD4 counts below 100 cells/mm^3 or who are not virologically suppressed remains unknown. ACAM2000, a replicating viral vaccine, should not be given to people with HIV (regardless of immune status). Antiviral treatments for monkeypox have few interactions with antiretroviral therapy. ART and opportunistic infection prophylaxis should be continued in all people with HIV who develop monkeypox.

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in Children and Adolescents
Limited pediatric data on infection with the Congo Basin clade of Monkeypox virus suggest increased risk of severe disease in children younger than 8 years of age. Rare complications of monkeypox include abscess, airway obstruction due to severe lymphadenopathy, cellulitis, corneal scarring, encephalitis, keratitis, pneumonia, and sepsis. The West African clade of Monkeypox virus involved in the current outbreak typically causes less severe disease than the Congo Basin clade.
Monkeypox virus can spread to children through contact with infectious body fluids (e.g., lesion exudates and respiratory secretions) of people or animals or through contact with fomites, as may occur in households and other close contact settings. The number of monkeypox cases among children in the United States is currently low; however, CDC acknowledges that the expanding U.S. outbreak and the possible risk for transmission in households and other settings may result in additional pediatric cases. Pediatric providers should be familiar with prevention, recognition, and testing considerations for monkeypox in children and adolescents.
Families should be counseled about preventing the spread of Monkeypox virus between children, caregivers, and household members in the home, including avoidance of contact with persons who have monkeypox, the body fluids of an infected person, and fomites (e.g., clothing, towels, bedding); wearing a well-fitting mask or respirator by the person with monkeypox and the contact (for children over 2 years of age) when interaction is unavoidable; and minimizing the number of caregivers for children with monkeypox. Particular attention should be made to keep children with monkeypox from scratching lesions or touching their eyes to prevent auto-inoculation and more severe illness. Caregivers should cover areas of broken skin with bandages to the extent possible and avoid direct skin-to-skin contact with the rash.
Children and adolescents who are close contacts of a person with monkeypox (e.g., household contact, other family member, caregiver, or friend) should be evaluated for illness and offered post-exposure prophylaxis with JYNNEOS or ACAM2000 (for children older than 12 months) or treatment when indicated. Monkeypox should be considered when children or adolescents present with signs or symptoms that could be consistent with the disease, especially if epidemiologic criteria are present. The rash of monkeypox can be confused with other rash illnesses that are commonly considered in children including varicella (chickenpox); hand, foot, and mouth disease; measles; scabies; molluscum contagiosum; herpes; allergic skin rashes and syphilis (including congenital syphilis); and drug eruptions.
Data are limited on the effectiveness of PEP for children who have been exposed to monkeypox or treatment for children with illness, and no vaccines or other products are currently licensed for monkeypox prevention or treatment in children or adolescents. However, PEP should not be withheld from children or adolescents who are otherwise eligible. Decisions about whether to offer PEP should take into account the patient's degree of exposure and the patient's individual risk of severe disease.

Prophylactic therapeutics that can be administered include vaccination, Vaccinia immune globulin, and antiviral medication. For almost all children and adolescents, vaccination is the preventive treatment that should be administered. Immune globulin or antivirals may also be considered for infants under 6 months of age, given their immature immune systems and possible decreased responses to vaccination.

Tecovirimat is currently being used as the first-line treatment for infection with Monkeypox virus, including for children and adolescents with severe disease or underlying medical conditions that may increase risk for severe disease and those with complications from monkeypox. Individual risks and benefits must be considered prior to initiating tecovirimat. Other treatments such as Vaccinia immune globulin may be considered in unusual circumstances.

In pediatric inpatient care settings, infection control procedures for children with monkeypox infection should also consider the child's age and caregiving needs; family and caregiver preferences; the extent, severity, and course of the child's illness; and risks for severe monkeypox disease in exposed caregivers (e.g., pregnancy or immunocompromising conditions).

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in People who are Pregnant or Breastfeeding
Data regarding Monkeypox virus infection during pregnancy are limited. It is unknown if pregnant people are more susceptible to acquiring Monkeypox virus infection or if illness is more severe during pregnancy. Other poxviruses cause more severe infection during pregnancy. Monkeypox virus can be transmitted to the fetus during pregnancy and to the newborn by close contact during and after birth. There are few case reports of spontaneous pregnancy loss and stillbirth, preterm delivery, and neonatal monkeypox infection; the frequency and circumstances for these outcomes are unknown. Whether Monkeypox virus is present in breast milk is unknown; however, it may be transmitted through close contact during breastfeeding.
Prevention measures for monkeypox infection are similar for pregnant and non-pregnant people. Pre- or post-exposure prophylaxis should be offered to people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. When pre- or post-exposure prophylaxis by vaccination is chosen, JYNNEOS, a live, non-replicating viral vaccine, can be used. ACAM2000, a replicating viral vaccine, should not be used in people who are pregnant or breastfeeding.
During pregnancy, the cause of fever may be difficult to differentiate from other infections, such as intraamniotic infection (chorioamnionitis), until the monkeypox rash appears. Pregnant patients with rashes initially considered characteristic of dermatoses of pregnancy (e.g., polymorphic eruption of pregnancy) or of more common infections (e.g., varicella zoster or sexually transmitted infections) should be carefully evaluated for a monkeypox rash, and submission of specimens of lesions for monkeypox diagnosis should be considered, especially if the person has any epidemiologic risk factors for monkeypox infection.

While most adults with Monkeypox virus infection experience self-limiting infection and recover within 2–4 weeks, pregnant and breastfeeding people should be prioritized for medical treatment, if needed, due to the probable increased risk of severe disease during pregnancy, risk of transmission to the fetus during pregnancy or to the newborn by close contact during and after birth, and risk of severe infection in newborns. Treatment for Monkeypox virus infection should be offered to people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. The risks and benefits of treatment options should be discussed with the patient.
Recommendations for infection prevention and control of monkeypox in healthcare settings are the same for pregnant and non-pregnant patients. Newborns born to people with monkeypox should be placed in isolation, and healthcare personnel should follow infection prevention and control recommendations. Patients with monkeypox should be counseled about measures to prevent risk of transmission of Monkeypox virus to their newborn from close contact and breastfeeding.

MORNING CONSULT

Health

Essential health care industry news & intel to start your day.

JULY 31, 2022

BY MATT BRACKEN

Twitter Email

Good morning to you, health readers. Another week in Washington, D.C., another week of Sen. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.) grabbing headlines. We'll get to that in a moment, but first, a story that flew quite a bit below the reconciliation radar.

After the House passed legislation earlier this month to codify the federal right to contraception, Sen. Joni Ernst (R-Iowa) last week blocked a unanimous consent request from Senate Democrats to pass birth control protections. Our quiz question for the week: What share of voters said they support congressional passage of a federal law to protect birth control access?

A: 55%
B: 65%
C: 75%
D: 85%

You can find the answer at the bottom of the newsletter.

WHAT'S AHEAD

Reconciliation has been resurrected, and now comes the pre-recess crunch for Senate Democrats. We'll be watching for a Senate parliamentarian ruling on various elements of the surprise package from Manchin and Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.), which revived several climate and tax priorities in addition to a third-year extension of Affordable Care Act subsidies and a measure to allow Medicare to negotiate the prices of some prescription drugs officially.

From a health-specific perspective, the Inflation Reduction Act of 2022 pushes the next ACA subsidy expiration date past the 2024 midterm elections, while a summary of the legislation said the drug pricing provision would save the government $288 billion.

Meanwhile, Schumer said Democrats "will be adding things on insulin" to the package, a move that comes as a bipartisan effort from Sens. Jeanne Shaheen (D-N.H.) and Susan Collins (R-Maine) to lower insulin costs appears to have hit Republican roadblocks.

It's the Super Bowl week of earnings for health care companies. Cassava Sciences Inc., fresh off the news that it is facing a Department of Justice criminal investigation over allegations that it manipulated and misrepresented research on its experimental Alzheimer's drug, will kick things off with its second-quarter earnings Monday.

Gilead Sciences Inc. is slated to report Tuesday, as is 1Life Healthcare Inc., the operator of One Medical clinics that was acquired by Amazon.com Inc. earlier this month in a $3.9 billion deal.

On Wednesday, Novavax Inc. will report its earnings for the first time since its traditional protein-based COVID-19 vaccine was authorized by federal regulators.

Others on the docket for Wednesday include Moderna Inc., CVS Health Corp., Amerisourcebergen Corp., McKesson Corp. and Regeneron Pharmaceuticals Inc. And finally on Thursday, Eli Lilly and Co., Allscripts Healthcare Solutions Inc. and Cigna Corp., among others, are scheduled to report.

WEEK IN REVIEW

COVID-19 vaccines: The Biden administration is planning a September campaign for reformulated COVID-19 booster shots after Pfizer Inc. and Moderna said they could deliver the millions of required doses on that timeline, people familiar with the deliberations said. The shots, which would be available for all adults and potentially children, are expected to fare better against the omicron BA.5 subvariant, though additional data is pending.

As part of the campaign, the administration said it would purchase 66 million doses of the Moderna shot for $1.74 billion, with an option to buy 234 million additional doses. The agreement follows a deal the government previously struck with Pfizer-BioNTech SE to buy 105 million doses of its reformulated vaccine.

Pfizer reported second-quarter revenue of $27.7 billion, a year-over-year jump of 47% fueled by better-than-expected sales of its COVID-19 vaccine and antiviral treatment Paxlovid, which generated global sales of $8.1 billion. Pfizer's vaccine saw a 13% rise in sales to $8.8 billion.

Monkeypox: The Department of Health and Human Services will likely declare monkeypox a public health emergency in the coming days, two people with knowledge of the matter said, a move that comes after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention designated the disease as a nationally notifiable condition to standardize case identification and bolster data-sharing among states.

HHS said it will make available about 786,000 monkeypox vaccine doses, after the Food and Drug Administration signed off on the Danish-made Jynneos vaccine for distribution.

The White House is planning to name a national monkeypox coordinator, with expertise in epidemic response and government operations among the primary qualifications it seeks for the role, according to two people familiar with the plan.

The price tag to fight the country's monkeypox outbreak could amount to nearly $7 billion, according to Biden administration estimates detailed in a memo to the president and shared with lawmakers, though a formal request for those funds — which would cover monkeypox tests, vaccine doses and treatments — was not made.

Drugmakers in litigation: A federal appeals court in New York upheld a lower-court ruling against Pfizer that said the drugmaker's Direct Copay Assistance Program — an effort to cover patient co-pays on the heart medicines Vyndaqel and Vyndamax — violated an anti-kickback law.

Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. agreed to a tentative settlement of up to $4.25 billion with about 2,500 local governments, states and tribes over the Israeli drugmaker's role in the opioid epidemic.

AbbVie Inc.'s Allergan division struck a deal to pay $2.37 billion to settle more than 2,500 lawsuits filed by state and local governments and tribes over the drugmaker's role in the opioid epidemic.

Update for Clinicians on Monkeypox in People with HIV, Children and Adolescents, and People who are Pregnant or Breastfeeding

Summary
As of July 29, 2022, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and state and local public health partners are reporting 5,189 cases of Monkeypox virus infections in the United States across 47 states, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico. CDC is also reporting multiple outbreaks of monkeypox have also been reported globally in 72 countries that do not normally report monkeypox activity. On Friday, July 22, CDC reported the first two cases of monkeypox in children in the United States during the current outbreak.

This Health Alert Network (HAN) Health Update serves to alert clinicians to clinical considerations for preventing, diagnosing, and managing monkeypox in people with HIV, children, adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding.

Background
Since May 2022, CDC has been urging healthcare providers in the United States to be on alert for patients who have rash illnesses consistent with monkeypox. People with HIV, individuals who are immunocompromised, children, adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding may be at risk for increased disease severity and adverse health outcomes associated with monkeypox infection. Clinicians should be familiar with unique clinical considerations for monkeypox in these patient populations. A broad diagnostic approach is encouraged to distinguish Monkeypox virus infection from other causes of fever and rash illness. Testing should be performed on persons for whom monkeypox is suspected based on clinical presentation or epidemiologic criteria. Clinicians should consult their state or territorial health department (State Contacts) or CDC through the CDC Emergency Operations Center (770-488-7100) as soon as monkeypox is suspected.

CDC has issued clinical considerations for monkeypox infection in multiple populations including: people with HIV, children and adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. These newly released clinical considerations complement existing clinical guidance for managing monkeypox and provide information on signs and symptoms of Monkeypox virus infection; pre- and post-exposure prophylaxis; treatment; and infection control in these populations.

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in People with HIV
In the current outbreak, available international summary surveillance data in the CDC-issued clinical considerations for people with HIV indicate 30-51% HIV prevalence among persons with monkeypox for whom HIV status was known. It is currently unknown whether HIV infection affects a person's risk of acquiring Monkeypox virus infection and developing disease after exposure.

Persons with advanced and uncontrolled HIV might be at higher risk for severe or prolonged monkeypox disease. Therefore, prophylaxis (e.g., vaccination), medical treatment and close monitoring are a priority for this population. Compared with other persons with monkeypox, case reports among persons with inadequately treated HIV who have CD4 counts ≤350 per mm^3 reported higher rates of secondary bacterial infection, more prolonged illness (and thereby also longer period of infectiousness), as well as a higher likelihood of a confluent or partially confluent rash, rather than discrete lesions. In contrast, recent reports of patients with HIV infection and monkeypox who are on effective antiretroviral therapy (ART) have noted no deaths or evident excess hospitalizations to date. Providers should consider both viral suppression and CD4 count in weighing the risk of severe outcomes from monkeypox for any patient with HIV.

The rash of monkeypox can be confused with other rash illnesses that are considered in people with HIV, including herpes zoster (shingles), scabies, molluscum contagiosum, herpes, syphilis, chancroid, lymphogranuloma venereum, allergic skin rashes, and drug eruptions. Immunocompromised persons, including persons with advanced, untreated or inadequately suppressed HIV, may present with an atypical rash, including a disseminated rash that may make diagnosis more challenging.

Prevention of monkeypox and infection control practices in the home or healthcare setting are the same regardless of peoples' HIV status. Post-exposure prophylaxis (PEP) and antiviral treatments, including tecovirimat, are available for persons exposed to monkeypox or with Monkeypox virus infection. The safety and immunogenicity of JYNNEOS, a live, non-replicating viral vaccine, has been specifically established in people with HIV; however, immunogenicity among persons with HIV who have CD4 counts below 100 cells/mm^3 or who are not virologically suppressed remains unknown. ACAM2000, a replicating viral vaccine, should not be given to people with HIV (regardless of immune status). Antiviral treatments for monkeypox have few interactions with antiretroviral therapy. ART and opportunistic infection prophylaxis should be continued in all people with HIV who develop monkeypox.

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in Children and Adolescents
Limited pediatric data on infection with the Congo Basin clade of Monkeypox virus suggest increased risk of severe disease in children younger than 8 years of age. Rare complications of monkeypox include abscess, airway obstruction due to severe lymphadenopathy, cellulitis, corneal scarring, encephalitis, keratitis, pneumonia, and sepsis. The West African clade of Monkeypox virus involved in the current outbreak typically causes less severe disease than the Congo Basin clade. Monkeypox virus can spread to children through contact with infectious body fluids (e.g., lesion exudates and respiratory secretions) of people or animals or through contact with fomites, as may occur in households and other close contact settings. The number of monkeypox cases among children in the United States is currently low; however, CDC acknowledges that the expanding U.S. outbreak and the possible risk for transmission in households and other settings may result in additional pediatric cases. Pediatric providers should be familiar with prevention, recognition, and testing considerations for monkeypox in children and adolescents.
Families should be counseled about preventing the spread of Monkeypox virus between children, caregivers, and household members in the home, including avoidance of contact with persons who have monkeypox, the body fluids of an infected person, and fomites (e.g., clothing, towels, bedding); wearing a well-fitting mask or respirator by the person with monkeypox and the contact (for children over 2 years of age) when interaction is unavoidable; and minimizing the number of caregivers for children with monkeypox. Particular attention should be made to keep children with monkeypox from scratching lesions or touching their eyes to prevent auto-inoculation and more severe illness. Caregivers should cover areas of broken skin with bandages to the extent possible and avoid direct skin-to-skin contact with the rash.
Children and adolescents who are close contacts of a person with monkeypox (e.g., household contact, other family member, caregiver, or friend) should be evaluated for illness and offered post-exposure prophylaxis with JYNNEOS or ACAM2000 (for children older than 12 months) or treatment when indicated.
Monkeypox should be considered when children or adolescents present with signs or symptoms that could be consistent with the disease, especially if epidemiologic criteria are present. The rash of monkeypox can be confused with other rash illnesses that are commonly considered in children including varicella (chickenpox); hand, foot, and mouth disease; measles; scabies; molluscum contagiosum; herpes; allergic skin rashes and syphilis (including congenital syphilis); and drug eruptions.
Data are limited on the effectiveness of PEP for children who have been exposed to monkeypox or treatment for children with illness, and no vaccines or other products are currently licensed for monkeypox prevention or treatment in children or adolescents. However, PEP should not be withheld from children or adolescents who are otherwise eligible. Decisions about whether to offer PEP should take into account the patient's degree of exposure and the patient's individual risk of severe disease.

Prophylactic therapeutics that can be administered include vaccination, Vaccinia immune globulin, and antiviral medication. For almost all children and adolescents, vaccination is the preventive treatment that should be administered. Immune globulin or antivirals may also be considered for infants under 6 months of age, given their immature immune systems and possible decreased responses to vaccination.

Tecovirimat is currently being used as the first-line treatment for infection with Monkeypox virus, including for children and adolescents with severe disease or underlying medical conditions that may increase risk for severe disease and those with complications from monkeypox. Individual risks and benefits must be considered prior to initiating tecovirimat. Other treatments such as Vaccinia immune globulin may be considered in unusual circumstances.

In pediatric inpatient care settings, infection control procedures for children with monkeypox infection should also consider the child's age and caregiving needs; family and caregiver preferences; the extent, severity, and course of the child's illness; and risks for severe monkeypox disease in exposed caregivers (e.g., pregnancy or immunocompromising conditions).

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in People who are Pregnant or Breastfeeding
Data regarding Monkeypox virus infection during pregnancy are limited. It is unknown if pregnant people are more susceptible to acquiring Monkeypox virus infection or if illness is more severe during pregnancy. Other poxviruses cause more severe infection during pregnancy. Monkeypox virus can be transmitted to the fetus during pregnancy and to the newborn by close contact during and after birth. There are few case reports of spontaneous pregnancy loss and stillbirth, preterm delivery, and neonatal monkeypox infection; the frequency and circumstances for these outcomes are unknown. Whether Monkeypox virus is present in breast milk is unknown; however, it may be transmitted through close contact during breastfeeding.
Prevention measures for monkeypox infection are similar for pregnant and non-pregnant people. Pre- or post-exposure prophylaxis should be offered to people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. When pre- or post-exposure prophylaxis by vaccination is chosen, JYNNEOS, a live, non-replicating viral vaccine, can be used. ACAM2000, a replicating viral vaccine, should not be used in people who are pregnant or breastfeeding.

During pregnancy, the cause of fever may be difficult to differentiate from other infections, such as intraamniotic infection (chorioamnionitis), until the monkeypox rash appears. Pregnant patients with rashes initially considered characteristic of dermatoses of pregnancy (e.g., polymorphic eruption of pregnancy) or of more common infections (e.g., varicella zoster or sexually transmitted infections) should be carefully evaluated for a monkeypox rash, and submission of specimens of lesions for monkeypox diagnosis should be considered, especially if the person has any epidemiologic risk factors for monkeypox infection.
While most adults with Monkeypox virus infection experience self-limiting infection and recover within 2–4 weeks, pregnant and breastfeeding people should be prioritized for medical treatment, if needed, due to the probable increased risk of severe disease during pregnancy, risk of transmission to the fetus during pregnancy or to the newborn by close contact during and after birth, and risk of severe infection in newborns. Treatment for Monkeypox virus infection should be offered to people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. The risks and benefits of treatment options should be discussed with the patient.
Recommendations for infection prevention and control of monkeypox in healthcare settings are the same for pregnant and non-pregnant patients. Newborns born to people with monkeypox should be placed in isolation, and healthcare personnel should follow infection prevention and control recommendations. Patients with monkeypox should be counseled about measures to prevent risk of transmission of Monkeypox virus to their newborn from close contact and breastfeeding.

Update for Clinicians on Monkeypox in People with HIV, Children and Adolescents, and People who are Pregnant or Breastfeeding

Summary
As of July 29, 2022, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and state and local public health partners are reporting 5,189 cases of Monkeypox virus infections in the United States across 47 states, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico. CDC is also reporting multiple outbreaks of monkeypox have also been reported globally in 72 countries that do not normally report monkeypox activity. On Friday, July 22, CDC reported the first two cases of monkeypox in children in the United States during the current outbreak.

This Health Alert Network (HAN) Health Update serves to alert clinicians to clinical considerations for preventing, diagnosing, and managing monkeypox in people with HIV, children, adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding.

Background
Since May 2022, CDC has been urging healthcare providers in the United States to be on alert for patients who have rash illnesses consistent with monkeypox. People with HIV, individuals who are immunocompromised, children, adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding may be at risk for increased disease severity and adverse health outcomes associated with monkeypox infection. Clinicians should be familiar with unique clinical considerations for monkeypox in these patient populations. A broad diagnostic approach is encouraged to distinguish Monkeypox virus infection from other causes of fever and rash illness. Testing should be performed on persons for whom monkeypox is suspected based on clinical presentation or epidemiologic criteria. Clinicians should consult their state or territorial health department (State Contacts) or CDC through the CDC Emergency Operations Center (770-488-7100) as soon as monkeypox is suspected.
CDC has issued clinical considerations for monkeypox infection in multiple populations including: people with HIV, children and adolescents, and people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. These newly released clinical considerations complement existing clinical guidance for managing monkeypox and provide information on signs and symptoms of Monkeypox virus infection; pre- and post-exposure prophylaxis; treatment; and infection control in these populations.

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in People with HIV
In the current outbreak, available international summary surveillance data in the CDC-issued clinical considerations for people with HIV indicate 30-51% HIV prevalence among persons with monkeypox for whom HIV status was known. It is currently unknown whether HIV infection affects a person's risk of acquiring Monkeypox virus infection and developing disease after exposure.

Persons with advanced and uncontrolled HIV might be at higher risk for severe or prolonged monkeypox disease. Therefore, prophylaxis (e.g., vaccination), medical treatment and close monitoring are a priority for this population. Compared with other persons with monkeypox, case reports among persons with inadequately treated HIV who have CD4 counts ≤350 per mm^3 reported higher rates of secondary bacterial infection, more prolonged illness (and thereby also longer period of infectiousness), as well as a higher likelihood of a confluent or partially confluent rash, rather than discrete lesions. In contrast, recent reports of patients with HIV infection and monkeypox who are on effective antiretroviral therapy (ART) have noted no deaths or evident excess hospitalizations to date. Providers should consider both viral suppression and CD4 count in weighing the risk of severe outcomes from monkeypox for any patient with HIV.

The rash of monkeypox can be confused with other rash illnesses that are considered in people with HIV, including herpes zoster (shingles), scabies, molluscum contagiosum, herpes, syphilis, chancroid, lymphogranuloma venereum, allergic skin rashes, and drug eruptions. Immunocompromised persons, including persons with advanced, untreated or inadequately suppressed HIV, may present with an atypical rash, including a disseminated rash that may make diagnosis more challenging.

Prevention of monkeypox and infection control practices in the home or healthcare setting are the same regardless of peoples' HIV status. Post-exposure prophylaxis (PEP) and antiviral treatments, including tecovirimat, are available for persons exposed to monkeypox or with Monkeypox virus infection. The safety and immunogenicity of JYNNEOS, a live, non-replicating viral vaccine, has been specifically established in people with HIV; however, immunogenicity among persons with HIV who have CD4 counts below 100 cells/mm^3 or who are not virologically suppressed remains unknown. ACAM2000, a replicating viral vaccine, should not be given to people with HIV (regardless of immune status). Antiviral treatments for monkeypox have few interactions with antiretroviral therapy. ART and opportunistic infection prophylaxis should be continued in all people with HIV who develop monkeypox.

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in Children and Adolescents

Limited pediatric data on infection with the Congo Basin clade of Monkeypox virus suggest increased risk of severe disease in children younger than 8 years of age. Rare complications of monkeypox include abscess, airway obstruction due to severe lymphadenopathy, cellulitis, corneal scarring, encephalitis, keratitis, pneumonia, and sepsis. The West African clade of Monkeypox virus involved in the current outbreak typically causes less severe disease than the Congo Basin clade.

Monkeypox virus can spread to children through contact with infectious body fluids (e.g., lesion exudates and respiratory secretions) of people or animals or through contact with fomites, as may occur in households and other close contact settings. The number of monkeypox cases among children in the United States is currently low; however, CDC acknowledges that the expanding U.S. outbreak and the possible risk for transmission in households and other settings may result in additional pediatric cases. Pediatric providers should be familiar with prevention, recognition, and testing considerations for monkeypox in children and adolescents.

Families should be counseled about preventing the spread of Monkeypox virus between children, caregivers, and household members in the home, including avoidance of contact with persons who have monkeypox, the body fluids of an infected person, and fomites (e.g., clothing, towels, bedding); wearing a well-fitting mask or respirator by the person with monkeypox and the contact (for children over 2 years of age) when interaction is unavoidable; and minimizing the number of caregivers for children with monkeypox. Particular attention should be made to keep children with monkeypox from scratching lesions or touching their eyes to prevent auto-inoculation and more severe illness. Caregivers should cover areas of broken skin with bandages to the extent possible and avoid direct skin-to-skin contact with the rash.

Children and adolescents who are close contacts of a person with monkeypox (e.g., household contact, other family member, caregiver, or friend) should be evaluated for illness and offered post-exposure prophylaxis with JYNNEOS or ACAM2000 (for children older than 12 months) or treatment when indicated. Monkeypox should be considered when children or adolescents present with signs or symptoms that could be consistent with the disease, especially if epidemiologic criteria are present. The rash of monkeypox can be confused with other rash illnesses that are commonly considered in children including varicella (chickenpox); hand, foot, and mouth disease; measles; scabies; molluscum contagiosum; herpes; allergic skin rashes and syphilis (including congenital syphilis); and drug eruptions.

Data are limited on the effectiveness of PEP for children who have been exposed to monkeypox or treatment for children with illness, and no vaccines or other products are currently licensed for monkeypox prevention or treatment in children or adolescents. However, PEP should not be withheld from children or adolescents who are otherwise eligible. Decisions about whether to offer PEP should take into account the patient's degree of exposure and the patient's individual risk of severe disease.

Prophylactic therapeutics that can be administered include vaccination, Vaccinia immune globulin, and antiviral medication. For almost all children and adolescents, vaccination is the preventive treatment that should be administered. Immune globulin or antivirals may also be considered for infants under 6 months of age, given their immature immune systems and possible decreased responses to vaccination.

Tecovirimat is currently being used as the first-line treatment for infection with Monkeypox virus, including for children and adolescents with severe disease or underlying medical conditions that may increase risk for severe disease and those with complications from monkeypox. Individual risks and benefits must be considered prior to initiating tecovirimat. Other treatments such as Vaccinia immune globulin may be considered in unusual circumstances.

In pediatric inpatient care settings, infection control procedures for children with monkeypox infection should also consider the child's age and caregiving needs; family and caregiver preferences; the extent, severity, and course of the child's illness; and risks for severe monkeypox disease in exposed caregivers (e.g., pregnancy or immunocompromising conditions).

Recommendations and Information for Healthcare Providers on Monkeypox in People who are Pregnant or Breastfeeding

Data regarding Monkeypox virus infection during pregnancy are limited. It is unknown if pregnant people are more susceptible to acquiring Monkeypox virus infection or if illness is more severe during pregnancy. Other poxviruses cause more severe infection during pregnancy. Monkeypox virus can be transmitted to the fetus during pregnancy and to the newborn by close contact during and after birth. There are few case reports of spontaneous pregnancy loss and stillbirth, preterm delivery, and neonatal monkeypox infection; the frequency and circumstances for these outcomes are unknown. Whether Monkeypox virus is present in breast milk is unknown; however, it may be transmitted through close contact during breastfeeding.

Prevention measures for monkeypox infection are similar for pregnant and non-pregnant people. Pre- or post-exposure prophylaxis should be offered to people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. When pre- or post-exposure prophylaxis by vaccination is chosen, JYNNEOS, a live, non-replicating viral vaccine, can be used. ACAM2000, a replicating viral vaccine, should not be used in people who are pregnant or breastfeeding.

During pregnancy, the cause of fever may be difficult to differentiate from other infections, such as intraamniotic infection (chorioamnionitis), until the monkeypox rash appears. Pregnant patients with rashes initially considered characteristic of dermatoses of pregnancy (e.g., polymorphic eruption of pregnancy) or of more common infections (e.g., varicella zoster or sexually transmitted infections) should be carefully evaluated for a monkeypox rash, and submission of specimens of lesions for monkeypox diagnosis should be considered, especially if the person has any epidemiologic risk factors for monkeypox infection.

While most adults with Monkeypox virus infection experience self-limiting infection and recover within 2—4 weeks, pregnant and breastfeeding people should be prioritized for medical treatment, if needed, due to the probable increased risk of severe disease during pregnancy, risk of transmission to the fetus during pregnancy or to the newborn by close contact during and after birth, and risk of severe infection in newborns. Treatment for Monkeypox virus infection should be offered to people who are pregnant or breastfeeding. The risks and benefits of treatment options should be discussed with the patient.

Recommendations for infection prevention and control of monkeypox in healthcare settings are the same for pregnant and non-pregnant patients. Newborns born to people with monkeypox should be placed in isolation, and healthcare personnel should follow infection prevention and control recommendations. Patients with monkeypox should be counseled about measures to prevent risk of transmission of Monkeypox virus to their newborn from close contact and breastfeeding.

CORONAVIRUS

Doctor: Biden tests positive for COVID for 2nd day in a row

Josh Boak, The Associated Press

President Joe Biden tested positive for COVID-19 for the second straight day, in what appears to be a rare case of "rebound" following treatment with an anti-viral drug.

Of Course Biden Has Rebound COVID

Rachel Gutman-Wei, The Atlantic

With more than 40,000 prescriptions being handed out a day, we're taking Paxlovid at about the same rate that we're taking oxycodone. When Biden got sick last week, he started taking the pills before the day was out. When Anthony Fauci had COVID in June, he took two courses. That enthusiasm is in line with the government's messaging around the drug.

Biden covid case highlights confusing CDC guidance on ending isolation

Lena H. Sun and Joel Achenbach, The Washington Post

Before President Biden emerged from coronavirus isolation Wednesday, he made double-sure he was no longer contagious. He received negative tests Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. To test at all meant Biden was going above and beyond the guidance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention for exiting isolation.

How the Covid-19 Pandemic Changed Americans' Health for the Worse

Brianna Abbott, The Wall Street Journal

Covid-19 has killed more than one million people in the U.S., a toll mounting by some 350 people a day. A range of other chronic diseases and acute threats to health also worsened during the pandemic, data show, as people missed screenings, abandoned routines and experienced loss and isolation.

Private equity is the biggest player in a booming autism-therapy industry. Some therapists say the 'money grab' is hurting the quality of care

Erika Fry, Fortune

When Hopebridge, a nationwide chain of autism therapy centers, opened a branch in Athens, Georgia, in the fall of 2020, Sara counted herself lucky; she began sending her five-year-old daughter Zoe there almost immediately. True, the 40-hour-per-week program required strict, on-time attendance—Zoe could lose her spot after just a few tardies—but it seemed that Sara had finally found safe, quality, insurance-covered care for her daughter.

To Retain Nurses and Other Staffers, Hospitals Are Opening Child Care Centers

Lauren Sausser, Kaiser Health News

Nationally, only about 1 in 10 workers have access to employer programs that cover some or all of the costs for child care services — either on the job site or off — according to a report published last year by the U.S. Department of Labor. The health sector seems to be doing more: About one-third of U.S. hospitals offer child care benefits.

From low pay to workplace culture, obstacles litter the path to diversity in EMS

Akila Muthukumar, Stat News

Emergency medical services have since become predominantly white, as well as mostly male, in Pittsburgh and nationally. Programs like Freedom House 2.0 have sprouted across the nation in an effort to diversify EMS. As of 2000, less than 5% of certified EMS professionals were African Americans, and that proportion remained until 2017. As of 2019, it had increased slightly: non-Hispanic Black people accounted for 8% of EMTs and 5% of paramedics.

Bipartisan bill on antibiotics faces crucial stretch

Paige Kupas, The Hill

The bipartisan legislation, with its $11 billion price tag, aims to establish a subscription model in which antibiotic developers are paid upfront for the use of their medicine, which could spur a flurry of new drugs to the market. To qualify, a new antibiotic must be checked against certain criteria in the bill — but physicians and experts worry how effective that could be in practice.

Amgen Fights IRS Over $10.7 Billion Tax Bill

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Monkeypox Is About to Become the Next Public Health Failure

Scott Gottlieb, The New York Times

When about 100 cases of monkeypox had been confirmed or suspected in Europe in May, it was clear the virus was spreading outside the areas where it was previously seen. Some on social media suggested it might already be spreading rapidly in communities in Europe and the United States. These reports should have been a code red for federal infectious disease response.

While monkeypox cases rise, why are we waiting for the cavalry to rescue us?

Dr. Sanjay Gupta, CNN

We are one of the wealthiest countries in the world, spending more than $4 trillion dollars a year on health care, more per person than anywhere else. With all those resources and technology, it's not as if the United States is incapable of mounting a significant response to an emerging outbreak. And there is little doubt we will eventually do what should have already been done: declare monkeypox a public health emergency, appoint a national coordinator and mount a more significant response. But why do we wait so long, drag our feet and endure so much suffering in the meantime?

WTO: Don't make a bad situation worse by granting intellectual property waivers for Covid-19 therapeutics and diagnostics

Kenneth E. Thorpe, Stat News

The World Trade Organization recently agreed to suspend patent protections for Covid-19 vaccines. The trade body is now considering going one step further: extending the intellectual property waiver to Covid-19 therapeutics and diagnostics. That misguided idea would have disastrous consequences: further eroding intellectual property protections will discourage research and development and make it even harder to fight deadly diseases and future pandemics.

Trends in Utilization of Electronic Consultations Associated With Patient Payer and Language Among US Academic Medical Centers During the COVID-19 Pandemic

Anita Arora et al., JAMA Network Open

In this cohort study including 14 545 completed eConsultations, eConsultations as a proportion of all specialty consultations significantly increased in the first week of the pandemic. This held true for both English- and non-English-speaking patients and across all payer types, except for self-pay and uninsured patients.

Medication Abortion Faces Legal Uncertainty Post-Dobbs

by Peter Johnson

With abortion banned or on the verge of a ban in a growing number of states following the Supreme Court's decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization, medication abortion has become more important than ever for women and pregnant people seeking abortion care. Abortifacients don't require an in-person consultation and, since the start of the pandemic, have been dispensed online without medical risk to patients. However, experts say that the legal status of medication abortion is far from settled in states where abortion has been banned.

Does the FDA's drug authority preempt abortion bans?

- The FDA's authority to approve drugs may preempt state laws that ban abortifacients, Katie Keith, an attorney and researcher at Georgetown University's Center on Health Insurance Reforms, tells AIS Health. GenBioPro, Inc., a manufacturer of generic mifepristone, sued the state of Mississippi in 2020 over its ban of medication abortion.
- Citing the Federal Food, Drug & Cosmetic Act of 1938, GenBioPro (GBP) argues that "the FDA imposed restrictions on who can prescribe mifepristone, where it can be dispensed, and what information must be given to patients – all to ensure patient safety without unduly burdening access. Contrary to these federal authorities, Mississippi has instituted a near-total ban on medicated abortion….The ban and restrictions effectively preclude GBP from operating in Mississippi. By obstructing GBP's ability to provide and patients' ability to obtain mifepristone, Mississippi's laws contravene….the FDA's judgment concerning the safety and efficacy of mifepristone."
- Keith says she's "expecting a ruling reasonably soon — they just invited one more round of briefing in the wake of Dobbs" — and adds that the case may not actually be impacted by the legal reasoning in Dobbs.
- "Dobbs was about the constitutional right to a pre-viability abortion. We are here talking about a completely different issue," Keith says. "This is about federal preemption of a state restriction on an approved drug, regardless of whether it's about abortion."

States could block telehealth prescribing

- Telehealth access to an abortifacient prescription will be hard — or illegal — to come by for many patients, according to the Kaiser Family Foundation. Some 22 states and the District of Columbia allow surgical and medication abortion, including telehealth visits to obtain an abortifacient prescription.
- "Right now, to have a telehealth consult for this type of care, you have to drive to a state that does not ban abortion," explains Elizabeth Mitchell, president and CEO of the Purchaser Business Group on Health. Then patients have to "literally be able to show, on a phone or another device, where you are located….or the provider will be held liable."
- Mitchell says that ERISA may preempt state laws that regulate telehealth visits, but she's not sure: "If they are simply administering it on behalf of a self-insured employer, my understanding is that they [the ERISA plan member] are protected. But this all has to go through the plan. If they try to reimburse this or pay separately outside the plan, it exposes them to legal risk."
- However, fully insured plans are subject to state-level regulation, meaning fully insured and small-group plans are subject to state abortion bans. And Keith isn't sure whether ERISA preempts criminal law.
- "Does ERISA preempt state criminal law?" Keith wonders. "The idea of ERISA preemption is states can't step in to regulate the ERISA plan. It will probably come down to how the state laws are written and how they get applied."

After originally exiting the marketplace in 2017, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Nebraska will return to the state's ACA exchanges for the 2023 plan year. "Ever since we've gotten out, we've been analyzing, trying to figure out when is the right time to get back in. Now is the right time," Executive Vice President Ron Rowe told the Omaha World-Herald July 22. The insurer will offer Nebraska HeartlandBlue in all 93 of the state's counties. As of the first-quarter of 2022, four insurers currently participate in Nebraska's exchanges: Medica (60,000 members); Bright Health (43,000 members); Centene Corp. (12,800 members); and Oscar Health (2,900 members).

AUGUST 2022 NEWSLETTER

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Jessica Strong
UPHA President

Fall brings a welcome crispness to the air, fresh sharp pencils, and the promise of learning new things. Back to school season is upon us. For those who will be stepping into a real-life, or virtual classrooms, I wish you well on your formal education journey! Many of us will not be returning to a formal classroom, but we can be lifelong learners.

I recently reviewed the 2022 Public Health Outcome Measures Report of Utah. It reminded me of the first of the 10 Essential Public Health Services – to Assess and Monitor Population Health. Despite the many challenges public health has faced in the past several years, we continue to gather and disseminate data. This is critical for us and our many partners who look to this data for program development, partnerships, and evaluation. The most recent health outcome report shows Utah has made significant improvements in many areas such as adolescent births, teen cigarette use, and motor vehicle deaths. There are other areas that need continued efforts to improve the health of our communities such as uninsured kids, child and adult obesity, and STIs. Even in areas where we have made improvements, we still lag the rest of the country, such as mammography screening. Without this essential data tracking, we can't know if we are winning or losing, if health areas are failing or improving. If you haven't looked at this report, I encourage you to check it out!

Thank you to all the public health workers who are working to make a difference in these health areas. The data shows the numbers, but it's the workers behind the scenes that are driving the impact. YOU are making a difference for the lives of Utahns.

Take protective measures against mosquito bites

Salt Lake City—Even though no human cases of West Nile virus in Utah have been reported to date, the Utah Department of Health and Human Services says the virus has been found in mosquito pools in Davis, Salt Lake, and Uintah counties. That means the risk of West Nile virus spreading to humans still exists.

West Nile virus is spread by mosquitoes and can cause illness in people and animals. While most people who get infected with West Nile virus will have no symptoms, some develop symptoms similar to the flu, including fever, headache, body aches, nausea, or rashes. In a small number of cases, people can develop a severe form of the virus, which can result in hospitalization and death. Symptoms of the severe form of West Nile virus include high fever, severe headache, stiff neck, disorientation, and confusion. If you are experiencing symptoms, contact a healthcare provider immediately.

“West Nile virus has an annual presence in Utah and it isn’t going away," according to Hannah Rettler, Utah Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) vector borne/zoonotic epidemiologist. “Now is a good time to protect yourself from mosquito bites and work to eliminate mosquito breeding sites around your home," adds Rettler.

Take these simple precautions to avoid mosquito bites and reduce your risk for infection:

- Wear long-sleeves, long pants, and socks while outdoors and use an insect repellent with 20%-30% DEET, which is safe to use during pregnancy. Repellents are not recommended for children younger than two months of age.
- The hours from dusk to dawn are peak biting times for many mosquitoes. Consider rescheduling outdoor activities that occur in the evening or early morning.
- Mosquitoes lay their eggs in standing water. Remove any puddles of water or standing water including in pet dishes, flower pots, wading and swimming pools, buckets, tarps, and tires.
- Report bodies of stagnant water to your local Mosquito Abatement District (MAD). Visit http://www.umaa.org/ for a list of MADs.
- Keep doors, windows, and screens in good condition and make sure they fit tightly.
- Consult with an immunization travel clinic before traveling to areas that may have mosquito-borne illness such as Zika or dengue and take the necessary precautions.

West Nile virus surveillance will continue into early fall. You can find an updated weekly report at https://epi.health.utah.gov/west-nile-virus-reports/. For more information about West Nile virus, call your local health department or visit https://epi.health.utah.gov/west-nile-virus/.

Utah Department of Health & Human Services

Team update

DEAR TEAM:

If you live or work near the Wasatch Front, you generally have plenty of doctors or hospitals to choose from. But in the rural parts of the state, it's a different story. Finding primary care can be a real challenge.

In this next installment of DHHS 101, Ashley Moretz, who directs our Office of Primary Care and Rural Health, talks about how his office is increasing primary care in and attracting medical providers to rural Utah to help those who are medically underserved. Get to know PCRH in this week's video.

And now… the email of the week!

- Do you have anything to declare?

Conflict of interest forms.

DHHS Policy 02-28 requires all DHHS employees to submit a conflict of interest form annually by July 1. Because this is a new policy that just went into effect on July 1, we're asking for all employees who haven't completed a conflict of interest form since April 30 to go into the DHHS Forms system and complete this by August 31. You will need to be logged into the VPN to access this if not at a DHHS location.

Time to fill out new telework/telecommute/surge agreements

If you are a telework eligible individual, we're asking that you complete a new telework agreement by August 31 using the DHHS Forms system. You will need to be logged into the VPN to access this if not at a DHHS location. For those of you that telework 50% or more of your time, you will need to fill out a "Telework Agreement" and the "DHHS Telework Alternate Worksite Safety Checklist." For those of you who telework less than 50% of your time you will need to fill out a "Telecommute Agreement" and the "DHHS Telework Alternate Worksite Safety Checklist." For those that work full time from the office, but are surge eligible, you will need to fill out the "Telework Surge Agreement."

[redacted]

[redacted]

- DHHS media hits

  Utah COVID numbers: 5,800 new cases, 16 deaths reported this week (Tribune)

  State Auditor: Utah underage drinking prevention program falling short (Axios local)

  Why some parents are declining to vaccinate children (Deseret News)

- Coming up!

  On Thursday, our Division of Aging and Adult Services (DAAS) will celebrate Utah centenarians with Gov. Cox and Lt. Gov. Henderson.

  Check out the 2022 Centenarian Yearbook here.

  Do you know someone who will be at least 100 years old next year? Let us know!

- Protect yourself

  We have learned of the first Utah mosquitoes carrying West Nile virus have been identified in Davis, Salt Lake, and Uintah counties. No human cases have been reported. Today, we're sharing with the media how to protect ourselves from mosquito bites:

  Wear long-sleeves, long pants, and socks while outdoors and use an insect repellent with 20%-30% DEET, which is safe to use during pregnancy. Repellents are not recommended for children younger than 2 months of age.

  The hours from dusk to dawn are peak biting times for many mosquitoes. Consider rescheduling outdoor activities that occur in the evening or early morning.

  Mosquitoes lay their eggs in standing water. Remove any puddles of water or standing water including in pet dishes, flower pots, wading and swimming pools, buckets, tarps, and tires.

  Report bodies of stagnant water to your local Mosquito Abatement District (MAD). Visit http://www.umaa.org/ for a list of MADs.

  Keep doors, windows, and screens in good condition and make sure they fit tightly.

- Reminder: Sign up for surge telework notifications

  If you are eligible for surge telework and want a notification from DHHS about upcoming surge telework days, please see the process for signing up for an email to work or personal email addresses, or both!

  Here's how it will work:
  1. Opt in to getting an email at your personal and/or work email by filling out this Google form. (We are now up to 1,908 email addresses.)
  2. Former UDOH surge teleworkers were not automatically opted in and will need to fill out the form.
  3. Supervisors of surge teleworkers may opt in for these notifications, as well.
  4. We continue to evaluate various text message systems and the need for text messages in the department. Let us know how you feel in the same Google form.

Coinbase Insider Trading Case Raises Crypto Policing Issues

The U.S. Department of Justice and U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission's recent insider trading charges against a former Coinbase employee and his associates highlight unique legal issues that go to the heart of the law enforcement model for policing the crypto industry and raise fundamental questions about the SEC's next moves in the sector, say attorneys at Simpson Thacher.

Cos. Should Engage With EPA On PVC Hazard Designation

A pending petition to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to classify discarded polyvinyl chloride products as hazardous waste could have wide-ranging and unanticipated effects due to the ubiquity of PVC products — so potentially regulated industries should provide information to the EPA on the economic impact of such a move, say attorneys at Kilpatrick.

Centene Reports Progress in Value Creation Plan, Despite Headwinds

by Jill Brown Kettler

Despite facing several headwinds over the next year, including anticipated deterioration in Medicare Advantage star ratings and falling Medicaid enrollment, Centene Corp. increased its full-year 2022 earnings projections and unveiled the latest steps in its ongoing value creation plan. The moves pleased investors, who drove Centene shares to a 52-week high, closing at $93.15 on July 26, the day financial results were posted.

Centene beats out earnings expectations

- Centene posted second-quarter 2022 adjusted earnings per share (EPS) of $1.77 on revenues of $35.9 billion, besting analysts' estimate of $1.69.
- "Overall, the company remains on track with its targets as the momentum from its multi-year value creation plan accelerates," said Oppenheimer analyst Michael Wiederhorn about Centene's results.
- The value creation plan includes a sharp reduction in its office space footprint as it adjusts to a hybrid workforce, sales of non-health plan assets, and a planned exit from international insurance markets.
- Centene boosted its projected EPS range for full-year 2022 to $5.60 to $5.75, a 20-cent increase from a few months ago, and continues to predict that the value creation effort will bear fruit starting in 2023.
- That year, the insurer is projecting that it will achieve $300 million of the total goal of $700 million in annual savings in sales, general and administrative spending, Wiederhorn said. And as it continues to sell non-core assets, "Management expects to use the majority of the net proceeds from the sales to buy back shares and optimize the company's debt structure," he said.

Star ratings, Medicaid redeterminations could cause headaches

- Centene executives outlined some headwinds facing the company, however. Chief among them is dropping Medicare star ratings scores, which drive bonuses for the highest-rated plans.
- "The star scores….are going to be disappointing and unacceptable to this management team," said Chief Financial Officer Drew Asher during a call to discuss second-quarter results, per a transcript from Seeking Alpha. And lower Medicare revenue and star scores make it more challenging to develop attractive benefit designs.
- CEO Sarah London elaborated that the deterioration in 2023 star scores was driven by the company's performance in 2020 and 2021. At that time, WellCare and Centene had just combined operations, employees were adjusting to a new work-at-home model because of the pandemic, and Centene's quality program had new leadership.
- Another headwind, Asher said, is the effect of upcoming Medicaid redeterminations. The suspension of redeterminations has benefited Centene, the nation's managed Medicaid leader. But the insurer has estimated that 1.7 million to 1.8 million of the estimated 3 million new Medicaid members Centene has gained since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic will no longer be eligible for Medicaid once redetermination efforts are completed.

- The impact of redeterminations is a "$7 billion to $7.5 billion revenue headwind at some point when that annualizes, depending on the timing of the commencement of redeterminations," Asher said during the call.

Despite the availability of generic competitors, Bristol Myers Squibb posted Revlimid sales of $2.5 billion for the second quarter of 2022, beating out analyst expectations. BMS said in its earnings report it expects total Revlimid sales of $9.0 to $9.5 billion for the full year. Teva Pharmaceuticals launched Lenalidomide, the first Revlimid generic available in the U.S., in May. Other generic competitors are available internationally, and more copies are set to arrive in the U.S. later this year. For the treatment of multiple myeloma, Lenalidomide holds preferred generic status for 19% of all insured lives under the pharmacy benefit. Revlimid, meanwhile, is a preferred multiple myeloma drug for 52% of insured lives.

- Robert Fenton, who helped lead the Federal Emergency Management Agency's COVID-19 mass vaccination effort and served as the agency's acting administrator at the beginning of the Biden administration, will be tapped by the White House today to oversee the country's monkeypox response. Dr. Demetre Daskalakis, director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's HIV prevention unit, will serve as Fenton's deputy, with the duo working to coordinate "strategy and operations to combat the current monkeypox outbreak, including equitably increasing the availability of tests, vaccinations and treatments," the White House said. (The Associated Press)

- Hospitals will receive a 4.3% increase in Medicare payments for inpatient services in 2023, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services said in issuing a final rule that comes after a monthslong lobbying campaign from provider groups panning the initially proposed 3.2% rise as "woefully inadequate." Hospital trade groups, including the American Hospital Association and the Federation of American Hospitals, had cited an "unprecedented inflationary environment" as cause for a greater reimbursement bump. (Stat News)

- Sen. Bill Cassidy (R-La.) said Democrats' provisions to lower prescription drug costs as part of the party's reconciliation bill will be challenged by Republicans via the so-called Byrd rule, which determines which measures are primarily budgetary in nature and therefore allowed to be passed with a simple-majority vote. Cassidy said there "is a lot in" Democrats' reconciliation package "that is not pertaining to increasing or decreasing the revenue of the federal government." (Bloomberg)

- In opening arguments of its trial seeking to block UnitedHealth Group Inc.'s acquisition of Change Healthcare Inc., the Department of Justice said the merger would allow the insurance giant to gain access to "vast amounts" of data on how its rivals do business. UnitedHealth said it already possesses data on its competitors via its Optum services division, and that the DOJ's case is a "novel and unprecedented legal theory" that relies on a "daisy chain of speculation." How the U.S. Let 20 Million Doses of Monkeypox Vaccine Expire

Joseph Goldstein, The New York Times

At the start of the monkeypox outbreak the U.S. stockpile contained just 2,400 doses of vaccine, a far cry from the more than 20 million it once held.

Up to 1 in 4 known pregnancies may end in miscarriage

Linda Searing, The Washington Post

Among women who know they are pregnant, up to 25 percent of those pregnancies will end in a miscarriage, according to the National Library of Medicine.

Monkeypox Patients Report Excruciating Pain and Lack of Guidance as U.S. Cases Mount

Dominique Mosbergen, The Wall Street Journal

More than two months after monkeypox was detected in the U.S. as part of a global outbreak mostly among men who have sex with men, transmission shows no sign of slowing. The U.S. has surpassed Spain as the country with the most known cases. Federal officials are considering whether to declare monkeypox a public-health emergency.

Gap between monkeypox vaccine demand, supply dire in hotspot cities

Chelsea Cirruzzo and Cuneyt Dil, Axios

In some states that have become hotspots for the monkeypox outbreak, there's a drastic disconnect between the number of doses that local health officials say they need versus what they have been allotted, an Axios Local review of a dozen states found.

Cities are lobbying to host the ARPA-H headquarters. Experts don't understand why

Lev Facher, Stat News

Abortion bans violate religious freedom, clergy say in new legal campaign

Michelle Boorstein, The Washington Post

When the Rev. Laurie Hafner ministers to her Florida congregants about abortion, she looks to the founding values of the United Church of Christ, her lifelong denomination: religious freedom and freedom of thought. She taps into her reading of Genesis, which says "man became a living being" when God breathed "the breath of life" into Adam. She thinks of Jesus promising believers full and abundant life. "I am pro-choice not in spite of my faith, but because of my faith," Hafner says.

INCREASING ACCESS TO ROUTINE IMMUNIZATIONS

COVID-19 had a tremendous negative impact on child vaccination rates, and children enrolled in the Medicaid program are disproportionately represented in this immunization gap.

Increasing pharmacy participation in the Vaccines for Children program (VFC) is one strategy states can use to promote access to vaccination for low-income children who may be behind on vaccinations or have difficulty in accessing a primary care provider.

Explore how states can address barriers to VFC enrollment in our brief.

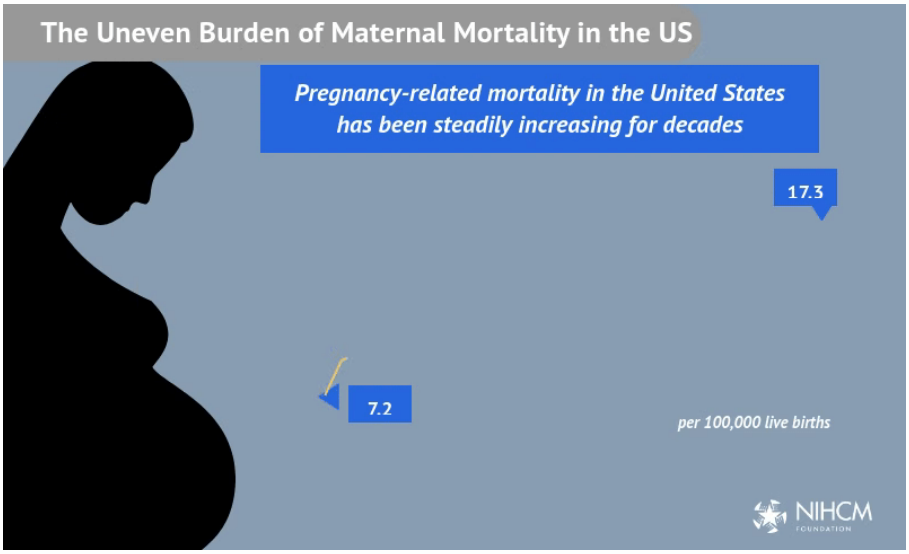
The Uneven Burden of Maternal Mortality in the U.S.



The United States has the highest maternal mortality rate among high-income countries, and it is the only country where maternal mortality is increasing. In 2020, the maternal mortality rate in the U.S. was 23.8 deaths per 100,000 live births, a 14% increase from the prior year, yet most pregnancy-related deaths are preventable. The rate among Black women is nearly three times that of White women. These racial disparities are linked to structural racism, underlying chronic conditions, disparities in access to health care and many of the social determinants of health.

This infographic highlights the new and existing challenges to providing effective reproductive health care that will reduce racial disparities in maternal mortality, and potential strategies to reduce maternal mortality and morbidity nationwide.

Good morning.

Please see Rep. Peterson's email, on behalf of the women in the Legislature.

I think in order to get this information to them as quickly as possible, I think we just create a simple spreadsheet that has the name of the program, ages served and a brief summary of the program. I think you can indicate whether it is federal, state or both, in terms of funding. You can see in my email, I told them we would provide the most basic information so we can turn the request around quickly. We can always come back with number of people served and budget, which I suspect will be the next question.

I would like Marc or Paul to take lead on getting this started. I believe Marc is still out this week. I think if we can have this turned around as quickly as possible that would be great. It should not take a ton of work if this gets pushed down to the appropriate staff who know their programs best. We all know why timing is important for them.

Thanks!

Representative Peterson,

Thank you for reaching out to us. Our department does provide programs and resources to women who fit into these categories. We have programs from prenatal through early childhood, as well as programs for families who have children with disabilities.

We are happy to provide this information. For speed, we will simply provide the name of the program and a brief summary. That will allow us to get you the information quickly and then we can provide any additional information that may be helpful. Please let us know when you would like to receive the information. We will have our team begin working on it today.

Parents of Babies, Toddlers Split on Vaccinating Their Kids
As the first week of the COVID-19 vaccine rollout for kids under 5 comes to a close, new Morning Consult data shows many parents aren't sold on the shots just yet. About 2 in 5 said they'll definitely or probably get their babies and toddlers vaccinated, while a roughly equal share said they probably or definitely won't. Read more here.

Top Stories

- The Senate passed a roughly $15 billion gun reform bill in a 65-33 vote, with more than half of that funding going toward mental health and school safety programs. Lawmakers tapped savings from a Trump-era drug rebate rule to cover the cost of the legislation, which now heads to the House. (The Wall Street Journal)

[redacted]

- The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's vaccine advisory committee voted 15-0 to recommend that the agency promote Moderna Inc.'s COVID-19 vaccine for children ages 6 to 17, the second shot available for adolescents. CDC Director Dr. Rochelle Walensky is expected to sign off on the recommendation, which would trigger the vaccine's rollout by the end of the month. (The Washington Post)

- The Biden administration approved Colorado's proposal to offer a state-run health insurance plan on the Affordable Care Act exchanges next year, making it the first federally backed public option. The health plan is expected to lower premiums by an average of 22%, or about $132 monthly per person. (Fierce Healthcare)

- COVID-19 vaccines prevented an estimated 20 million deaths in the first year after they were made available, mostly in wealthier countries, according to new data published in The Lancet Infectious Diseases journal. Researchers estimated that more than 7 million lives were saved in countries covered by the vaccine-sharing initiative Covax, but that about 1 in 5 deaths in poorer countries could have been prevented had international vaccine targets been met. More Seniors Are Choosing Medicare Advantage - See Enrollment Rates in Your Community

With average annual savings of nearly $2,000 for consumers, lower per-beneficiary government spending, and a 94% beneficiary satisfaction rate, Medicare Advantage is now the leading choice of Medicare coverage for seniors in more than 120 Congressional districts nationwide. What's more, 31 states have MA enrollment rates of more than 40%. Medicare Advantage is working for more than 28 million Americans. Let's protect this bipartisan healthcare success story.

Good Morning ELT,

We've heard concerns around safety at some of our DHHS locations, especially in light of the SCOTUS decision around Roe V. Wade. Please know that we have connected with the Department of Public Safety on these concerns. The intelligence that DPS has gathered indicates that any activity around this decision is looking to be held at the capitol. If they get word of a change they will let us know. Also, if we see anything, please let Tyson Walker know immediately. He has a direct connection with DPS to get a team sent to our facilities for security. Additionally, we've let our security companies know to be aware of anything unusual and to report.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Happy Friday from #OneUtah, a weekly update from the office of Gov. Spencer J. Cox. Here's your recap of what we did this week, what's on the horizon, and Vote!

We encourage every eligible voter to cast their ballot in the Tuesday, June 28 primary election. Your vote is your voice. So please vote and help us shape our great state. If you have any questions, visit vote.utah.gov.

Fireworks safety

We met with firefighters and local officials to encourage Fire Sense as we head into fireworks season. Current drought conditions have made Utah a tinderbox and fire danger is extremely high statewide. In fact, 100% of the state is in drought and 83% of the state is in extreme drought or worse.

Firework sales begin today. If you choose to use fireworks this summer, please be smart and safe about it. Remember:

- Only use fireworks only during legal times and designated holidays.
- Keep a fire extinguisher and water nearby.
- Use fireworks away from dry grass — and never use them on state and federal lands, and all private lands outside cities and towns; and.
- Use extreme caution when lighting aerial fireworks.

You can always find the latest on fireworks safety and local restrictions at firemarshal.utah.gov/department-services/fireworks/.

We know that wildfires from fireworks are preventable. Last year, Utahns used good Fire Sense and cut human-caused wildfires by 51% — that's more than 500 fires that never started. As we gear up for summer celebrations, let's all stay vigilant and use good Fire Sense.

The Supreme Court's ruling

This administration has been dedicated to giving a voice to the most vulnerable in our society, including the unborn. We wholeheartedly support today's Supreme Court ruling and are encouraged to see abortion law will be left to elected state representatives.

As pro-life advocates, this administration is equally committed to supporting women and families in Utah. We all need to do more to support mothers, pregnant women, and children facing poverty and trauma.

Working together to keep Americans safe

We're heartbroken by recent gun violence, and we are committed to helping make a change.

We're proud to join a bipartisan group of governors who are coming together to make recommendations and identify solutions that give state and local leaders effective tools designed to stop mass shootings and instill confidence in our communities and schools.

Every state is unique, but we can all agree that there are common sense ways to keep our schools and communities safe in a manner consistent with the demands of the American people. Stay tuned for updates.

Recognizing Utah's Spirit of Service

Like so many Utahns, we know how important it is to give back, which is why we're thrilled to introduce the awardees of the inaugural Governor's Spirit of Service Awards. Out of more than 100 nominations, this year we honored:

- Cristina Diaz de Leon, who created Rancho Market COVID-19 vaccine clinics, advanced inclusion and cultural celebrations, empowered youth, led out on service projects, and strongly believed in "meeting people where they are". Unfortunately, she passed away from lung cancer on Jan. 22, 2022, and her family accepted the award in her honor.
- Artes de México en Utah, which creates cultural awareness, provides diverse perspectives, builds understanding and cross-cultural competence, helps the Latino-Hispanic youth connect with their roots and be proud of their multicultural heritage.
- The Little Lambs Foundation for Kids, which provides comfort kits for children placed into foster care, emergency shelters, and escaping domestic violence, Northern Utah's only direct service diaper bank, has distributed over 1.75 million diapers to Utah families.
- Andilynn Chambers, a 10-year-old with a very giving heart. She asks for donations rather than birthday gifts, and has donated more than 1,000 items to the local homeless shelters, domestic violence shelters, and The Christmas Box House.
- Lenise Peterman, the volunteer mayor of Helper. She was nominated for working tirelessly on behalf of her community, being a key volunteer for the city revitalization committee, writing grants for the city, securing key partnerships, and acting as a mentor to aspiring change-makers.
- Ruff Haven Crisis Sheltering Center, which works to prevent individuals from having to surrender their pets by providing shelter when someone is experiencing a crisis, temporary hardships, medical emergencies and more.
- Emily Rojo Mendoza, who tutors fellow Kearns HS students, helps at food banks, serves as the president of the My Kearns Evidence 2 Success Youth Council, has raised thousands of dollars for the local food pantries and the homeless youth resource center.
- Ken Vaughn III, who has been in a wheelchair for 20 years, is an active volunteer board member and webmaster for nonprofit Chairbound Sportsman, and helps fundraise and coordinate outdoor adventures for disabled persons.
- Moab Multicultural Center, which works to help the homeless find a place to sleep and make sure the less fortunate families in Moab get food for dinner.

These awardees are why Utah leads the nation in volunteerism and service work. You can read more about them here.

Opening Utah’s new state corrections facility

This week marked a big moment for the Department of Corrections and Utah as we celebrated the largest construction project in our state’s history: We officially cut the ribbon at the new Utah State Correctional Facility. We're proud of this effort to provide a safe and secure facility that's also conducive to recovery and rehabilitation.

What makes this building different? There's increased programming space for education, vocational training, and treatment; greater access to medical care and resources; and improved working environments for staff.

We applaud the individuals who have dedicated more than five years to this project: Jerry Jensen; Bryan Taylor; Capt. Matthew Coates; Lt. Bisera Habibija; Lt. Michael Millward; Elizabeth Brown; Steven Turley; and Mike Ambre.

We'd also like to thank the dedicated Department of Corrections staff. Corrections is not an easy career. It can be dangerous and thankless — and it can mean long hours. But it’s a vital part of keeping us all safe. Inmates will be moving to the new facility from the Draper prison site in the coming weeks.

CDC authorizes COVID vaccines for children

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention issued recommendations for vaccinating children 5 years of age and younger against COVID-19, which clears the way for the nearly 241,000 Utah children to get vaccinated!

Additionally, the FDA has authorized both the Pfizer and Moderna mRNA vaccines for use with all ages (6 months and older) eligible for COVID-19 vaccinations. Previously, only the Pfizer vaccine was available for children younger than 18.

Vaccines for this youngest age group are on the way. According to the Utah Department of Health and Human Services, providers have already ordered 32,300 doses of the vaccines.

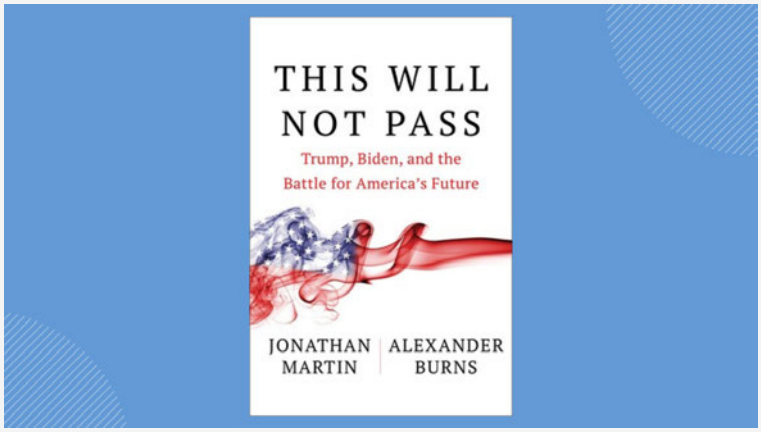
Providers such as local health departments, select pharmacies, and doctor's offices are offering vaccinations to the youngest Utahns over the next several days to weeks. For more information visit www.coronavirus.utah.gov/vaccine/ or call the COVID-19 hotline at 1-800-456-7707.

Good government in action

The town of Lynndyl in Millard County now has water, thanks to the quick action of state and local officials. Lynndyl has two wells powered by pumps. The state allocated $1.75 million to help the town build new drinking water infrastructure, but before that could happen, the pumps failed yesterday afternoon. The water shortage was not due to drought.
When the Department of Environmental Quality and Department of Public Safety got word, they reached out to work with Lynndyl and Delta City officials to expedite hauling water into the town and to see if the pumps could be fixed. By 9 p.m., water was on the way with LiquaDry from the neighboring town of Abraham hauling water to Lynndyl. DEQ helped install a new pump and ensured the water was safe to drink.
In the meantime, the Governor's Office of Economic Opportunity is working with Millard County to secure $113,000 in emergency funds to keep the water flowing until the grant money comes through.
"After talking with Gov. Cox last night, everything ran more smoothly," Lynndyl Mayor Briar Proctor said. "A huge thank you to the surrounding cities, the state and everyone who helped us. It's been an overwhelming amount of help."
We're grateful to DEQ, DPS, Go Utah, Delta City, Lynndyl City, LiquaDry and Millard County for coordinating so quickly and efficiently to make sure this town of 120 has water. This is good government in action!

State flag design preview

We're excited by the enthusiasm around a new state flag! Lt. Gov. Henderson and members of the Utah State Flag Task Force got a sneak peek of some of the 5,000 flag designs that have been submitted by the public..
Finalists were not selected at the preview event.
The new state flag aspires to reflect on Utah's past while uniting us with new symbolism and a shared identity. Learn more about the process and timeline here.



A discussion about America's future

We're looking forward to our discussion with author Jonathan Martin about his book, "This Will Not Pass."
The book explores how both of our political parties confronted a series of national traumas, including the coronavirus pandemic, the January 6 attack on the Capitol, and the political brinksmanship of President Biden's first year in the White House.
Join us for this free event at the Hinckley Institute of Politics at the University of Utah on Thursday, June 30, at 6:30 p.m. Hope to see you there!

Supporting local: Red Iguana 2

This week we were able to stop by Red Iguana 2 for a quick – and delicious — lunch. We especially loved the puntas de filete and queso.
The Cardenas family has proudly served the Salt Lake Valley since 1965, and we're sure they'll be satisfying hungry patrons for decades to come. We're always happy to see small family businesses thriving. Let us know what your favorite local restaurant is here!

Meeting with faith leaders

Faith leaders are a central part of the fabric of our community. This week we met with 31 different faith leaders from across the state of Utah.
Faith groups strengthen and illuminate our relationship with a higher power, but they also maintain cultural traditions, reinforce moral values and create community. We can't thank each of them enough for their guidance, goodness, and charity.

ICYMI

- More good economic news: Salt Lake City was ranked No. 4 by the Wall Street Journal in its annual rankings of the hottest job markets in the country. Provo was ranked No. 2 in smaller metro areas.
- Yes, Utah experienced a tornado this past week. In fact, we've averaged two per year since 1950. The good news is that this one was in a remote part of Duchesne County resulting in no structural damage or injuries. If you find yourself facing a tornado, try to take shelter in a low place like a ditch or ravine. If indoors, get into a basement, or a room without windows.
- We had a fun opportunity to talk about a more hopeful version of politics with Vermont State Sen. Becca Balint and Slate host Amanda Ripley. Listen here!
- Lt. Gov. Henderson welcomed the Consul General of the Republic of Georgia to the Capitol on Tuesday. He said he had a "wonderful visit to Utah."
- Courtesy of the Utah Office of Energy Development: Here are four energy saving tips to help you beat this summer heat!
- Preparing for a backcountry adventure can look a little different for each outing and individual, but the benefits of a well-planned trip help ensure safety in the wilderness. Find a few first hand tips from Escalante-based guide and search and rescue volunteer Rick Green here!

- We had yet another great jobs report. Our unemployment rate remains at a historic low, and our job growth is one of the best in the U.S. We're proud of the hard-working Utahns who contribute to the most robust economy in the nation.

Statement by AMCHP CEO Terrance E. Moore on the Final Majority Decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization

June 24, 2022

Washington, D.C. – Today, AMCHP's CEO Terrance E. Moore, issued the following statement in response to the final majority decision by the Supreme Court in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization:

"Today's news confirms our worst fears, as outlined in my statement last month, that the U.S. Supreme Court's final majority opinion in the Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization would effectively overturn Roe v. Wade. In doing so, the Dobbs decision reverses nearly 50 years of legal precedent and issues a direct assault on reproductive justice, the public's health, and human rights."

"As the national professional association representing state public health professionals dedicated to improving maternal and child health in the United States, AMCHP cannot be silent about the known consequences of curtailing access to the full spectrum of reproductive health care, including abortion care, on the health and well-being of our nation's women, children, and families. In order to live up to our organizational commitments to ensure racial equity and health equity and undo systemic racism, we must clearly articulate the ways in which populations already disproportionately impacted by poor maternal health outcomes in the U.S. will experience the most harm as a result of the Dobbs decision."

"Access to abortion care is inextricably linked to maternal health. The United States is already failing to adequately support healthy births and healthy families. We have the highest rate of maternal deaths among industrialized countries. Poor maternal health outcomes disproportionately impact women and birthing people with low incomes, women and birthing people of color, and women and birthing people in rural communities. The Dobbs decision will exacerbate existing maternal health disparities and counteract the potential of recent investments made by the federal government and state governments to improve maternal health."

"A December 2021 study estimates that eliminating access to abortion care in the United States would increase pregnancy-related deaths among individuals of all races and ethnicities studied and most significantly among non-Hispanic Black individuals. The widely referenced longitudinal Turnaway Study (2008-2010) documents how individuals who are denied an abortion experience lasting, negative impacts on their health and well-being, and the well-being of their families. An amicus brief led by the National Birth Equity Collaborative and filed in the Dobbs case further illustrates the ways in which limiting access to safe and legal abortion will deepen our nation's maternal health crisis, particularly for Black women and birthing people."

"Access to safe and legal abortion in the United States is not eliminated by today's U.S. Supreme Court decision, but it has been severely curtailed. However, there are actions that state policymakers and federal policymakers are taking to protect and expand access to abortion services."

"How can public health professionals and individuals dedicated to improving maternal and child health respond in this moment? We can educate ourselves and others about the impact of abortion restrictions and other limits on reproductive health care on maternal and child health outcomes. We can support transparent, evidence-based, and culturally rigorous public health surveillance, programming, and communication. We can recommit to and build new and equitable partnerships with individuals and organizations leading the reproductive justice movement. We can humble ourselves and acknowledge that public health institutions have not always been reliable or vocal partners in advocating for the full spectrum of reproductive health care or in recognizing the urgency of reproductive justice, which is an enduring concept first defined by a group of Black women in 1994."

"AMCHP stands ready to work with our members in state health departments across the country to navigate a post-Roe landscape in ways that best support maternal and child health, advance equitable outcomes, and center our actions in a commitment to protecting human rights."

Turning Our Outrage into Action

Dear Heather:
This morning, the US Supreme Court released its decision in Dobbs vs Jackson Women's Health. The extreme and dangerous ruling overturns Roe vs. Wade, and erases the constitutional right to safe and legal abortion care nationwide. The real life consequences will be swift and devastating.
As a result of today's decision, millions of people in more than half of the country will be forced by their state government to remain pregnant against their will – putting their health, lives, and well-being at risk. The ruling will disproportionately impact young people, communities of color and people with low-incomes, and compound the systemic racism, misogyny, and coercive policies that have put abortion access out of reach for far too many, for far too long.
While it is important to pause to recognize and absorb the full weight of the sweeping and heart-wrenching ruling, we cannot and will not give up. As Reverend Martin Luther King Jr. proclaimed and Justice Sonia Sotomayor recently reminded us, "the arc of history bends toward justice." This fight is not over, and there is work to be done right now.
We must turn our outrage into action.
Essential Access Health is responding to the national abortion crisis through a broad range of strategies including:

- Urging Congress and the Biden Administration to protect access to abortion at the federal level.
- Advancing a package of bills and budget requests to protect and expand access to abortion care as a member of the California Future of Abortion Council (FAB Council) Steering Committee.
- Co-sponsoring AB 2134 (Weber), which seeks to establish a fund to support equitable and affordable access to abortion and birth control for anyone in need to these essential services in California.
- Co-sponsoring State Constitutional Amendment (SCA) 10 that seeks to explicitly protect the fundamental right to abortion and contraception for generations to come. If SCA 10 advances through the California legislature, voters statewide will have an opportunity to weigh-in on the measure this November.
- Working to make Los Angeles County a "safe haven for abortion care" as a founding member of the LA County Coalition for Women's Health and Equity.
- Expanding our Medication Abortion Access Program, which helps to create new abortion access points and supports the delivery of medication abortion treatment in diverse health settings.

Here's what you can do today:

- Join the call for Congress to fully fund the Title X federal family planning program. With abortion bans and restrictions in place, increasing the availability of birth control nationwide has become even more essential.
- Donate to help advance our work and FAB Council priorities.
- Support your local abortion fund.

Although the path ahead is daunting, we were made for this moment. We will continue to advance our mission to champion and promote quality sexual and reproductive health care for ALL and do everything possible to ensure that everyone, regardless of their income or where they live, can get the essential health care they want and need.
Onwards,

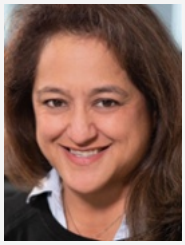
ABOUT THE EDITOR



Kanoe Namahoe

I ran into my friend, Donna, and her daughter, Paulina, the other night as I was shopping. I hadn't seen Paulina in years. The last time I saw her, she was a quiet, slightly sullen (in the way kids can be with adults they don't know well) teenager who was trying to figure out what she wanted to do post-high school. I was interested to hear what she was doing now.

"I've been traveling with YWAM," she told me. YWAM is Youth with a Mission, a Christian organization that trains young people for the mission field. Paulina had not been real involved with her church youth group as a teenager, but after high school she decided to give YWAM a shot. "I love it! I've been to Nepal, Brazil and Portugal so far and now I'm working with the L.A. team on their anti-trafficking stuff," she told me.

I stood in the women's clothing section of Target, listening, fascinated, as Paulina talked about the training she's doing and the teams they're organizing to fight human trafficking. When we finally said goodbye, I hugged her tight and we exchanged contact info to talk more another time.

But that conversation stayed in my head all week. It surfaced again this morning when I read the top Leadership & Development story about the next normal workplace. Gwen Moran talks about checking in with yourself, thinking about priorities and goals and how that shapes your current situation and your future.

That conversation with Paulina prompted me to do that. The career I have now is one I love. It's been good to me and my family, and I believe 100% that the content my team and I produce helps professionals who are invested in their work.

But Kanoe 2.0 may look different. It's a ways away, but it very well might be involved in the anti-trafficking world. I may take my content skills and put them to use fighting for the rescue of women and children across the world who are trapped in the world of slavery.

What about you? When you do a gut check of your priorities and goals, what do you discover? Let me know! And if you enjoy this brief, tell others so they can benefit also.

“A failure of human rights, health and justice.” PHI Statement on Overturn of Roe v Wade

“Today’s U.S. Supreme Court decision overturning Roe v Wade is a failure of human rights, health and justice. Abortion is healthcare, and like any other healthcare, must be protected, safe, affordable and accessible. When people have control over when and if they get pregnant and when and if they have children, families, communities and countries are stronger, by almost every measure.

"Making abortion illegal doesn’t end abortion, it simply makes it less safe, and barriers to abortion will impact systemically excluded communities first and worst. Immigrants, people living in poverty, those without access to transportation, healthcare or other resources, Black women, young people and rural —all of whom already experience severe systemic barriers to health—will experience lifelong, generational impacts as a result of this ruling.

“In anticipation of this devastating ruling, PHI has been evaluating both internal and external policies to strengthen access across our work. We are reviewing internal policies to support employee access to abortion; dedicating a one-time fund assistance award for PHI programs working on abortion access; and investing in PHI policy research related to abortion pill access.

“We continue to support federal actions that reverse this terrible ruling. In a state that is vigorously pro-choice, we are also calling for policy changes that would make abortion more accessible within California, serve to support those who must now travel to California to seek abortion, and protect those who need or provide abortions. These include: decreased barriers and increased reimbursement for telehealth abortion services, especially through Medi-Cal; a call for the state of California to protect any abortion prescriber or provider from criminalization or prosecution; and, increased research, funding and support for self-managed abortion with abortion pills in any state.”

Office of Intergovernmental and External Affairs

Dear Emma,

FACT SHEET:
President Biden Announces Actions In Light of Today's Supreme Court Decision on Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization

Today, President Biden announced actions that his Administration is taking to protect women who will face the grave consequences of today's Supreme Court decision. This decision expressly took away a Constitutional right from the American people that it had recognized for nearly 50 years – a woman's right to choose, free from government interference.

This decision will have devastating consequences in the lives of women around the country.

The President made clear that the only way to secure a woman's right to choose is for Congress to restore the protections of Roe as federal law. Until then, he has announced two actions the Administration is taking to protect women.

Protecting the Right to Seek Medical Care

As the Attorney General made clear, women must remain free to travel safely to another state to seek the care they need.

A person has the right to travel between states for whatever reason they want – it is no one else's business – especially the government's. If a woman lives in a state that restricts abortion, the Supreme Court's decision does not prevent her from traveling from her home to a state that allows it.

If any state or local official tries to interfere with women exercising this basic right, the Biden Administration will fight that deeply un-American attack.

Protecting Access to Medication

The President directed the Secretary of Health and Human Services to protect women's access to critical medications for reproductive health care that are approved by the Food and Drug Administration—including essential preventive health care like contraception and medication abortion.

More than 20 years ago, the FDA approved mifepristone to safely end an early pregnancy; this drug is also commonly used to treat miscarriages. The American Medical Association and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists wrote to President Biden and Vice President Harris, asking the federal government to protect access to this care. In the face of threats from state officials saying they will try to ban or severely restrict access to medication for reproductive health care, the President directed the Secretary of Health and Human Services to identify all ways to ensure that mifepristone is as widely accessible as possible in light of the FDA's determination that the drug is safe and effective—including when prescribed through telehealth and sent by mail.

Hi all,

I know there are conversations happening (and was added on a spreadsheet with Paul Ray) about services to pregnant mothers to ensure we have supports in place. I also wondered if there is anything we need to promote or do differently our Safe Haven efforts of relinquishment in Utah to prevent abuse/neglect.

https://www.utahsafehaven.org/

It is possible that this is a resource some people who previously wouldn't have experienced pregnancy will utilize going forward, and just wonder if we need to do anything with it in the larger discussions.

Best,
Diane

A Message on SCOTUS Final Majority Opinion in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization

As a physician, I know how deeply doctors value the 1:1 relationship we have with our patients. Without Roe v. Wade, medical professionals are limited in their ability to help patients achieve optimal outcomes. I believe in the individual right to bodily autonomy and that access to safe, comprehensive reproductive healthcare for all women, pregnant people, and their families is an intersectional issue. For more than 50 years, Roe v. Wade assured legal access to a critical health procedure for U.S. women and reinforced the patient-provider relationship with care centered on the patient's needs.

This historic reversal of a longstanding legal protection will disproportionally affect health outcomes for BIPOC patients, low-socioeconomic status households, and families who live in rural communities where abortion care has historically been hard to access despite being legal. Banning abortion will not stop abortions from happening – abortion will happen in unsafe environments, endangering the lives of women and birthing people.

Equity is important to me. I am concerned about the impact this decision will have and stand for doing everything we can to ensure that it does not affect the health of women and children, including by ensuring that women continue to have access to the healthcare they need and the right to make choices that advance their health, especially those women and birthing people who already experience the inequities of our healthcare system. As CEO at the National Institute for Children's Health Quality (NICHQ), one of my key goals is to challenge systemic inequities, and lasting change occurs only when we honor the experiences of people who are most impacted by the work we do.

S.B. 174 Abortion Prohibition Amendments Now in Effect

SALT LAKE CITY – In accordance with state statute, the Legislative Branch's general counsel determined S.B. 174 Abortion Prohibition Amendments meets the legal requirements to take effect, following the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling regarding abortion.

In 2020, the Utah Legislature passed S.B. 174, prohibiting all elective abortions in Utah, except in rare circumstances involving rape, incest or medical emergency, contingent on the U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

On June 24, 2022, the U.S. Supreme Court issued a ruling that overturned Roe v. Wade, giving states the right to choose their abortion regulations. The U.S. Supreme Court's official opinion was sent to the Legislature's general counsel to determine if Utah's statute may take effect.

Members of the Legislative Management Committee (LMC) have been notified and the bill is now in effect. Utah code is updated to reflect the changes.

Attached is the official communication from the legislative general counsel informing LMC that the bill is in effect. The letter also addresses H.B. 166 (2019) Down Syndrome Nondiscrimination Abortion Act.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Women's Community Update

All,
Today the Supreme Court issued its decision on Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization. This decision expressly took away a fundamental Constitutional right from the American people that it had recognized for nearly 50 years – a woman's right to choose, free from government interference. Read below for the Administration's immediate actions following this decision.

Administration Actions on Supreme Court Decision Overturning Roe v. Wade

President Biden made clear that the only way to secure a woman's right to choose is for Congress to restore the protections of Roe as federal law. President Biden also announced actions that his Administration is taking to protect women who will face the grave consequences of today's Supreme Court decision. Read the President's Fact Sheet here and watch his remarks below.

Protecting Access to Medication

The President directed the Secretary of Health and Human Services to protect women's access to critical medications for reproductive health care that are approved by the Food and Drug Administration—including essential preventive health care like contraception and medication abortion.

More than 20 years ago, the FDA approved mifepristone to safely end an early pregnancy. This drug is also commonly used to treat miscarriages. The American Medical Association and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists wrote to President Biden and Vice President Harris, asking the federal government to protect access to this care. In the face of threats from state officials saying they will try to ban or severely restrict access to medication for reproductive health care, the President directed the Secretary of Health and Human Services to identify all ways to ensure that mifepristone is as widely accessible as possible in light of the FDA's determination that the drug is safe and effective—including when prescribed through telehealth and sent by mail.

Protecting the Right to Seek Medicare Care

As the Attorney General made clear, women must remain free to travel safely to another state to seek the care they need. A person has the right to travel between states for whatever reason they want – it is no one else's business – especially the government's. If a woman lives in a state that restricts abortion, the Supreme Court's decision does not prevent her from traveling from her home to a state that allows it.

If any state or local official tries to interfere with women exercising this basic right, the Biden Administration will fight that deeply un-American attack.

Team update

Dear Team:

Today, the Supreme Court of the United States released a 213-page opinion overturning the 1973 Roe v. Wade decision. With its opinion today, the Supreme Court says that there is no longer a fundamental right to abortion. Decisions about what is and isn't allowed is now up to the states.

Quoting from the intro to the opinion: Abortion presents a profound moral issue on which Americans hold sharply conflicting views. Some believe fervently that a human person comes into being at conception and that abortion ends an innocent life. Others feel just as strongly that any regulation of abortion invades a woman's right to control her own body and prevents women from achieving full equality. Still others in a third group think that abortion should be allowed under some but not all circumstances, and those within this group hold a variety of views about the particular restrictions that should be imposed.

Abortion is by no means a simple issue. Please remember that your co-workers have a range of feelings and personal opinions about this. We need to be extra cautious in the workplace about expressing our personal opinions because there are differing beliefs. As a reminder, you may not use official state resources to express personal views on this decision.
Please be extra sensitive to the thoughts of others, including co-workers. We will continue to monitor employee and building safety.

In official capacities, if you are contacted about the law by partners or the public, please direct inquiries to DHHS@utah.gov. Until we can provide further clarification, please do not engage with the general public about how the law is going to be interpreted.

We are continuing to analyze the potential impacts from the Supreme Court's decision.

Here are the facts we know right now as they pertain to Utah and the Utah Department of Health and Human Services:

- In the 2020 General Session, the Utah Legislature passed SB 174, which we were notified this evening, is now in effect, following a report from legislative general counsel to the Legislative Management Committee.
  The bill lists some specific responsibilities of DHHS.

And now… the rest of this fabulous, and very late, email!

- Thank you to the 530+ of you who tuned in live to our All Hands Q&A on Thursday. If you missed it, you can watch the replay here.

- This week, we'd also like to make your acquaintance with the Office of Recovery Services, led by the trusty Liesa Stockdale. You might know them as the "child support office," but that's not all they do: https://youtu.be/Q2imWsc7btk

- Martha is on the move!

  We are so excited to host a traveling exhibit on Dr. Martha Hughes Cannon at our MASOB and Cannon Health buildings over the next 2 weeks. The exhibit starts this Friday, June 24, through June 30. Then, the exhibit will be moved to the Cannon Health building on July 1, which also happens to be the 165th anniversary of Dr. Cannon's birth AND our new agency's birthday!

  The exhibit will be at the Cannon building until July 8. We will also be holding a media event honoring the life of Dr. Cannon and celebrating the birth of our new agency on July 1 at the Utah Capitol. We are thrilled to begin this new journey with each of you and honor those who have come before us.

[redacted]

- Nate Checketts… thank you!

  With the upcoming merger, comes a handful of leadership changes, including a new role for Utah Department of Health Executive Director Nate Checketts. Under DHHS, Nate will become a department deputy director over our Health Administration section. Recently, Gov. Cox and Lt. Gov. Henderson, recognized Nate for his work to lead the pandemic response while maintaining effective leadership to oversee the management of the Department of Health's responsibilities. They said he is a model public servant reflecting the values of humility, selflessness and steady leadership. Nate is pictured here with his wife, Ginger.

- Congratulations are also in order to Caitlyn Jasumback and Rachelle Boulton! Both were recognized at the Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists conference. Caitlyn was a finalist for the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Award for Outstanding Epidemiology Practice in Addressing Racial and Ethnic Disparities for her work "Does Discrimination Influence Prevention Healthcare Among Under Served Population?" Rachelle was awarded CSTE's Distinguished Leader Award. This is a huge honor for both of them!! People from around the nation are envious of our data systems and informatics

- Mental and physical health

  During our all-hands call and during Gov. Cox's employee town hall this week, we received questions about the leave hours that are available for taking care of our mental health. Please take advantage of these benefits.

  As of Jan. 1, 2022, Gov. Cox granted 4 hours of admin leave to address mental health issues, to be used during the calendar year.

  Starting July 1, our department will make 4 hours available for the next fiscal year, ending June 30, 2023.

  We have also worked with Blomquist Hale to hire an individual who can be available to be a mental health resource.

  Keep in mind that you may also use 4 hours of leave for wellness and health checkups. Please talk to your supervisor before using this leave.

  Tracy also reminded us that we can use any accumulated sick leave for mental or physical health time off.

- ECO Passes
  We're conscious of the cost of fuel. We make UTA ECO Passes available for free to all employees. If you apply, you need to use them at least 15 times per quarter. Please contact your finance officer to sign up. Please see our FAQ document to get started:ECO Pass FAQs

P.S.
Tracy's Open Door hours are most Fridays, for all staff from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Please reach out to Trudy Ellis (trudyellis@utah.gov) to request time on Tracy's schedule.

From Leak To Decision, Dobbs Majority Didn't Waver

Justice Samuel Alito's leaked draft striking down Roe v. Wade underwent few substantive changes before becoming the law of land Friday, signaling a unified conservative majority that never wavered even as public outcry over the decision grew.

Abortion Questions Swirl Over Health Attys In Post-Roe World

Lawyers for the health care industry's myriad participants — hospitals, pharmacies, telemedicine platforms, investors and more — are fielding countless queries about ethical duties to patients and a minefield of legal risks after the U.S. Supreme Court erased the constitutional right to abortion and allowed states to criminalize the procedure.

Dobbs May Be Just The First Domino, Dissent Warns

In a scathing and sorrowful dissent, the U.S. Supreme Court's liberal justices warned Friday that the "catastrophic" decision to overturn Roe v. Wade not only strips millions of American women of their constitutional right to abortion but "throws longstanding precedent to the winds" and threatens the very foundation of the U.S. legal system.

Dobbs Casts Shadow On Gay Rights, Birth Control

As other conservative U.S. Supreme Court justices sought to blunt a political firestorm by emphasizing that their decision to overturn women's constitutional abortion rights on Friday was not an attack on other rights, like those protecting birth control and same-sex couples, Justice Clarence Thomas made it clear that the door should be wide open.

Supreme Court Overturns Roe v. Wade

The U.S. Supreme Court on Friday upheld a Mississippi abortion ban and overturned the constitutional abortion right established nearly 50 years ago in Roe v. Wade, setting the stage for a widespread rollback of abortion rights in many statehouses around the country.

As a valued Morning Consult subscriber, your feedback is critical to Morning Consult's product development. We'd like to ask five short questions about your experience with Morning Consult's news and analysis: Take the survey now.

Good morning all, and welcome back to Morning Consult Health. In light of the Food and Drug Administration's decision to order Juul Labs Inc.'s products off the U.S. market, what share of adults has a favorable view of the vaping giant?

A: 6%
B: 13%
C: 19%
D: 27%
E: 31%

Check out the answer at the bottom of today's newsletter.

What's Ahead

The House Oversight and Reform Committee will hold a hearing at 1:30 p.m. Monday on the federal response to the addiction crisis, featuring President Joe Biden's drug czar Dr. Rahul Gupta. With a $39 billion budget, his office is emphasizing harm reduction to stem drug overdoses, which killed about 107,000 Americans last year.

[redacted]

The FDA's vaccine advisory committee will meet at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday to discuss whether COVID-19 vaccines should be updated to combat emerging variants this fall. Both Pfizer Inc. and Moderna Inc. are pushing for new omicron-specific versions of their shots, and the FDA advisory group was generally supportive of the idea when it met in April.

A House Energy and Commerce Committee panel will hold a hearing at 11 a.m. Tuesday on oversight of the Medicare Advantage program. The privately run plans are highly popular with seniors, and big health insurers and startups alike view Medicare Advantage as a major growth opportunity. But there are also concerns over inflated payments within the program, and House lawmakers are now taking a closer look at the quality of the coverage.

The House E&C health subcommittee will meet at 11 a.m. Wednesday to work on public health legislation that tackles a slew of issues ranging from clinical trial diversity to rural telehealth access. The panel's Democratic leadership said the hearing will focus on shoring up the country's "public health workforce and infrastructure."

Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc. is reporting quarterly earnings Thursday. We're tuning in for more details on the pharmacy giant's new clinical trial business, which aims to lean on its deep community footprint to increase patient enrollment and diversity. It may just work — Morning Consult survey data shows that more than half of U.S. adults would be interested in participating in a clinical trial if they could do so from a Walgreens or another retail clinic.

More Seniors Are Choosing Medicare Advantage - See Enrollment Rates in Your Community

With average annual savings of nearly $2,000 for consumers, lower per-beneficiary government spending, and a 94% beneficiary satisfaction rate, Medicare Advantage is now the leading choice of Medicare coverage for seniors in more than 120 Congressional districts nationwide. What's more, 31 states have MA enrollment rates of more than 40%. Medicare Advantage is working for more than 28 million Americans. Let's protect this bipartisan healthcare success story.

Week in Review

Abortion: The Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade, opening the door for about half of states to restrict or ban abortion outright. A group of 20 Black congresswomen asked Biden to declare a public health emergency in response to the ruling, and providers across the country prepared to tackle reproductive health in a post-Roe world. Biden called the decision "a sad day for the court and the country" and said the fight for abortion rights is "not over."

Other rulings: The Supreme Court ruled that employer health plans can designate all dialysis providers as out-of-network, and will uphold a federal rule that allows the government to recover billions of dollars from health insurers in Medicare Advantage overpayments. The high court also reinforced the Health and Human Services Department's approach to certain Medicare payments for hospitals serving low-income patients.

Tobacco: The FDA said it will force Juul to take its e-cigarettes off the U.S. market after a nearly two-year review of the vaping giant's data, marking a departure from the agency's stance toward Juul's biggest rivals. A federal appeals court granted Juul a temporary stay of the FDA's decision. Separately, the Biden administration plans to require tobacco companies to slash nicotine levels in cigarettes sold in the United States in a bid to help addicted smokers quit and prevent young people from picking up the habit.

Monkeypox: The Biden administration said it will expand commercial lab testing for monkeypox in an effort to curb the country's outbreak, while health officials are looking to expand access to the monkeypox vaccine to children. The World Health Organization is also considering whether to declare the international outbreak a global emergency.

Coverage, costs would increase with lower Medicare age

Some policymakers have suggested reducing the Medicare eligibility age from 65 to 60 years to get more older Americans covered, but Urban Institute research shows the cost to do so would be high. It's estimated that 9.2 million of the 12 million Americans ages 60 to 64 who have employer-sponsored insurance would keep their current plans, but about 2.8 million would switch, mostly to enroll in Medicare Parts A, B and D, and the existing Medicaid population would become dual-eligible. Full Story: BenefitsPRO (free registration) (6/23)

WHO: Monkeypox isn't a global emergency, but "intense" response is needed

An expert panel convened by the World Health Organization determined the monkeypox outbreak that has reached more than 50 nations should not be deemed a global health emergency but warrants close monitoring. WHO Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said the rapid spread across borders is particularly worrisome, and limiting the spread of disease will require an "intense" response, according to the statement issued by the WHO emergency committee. Full Story: The Associated Press (6/25)

SCOTUS sides with HHS in Medicare DSH payment dispute

The Supreme Court ruled Friday that HHS did not violate statutory language when it altered Medicare's reimbursement formula for calculating disproportionate share hospital adjustments, also known as DSH payments, that go to hospitals with a large share of low-income patients. The case, brought by Empire Health Foundation, questioned HHS' interpretation of the statute and argued that the formula introduced in 2004 resulted in excessively low payments to hospitals. Full Story: CNN (6/24)
