Access to Healthy Food

Food preservation is more than a TikTok trend
8/25/2022 — Orange Co., CA
If you visited the Orange County Fair in Costa Mesa during the past month, you might have seen the Master Food Preservers of Orange County in their rustic farmhouse-themed kitchen located in the OC Promenade exhibit hall. If the decor did not catch your eye, the colorful rows of glass jars lined along the walls certainly would have. For an entire month, three volunteers conducted live canning demonstrations from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. five days a week. They are with the UC Master Food Preserver Program, a public service and outreach program under UC Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Regular exercise linked to fewer cancer cases
8/25/2022
Only five hours a week of moderate exercise could help ward off a cancer diagnosis. A study published by Medicine and Science in Sports and Exercise, the journal of the American College of Sports Medicine, found strong evidence correlating physical activity to lower rates of cancer and other chronic conditions like heart disease, stroke and dementia.

Why a workout is good for your gut bacteria
8/25/2022
Our guts are bursting with life. Living on and in us are trillions of microorganisms, the vast majority of which are bacteria. Collectively, they're known as the gut microbiota and are about 100 trillion bacteria, viruses, fungi, and other single-celled organisms such as archaea and protozoa. Their roles vary from helping to ferment dietary fiber from our meals, to synthesizing vitamins and regulating our fat metabolism. They also help to protect us from unwanted invaders, interacting with our immune system and influencing the extent of inflammation in our guts and elsewhere in our bodies.

Which teens are more likely to vape? Research shows surprising patterns across race and sexuality groups
8/24/2022
Researchers estimate that half of all high school students in the United States have tried vaping at least once. One third of these students vape regularly. Since e-cigarettes were introduced to the U.S. in 2013, they've become more and more popular, especially among teens. From 2019-2020, the popularity of disposable e-cigarette use among U.S. high school students who currently vaped went up by 1,000%, from 2.4% to 26.5%, according to the CDC.

Breastfeeding

How does breastfeeding actually work? Experts explain
8/21/2022
While there are several ways to feed an infant, from pumping and bottle feeding to formula feeding, breastfeeding is the most common method. In fact, most babies — 4 out of 5 — s breastfed, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. But how breastfeeding works exactly can be a bit of a mystery. Where does milk actually come from? What is colostrum and why is it so important?

Report: A Unified Vision for Transforming Mental Health and Substance Use Care

The CEO Alliance for Mental Health, a leadership collective of the 15 leading organizations dedicated to improving the lives of people with mental health and substance use challenges, released a new report outlining a unified vision to improve lives through transforming care. The Alliance outlines seven elements which are critical to address in order to meet this goal: early identification and prevention, emergency and crisis response, equity, integration, parity, standards of care, and workforce. Intended to serve as a guide, the report illustrates common goals and pathways for success across the field.

CCBHC Notice of Funding Opportunity Expectations

HHS will be releasing the Certified Community Behavioral Health Clinic (CCBHC) planning grant Notice of Funding Opportunity in October 2022, with a planned 60-day application period and announcement of awards in March 2023. States will need to complete these planning grants in order to participate in the 2024 expansion of the Medicaid Demonstration authorized in the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act. Existing CCBHC demonstration states will be able to add additional CCBHC sites in this application. More information about the process will be released in the coming months. If states have specific concerns they would like HHS to consider, reach out directly to the agency at CCBHC@samhsa.hhs.gov.

Funding for Youth Substance Use Prevention Groups

Last week, the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) announced nearly $12.4 million in grants as part of the Biden-Harris Administration's strategy to combat the nation's overdose epidemic. The grants will be made available to 99 new coalitions across the country as part of the Drug Free Communities (DFC) Support Program. Community coalitions receiving funds will raise awareness about the dangers of prescription drugs, marijuana, tobacco, and alcohol, as well as working to educate communities about illicit fentanyl and counterfeit pills. To learn more, click here.

HAPPENINGS ON THE HILL

Proposed Rule Amends State Reporting Requirements of Quality Measures. CMS recently proposed a new rule to implement mandatory state reporting on the quality of mental health and substance use disorder services in Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP). The proposed rule would require states to report annually all mental health and substance use measures established in the Core Set of Adult Health Care Quality Measures for all beneficiaries starting in 2024. For dually eligible beneficiaries, receiving both Medicare and Medicaid coverage, states would be required to report at least 12 of the 13 quality measures.

MORNING CONSULT

Health

Essential health care industry news & intel to start your day.

AUGUST 28, 2022

BY MATT BRACKEN

Twitter Email

Good morning to you, health readers. The past week was the official beginning of the end for Dr. Anthony Fauci, who said he will leave the federal government in December, ending a nearly four-decade tenure that saw him serve as the public face of the country's responses to COVID-19, AIDS, Ebola, Zika and other infections.

[redacted]

Republicans responded to the news by channeling Lee Corso, telling the 81-year-old to prepare for some trips back to Capitol Hill in what will surely be another series of dispassionate and fruitful exchanges.

With Fauci staying on the job for a few more months, we've got a timely quiz question for the week: Which of the following evaluations are voters most likely to give Fauci for his handling of the coronavirus?

A: Excellent
B: Good
C: Just fair
D: Poor

You can find the answer at the bottom of the newsletter.

WHAT'S AHEAD

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices is meeting Thursday and Friday in Atlanta. On the docket will be discussion of the reformulated Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech SE and Moderna Inc. COVID-19 vaccines targeting the BA.4 and BA.5 omicron subvariants, ahead of the Biden administration's planned fall booster campaign for adults and teenagers. A source told NBC News that CDC Director Rochelle Walensky could clear the updated shots soon after ACIP's meeting. The Food and Drug Administration, meanwhile, is reportedly eyeing authorization of the shots around Labor Day.

Walensky will join the Center for Strategic and International Studies for a fireside chat on Tuesday at 4 p.m. As part of the think tank's Commission on Strengthening America's Health Security, Walensky will discuss her recently announced plans to overhaul the agency, including details on how the CDC can restore public trust in the wake of its COVID-19 performance. Tom Inglesby, director of the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security, and Julie Gerberding, chief executive of the Foundation for the National Institutes of Health, will also appear at the event.

The Medicare Payment Advisory Commission is holding a virtual public meeting Thursday and Friday. The topics on MedPAC's agenda include: providing Congress with updates on Medicare's payment policy and financial situation; the standardization of Medicare Advantage plans (and cost-sharing for Part A and Part B services); the accuracy and thoroughness of MA encounter data; reforming Medicare's wage index systems; and addressing high costs of drugs covered by Medicare Part B.

WEEK IN REVIEW

COVID-19 vaccines: Moderna filed a lawsuit against Pfizer and BioNTech, alleging that the drugmakers copied its mRNA technology to make their COVID-19 vaccine. In a statement, Moderna said 2010 and 2016 patents covering its mRNA technology were infringed upon by Pfizer and BioNTech.

Nearly 40% of Americans hospitalized with COVID-19 from the end of March through May — when the BA.2 and BA.2.12.1 subvariants were the dominant strains — had been vaccinated and boosted against the disease, according to new findings from CDC scientists, underlining the need for reformulated shots to keep up with omicron's mutations.

The CDC cleared Novavax Inc.'s protein-based COVID-19 vaccine for use in children ages 12 to 17, following FDA authorization of the shot the previous week.

Pfizer said the COVID-19 vaccine it developed with BioNTech was 73% effective in protecting babies and toddlers amid omicron's spread between March and June. Per the study, there were 21 positive cases among the 351 children younger than 5 who received dummy shots, compared with 13 cases among 794 kids in the same age bracket who received three vaccine doses.

AstraZeneca PLC CEO Pascal Soriot said in an interview that he "can't be sure" whether the British drugmaker will stay in the COVID-19 vaccine business, after its shot — which still hasn't been authorized by U.S. regulators — was mired in production delays, questions about its shelf life and rare instances of serious side effects.

Industry moves: Amazon.com Inc. announced plans to sunset its Amazon Care telehealth and in-person medical services at the end of 2022, three years after the e-commerce giant launched the primary care service for its employees and a month after its $3.9 billion acquisition of concierge clinic operator One Medical. Amazon Health Services Senior Vice President Neil Lindsay said in an email to employees that Amazon Care, which provided telehealth services in all 50 states and in-person care in at least seven cities, ultimately wasn't "the right long-term solution for our enterprise customers."

Signify Health Inc. is considering bids from Amazon, CVS Health Corp., Option Care Health Inc. and UnitedHealth Group Inc., according to people with knowledge of the matter. At more than $30 per share, UnitedHealth has submitted the highest bid, though Amazon's offer isn't far behind, the people said.

Agencies in the news: Following the enactment of the Inflation Reduction Act, Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services Administrator Chiquita Brooks-LaSure said she will create a team within the agency's Medicare arm that will be charged with negotiating drug prices, with hiring for at least 100 positions starting in the fall.

Senior Trump administration officials leaned on FDA Commissioner Stephen Hahn and other agency leaders to sign off on unproven COVID-19 treatments such as hydroxychloroquine and convalescent plasma, according to a report from Democratic lawmakers on the House Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Crisis. The report also found that the Trump White House tried to block FDA safety data collection efforts on COVID-19 vaccines, pushing for an expedited timeline on approvals ahead of the 2020 presidential election.

A Trump-appointed federal judge in Texas blocked Health and Human Services Department guidance that requires hospitals to perform abortions when the life of the mother is endangered, writing that the July 11 order exceeds the authority of the 1986 Emergency Medical Treatment and Labor Act. The judge's ruling places the HHS guidance on hold, and the Department of Justice is likely to file an appeal. Meanwhile, the DOJ notched a victory when a federal judge blocked Idaho's near-total abortion ban, ruling that the procedure must be allowed in certain emergency situations.

STAT OF THE WEEK

77.0 years

The average life expectancy in the country in 2020, down 1.8 years from 2019, per CDC data released last week. Mostly because of the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, life expectancy dropped in all 50 states and Washington D.C. over that time period.

3 Takeaways From Mar-A-Lago Search Warrant Affidavit

The heavily redacted probable cause affidavit unsealed Friday did not provide many new details about the investigation into former President Donald Trump's alleged mishandling of classified documents at his Mar-a-Lago estate, but it did give hints about what kinds of documents federal authorities found on the Florida property and how they got that information.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The federal government's free at-home COVID-19 testing program, which launched in January amid the omicron surge, will be suspended Friday due to a lack of fresh funding for the program and a decision to sustain supply before an expected fall uptick in cases. A White House official blamed "congressional inaction" for forcing the Biden administration to "make impossible choices about which tools and programs to invest in," though the resumption of the free testing program could occur if new funding is allocated. (CNN)

[redacted]

- The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services announced a $98.9 million investment in grant funding to 59 returning organizations that help customers select Affordable Care Act exchange plans, the largest contribution the federal government has made to its Navigator program. CMS provided $80 million to Navigators for the previous coverage year after the Trump administration had cut investment to $10 million, and the program now boasts 1,500 returning guides that will be ready to help enrollees at the onset of the ACA's Nov. 1 open enrollment period. (Fierce Healthcare)

- In a letter to U.S. governors, Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra said the agency would "not hesitate" to call on the Justice Department to pursue legal action against states that bar health systems from providing abortion care in certain situations, citing the Emergency Medical Treatment and Labor Act. Becerra's letter also urged states to engage with HHS on ways to expand abortion access, pushing governors to utilize federal funding to safeguard access for Medicaid enrollees and for pregnant people traveling from states that restrict abortion care. (Healthcare Dive)

- A study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association found that the mRNA COVID-19 booster vaccines from Moderna Inc. and Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech SE are approximately 87% effective in preventing severe disease and death, and protection lasts for at least six months. (Bloomberg)

WHAT ELSE YOU NEED TO KNOW

CORONAVIRUS

A Simple Rule for Planning Your Fall Booster Shot

Rachel Gutman-Wei, The Atlantic

In less than two weeks, you could walk out of a pharmacy with a next-generation COVID booster in your arm. Just a few days ago, the Biden administration indicated that the first updated COVID-19 vaccines would be available shortly after Labor Day to Americans 12 and older who have already had their primary series.

Moderna Patent Strike on Pfizer Sets Up Post-Covid Vaccine Feuds

Ian Lopez, Bloomberg Law

Moderna Inc.'s Covid-19 vaccine lawsuit against Pfizer Inc. tees up an intellectual property fight that could secure the biotech company's place as a major player in medical innovations—but also carries risk.

The world is moving on from the pandemic. Not these covid long-haulers.

Grace Moon et al., The Washington Post

Data collected in June by the U.S. Census Bureau and analyzed by the National Center for Health Statistics showed that nearly one in five Americans who developed covid-19 still have long covid symptoms.

Fall Vaccination Campaign Will Bring New Shots, Worse Access

Benjamin Mueller, The New York Times

Updated Covid vaccines, expected soon after Labor Day, were designed to thwart Omicron variants. But money to distribute them has dried up.

Latest Covid Boosters Are Set to Roll Out Before Human Testing Is Completed

Liz Essley Whyte, The Wall Street Journal

The Food and Drug Administration is expected to authorize new Covid-19 booster shots this week without a staple of its normal decision-making process: data from a study showing whether the shots were safe and worked in humans.

U.S. donating COVID-19 vaccines to Mexico as domestic demand drops

Manuel Bojorquez, CBS News

Not far from the U.S. border, hundreds of men, women and children waited in an hours-long line in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, for a chance to get a COVID-19 vaccine.

Black Covid long-haulers say doctors dismissed their symptoms, so now they're relying on one another for support

Claretta Bellamy and Char Adams, NBC News

These Black-led groups have popped up across the country as more and more Black people have reported prolonged Covid symptoms — and difficulty getting treatment.

They were grieving the loss of a parent to Covid. Then the bullies came.

Erika Edwards, NBC News

Instead of condolences, some people who post about the deaths of loved ones receive hateful and mocking comments.

Unraveling the Interplay of Omicron, Reinfections, and Long Covid

Liz Szabo, Kaiser Health News

Although omicron infections are proving milder overall than those caused by last summer's delta variant, omicron has also proved capable of triggering long-term symptoms and organ damage. But whether omicron causes long covid symptoms as often — and as severe — as previous variants is a matter of heated study.

GENERAL

Falling monkeypox cases have health officials 'cautiously optimistic'

Dan Diamond, The Washington Post

After three months of surging monkeypox cases, the worldwide outbreak may have peaked, amid evidence that gay men who are disproportionately affected are curbing risky sexual behaviors and more people are getting vaccinated against a virus that spreads by close contact.

US data reveals racial gaps in monkeypox vaccinations

Mike Stobbe et al., The Associated Press

About 10% of monkeypox vaccine doses have been given to Black people, even though they account for one-third of U.S. cases, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The new numbers come from 17 states and two cities, and represent the most comprehensive details yet on who has been getting the two-dose vaccines. Similar disparities had been reported previously by a few states and cities.

White House to host health summit on Sept 28 in bid to end U.S. hunger, boost nutrition

Katanga Johnson, Reuters

The White House said it will hold a summit aimed to address issues around U.S. hunger, nutrition and health on Sept. 28 in Washington, D.C.

Abbott to restart production of Similac baby formula at its Michigan plant

Dennis Romero, NBC News

Abbott Laboratories said it expects to begin shipping the formula in six weeks. The Sturgis, Michigan, facility has already restarted production on EleCare and other specialty formulas.

Georgia Abortion Restrictions Spark New Debate Over Claims to Fetal Personhood

Laura Kusisto and Cameron McWhirter, The Wall Street Journal

In the wake of the Supreme Court's decision overturning Roe v. Wade, Georgia is emerging as the lead testing ground for an idea some abortion opponents have touted for decades: that fetuses deserve the same types of legal protections as people after birth.

3M combat earplug lawsuits to proceed, judge rules, despite bankruptcy case

Reuters

3M Co must face more than 230,000 lawsuits accusing it of selling defective earplugs to the U.S. military, after a U.S. judge on Friday ruled that the bankruptcy of a subsidiary did not stop lawsuits against the non-bankrupt parent company.

EPA proposes hazardous designation for two 'forever chemicals'

David Jordan, Roll Call

The proposal released Friday would designate the two most widely used per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances — perfluorooctanoic acid (PFOA) and perfluorooctane sulfonic acid (PFOS) — under the Comprehensive Environmental, Compensation and Liability Act. If finalized, it would require releases of one pound or more within a 24-hour period to be reported, which the agency said would provide it with better data as well as the option to require cleanups and recover costs.

This Teen Was Prescribed 10 Psychiatric Drugs. She's Not Alone.

Matt Richtel, The New York Times

Increasingly, anxious and depressed teens are using multiple, powerful psychiatric drugs, many of them untested in adolescents or for use in tandem.

PAYERS

California Churches Cleared for Exemption From Abortion Coverage

Mary Anne Pazanowski, Bloomberg Law

California's insurance regulator must entertain church employers' requests to drop abortion coverage from their insurance plans because its refusal to do so violates the churches' free exercise rights, a federal court in the state said.

PROVIDERS

Fed up with costly recertification, doctors are turning to an alternative board

Tara Bannow, Stat News

The same doctors are cheering the rise of an alternative recertification option called the National Board of Physicians and Surgeons. It doesn't require testing and costs less money than the competition. The California-based not-for-profit board has been on the scene since 2015, but took a giant leap forward in July, when the Joint Commission determined it can verify credentials.

MGMA report tracks status of value-based care at practices

Anastassia Gliadkovskaya, Fierce Healthcare

Despite a predicted continual move away from fee-for-service, value-based care still accounts for a small portion of medical revenue in most specialties, a new report has revealed.

Patients Seek to Halt Meta's Alleged Medical Data Collection

Annelise Gilbert, Bloomberg Law

Patients who claim their health-care providers' use of a Meta Platforms Inc. tracking tool led to the illegal interception of their medical information asked a California federal court to prohibit Meta from collecting and disseminating that data.

Hospitals Cut Jobs and Services as Rising Costs Strain Budgets

Katheryn Houghton, Kaiser Health News

Workers left the health care industry in droves during the pandemic, citing low pay and burnout. Nationwide, hospitals competed for contract workers to fill the void, which drove up prices. That left hospitals with an awkward balancing act: keep existing employees and fill essential roles while cutting costs.

PHARMA, BIOTECH AND DEVICES

Combination 'polypill' cuts heart disease deaths, study finds

Erika Edwards, NBC News

A single pill that combines three heart medications significantly drove down cardiac-related deaths and other heart problems in people who previously had heart attacks, according to new research published Friday in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Medical device companies look to snap up extra Medicare dollars

Bob Herman, Stat News

Medical device executives, lobbyists, and physicians made pitches to Medicare officials and independent experts last week during a meeting held by what's known as Medicare's Advisory Panel on Hospital Outpatient Payment. They were hoping to persuade the federal agency to dole out higher payments for several types of devices and services, ranging from drugs that get inserted into the eye to hernia repairs.

For biotech's 'godfather,' saving Biogen is the final act of a singular career

Damian Garde, Stat News

Stelios Papadopoulos, 74, has spent the past four decades becoming the living embodiment of biotech's institutional memory. Starting out when biotech was more of a backwater than a banner industry, he was the rare Ph.D. scientist on Wall Street, an investment banker who understood base pairs and basis points in equal detail. Over the years he built a reputation as a creative dealmaker, wise adviser, and enthusiastic raconteur. His was the calm, raspy voice of reason in the ear of every headline name in the business, the Godfather of biotech sought for problems big and small.

Adderall hard to find at pharmacies after labor shortage at U.S. supplier

Elizabeth Chuck, NBC News

The labor shortage, which Teva Pharmaceuticals says is resolved, came amid high demand for ADHD medication.

AstraZeneca Sees Greater Potential for Top Heart Drug

Dong Lyu, Bloomberg

One of AstraZeneca Plc's top-selling drugs Farxiga, a diabetes treatment, is beneficial to a wider pool of patients than previously indicated, a study shows, bolstering the product's blockbuster potential.

HEALTH TECHNOLOGY

Hackers have laid siege to U.S. health care and a tiny HHS office is buckling under the pressure

Ben Leonard, Politico

Due to its shoestring budget, the Office for Civil Rights has fewer investigators than many local police departments, and its investigators have to deal with more than a hundred cases at a time. The office had a budget of $38 million in 2022 — the cost of about 20 MRI machines that can cost $1 million to $3 million a pop.

First Databank, electronic health record partnership enhances eRx platform

Annie Burky, Fierce Healthcare

First Databank has partnered with Parker Health to expand the country's second e-prescribing network, FDB Vela, while improving the sharing capabilities of critical prescription information and up-to-date patient records.

Bicycle Health expands network with Cigna Evernorth partnership

Anastassia Gliadkovskaya, Fierce Healthcare

The startup's services will now be available to all Evernorth and Cigna health plan customers in the 24 states where Bicycle Health operates. The potential reach is millions of patients, the company told Fierce Healthcare without disclosing additional details.

Congress finally eliminates Part D vaccine cost sharing: Medicare coverage is still broken

Richard Hughes, Healthcare Dive

In its passage of the Inflation Reduction Act of 2022, Congress has taken the long overdue step of eliminating out of pocket, or OOP, costs for vaccines under Medicare Part D. The OOP prohibition aligns with policies under Medicare Part B and the Affordable Care Act and removes a pharmacy counter barrier that will undoubtedly lead more seniors to be vaccinated against shingles. However, it leaves intact a peculiar split in Medicare vaccine coverage that discourages physicians from offering certain vaccines.

US hospitals face unprecedented challenges

Stacey Hughes, Fierce Healthcare

When has inflation ever been so high in recent decades, cost increases so steep for drugs, supplies and equipment and workforce challenges so widespread, all amid a global health emergency? Never, which is why hospitals and health systems on the front lines are now facing unprecedented challenges and pressures.

Report on the State Of Pharmaceutical Quality: Fiscal Year 2021

Food and Drug Administration's Center for Drug Evaluation and Research Office of Pharmaceutical Quality

The Office of Pharmaceutical Quality (OPQ) in the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's (FDA's or the Agency's) Center for Drug Evaluation and Research (CDER) is responsible for ensuring that drugs legally marketed in the U.S. are safe, effective, and meet quality standards. For FY2021, the fourth annual Report on the State of Pharmaceutical Quality presents key data used to characterize drug and site quality for consumers and patients in the U.S. This report covers FDA-registered drug manufacturers and drugs, including biological products, regulated by CDER to inform stakeholders about the quality of the U.S. drug supply.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The Food and Drug Administration is expected to authorize the reformulated COVID-19 shots from Moderna Inc. and Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech SE as soon as tomorrow, according to three people with knowledge of the matter, putting the Biden administration on track for its post-Labor Day booster campaign. The timing for FDA sign-off on the shots targeting the BA.4 and BA.5 omicron subvariants could change, the people said, while the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's independent vaccine advisory panel is scheduled to meet Thursday and Friday. (Politico)

- The Health and Human Services Department's Biomedical Advanced Research and Development Authority will pay $11 million to Grand River Aseptic Manufacturing Inc. for the Michigan-based company to buy equipment and hire workers to finish the production of 2.5 million monkeypox vaccine vials, per details of the deal seen by Bloomberg. Domestic production of the Jynneos vaccine from Danish drugmaker Bavarian Nordic A/S will accelerate availability of the vaccine, bolster security of the U.S. supply chain and boost preparedness for smallpox bioterrorism, according to Dawn O'Connell, who leads HHS' strategic preparedness and response office. (Bloomberg)

- The Federal Trade Commission filed a lawsuit against Kochava Inc., alleging that the Idaho-based company's selling of geolocation information could reveal to tens of millions of smartphone users the visits that people make to abortion clinics and other sensitive places. The FTC said that data could also be used to track the locations of health care professionals who provide abortions, while Kochava, which filed a pre-emptive suit against the agency earlier this month, said in a statement that it is compliant with all laws and that its tracking information comes from users who consented to the data collection. (The New York Times)

- In a letter, Sens. Jim Inhofe (R-Okla.) and Richard Burr (R-N.C.) pushed President Joe Biden to launch Operation Warp Speed 2.0 to address continued COVID-19 fallout, following the Trump administration's 2020 template for a more coordinated pandemic response that engages the private sector and more easily cuts through regulatory red tape. (Bloomberg Law)

Worth watching today (all times local):

- HHS will hold a planning session with drugmakers, pharmacies and state health departments as the Biden administration looks to shift costs on COVID-19 vaccines and treatments from the government to insurers and patients.

- CDC Director Rochelle Walensky joins the Center for Strategic and International Studies for a fireside chat at 4 p.m.

CORONAVIRUS

Why Some Americans Are Still Isolating From Covid-19

Julie Wernau, The Wall Street Journal

Covid-19 cases and hospitalizations are in decline. People are traveling, socializing and returning to workplaces in greater numbers. But a group of people are still keeping mostly to themselves and taking other measures to minimize infection risks. Compromised immune systems and the risks of long Covid are among reasons they say they are maintaining caution.

Court Narrows Hold on COVID Vaccine Mandate for Contractors

David A. Lieb, The Associated Press

More than 1 million construction workers across the U.S. won't have to comply with a federal COVID-19 vaccination requirement, but an appeals court cleared the way for President Joe Biden's administration to potentially enforce the mandate on some federal contractors.

GENERAL

Is America Simply Sicker Now?

Tim Requarth, The Atlantic

The most haunting memory of the pandemic for Laura, a doctor who practices internal medicine in New York, is a patient who never got COVID at all. A middle-aged man diagnosed with Stage 3 colon cancer in 2019, he underwent surgery and a round of successful chemotherapy and was due for regular checkups to make sure the tumor wasn't growing. Then the pandemic hit, and he decided that going to the hospital wasn't worth the risk of getting COVID. So he put it off … and put it off. "The next time I saw him, in early 2022, he required hospice care," Laura told me. He died shortly after. With proper care, Laura said, "he could have stayed alive indefinitely."

Insurers are accusing providers of submitting every possible claim, even when they know some cases are not eligible for mediation. Providers allege insurers are holding up the federal dispute process by delaying submissions of clear and complete information. The recently published final rule on the process from the Health and Human Services, Labor and Treasury departments likely will not resolve all these problems.

Can You Trust That At-Home Covid Test Result? What Five Tests in 24 Hours Taught Me

Sumathi Reddy, The Wall Street Journal

After dodging Covid-19 for nearly two and a half years, I knew my time would come. A few weeks ago it did: I tested positive on a rapid antigen test. But I also tested negative on two other rapid tests, and also negative on a PCR. And again positive on another rapid test, all in one 24-hour span. The mixed results stumped me, and highlight the frustration many people are feeling when they suspect Covid symptoms but aren't sure they can trust test results.

Providing Services Outside the Scope of Your Grant: How to Ensure Compliance

Tuesday, September 27 at 3 PM ET

NEW WEBINAR FOR HEALTH CENTERS

The recent Dobbs decision has led many health centers to question how they, as federal grant-funded organizations, can provide services that are out of scope. As health centers explore separate business lines, they need to consider a number of factors to ensure they stay in compliance with their federal funding agreements.

In this webinar on Tuesday, September 27 at 3 PM ET, FTLF attorneys Carrie Riley and Ted Waters will use elective abortions as an example to address:

- Creating boundaries between business lines and funding streams
- Compliance with cost allocation principles and other grant-related rules
- Key areas of risk and common pitfalls
- Additional legal and practical considerations health centers face when deciding to establish an "other line of business"

Variant Influenza Virus Infections: Recommendations for Identification, Treatment, and Prevention for Summer and Fall 2022

Summary
The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is issuing this Health Alert Network (HAN) Health Advisory to provide updates o recent variant[1] influenza virus infections and summarize CDC's recommendations for identification, treatment, and prevention of variant influenza virus infection for the summer and fall of 2022.

Background
Five cases of human infection with influenza viruses that usually spread only in pigs, also known as variant influenza virus infections, we reported to CDC in August 2022. These cases include three infections with influenza A(H3N2) variant (A(H3N2)v) virus and two infectio with influenza A(H1N2)v virus. These cases were identified in West Virginia (3), Oregon (1), and Ohio (1). Four of the five cases reporte exposure to pigs or attendance at an agricultural fair prior to illness, and one reported no contact with pigs or attendance at an agricultu fair prior to illness. Clinical characteristics of these cases have been similar to those of seasonal influenza infections and have included fever, cough, pharyngitis, myalgia, and headache. No hospitalizations or deaths have occurred among these five cases, and all patients are recovering or have recovered from their illnesses. To date, no person-to-person spread associated with the five recent variant influe virus infections has been identified.

Early identification and investigation of variant influenza virus infections are important to determine whether the virus is spreading efficie among people. Rapid detection and characterization of novel influenza A viruses and efforts to reduce transmission to other people rem important components of national efforts to prevent the emergence of new viruses that could have pandemic potential. To accomplish th testing for influenza viruses and monitoring for novel influenza A virus infections, including variant influenza virus infection, should conti year-round. Individuals, especially those at increased risk of influenza complications, can take public health measures to limit their risk o infection (e.g., limiting exposure to infected animals). Clinicians are encouraged to consider variant influenza virus infection as a possibl diagnosis when evaluating patients with acute respiratory illnesses and exposure to pigs or agricultural fairs prior to illness.

Since 2005, 504 variant influenza virus infections (of different influenza A virus subtypes) have been identified in the United States; mos these infections have been associated with exposure to pigs or attendance at an agricultural fair prior to illness onset. Agricultural fairs occur across the United States each year, primarily during the summer and early fall. Many fairs have swine barns, where pigs from different geographic locations come in close contact with each other and with people. These venues may allow influenza viruses to spre among pigs and between pigs and people. Infected pigs may spread influenza viruses even if they are not symptomatic (e.g., coughing sneezing).

CDC anticipates that state health departments may identify more cases of infection with variant influenza viruses in 2022 as the agricult fair season continues. Testing for variant influenza viruses should focus primarily on persons with exposures known to be associated wit variant influenza virus infection (e.g., agricultural fair attendance or workers in the swine industry). Novel influenza A virus infections, wh include those caused by variant influenza viruses, are notifiable conditions in the United States, and all confirmed cases should be repo to CDC within 24 hours.

Recommendations for Clinicians

- Outside of the traditional influenza season, ask patients with suspected influenza if they have any recent exposure to swine.
- Clinicians who suspect influenza in persons with recent exposure to swine should:
  - Obtain a nasopharyngeal swab or aspirate from the patient,
  - Place the swab or aspirate in a viral transport medium, and
  - Contact their state or local health department to arrange transport and request a timely diagnosis at a state public health laborato
- Recommend antiviral treatment in patients with suspected or confirmed variant influenza virus infection who are hospitalized, have severe illness, or are in a group considered at increased risk for complications from influenza[2]. Antiviral treatment can also be considered for those not at increased risk based on clinical judgement and if treatment can be initiated within 48 hours of illness ons

Recommendations for Public Health Departments and Laboratorians

- Enhance surveillance for respiratory illness during agricultural fair season to facilitate timely detection and investigation of variant influenza virus cases.

- Respiratory specimens from persons suspected to have variant influenza A virus infection should be collected and sent for subtype-specific real-time polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR) testing at a state public health laboratory. While commercially available rapid influenza diagnostic tests (RIDTs) and molecular assays for influenza can reliably detect variant influenza A viruses, they cannot differentiate variant influenza A viruses from human influenza A viruses.
- Public health laboratories should immediately send influenza A virus specimens that cannot be subtyped or are presumptive variant influenza positive (using methods as outlined in the assay's Instructions for Use) to CDC and submit all specimens that are otherwise unusual as soon as possible after identification. Please email flusupport@cdc.gov to alert CDC that you have a specimen to submit.

Recommendations for the Public

- Persons who are at higher risk for influenza complications[2] should avoid exposure to pigs and swine barns at fairs this year. If you cannot avoid exposure to pigs, you should wear a well-fitting mask that covers the nose and mouth and should perform hand hygien frequently.

  All persons should take precautions when engaging in activities that may involve swine contact. Precautions include hand hygien before and after exposure to animals, avoiding eating or drinking in animal areas, and avoiding close contact with animals that loo or act ill.

- Patients with influenza-like illness who are at higher risk for influenza complications[2] should see their healthcare provider as soon as possible after symptom onset to determine if treatment with antiviral medications is warranted.

  Patients who experience influenza-like symptoms following direct or close contact with pigs and who seek medical care should inform their health care provider about the exposure.

[1]Influenza viruses that circulate in swine are called swine influenza viruses when isolated from swine but are called variant viruses when isolated from humans.

[2]This includes persons with certain underlying chronic medical conditions such as asthma, diabetes, heart disease, or neurological conditions, pregnant people, and pers 5 years and younger and 65 years and older, or who have weakened immune systems.

New Data: Voter Backing Slips for CDC's COVID-19 Performance
The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's handling of the coronavirus has always been viewed much more favorably by voters than the pandemic performances of Congress, President Joe Biden, Vice President Kamala Harris and the United Nations. But those positive feelings have shown signs of dipping over the past month, just as CDC Director Rochelle Walensky announced that the agency "did not reliably meet expectations" on COVID-19 and would undergo an overhaul.

Per Morning Consult's newly updated "Return to Normal" tracker, the CDC's net approval on the pandemic is 17 percentage points above water, with 55% of voters approving and 38% disapproving of the agency's COVID-19 performance. That's down 7 points from last month and the lowest level recorded for the CDC since February.

Check out additional data on institutional responses to COVID-19, public attitudes on vaccine mandates and other related topics here: How the Public's Views on COVID-19 Have Shifted Since the Pandemic Began.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- As soon as January, the U.S. public will have to pay for COVID-19 vaccines out of pocket or get the shots covered through their insurers, while the federal government will continue providing treatments such as Pfizer Inc.'s Paxlovid until the middle of 2023 when U.S. supply runs out, according to Dawn O'Connell, who leads the Department of Health and Human Services'

Administration for Strategic Preparedness and Response. The shift from government coverage of COVID-19 vaccines and treatments to the commercial market was discussed yesterday in a meeting of more than 100 representatives from pharmaceutical companies, providers, payers and state and local health departments, with O'Connell noting that "the timeline to make the transition has accelerated over the past six months without additional funds from Congress to support this work." (Bloomberg)

- Provisional estimates from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's National Center for Health Statistics show that the country from 2019 to 2021 experienced its worst two-year decrease in life expectancy since 1923, with a decline of 2.7 years to 76.1 over that time period. Deaths from COVID-19 were largely responsible for the sinking life expectancy figures: 74% of the decline from 2019 to 2020 was attributable to the coronavirus, as was 50% of the drop between 2020 and 2021. (CBS News)

- Accountable Care Organizations generated $1.66 billion in overall Medicare savings last year and 99% of all ACOs that were part of the Medicare Shared Savings Program achieved quality standards, according to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. CMS said in a release that "the type of ACOs that saw more net savings tended to be low-revenue, meaning they were mainly made up of physicians, included a small hospital, or served rural areas." (Fierce Healthcare)

- The HIV+Hepatitis Policy Institute, the Diabetes Leadership Council and the Diabetes Patient Advocacy Coalition are suing HHS and CMS over a Trump-era rule that the advocacy groups say allows insurers to prevent patients from receiving copay assistance on various drugs. The lawsuit argues that the rule, enacted in 2020, disproportionately affects people with diabetes, HIV and other chronic conditions that require sustained use of costly drugs, while payers argue that copay assistance programs steer patients toward higher-cost, brand-name medicines. In the months since Roe v. Wade was overturned, Luisa García has noticed a sharp and striking trend: More Americans are seeking her clinic's services in Tijuana, Mexico.

Nearly one-third of low-income Asian women now live in states with limited abortion access

Sakshi Venkatraman, NBC News

According to new data from the National Partnership for Women & Families and an NBC News analysis, 31% of lower-income Asian women of reproductive age live in states that have banned or are set to ban abortions. With reproductive care becoming harder to access each day, experts say the most vulnerable groups will be the most crippled — and face the starkest consequences.

Republican candidates are changing how they handle abortion after Roe v. Wade

Shefali Luthra, The 19th

At least three candidates have edited their campaign websites to remove references to strict abortion bans — a reflection of growing voter backlash to the overturning of Roe v. Wade.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

To Fight Monkeypox and Other Viruses, Look Harder in the Sewers

Lisa Jarvis, Bloomberg

Evidence is growing that monkeypox, like Covid, can be reliably detected in wastewater. Yet the US has moved far too slowly to include the virus in its regular scans of sewage for coronavirus. By the time the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention launches a program in the next month or two to look for monkeypox, the worst of the outbreak is likely to have passed.

Why Many Americans Turned on Anthony Fauci

Ari Schulman, The New York Times

In 2019, Anthony Fauci was seen as a charming but no-nonsense doctor who had served the public for five decades. He'd been cited as a hero by the first President Bush and awarded the nation's highest civilian honor by the second. So how by 2022 did Dr. Fauci become, to so many, a villain?

As hospital charges climb, workers and businesses pay the price

Elizabeth Mitchell and Mike Thompson, Stat News

Despite a recent taxpayer-subsidized boon, the hospital industry spent the last several months lobbying for additional federal dollars amid warnings about the continued spread of Covid-19 and inflation's impact on the nation's health care system. Those efforts bore fruit: Medicare recently granted hospitals the largest price increase since 1998.

The No Surprises Act: A Band-Aid protecting business as usual

Marc Rodwin and Alan Sager, Stat News

The No Surprises Act has been hailed as a major bipartisan reform aiming to eliminate most surprise out-of-network bills. For years, Americans had expected their insurance to shield them from high medical costs and cap their out-of-pocket payments at modest levels. Yet many received unexpected bills for medical services at unregulated prices when they accidentally chose out-of-network caregivers or lacked safe in-network options.

The Decline in American Life Expectancy Is Not Inevitable

Dave A. Chokshi, The New York Times

Life expectancy in the United States continued to decline in 2021, according to data released by the federal government. Is there a more fundamental barometer of the health of our nation? The stagnation in life expectancy reflects deep societal challenges — not just in our health system but also in our economic and political systems.

RESEARCH REPORTS

Association of Medicare Advantage Premiums With Measures of Quality and Patient Experience

Amelia M. Haviland et al., JAMA Health Forum

This retrospective cross-sectional study found statistically significant but small-to-medium sized (1-3 points of 100) improvements for most clinical and patient experience quality measures with higher premiums. There was a negative association for 1 measure; in contrast, at each premium level, there was substantial variation (≥5 points) in the quality of care among Medicare Advantage plans.

Survey: Patient nutrition counseling low among physicians

A Medscape survey of 1,005 physicians found that respondents believed only about 55% of their patients would benefit from nutrition counseling, with time constraints and lack of nutrition knowledge preventing physicians from discussing the topic with their patients. Yet only about 16% referred patients out to diet and nutrition specialists, according to survey results, with Dr. Sylvia Bollie commenting that there should be "a baseline of standard nutrition counseling or nutrition assessment for all patients." Full Story: Medscape (free registration) (8/28)

North Lafayette grocery store food desert
8/30/2022 — Lafayette, LA
"The north side of Lafayette is in a food desert." For years northside residents have continuously lost grocery stores in the area. The last was the Shopper's Value on University Avenue. Community leader Ravis Martinez says a lack of places to get food is a big problem in underserved communities. "As a resident, it's really hard and discouraging when you see food deserts literally have a food desert, and you have so many people living with food insecurities."

Spartanburg farmer to open a Pauline community grocery store this fall
8/30/2022 — South Carolina
Jacob Towe, owner of Jubilee Farms of Pauline, established his pasture-raised livestock farm in 2018. During his first few years as a farmer, Towe, a regular at Hub City Farmers Market, quickly discovered that getting his products in front of consumers is difficult and time-consuming. "One of the biggest barriers for farmers is actually getting the product to market, especially for small farms, and being able to make a profit while selling their products at a fair price in a way that doesn't take up all of their time," Towe said.

8/30/2022 — Rhode Island
The rate of childhood obesity and the rate of children being overweight are on the rise in Rhode Island, according to a Tuesday report from the Rhode Island Kids Count. The report is the first to show updated data from 2020, the first year of the COVID-19 pandemic. The rates were on a decline before the pandemic began. "We were seeing overall a decrease in Rhode Island and in the core cities from 2016 to 2019 for overweight and obesity for children," said Kaitlyn Rabb, policy analyst with Rhode Island Kids Count.

Introducing the First Round of CLOCC's 20 Under 20 Honorees

In 2022, CLOCC is excited to celebrate 20 years of obesity-prevention progress in Chicago. To mark this special occasion, we are honoring the vision of CLOCC founder and Lurie Children's Hospital pediatrician Kathy Kaufer Christoffel, MD, with an award series focused on the young, emerging leaders who are the future of childhood obesity prevention in Chicago and beyond.

Today, we are proud to introduce this first group of five recipients of the 20 Under 20 Award. Nominated by mentors and peers from across the Consortium, these young Chicagoans were selected for their efforts to lead future generations to better health. Through participation in school and/or community programs, or through their own individual initiatives, they are inspiring and supporting those around them to adopt healthier habits and strengthen the environments that support health in Chicago's schools, neighborhoods, and communities. Please join us in congratulating these individuals, and stay tuned for future announcements of CLOCC's 20 Under 20.

Markisha Ford

Nominating Organization: Girls in the Game

As a part of Girls in the Game's Teen Squad, Markisha trained to coach numerous workshops for younger girls at local parks, schools, and community events. In a four-year span, she taught younger girls about healthy eating, emphasized teamwork, and led volleyball, kickboxing, and yoga workshops. She coached over 140 girls in 3rd-8th grade sports, primarily on the West and South Sides of Chicago. Markisha's passion and enthusiasm has empowered younger girls to try new sports and facilitated conversations on nutrition and healthy habits. She also contributed to Girls in the Game's clean-up efforts at Union Park, improving her neighborhood's conditions for safe, active play. Her development into a young leader has supported Girls in the Game's nonprofit work to provide and promote sports and fitness opportunities, nutrition and health education, and leadership development to enhance the overall health and well-being of girls.

Ernest Willingham

Nominating Organization: Chicago Youth Programs

As the youngest of eleven children, Ernest grew up in North Lawndale after his home in Cabrini Green was torn down. He graduated from Crane Medical Prep High School in 2020, becoming the first male in his family to graduate from high school. As one of 13 international recipients of the prestigious Torch Scholarship, Ernest is now a Northeastern University (Mass.) student, studying Emergency Medicine/Critical Care & Preventative Healthcare. He is researching health disparities in underrepresented communities while working on an initiative involving inmates and emphasizing the significance of health literacy and education. This past summer, Ernest served as a medical assistant in Bronzeville, performing health intake duties, vaccine and immunization administration and other functions to improve community health. Over the course of his life, Ernest has seen his brother, father, cousin, and best friend become victims of gun violence and, earlier this year, he testified to a United States Senate Committee on "Protecting America's Children From Gun Violence." Ernest recounted how the trauma youth experience growing up in Chicago impedes their ability to lead healthy lives. Through his advocacy on reducing firearm violence, Ernest is helping to create safer physical environments for youth so they can safely play, walk, and exercise in their communities.

Ana Perez-Acuna, Jai Li Hernandez and Angie Martinez

Nominating Organization: Namaste Charter School

Junior high school students Ana, Jai Li and Angie were nominated as standout members of the Namaste Charter School's Wellness Committee. These three students combined to help steer the committee's programs, activities and policies. These students also identified an external partner to facilitate work on a school garden grant. This group assisted the school's 8th grade class with hosting a healthy-food fundraiser by selling fruit cups as opposed to chocolates or gourmet popcorn. They also took the initiative to participate in the state legislative process by completing and promoting witness slip opportunities in support of Illinois schools being able to have more choices in food vendors for school lunches. Jai Li has also worked to promote physical fitness by taking part in a filming opportunity with the CATCH Global Foundation, demonstrating various fitness exercises. The Namaste School is grateful for their leadership and civic roles and hopeful they will continue this leadership in high school to support their communities.

September is National Childhood Obesity Awareness Month, an opportunity for CLOCC partners to reaffirm the importance of children's access to healthy foods and physical activity opportunities, and to identify and address the upstream factors which contribute to the health disparities in our communities. Exploring the Power of Youth Leadership in Creating Conditions for Health and Equity

Join the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine Roundtable on Population Health Improvement as it explores how young people are engaging in and leading efforts to improve the social, economic, and environmental factors that influence the health and equity of communities and the nation.

Date: September 19th
Time: 11:00 AM to 6:30 PM CT

This event will include presentations and discussions that highlight case examples from select domains in which young people engage (e.g., education, climate justice, community safety); consider the types of civic infrastructure and resources that support youth participation and leadership of change efforts; and explore the available evidence on how young people themselves (and society at large) benefit from being involved in this kind of work.

Focus Upstream

CLOCC focuses upstream to identify the fundamental root causes of obesity, and to broaden the scope of our obesity prevention strategies. This work draws from local and national attention to health equity and social influencers of health, such as immigration, education, poverty and racism, all of which have an impact on people's ability to eat healthy and be active where they live, work, learn, and play. If you have comments or questions about this focus, we invite you to reach out to info@clocc.net.

Funding and Recognition Opportunities

- The Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning (CMAP) is seeking community-based organizations to apply to the new Community Alliance for Regional Equity program — an initiative to improve CMAP's investment processes to better serve people traditionally excluded from transportation planning. CMAP will recruit up to 12 community-based organizations and pay $10,000 for one year of their time and expertise. You can find more information on the Community Alliance for Regional Equity webpage and access the application here.
    - Program highlights include:
        - Ability to influence decision-making that impacts your community, including how federal transportation dollars reach your community
        - Networking and relationship-building opportunities
        - $10,000 unrestricted honorarium, half paid upfront
        - Potential for a multi-year commitment
    - If you have questions about the program, please contact CMAP at CommunityAlliance@cmap.illinois.gov or call 312-454-0400.
- Laureus USA is pleased to announce a $4,000,000 funding opportunity for sports-based youth development organizations operating in the state of Illinois. This program is funded by the American Recue Plan Act through Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority's (ICJIA). Laureus USA funds non-profit sport-based youth development organizations that intentionally address a particular and relevant social issue facing youth, while increasing physical activity and enhancing social-emotional development. View the application here. The application deadline is September 19th. This grant opportunity will focus on organizations creating impact in the following two ways:

- Organizations working on violence prevention and intervention services/ focused on creating access to safe spaces, building protective factors for youth through positive relationships, and developing transferrable life skills/competencies
- Organizations with expertise in providing training and technical assistance (TA) on sports-based youth development program quality, healing-centered coaching/programming, and/or restorative justice practices and implementation

- NIH's Office of Nutrition Research (ONR) has issued the notice of special interest (NOSI) Stimulating Research to Understand and Address Hunger, Food and Nutrition Insecurity. The purpose of this NOSI is to encourage research on the efficacy of interventions that address nutrition security and the mechanisms of food insecurity on a variety of health outcomes. It also calls for the development of new measures for nutrition security and assessment of food insecurity that are broadly applicable. It was developed by the ONR Implementation Working Group on Nutrition and Health Disparities in collaboration with NIH Institutes and Centers (ICs) and Offices in support of the goals and objectives of the Strategic Plan for NIH Nutrition Research. Deadline, October 5th.

- Healthy Eating Research, a national program of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, is funding research focused on how pandemic-driven social and economic programs and policies related to poverty reduction impact child obesity, diet quality, and food and nutrition security. Applications are open now here. Deadline, October 12th.

SUBJECT: New indication for OPZELURA™ (ruxolitinib) cream1.5%
FROM: Managed Care News <managedcare_news@newsletter1.docwirenews.com>
TO: Heather Borski <hborski@utah.gov>
DATE: 31/08/2022 15:01

Incyte Corporation (Incyte) is pleased to announce that on July 18, 2022, OPZELURA™ (ruxolitinib) cream was approved by the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for the topical treatment of nonsegmental vitiligo in adult and pediatric patients 12 years of age and older.

INDICATIONS

OPZELURA is indicated for the topical short-term and non-continuous chronic treatment of mild to moderate atopic dermatitis in non-immunocompromised adult and pediatric patients 12 years of age and older whose disease is not adequately controlled with topical prescription therapies or when those therapies are not advisable.

OPZELURA is indicated for the topical treatment of nonsegmental vitiligo in adult and pediatric patients 12 years of age and older.

Limitations of Use: Use of OPZELURA in combination with therapeutic biologics, other JAK inhibitors, or potent immunosuppressants such as azathioprine or cyclosporine is not recommended.

OPZELURA™ is a topical Janus kinase (JAK) inhibitor. OPZELURA™ is available by prescription only.

OPZELURA™ Product Highlights For Nonsegmental Vitiligo

NDC	10-digit NDC: 50881-007-05 11-digit NDC: 50881-0007-05
WAC	$1950 per 60-g tube

[redacted]

Distribution	Full-line Wholesaler
How Supplied/ Package Size	White to off-white cream containing 1.5% ruxolitinib supplied in 60-g tubes
Dosing	Apply a thin layer of cream twice daily to affected areas, not to exceed 10% of body surface area. Do not use more than one 60 gram tube per week. For topical use only. Not for intraocular, oral, or intravaginal use.

NDC, National Drug Code; WAC, wholesale acquisition cost.

SERIOUS INFECTIONS

Patients treated with oral Janus kinase inhibitors for inflammatory conditions are at risk for developing serious infections that may lead to hospitalization or death. Reported infections include:

- Active tuberculosis, which may present with pulmonary or extrapulmonary disease.
- Invasive fungal infections, including cryptococcosis and pneumocystosis.
- Bacterial, viral, including herpes zoster, and other infections due to opportunistic pathogens.

Avoid use of OPZELURA in patients with an active, serious infection, including localized infections. If a serious infection develops, interrupt OPZELURA until the infection is controlled. Carefully consider the benefits and risks of treatment prior to initiating OPZELURA in patients with chronic or recurrent infection. Closely monitor patients for the development of signs and symptoms of infection during and after treatment with OPZELURA.

Serious lower respiratory tract infections were reported in the clinical development program with topical ruxolitinib.

No cases of active tuberculosis (TB) were reported in clinical trials with OPZELURA. Cases of active TB were reported in clinical trials of oral Janus kinase inhibitors used to treat inflammatory conditions. Consider evaluating patients for latent and active TB infection prior to administration of OPZELURA. During OPZELURA use, monitor patients for the development of signs and symptoms of TB.

Viral reactivation, including cases of herpes virus reactivation (e.g., herpes zoster), were reported in clinical trials with Janus kinase inhibitors used to treat inflammatory conditions including OPZELURA. If a patient develops herpes zoster, consider interrupting OPZELURA treatment until the episode resolves.

Hepatitis B viral load (HBV-DNA titer) increases, with or without associated elevations in alanine aminotransferase and aspartate aminotransferase, have been reported in patients with chronic HBV infections taking oral ruxolitinib. OPZELURA initiation is not recommended in patients with active hepatitis B or hepatitis C.

MORTALITY

In a large, randomized, postmarketing safety study in rheumatoid arthritis (RA) patients 50 years of age and older with at least one cardiovascular risk factor comparing an oral JAK inhibitor to tumor necrosis factor (TNF) blocker treatment, a higher rate of all-cause mortality, including sudden cardiovascular death, was observed with the JAK inhibitor.

Consider the benefits and risks for the individual patient prior to initiating or continuing therapy with OPZELURA.

MALIGNANCIES

Malignancies were reported in patients treated with OPZELURA. Lymphoma and other malignancies have been observed in patients receiving JAK inhibitors used to treat inflammatory conditions. In RA patients treated with an oral JAK inhibitor, a higher rate of malignancies (excluding non-melanoma skin cancer (NMSC)) was observed when compared with TNF blockers. Patients who are current or past smokers are at additional increased risk.

Consider the benefits and risks for the individual patient prior to initiating or continuing therapy with OPZELURA, particularly in patients with a known malignancy (other than successfully treated non-melanoma skin cancers), patients who develop a malignancy when on treatment, and patients who are current or past smokers.

Non-melanoma skin cancers, including basal cell and squamous cell carcinoma, have occurred in patients treated with OPZELURA. Perform periodic skin examinations during OPZELURA treatment and following treatment as appropriate. Exposure to sunlight and UV light should be limited by wearing protective clothing and using broad-spectrum sunscreen.

MAJOR ADVERSE CARDIOVASCULAR EVENTS (MACE)

In RA patients 50 years of age and older with at least one cardiovascular risk factor treated with an oral JAK inhibitor, a higher rate of major adverse cardiovascular events (MACE) (defined as cardiovascular death, myocardial infarction, and stroke), was observed when compared with TNF blockers. Patients who are current or past smokers are at additional increased risk. Discontinue OPZELURA in patients who have experienced a myocardial infarction or stroke.

Consider the benefits and risks for the individual patient prior to initiating or continuing therapy with OPZELURA, particularly in patients who are current or past smokers and patients with other cardiovascular risk factors. Patients should be informed about the symptoms of serious cardiovascular events and the steps to take if they occur. Discontinue OPZELURA in patients that have experienced a myocardial infarction or stroke.

THROMBOSIS

Thromboembolic events were observed in trials with OPZELURA. Thrombosis, including pulmonary embolism (PE), deep venous thrombosis (DVT), and arterial thrombosis have been reported in patients receiving JAK inhibitors used to treat inflammatory conditions. Many of these adverse reactions were serious and some resulted in death. In RA patients 50 years of age and older with at least one cardiovascular risk factor treated with an oral JAK inhibitor, a higher rate of thrombosis was observed when compared with TNF blockers. Avoid OPZELURA in patients at risk. If symptoms of thrombosis occur, discontinue OPZELURA and treat appropriately.

Thrombocytopenia, Anemia, and Neutropenia

Thrombocytopenia, anemia, and neutropenia were reported in the clinical trials with OPZELURA. Consider the benefits and risks for individual patients who have a known history of these events prior to initiating therapy with OPZELURA. Perform CBC monitoring as clinically indicated. If signs and/or symptoms of clinically significant thrombocytopenia, anemia, and neutropenia occur, patients should discontinue OPZELURA.

Lipid Elevations

Treatment with oral ruxolitinib has been associated with increases in lipid parameters including total cholesterol, low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol, and triglycerides.

Adverse Reactions

In atopic dermatitis, the most common adverse reactions (≥1%) are nasopharyngitis (3%), diarrhea (1%), bronchitis (1%), ear infection (1%), eosinophil count increased (1%), urticaria (1%), folliculitis (1%), tonsillitis (1%), and rhinorrhea (1%).

In nonsegmental vitiligo, the most common adverse reactions (incidence ≥1%) are application site acne (6%), application site pruritus (5%), nasopharyngitis (4%), headache (4%), urinary tract infection (2%), application site erythema (2%), and pyrexia (1%).

Pregnancy

[redacted]

There is a pregnancy registry that monitors pregnancy outcomes in pregnant persons exposed to OPZELURA during pregnancy. Pregnant persons exposed to OPZELURA and healthcare providers should report OPZELURA exposure by calling 1-855-463-3463.

Lactation

Advise women not to breastfeed during treatment with OPZELURA and for approximately four weeks after the last dose (approximately 5-6 elimination half-lives).

Please see the Full Prescribing Information, including Boxed Warning, and Medication Guide for OPZELURA.

Review data from the clinical trials

In observance of the Labor Day holiday, Morning Consult Health will be off for the rest of the week and on Monday. We'll be back in your inbox on Tuesday.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The Food and Drug Administration authorized the reformulated COVID-19 vaccines from Moderna Inc. and Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech SE that target the BA.4 and BA.5 omicron subvariants, bringing the updated shots one hurdle away from the White House's planned fall booster campaign. Starting today, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's vaccine advisory panel will begin its review of the shots, and if cleared, CDC Director Rochelle Walensky could provide final signoff before Labor Day. (The Washington Post)

[redacted]

- The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services proposed a rule that would ease the enrollment and renewal processes for Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program benefits, a move that CMS Administrator Chiquita Brooks-LaSure said would also "help more people pay their Medicare premiums by making it easier for them to enroll in the Medicare Savings Programs." The proposed rule would limit renewals to every 12 months, require states to make clear how beneficiaries navigate those renewals and ensure that enrollees' returned mail doesn't result in lapsed coverage or rejections. (Fierce Healthcare)

- Top Biden administration health officials are considering a plan to save some of the Jynneos vaccine doses that the government purchased to fight monkeypox for a possible smallpox outbreak, sources said. If the White House believes that the monkeypox outbreak is under control, the shots from the Danish drugmaker Bavarian Nordic A/S could be stored to guard against smallpox, which was eradicated globally in 1980 but could be used in a bioterrorist attack. (Politico)

- Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc. completed its $330 million investment into CareCentrix, officially securing a 55% ownership stake in the at-home care technology platform, with the option to acquire the remaining equity at a later date. The move expands Walgreens' footprint in the primary care, specialty pharmacy, post-acute and home care sectors, the retail pharmacy giant said. (Healthcare Dive)

Worth watching today (all times local):

- The CDC's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices begins its two-day meeting at 10 a.m. in Atlanta, with COVID-19 booster discussion leading the agenda.

- The Medicare Payment Advisory Commission begins its two-day September public meeting today at 11:45 a.m.

CORONAVIRUS

White House to encourage COVID boosters, flu shot this fall

Amanda Seitz, The Associated Press

The Biden administration hopes to make getting a COVID-19 booster as routine as going in for the yearly flu shot. That's at the heart of its campaign to sell the newly authorized shot to an American public that has widely rejected COVID-19 boosters since they first became available last fall.

Covid vaccine drive for youngest kids off to underwhelming start, data shows

Tucker Doherty, Politico

Ten weeks after the FDA and CDC opened the door for children under 5 years old to receive Covid-19 vaccines, the national drive to get the youngest children protected is off to an underwhelming and uneven start.

COVID vaccine pill maker posts positive Phase 2 results

Tina Reed, Axios

San Francisco-based biotech Vaxart, an underdog in the COVID response that's developing a vaccine that would be delivered in a pill, is reporting promising Phase 2 clinical trial data today, the company told Axios exclusively.

WHO: New COVID cases, deaths keep falling nearly everywhere

The Associated Press

The U.N. health agency said there were 4.5 million new COVID-19 cases reported last week, a 16% drop from the previous week. Deaths were also down by 13%, with about 13,500 fatalities. WHO said COVID-19 infections dropped everywhere in the world while deaths decreased everywhere except for Southeast Asia, where they climbed by 15% and in the Western Pacific, where they rose by 3%.

A Q&A with Maria Van Kerkhove on Covid — and pandemic fatigue

Helen Branswell, Stat News

Maria Van Kerkhove gets it. Truly, she knows you're over Covid. The World Health Organization's technical lead for Covid-19, Van Kerkhove understands that the world is struggling with a lot right now. Devastating flooding in Pakistan, famine in the Horn of Africa, war in Ukraine, monkeypox around the globe — there are too many demands for our attention and concern, for philanthropic and government funding. Plus, everyone just wants Covid to be in the rear-view mirror.

White House pause on free at-home covid tests brings access challenges

Andrea Salcedo, The Washington Post

Public health experts who spoke to The Post said the administration's decision to halt the program will make it harder for people to access coronavirus tests — especially for those who are uninsured, live in remote areas far from distribution centers or face mobility issues. The timing of the decision is also concerning as the new school year begins and colder weather leads to more indoor gatherings, raising the risk of infections, and the ever-looming threat of more transmissible virus variants.

How the Pandemic Shortened Life Expectancy in Indigenous Communities

Simon Romero et al., The New York Times

In 2020 and 2021, as the coronavirus swept across the United States, life expectancy for Native Americans and Alaska Natives fell by six and a half years — a decline that left the researchers aghast.

California won't expand teen vaccines without parental OK

Don Thompson, The Associated Press

California won't allow teens age 15 and up to be vaccinated against the coronavirus without their parents' consent. State Sen. Scott Wiener, the bill's author, announced Wednesday he won't put the measure up for a vote in the state Assembly because it doesn't have enough support to pass.

RESEARCH REPORTS

State-Level Trends in Employer-Sponsored Health Insurance, 2019-2021

Robert Hest et al., University of Minnesota's State Health Access Data Assistance Center

The COVID-19 pandemic has altered long-standing patterns of life and work in the United States and internationally. The pandemic, along with the associated policy response, led to (at least temporary) changes in Americans' primary source of health insurance coverage, with more Americans enrolled in public coverage and fewer in private. Despite these shifts, employer-sponsored health insurance (ESI) remains the largest single source of coverage for most Americans, with 62.2 million private-sector workers enrolled in ESI in 2021.

Milbank Memorial Fund
STATE LEADERSHIP NETWORK

Dear Colleagues:

I hope that you are well. The dog days of summer are past, and a new season of policy initiatives, state budgeting, and legislative sessions beckons.

One of the most challenging tasks of state service for me was rapidly translating complex federal legislation for the people who are carrying out the work on a day-to-day basis. To support you in that task, this newsletter offers a shorthand of which health provisions were enacted by the Inflation Reduction Act of 2022 (IRA, Public Law 117-169) and which Build Back Better provisions were not included.

Please don't hesitate to be in touch if we can support you with more information on any of this. Happy almost fall!

I wish you all well.

In partnership,

Kate McEvoy
Program Officer
Milbank Memorial Fund

What's In and What's Not

The IRA includes a number of significant health provisions that will have direct and indirect impact on people at the state level. That said, it is also important to note many of the proposals that were originally embedded in the draft Build Back Better legislation were negotiated out of the IRA. See below for an overview.

What's In:

Expanded subsidies for health insurance coverage purchased through the ACA exchange

The IRA extends the expanded subsidies that were enacted by the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA), which would otherwise have sunset at the end of 2022, for an additional three years. See below for a helpful chart from the Kaiser Family Foundation that synopsizes this assistance. These subsidies have improved the affordability of exchange-based plans and demonstrably reduced the national rate of uninsured individuals.

Table 1: Percent of Income Paid for Marketplace Benchmark Silver Premium, by Income
Income (% of poverty)	Affordable Care Act (before legislative change)	COVID-19 Relief (current law 2021-2022)
Under 100%	Not eligible for subsidies*	Not eligible for subsidies
100% – 138%	2.07%	0.0%
138% – 150%	3.10% – 4.14%	0.0%
150% – 200%	4.14% – 6.52%	0.0% – 2.0%
200% – 250%	6.52% – 8.33%	2.0% – 4.0%
250% – 300%	8.33% – 9.83%	4.0% – 6.0%
300% – 400%	9.83%	6.0% – 8.5%
Over 400%	Not eligible for subsidies	8.5%

NOTES: *Lawfully present immigrants whose household incomes are below 100% FPL and are not otherwise eligible for Medicaid are eligible for tax subsidies through the Marketplace if they meet all other eligibility requirements.
In the COVID-19 relief law, lawfully present immigrants in states that have not expanded Medicaid would continue to be eligible for marketplace subsidies. In addition, people receiving Unemployment Insurance (UI) are treated as though their income is no more than 133% of poverty for the purposes of the premium tax credit. This could extend premium tax credits to some individuals with incomes below poverty.

Enhanced Medicare prescription drug coverage

The IRA expands eligibility for the Medicare Part D Low-Income Subsidy (LIS) Program. Depending on an individual's financial situation, LIS covers:

- all or some of the monthly prescription drug premium, up to an annual "benchmark" amount (in 2022, $33.37);
- all or some of the annual deductible (in 2022, $480); and
- all or some of the co-payments for which beneficiaries are responsible.

Pre-IRA	Post-IRA
Medicare beneficiaries qualified for either full or partial LIS benefits depending on their income and assets. • People with income less than or equal to 135% of the federal poverty level (FPL) and assets within specified limits qualified for full LIS benefits. • People with income that is less than or equal to 150% of FPL and assets within specified limits qualified for partial LIS benefits.	Medicare beneficiaries qualify for full LIS benefits if they have income of less than or equal to 150% FPL and assets within specified limits. There is no longer a partial LIS benefit.

Want more information on LIS eligibility? While it has not yet been updated to reflect IRA changes, this chart produced by the National Council on Aging is a great resource.

Efforts to control the overall rate of cost growth in Medicare-purchased drugs

The IRA includes two provisions that endeavor to address the high rate of cost growth for Medicare-purchased drugs.
The first permits the federal government to negotiate the cost of a small number of drugs on which Medicare spends the most, as follows:

- 10 Part D drugs in 2026
- 15 Part D drugs in 2027
- 15 Part D and Part B drugs in 2028

- 20 Part D and Part B drugs in 2029 and subsequent years.

The second requires drug manufacturers to make rebates if the cost of their drugs increases at a rate greater than inflation.

Lower Medicare Part D cost-sharing

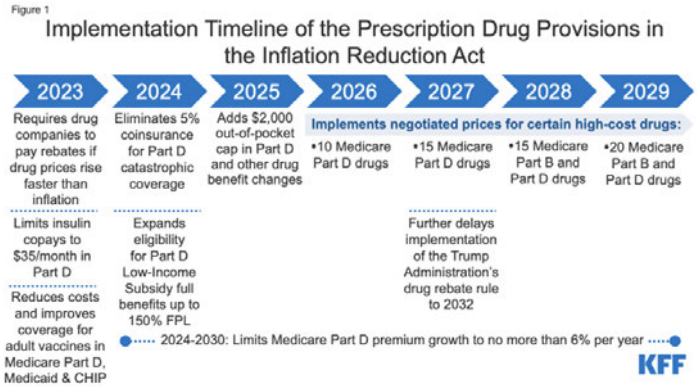
The IRA significantly defrays the out-of-pocket (OOP) spending that Medicare beneficiaries must make on prescription drugs. This includes:

- reduced cost sharing, in the form of:
  - elimination of the required 5% coinsurance in the catastrophic period, effective in 2024;
  - establishment of an overall $2,000 OOP spending cap in 2025; and
  - limitations on annual increases in the cost of Part D premiums, over the period from 2024–2030;
- a cap of $35 on cost sharing for insulin products; and
- elimination of cost-sharing for adult vaccines.

Medicaid coverage of vaccines

The IRA mandates coverage of and eliminates cost sharing for adult vaccines covered by Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP).

Here is a helpful Kaiser Family Foundation implementation timeline of the prescription drug provisions:



What's Not In:

The IRA does not include these Build Back Better proposals:

Permanent funding for CHIP

This elimination of this proposal leaves CHIP subject to periodic Congressional renewal. CHIP was last reauthorized in 2018 by the Bipartisan Budget Act (P.L. 115–123) for four years through the end of FY 2027 (September 30, 2027).

Eligibility provisions designed to maximize coverage:

- Medicaid "fallback"/look-alike program: This proposal would have created an alternative vehicle through which individuals could qualify for Medicaid-equivalent coverage in states that have not pursued ACA Medicaid expansion.
- Annual Medicaid and CHIP enrollment periods for children: This proposal for 12 continuous months of coverage aimed to minimize migration of children on and off Medicaid and CHIP.
- Extension of pregnancy coverage from 60 days post-partum to one year: Effective April 1, 2022 through March 31, 2027, Sections 9812 and 9822 of the ARPA enabled states to extend Medicaid and CHIP postpartum coverage from 60 days postpartum to one year postpartum. This proposal would have made the option obligatory and permanent.

Permanency for increased resources for Medicaid home- and community-based long-term services and supports

This proposal sought to build on the durationally limited enhanced federal medical assistance percentage (FMAP) for home- and community-based services (HCBS) that was authorized under ARPA. It provides states with planning grants, six additional points of FMAP for implementation of HCBS improvements, and 80% FMAP for the administrative costs of implementing those initiatives.

Speak for Health

Hi Heather,

Evidence tells us that access to safe abortion is a key factor in preventing death and disability among pregnant people. With the Supreme Court overturning Roe v. Wade and constant state-level attacks against abortion access, it's time for Congress to take action to protect abortion at the federal level. Use your voice to Speak for Health and join us in urging Congress to protect reproductive rights.

Use APHA's Speak for Health resources to:

- Send a message to your members of Congress urging their support for the Women's Health Protection Act.
- Schedule a meeting with your member of Congress to discuss the importance of protecting abortion access. Boost the effectiveness of your meeting by sharing materials like state fact sheets.
- Attend a town hall and ask your elected official key questions about their commitment to passing legislation to federally codify the right to abortion. You can contact their office to ask when the next town hall is scheduled.
- Tweet your elected officials to ask how they plan to protect abortion access using the hashtag #SpeakForHealth.
- Write an op-ed on abortion and public health using our op-ed writing tips.
- Check how your members have voted on abortion access before using the APHA Congressional Vote Record.
- Learn more about how abortion access is important for public health by visiting APHA's Reproductive and Sexual Health page which includes press releases, policy statements and more.
- Review APHA's Speak for Health advocacy presentation to learn how to be an effective public health advocate.

Let us know how you took action during the Speak for Health campaign by filling out the Speak for Health Challenge 2022 form.

SEPTEMBER 2022 NEWSLETTER

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Jessica Strong
UPHA President

[redacted]

I have the honor of serving as UPHA President right now. For members who have not had the opportunity to serve on the board, you may wonder what the board does. Some people may think of UPHA as simply a convener of an annual conference. While this is a very visible event we conduct, the board works year-round for public health.

The mission of UPHA is to address Utah's public health challenges by empowering public health professionals, educating the community, and advocating for effective public health policies. We strive to be the voice of public health professionals. Our advocacy unit tracks relevant legislation, speaks up for best practices, and serves as a resource to policymakers. The communications unit shares important information for professionals and the general public about public health. The fiscal unit monitors and ensures financial stability and gives grants to community organizations implementing public health programming. The membership unit is thinking about you, our members, and how we can continue to offer relevant and supportive services to our members. Our board and each of these units are run by volunteers who are already working in other professional capacities. Serving on a board is both a privilege and responsibility.

Each of our units are hard at work on behalf of you and public health. We are excited to be rolling out some new member benefits soon. I encourage you to make sure your membership is current. Tell your colleagues to join as well! We strive to serve you well. If you have any thoughts or questions, I invite you to send them to me at president@UPHA.org.

IN PARTNERSHIP WITH UTAH'S PUBLIC HEALTH DEPARTMENTS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:
Friday, September 2, 2022
Media contact:
Charla Haley
Public Information Officer
Phone (801.230.5927)

First human case of West Nile virus confirmed in Utah for 2022

Continue to take precautions against mosquito bites

Salt Lake City—Public health officials confirmed the first positive human case of West Nile virus (WNV) in Weber Morgan Health District about a month after WNV was found in mosquitoes in Utah, with two additional suspect human cases currently under investigation in Weber and Uintah counties. The person is a male resident of the Weber-Morgan Health district, between the ages of 65 and 84. He is hospitalized with neuroinvasive West Nile virus. In 2021, there were 28 reported human cases of West Nile virus in Utah, including 3 deaths.

In addition to the confirmed human case, as of September 1, 2022, 73 positive mosquito pools have been identified across the state in Davis, Salt Lake, Tooele, and Uintah counties, as well as two positive horses in Uintah County.

Hannah Rettler, vector-borne/zoonotic epidemiologist with the Utah Department of Health and Human Services says, "Mosquito season isn't over and Utahns should continue to protect themselves from mosquito bites." Rettler continues, "Many more Utahns could become ill with West Nile virus if they don't take precautions to protect themselves from mosquito bites."

To protect yourself:

- Use insect repellent when you go outdoors. Repellents containing 20% to 30% DEET are recommended and safe to use during pregnancy. For more information about insect repellents, visit the EPA information page. Always follow label directions.

[redacted]

- Limit outdoor activities from dusk to dawn, when mosquitoes are most active.
- Wear long pants, long-sleeved shirts, and socks in areas where mosquitoes are active. Spray clothes with insect repellent for extra protection.

To reduce mosquitoes around your home:

- Mosquitoes lay their eggs in standing water so eliminate pools of water as much as possible. Empty water from pet dishes, flower pots, wading pools, backyard ponds, buckets, tarps, tires, and puddles at least once a week.
- Report bodies of stagnant water to your local mosquito abatement district (MAD). Visit http://www.umaa.org/ for a list of MADs.
- Keep doors, windows, and screens in good condition and make sure they fit tightly.

Rettler says most people infected with West Nile virus don't have symptoms. About 20% of infected people will have flu-like symptoms, while fewer than 1% develop a serious, potentially deadly illness. People who are aged 60 years and older and those with certain medical conditions are at greater risk of serious illness. See a healthcare provider if you develop symptoms of West Nile virus including high fever, severe headache and stiff neck, disorientation, and confusion.

Since surveillance began in 2003, an average of 25 human cases of West Nile virus have been confirmed In Utah each year, with a wide range between 1 and 158 cases.

For more information about West Nile Virus, call your local health department or visit https://epi.health.utah.gov/west-nile-virus/.

Last Chance to Submit Medicare Physician Fee Schedule Comments
The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) recently proposed its updates to the Medicare Physician Fee Schedule (PFS) for calendar year 2023 (summary). The proposed rule would: extend certain Medicare telehealth flexibilities adopted during the public health emergency (PHE) for 151 days after its expiration; expand access to substance use disorder (SUD) treatment by allowing Medicare to continue covering several opioid use disorder (OUD) telehealth services furnished by opioid treatment programs (OTPs) and cover services provided by OTP mobile units; permit licensed professional counselors (LPCs) and licensed marriage and family therapists (LMFTs) to perform behavioral health services "incident to" a physician or non-physician practitioner (NPP); and allow behavioral health providers to practice under general supervision (rather than the more restrictive direct supervision) when such services are provided "incident to" the services of a physician or NPP. Comments are due September 6 by 5:00PM EDT.

HHS Announces $79.1 Million in Overdose Prevention Grants
This week, the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) announced that $79.1 million in grant funds will be awarded to overdose prevention programs. The announcement comes in coordination with the Biden-Harris Administration's National Drug Control Strategy, Unity Agenda, and HHS's Overdose Prevention Strategy. The funding will go to various programs, including: Medication-Assisted Treatment – Prescription Drug and Opioid Addiction (MAT-PDOA) ($32.7 million), First Responders-Comprehensive Addiction and Recovery Support Services Act ($14.5 million), Services Grant Program for Residential Treatment for Pregnant and Postpartum Women (PPW)($12.1 million), Targeted Capacity Expansion: Special Projects ($8.2 million), among others.

FDA to Prioritize Policies that Expand SUD Treatments
Commissioner Robert Califf of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently published an article outlining the agency's priorities, including policies on how to address the overdose crisis. Addressing the rise in overdoses is a priority for the FDA, which will require the agency, according to the Commissioner, to double its efforts to expand access to naloxone, enhance prescriber education efforts, and support the development of new substance use disorder therapies. Commissioner Califf also reinforced the clinical community's role in addressing the overdose crisis, adding that substance use disorders will be considered in its assessments of public health risks for opioids and other substances.

Webinar on Treatment for Opioid Use Disorders in Rural Areas
Join the Providers Clinical Support System (PCSS) on September 8 at 3:00PM EDT for a webinar discussing the treatment of OUD in rural areas. In particular, this webinar will explore why rural areas have been severely impacted by the overdose epidemic and discuss unique challenges, as well as opportunities to make demonstrable improvements in engaging rural patients with OUD in treatment. Participants will learn about barriers to delivering evidence-based prevention and treatment services for individuals with OUD in rural areas and discuss how the COVID-19 pandemic has exacerbated overdose deaths & created new opportunities for service delivery in rural areas. TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- CVS Health Corp. struck a roughly $8 billion deal to acquire Signify Health Inc., besting fellow bidders Amazon.com Inc., UnitedHealth Group Inc. and Option Care Health Inc. for the home health and technology services provider. The companies said they expect the transaction to close in the first half of next year, officially giving CVS access to Signify's network of 10,000-plus clinicians across all 50 states. (Bloomberg)

[redacted]

- Amazon is facing a Federal Trade Commission investigation over its $3.9 billion acquisition of One Medical operator 1Life Healthcare Inc., which disclosed the probe in a securities filing. The FTC requested additional information from Amazon and One Medical, potentially delaying completion of the deal given the typical monthslong timeline for federal antitrust investigations. (The Wall Street Journal)

- The Biden administration asked Congress to sign off on a short-term continuing resolution that includes $22.4 billion to fund COVID-19 tests, support for global mitigation efforts and the research and development of new vaccines and treatments, including $3.9 million for the monkeypox response effort. (Fierce Healthcare) The request came a day after Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Director Rochelle Walensky signed off on the reformulated COVID-19 vaccines from Moderna Inc. and Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech SE, setting the stage for the fall booster campaign to begin this week. (NBC News)

- The Department of Veterans Affairs submitted an interim final rule that would allow the agency to provide abortions for pregnant veterans and VA beneficiaries in cases of rape or incest or in emergency situations. The VA, which would also offer abortion counseling, said it will "provide these services in as many locations as possible" following publication of the interim final rule and a 30-day public comment period, though it may face legal challenges. A third Covid autumn is upon us. Here's a look at where we stand

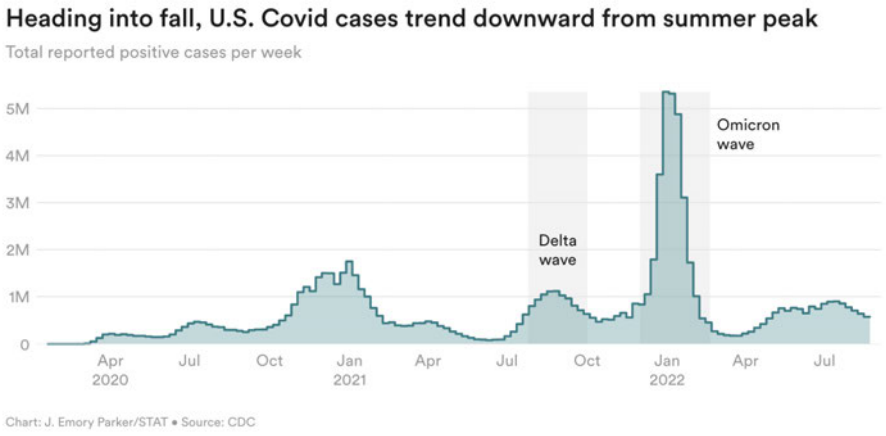
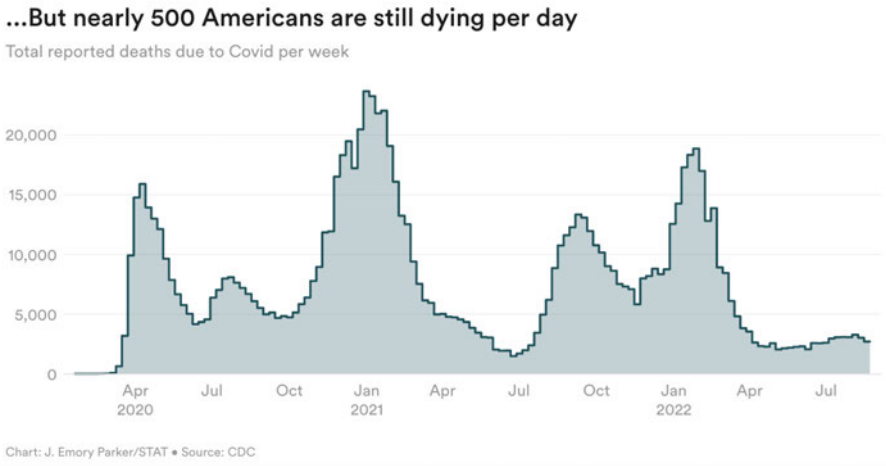
Stat News





PRESENTED BY THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CHAIN DRUG STORES

H.R. 7213 Would Help Preserve Reliable, Equitable & Trusted Access to Pharmacist Care for America's Seniors

Nearly 200 groups support H.R. 7213, the Equitable Community Access to Pharmacist Services Act. The bipartisan legislation would help preserve vaccination, testing, and treatment services in pharmacies for Medicare beneficiaries. Research shows the majority of older Americans want access to these services at the pharmacy. The Future of Pharmacy Care Coalition stands with seniors and diverse organizations in supporting the legislation - including groups representing patients, seniors, rural and urban communities, health systems, pharmacies, and pharmacists.

CORONAVIRUS

New Covid vaccines are here. What happens to the original shots?

Sarah Owermohle, Stat News

Senior Biden officials are in discussions about what to do with millions of original Covid-19 vaccines after the FDA's authorization of new, updated shots this week bumped them to the sidelines.

Pfizer isn't sharing Covid vaccines with researchers for next-gen studies

Rachel Cohrs, Stat News

Researchers studying next-generation vaccines to fight an evolving Covid-19 threat are running into problems getting existing vaccines to use in their research.

Fall covid surge possible, but unlikely to be as severe

Joel Achenbach and Lena H. Sun, The Washington Post

Coronavirus scenarios from multiple research teams, shared in recent weeks with federal officials, foresee stable or declining hospitalizations in early fall. The scenarios show the possibility of a late-fall surge. A new variant remains the biggest wild card. But several factors — including the approval this week of reformulated boosters and the buildup of immunity against the latest strain of the virus — could suppress some of the cold-season spread, experts say.

White House Warns of Pandemics Worse Than Covid as Health Overhauls Begin

Riley Griffin, Bloomberg

White House health officials warned that new pandemics could prove more serious than Covid-19 in a report that reviews efforts to prepare for the "high likelihood" of future serious outbreaks.

Novavax Says Anticipating Booster Approval After FDA Review

Zac Fleming, Bloomberg Law

Novavax said it is anticipating emergency approval in the US for its Covid-19 vaccine to be used a booster in people aged 18 and older, following completion of a review by the FDA.

California Biotech Executive Is Guilty in $77 Million Blood-Testing Scheme

Remy Tumin, The New York Times

A biotech executive in California was convicted of orchestrating a $77 million scheme involving false and fraudulent claims for Covid-19 and allergy testing, federal prosecutors said.

China approves the world's first inhaled COVID-19 vaccine, from Cansino

Grady McGregor, Fortune

The vaccine, called Convidecia Air, changes the liquid form of the vaccine into an aerosol using a nebuilzer. The vaccine can then be inhaled through the mouth using the nebulizer machine. The needle-free vaccine "can effectively induce comprehensive immune protection in response to SARS-CoV-2 after just one breath," Cansino said in a statement.

Pfizer, BioNTech seek to revoke CureVac's patent infringement claims

Reuters

Pfizer (PFE.N) and its German partner BioNTech have filed proceedings at the High Court of England and Wales, seeking a judgment that their COVID-19 vaccine, based on mRNA technology, does not infringe on CureVac's European patents, according to a regulatory filing on Friday.

GENERAL

Amazon Care is dead, but the tech giant's health-care ambitions live on

Caroline O'Donovan, The Washington Post

The demise of Amazon Care also came as a shock to industry observers. After launching publicly in 2019, it expanded quickly and was touted as one of the company's most important innovations. But there were also signs of trouble. To understand where Amazon is headed next in health care, the industry is looking for clues from a different direction: Amazon's acquisitions.

Monkeypox Vaccine Study Raises Questions About Protection

Jason Gale and Madison Muller, Bloomberg

The monkeypox vaccine that's become the main method doctors use to try to stop the global scourge may be less potent than hoped, new research shows.

The Biden administration is gambling that a little-studied vaccine can stop monkeypox

Krista Mahr, Politico

Since monkeypox began its unprecedented spread through the nation in May, more than 352,600 people in the U.S. have placed their trust in a vaccine that has never undergone trials to evaluate how well it fights the virus in humans. The vaccine was designed to prevent smallpox, a related virus, and studies conducted by its Danish manufacturer have shown it works against monkeypox too, in animals.

Meet Mary Wakefield, the Nurse Administrator Tasked With Revamping the CDC

Sam Whitehead, Kaiser Health News

CDC Director Dr. Rochelle Walensky has tapped Mary Wakefield — an Obama administration veteran and nurse — to helm a major revamp of the sprawling agency and its multibillion-dollar budget. Making the changes will require winning over wary career CDC scientists, combative members of Congress, and a general public that in many cases has stopped looking to the agency for guidance.

Biden drug czar: Stigma among doctors is key culprit in addiction crisis

Lev Facher, Stat News

Gupta's selection as director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, however, has ushered in a new era of federal drug policy. As the first doctor to hold the position, he says he will embrace new strategies, including harm reduction tactics, which aim to reduce drug users' risk of overdose, death, and disease in lieu of a hardline, abstinence-only attitude.

Covid, monkeypox, polio: Summer of viruses reflects travel, warming trends

Mark Johnson, The Washington Post

A third year of the coronavirus, driven by a more contagious variant. Global outbreaks of monkeypox and a mysterious hepatitis afflicting previously healthy children. Polio virus found in the sewage systems in London and New York. And polio diagnosed in patients in Jerusalem and Rockland County where Chak works, a region of more than 300,000 people just north of New York City.

Abortion Pill Providers Work to Broaden Access Post-Roe Decision

Pam Belluck, The New York Times

These new efforts, which test the legal boundaries, have sprung up since the Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade and many states restricted abortion.

1. coli outbreak extends to New York and Kentucky

Dennis Romero, NBC News

Most people who reported feeling ill in July or August had eaten a burger or sandwich with romaine at a Wendy's in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, or Pennsylvania, the CDC said.

Poll: One year after SB 8, Texans express strong support for abortion rights

Sarah McCammon, NPR News

In a new survey, six in 10 voters said they support abortion being "available in all or most cases," and many say abortion will be a motivating issue at the ballot box in November. Meanwhile, 11% say they favor a total ban on abortion.

These women were prosecuted for drugs after miscarriages, still births

MA plans to CMS: Don't finalize controversial audit rule

Robert King, Fierce Healthcare

The Biden administration needs to back off a massive overhaul to risk adjustment audits for Medicare Advantage (MA) plans, according to insurers that say the proposal unfairly targets prior audits dating back a decade.

Medicaid extensions for new moms grow, may run into limits

Tom Murphy, The Associated Press

States around the country are making it easier for new moms to keep Medicaid in the year after childbirth, a time when depression and other health problems can develop. But tight government budgets and the program's low reimbursement may ultimately limit this push or make it hard for women with extended coverage to find doctors.

Private equity investors sharpen focus on specialty healthcare

Caroline Hudson, Modern Healthcare

More than 740 deals occurred in healthcare services in the first half of the year, down 20% from the same period in 2021 but an increase of 16% from 2019, according to an Oliver Wyman report. Private equity deals continue to play a significant role in healthcare, even as inflation and higher costs change the landscape.

Travel nurses' gold rush is over. Now, some are joining other nurses in leaving the profession altogether.

Jean Lee, NBC News

During the Covid pandemic, nurses tripled their pay by moving from job to job. But the short-lived boom was a temporary fix for a long-term decline in the nursing profession.

Pennsylvania nursing home strike: Hundreds of workers push for wages

Michael Rubinkam, The Associated Press

About 700 unionized workers walked off the job in a dispute over pay, benefits and staffing levels. Photos and video on social media showed picket lines going up outside many of the homes, with workers carrying signs and wearing the purple T-shirts of their union, SEIU Healthcare Pennsylvania.

FDA still skeptical of ALS drug ahead of high-stakes meeting

Matthew Perrone, The Associated Press

Federal health regulators remain unconvinced about the benefits of a closely watched experimental drug for the debilitating illness known as Lou Gehrig's disease, even as they prepare to give its drugmaker a rare second opportunity to make a public case for the treatment.

Bayer to pay $40M in settlement after alleged kickbacks to hospitals, physicians

Spencer Kent, NJ.com

The Bayer Corporation has agreed to a $40 million settlement after allegations of kickbacks to hospitals and physicians to use its medications.

Drug Recalls for Nitrosamines Could Cost Big Pharma Millions

Anna Edney, Bloomberg Businessweek

When a drug is recalled because there's something in it that shouldn't be, it's scary but often traceable: Foreign objects such as shards of metal or microorganisms might infiltrate medications through dirty factories or lax manufacturing practices. But recently a more insidious—and difficult to eradicate—form of contamination has surfaced among makers of some of the world's best-selling pharmaceuticals. They're called nitrosamines.

A Message From the National Association of Chain Drug Stores:

The bipartisan Equitable Community Access to Pharmacist Services Act (H.R. 7213) is championed by U.S. Reps. Ron Kind (D-WI), David McKinley (R-WV), Nanette Barragán (D-CA), and Buddy Carter (R-GA). H.R. 7213 would help to ensure patient access to essential care and services by pharmacists - often the most accessible points of healthcare in communities. Pandemic telehealth expansion reduced opioid overdoses: study

Annie Burky, Fierce Healthcare

The study split 175,000 Medicaid beneficiaries between those who initiated opioid use disorder (OUD) care before the pandemic and after the outbreak. Patients in the COVID-19 pandemic group were more likely to receive OUD-related telehealth care and corresponding medications for opioid use disorder (MOUD), experts said. Those who received telehealth care were also more likely to retain medical treatments. Beneficiaries who were Black or lived in the south were less likely to receive telehealth services, the study found.

The Pandemic Is Coming for Your Pocketbook

Andy Slavitt, The Atlantic

President Joe Biden's administration has been shuffling money from other pockets to pay for the new shots after Congress failed to pass a pandemic budget request earlier this summer. The government will soon run out of options. This will result in a significant shift in how we fight the pandemic—what is being referred to as "commercialization." The public has yet to wrap their minds around the implications, and while it seems unlikely that we'll avoid this fate, there are strategies to lessen the worst potential impacts.

RESEARCH REPORTS

Federal Database on Owners of Nursing Homes Is Incomplete and Out-of-Compliance with the Law

Taylor Lincoln, Public Citizen

In response to evidence that nursing homes owned by private equity firms often provide substandard care, Congress included language in the 2010 Affordable Care Act (ACA) requiring nursing facilities to furnish far more comprehensive information on who their owners are. But the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), the agency responsible for collecting such information, never issued regulations to implement that law. Queries of a nursing home ownership database that the agency does publish suggests that ownership disclosure is about as spotty today as it was when the law was passed in 2010.

Good morning,

If I'm understanding correctly I started an overview sheet in the Legislative Review Template where we can link to all of the policy recommendations, I left some of the information I had for contraception access and linked to both the contraception access legislative review sheet and the Increasing Coverage sheet that Nate linked to but it doesn't have any more detail behind the other proposals yet and I'd need help filling all of that out. Is this what you had in mind Tracy?

It seems like a good idea to add this to the Family Friendly Policy list. I am adding Krisann here as I am a little anxious about which documents to add it to since there seems to be multiple documents and I want to make sure it gets to the right place. I, also, think it's a good idea to discuss this with the LG on the 20th as she was the senate sponsor of the house bill that required parental consent (which may or may not be indicative of strong feelings about parental consent).

Do we want to ask Laurie to complete a legislative review sheet for the idea of amending state law?

Below is information and suggestions from Maternal & Child Health in response to the request from the Office of Congressman Blake Moore regarding changes necessary to allow Utah to receive Title X funds. While MCH did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. MCH, also, provided information on changes that could be made in State code to allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized; including some example language from Texas.

As I am still trying to understand the basics of this issue, please let me know how you all would like to proceed in reaching-out to the Congressman's office.

There are two possible approaches to Congressman Moore's request. A federal statute change or a change at the state level. For a federal statute change to be "enacted", as we understand it, would require an actual act of congress. The specific federal code that would need to be addressed, and that applies here, is the Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A (https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). It states:

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

Another part of the federal code states this -

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

The Title X philosophy (and in federal code) highly encourages the inclusion of parents/guardians in these important life decisions, but minors will not be turned away at a Title X funded facility.

We do not have specific language to suggest regarding changes to this section of federal statute.

In the August 2020 letter denying Utah's waiver request, from the Deputy Assistant Secretary, Office of Population Affairs to Dr. Joseph Miner, it stated "The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver." A second idea would be to add language to this section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

For Utah -
There is a way to allow Title X funds into the state without changing the Utah parental consent law. We explored this option when we were tentatively offered Title X funds in 2020, but were not granted the "waiver" we requested, and were not able to receive the funds (Please refer to HB377, legislation passed in 2020).

When notifying leadership of the denial of Utah's waiver request, we put forward another suggestion for the Utah legislature and executive leadership to consider. Other states receiving Title X funds with similar parental notification or consent laws suspend state law for Title X funds only. A thorough example is one from Texas, who created an exemption to their parental notification law. (https://www.lbb.texas.gov/Documents/GAA/General_Appropriations_Act_2020_2021.pdf (see page 190/II-70, section 79(a)(2))

(a) Consent for Services.

[redacted]

[redacted]

(2) HHSC may distribute funds for medical, dental, psychological, or surgical treatment provided to a minor only if consent to treatment is obtained pursuant to Family Code Chapter 32. In the event that compliance with this subsection would result in the loss of Federal Funds to the state, HHSC may modify, or suspend this subsection to the extent necessary to prevent such loss of funds, provided that 45-day prior notification is provided to the Governor and the Legislative Budget Board.

Language such as this would allow for minors to be served without consent if federal funding would be in jeopardy. Guidance given by the Texas Department of Health specifies:

… providers and their parent organizations may serve clients who are funded through sources outside of the Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC). When requirements differ, policies and procedures concerning services for programs administered by HHSC must be distinguished from those governing family planning services provided through other contracts or funding sources, such as Title X*.*

For Utah this type of approach could be taken. Another approach to consider would be to allow an exemption for Title X funds only.

Please let me know if you have any follow up questions.

Thank you,
Laurie, Lynne and Nickee

It seems like a good idea to add this to the Family Friendly Policy list. I am adding Krisann here as I am a little anxious about which documents to add it to since there seems to be multiple documents and I want to make sure it gets to the right place. I, also, think it's a good idea to discuss this with the LG on the 20th as she was the senate sponsor of the house bill that required parental consent (which may or may not be indicative of strong feelings about parental consent).

Do we want to ask Laurie to complete a legislative review sheet for the idea of amending state law?

The landscape has changed since this language was added to state code. She may be supportive of this adjustment.

Below is information and suggestions from Maternal & Child Health in response to the request from the Office of Congressman Blake Moore regarding changes necessary to allow Utah to receive Title X funds. While MCH did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. MCH, also, provided information on changes that could be made in State code to allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized; including some example language from Texas.

As I am still trying to understand the basics of this issue, please let me know how you all would like to proceed in reaching-out to the Congressman's office.

David -

There are two possible approaches to Congressman Moore's request. A federal statute change or a change at the state level. For a federal statute change to be "enacted", as we understand it, would require an actual act of congress. The specific federal code that would need to be addressed, and that applies here, is the Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A (https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). It states:

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

Another part of the federal code states this -

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

The Title X philosophy (and in federal code) highly encourages the inclusion of parents/guardians in these important life decisions, but minors will not be turned away at a Title X funded facility.

We do not have specific language to suggest regarding changes to this section of federal statute.

In the August 2020 letter denying Utah's waiver request, from the Deputy Assistant Secretary, Office of Population Affairs to Dr. Joseph Miner, it stated "The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver." A second idea would be to add language to this section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

For Utah -
There is a way to allow Title X funds into the state without changing the Utah parental consent law. We explored this option when we were tentatively offered Title X funds in 2020, but were not granted the "waiver" we requested, and were not able to receive the funds (Please refer to HB377, legislation passed in 2020).

When notifying leadership of the denial of Utah's waiver request, we put forward another suggestion for the Utah legislature and executive leadership to consider. Other states receiving Title X funds with similar parental notification or consent laws suspend state law for Title X funds only. A thorough example is one from Texas, who created an exemption to their parental notification law. (https://www.lbb.texas.gov/Documents/GAA/General_Appropriations_Act_2020_2021.pdf (see page 190/II-70, section 79(a)(2))

(a) Consent for Services.
(2) HHSC may distribute funds for medical, dental, psychological, or surgical treatment provided to a minor only if consent to treatment is obtained pursuant to Family Code Chapter 32. In the event that compliance with this subsection would result in the loss of Federal Funds to the state, HHSC may modify, or suspend this subsection to the extent necessary to prevent such loss of funds, provided that 45-day prior notification is provided to the Governor and the Legislative Budget Board.

[redacted]

[redacted]

Language such as this would allow for minors to be served without consent if federal funding would be in jeopardy. Guidance given by the Texas Department of Health specifies:

… providers and their parent organizations may serve clients who are funded through sources outside of the Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC). When requirements differ, policies and procedures concerning services for programs administered by HHSC must be distinguished from those governing family planning services provided through other contracts or funding sources, such as Title X*.*

For Utah this type of approach could be taken. Another approach to consider would be to allow an exemption for Title X funds only.

Please let me know if you have any follow up questions.

Thank you,
Laurie, Lynne and Nickee

There are two possible approaches to Congressman Moore's request. A federal statute change or a change at the state level. For a federal statute change to be "enacted", as we understand it, would require an actual act of congress. The specific federal code that would need to be addressed, and that applies here, is the Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A (https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). It states:

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

Another part of the federal code states this -

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

The Title X philosophy (and in federal code) highly encourages the inclusion of parents/guardians in these important life decisions, but minors will not be turned away at a Title X funded facility.

We do not have specific language to suggest regarding changes to this section of federal statute.

In the August 2020 letter denying Utah's waiver request, from the Deputy Assistant Secretary, Office of Population Affairs to Dr. Joseph Miner, it stated "The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver." A second idea would be to add language to this section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

For Utah -
There is a way to allow Title X funds into the state without changing the Utah parental consent law. We explored this option when we were tentatively offered Title X funds in 2020, but were not granted the "waiver" we requested, and were not able to receive the funds (Please refer to HB377, legislation passed in 2020).

When notifying leadership of the denial of Utah's waiver request, we put forward another suggestion for the Utah legislature and executive leadership to consider. Other states receiving Title X funds with similar parental notification or consent laws suspend state law for Title X funds only. A thorough example is one from Texas, who created an exemption to their parental notification law. (https://www.lbb.texas.gov/Documents/GAA/General_Appropriations_Act_2020_2021.pdf (see page 190/II-70, section 79(a)(2))

(a) Consent for Services.
(2) HHSC may distribute funds for medical, dental, psychological, or surgical treatment provided to a minor only if consent to treatment is obtained pursuant to Family Code Chapter 32. In the event that compliance with this subsection would result in the loss of Federal Funds to the state, HHSC may modify, or suspend this subsection to the extent necessary to prevent such loss of funds, provided that 45-day prior notification is provided to the Governor and the Legislative Budget Board.

Language such as this would allow for minors to be served without consent if federal funding would be in jeopardy. Guidance given by the Texas Department of Health specifies:

… providers and their parent organizations may serve clients who are funded through sources outside of the Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC). When requirements differ, policies and procedures concerning services for programs administered by HHSC must be distinguished from those governing family planning services provided through other contracts or funding sources, such as Title X*.*

For Utah this type of approach could be taken. Another approach to consider would be to allow an exemption for Title X funds only.

Marc -

My recollection is that the current draft of the legislative review sheet from Laurie & Lynne recommends that we do not submit a grant application because we are not eligible due to the state's parental consent requirement. Maybe we just need to ask that the legislative review sheet be rewritten to incorporate potential changes to state statute based on what Laurie provided last week in response to Congressman Moore's request.

What do you think?

David -

There are two possible approaches to Congressman Moore's request. A federal statute change or a change at the state level. For a federal statute change to be "enacted", as we understand it, would require an actual act of congress. The specific federal code that would need to be addressed, and that applies here, is the Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A (https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). It states:

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

Another part of the federal code states this -

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

The Title X philosophy (and in federal code) highly encourages the inclusion of parents/guardians in these important life decisions, but minors will not be turned away at a Title X funded facility.

We do not have specific language to suggest regarding changes to this section of federal statute.

[redacted]

In the August 2020 letter denying Utah's waiver request, from the Deputy Assistant Secretary, Office of Population Affairs to Dr. Joseph Miner, it stated "The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver." A second idea would be to add language to this section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

For Utah -
There is a way to allow Title X funds into the state without changing the Utah parental consent law. We explored this option when we were tentatively offered Title X funds in 2020, but were not granted the "waiver" we requested, and were not able to receive the funds (Please refer to HB377, legislation passed in 2020).

When notifying leadership of the denial of Utah's waiver request, we put forward another suggestion for the Utah legislature and executive leadership to consider. Other states receiving Title X funds with similar parental notification or consent laws suspend state law for Title X funds only. A thorough example is one from Texas, who created an exemption to their parental notification law. (https://www.lbb.texas.gov/Documents/GAA/General_Appropriations_Act_2020_2021.pdf (see page 190/II-70, section 79(a)(2))

(a) Consent for Services.
(2) HHSC may distribute funds for medical, dental, psychological, or surgical treatment provided to a minor only if consent to treatment is obtained pursuant to Family Code Chapter 32. In the event that compliance with this subsection would result in the loss of Federal Funds to the state, HHSC may modify, or suspend this subsection to the extent necessary to prevent such loss of funds, provided that 45-day prior notification is provided to the Governor and the Legislative Budget Board.

Language such as this would allow for minors to be served without consent if federal funding would be in jeopardy. Guidance given by the Texas Department of Health specifies:

… providers and their parent organizations may serve clients who are funded through sources outside of the Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC). When requirements differ, policies and procedures concerning services for programs administered by HHSC must be distinguished from those governing family planning services provided through other contracts or funding sources, such as Title X*.*

For Utah this type of approach could be taken. Another approach to consider would be to allow an exemption for Title X funds only.

Please let me know if you have any follow up questions.

Thank you,
Laurie, Lynne and Nickee

Is there specific language that you would recommend that we could provide to Congressman Moore that would accomplish this end? Is there federal rule or code that would need to be amended or grant requirements altered?

Will you please take a look at this and get back to Heather and I in the next day or two so we can respond back to the Governor's office and Congressman Moore's office.

David -

There are two possible approaches to Congressman Moore's request. A federal statute change or a change at the state level. For a federal statute change to be "enacted", as we understand it, would require an actual act of congress. The specific federal code that would need to be addressed, and that applies here, is the Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A (https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). It states:

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project
(4) Provide services in a manner that does not discriminate against any client based on religion, race, color, national origin, disability, age*, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, sex characteristics, number of pregnancies, or marital status.*

Another part of the federal code states this -

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

The Title X philosophy (and in federal code) highly encourages the inclusion of parents/guardians in these important life decisions, but minors will not be turned away at a Title X funded facility.

We do not have specific language to suggest regarding changes to this section of federal statute.

In the August 2020 letter denying Utah's waiver request, from the Deputy Assistant Secretary, Office of Population Affairs to Dr. Joseph Miner, it stated "The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver." A second idea would be to add language to this section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

For Utah -
There is a way to allow Title X funds into the state without changing the Utah parental consent law. We explored this option when we were tentatively offered Title X funds in 2020, but were not granted the "waiver" we requested, and were not able to receive the funds (Please refer to HB377, legislation passed in 2020).

When notifying leadership of the denial of Utah's waiver request, we put forward another suggestion for the Utah legislature and executive leadership to consider. Other states receiving Title X funds with similar parental notification or consent laws suspend state law for Title X funds only. A thorough example is one from Texas, who created an exemption to their parental notification law. (https://www.lbb.texas.gov/Documents/GAA/General_Appropriations_Act_2020_2021.pdf (see page 190/II-70, section 79(a)(2))

(a) Consent for Services.
(2) HHSC may distribute funds for medical, dental, psychological, or surgical treatment provided to a minor only if consent to treatment is obtained pursuant to Family Code Chapter 32. In the event that

[redacted]

[redacted]

compliance with this subsection would result in the loss of Federal Funds to the state, HHSC may modify, or suspend this subsection to the extent necessary to prevent such loss of funds, provided that 45-day prior notification is provided to the Governor and the Legislative Budget Board.

Language such as this would allow for minors to be served without consent if federal funding would be in jeopardy. Guidance given by the Texas Department of Health specifies:

… providers and their parent organizations may serve clients who are funded through sources outside of the Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC). When requirements differ, policies and procedures concerning services for programs administered by HHSC must be distinguished from those governing family planning services provided through other contracts or funding sources, such as Title X*.*

For Utah this type of approach could be taken. Another approach to consider would be to allow an exemption for Title X funds only.

Please let me know if you have any follow up questions.

Thank you,
Laurie, Lynne and Nickee

How to Stay Safe During A Heat Wave

California and the Western United States are experiencing an intense heat wave—shaping up to become one of the region's most extreme September heat events on record. Heat waves can be deadly, fueling wildfires and increasing the risks of heat stroke, other heat-related illnesses, asthma and more. PHI experts share ways to help your community prepare and stay safe:

- Understanding the Health Impacts of Extreme Heat: PHI's Dr. Gina Solomon joins KQED Forum to discuss extreme heat's health impacts and the elevated risks to vulnerable populations, including youth, older adults, pregnant people and farmworkers.
- How Buddy Programs Can Protect At-Risk Neighbors: Across the country, emergency response networks like buddy programs are connecting vulnerable community members with their neighbors who can check in on them during extreme heat events. "For elderly people who are low-income or people of color, these [heat] risks are cumulative," explains PHI's Dr. Linda Rudolph in USA Today.

[redacted]

- Five Tips to Stay Cool During Extreme Heat: In the Ventura County Star, PHI's Dr. Gina Solomon shares strategies to stay cool during a heat wave. For example, if you must be outside, remember to move slowly, take breaks, spend time in the shade and drink water.

Together Toward Health: How Collaborative Funding & Flexible Dollars Allow Quick Response to COVID-19 & Deep Focus on Vulnerable Communities

Together Toward Health (TTH) is a joint initiative administered by PHI and created by a collaborative of funders to deliver fast, flexible COVID response funding to California community-based organizations (CBOs), who serve as trusted experts in education, testing and vaccine access. The funding has minimal strings attached, allowing CBOs to focus on getting resources into communities within days and weeks instead of months—keeping people healthy and ultimately saving lives. In total, TTH has disbursed over $33 million to more than 500 CBOs, connecting 23 million people across the state with vital COVID resources rooted in how and where they live, organized by people they trust, and offered in the languages they speak.

Two new briefs explore the funding strategies behind TTH's success: A multi-funder collaborative that provides fast, flexible funds to CBOs with local knowledge and community trust. Find insights and lessons-learned, with recommendations for shared grantmaking efforts and guidance on how fast, flexible funding to local CBOs can build health, equity and community power—to stem COVID-19, and to address other critical issues facing communities today.

Championing Public Health Amid Legal & Legislative Threats: Framing & Language Recommendations

As communities continue to confront efforts to shrink the authority of public health officials and agencies, it's critical that practitioners and advocates are equipped to speak about why we need public health to keep our communities safe and healthy. A new report from PHI's Berkeley Media Studies Group and Real Language offers five key framing recommendations, along with messaging examples and sample language to answering difficult questions. One tip: Frame public health as indispensable, using metaphors when possible.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- White House officials said Americans will likely be able to move to a once-a-year inoculation cadence when it comes to COVID-19 vaccines, with reformulated shots based on current strains akin to the annual flu vaccine campaign. Ashish Jha, the White House's COVID-19 response coordinator, said a single dose "should provide a high degree of protection against serious illness all year" for most Americans, though Dr. Anthony Fauci noted that "dramatically different variants" could upend that plan. Georgia and Florida. Seniors on Medicare Advantage plans will be eligible for care under the partnership, while Walmart health staffers will be given access to Optum, the UnitedHealth-owned company that delivers data analytics on patients to providers. (Reuters)

- Following a two-year investigation into Juul Labs Inc.'s marketing and sales practices, the e-cigarette maker agreed to a $438.5 million settlement with 34 states and territories to be paid out over six to 10 years. The investigation found that Juul purposely marketed its products to children despite the illegality of selling e-cigarettes to youths, while the company said in a statement that the agreement serves as "a significant part of our ongoing commitment to resolve issues from the past." The updated booster shot is a reset for how to manage covid

Those who oppose authorization say that not enough studies have been done to prove that the bivalent version is superior to the original one. Distortions in Time Perception During Collective Trauma: Insights From a National Longitudinal Study During the COVID-19 Pandemic

Alison Holman et al., American Psychological Association

During the protracted collective trauma of the COVID-19 pandemic, lay of distorted perceptions of time (e.g., time slowing, days blurring together, uncertainty about the future) have been widespread. Known as "temporal disintegration" in psychiatric literature, these distortions are associated with negative mental health consequences. However, the prevalence and predictors of temporal disintegration are poorly understood. We examined perceptions of time passing and their associations with lifetime stress and trauma and pandemic-related secondary stress as COVID-19 spread across the United States.

Please see Will's follow up about Planned Parenthood getting Title X dollars. Is the code relating to parent consent only applicable to the department?

I would appreciate a response as soon as possible. Or, if David or Heather want to directly correspond that would probably be easier than having me in the middle.

Thank you for this, Tracy. I will work to develop some text to amend this issue and run it by your team to see if it would correct this issue.

I did have a quick question. It appears that in 2022, Planned Parenthood of Utah received funding through this grant program. https://opa.hhs.gov/grant-programs/title-x-service-grants/current-title-x-service-grantees/fy2022-title-X-service-grant-awards

How exactly were they able to access Title X funds? Is it just that the state itself is unable to access funds but Planned Parenthood still can?

Will,

I am so sorry for the delay in responding. That is my fault.

While our staff did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. I suspect you are aware of these but they are listed below. Our previous recommendation to amend the confidentiality language to allow states to access the funds at a prorated amount is still a good possible solution. The two regulations relevant are as follows:

Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A
(https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). :

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

(4) Provide services in a manner that does not discriminate against any client based on religion, race, color, national origin, disability, age*, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, sex characteristics, number of pregnancies, or marital status.*

§ 59.10 Confidentiality

[redacted]

[redacted]

(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: “The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver.” Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

I hope this is helpful. Again, I apologize for the delay in getting you this information. Between travel and COVID, this response was not as timely as is typical for our department or for me.

The initial thought is that the language could clearly indicate that state's like Utah that require parental consent can still access these funds, even if a prorated amount. The suggestion from one of our deputies is the following: "alter federal law in such a way to allow states which require parental consent to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing such states to remove or modify parental consent law."

Tracy – if there are any specific changes to the regs in Title X family planning grants that you would suggest that would ameliorate the fact that Utah is ineligible, that would be very helpful. Additionally, I think we may have an interest in expanding Title X grants to allow for adoption costs to be included in what the funds could be used for. If you have recommendations on how the grant could be amended to allow for this given the funding stream is currently more narrow, that would be helpful as well.

I think it would be a worthy effort to alter federal law in such a way to allow states like Utah to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing us to change our parental consent law. As you know, the HHS leadership under the prior administration was eager to get those funds to us but couldn't find a way to do so without a change in Utah law, something our legislature was understandably wary of doing. I think the first step would be a conversation with the leadership of Utah's Department of Health and Human Services. I've copied Tracy Gruber, the Executive Director of the Department. She may want to pull in Lynne Nilson and others from our Bureau of Maternal and Child Health, who were involved in our Title X application a few years ago and could help us in drafting appropriate language, but I'll defer to Tracy on whom to pull into that meeting.

Hi Will,

Thanks for reaching out, and congratulations on the new job with Rep. Moore. I'd be happy to chat next Tuesday. I'm pretty flexible between 10-12 MT and after 2:30 MT. Do any of those times work for you?

And yes, we went through quite a process over the past several years to apply for the Title X funding, in part based on the strong encouragement of the Trump Administration HHS. However it was always understood that we couldn't get around the statutory requirements surrounding our parental consent requirements, and the legislature had no interest in adjusting or loosening that requirement. So my understanding is that we would not pursue Title X again, but I'll check. If anything has changed then I can connect you with our Department of Health staff who worked on the application.

David -

There are two possible approaches to Congressman Moore's request. A federal statute change or a change at the state level. For a federal statute change to be "enacted", as we understand it, would require an actual act of congress. The specific federal code that would need to be addressed, and that applies here, is the Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A (https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). It states:

[redacted]

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project
(4) Provide services in a manner that does not discriminate against any client based on religion, race, color, national origin, disability, age, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, sex characteristics, number of pregnancies, or marital status.

Another part of the federal code states this -

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

The Title X philosophy (and in federal code) highly encourages the inclusion of parents/guardians in these important life decisions, but minors will not be turned away at a Title X funded facility.

We do not have specific language to suggest regarding changes to this section of federal statute.

In the August 2020 letter denying Utah's waiver request, from the Deputy Assistant Secretary, Office of Population Affairs to Dr. Joseph Miner, it stated "The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver." A second idea would be to add language to this section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

For Utah -
There is a way to allow Title X funds into the state without changing the Utah parental consent law. We explored this option when we were tentatively offered Title X funds in 2020, but were not granted the "waiver" we requested, and were not able to receive the funds (Please refer to HB377, legislation passed in 2020).

When notifying leadership of the denial of Utah's waiver request, we put forward another suggestion for the Utah legislature and executive leadership to consider. Other states receiving Title X funds with similar parental notification or consent laws suspend state law for Title X funds only. A thorough example is one from Texas, who created an exemption to their parental notification law. (https://www.lbb.texas.gov/Documents/GAA/General_Appropriations_Act_2020_2021.pdf (see page 190/II-70, section 79(a)(2))

(a) Consent for Services.
(2) HHSC may distribute funds for medical, dental, psychological, or surgical treatment provided to a minor only if consent to treatment is obtained pursuant to Family Code Chapter 32. In the event that compliance with this subsection would result in the loss of Federal Funds to the state, HHSC may modify, or suspend this subsection to the extent necessary to prevent such loss of funds, provided that 45-day prior notification is provided to the Governor and the Legislative Budget Board.

Language such as this would allow for minors to be served without consent if federal funding would be in jeopardy. Guidance given by the Texas Department of Health specifies:

… providers and their parent organizations may serve clients who are funded through sources outside of the Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC). When requirements differ, policies and procedures concerning services for programs administered by HHSC must be distinguished from those governing family planning services provided through other contracts or funding sources, such as Title X.

[redacted]

For Utah this type of approach could be taken. Another approach to consider would be to allow an exemption for Title X funds only.

Please let me know if you have any follow up questions.

Thank you,
Laurie, Lynne and Nickee

I spoke with Laurie and Lynne.
Planned Parenthood of Utah has applied for and received this funding for decades---since the 80s.

We don't fully know or understand federal statute and pre-emption factors well enough to know how they interact with state law. Planned Parenthood would be better positioned to speak for themselves about their legal authority to accept these funds, but believe the precedence comes from these two cases:
Planned Parenthood Association of Utah v. Matheson
Planned Parenthood Association of Utah v. Dandoy

Thank you for this, Tracy. I will work to develop some text to amend this issue and run it by your team to see if it would correct this issue.

I did have a quick question. It appears that in 2022, Planned Parenthood of Utah received funding through this grant program. https://opa.hhs.gov/grant-programs/title-x-service-grants/current-title-x-service-grantees/fy2022-title-X-service-grant-awards

How exactly were they able to access Title X funds? Is it just that the state itself is unable to access funds but Planned Parenthood still can?

Will,

I am so sorry for the delay in responding. That is my fault.

While our staff did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. I suspect you are aware of these but they are listed below. Our previous recommendation to amend the confidentiality language to allow states to access the funds at a prorated amount is still a good possible solution. The two regulations relevant are as follows:

Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A
(https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). :

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

§ 59.10 Confidentiality

(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: “The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver.” Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

I hope this is helpful. Again, I apologize for the delay in getting you this information. Between travel and COVID, this response was not as timely as is typical for our department or for me.

The initial thought is that the language could clearly indicate that state's like Utah that require parental consent can still access these funds, even if a prorated amount. The suggestion from one of our deputies is the following: "alter federal law in such a way to allow states which require parental consent to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing such states to remove or modify parental consent law."

Hey there,

Tracy – if there are any specific changes to the regs in Title X family planning grants that you would suggest that would ameliorate the fact that Utah is ineligible, that would be very helpful. Additionally, I think we may have an interest in expanding Title X grants to allow for adoption costs to be included in what the funds could be used for. If you have recommendations on how the grant could be amended to allow for this given the funding stream is currently more narrow, that would be helpful as well.

Will,

Good to hear from you, and thanks for picking this back up where we left it. I think it would be a worthy effort to alter federal law in such a way to allow states like Utah to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing us to change our parental consent law. As you know, the HHS leadership under the prior administration was eager to get those funds to us but couldn't find a way to do so without a change in Utah law, something our legislature was understandably wary of doing. I think the first step would be a conversation with the leadership of Utah's Department of Health and Human Services. I've copied Tracy Gruber, the Executive Director of the Department. She may want to pull in Lynne Nilson and others from our Bureau of Maternal and Child Health, who

Will,

I am so sorry for the delay in responding. That is my fault.

While our staff did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. I suspect you are aware of these but they are listed below. Our previous recommendation to amend the confidentiality language to allow states to access the funds at a prorated amount is still a good possible solution. The two regulations relevant are as follows:

Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A
(https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). :

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: “The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver.” Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

I hope this is helpful. Again, I apologize for the delay in getting you this information. Between travel and COVID, this response was not as timely as is typical for our department or for me.

Hi Will,

Thanks for reaching out, and congratulations on the new job with Rep. Moore. I'd be happy to chat next Tuesday. I'm pretty flexible between 10-12 MT and after 2:30 MT. Do any of those times work for you?

And yes, we went through quite a process over the past several years to apply for the Title X funding, in part based on the strong encouragement of the Trump Administration HHS. However it was always understood that we couldn't get around the statutory requirements surrounding our parental consent requirements, and the legislature had no interest in adjusting or loosening that requirement. So my understanding is that we would not pursue Title X again, but I'll check. If anything has changed then I can connect you with our Department of Health staff who worked on the application.

We don't fully know or understand federal statute and pre-emption factors well enough to know how they interact with state law. Planned Parenthood Association of Utah v. Matheson

Thank you for this, Tracy. I will work to develop some text to amend this issue and run it by your team to see if it would correct this issue.

I did have a quick question. It appears that in 2022, Planned Parenthood of Utah received funding through this grant program. https://opa.hhs.gov/grant-programs/title-x-service-grants/current-title-x-service-grantees/fy2022-title-X-service-grant-awards

How exactly were they able to access Title X funds? Is it just that the state itself is unable to access funds but Planned Parenthood still can?

Will,

I am so sorry for the delay in responding. That is my fault.

While our staff did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. I suspect you are aware of these but they are listed below.

[redacted]

[redacted]

Our previous recommendation to amend the confidentiality language to allow states to access the funds at a prorated amount is still a good possible solution. The two regulations relevant are as follows:

Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A (https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). :

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

§ 59.10 Confidentiality

(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: “The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver.” Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

I hope this is helpful. Again, I apologize for the delay in getting you this information. Between travel and COVID, this response was not as timely as is typical for our department or for me.

The initial thought is that the language could clearly indicate that state's like Utah that require parental consent can still access these funds, even if a prorated amount. The suggestion from one of our deputies is the following: "alter federal law in such a way to allow states which require parental consent to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing such states to remove or modify parental consent law."

Hey there,

Tracy – if there are any specific changes to the regs in Title X family planning grants that you would suggest that would ameliorate the fact that Utah is ineligible, that would be very helpful. Additionally, I think we may have an interest in expanding Title X grants to allow for adoption costs to be included in what the funds could be used for. If you have recommendations on how the grant could be amended to allow for this given the funding stream is currently more narrow, that would be helpful as well.

Will,

Good to hear from you, and thanks for picking this back up where we left it. I think it would be a worthy effort to alter federal law in such a way to allow states like Utah to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing us to change our parental consent law. As you know, the HHS leadership under the prior administration was eager to get those funds to us but couldn't find a way to do so without a change in Utah law, something our legislature was understandably wary of doing. I think the first step would be a conversation with the leadership of Utah's Department of Health and Human Services. I've copied Tracy Gruber, the Executive Director of the Department. She may want to pull in Lynne Nilson and others from our Bureau of Maternal and Child Health, who were involved in our Title X application a few years ago and could help us in drafting appropriate language, but I'll defer to Tracy on whom to pull into that meeting.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- Senate Republicans threw cold water on the White House's request for $22.4 billion in COVID-19 funding and $4.5 billion to battle monkeypox, telling reporters that there remains unspent money already allotted for the pandemic fight. Senate Minority Whip John Thune (R-S.D.) said the GOP has "zero interest" in additional COVID-19 or monkeypox funding and warned

Democrats against attaching the aid to legislation to fund the government past Sept. 30. (Politico)

- A federal judge in Texas ruled that an Affordable Care Act provision that requires businesses' insurance plans to cover the HIV prevention drug PrEP is a violation of companies' religious freedom, in addition to raising questions about the legality of all mandatory coverage of preventive health care. The plaintiff, Braidwood Management Inc., argued that coverage of PrEP "facilitates and encourages homosexual behavior, intravenous drug use, and sexual activity outside of marriage between one man and one woman," while U.S. District Judge Reed O'Connor wrote that he plans to weigh in soon on whether private businesses can be compelled to cover contraceptive services. (Roll Call)

- A panel of Food and Drug Administration advisers voted 7-2 to recommend agency approval of Amylyx Pharmaceuticals Inc.'s ALS drug AMX0035, a rare reversal after the committee voted 6-4 against the drug in March over what it said was a lack of evidence proving its efficacy. The FDA doesn't have to follow the panel's recommendation, but a decision from the agency is due by Sept. 29. (The Wall Street Journal)

- A study from Harvard researchers published in JAMA Psychiatry found that people who reported feelings of stress, anxiety, loneliness, depression or concern about COVID-19 before becoming infected with the disease had a 32% to 46% increased risk of developing long COVID symptoms, while those that reported at least two types of psychological distress faced a 50% elevated risk. H.R. 7213 Would Help Preserve Reliable, Equitable & Trusted Access to Pharmacist Care for America's Seniors

Nearly 200 groups support H.R. 7213, the Equitable Community Access to Pharmacist Services Act. The bipartisan legislation would help preserve vaccination, testing, and treatment services in pharmacies for Medicare beneficiaries. Research shows the majority of older Americans want access to these services at the pharmacy. The Future of Pharmacy Care Coalition stands with seniors and diverse organizations in supporting the legislation - including groups representing patients, seniors, rural and urban communities, health systems, pharmacies, and pharmacists.

CORONAVIRUS

Covid Relapse Symptoms, Positive Tests After Paxlovid Are Common, Study Says

Carey Goldberg, Bloomberg

Resurgence of Covid-19 symptoms in patients treated with Pfizer Inc.'s Paxlovid appeared far more common than has been reported, and rebounding patients still risked spreading the disease, doctors said in a report on a series of cases in a top medical journal.

Republicans Try to Jump-Start Probes Into Biden's Covid Response

Alex Ruoff and Jeannie Baumann, Bloomberg Law

Republicans want to use a procedural tool—known as a resolution of inquiry—in the coming weeks to advance investigations into areas ranging from Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra's role as a Covid adviser to oversight of research conducted in China at the start of the pandemic.

A Key to Long Covid Is Virus Lingering in the Body, Scientists Say

Sumathi Reddy, The Wall Street Journal

New research has found the spike protein of the SARS-CoV-2 virus in the blood of long Covid patients up to a year after infection but not in people who have fully recovered from Covid. Virus has also been found in tissues including the brain, lungs, and lining of the gut, according to scientists and studies

Biden's next Covid challenge: How and when to wind down his task force

Adam Cancryn, Politico

The pandemic may not be over. But there's a growing sense among officials inside the White House that their days on the front lines of the Covid fight may be numbered.

Doctors are taking it on themselves to figure out long Covid

Krista Mahr and Megan Messerly, Politico

Dozens of health care practitioners from across the country signed onto a recent Zoom call to talk about pain. Specifically, how much pain their patients with long Covid were in, what kind, and what — if anything — they could do about it.

Can Exercise Strengthen Your Immunity?

Knvul Sheikh, The New York Times

When researchers reviewed 16 studies of people who stayed physically active during the pandemic, they found that working out was associated with a lower risk of infection as well as a lower likelihood of severe Covid-19. The analysis, published last month in the British Journal of Sports Medicine, has generated a lot of enthusiasm among exercise scientists, who say the findings could lead to updated guidelines for physical activity and health care policy that revolves around exercise as medicine.

Hochul Lifts Mask Mandate on N.Y.C. Public Transit

Ana Ley and Luis Ferré-Sadurní, The New York Times

Riders on public transit are no longer required to wear masks in New York, Gov. Kathy Hochul announced Wednesday, bringing the state in line with other transportation systems nationwide that relaxed their rules in April when a federal judge in Florida overturned a nationwide mandate.

Pfizer donates Paxlovid to group targeting COVID in poorer countries

Jennifer Rigby, Reuters

Pfizer (PFE.N) has donated 100,000 courses of its COVID-19 antiviral treatment Paxlovid to a new group aiming to improve access to the drug in low and middle-income countries.

4 things to know about the bivalent booster campaign rollout

David Lim and Katherine Ellen Foley, Politico

The Biden administration's fall campaign for updated Covid-19 boosters is ramping up ahead of the flu season, with pharmacies adding appointments for the newly authorized shots that officials believe will offer greater protection against currently circulating variants.

Biden's Omicron Booster Campaign Faces Fatigue, Efficacy Doubts

Celine Castronuovo, Bloomberg Law

The Biden administration should make infection severity a focus of its Covid-19 booster campaign as limited efficacy data and cost-shifting threatens to hinder uptake of the latest shot, infectious disease doctors and policy analysts say.

A Texas court gives Democrats get another chance to campaign on health care

Caitlin Owens, Axios

Weaponizing the GOP's 2017 attempt to repeal and replace the ACA was hugely successful for Democrats in the 2018 midterms. Republicans have been eager to talk about anything but the ACA since then, but Judge Reed O'Connor has twice now issued decisions that put key tenets of the law at risk.

Seriously, Flu Could Be Bad This Year

Katherine J. Wu, The Atlantic

Now, as the weather once again chills in this hemisphere and the winter holidays loom, experts are nervously looking ahead. After skipping two seasons in the Southern Hemisphere, flu spent 2022 hopping across the planet's lower half with more fervor than it's had since the COVID crisis began. And of the three years of the pandemic that have played out so far, this one is previewing the strongest signs yet of a rough flu season ahead.

Michigan judge: State's 1931 near-total abortion ban unconstitutional

Shawna Chen, Axios

By criminalizing abortion, the ban "prevents a woman who seeks to exercise a constitutional right from controlling her ability to work or to go to school, and thereby determining for herself the shape of her present and future life," Michigan Court of Claims Judge Elizabeth L. Gleicher wrote in the opinion.

Pregnant women with high stress fluctuations can affect the baby after birth

Megan Marples, CNN

Being pregnant is tough enough, but with the added pressure of work, a shaky economy and the risks of Covid-19, it can seem overwhelming. But if it's possible, expectant mothers should try to take stock of their stress and reach out for help to reduce how often their newborn is likely to experience negative emotions, according to a new study.

Opioid Treatment for Monkeypox Means Balancing US Health Crises

Jeannie Baumann, Bloomberg Law

Monkeypox patients seeking relief from painful lesions should only take opioids when alternatives don't work and after an evaluation for their risk of addiction or misuse, public health leaders said.

Overlapping Public Health Emergencies

Life expectancy in the US fell for the second year in a row, driven largely by COVID-19 and drug overdose deaths. This contrasts with other high-income countries where life expectancy has rebounded. As the United States continues to respond to the pandemic, the emergence of monkeypox and polio highlights how overlapping emergencies strain the public health workforce and threaten multiple vaccination campaigns.

- Boosters: Newly authorized COVID boosters are now available. This shot is the first update to the vaccine targeting the omicron BA.5 subvariant. Federal officials say going forward COVID boosters will be treated as an annual shot, like the flu.
- Monkeypox Cases: It is not yet clear if the slowing pace of new monkeypox cases in the US will continue. The current at-risk population for monkeypox is mostly gay and bisexual men. Learn more about the frustration and pain patients have experienced over finding care.
- Vaccinating Against Monkeypox: The Biden administration announced a new equity program to improve access to vaccines. Black Americans have made up nearly a third of monkeypox cases in recent weeks but have only received about 10% of vaccine doses.
- Poliovirus: The return of polio to the US is a wake-up call to get vaccinated against the once-defeated virus. Learn if you received the polio vaccine and are protected against the virus.

Resources & Initiatives:

- Learn more about the new COVID booster shots and how to get up to date from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).
- The Caring Foundation of Texas' Care Vans are deployed to provide free vaccinations to students in the Dallas and Houston area.
- Learn what scientists know about how monkeypox spreads and about monkeypox and kids.
- Learn how to slow the spread of monkeypox from this publication from Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts.
- The CDC recommends that everyone 6 months and older get vaccinated against the flu, noting that fall vaccine campaigns will be complicated with both the flu and fall boosters being rolled out.

Register for NIHCM's upcoming webinar on maternal mortality to hear experts discuss the impact of changes to reproductive rights and new approaches that may improve maternal health!

Incarcerated People's Health

It is estimated that there are currently close to 2 million people incarcerated across the country. Between 1980 and 2014, the incarceration rate in the US went up by 220%. Incarcerated individuals are disproportionately impacted by chronic health conditions, mental illness, and substance use before, during, and after incarceration. While incarcerated individuals in the US have a constitutional right to receive health care, many do not have access to appropriate care.

- Health Care in Prisons: Roughly 63% of people with a history of mental illness do not receive adequate treatment while incarcerated. For incarcerated individuals that are pregnant, around 58,000 people a year, there are no federal standards for policies dictating abortion, maternal, and reproductive care. The overturning of Roe v. Wade may make these services even more restrictive or nonexistent.

- Infectious Diseases: Compared to the general population, infectious diseases are more prevalent among incarcerated populations. As of August 31, 2022, there have been at least 616,478 confirmed COVID-19 cases and 2,901 related deaths among this population. Prison health experts are now concerned that monkeypox will spread rapidly through the prison systems just as COVID-19 has. As of August 2, 2022, there were 533 confirmed monkeypox cases in an Illinois county jail, the first prison nationally to report any cases; since then, cases have been reported in prisons in Texas, Florida, and California as well.

- Climate Change and Living Conditions: Climate change is expected to bring increasingly hot summers, putting many incarcerated individuals at risk of heat-related illnesses. In Texas, which is one of at least 13 states without universal air conditioning in state prisons, more than two-thirds of the state's 100 prisons do not have air conditioning, forcing prisoners and staff to live and work in triple-digit temperatures. Since 1998, at least 23 incarcerated people in Texas have died from heat-related illnesses.

Resources & Initiatives:

- NIHCM Grantee, Vox, published an article on health care in prisons and the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic.

- The Highmark Foundation and several other organizations provided grants to support meeting the health needs of individuals released from incarceration and connecting individuals to social supports.

- The Council on Criminal Justice released briefs on health care in the criminal justice system and potential new reentry policies through their Health and Reentry Project.

The Opioid Crisis and Other Drug Use

NIHCM's infographic on opioid overdose deaths allows readers to visualize how the crisis has both grown in magnitude since 2000 and changed in character. Synthetic opioids, fentanyl in particular, were involved in 83% of opioid deaths in 2020. In addition to the growing overdose and addiction crisis, there is also worsening substance use among young adults.

- Harm Reduction: There is a need to expand access to naloxone to ensure it is in the hands of the people who are most likely to experience or witness an overdose. Additionally, needle exchange programs like this one in rural Nevada, and supervised injection sites can save lives.
- Treatment: Experts say that the benefits of expanding access to methadone outweigh any risks and a recent report outlines how federal regulators can remove barriers to treatment. A recent study shares how pandemic telehealth reforms increased access to opioid use disorder medications.
- Young Adults: The most recent federal survey on drug use found record-high use of marijuana and psychedelics among young Americans ages 19 to 30. There was also an increase in nicotine vaping and excessive alcohol consumption. The stress of the pandemic has likely contributed to this rise.

Resources & Initiatives:

- See resources from Shatterproof for people struggling with addiction, such as support groups and where to get naloxone.
- A special report released by NIHCM grantee, STAT, examines an overdose cluster that killed eight Black people in St. Louis.

The pandemic's resulting isolation and online schooling exacerbated youth mental health challenges.

Mental Health in America

As millions of Americans return to the workplace after nearly three years of the COVID-19 pandemic, many report negative mental health implications. Among children, the pandemic's resulting isolation and online schooling exacerbated youth mental health challenges. For many American students, there is anxiety surrounding returning to the classroom on a regular basis.

- Workplace Mental Health: Stress in the workplace can lead to decreased effectiveness and productivity. A recent survey found that nearly 71% of workers agree that employers are more concerned about employee mental health now than in the past. Many districts have turned to addressing the mental health challenges of educators as well as the children, aiming to reduce stress and burnout.

- Return to School: Poor mental health in adolescents is associated with lower productivity, school attendance, and higher rates of dropping out of school, all of which can impact future educational and career outcomes. A recent survey reported that 74% of parents believe schools should offer mental health days. However, several barriers including lack of awareness, social stigma, and economic challenges may inhibit the use of these days.

- Mental Illness is Not a Predictor of Violence Towards Others: While mental illness is often blamed as the cause of shooting events, it is not a useful predictor of violence towards others. Instead, recent research has shown that life crises are better predictors, suggesting that violence could potentially be averted.

Resources & Initiatives:

- Learn more about understanding what to look for and how to help with employee mental health and how leaders can encourage mental health in the workplace.

- Through its Social Impact program, Premera Blue Cross donated $3 million to address health inequities, mental health, and substance use disorder across Washington and Alaska.

- NIHCM recently released infographics on mental health in the US, detailing the importance of prioritizing mental health care and the stigma surrounding gun violence and mental health.

- Blue Cross Blue Shield of Arizona recently pledged over $1.3 million to organizations addressing mental health in the state, including helping to launch a Youth Mental Health First Aid program.

- NIHCM Grantee, PBS NewsHour, recently released a segment on mental health, focused on suicide, guns, and reducing stigma.

- Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina expanded its behavioral health network, strengthening access for rural areas and pediatric care.

Waukegan grocery store owners give subtle push for better options; 'We want to give them the food they like for a healthy lifestyle'
9/7/2022 — Chicago, IL
Nydia Gonzalez-Carson and her husband, Adam Carson, took over management of the Waukegan location of her family's 41-year-old business — Supermercado Gonzalez — in November of 2020 with the goal of using it as a vehicle to make their community better. With a variety of ideas, Gonzalez-Carson said they wanted to find ways to help members of the community eat healthier.

This past Juneteenth weekend, chef Chris Williams stood in the summer heat at Bates Allen Park in Kendleton for a ribbon-cutting ceremony. A group of elected officials and community members gathered at the site of a garden. At the time, it was only a few acres of fresh soil, but during this month's harvest, it's filled with tomatoes, okra, cucumbers, and peas that will feed the residents of the historically Black town about an hour southwest of downtown Houston.

Breast cancer: Less sitting, more physical activity may lower risk
9/7/2022
Physical activity and less sedentary time have been linked to a lower risk for breast cancer in observational studies. While research suggests a generally consistent link between breast cancer risk and physical activity, the link between sedentary time and breast cancer risk is less clear and less well-studied.

Can exercise strengthen your immunity?
9/7/2022
You've probably heard the advice: One of the best things you can do to keep healthy — especially as cold and flu season creeps up — is stay physically active. This folk wisdom has been around for ages, but until recently, researchers did not have much data to support the idea. Now, scientists studying risk factors related to Covid-19 have turned up some preliminary evidence about the link between regular exercise and better immune defenses against disease.

Exercise improves brain outcomes in overweight or obese children
Intelligence and cognitive flexibility are improved through exercise in overweight or obese children, according to a recent study. From 1975 to 2016, overweight and obesity in children rose from 4% to 18%. This has led to health concerns, as overweight and obesity has been associated with poorer cognitive and brain health among pediatric patients. As a potential countermeasure to these adverse events, researchers studied the effects of exercise on cognitive function.

Thank you for this, Tracy. I will work to develop some text to amend this issue and run it by your team to see if it would correct this issue.

I did have a quick question. It appears that in 2022, Planned Parenthood of Utah received funding through this grant program. https://opa.hhs.gov/grant-programs/title-x-service-grants/current-title-x-service-grantees/fy2022-title-X-service-grant-awards

How exactly were they able to access Title X funds? Is it just that the state itself is unable to access funds but Planned Parenthood still can?

While our staff did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. I suspect you are aware of these but they are listed below. Our previous recommendation to amend the confidentiality language to allow states to access the funds at a prorated amount is still a good possible solution. The two regulations relevant are as follows:

Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A
(https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). :

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

(4) Provide services in a manner that does not discriminate against any client based on religion, race, color, national origin, disability, age, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, sex characteristics, number of pregnancies, or marital status.

[redacted]

[redacted]

§ 59.10 Confidentiality

(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: “The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver.” Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

I hope this is helpful. Again, I apologize for the delay in getting you this information. Between travel and COVID, this response was not as timely as is typical for our department or for me.

The initial thought is that the language could clearly indicate that state's like Utah that require parental consent can still access these funds, even if a prorated amount. The suggestion from one of our deputies is the following: "alter federal law in such a way to allow states which require parental consent to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing such states to remove or modify parental consent law."

I think it would be a worthy effort to alter federal law in such a way to allow states like Utah to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing us to change our parental consent law. As you know, the HHS leadership under the prior administration was eager to get those funds to us but couldn't find a way to do so without a change in Utah law, something our legislature was understandably wary of doing. I think the first step would be a conversation with the leadership of Utah's Department of Health and Human Services. I've copied Tracy Gruber, the Executive Director of the Department. She may want to pull in Lynne Nilson and others from our Bureau of Maternal and Child Health, who were involved in our Title X application a few years ago and could help us in drafting appropriate language, but I'll defer to Tracy on whom to pull into that meeting.

I am looking into developing leg text for a proposal that would loosen statutory requirements so that Utah would be able to access these funds. Additionally, I may want to include a provision that would allow these funds to be used as grants to assist families seeking to adopt, which would expand the definition of "family planning" in a sense. I am curious if you have thoughts on where to best direct funds to ensure that goal could be achieved, and if you have any general thoughts on this.

Hi Will,

Thanks for reaching out, and congratulations on the new job with Rep. Moore. I'd be happy to chat next Tuesday. I'm pretty flexible between 10-12 MT and after 2:30 MT. Do any of those times work for you?

And yes, we went through quite a process over the past several years to apply for the Title X funding, in part based on the strong encouragement of the Trump Administration HHS. However it was always understood that we couldn't get around the statutory requirements surrounding our parental consent requirements, and the legislature had no interest in adjusting or loosening that requirement. So my understanding is that we would not pursue Title X again, but I'll check. If anything has changed then I can connect you with our Department of Health staff who worked on the application.

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: “The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver.” Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

I hope this is helpful. Again, I apologize for the delay in getting you this information. Between travel and COVID, this response was not as timely as is typical for our department or for me.

And yes, we went through quite a process over the past several years to apply for the Title X funding, in part based on the strong encouragement of the Trump Administration HHS. However it was always understood that we couldn't get around the statutory requirements surrounding our parental consent requirements, and the legislature had no interest in adjusting or loosening that requirement. Planned Parenthood of Utah has applied for and received this funding for decades---since the 80s.

We don't fully know or understand federal statute and pre-emption factors well enough to know how they interact with state law. Planned Parenthood would be better positioned to speak for themselves about their legal authority to accept these funds, but believe the precedence comes from these two cases:

Will,

I am so sorry for the delay in responding. That is my fault.

While our staff did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. I suspect you are aware of these but they are listed below. Our previous recommendation to amend the confidentiality language to allow states to access the funds at a prorated amount is still a good possible solution. The two regulations relevant are as follows:

Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A
(https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). :

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: “The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver.” Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

FRAC Applauds the Biden Administration for Improvements to Public Charge Rule, Calls on Congress to Pass Lift the Bar Act to Further Mitigate Hunger

Statement attributed to Luis Guardia, president, Food Research & Action Center (FRAC)

WASHINGTON, September 8, 2022 — The Food Research & Action Center (FRAC) commends the Biden administration for issuing a new final public charge rule that provides confirmation to eligible immigrant families that they can access and benefit from the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), Medicaid, and housing assistance without negative repercussions to their immigration status.

The new Department of Homeland Security public charge rule unequivocally states that, applying for or receiving SNAP, Medicaid, and housing benefits will not be considered in a public charge determination. This new rule signifies that eligible immigrant families should not be penalized for seeking vital assistance that will not only improve their health, nutrition, and well-being, but also lead to a more compassionate, productive, and thriving nation for all.

While this is an essential step in mitigating hunger among immigrant families, there is still much work to be done to ensure all families, regardless of immigration status, can access the nutrition they need to thrive. FRAC now looks forward to working with state agencies, anti-hunger partners, and the Protecting Immigrant Families coalition to spread awareness about immigrant eligibility for SNAP and other nutrition programs, and calls on Congress to pass the LIFT the Bar Act to rescind arbitrary and harsh eligibility rules that terminate, impede, or undercut SNAP access and exacerbate racial and health inequities.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The Department of Homeland Security said immigrants' Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program coverage status will not be taken into account when determining green card eligibility, reversing the so-called public charge policy put in place by the Trump administration. The Trump-era directive, intended to limit immigration, dramatically lowered Medicaid enrollment among immigrants and their families, and Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra said the rule change should ensure that those who qualify for Medicaid, CHIP and other health programs will be able to "receive the care they need without fear of jeopardizing their immigration status." (Modern Healthcare)

- In closing arguments for the Department of Justice's antitrust case against UnitedHealth Group Inc. over the insurer's $13 billion acquisition of Change Healthcare Inc., a federal judge pushed back on the DOJ's assertion that the deal would stifle competition and curb innovation in payer markets. U.S. District Judge Carl J. Nichols, who is expected to issue a ruling in the coming weeks, also pressed the DOJ on why UnitedHealth's planned divestiture of parts of its claims-processing business wouldn't allay competition concerns. (The Wall Street Journal)

- The White House said it will buy more than $100 million at-home COVID-19 tests from U.S. manufacturers, in what it characterized as a short-term solution intended to shore up capacity ahead of a potential testing demand surge in the fall and winter. The Biden administration, whose congressional request for another $22.4 billion in pandemic funding is almost certain to be rejected by Senate Republicans, did not say whether the purchase means that Americans will again be able to order free COVID-19 tests from a government website. (Reuters)

- A Centers for Disease Control and Prevention study found that HIV-infected people who contract monkeypox are hospitalized with the disease more than twice as often as those who do not have HIV. (CNBC) Dr. John T. Brooks, chief medical officer for the CDC's monkeypox response, said the report is a "call to action" and federal officials are now likely to expand vaccine recommendations, potentially to include HIV-positive men and people recently diagnosed with sexually transmitted infections. Study Shows Rising Demand for Mental Health Treatment During Pandemic
U.S. News & World Report

H.R. 7213 Would Help Preserve Reliable, Equitable & Trusted Access to Pharmacist Care for America's Seniors

Nearly 200 groups support H.R. 7213, the Equitable Community Access to Pharmacist Services Act. The bipartisan legislation would help preserve vaccination, testing, and treatment services in pharmacies for Medicare beneficiaries. Research shows the majority of older Americans want access to these services at the pharmacy. The Future of Pharmacy Care Coalition stands with seniors and diverse organizations in supporting the legislation - including groups representing patients, seniors, rural and urban communities, health systems, pharmacies, and pharmacists.

CORONAVIRUS

'Don't wait' to get the new Covid shot, White House says
Erika Edwards, NBC News
The Biden administration is making a major push to get the updated Covid vaccine in arms ahead of what could be another fall surge of the virus as children head back to the classroom, and employees return to the workplace.

Doubling up on Covid, flu shots may have downside, experts say
Helen Branswell, Stat News

The protection generated by influenza vaccines erodes pretty quickly over the course of a flu season. A vaccine dose given in early September may offer limited protection if the flu season doesn't peak until February or even March, as it did during the unusually late 2021-2022 season.

Long COVID's link to suicide: scientists warn of hidden crisis
Julie Steenhuysen and Jennifer Rigby, Reuters
There is no authoritative data on the frequency of suicides among sufferers. Several scientists from organizations including the U.S. National Institutes of Health and Britain's data-collection agency are beginning to study a potential link following evidence of increased cases of depression and suicidal thoughts among people with long COVID, as well as a growing number of known deaths.

Return to school is driving up Covid-19 cases in kids, but there are more tools to keep them safe this year
Deidre McPhillips, CNN
New cases reported among children in the last week of August were 14% higher than they were two weeks earlier, according to data tracked by the American Academy of Pediatrics. They jumped even more in the South, where classes have been in session for weeks. In contrast, overall cases for all ages were down about 17% in the same timeframe.

Dirty Air Could Raise COVID Risks for Poor Pregnant Women
Cara Murez, HealthDay
While exposure to smog is a known risk factor for preterm birth and low-birth weight, new research suggests it also may heighten risk of COVID-19 infection for pregnant low-income women.

Superbugs are a "second punch" after pandemic
Eileen Drage O'Reilly, Axios
Superbugs are strengthening their foothold: The COVID-19 pandemic spurred a 15% increase in hospital-related infections and deaths in 2020, per the CDC.

GENERAL

U.S. starts enrollments in trial testing smaller dosage of monkeypox vaccine
Reuters
The National Institutes of Health said on Thursday it had started enrollments in a trial testing an alternative method of administering Bavarian Nordic's monkeypox vaccine, Jynneos, which requires smaller dosages.

FDA requires stronger safety warnings for breast implants
The Associated Press
U.S. health regulators on Wednesday finalized stronger warnings for breast implants, including a new requirement that people receive detailed information about their potential risks and complications before getting them.

Michigan Supreme Court puts abortion rights question on Nov. ballot
Nathaniel Weixel, The Hill
The 5-2 ruling comes after the Michigan Board of State Canvassers last week deadlocked 2-2 along partisan lines, blocking certification of the sweeping amendment that if passed, would enshrine abortion rights into the state's constitution after the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the right at the national level in June.

AMA warns 'patient health is at risk' post-Roe, calls for 'clear guidance' on state abortion laws
Jared Gans, The Hill
The AMA, American Pharmacists Association, American Society of Health-System Pharmacists and National Community Pharmacists Association said in a release that health care providers face a "confusing" legal landscape on abortion policies following the Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization ruling, which struck down a federal protection for abortion.

Artificial sweeteners may raise risk of heart disease, elevate blood sugar
Aria Bendix, NBC News

A study published Wednesday in the BMJ, which involved more than 100,000 adults in France, found a potential link between consumption of artificial sweeteners and heart disease.

Forehead thermometers could be less likely to detect fevers in Black patients
Ayana Archie, NPR News
Forehead thermometers may not be as accurate in reading temperatures for Black hospitalized patients, compared to oral thermometers, according to researchers at Emory University and the University of Hawaii.

Idaho Legislature Asks Judge to Reconsider Abortion Ruling
Rebecca Boone, The Associated Press
The Idaho Legislature has asked a federal judge to reconsider his decision blocking the state from enforcing a strict abortion ban in medical emergencies.

At 988 Call Centers, Crisis Counselors Offer Empathy — And Juggle Limited Resources
Brett Sholtis, Kaiser Health News
For people experiencing a mental health crisis, calling 988 can be a lifesaving decision. But what happens after they call depends on where they are. The new 988 system launched in mid-July, and one early estimate said calls went up 45% nationally during the first week.

South Carolina senators reject a near-total abortion ban
Jeffrey Collins, The Associated Press
South Carolina senators rejected a ban on almost all abortions Thursday in a special session called in the aftermath of the U.S. Supreme Court decision overturning Roe v. Wade after five Republicans, including all the chamber's women, refused to support it.

Juul settlement won't overhaul the e-cig landscape, experts warn
Nicholas Florko, Stat News
But the settlement doesn't have nearly the scope or the import of earlier efforts to rein in tobacco companies' marketing, experts told STAT. In fact, it appears to be missing many of the key provisions that they say made the earlier settlement so powerful in the first place.

Second person in the U.S. dies after contracting monkeypox
Alexander Tin, CBS News
Health authorities are now investigating what role monkeypox may have played in the death of a person diagnosed with the virus, officials in California said Thursday. This is the second known person to die in the U.S. after contracting the virus during the current outbreak.

PAYERS

Affordable Care Act Health-Plan Premiums Set to Rise
Stephanie Armour and Anna Wilde Mathews, The Wall Street Journal
Premiums for many Affordable Care Act health-insurance plans are set to rise sharply next year, a sign of how rising labor costs and other expenses are starting to ripple through the healthcare economy.

HHS Extends Medicaid, CHIP Coverage in Indiana, West Virginia
Bloomberg Law
The Department of Health and Human Services has approved the extension of Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program coverage for 12 months after pregnancy in Indiana and West Virginia, according to the department Thursday.

New playbook aims to help employers negotiate hospital prices
Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare
The National Alliance of Healthcare Purchased Conditions released the book on Thursday, and it offers strategies for plan sponsors to harness newly-released price transparency and quality data as leverage to drive down prices. The book notes that hospitals charge commercial plans significantly more than Medicare, often with prices 140% to 200% higher than Medicare rates.

COVID vaccine coverage questions abound for health insurers
Frank Diamond, Fierce Healthcare
First, they're not free. That's the point that Amesh Adalja, M.D., a senior scholar at the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security, wants to emphasize.

PROVIDERS

Regulators try to stop unlawful nursing home debt collection
Fatima Hussein, The Associated Press
Nursing homes and debt collectors are flouting a law that prohibits them from requiring friends and family of care home residents to shoulder the costs of the facilities, according to a federal report issued Thursday.

ACOs fret over losing dependable MACRA bonus after this year
Robert King, Fierce Healthcare
Accountable care organizations are worried about how the loss of a 5% quality bonus could affect the recruitment and retention of physicians as the window for Congress to act to extend it narrows.

Nurses help grow buprenorphine treatment capacity, study finds
Anastassia Gliadkovskaya, Fierce Healthcare
Despite a slowdown in new waivers to prescribe buprenorphine during COVID-19, treatment capacity nonetheless grew at a stable rate, a new Health Affairs study has found.

Patient Satisfaction Surveys Earn a Zero on Tracking Whether Hospitals Deliver Culturally Competent Care
Rae Ellen Bichell, Kaiser Health News
Each day, thousands of patients get a call or letter after being discharged from U.S. hospitals. How did their stay go? How clean and quiet was the room? How often did nurses and doctors treat them with courtesy and respect? The questions focus on what might be termed the standard customer satisfaction aspects of a medical stay, as hospitals increasingly view patients as consumers who can take their business elsewhere.

Hospitals divert primary care patients to health center 'look-alikes' to boost finances
Phil Galewitz, Kaiser Health News
A growing number of hospitals are outsourcing often-unprofitable outpatient services for their poorest patients by setting up independent, nonprofit organizations to provide primary care.

Clinics overwhelmed with out-of-state patients push abortions later in pregnancy
Oriana Gonzalez, Axios
A crush of out-of-state patients at abortion clinics is causing backlogs in care and forcing some to have the procedure later in their pregnancies, when treatment is more intensive and costs are higher.

PHARMA, BIOTECH AND DEVICES

FDA warns of potential clip lock issue with Abbott's heart valve repair device
Reuters
The U.S. Food and Drug Administration on Thursday alerted healthcare providers about a potential clip lock issue with Abbott Laboratories' (ABT.N) MitraClip device used to stop heart valve leakage.

Bayer, Regeneron's eye drug shown to work at higher dose, longer intervals
Reuters
Bayer (BAYGn.DE)said on Thursday its anti-blindness treatment Eylea, jointly developed with Regeneron (REGN.O), has been shown to work as well when given at a higher dose at a longer interval between injections.

A Message From the National Association of Chain Drug Stores:

The bipartisan Equitable Community Access to Pharmacist Services Act (H.R. 7213) is championed by U.S. Reps. Ron Kind (D-WI), David McKinley (R-WV), Nanette Barragán (D-CA), and Buddy Carter (R-GA). H.R. 7213 would help to ensure patient access to essential care and services by pharmacists - often the most accessible points of healthcare in communities. Visit PharmacyCare.org to learn more about the broad support that exists for this legislation across communities.

HEALTH TECHNOLOGY

Dr. Amazon Will See You Now
David Wainer, The Wall Street Journal
Thanks to innovation, Americans can hail a ride, order groceries and even buy a car without getting off of their couches. Yet when it comes to arguably their most important purchase—healthcare—capitalism keeps coming up short. It certainly isn't for lack of opportunity as the U.S. has the world's largest economy and devotes a larger share of it to medical services than any developed nation.

Healthcare leaders facing dozens of cyberattacks annually: survey
Jessica Kim Cohen, Modern Healthcare
A poll of more than 600 healthcare information-technology and security professionals found 89% of organizations surveyed had experienced at least one cyberattack in the past year. Within that group, organizations on average had 43 attempted cyberattacks during that time period, according to the poll published Thursday by research firm Ponemon.

JP Morgan invests $20M in digital health company
Lauren Berryman, Modern Healthcare
This deal is part of Morgan Health's plan to devote $250 million to the healthcare space. The unit has invested $105 million to date into companies such as Vera Whole Health, Centivo and Embold Health. The investment bank launched Morgan Health last year following the dissolution of Haven, JP Morgan Chase's joint healthcare venture with Amazon and Berkshire Hathaway.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Missed vaccines open path for return of preventable diseases
Patricia Stinchfield, Healthcare Dive
During the long months of COVID-19 restriction, work and school patterns were upended, routine healthcare visits were delayed and many children fell behind on recommended immunizations.

Launch prices: tackling the next drug pricing challenge
Steve Pearson, Stat News
The pharmaceutical industry will continue its fight to blunt the implementation of the law, but in coming years Medicare prices for a limited number of high-cost medications will be lowered, with new prices established either through steep discounts off the average price in the private insurance market or by considerations of comparative effectiveness and other factors within a broader "negotiation" process.

RESEARCH REPORTS

Mental Health and Respiratory Admissions Account for the Majority of Non-Newborn Children's Hospitalizations from 2016-2020
Jessica Chang and Aditi Sen, Health Care Cost Institute

[redacted]

[redacted] Title

Half of American children have health insurance coverage through an employer (typically as a dependent on a parent's coverage). Therefore, a major asset of employer-sponsored insurance (ESI) claims data is the opportunity to understand more about how children use and experience the health care system. In this brief, we use HCCI's unique national dataset encompassing health care claims for over one-third of the population with ESI to explore one dimension of children's health care use: hospital admissions.

How to Stay Safe During a Heat Wave

California and the Western United States are experiencing an intense heat wave—shaping up to become one of the region's most extreme September heat events on record. Heat waves can be deadly, fueling wildfires and increasing the risks of heat stroke, other heat-related illnesses, asthma and more. PHI experts share ways to help your community prepare and stay safe:

- Understanding the Health Impacts of Extreme Heat: PHI's Dr. Gina Solomon joins KQED Forum to discuss extreme heat's health impacts and the elevated risks to vulnerable populations, including youth, older adults, pregnant people and farmworkers.
- How Buddy Programs Can Protect At-Risk Neighbors: Across the country, emergency response networks like buddy programs are connecting vulnerable community members with their neighbors who can check in on them during extreme heat events. "For elderly people who are low-income or people of color, these [heat] risks are cumulative," explains PHI's Dr. Linda Rudolph in USA Today.
- Five Tips to Stay Cool During Extreme Heat: In the Ventura County Star, PHI's Dr. Gina Solomon shares strategies to stay cool. For example, if you must be outside, remember to move slowly, take breaks, spend time in the shade and drink water.

Together Toward Health: How Collaborative Funding & Flexible Dollars Allow Quick Response to COVID-19 & Deep Focus on Vulnerable Communities

[redacted]

Title

Together Toward Health (TTH) is a joint initiative administered by PHI and created by a collaborative of funders to deliver fast, flexible COVID response funding to California community-based organizations (CBOs), who serve as trusted experts in education, testing and vaccine access. The funding has minimal strings attached, allowing CBOs to focus on getting resources into communities within days and weeks instead of months—keeping people healthy and ultimately saving lives. In total, TTH has disbursed over $33 million to more than 500 CBOs, connecting 23 million people across the state with vital COVID resources rooted in how and where they live, organized by people they trust, and offered in the languages they speak.

Two new briefs explore the funding strategies behind TTH's success: A multi-funder collaborative that provides fast, flexible funds to CBOs with local knowledge and community trust. Find insights and lessons-learned, with recommendations for shared grantmaking efforts and guidance on how disbursing funding and resources to local CBOs can build health, equity and community power—to stem COVID-19, and to address other critical issues facing communities today.

Championing Public Health Amid Legal & Legislative Threats: Framing & Language Recommendations

As communities continue to confront efforts to shrink the authority of public health officials and agencies, it's critical that practitioners and advocates are equipped to speak about why we need public health to keep our communities safe and healthy. A new report from PHI's Berkeley Media Studies Group and Real Language offers five key framing recommendations, along with messaging examples and sample language to answering difficult questions. One tip: Frame public health as indispensable, using metaphors when possible.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- Renee Wegrzyn, a biologist and former scientist in the Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency and the Intelligence Advanced Research Projects Activity, will be announced today as President Joe Biden's pick to lead the new Advanced Research Projects Agency for Health. Wegrzyn, who currently works at the biological engineering firm Gingko Bioworks, will be introduced as the first head of ARPA-H in Boston today during an event to promote Biden's cancer moonshot project. (Stat News)

- Biden will sign an executive order today to boost U.S. biomanufacturing and lessen reliance on China, laying out a plan to leverage biological systems as a means to create new products and materials such as drugs and human tissues, people familiar with the matter said. It's not clear how much funding exists to support the executive order, which sources said will also detail how the United States can develop a talent pipeline that is equipped to use naturally occurring processes to create the bio-based materials and products. (Bloomberg)

- Alphabet Inc. health care unit Verily Life Sciences said it will replace founder and Chief Executive Andy Conrad with President Stephen Gillett in January, with Conrad, a geneticist, stepping back to executive chairman as the company eyes more commercialization seven years after its spinout from Google's X moonshots unit. Alphabet said it raised another $1 billion in new funding for the company, which has so far centered its efforts on the personalization of health care. (The Wall Street Journal)

- Ahead of the Sept. 30 deadline to fund the Food and Drug Administration for the coming fiscal year, two drug industry lobbyists and an advocacy source said Democrats told Republicans that they would attach pandemic preparedness legislation from Sens. Richard Burr (R-N.C.) and Patty Murray (D-Wash.) to the funding bill if GOP senators agree to pass the House's bipartisan mental health legislation, which would create a new office within the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. Democrats' counteroffer came about two months after Burr said the FDA's user fee bill, the authorization of which is also set to expire on Sept. 30, must pass without additional health policy items attached to it. CORONAVIRUS

Covid-19 Is Still Killing Hundreds of Americans Daily
Jon Kamp, The Wall Street Journal

The U.S. has recently averaged about 320 new Covid-19 deaths each day, and the average was above 400 before the Labor Day holiday weekend, data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention show. The rate is far below pandemic peaks, including levels above 2,500 a day during the Omicron wave early this year. But the country hasn't matched lows closer to 200 a day reached during a lull last year.

Covid-19 Illnesses Are Keeping at Least 500,000 Workers Out of U.S. Labor Force, Study Says
Gwynn Guilford, The Wall Street Journal
Illness caused by Covid-19 shrank the U.S. labor force by around 500,000 people, a hit that is likely to continue if the virus continues to sicken workers at current rates, according to a new study released Monday.

Is Fauci's prediction of an annual COVID vaccine an attempt to 'gaslight' people that it's just like the flu?
Erin Prater, Fortune
"I don't see any evidence for how an annual COVID shot will provide durable protection … without better vaccines," Dr. Eric Topol, a professor of molecular medicine at Scripps Research and founder and director of the Scripps Research Translational Institute, said this week via tweet.

Are We Really Getting COVID Boosters Every Year Forever?
Jacob Stern, The Atlantic
From a certain standpoint, this regimen makes a lot of sense. The pandemic's biggest surges so far have come in the winter, and a fall booster could go a long way toward mitigating the next of those surges. What's more, the new plan greatly simplifies COVID-vaccination regimens, both for the public and for providers.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Regular covid boosters help end pandemic. But U.S. should aim higher.
Editorial Board, The Washington Post
Yet perpetually chasing new strains with boosters is only a stopgap tactic. With substantial public funding, the country could aim higher. Congress should provide the money the Biden administration needs to fight a robust battle against the coronavirus — and to prepare for the next pandemic.

RESEARCH REPORTS

Rural Hospital Closures Threaten Access
American Hospital Association
In rural communities across America, hospitals and health systems are cornerstones for the health and well-being of the patients and communities they serve. Rural hospitals and health systems provide much needed access to affordable, quality health care for patients close to home, and operate as economic anchors in their local communities, supporting good paying jobs and infusing the local economy with spending on goods and services. In 2020, rural hospitals supported one in every 12 rural jobs in the U.S. as well as $220 billion in economic activity in rural communities.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The Food and Drug Administration will consider Perrigo Co. PLC's application to make its daily birth control pill available over the counter during a joint meeting on Nov. 18. If the FDA's Nonprescription Drugs Advisory Committee and Obstetrics, Reproductive, and Urologic Drugs Advisory Committee sign off on the plan, Perrigo's pill would be the first nonprescription daily birth control offering in the United States. (The Hill)

- President Joe Biden touted his administration's cancer moonshot initiative during a speech at the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum, calling on the private sector to make drugs more affordable and data more accessible in an effort to hit his goal of lowering U.S. cancer deaths by 50% over the next 25 years. (The Associated Press)

- Oregon became the first state to receive financial support for mobile mental health crisis intervention units, tapping into American Rescue Plan funding that seeks to deploy unarmed responders in cases of mental health or substance abuse crises instead of involving the police. Sen. Ron Wyden (D-Ore.) said the state will now be the first to qualify for a federal Medicaid match of 85% over the next three years in reimbursements for the services delivered to Medicaid beneficiaries, and Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra encouraged other states to follow Oregon's lead in accessing such funding. (The Associated Press)

- A report from the Community Oncology Alliance found that hospitals participating in the federal government's 340B drug pricing program are marking up the cost of medicines they buy through the discount initiative by up to 11 times the cost. The analysis, which looked at self-reported drug data from 49 of the leading acute care hospitals participating in the 340B program that see a disproportionate share of low-income patients, also found cancer drug markups at 4.9 times the acquisition price. CORONAVIRUS

One of Long COVID's Worst Symptoms Is Also Its Most Misunderstood
Ed Yong, The Atlantic
Brain fog isn't like a hangover or depression. It's a disorder of executive function that makes basic cognitive tasks absurdly hard.

Should I Get the New Covid-19 Booster Shot Now or Wait?
Alex Janin, The Wall Street Journal
For healthy people not at high risk of severe disease, there might be reasons to wait longer, doctors say, but the determination depends on your risk tolerance. Older or immunocompromised people should get the booster as soon as they are eligible or about a month after recovering from a recent infection to minimize the possibility of severe disease, according to doctors.

So you haven't yet caught COVID. Does that make you a superdodger?
Michaeleen Doucleff, NPR News
By this point in the pandemic, most Americans have had at least one bout of COVID. For children under age 18, more than 80% of them have been infected, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates.

AstraZeneca Beats Investor Suit Over Covid-19 Vaccine Testing
Matthew Bultman, Bloomberg Law
AstraZeneca plc won the dismissal of a would-be class action brought by investors who accused the drug-maker of misleading them about its Covid-19 vaccine testing process.

Why we need to be talking about vaccines that offer "mucosal immunity"
Tina Reed, Axios
As the U.S. rolls out updated mRNA-based COVID shots, a growing chorus of experts say it's a mistake not to focus on treatments that boost immunity through mucous membranes.

These 10 states still have COVID emergency orders in place
Brad Dress, The Hill
New York Gov. Kathy Hochul (D) announced Monday that she will end the state's COVID-19 state of emergency amid falling case numbers and rising criticism. While the COVID-19 pandemic has faded as a major concern for much of the American public, there are still 10 states across the U.S. with emergency orders in place.

GENERAL

As demand for the monkeypox vaccine stalls, outreach goes hyperlocal
Megan Messerly and Krista Mahr, Politico
Earlier this summer, eager people snapped up vaccination appointments in cities from New York to Los Angeles. But a POLITICO review of a Biden administration pilot program that began last month to offer shots at large events found that supply outpaced demand, a trend mirrored nationwide as vaccine uptake has slowed. Now the administration says it's widening the net, creating another pilot to send vaccines to smaller venues and clinics.

President Joe Biden on Monday hit the campaign trail to unveil new initiatives in biotechnology and a leader for a new health research agency key to his "Cancer Moonshot" initiative.

CDC warns about enterovirus in kids — and the risk of rare paralysis that can follow
Alexander Tin, CBS News
After virtually disappearing for several years amid measures aimed at curbing the spread of COVID-19, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is now urging doctors to be vigilant for a renewed wave of enterovirus D68, or EV-D68 — a viral infection in children that can cause a rare kind of paralysis.

FDA Chief Touts Data Revamp to Resist Pressure, Misinformation
Celine Castronuovo, Bloomberg Law
Commissioner Robert M. Califf is pushing the FDA to generate more robust data to defend its decisions following the release of a congressional report detailing attempts by top Trump administration officials to influence the agency's pandemic response.

Scientists find air pollution link to lung cancer
Tina Reed, Axios
Researchers identified a mechanism for how air pollution can trigger lung cancer in people who've never smoked, according to a study presented at a major oncology conference on Saturday.

Ground beef in HelloFresh meal kits may have had E. coli contamination
Aria Bendix, NBC News
Food safety officials at the USDA warned that potentially contaminated meat was shipped to consumers in July.

Walking briskly reduces risk for cancer, heart disease, early death, study says
Sandee LaMotte, CNN
Put on your walking shoes and don't forget your step counter: You can reduce your risk for cancer, heart disease and early death by getting up to 10,000 steps a day, but any amount of walking helps, according to a new study.

Monkeypox vaccine racial disparities drive a gay Black health worker
Fenit Nirappil, The Washington Post
From clubs to church, a Black health worker's push to boost vaccination rates in his community meets resistance.

Monkeypox: First US death due to the virus confirmed in Los Angeles County
Katherine Dillinger, CNN
A Los Angeles County resident's death has been attributed to monkeypox, the county Department of Public Health said Monday, the first known death from the virus in the US.

Harris: 'Probably by design' that attacks on abortion, voting and LGBTQ rights come from same 'sources'
Joseph Choi, The Hill
Vice President Harris on Monday said it was "not by accident, but probably by design" that the same "sources" who threaten abortion rights also work against voting rights and LGBTQ rights.

Strict Indiana Abortion Law Proceeds, Recusals Delay Stay Bid
Alex Ebert, Bloomberg Law
A near-total abortion ban will go into effect in Indiana Sept. 15 as planned after a pair of judicial recusals led to delays in litigation seeking to temporarily block the law.

Exclusive: Medical journals broaden inquiry into potential heart research misconduct
Marisa Taylor and Brad Heath, Reuters
Three medical journals recently launched independent investigations of possible data manipulation in heart studies led by Temple University researchers, Reuters has learned, adding new scrutiny to a misconduct inquiry by the university and the U.S. government.

Medicare Advantage star ratings declines coming post-COVID
Nona Tepper, Modern Healthcare
Health insurance companies that sell Medicare Advantage plans enjoyed higher star ratings, and the extra dollars that come with them, during the COVID-19 pandemic. That's about to end.

While Inflation Takes a Toll on Seniors, Billions of Dollars in Benefits Go Unused
Judith Graham, Kaiser Health News
A few examples: Nearly 14 million adults age 60 or older qualify for aid from the federal Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (also known as food stamps) but haven't signed up, according to recent estimates. Also, more than 3 million adults 65 or older are eligible but not enrolled in Medicare Savings Programs, which pay for Medicare premiums and cost sharing. And 30% to 45% of seniors may be missing out on help from the Medicare Part D Low-Income Subsidy program, which covers plan premiums and cost sharing and lowers the cost of prescription drugs.

Texas judge's ACA ruling faces long legal road, experts say
Frank Diamond, Fierce Healthcare
Whether millions of insured Americans who receive some preventive medical services for free thanks to the Affordable Care Act can continue to do so hinges in part on what the courts decide to be the oversight role of the U.S Preventive Services Task Force.

A look inside Caremark's strategy for improving health equity
Paige Minemyer, Fierce Healthcare
For example, Joel Helle, vice president of physician services at CVS Specialty, told Fierce Healthcare that Caremark has not historically gathered race and ethnicity data, but now asks payers and plans sponsors for that information to more accurately target where disparities are occurring.

UnitedHealthcare fires back, sues Envision for allegedly exaggerating patient claims
Samantha Liss, Healthcare Dive
UnitedHealthcare, one of the nation's largest insurers, filed a lawsuit against Envision Healthcare alleging it overpaid the physician staffing firm millions of dollars after Envision exaggerated the complexity of illness and care provided to thousands of patients in emergency rooms.

PBGH's new committee focuses on public purchasers. Here's why
Frank Diamond, Fierce Healthcare
Public and private employers need all the information they can get when it comes to selecting healthcare benefits for their employers. And they'll soon get more of it, say backers of an initiative announced today by the Purchaser Business Group on Health, a group of about 40 private and public companies.

Rural hospitals face 'precarious' outlook as expenses climb, AHA says
Susan Kelly, Healthcare Dive
Escalating costs for labor, drugs, supplies and equipment are adding to the long-term pressures facing rural hospitals, raising the risk of more closures that could jeopardize patient access to care, the American Hospital Association warned in a new report.

Thousands of nurses strike in Minnesota, affecting more than a dozen hospitals
CBS News
The labor action includes 15,000 nurses and seven health care systems in the Minneapolis and Duluth areas. Those health care systems said they have recruited temporary nurses and are expected to maintain most services.

Providers urged to be alert for rare polio-like syndrome in kids
Andrew Joseph and Helen Branswell, Stat News
Pediatricians and top health officials are warning about an uptick in activity of a common virus that in rare cases can cause a polio-like syndrome in young children.

PHARMA, BIOTECH AND DEVICES

Johnson & Johnson and a New War on Consumer Protection
Casey Cep, The New Yorker

The company has spent billions on cases about one of its most popular products. As its executives try a brazen new legal strategy to stop the litigation, corporate America takes note.

States' efforts show drug cost isn't biggest obstacle to eliminating hep C
Nicholas Florko, Stat News
For nearly a decade, many experts assumed the biggest obstacle to eliminating hepatitis C was the sky-high cost of the new cures. So when Washington state and Louisiana signed flashy, unprecedented deals with the pharmaceutical companies that make the medicines back in 2019, and dedicated personnel and money toward the lofty goal, many celebrated. Just last week, the White House held the states up as a potential model for a forthcoming multibillion-dollar national effort with the same aim.

Data likely support approval of Amgen's KRAS-targeted drug Lumakras
Adam Feuerstein, Stat News
Clinical trial results reported Monday by Amgen may be enough to confirm the U.S. approval of its KRAS-targeting lung cancer drug called Lumakras. But the new data also show lung cancer patients are not benefiting from Lumakras as much as previously hoped, and liver toxicity remains a safety concern.

Bayer Is Said to Begin Search for New Chief Executive Officer
Eyk Henning and Aaron Kirchfeld, Bloomberg
Bayer AG has quietly started the search for a successor to Chief Executive Officer Werner Baumann, raising the prospect of an early departure, according to people familiar with the matter.

A Message From Dialysis Patient Citizens:

Dialysis patients are in a lose-lose situation. Private insurance is forcing them to decide between coverage for their life-saving treatment and their family's health protection. Teladoc names first-ever chief health equity officer
Rebecca Pifer, Healthcare Dive
Virtual care giant Teladoc named Loehrer as its inaugural chief health equity officer on Monday. Loehrer will direct the New York-based company's health equity strategy and aim to ensure its suite of healthcare products are targeted towards all people, the vendor said in a release.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Did the US Jump the Gun With the New Omicron-Targeted Vaccines?
Céline Gounder and Elisabeth Rosenthal, Kaiser Health News
Last month, the FDA authorized omicron-specific vaccines, accompanied by breathless science-by-press release and a media blitz. Just days after the FDA's move, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention followed, recommending updated boosters for anyone age 12 and up who had received at least two doses of the original covid vaccines. The message to a nation still struggling with the covid-19 pandemic: The cavalry — in the form of a shot — is coming over the hill.

Don't let shrill debates keep you from getting a Covid booster
Matthew Herper, Stat News

[redacted] Title

Even before the new Covid booster shots arrived, the arguments about them got shrill. There's a dizzying kaleidoscope of defensible opinions about the new Covid shots, which are designed to match the BA.5 strain of the virus that currently accounts for 9 in 10 Covid cases in the U.S.

California's anti-misinformation bill is a bad idea
Leana S. Wen, The Washington Post
One of the many lessons from the covid-19 pandemic is that misinformation can be deadly. It can lead people to forgo lifesaving precautions and turn instead to potentially harmful therapies. If it's egregious for politicians and celebrities to purvey misinformation, it's far worse when the lie peddler is a physician. Surely, such an individual would be in violation of their oath and should be stripped of their medical license.

RESEARCH REPORTS

Dependent Coverage and Parental "Job Lock": Evidence from the Affordable Care Act
Hannah Bae and Katherine Meckel, National Bureau of Economic Research
In 2010, the Affordable Care Act (ACA) mandated that private insurance plans extend coverage to adult dependents under the age of 26. We hypothesize that this policy may have had the unintended consequence of increasing "job lock" among parents who would otherwise leave their employer. We use a large panel of insurance claims that links members covered by the same plan and follows individuals over time.

Wellness and Prevention Digest

TODAY'S NEWS - September 13th, 2022

Reports and Announcements

- Yesterday, the Biden Administration released a fact sheet on the recent Executive Order to launch a National Biotechnology and Biomanufacturing Initiative. The fact sheet highlights how the initiative will impact job creation, the supply chain, and prices for families.

Events

- Reminder: Join TFAH on September 15th for our next Age Friendly Public Health Systems (AFPHS) Training. Older adults in rural communities face unique challenges accessing resources and services. The COVID-19 pandemic further highlighted the need for innovative strategies to meet the health and social needs older adults in rural areas. Addressing social determinants of health is crucial to rural healthy aging. This training will focus on the unique challenges facing older adults in rural communities and the public health roles in the context of social determinants of health to support this population. Register here.

- NACBHDD and Optum are hosting an Equity in Suicide Prevention Panel on September 20th. Suicide is among the top 9 leading causes of death for people ages 10-64. However, not all populations are at the same risk for suicide. Death rates vary based on where an individual lives, their race or ethnicity, age, and identity.

- 2020 Mom is hosting two upcoming events:

    - 2022 Saving and Supporting Moms Congressional Briefing, September 19th: During this briefing, experts will discuss Maternal Health and Supporting Motherhood, including: the latest maternal mortality dataset from the CDC, research regarding paid parental leave and the impact on the economy, child care post-COVID, the current burden of maternal mental health and more.

    - Maternal Suicide in the U.S., The Latest Research & Data Collection Efforts 2022, September 28th: This webinar will cover general overview of maternal suicide statistics in the U.S., updated data from the CDC on Maternal Mortality Review Committees and pregnancy-related suicide deaths, how states are improving suicide detection in their MMRC process, including the role of informant interviews in identifying maternal suicide deaths, a process adopted by the Delaware MMRC and others, and more.

- Join the Big Cities Health Coalition and Drexel University's Urban Health Collaborative on September 28th for a guided tour of the new features in their Big Cities Health Inventory, an interactive database with more than 100 health metrics (including social determinants of health) for 35 of the largest cities in the U.S. Click here to add this event to your calendar.

- The next public meeting of the National Biodefense Science Board (NBSB) will take place on September 29th. Advanced registration is required. To register for the meeting and for additional information, visit the NBSB Public Meeting page.

- The National Association for Rural Mental Health's Conference will take place in Boulder, CO from November 2nd - 4th, and will highlight gaps in mental health services that rural communities face. For more information and to register.

Take Action

- The Protecting the Health of America's Older Adults Act (H.R. 6302) would create a healthy aging program at CDC, including grants to states for public health approaches to healthy aging. A fact sheet to the bill, which includes a list of endorsing organizations, can be found here. To endorse the bill, fill out this form (no need to fill it in if your organization is already listed).

- The Improving Social Determinants of Health Act of 2021 (S. 104/H.R. 379) would create a SDOH program at CDC, including grants to states for a public health approach to SDOH. A fact sheet to the bill, which includes a list of endorsing organizations, can be found here. To endorse the bill, fill out this form (no need to fill it in if your organization is already listed).

Opportunities and Deadlines

Sign On Documents and Opportunities for Input

- The Providing Urgent Maternal Protections (PUMP) for Nursing Mothers Act (S. 1658) would close the coverage gap in the Break Time for Nursing Mothers law, ensuring an additional 9 million women of childbearing age have the right to time and space to pump breast milk during the workday. Organizational are invited to sign on to a joint letter urging the Senate to pass the bill. Signers will be added on a rolling basis.

- The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Hospitals Promoting Breastfeeding program helps fund critical initiatives to support breastfeeding families in hospitals, workplaces, and communities. Organizations are invited to sign on to a joint letter urging policymakers to increase investments in this program in fiscal year 2023. Signers will be added on a rolling basis.

- USDA is interested in learning from stakeholders how we can better meet the needs of customers seeking kosher or halal foods through The Emergency Assistance Food Program (TEFAP). So far, USDA has held discussions with several advocacy organizations, 9 State Agencies, and food banks in those states that serve communities with kosher and/or halal food needs. USDA is reviewing the information gathered through these conversations to determine some actions and next steps we can take to better meet the needs of customers seeking kosher and halal foods. USDA is interested in feedback from States and food banks in all States and territories about how to best meet their customers' needs. Feedback can always be shared with your State Agency or sent to USDAFoods@usda.gov.

- Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Health and the de Beaumont Foundation recently released the report Seven Ways Business Can Align with Public Health for Bold Action and Innovation. To support collaboration between business and public health, the organizations are collecting endorsements and stories of alignment, which are reflections on how organizations are applying recommendations from the report as well as endorsements, which will be accepted on a rolling basis.

Funding Opportunities and Awards

- NIH's Office of Nutrition Research (ONR) has issued the notice of special interest (NOSI) Stimulating Research to Understand and Address Hunger, Food and Nutrition Insecurity. The purpose of this NOSI is to encourage research on the efficacy of interventions that address nutrition security and the mechanisms of food insecurity on a variety of health outcomes. It also calls for the development of new measures for nutrition security and assessment of food insecurity that are broadly applicable. It was developed by the ONR Implementation Working Group on Nutrition and Health Disparities in collaboration with NIH Institutes and Centers (ICs) and Offices in support of the goals and objectives of the Strategic Plan for NIH Nutrition Research. Deadline, October 5th.

- Healthy Eating Research, a national program of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, is funding research focused on how pandemic-driven social and economic programs and policies related to poverty reduction impact child obesity, diet quality, and food and nutrition security. Applications are open at this link with an October 12th deadline.

- The Foundation for Opioid Response Efforts (FORE) today issued a new Request for Proposal for projects that support community-based organizations capacity to reduce opioid use disorder and overdose mortality. The goal is to help community-based organizations enhance their ability to deliver services addressing the opioid crisis, particularly in communities where people are at greatest risk of developing opioid use disorder and dying from overdoses. Competitive applications will demonstrate how funding will result in long-lasting improvements in delivering opioid use disorder mitigation initiatives in their community. Applicants may apply for a grant of up to $75,000 per year for up to two years. Applications will be accepted through October 21, 2022, and grants will be awarded in early 2023.

- The PHS Commissioned Officers Foundation (COF) for the Advancement of Public Health have announced the 2023 Barclay-Giel Seed Grants opportunity. Any 501c3 non-profit or local/state/tribe/tribal organization with a focus on public health. Grants will be open to all areas of public health, with the Surgeon General's Priorities of special interest. Specific topics of interest related to the COVID-19 pandemic include health misinformation, health worker burnout, and youth mental health. The application period will be September 8th - November 3rd, with awards being announced in February 2023.

- CDC's National Center for Injury Prevention and Control (NCIPC) is accepting applications for Injury Control Research Center (ICRC) grants. The ICRCs support NCIPC's priorities and mission through high-quality research, training, and outreach, as well as effective translation of scientific discoveries into practice for the prevention and control of injuries and violence. The application deadline is January 6th, 2023.

- In partnership with CDC, AmeriCorps recently announced the next round of funding for the Public Health AmeriCorps program. Public Health AmeriCorps is a groundbreaking initiative funded by the American Rescue Plan Act. Organizations interested in hosting one or more Public Health AmeriCorps members may apply for the 2023 Public Health AmeriCorps Grant through January 4, 2023, at 5:00 p.m. (ET). Successful applicants will be notified in April 2023. Public Health AmeriCorps members will provide support to recipient organizations and become a valuable part of our nation's public health workforce. Eligible organizations include nonprofit, faith-based, tribal and community-based organizations; higher-education institutions; state, local and territorial government entities, including local public health departments.

- The Center for Science in the Public Interest's (CSPI's) first round of grantmaking for 2022 is now open. CSPI seeks to support communities as they explore local, state, and federal policy interventions to elicit systemic change and advance a just and equitable food environment. CSPI is focused on identifying strategies and passing policies aimed at increasing purchasing power for, and access to, nutritious food that meets people's needs, supporting a healthier food environment, and reducing health disparities across demographic groups. Several opportunities are currently open, with details available here.

- Evidence for Action's released an open and rolling call for proposals, Innovative Research to Advance Racial Equity. Through this CFP they seek to fund researchers, practitioners, community leaders, advocates, policymakers, and/or other stakeholders to investigate the impacts of various social interventions on health and racial equity outcomes. They are interested in projects that develop and disseminate evidence about what works to advance racial equity and improve health and well-being outcomes for people and communities of color.

Other

- Learn how your health department can protect workers and diners from COVID-19 with a new, video-based, interactive training developed by the Public Health Foundation, in partnership with the Food and Society Program at the Aspen Institute. The training, Safety First: Helping Restaurants Reduce the Spread of COVID-19, is now available through the TRAIN Learning Network.

- The National Headache Foundation (NHF) launched Primary Care Migraine, a new educational training program available at no cost to health practitioners. The program was announced by Tom Dabertin, Executive Director and Chief Executive Officer of the National Headache Foundation. The course also offers a diagnosis tool to assist one in quickly diagnosing migraines while interviewing and examining patients.

- Prevent Blindness is seeking applicants for the A.S.P.E.C.T. (Advocacy, Support, Perspective, Empowerment, Communication, and Training) Program, which aims to equip participants with the knowledge, skills, and confidence to become advocates for vision and eye health- at the individual, peer-to-peer, community, state, or national levels via an 8-week educational series.

Sindhu K. Srinivas, MD, MSCE
Perelman School of Medicine
University of Pennsylvania
Adam Myers, MD
Blue Cross Blue Shield Association

The United States has the highest maternal mortality rate among industrialized nations, in 2020 it was 23.8 deaths per 100,000 live births, a 14% increase from just two years prior. For every person in the US who dies because of pregnancy or childbirth, it is estimated that up to 70 more people suffer dangerous or life-threatening complications, yet two-thirds of these deaths are preventable. Many experts think the dramatic restrictions on reproductive health care emerging in many states will only increase maternal mortality rates and existing disparities. The rate for Black women is nearly three times higher than White women. This disparity can be attributed to limited access to quality health care, underlying chronic conditions, structural racism, implicit bias, and many of the social determinants of health.
This webinar will explore overall maternal mortality, the impact of changes to reproductive rights, and new approaches and possible solutions that may improve maternal health outcomes. Speakers will discuss:

- The state of the maternal mortality crisis, who is affected, and the possible impact of new laws limiting reproductive health care and new approaches to achieving health equity.
- Risks to maternal health, with a focus on high-risk pregnancies and new challenges facing physicians, midwives, and other care providers.
- Supporting equitable, high-quality reproductive health care in all communities.

The Biden administration's fall booster campaign is officially underway, and it includes a pitch from several federal health officials urging most Americans to get a COVID-19 shot annually just as they would a flu vaccine.

A new Morning Consult survey found that 56% of U.S. adults said they would follow a yearly booster cadence. Fully vaccinated adults, Democrats and baby boomers are especially likely to get a once-a-year COVID-19 booster.

Check out the full story here: The White House Is Backing Annual COVID-19 Boosters. A Majority of Americans Plan to Get Them.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- More than 375 health systems, health-related companies and trade associations signed on to a letter urging Senate leaders to issue an extension of Medicare telehealth flexibilities for two years after the COVID-19 public health emergency officially ends. Amazon.com Inc., the Cleveland Clinic, CVS Health Corp., the Federation of American Hospitals, Alphabet Inc.'s Google, MedStar Health and One Medical were among the signers of the letter, which also asked Senate leadership to "push for a permanent extension." (Modern Healthcare)

- Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-S.C.) introduced a bill to ban abortion nationwide after 15 weeks, about three months after he said in a Fox News interview that "there's nothing in the Constitution giving the federal government the right to regulate abortion" and it should be left up to the states. With the midterms looming, some Republicans distanced themselves from the bill, including Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.), who told reporters that most Senate GOP lawmakers would rather abortion "be dealt with on a state level." (Roll Call)

- A group of 30 Democratic senators led by Patty Murray of Washington asked the Biden administration in a letter to use the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act to bar providers and health care personnel from sharing patients' reproductive health information "without explicit consent." The lawmakers specifically want HIPAA protections applied in cases involving law enforcement and with those who pursue legal action tied to abortion. (The 19th)

- The American Medical Association, the Medical Society of New Jersey and the Washington State Medical Association signed on to a class-action lawsuit against Cigna Corp., joining plaintiffs that allege that the insurer reimbursed provider claims in the third-party MultiPlan network at its lower nonparticipating providers rate. Cigna did not respond to a request for comment. (Fierce Healthcare)

CORONAVIRUS

Complexity of Covid vaccine program leads to concerns about potential for error
Helen Branswell, Stat News
Even before the addition of the new booster shots, more than 5,300 errors in vaccine dose delivery in children alone were reported, according to data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Those errors included giving the wrong dose or the wrong product for a recipient's age, using undiluted vaccine when dilution was called for, or administering vaccine that was past its expiration date.

Privacy concerns prompt states to reexamine storing newborns' heel blood tests
Michelle Andrews, Kaiser Health News
Close to 4 million babies are born in the United States every year, and within their first 48 hours nearly all are pricked in the heel so their blood can be tested for dozens of life-threatening genetic and metabolic problems. The heel-stick test is considered such a crucial public health measure that states typically require it and parents aren't asked for their permission before it's done.

People who have had a kidney stone face about a 30 percent chance of having another within five years, but dietary changes may help prevent a recurrence, Mayo Clinic researchers say.

Southern States' Lackluster Monkeypox Efforts Leave LGBTQ+ Groups Going It Alone
Daniel Chang and Colleen DeGuzman, Kaiser Health News
The perception that the response to the monkeypox virus in the South has lacked coordination has rekindled familiar concerns about recent state policies that leave members of the region's LGBTQ+ communities feeling marginalized and discriminated against. More urgently, it raises questions about whether state and local health departments are doing enough to protect the people principally affected by the virus: men who have sex with men.

What a High-Risk Pregnancy Looks Like After Dobbs
Stephanie Sinclair and Jaime Lowe, The New York Times
The Cleveland Clinic's maternal-fetal medicine department, one of the largest of its kind in the country, is set up to handle high-risk pregnancies and the dangers that can accompany them. It manages more than 5,000 such pregnancies a year. In August, less than two months after the Supreme Court ruled on Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization, overturning Roe v. Wade and abolishing the constitutional right to abortion, the photographer Stephanie Sinclair spent two weeks capturing the newly unsettled world inside the Cleveland Clinic.

How drugmakers are turning telehealth into a marketing gold mine
Katie Palmer, Stat News
For pharma companies, online prescribing has now become a powerful tool to drive sales, sending hundreds of thousands of patients to the clinic at the moment they're most primed to ask for a specific prescription. The company that runs the Linzess platform, Populus Media, says that across its telehealth prescribing programs, more than 90% of eligible patients who finish intake forms get a script for the drug they clicked on.

CA launches abortion website in bid to fortify information access
Shawna Chen, Axios
California Gov. Gavin Newsom (D) announced Tuesday that the state has launched a website to help people both inside and outside of the state access information about abortions, their legal rights and where to find providers.

Expensive Prescription Drugs Are a Bargain
Charles L. Hooper and David R. Henderson, The Wall Street Journal
The Inflation Reduction Act has eight provisions intended to reduce future drug prices. Some observers were surely pleased that Congress gave the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services new powers to negotiate with pharmaceutical companies. They shouldn't have been. The Inflation Reduction Act won't noticeably reduce inflation and it will do little or nothing to lower the cost of healthcare. Forcing drug companies to charge lower prices will likely lead to fewer new drugs.

Vaccine guarantees can help prevent the resurgence of polio
Awi Federgruen, Stat News
Health officials are advocating for improving domestic vaccination rates to prevent a resurgence of polio, as they should. But this is only part of the solution. Expanding the vaccine supply is the other part. Without a reliable vaccine supply, there's no way to ensure all children are vaccinated.

A challenge trial can streamline testing of hepatitis C vaccines
Andrea L. Cox, Stat News
Trade-offs in medicine can be harsh, even when clearly necessary. Chemotherapy can save people from cancer, but the side effects can wreak havoc on their bodies for months or years. These trade-offs aren't limited to the clinical world. They are also part of research.

Association of Mental Health Burden With Prenatal Cannabis Exposure From Childhood to Early Adolescence

David A. A. Baranger et al., JAMA Pediatrics

Dramatic increases in cannabis use during pregnancy are alarming because of evidence that prenatal exposure may be associated with a host of adverse outcomes. We previously found that prenatal cannabis exposure (PCE) following maternal knowledge of pregnancy is associated with increased psychopathology during middle childhood using baseline data from the Adolescent Brain Cognitive Development (ABCD) study. Here, leveraging longitudinal ABCD study data (data release 4.0), we examined whether associations with psychopathology persist into early adolescence.

A brighter future for journalism and for our communities

Since 2019, The Salt Lake Tribune has partnered with Report For America to place reporters in our newsroom to cover untold stories in our community. Last year, over 370 Tribune donors contributed to our RFA reporters to make their reporting possible.

RFA alumna Becky Jacobs brought us hundreds of stories highlighting the issues Utah women face, such as the effects of the overturned Roe v. Wade Supreme Court decision. RFA alumnus Zak Podmore covered water and land use issues like the land/power struggles challenging San Juan County.

In 2021, Alixel Cabrera joined The Tribune to focus on reporting for the west side of the Salt Lake Valley. Alixel has written about pollution issues, west side population growth, and intimate stories of community members supporting each other.

In 2022, we welcomed two new Report for America team members: Bethany Baker and Leto Sapunar. Bethany is the first dedicated video journalist in the Tribune's history. Leto will tackle business and tech, focusing on sustainability and accountability.

In the coming days, you'll hear from The Tribune's RFA reporters and RFA alumni about the importance of their reporting and why they were called to action.

How can I help?

Report for America supports local journalism across the U.S. by focusing on topics and regions that are underserved. Report for America covers half of each reporter's salary.

As a nonprofit we can't continue this fight without you, the community we serve. The Tribune, like other RFA newsrooms, is seeking donations to support the balance.

Donate to our Report For America journalists here and keep the fight for truth and accountability alive.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- World Health Organization Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said the end of the COVID-19 pandemic is "in sight," after weekly global deaths last week reached their lowest point since March 2020 and new weekly cases simultaneously declined by 28%. (NBC News) In a long-awaited Lancet Commission report released yesterday to U.N. member states, agencies and bodies, researchers wrote that the pandemic has been "a massive global failure at multiple levels," noting that "too many governments" did not adhere to norms and were influenced by misinformation, resulting in disrespect and protests "against basic public health precautions." (CNN)

- The House passed a bill that would modernize Medicare Advantage, requiring insurers in the network to opt in to electronic prior authorization programs, submit lists of items and services subject to prior authorization on a yearly basis and implement beneficiary protection rules. With more than 300 co-sponsors in the House, and backing from provider and payer groups, there's optimism among lawmakers that the bill, which is called the Improving Seniors' Timely Access to Care Act, will sail through the Senate after the midterm elections. (Modern Healthcare)

- Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Director Rochelle Walensky said during a Senate HELP Committee hearing that new monkeypox cases have slowed over the past few weeks, and while there are pockets of the country where the virus still spreads rapidly, the agency is approaching the overall slowdown "with cautious optimism." (CNBC) Lawmakers on both sides of the aisle railed against the federal government's response to the outbreak during the hearing, levying critiques over everything from the slow vaccine rollout during the initial stages of the spread to gaps in the availability of doses in hard-hit communities of color. (Politico)

- The CDC is moving forward with plans to monitor and test wastewater for polio in communities facing high risk of the disease, a move that comes after a man in Rockland County, N.Y., was diagnosed with the illness in July and the virus was subsequently detected in wastewater samples in nearby areas. (The Washington Post) The National Security Council has hosted several conversations in recent weeks with White House, CDC and Health and Human Services Department officials about polio, with the talks centering on improving vaccination rates and bolstering surveillance, two senior administration officials said. Support the Restore Protections for Dialysis Patients Act to Guarantee Dialysis Patients Healthcare That Fits All Their Needs

Right now, dialysis patients are being cornered into Medicare to receive proper coverage for their routine treatment, but losing protection for their families and health concerns unrelated to their dialysis. Help restore the private insurance options that allow dialysis patients to find healthcare that is their best fit. Support S. 4750/H.R. 8594.

CORONAVIRUS

How Bill Gates and his partners took over the global Covid pandemic response
Erin Banco et al., Politico
Four health organizations, working closely together, spent almost $10 billion on responding to Covid across the world. But they lacked the scrutiny of governments, and fell short of their own goals, a POLITICO and WELT investigation found.

Pandemic fatigue threatens COVID-19, monkeypox funding requests
Ariel Cohen, Roll Call
"It isn't a question of authority; you have the authority. It isn't a question of money; you have been given astonishing amounts of money," Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee ranking member Richard M. Burr, R-N.C., told top administration public health officials during a hearing Wednesday, noting the series of pandemic funding bills Congress has passed since the pandemic began in March 2020.

Johns Hopkins is reducing its COVID data tracking
Herb Scribner, Axios
Johns Hopkins University is scaling back how much and how frequently it tracks COVID-19 pandemic metrics due to a slowdown in local data reporting, the university confirmed to Axios.

Moderna open to supplying COVID vaccines to China, CEO says
Reuters
Moderna Inc has held talks with the Chinese government about supplying COVID-19 vaccines, but no decision has yet been made, CEO Stephane Bancel told Reuters on Wednesday.

Paul clashes with Fauci over child vaccinations
Nathaniel Weixel, The Hill
Sen. Rand Paul (R-Ky.) on Wednesday clashed with White House medical adviser Anthony Fauci about whether children who were previously infected with COVID-19 need to be vaccinated, the latest in his long-running feud with the nation's top infectious diseases doctor.

GENERAL

FDA warns monkeypox could mutate if antiviral drug is overused
Alexander Tin, CBS News
The monkeypox virus is only one mutation away from evading a key antiviral drug being used to treat at-risk patients, federal health officials are now warning — and they're urging doctors to be "judicious" in prescribing the sought-after treatment.

New CDC data: STD rates shot up in 2021
Alice Miranda Ollstein, Politico
Syphilis rates jumped 26 percent last year — the biggest annual increase since the Truman administration — amid a broader rise in sexually transmitted infections that worsened considerably during the Covid-19 pandemic.

HIV Vaccine Still Years Away, Former AIDS Society Head Warns
Michael Cohen, Bloomberg
The use of messenger RNA to make vaccines for the first time during the coronavirus pandemic has reinvigorated a decades-long hunt for a shot to safeguard against HIV, but the development process will still be a protracted one, according to a leading South African scientist.

Pfizer starts late-stage trial of mRNA-based flu vaccine
Reuters
Pfizer Inc said on Wednesday it had started a late-stage U.S. trial of an influenza vaccine involving 25,000 patients, among the first such studies for a messenger RNA flu shot.

Poll: Americans say politicians aren't 'informed enough' to set abortion policy
Elena Schneider, Politico
Seven in 10 Americans don't think politicians "are informed enough" about abortion to "create fair policies" — a position held by majorities of both Democrats and Republicans, according to the survey of more than 20,000 adults by The 19th, a news organization focused on gender and politics, and SurveyMonkey. A majority of Americans also said they think abortion should be legal in all or most cases, while 35 percent said abortion should be illegal in all or most cases.

Daily multivitamin potentially linked with improved cognition in older adults in new study
Jacqueline Howard, CNN
Taking a daily multivitamin might be associated with improved brain function in older adults, a new study says, and the benefit appears to be greater for those with a history of cardiovascular disease.

Anti-abortion rights groups on calls for help: "We knew this was coming."
Sarah McCammon, NPR News
With abortion now illegal or severely restricted in a growing number of states, groups that help patients travel for the procedure as well as those who oppose abortion and offer assistance with unintended pregnancies, are reporting more calls for help.

Experts Question the Role of White Mulberry in the Death of Congressman's Wife
Samantha Young, Kaiser Health News
Scientists, doctors, and pathologists are questioning the Sacramento County coroner's conclusion that Lori McClintock's death was related to white mulberry, a plant that has been used as an herbal remedy for centuries — and one that the coroner's botanical consultant called "not toxic" in a letter to her office.

Judge temporarily blocks Ohio law banning most abortions
Julie Carr Smyth, The Associated Press
A judge temporarily blocked Ohio's ban on virtually all abortions Wednesday, again pausing a law that took effect after federal abortion protections were overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court in June.

'Disgusted and angry': WVa clinic ends abortions post ban
Leah Willingham, The Associated Press
A pregnant 16-year-old girl panicked when she got a call from the only abortion clinic in West Virginia telling her that her appointment had been canceled and she needed to book one out-of-state.

Forty percent of women in military have little to no abortion access, RAND study says
Mike Brest, Washington Examiner
Roughly 80,000 of the approximately 450,000 active-duty service members serve in states that have implemented or will soon implement additional abortion restrictions, per a new paper from RAND Corporation that was released Wednesday. The other 370,000 male soldiers and their families could also be affected by the push from conservative state legislatures to curb abortion access.

Are you an active couch potato? How sitting all day can erase a workout
Gretchen Reynolds, The Washington Post

The study, which involved more than 3,700 men and women in Finland, found that many dutifully exercised for a half-hour, but then sat, almost nonstop, for another 10, 11 or even 12 hours a day. These were the study's active couch potatoes, and their blood sugar, cholesterol and body fat all were elevated.

Melanie Fontes Rainer Sworn in as HHS Civil Rights Office Head
Bloomberg Law
Melanie Fontes Rainer has been sworn in as director of the Office for Civil Rights in the US Department of Health and Human Services, the department said Wednesday.

Seth Rogen: Alzheimer's care shouldn't just be for rich guys like me
Jim Saksa, Roll Call
The actor and comedian came at Sen. Bob Casey's invite along with his wife, screenwriter and director Lauren Miller Rogen. They were joined by actress Sarah Rafferty for a short panel discussion moderated by National Domestic Workers Alliance President Ai-jen Poo on the steep financial and psychological costs of caring for a loved one with dementia. The celebrities lent their fame to the Pennsylvania Democrat in support of his bill aimed at increasing Medicaid funding for home health aides.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Congress needs to preserve seniors' access to pharmacist care
Ilisa BG Bernstein and Paul W. Abramowitz, Stat News
Covid-19 demonstrated how quickly the United States can mobilize to produce and distribute new tests, vaccines, and treatments for a previously unknown virus. The pandemic also highlighted significant inequalities and gaps in its health care system, with many rural and underserved urban areas lacking sufficient access to care.

RESEARCH REPORTS

The gathering storm in US healthcare: How leaders can respond and thrive
Shubham Singhal and Addie Fleron, McKinsey & Co.
The decade from 2010 to 2020 marked a period of relative calm for the US healthcare industry, with national health expenditures (NHE) rising at predictably steady rates. Then the COVID-19 pandemic unleashed a prolonged period of disruption, illness, and loss that continues to wane slowly. Yet, even now, there is no rest for the weary. A gathering storm arising from labor shortages, inflation, and endemic COVID-19 challenges the industry anew. It threatens affordability and access to care for consumers, and it poses material risks to profitability for providers, payers, and other healthcare stakeholders. McKinsey research reveals the combined effects of these forces could accelerate the increase in NHE by approximately $600 billion through 2027.

THIS WEEK'S HIGHLIGHTS

ASTHO Welcomes Its 80th President | On Sept. 13 at ASTHO's annual Assembly of Members meeting, Anne Zink, MD, FACEP (SHO-AK) began her term as the 80th president of ASTHO. She succeeds Nirav Shah, MD, JD, (SHO-ME) who has held the position since January 2021. We thank Dr. Shah for his service and leadership during one of the most difficult challenges public health has faced, and we look forward to Dr. Zink's term as president. Learn more in our latest press release.

ASTHO Names New Board Leadership | Also this week, ASTHO announced its other newly elected leaders, including Steven J. Stack, MD, MBA, (SHO-KY) president-elect, and Scott Harris, MD, MPH, (SHO-AL) secretary-treasurer. Visit here to learn more about ASTHO's leadership and governance.

Inaugural DELPH Cohort Graduates | The Diverse Executives Leading in Public Health (DELPH) program, co-created by ASTHO and the Satcher Health Leadership Institute at Morehouse School of Medicine, celebrated the graduation of its first cohort at ASTHO's 2022 Fall Leadership Summit. Sixteen scholars completed a 10-month long program focused on fine tuning their leadership skills, expanding their public health network, and connecting with colleagues focused on growth. Meet the graduating class and learn more about their accomplishments in the DELPH Magazine now.

New Article in the American Journal of Public Health | ASTHO and the University of Washington co-authored a new article on the growing climate crisis and what it will take to get state and territorial health agencies ready to respond to the effects of climate change on public health. Check out the full article for more.

Public Health Stretched Thin | ASTHO CEO Michael Fraser spoke with The Nation's Health about the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the regular functions of healthcare and public health, outside of managing the pandemic itself. Many critical functions were set aside and public health is racing to make up for lost time. Learn more about COVID-19's "health debt" now.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine researchers found that Americans over 65 who have had COVID-19 faced a higher risk within a year of being newly diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease. The study, which was published in the Journal of Alzheimer's Disease and analyzed electronic health records of more than 6 million people older than 65, noted that the findings do not show that COVID-19 causes Alzheimer's. (The Washington Post)

- The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention announced a new program to direct up to 50,000 doses of the Jynneos monkeypox vaccine from Bavarian Nordic A/S to hard-hit populations that have faced hurdles in accessing the shots, as data shows white men have received at least twice as many doses as Black or Hispanic men. (Axios) The Food and Drug Administration warned that Tpoxx should be prescribed to treat monkeypox judiciously since a single molecular change to the disease "could have a large impact on the antiviral activity" of the drug, while the CDC said that it should not be given to patients with healthy immune systems that are not suffering from severe symptoms. (The Associated Press)

- About 1 in 4 hospitals will not be assessed penalties for readmissions for the coming fiscal year, and those that fell short of the Medicare benchmark over the past few years will receive lower reimbursement cuts, per preliminary data from the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. CMS for the first time used pandemic-era data to calculate payment adjustments, and for fiscal year 2023, 25.33% of hospitals will not face readmissions penalties, up from 17.81% the previous year. (Modern Healthcare)

- A report on climate change's impact on health systems released by the House Ways and Means Committee found that medical centers across the country have battled extreme weather such as fires, flooding and heat waves, events that have resulted in compromised medical services and facility closures. Rep. Richard Neal (D-Mass.), chairman of the committee, asked CMS to issue guidance to health systems to monitor and report their carbon dioxide emissions, as the health care system accounts for roughly 10% of CO2 emitted annually in the country. GSK, Regeneron Covid Antibody Drugs Unlikely to Work for Omicron, WHO Says
Marthe Fourcade, Bloomberg
The antibody drugs GSK Plc and Regeneron Pharmaceuticals Inc. developed against Covid don't appear to work for omicron and its subvariants, a panel of experts advising the World Health Organization said, recommending against the use of the medicines.

First vaccination ads for updated Covid-19 booster target adults 50 and older
Jacqueline Howard, CNN
As part of the White House's Covid-19 response plan for the fall, the US Department of Health and Human Services is debuting a video ad to encourage people to get the updated Covid-19 booster shot - especially those who are 50 and older.

These are the most common side effects to expect from your updated COVID booster
Chloe Taylor, Fortune
Both updated boosters appeared to cause mild side effects in some individuals who participated in human testing.

GENERAL

A Vaccine in Each Arm Could Be a Painful Mistake
Katherine J. Wu, The Atlantic
At a press briefing earlier this month, Ashish Jha, the White House's COVID czar, laid out some pretty lofty expectations for America's immunity this fall. "Millions" of Americans, he said, would be flocking to pharmacies for the newest version of the COVID vaccine in September and October, at the same appointment where they'd get their yearly flu shot. "It's actually a good idea," he told the press. "I really believe this is why God gave us two arms."

Biden's monkeypox adviser is managing a virus alongside conservative fascination in his Instagram feed
Eugene Daniels, Politico
Demetre Daskalakis has become caricatured as a tattooed oddity among buttoned-up bureaucrats. The truth is far different. "I wish I were that interesting," he says.

Worries over stigma are driving a push to rename monkeypox, but the process is slow
Jen Christensen, CNN
Since the beginning of the monkeypox outbreak, scientists and activists have pushed for the name of the virus and the disease to be changed to something "non-discriminatory" and "non-stigmatizing."

Healthcare plays by CVS, Walgreens and Amazon will drive more partnerships, tech investment, experts say
Heather Landi, Fierce Healthcare
CVS, Walgreens and Amazon are ramping up their focus on in-home medical services and primary care and it will cause major disruptions for more traditional brick-and-mortar providers, industry experts say.

National Cancer Institute Wants $10 Billion for Fiscal Year 2024
Jeannie Baumann, Bloomberg Law
The National Cancer Institute laid out a $10 billion spending plan for fiscal year 2024, marking one of its most ambitious budget proposals that calls for a more than 30% increase over last year's request.

Preparing for monkeypox on college campuses
Arielle Dreher, Axios
As monkeypox cases decline, public health officials are shifting their focus to college campuses, where students are returning to communal living arrangements that could sustain the outbreak.

Montana judge blocks anti-trans birth certificate law
Oriana Gonzalez, Axios
A Montana state judge on Thursday blocked a 2021 state law that would have barred transgender people from changing the gender listed on their birth certificate unless they have undergone gender-affirming surgery.

Indiana's abortion ban goes into effect, shuttering clinics
Mary Claire Molloy and Molly Hennessy-Fiske, The Washington Post
It was the last day for abortions at Women's Med clinic this week, and patients arrived anxious, hoping to get treated before a state abortion ban took effect Thursday.

Two powerful drugs are making their way into the illicit drug supply
Erika Edwards, NBC News
An animal tranquilizer called xylazine and powerful synthetic opioids called nitazenes are increasingly linked to overdoses.

California Gov. Gavin Newsom Signs Law Requiring Social Media Companies to Consider Children's Health
Meghan Bobrowsky, The Wall Street Journal
Social-media companies that operate in California will have to consider the health and well-being of children under a first-of-its-kind bill signed into law Thursday by Gov. Gavin Newsom.

Bob Herman, Stat News
Humana is targeting ambitious growth of its Medicare Advantage plans and primary care clinics over the next three years, which executives said Thursday will significantly propel Humana's profitability. Humana's stock price ended the day up 8%, valuing the company at $63 billion.

UnitedHealth Beats Class Suit Over Office Surgery Facility Fees
Jacklyn Wille, Bloomberg Law
UnitedHealth Group. Inc. defeated a class action by more than 200 doctors who say they weren't paid facility fees for office-based surgeries, when a New York federal judge ruled that the insurer used reasonable payment systems and followed ERISA plan terms.

Medicare Enrollees Struggle With Opioid Abuse, Treatment Access
Tony Pugh, Bloomberg Law
More than 1 million Medicare beneficiaries were diagnosed with opioid use disorder in 2021, but fewer than 20% received medication to treat their disorder, a federal watchdog agency reported Thursday.

Court Ruling May Spur Competitive Health Plans to Bring Back Copays for Preventive Services
Harris Meyer, Kaiser Health News
Now health plans and self-insured employers — those that pay workers' and dependents' medical costs themselves — may consider imposing cost sharing for preventive services on their members and workers. That's because of a federal judge's Sept. 7 ruling in a Texas lawsuit filed by conservative groups claiming that the ACA's mandate that health plans pay the full cost of preventive services, often called first-dollar coverage, is unconstitutional.

PROVIDERS

More Than Half of US Hospitals Expect to Lose Money This Year
Lauren Coleman-Lochner, Bloomberg
More than half — 53% — of US hospitals expect to lose money this year, according to the report prepared by consulting firm Kaufman Hall for the American Hospital Association. Facilities are scrambling not only to fill jobs but to cope with sharply higher costs for labor and supplies, all while treating Covid-19 and other patients, many of whom arrive sicker because they have put off treatment.

Physician burnout higher in 2021 than 2020, study shows
Shannon Muchmore, Healthcare Dive
About 63% of physicians surveyed experienced at least one manifestation of burnout in 2021, shooting up from 38% in 2020 and representing the highest amount in a decade of recurring survey findings, according to an article published this week in Mayo Clinic Proceedings.

New Abortion Laws Jeopardize Cancer Treatment for Pregnant Patients
Charlotte Huff, Kaiser Health News
As abortion bans go into effect across a contiguous swath of the South, cancer physicians are wrestling with how new state laws will influence their discussions with pregnant patients about what treatment options they can offer.

Tying FDA Fees to Stopgap Bill Seen as Missed Chance for Change
Celine Castronuovo and Alex Ruoff, Bloomberg Law
Health policy advocates are wary that a push to attach FDA user fee legislation to a government funding bill will deny the agency new drug approval oversight tools and other long-sought policy changes.

Medicare's new powers to control drug prices to face lobbying and legal fights
Leslie Walker and Dan Gorenstein, NPR News
Two of the biggest battlegrounds will be a pair of new powers that lawmakers gave Medicare, the federal insurance program that covers 64 million seniors and people with disabilities. Medicare's roughly $180 billion annual drug budget accounts for more than a third of the country's total drug spending.

Swiss authorities raid Novartis offices seeking info on patents
Ed Silverman, Stat News
The Swiss Competition Commission has begun an investigation into Novartis over the possible unlawful use of a patent to block competitors for some of its medicines, the latest instance in which European authorities have probed drug companies for antitrust infractions.

Lupus patients go into remission borrowing CAR-T cancer therapy
Isabella Cueto, Stat News
CAR-T therapy, a way of amplifying a person's own immune power against a disease target, is the latest tool in this shared playbook. Half a dozen people with severe lupus have gone into remission from their disease after receiving CAR-T, a result that researchers say could usher in a new era for a whole suite of hard-to-treat autoimmune conditions.

Location Data Rules Draw FTC's Attention Post-Roe
Jack Gillum and Brody Ford, Bloomberg Businessweek
The Supreme Court's June decision to overturn Roe v. Wade set off widespread concerns that location data collected and shared by smartphones could be used to prosecute people who receive or provide abortions. There's scant regulation of the industry built around the selling and buying of personal data, which IDC says generates $15 billion annually. That puts a lot of weight on the privacy protections set by location-data brokers themselves.

Period tracker Flo launches anonymous mode amid post-Roe privacy concerns
Rebecca Pifer, Healthcare Dive
Period tracking app Flo has rolled out an anonymous mode to protect users' sensitive reproductive health data months after the U.S. Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade.

CVS, UPMC and General Catalyst back Redesign Health's series C
Heather Landi, Fierce Healthcare
Redesign Health has built and launched 40 healthcare startups since 2018, and it nabbed $65 million in fresh funding to jump-start dozens more.

Savvier buyers threaten mental health tech's momentum
Mario Aguilar, Stat News
When the pandemic exposed long-festering problems around access to mental health care, many organizations started panic shopping for apps and virtual services to address the needs of workers. Now, there are signs that some of that sales momentum may slow down as companies take a sober look at their budgets in the face of a rocky economy.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

The New Covid Boosters Are Amazing News
Zeynep Tufekci, The New York Times
For the first time, the United States is rolling out Covid vaccines updated to match variants that are currently dominant, as well as the original strain. This bivalent character will provide a better response not just to the most threatening variants today but probably to future variants too, because when the immune system faces different versions of the same virus it generates broader protections overall.

Clinical Effectiveness of Intravenous Racemic Ketamine Infusions in a Large Community Sample of Patients With Treatment-Resistant Depression, Suicidal Ideation, and Generalized Anxiety Symptoms
Patrick A. Oliver et al., The Journal of Clinical Psychiatry
Few studies have been published to date exploring the effectiveness of ketamine for treatment-resistant depression (TRD) in large clinical samples. We report on the clinical outcomes of a large cohort treated with ketamine as part of clinical practice.

Upcoming Webinars for Health Centers

TRAINING THROUGHOUT SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER

Cost Allocation and Indirect Cost Rates
Thursday, September 22 at 1 PM ET
Register

Is your health center allocating program costs correctly? This federal grants webinar, presented by FTLF attorney Scott Sheffler, will provide you with a better understanding of cost allocation methods to help you properly recover project costs from the federal government.

Providing Services Outside the Scope of Your Grant: How to Ensure Compliance
Tuesday, September 27 at 3 PM ET
Register

[redacted]

The recent Dobbs decision has led many health centers to question how they, as federal grant-funded organizations, can provide services that are out of scope. In this webinar, FTLF attorneys Carrie Riley and Ted Waters will use elective abortions as an example to address key areas of risk and the legal and practical considerations health centers face when deciding to establish an "other line of business."

Structuring Patient Incentive Programs to Comply with Federal Rules
Thursday, September 29 at 1 PM ET
Register

Patient incentives have long posed a challenge to health centers wishing to promote healthy behaviors while minimizing legal risks under the Beneficiary Inducement Program. In this webinar, FTLF attorney Adam Falcone will help you gain a better understanding of the exceptions that permit patient incentives and best practices for implementing a program.

Federal Procurement Standards
Thursday, October 13 at 1 PM ET
Register

When contracting for property and services, recipients of grants and cooperative agreements must comply with the procedures set forth in the Uniform Guidance. During this federal grants training, FTLF attorney Scott Sheffler will discuss the key requirements of all procurement transactions and provide strategies to efficiently operationalize these rules in day-to-day functions.

340B Compliance Implications of Recent Developments
Thursday, October 20 at 1 PM ET
Register

Drug manufacturers and pharmacy benefits managers have not backed down their pressure on 340B covered entities. This up-to-the-moment webinar presented by FTLF attorney Jason Reddish will cover the latest in the shifting landscape, HRSA expectations, and the future of the 340B Program.

Where Are We Now? Five Years of the CMS Emergency Preparedness Final Rule
Tuesday, October 25 at 1 PM ET
Register

Five years ago, health centers were required to become compliant with the Emergency Preparedness Requirements for Medicare and Medicaid Participating Providers Final Rule. As we inch closer to the end of the public health emergency, now is a perfect time to reassess your emergency preparedness plans. In this webinar, FTLF attorney Molly Evans and FTLF's new Manager of Compliance and Risk Management Services Alexander Lipovtsev will review the current requirements for health centers and provide practical tips to ensure compliance.

Watch On-Demand: The recorded versions of all of our webinars are included in your purchase and will typically be available within seven (7) business days of the live event.

SUBJECT: NACDD Legislative and Policy News
FROM: Elizabeth Ruth <lruth@chronicdisease.org>
TO: Elizabeth Ruth <lruth@chronicdisease.org>
DATE: 16/09/2022 12:28

There continues to be uncertainty around the path forward for a short-term continuing resolution (CR) to fund the government beyond the September 30 deadline. The bill hinges on whether Democratic leadership decides to attach an energy permitting bill championed by Senator Joe Manchin (D-WV). Permitting is the process for getting federal approval for energy projects, including oil and gas pipelines, which often undergo extensive review for environmental impact. Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-NY) promised to hold a vote on permitting reform in exchange for Senator Manchin's support of the Inflation Reduction Act. While there is general bipartisan support for permitting reform, some members of Congress on both sides of the aisle oppose the legislation. Some Republicans feel the reforms don't go far enough. Democrats are worried the changes could contribute to climate change and hurt the environment. Democratic leadership doesn't want to anger Senator Manchin who will continue to be a key vote, but they also want to avoid a government shutdown.

This Week's News

Gov. Dunleavy vetoes Alaska tax on vaping and increase to minimum tobacco purchase age.
Alaska Governor Mike Dunleavy vetoed legislation that would have imposed a statewide e-cigarette tax and raised the state's minimum purchasing age for tobacco products from 19 to 21. Alaskan Governors aren't permitted to veto policy provisions from bills passed by the legislature, but they have the power to veto dollar amounts from appropriation bills or entire pieces of legislation. Governor Dunleavy justified his veto by stating that it was not possible to separate the tobacco age increase from the e-cigarette tax, which he believed to be too high. The legislation, known as Senate Bill 45, passed both chambers of the legislature with strong bipartisan support.

Court ruling may spur competitive health plans to bring back copays for preventive services
Health plans and self-insured employers may consider cost sharing for preventive services because of a federal judge's September 7 ruling. District Court Judge Reed O'Connor ruled that members of the Preventive Services Task Force (PSTF) were not properly appointed under the Constitution due to them not requiring Presidential nomination and confirmation by the Senate. If the Affordable Care Act's preventive services requirement is at least partially invalidated, then the extent of health insurance coverage could vary significantly by industry and geographic location. Studies have shown that the preventive services requirement dramatically increased access to services like vaccinations, STI screenings, cancer screening, contraception, and well-child visits.

Ryan Reynolds and Rob McElhenney film their colonoscopy experiences to raise awareness
Actors Ryan Reynolds and Rob McElhenney decided to raise awareness about colon cancer by filming their colonoscopy experiences. "I would never have any medical procedure put on camera. It's not every day where you can raise awareness on something that will most definitely save lives," Reynolds said. Doctors conducting both actors' colonoscopies were able to remove polyps that could've become cancerous later in life. Regular screening, beginning at age 45, is key to preventing colorectal cancer and detecting it early.

Rise in deaths spurs effort to raise alcohol taxes
In 2020, the number of alcohol-induced deaths in the United States spiked 25 percent when compared to the previous year. This issue is particularly acute in the state of Oregon, where the rate of alcohol-induced deaths has grown by a factor of 2.5 between 1999 and 2020. Excess drinking has led some activists to support increases in alcohol taxes, which has been shown to be an effective means of lowering rates of disease and injury-related deaths.

Task force members: The key to demystifying long COVID-19 could come from studying another chronic condition
There is growing evidence of similarities between long COVID-19 and individuals diagnosed with myalgic encephalomyelitis/chronic fatigue syndrome (ME/CFS). For example, both long COVID-19 and ME/CFS patients can suffer from preload failure, which is an inability to provide enough blood to fill the heart. If health outcomes of both diseases are similar, then studying ME/CFS could help create better treatments for individuals suffering from long COVID-19.

Scientists find clues to how air pollution may trigger lung cancer
While the connection between air pollution and lung cancer has long been known, new research reveals how this specifically happens. Researchers found that air pollution triggers lung cancer in people who've never smoked because air particles can cause the body's airway cells to mutate. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, particle pollution is the mix of solid particles and liquid droplets and can be emitted in the form of smoke, soot, dust, and dirt. Common sources of particle pollution include construction sites, unpaved roads, agriculture, vehicles, and plants powered by fossil fuels.

Morehouse School of Medicine points to cost of mental health inequities
A new report released by the Satcher Health Leadership Institute at Morehouse School of Medicine found that a lack of investment in mental health resulted in 117,000 deaths and $278 billion in costs between 2016 and 2020. The report also identified underserved and underrepresented communities experiencing the brunt of these negative effects. For example, national reporting neglects the six million Americans most likely to experience poor mental health such as active military members, nursing home residents, and incarcerated individuals.

Health insurance coverage in the United States: 2021
New data from the United States Census Bureau shows that the number of Americans without health insurance fell by one million people in 2021. About 27.2 million Americans lacked health insurance in 2021 compared to 28.3 million in the previous year. Despite the COVID-19 pandemic and ensuing economic uncertainty, enhanced Affordable Care Act (ACA) subsidies and Medicaid continuous coverage provisions enacted in response to the pandemic were credited with maintaining the insured rate.

MORNING CONSULT

Health

Essential health care industry news & intel to start your day.

SEPTEMBER 18, 2022

Twitter Email

Good morning to you, health readers. We're more than a week into the Biden administration's fall COVID-19 booster campaign, which 16% of U.S. adults said they'd seen, read or heard "a lot" about. The same Morning Consult survey found that 56% of Americans plan to get a yearly booster, which White House officials recommended in likening the annual shot to that of the flu vaccine cadence.

Our question for the week: What share of U.S. adults say they get a flu shot every year?

A: 37%
B: 47%
C: 57%
D: 67%

You can find the answer at the bottom of the newsletter.

WHAT'S AHEAD

Dr. Anthony Fauci is joining the Center for Strategic and International Studies for a fireside chat on Monday at 1 p.m. The longtime director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases and President Joe Biden's chief medical adviser will discuss the state of the pandemic, the booster-shot push and the general COVID-19 outlook heading into winter. Fauci will also appear Wednesday at The Atlantic Festival.

The Clinton Global Initiative's September meeting, scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, will feature appearances from Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra, World Health Organization Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, White House Office of National Drug Control Policy Director Rahul Gupta, Surgeon General Vivek Murthy and others.

The House Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Crisis is holding a hearing on Wednesday at 2 p.m. about long-term care in the country. Rep. James Clyburn (D-S.C.), who chairs the subcommittee, is calling academics, advocates and a front-line worker to testify about COVID-19's impact on nursing homes, which account for about a fifth of all U.S. coronavirus deaths since the onset of the pandemic.

There are two key Food and Drug Administration meetings to monitor this week: The Vaccines and Related Biological Products Advisory Committee will convene at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, while the Oncologic Drugs Advisory Committee is scheduled to meet at 9 a.m. on Thursday and Friday.

[redacted]

And finally, three events presented by media organizations to watch:

- At 1 p.m. Tuesday, Stat News hosts Dr. Kirsten Bibbins-Domingo, the new JAMA editor-in-chief, for a conversation on how she'll lead the publication.
- At 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday, The Hill is holding an event on how to unlock access to oral health care, featuring remarks from Rep. Jan Schakowsky (D-Ill.).
- At 8:30 a.m. on Wednesday, The Hill presents an event on the cost of mental health inequities, featuring Senate HELP Committee member Bill Cassidy (R-La.).

WEEK IN REVIEW

COVID-19: World Health Organization Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said the end of the COVID-19 pandemic is "in sight," after weekly global deaths reached their lowest point since March 2020 and new weekly cases simultaneously declined by 28%.

In a long-awaited Lancet Commission report released to U.N. member states, agencies and bodies, researchers wrote that the pandemic has been "a massive global failure at multiple levels," noting that "too many governments" did not adhere to norms and were influenced by misinformation, resulting in disrespect and protests "against basic public health precautions."

Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine researchers found that Americans over 65 who have had COVID-19 faced a higher risk within a year of being newly diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease. The study, which was published in the Journal of Alzheimer's Disease and analyzed electronic health records of more than 6 million people older than 65, noted that the findings do not show that COVID-19 causes Alzheimer's.

Reproductive rights: Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-S.C.) introduced a bill to ban abortion nationwide after 15 weeks, about three months after he said in a Fox News interview that "there's nothing in the Constitution giving the federal government the right to regulate abortion." With the midterms looming, some Republicans distanced themselves from the bill, including Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.), who told reporters that most Senate GOP lawmakers would rather abortion "be dealt with on a state level."

A group of 30 Democratic senators led by Patty Murray of Washington asked the Biden administration in a letter to use the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act to bar providers and health care personnel from sharing patients' reproductive health information "without explicit consent." The lawmakers specifically want HIPAA protections applied in cases involving law enforcement and with those who pursue legal action tied to abortion.

The FDA scheduled a joint meeting for Nov. 18 to consider Perrigo Co. PLC's application to make its daily birth control pill available over the counter. If the FDA's Nonprescription Drugs Advisory Committee and Obstetrics, Reproductive, and Urologic Drugs Advisory Committee sign off on the plan, Perrigo's pill would be the first nonprescription daily birth control offering in the United States.

Payers and providers: The House passed a bill that would modernize Medicare Advantage, requiring insurers in the network to opt in to electronic prior authorization programs, submit lists of items and services subject to prior authorization on a yearly basis and implement beneficiary protection rules. With more than 300 co-sponsors in the House, and backing from provider and payer groups, there's optimism among lawmakers that the bill, which is called the Improving Seniors' Timely Access to Care Act, will sail through the Senate after the midterm elections.

More than 375 health systems, health-related companies and trade associations signed on to a letter urging Senate leaders to issue an extension of Medicare telehealth flexibilities for two years after the COVID-19 public health emergency officially ends. Amazon.com Inc., the Cleveland Clinic, CVS Health Corp., the Federation of American Hospitals, Alphabet Inc.'s Google, MedStar Health and One Medical were among the signers of the letter, which also asked Senate leadership to "push for a permanent extension."

Preliminary data released by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services showed that about 1 in 4 hospitals will not be assessed penalties for readmissions for the coming fiscal year, and those that fell short of the Medicare benchmark over the past few years will receive lower reimbursement cuts. CMS for the first time used pandemic-era data to calculate payment adjustments, and for fiscal year 2023, 25.33% of hospitals will not face readmissions penalties, up from 17.81% the previous year.

The American Medical Association, the Medical Society of New Jersey and the Washington State Medical Association signed on to a class-action lawsuit against Cigna Corp., joining plaintiffs that allege that the insurer reimbursed provider claims in the third-party MultiPlan network at its lower nonparticipating providers rate. Cigna did not respond to a request for comment.

$1 billion

The amount Alphabet said it raised in new funding for its health care unit Verily Life Sciences, which is replacing its founder as the company eyes more commercialization seven years after its spinout from Google's X moonshots unit.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- President Joe Biden said in an interview with CBS' "60 Minutes" that while the country still has "a problem" with COVID-19, "the pandemic is over," comments that surprised administration officials, two senior health officials said. Biden's apparent ad-lib was delivered as the administration continues to push Congress for more funding for COVID-19 vaccines, treatments and preventive measures, and as roughly 400 Americans are still dying from the disease per day. (The Washington Post)

- Dr. Anthony Fauci said in an interview with the Financial Times that he's worried that vilification of COVID-19 vaccines by anti-vaxxers "might spill over into that kind of a negative attitude towards childhood vaccinations," leading to "avoidable and unnecessary outbreaks" of preventable diseases. (Financial Times) Dr. Francis Collins, the White House science adviser and former National Institutes of Health director, expressed similar concerns about large swaths of the public losing trust in science and eschewing vaccines, floating the idea of "a Communication Corps for the United States" to combat health-related misinformation. (Stat News)

- Moderna Inc. signed off on a request from the U.N.-backed Medicines Patent Pool to provide the French government with use of its COVID-19 vaccine as part of a World Health Organization effort to increase the development of mRNA vaccines ticketed for poorer countries facing accessibility issues. Pfizer Inc. declined a similar ask, saying in a statement that it is "impossible to support" all of the "requests to collaborate on studies and other initiatives from many different worthy sources." (Bloomberg)

- The Food and Drug Administration approved Bluebird Bio Inc.'s Skysona gene therapy, a first-of-its-kind treatment for a rare neurological disorder in boys known as cerebral adrenoleukodystrophy. Bluebird said the treatment should be available in a limited number of U.S. treatment centers by the end of the year. (Reuters)

Polling Shows Widespread and Strong Support for Medicare Home Health. Congress Must Act to Protect Home Health from Cuts!

A recent Morning Consult poll found widespread support for Medicare home healthcare services, but proposed Medicare cuts will limit seniors' choice and force them into institutional settings. Fortunately, lawmakers can prevent these cuts from going into effect. Congress must listen to voters and quickly pass the Preserving Access to Home Health Act!

CORONAVIRUS

Have researchers hit a wall in the hunt for severe Covid drugs?
Jason Mast, Stat News
Advances in treating the sickest Covid patients have stalled. Since February 2021, no new therapies for the hospitalized have emerged as decisively effective, even as over 2,000 patients continue to die daily around the globe, including 300 to 500 in the U.S.

New Boosters Test Covid-Weary Nation.Do Americans Care?
Jack Healy et al., The New York Times
The new vaccine campaign is one of the country's last remaining strategies, as masks have fallen away and quarantines have diminished. So far, the rollout is methodical but muted.

Parents hesitate to give kids under 5 covid vaccine, worrying health officials
Sabrina Malhi, The Washington Post
In June, when the Food and Drug Administration authorized emergency use of coronavirus vaccines for children younger than 5, physicians expected apprehension among parents — after all, 4 in 10 parents with young children said they would definitely not get their youngsters vaccinated, according to a July Kaiser Family Foundation survey.

America is skeptical of the 'dark horse' COVID vaccine others abroad can't get enough of
Erin Prater, Fortune
However hesitant Americans are about Novavax, for whatever reasons, the situation is quite the opposite elsewhere. The vaccine has been approved in 38 other countries, including Australia, France, Ireland, Italy, Korea, and the U.K., according to the World Health Organization. And Japan and Australia have approved the vaccine for usage as a booster dose, according to the Journal of American Medical Association.

Hundreds of Americans Will Die From COVID Today
Jacob Stern, The Atlantic
Over the past week, an average of 491 Americans have died of COVID each day, according to data compiled by The New York Times. The week before, the number was 382. The week before that, 494. And so on.

Your boss is ordering you back to the office even though they have no idea if COVID is really over
Erin Prater, Fortune
Labor Day marked the end of the total work-from-home era for many U.S. workers, with companies including Apple, Comcast, and Peloton demanding a return to the office after the long holiday weekend. The unspoken premise behind the edict was that the COVID pandemic as we know it is over—or at least a shadow of what it used to be.

The report's most optimistic projections still has hospitals operating at margins 37% below pre-pandemic levels, with pessimistic projections falling to an overall margin decrease of 102%.

Private equity's drive for eye care pushes up costs
Lauren Weber, Kaiser Health News
In the past decade, private equity groups have gone from taking over a handful of practices to working with as many as 8% of the nation's ophthalmologists, said Dr. Robert E. Wiggins Jr., president of the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

Doctors Rush to Use Supreme Court Ruling to Escape Opioid Charges
Brett Kelman, Kaiser Health News
The court's unanimous ruling complicates the Department of Justice's ongoing efforts to hold irresponsible prescribers criminally liable for fueling the opioid crisis. Previously, lower courts had not considered a prescriber's intention. Until now, doctors on trial largely could not defend themselves by arguing they were acting in good faith when they wrote bad prescriptions. Now they can, attorneys say, although it is not necessarily a get-out-of-jail-free card.

Patients for Affordable Drugs taps new leader
Rachel Cohrs, Stat News
Merith Basey, who most recently led a group that promotes access to medicine by pressuring universities, took the helm of Patients for Affordable Drugs as the group is fighting to defend implementation of Democrats' major drug pricing reform package, including a brand-new Medicare drug price negotiation program.

Teva expects to start paying U.S. opioid settlement in 2023
Steven Scheer, Reuters
Teva Pharmaceutical Industries (TEVA.TA) expects to finalise an opioid settlement in the United States by year-end and start paying in 2023, its chief executive said on Sunday, while confirming he was unlikely to renew his contract next year.

Every Cure to seek new uses for generic drugs to treat rare diseases
Karen Weintraub, USA Today
Every Cure aims to raise $55 million to coordinate drug data, identify generics that might offer hope for patients with a rare disease and bring the most promising drugs through clinical trials.

Abbott Faces Competition From Heart Valve Device Cleared by FDA
Peter Loftus, The Wall Street Journal
A new heart valve repair device from Edwards Lifesciences Corp. was as effective as the market-leading device from Abbott Laboratories in a clinical study of heart-disease patients, a finding likely to intensify competition in a growing device market.

The meth crisis is worse than ever, but new treatments could be near
Lev Facher, Stat News
When it comes to meth addiction, Thomas Robey has long been at a loss. As an emergency room doctor, he treats a steady stream of patients who show up at Providence Regional Medical Center in Everett, Wash., after experiencing a methamphetamine overdose.

A Message From the Partnership for Quality Home Healthcare:

Older Americans and Medicare beneficiaries overwhelmingly prefer home healthcare, but proposed Medicare cuts will threaten their access to care. The proposed cuts will also cause overall costs of care to go up due to increased hospital readmission rates, unnecessary hospitalizations, and increased use of nursing home stays. Congress must act quickly to prevent these disastrous cuts from going into effect by passing the Preserving Access to Home Health Act. Learn more at PQHH.org/cuts.

Games That Push the Brain to the Limit Get Scientists' Attention in Fight Against Dementia
Betsy Morris, The Wall Street Journal
You may be able to prevent or delay dementia with changes in diet and exercise, research has found. Now another possible tool for avoiding dementia is getting researchers' attention: specially designed videogames.

Intellia's CRISPR treatment corrects DNA of 6 patients with rare disease
Megan Molteni, Stat News
Intellia Therapeutics said Friday the first six patients to receive its CRISPR-based treatment for a genetic swelling disorder have safely had small, corrective changes made to dysfunctional DNA inside their liver cells.

Curbing patent abuse: Tackling the root of the drug pricing crisis
The Initiative for Medicines, Access, and Knowledge
This report, the latest in I-MAK's Overpatented, Overpriced series, analyzes the ten top selling drugs in the United States and exposes the scale of the patent abuse problem and its impact on U.S. prescription drug spending. By demystifying these manipulative tactics, stakeholders can better understand how drugmakers block or delay competition, and policymakers can take evidence-based action to ensure that the system works better for the public and that every American has the opportunity to thrive.

Marc,

I see the report my program is responsible for is complete and referenced in the Google Link column, which is wonderful. I wanted to let you know that we have now hired our Epidemiology Manager for the HEART Program. This position will be responsible for this and future reports. Our Epi Manager is Taylor Hoj. I have copied Taylor on this message and he may also be reached directly at THoj@Utah.gov.

I am, of course, always happy to help however I can. Please let me know if you have any questions or if you need anything further from me.

Thank you!

SUBJECT: New Co-CEOs Announced to Shape the Future of Essential Access

ESSENTIAL ACCESS HEALTH ANNOUNCES NEW EXECUTIVE LEADERSHIP

Nomsa Khalfani + Amy Moy Named Co-CEOs

Nomsa Khalfani
Co-CEO / Chief Equity + Strategy Officer

Amy Moy
Co-CEO / Chief External Affairs Officer

September 19, 2022 - Essential Access Health (Essential Access) has announced that Nomsa Khalfani, PhD and Amy Moy have been appointed by the organization's Board of Directors to serve as Co-CEOs. Essential Access champions and promotes health equity and high quality sexual and reproductive health care for all across California and Hawai'i, and in states across the country. The organization's transition to a Co-CEO leadership model taps the complementary expertise and experience of two seasoned leaders to advance the organization's mission and its commitment to shaping the future of sexual and reproductive health access in a post-Roe landscape with an equity lens.

Khalfani and Moy succeed Julie Rabinovitz, who resigned as President + CEO on September 6th.

"The Co-CEO model represents the Board's confidence in Nomsa's and Amy's capabilities and shared leadership vision, and aligns with the culture of inclusion and empowerment we want to foster internally and catalyze externally at this critical juncture in sexual and reproductive health. We have a diverse and exceptionally dedicated and capable team at Essential Access and it feels only right that our 'new' leadership arises from - and represents - that diversity and talent," said Nina Kjellson, Essential Access Board Chairwoman.

"These are unprecedented times - and we are at a moment when we need to reimagine what leadership looks like, and how we engage and collaborate both within our own organizations and as a collective movement," said Khalfani. "I am proud of the work Amy and I have achieved as part of the Essential Access leadership team to date, and know together we can and will advance our vision for sexual and reproductive health access, equity, and justice for Black, Indigenous, and other people of color, those with limited resources, and others who have been historically marginalized," she added.

"I am deeply proud and honored to steward the next chapter for Essential Access with Nomsa," said Moy. "The dangerous and harmful patchwork of abortion bans and restrictions sweeping the nation has exponentially exacerbated inequities that have existed for far too long – particularly among communities of color and people with low-incomes. The new landscape demands new approaches, including centering equity, inclusion and justice from the inside out," said Moy.

ABOUT ESSENTIAL ACCESS

Essential Access was established more than fifty years ago, grounded in the belief that the ability to plan our families and futures and make informed, autonomous choices about our sexual and reproductive health are essential for overall health and well-being. The organization's 2021 – 2024 Strategic Framework and Equity Principles provide a roadmap for the organization's work over the next fifty years to advance health equity and make access to high quality, comprehensive sexual and reproductive health services and information a reality for all. You can support this work with a gift to our Ensuring Access Fund.

Nomsa Khalfani has served at Essential Access since 2014. In addition to serving as Co-CEO, she will continue to serve as the organization's Chief Strategy + Equity Officer and head of strategic programs and business development. Before joining Essential Access, Khalfani held several leadership roles at St. John's Well Child and Family Center, a network of federally qualified health centers. She brings over 20 years of experience in child welfare, public health, and health care operations and programs to her new role. Learn more.

[redacted] [redacted]

[redacted] Title

Amy Moy joined Essential Access in 2011 and will continue to serve as Chief External Affairs Officer leading the organization's federal and state policy efforts, strategic communications activities, fund development, and patient education and consumer awareness initiatives. Prior to Essential Access, Amy developed and advanced community engagement and advocacy programs at the Women's Funding Network and launched and directed the network's national campaign to end child sex trafficking in America. Before her work with Women's Funding Network, she had a 10-year career in public affairs at Planned Parenthood affiliates in California's Bay Area and New York City. Learn more.

Hi Marc,

As Tyler mentioned, I will be responsible for these performance measure items in the future. I reached out to DHHS Budget last month regarding this legislative item and provided them with the performance measure information. I've also taken the liberty of adding it to column L of the IMPLEMENTATION sheet in the DHHS Legislative Items Due_2022 Google Sheet document.

I will also forward to you the exchange I had with DHHS Budget about this performance measure last month, and please let me know if you have any questions or need any additional information.

Thanks,

Taylor

Marc,
I should maybe know this better than I do.... Do all of these items require written reports? Or is a report out to the committee sufficient, if a report out is scheduled? (thinking about the item on the Culture Audit, as an example).

Thank you,
HB

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The Department of Justice's antitrust challenge to UnitedHealth Group Inc.'s $13 billion acquisition of Change Healthcare Inc. was rejected by a federal judge, who kept the full opinion under seal due to "competitively sensitive information" but promised to release a redacted version in the coming days. A UnitedHealth spokesman said the company looked forward to combining with the health technology firm "as quickly as possible," while top DOJ antitrust official Jonathan Kanter expressed disappointment in the decision and said the agency is mulling its next steps. (The Wall Street Journal)

- After President Joe Biden surprised his own health advisers in a "60 Minutes" interview by saying "the pandemic is over," administration officials working on the COVID-19 response said their policy planning would stay the course, and there's still an expectation that the emergency public health declaration will be renewed next month. (Politico) Dr. Anthony Fauci said during a Center for Strategic and International Studies event that the United States is "heading in the right direction" on COVID-19 but it's "unlikely" that the disease will be eradicated, as another variant is likely to take hold in the late fall or early winter. (Politico)

- McKesson Corp. said it will buy Rx Savings Solutions for up to $875 million, with $600 million paid upfront to the private pharmaceutical tech firm in a deal expected to close in the second half of fiscal 2023. McKesson Chief Executive Brian Tyler said the acquisition would bolster the drug distributor's "ability to help solve the most common medication challenges related to access, affordability and adherence." (Reuters)

- The founders of PillPack will leave Amazon.com Inc. at the end of September, four years after the e-commerce giant bought the drug prescription startup for $753 million. The departures of TJ Parker and Elliot Cohen follow a number of major health-related moves from Amazon, including its planned purchase of One Medical operator 1LifeHealthcare Inc. and its decision to shutter its Amazon Care telehealth service at the end of 2022. (Bloomberg)

Worth watching today (all times local):

- 8:30 a.m. The Hill event on access to oral health care, featuring Rep. Jan Schakowsky (D-Ill.).
- 1 p.m. Stat News event with JAMA editor-in-chief Kirsten Bibbins-Domingo.
- 2:30 p.m. Surgeon General Vivek Murthy partakes in a Clinton Global Initiative panel on the youth mental health crisis.

Polling Shows Widespread and Strong Support for Medicare Home Health. Congress Must Act to Protect Home Health from Cuts!

A recent Morning Consult poll found widespread support for Medicare home healthcare services, but proposed Medicare cuts will limit seniors' choice and force them into institutional settings. Fortunately, lawmakers can prevent these cuts from going into effect. Congress must listen to voters and quickly pass the Preserving Access to Home Health Act!

CORONAVIRUS

HHS Sec: 'The president is correct' that the COVID-19 pandemic is over
Anjalee Khemlani, Yahoo Finance
U.S. Health Sec. Xavier Becerra supported a surprise comment over the weekend from President Joe Biden, who declared the pandemic over. "The president is correct," Becerra told Yahoo Finance Monday.

Covid will be a leading cause of death indefinitely in the U.S.
Aria Bendix and Shannon Pettypiece, NBC News
"It's likely, when we think of the causes of death in our society, that Covid's on the list probably forever," said Dr. Bob Wachter, the chair of the University of California, San Francisco's department of medicine.

Is the Covid-19 pandemic over? The answer is more art than science
Helen Branswell, Stat News
Reaching the end of a pandemic is not like driving out of one county into the next. There is no fixed demarcation between a pandemic and post-pandemic period, especially for the first recorded pandemic caused by a coronavirus. It's not like we know it's over if cases drop to a certain level for a prescribed length of time.

Chinese Scientists Develop Mask That Detects Covid, Flu Exposure
Low De Wei, Bloomberg
Chinese researchers have developed a mask that lets users know if they've been exposed to Covid-19 or the flu, a development that could help vulnerable populations even as the use of face coverings falls and more nations ease virus restrictions.

New York spent $250M on tech to fight Covid that no one uses
Joseph Spector, Politico
The state acquired 8,555 ventilators at a cost of $166 million and 1,179 X-ray machines for $86.4 million, state officials told POLITICO this month. And now they're stacked in warehouses across New York with no plans to distribute them or put them to any immediate use; Covid treatments have largely moved away from ventilators, and hospitals say they have plenty available to deal with their immediate needs.

GAVI financing to allow for immediate funds for next pandemic

Michael Erman, Reuters
Global vaccine alliance GAVI has set up financial instruments that will allow the group to immediately access pledged donor funding if it needs to buy vaccines for future pandemics, Chief Executive Seth Berkley told Reuters.

Investors ditch vaccine stocks after Joe Biden says 'pandemic is over'
Jamie Smyth, Financial Times
Top jab makers lose combined $10bn of market value amid fears over growing public apathy.

GENERAL

'Out of control' STD situation prompts call for changes
Mike Stobbe, The Associated Press
Sharply rising cases of some sexually transmitted diseases — including a 26% rise in new syphilis infections reported last year — are prompting U.S. health officials to call for new prevention and treatment efforts.

Lack of Data Still Blunts US Response to Outbreaks
Sharon LaFraniere, The New York Times
Major data gaps, the result of decades of underinvestment in public health, have undercut the government response to the coronavirus and now to monkeypox.

J&J tries to block baby powder lawsuits by 40,000 patients. A court has question
Brian Mann, NPR News
An attorney for Johnson and Johnson faced probing questions Monday over the corporation's use of a controversial bankruptcy maneuver that has frozen tens of thousands of lawsuits linked to Johnson's baby powder.

CDC: 80 percent of pregnancy-related deaths are preventable
Chloe Folmar, The Hill
The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) published a recent study concluding that more than 80 percent of pregnancy-related deaths that occurred in 36 U.S. states from 2017-2019 were preventable.

Night owls have higher risk of diabetes, heart disease, study says
Sandee LaMotte, CNN
If you prefer to go to bed and get up later - a sleep chronotype known as being a night owl - you may be at higher risk for type 2 diabetes and heart disease, a new study found.

Doctors want alcohol warning labels to flag cancer risks
Erin Blakemore, The Washington Post
If you drink alcohol, you've probably seen — or overlooked — warning labels on the back of bottles. But those labels haven't been updated since the late 1980s. Now, researchers say they don't adequately advertise alcohol consumption's biggest potential health consequence: cancer, including breast cancer.

The Other Abortion Pill
Patrick Adams, The Atlantic
The first one, mifepristone, blocks the hormone progesterone, which is necessary for a pregnancy to continue. The second, misoprostol, brings on contractions of the uterus that expel its contents. The combination is, according to studies conducted in the U.S., somewhere between 95 percent and 99 percent effective in ending a pregnancy and is extremely safe.

FDA warns online trend of cooking with OTC drugs can cause harm or death
Joseph Choi, The Hill
The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is warning young people against engaging in an online trend that challenges people to cook with over-the-counter drugs, saying there are "significant risks" in using these medications incorrectly.

Push for mental health parity hits turbulence
Peter Sullivan, Axios
Senators eager to address mental health care this year are encountering stiff headwinds in a bid to ensure parity, the idea that health insurers cover behavioral health and substance abuse at the same level as physical health.

FDA Opioid Review Will Be Led by Team at Ohio State, Califf Says
Celine Castronuovo, Bloomberg Law
Subject matter experts at Ohio State University will lead the FDA's external review into its past opioid decisions, the agency's head said Monday.

A potential connection between dementia and air pollution
Judith Graham, The Washington Post
In the past decade, a growing body of research has shown that air pollution harms older adults' brains, contributing to cognitive decline and dementia. What hasn't been clear is whether improving air quality would benefit brain health.

PAYERS

Centene to Pay $166 Million to Texas in Medicaid Drug Pricing Settlement
Andy Miller and Samantha Young, Kaiser Health News
Health insurance giant Centene Corp. has agreed to pay $165.6 million to Texas to resolve claims that it overcharged the state's Medicaid program for pharmacy services.

Hopkins may leave CareFirst network, leaving patients in the lurch
Jenna Portnoy, The Washington Post
Johns Hopkins has warned nearly 300,000 patients that their doctors, nurses and other health care providers may no longer accept CareFirst BlueCross BlueShield health insurance as soon as Dec. 5, jeopardizing patients' access to care.

Health plans' quality ratings reveal improved outcomes, care gaps
Mari Devereaux, Modern Healthcare
Medicare plans scored better in 2021 than Medicaid and commercial plans in key quality areas measured by the National Committee for Quality Assurance.

The kidney dialysis system has problems, so Medicare is jumping in
Isabella Cueto, Stat News
Chronic kidney disease, already a problem affecting millions of Americans, is only expected to become more prevalent as the country ages. For those with the disease, a transplant is the ideal treatment, but dialysis is their reality. Hundreds of thousands of Americans flock to clinics three times a week to have their blood filtered through — in the absence of a functioning kidney — a machine or their abdomen.

PROVIDERS

Healthcare saw less job loss than other industries during pandemic, research finds
Hailey Mensik, Healthcare Dive
Healthcare workers reported unemployment rates of 2.28% compared to 3.82% among non-healthcare workers just before the pandemic. During the pandemic, unemployment rates among healthcare workers rose to 3.18% while those for non-healthcare workers rose to 6.13%, according to the study.

HHS releases road map to address mental health pay parity
Robert King, Fierce Healthcare
The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) released the road map Friday that laid out strategies for integrating mental health and substance abuse care into larger systems. A key pillar of the road map is to make it easier for people to get care, including making reforms to behavioral health financing arrangements in government programs such as Medicaid.

Abortion Doctor's Suit Against 'Complete Strangers' Tossed
Mary Anne Pazanowski, Bloomberg Law
A Texas doctor who admittedly performed an abortion that was illegal under state law must have a Texas state court determine which, if any, of three "complete strangers" can recover statutory damages against him, a federal court in Illinois ruled.

Pfizer accused of running a fellowship program that discriminates on racial grounds
Ed Silverman, Stat News
In a move reflecting simmering controversy over diversity and equity, Pfizer has been accused of running a racially discriminatory fellowship program because it "categorically excludes" white and Asian American applicants, according to a lawsuit filed by an advocacy group that includes doctors, patients, and policymakers. But some legal experts question whether the argument can succeed.

Boston Scientific Allegedly Ignored Complaints Devices Used Unnecessarily
Ike Swetlitz, Bloomberg
Boston Scientific Corp. ignored complaints from its employees that a national medical chain was performing unnecessary procedures with its devices, according to allegations contained within a federal lawsuit against the vascular clinics.

Adderall Shortages in US Spread to Two More Drug Suppliers
Ike Swetlitz, Politico
Lannett Co. and Par Pharmaceuticals, part of Endo International Plc, are the latest companies with limited supply of some doses of generic extended-release Adderall, according to a website updated Monday by the University of Utah's drug-information service, which tracks drug shortages.

House Democrat presses bill to encourage more diversity in clinical trials
Ambar Castillo, Stat News
Rep. Robin Kelly admits that the word "diversity" has scared some of her Republican colleagues away from her effort to improve representation in clinical trials.

New CRISPR startup seeks to fix diseases caused by large DNA errors
Allison DeAngelis, Stat News
Anew CRISPR startup — backed by some big names in venture capital — is planning to develop gene-editing treatments that can insert a genetic sequence of any length, at any location in the DNA strand, according to industry insiders and documents.

A Message From the Partnership for Quality Home Healthcare:

Older Americans and Medicare beneficiaries overwhelmingly prefer home healthcare, but proposed Medicare cuts will threaten their access to care. The proposed cuts will also cause overall costs of care to go up due to increased hospital readmission rates, unnecessary hospitalizations, and increased use of nursing home stays. Congress must act quickly to prevent these disastrous cuts from going into effect by passing the Preserving Access to Home Health Act. Learn more at PQHH.org/cuts.

Meta Faces Mounting Questions from Congress on Health Data Privacy As Hospitals Remove Facebook Tracker
Todd Feathers and Simon Fondrie-Teitler, The Markup
Meta is facing mounting questions about its access to sensitive medical data following a Markup investigation that found the company's pixel tracking tool collecting details about patients' doctor's appointments, prescriptions, and health conditions on hospital websites.

Epic faces a crossroads as new rules put pressure on health data sharing
Casey Ross and Mohana Ravindranath, Stat News
The Wisconsin-based company's contracts now account for nearly half the nation's hospital beds, and in recent months it has jumped out to a commanding lead over No. 2 Oracle Cerner, taking away dozens of customers. More than 253 million Americans, or 77% of the population, are estimated to now have data in the company's software.

Leana S. Wen, The Washington Post
President Biden's off-the-cuff comment during a "60 Minutes" interview that "the pandemic is over" has sparked outrage from all sides. Republicans are accusing Biden of hypocrisy as he asks Congress for more covid-19 funding, while some on the left point to the disease's continued death toll as evidence that the pandemic is nowhere near its finish line.

Preventive services can improve Americans' health, but they are now on trial
Anand Parekh, Stat News
Twelve years after the Affordable Care Act was enacted, it appears to be here to stay, fully integrated into the nation's health care system, extending coverage to more than 30 million Americans and protecting coverage against pre-existing conditions. The Supreme Court has ruled three times that the law is constitutional, and neither political party seems interested in overhauling it.

RESEARCH REPORTS

Prevalence and Risk Factors for Medical Debt and Subsequent Changes in Social Determinants of Health in the US
David U. Himmelstein et al., JAMA Network
In this cross-sectional and cohort study of survey data from 2017 to 2019, 10.8% of adults carried medical debt, including 10.5% of the privately insured, and 9.6% of residents of Medicaid-expansion states, significantly fewer than in nonexpansion states. Over 3 years, decreases in health status and coverage loss were significant risk factors associated with acquiring medical debt, which was, in turn associated with a significant 1.7-fold to 3.1-fold higher risk of worsening housing and food security.

Noel,
Rep. Stenquist indicated that he might run his bill again, so I don't want to say anything about his plans for the bill or our efforts with other funding. I'd rather Rep. Stenquist address that unless we get specific questions from the legislature.

As you know, the bill requires an annual report but the fiscal note for the the funding was for one-time funding for FY 2021, not ongoing funding.

I'm reluctant to report on all efforts within the Department that are related to FASD and alcohol use in pregnancy. In addition to our MOU, I can think of 2 other contracts that deal with FASD (the Medical Home Portal and the Utah Parent Center) and I don't think we should be reporting on any of those for a bill that doesn't fund them.

Thanks.
Al

The United States has the highest maternal mortality rate among industrialized nations, in 2020 it was 23.8 deaths per 100,000 live births, a 14% increase from just two years prior. For every person in the US who dies because of pregnancy or childbirth, it is estimated that up to 70 more people suffer dangerous or life-threatening complications, yet two-thirds of these deaths are preventable. Many experts think the dramatic restrictions on reproductive health care emerging in many states will only increase maternal mortality rates and existing disparities. The rate for Black women is nearly three times higher than White women. This disparity can be attributed to limited access to quality health care, underlying chronic conditions, structural racism, implicit bias, and many of the social determinants of health.
This webinar will explore overall maternal mortality, the impact of changes to reproductive rights, and new approaches and possible solutions that may improve maternal health outcomes. Speakers will discuss:

- The state of the maternal mortality crisis, who is affected, and the possible impact of new laws limiting reproductive health care and new approaches to achieving health equity.
- Risks to maternal health, with a focus on high-risk pregnancies and new challenges facing physicians, midwives, and other care providers.
- Supporting equitable, high-quality reproductive health care in all communities.

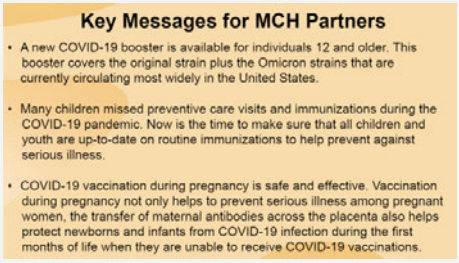
SUBJECT: New COVID-19 Boosters
FROM: "HRSA Maternal and Child Health Bureau (MCHB)" <hrsa@public.govdelivery.com>
TO: hborski@utah.gov
DATE: 20/09/2022 13:26

Help us spread these important messages

Special Message
September 20, 2022

HRSA Maternal & Child Health

Dear MCHB Partner,
As we close out summer and head into fall, I'd like your help promoting one of the most basic primary prevention strategies for MCH populations—immunization against infectious diseases. Right now, we have an important opportunity to promote routine immunizations for children and youth, as well as seasonal influenza and COVID-19 vaccines for all MCH populations.
Help us spread these important messages and ensure mothers, children, and infants have access to the immunizations they need.



COVID-19 Boosters
The CDC recently recommended the following updated mRNA COVID-19 vaccine boosters to help restore protection that has waned since previous vaccination and target more transmissible and immune-evading variants:

- The Moderna bivalent mRNA COVID-19 booster is authorized for people 18 and older.
- The Pfizer bivalent mRNA COVID-19 booster is authorized for people 12 years and up.

These boosters are referred to as "bivalent" vaccines because they target both the original strain of COVID-19 and the Omicron BA.4 and

[redacted] [redacted]

BA.5 subvariants currently circulating in the United States. These updated boosters will help better protect us against these and future variants that might be closely related to Omicron.

Everyone who is eligible to receive the bivalent booster – including those who are moderately and severely immunocompromised – are recommended to receive ONE dose of the booster regardless of how many doses they have received previously. Those eligible may receive the updated booster if at least 2 months have passed since their last COVID-19 dose (either the final primary series dose or the last booster).

The original (monovalent) mRNA COVID-19 vaccine boosters are no longer authorized for people aged 12 years and older and can no longer be given to them, even if they had not previously received a monovalent booster dose. Children ages 5-11 should still receive the monovalent booster (at least 5 months after their second dose).

Routine Childhood Immunizations, Seasonal Influenza, & COVID-19 Vaccination can be co-administered

COVID-19 disrupted both in-person learning and routine well-child visits for many children. As a result, tens of thousands of children and adolescents have fallen behind on receiving recommended vaccines.

Timely vaccination is critical, as immunization schedules are designed to provide children with immunity early in life before they may be exposed to life-threatening diseases. Not only do delayed or missed vaccines leave children vulnerable to illness but when vaccination rates fall even just a little, vaccine-preventable diseases can spread easily.

We know from studies conducted throughout the pandemic that receiving a COVID-19 vaccine at the same time as routine immunizations is safe. If multiple vaccines are due, giving more than one vaccine at the same visit is important because it increases the probability that an individual will be up to date with vaccines.

In addition, with both influenza and COVID-19 viruses circulating, getting both the Flu and COVID-19 vaccines is important for prevention of severe disease, hospitalization, and death. CDC recommends health care providers offer influenza and COVID-19 vaccines at the same visit, with each dose administered in separate limbs.

COVID-19 Vaccines during Pregnancy

Despite the increased risk of severe COVID-19 among pregnant women, the increased risk of pregnancy complications, and a growing body of evidence showing COVID-19 vaccination during pregnancy to be safe and effective, only 71% of pregnant women in the U.S., and only 58% of pregnant non-Hispanic Black women, were fully vaccinated as of August 27, 2022. Several factors appear to be associated with a higher likelihood of maternal COVID-19 vaccination, including recommendation from trusted health care providers, data on vaccine safety, and evidence that vaccination during pregnancy can protect the newborn babies and infants.

Protection from COVID-19 infection is especially important for infants younger than 6 months as they are at higher risk of severe illness and hospitalization than older children and unable to receive COVID-19 vaccination. A recent study found that completing a two-dose primary mRNA COVID-19 vaccine series during pregnancy can help protect babies younger than 6 months old from hospitalization due to COVID-19.

Providers should counsel patients on the benefits of COVID-19 vaccination during pregnancy for both pregnant women and their infants. The COVID-19 vaccine is safe and effective during pregnancy and can protect newborns and young infants from severe COVID-19 infections and hospitalization.

Please reach out to your Project Officer if you have any questions regarding routine immunizations or vaccination against COVID-19 or seasonal influenza. Thank you for your efforts every day to improve the health of America's mothers, children, and families.

Sincerely,

Michael D. Warren, MD, MPH, FAAP
Associate Administrator, Maternal and Child Health Bureau

The following reports are due to the Legislature by October 1, 2022:

For those reports ready for EDO review, a google doc link has been included.
For those reports that do not have a google doc included, these reports are due to EDO no later than this FRIDAY, September 23 (to give EDO at least one week for review).

As a reminder, these reports are legislatively required. Some of them are recurring reports that have individual citations in code. Other reports are required as intent language passed in various budget bills this year.

If you feel you were incorrectly identified as being responsible for the report, please send a message to me, your ELT-level supervisor, and the staff member you feel should be responsible.

Please make these a priority so we can meet these legislative deadlines.

Graham's Proposed Abortion Ban Is Divisive
Sen. Lindsey Graham's introduction of a 15-week abortion ban last week was met with groans from some Republican leaders, still smarting from a run of Democratic wins in special elections following the reversal of Roe v. Wade.

The Morning Consult/Politico survey this week underscores some reasons for the GOP consternation: The electorate is split down the middle on the South Carolinian's proposed ban, with women and independent voters more likely to oppose it.

Check out the full story here: Voters Are Divided on Lindsey Graham's 15-Week Abortion Ban.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The U.S. Preventive Services Task Force recommended that all adults under 65 be screened by doctors for anxiety, the first such recommendation from the panel of medical experts that they say is intended to ensure that mental health disorders don't go untreated. The Health and Human Services Department-appointed advisory group, which pointed to a study that found that the share of U.S. adults exhibiting recent symptoms of an anxiety or depressive disorder jumped to 41.5% from 36.4% from August 2020 to February 2021, will review public comments through Oct. 17 and issue final guidance sometime after that. (The New York Times)

- The American Hospital Association and the American Medical Association dropped their lawsuit against the federal government over the implementation of Congress' surprise billing law, which alleged that the rulemaking process shifted from lawmakers' intent and favored payers during independent arbitration. AHA and AMA believe their lawsuit became unnecessary after the final rule on the No Surprises Act was released in August, though the trade groups suggested that fresh legal action could follow. (Healthcare Dive)

- Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc. will acquire an additional 30% stake in Shields Health Solutions for $1.37 billion, giving the pharmacy giant full ownership of the company that partners with providers to deliver specialty pharmacy services. Walgreens, which began building its stake in Shields in July 2019, is expected to close the deal to assume total ownership by the end of 2022. (The Wall Street Journal)

- A report from HHS' Office of Inspector General found that Medicare paid out more than $1 million in duplicate claims in 2019 to critical access hospitals and providers, and called on the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services to launch post-payment reviews. The watchdog report said the creation of a new claims system would "prevent and detect overpayments for professional service payments," while CMS in response said developing that kind of system "may not be appropriate at this time due to the low dollar amount of the errors." (Fierce Healthcare)

Joel Achenbach, The Washington Post
Biosecurity advisers to the federal government are calling for tighter scrutiny of experiments with potentially dangerous viruses and other pathogens, reflecting an ongoing debate within the scientific community over the benefits and risks of such laboratory research. This contentious issue has become even more rancorous amid speculation that some kind of "lab leak" might have played a role in the origin of the coronavirus.

Long COVID might be a lot more common than we think, as symptoms linger 2 years later for 20% of survivors, new study finds
Erin Prater, Fortune
How long do long COVID symptoms linger? It's the question on the mind of millions of sufferers. Less than three years into the pandemic, answers are limited. But those in Wuhan, China—where the outbreak began in late 2019—would know best, as they've lived with the virus' repercussions the longest.

New bill aims to curtail surprise medical bills for sexual assault survivors
Aria Bendix, NBC News
The new bill was introduced by Reps. Linda T. Sánchez, D-Calif.; Gwen Moore, D-Wis.; and Carol Miller, R-W.Va. It would give the departments of Labor, the Treasury, and Health and Human Services the authority to designate types of providers beyond SANEs who'd be eligible to give forensic exams that would be fully covered by private insurance, starting in 2025. The lawmakers' hope is that survivors with private insurance would not get billed for an exam, regardless of where it's performed.

When to Get Your Flu Shot and Other Advice for This Flu Season
Alex Janin, The Wall Street Journal
A surge in cases in Australia, where winter is just wrapping up, may portend a similar rise in the coming season here as temperatures start to cool. A widespread reduction in Covid-19 precautions also points to the possibility of a more substantial flu season this year compared with the past two, which were relatively mild.

Poxviruses, outbreaks, and Ebola: A Q&A with a retiring CDC expert on bad bugs
Helen Branswell, Stat News
To outside eyes, the timing of Inger Damon's departure could be seen as odd or unfortunate, given that after years of relative obscurity, poxviruses are at the center of the world's infectious diseases radar, thanks to the ongoing monkeypox outbreak. Though the growth of case numbers had slowed, there was no sign the crisis was under control. Many challenges remain ahead.

A Message From the Partnership for Quality Home Healthcare:

Older Americans and Medicare beneficiaries overwhelmingly prefer home healthcare, but proposed Medicare cuts will threaten their access to care. The proposed cuts will also cause overall costs of care to go up due to increased hospital readmission rates, unnecessary hospitalizations, and increased use of nursing home stays. Congress must act quickly to prevent these disastrous cuts from going into effect by passing the Preserving Access to Home Health Act. Learn more at PQHH.org/cuts.

Bleeding Americans Dry: The Role of Big Hospital Corporations in Driving our Nation's Health Care Affordability and Quality Crisis
Families USA
The major strategy in hospitals' current business model is to generate profit by buying up other hospitals and doctor's offices to become large corporate health care systems that maximize service volumes and increase health care prices. The financial incentives of this business model are costly, and wasteful and are in direct conflict with ensuring that consumers and patients have the best health and affordable health care they deserve. This paper, the second in the series, lays out the profound misalignment between hospitals' business models and ensuring affordable, high-quality health care for our nation's families, and lays out key policy solutions.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The Health and Human Services Department's Office of Inspector General said in a report that the Food and Drug Administration's emergency use authorization policies resulted in quality issues and false results with COVID-19 tests that quickly hit the market during the early stages of the pandemic. The HHS watchdog said the government should overhaul its EUA strategy before another pandemic occurs, advocating for a "coordinated federal effort to determine a federal testing strategy" that involves stakeholder feedback, improved communication practices with testing labs, more specific guidance on test validation and additional FDA support throughout the process. (Modern Healthcare)

- The reformulated COVID-19 boosters from Moderna Inc. and Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech SE are expected to be available for children by the middle of next month, per the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, with a recommendation from the agency coming as soon as early October provided the shots are authorized by the FDA. The Pfizer bivalent vaccine would be available for children ages 5-11, while Moderna's booster is expected to be used in kids between 6 and 17, the CDC said. (Reuters)

- Dr. Anthony Fauci said during an interview at The Atlantic Festival that President Joe Biden's declaration that "the pandemic is over" was "semantics" and that he actually intended to convey that "we're in a much better place with regard to the fulminant stage of the pandemic." Fauci said the country is in a new phase where vaccines and antiviral treatments ensure that there aren't sudden surges in the death toll, even as case counts and hospitalization rates seesaw. (The Atlantic)

- HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra declared a public health emergency in Puerto Rico after the island was battered by Hurricane Fiona last weekend and continues to deal with flooding, power outages and other fallout from the storm. HHS' National Disaster Medical System has sent 15 people to Puerto Rico, while another 10 from the agency's management team are also on the island, moves that come after Biden issued an emergency declaration and charged the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Department of Homeland Security with overseeing disaster relief. The Fatal Error of an Ancient, HIV-Like Virus
Many, many millions of years ago, an HIV-like virus wriggled its way into the genome of a floofy, bulgy-eyed lemur, and got permanently stuck.

Monkeypox has worsened stigma of skin conditions like eczema, psoriasis
Amanda Morris, The Washington Post
A cashier with psoriasis received daily complaints from customers at work. A traveler with eczema was escorted off a flight and questioned by airline employees. A commuter with small, benign tumors on her body was unknowingly filmed and scrutinized on social media. All of them were singled out because people mistakenly believed they had monkeypox.

To contain monkeypox, colleges must step up outreach to LGBTQ+ students, experts say
Nadra Nittle, The 19th
Multiple colleges and universities have reported monkeypox cases, but the resources they have to fight the virus aren't equal.

Wisconsin's governor eyes statewide vote on 'criminal' abortion ban
Zach Schonfeld, The Hill
Wisconsin Gov. Tony Evers (D) on Wednesday called a special session of the state legislature for October in an effort to enable voters to repeal the state's 1849 abortion ban through a referendum.

Abortion looms over 2022 state ballots
Oriana Gonzalez and Victoria Knight, Axios
Five forthcoming state ballot initiatives on abortion rights could add fissures to the fractured post-Roe landscape and the evolving patchwork of reproductive health policies.

Death Is Anything but a Dying Business as Private Equity Cashes In Markian Hawryluk, Kaiser Health News
Private equity firms are investing in health care from cradle to grave, and in that latter category quite literally. A small but growing percentage of the funeral home industry — and the broader death care market — is being gobbled up by private equity-backed firms attracted by high profit margins, predictable income, and the eventual deaths of tens of millions of baby boomers.

'Poison Pill' Threats Blamed for Medical Innovation Bill Delay
Alex Ruoff and Jeannie Baumann, Bloomberg Law
Partisan bickering is holding up a biomedical innovation bill in the House, the legislation's main Democratic sponsor said.

A Message From the Partnership for Quality Home Healthcare:

Older Americans and Medicare beneficiaries overwhelmingly prefer home healthcare, but proposed Medicare cuts will threaten their access to care. The proposed cuts will also cause overall costs of care to go up due to increased hospital readmission rates, unnecessary hospitalizations, and increased use of nursing home stays. Congress must act quickly to prevent these disastrous cuts from going into effect by passing the Preserving Access to Home Health Act. Learn more at PQHH.org/cuts.

Genetic Tests Create Treatment Opportunities and Confusion for Breast Cancer Patients
Michelle Andrews, Kaiser Health News
The past decade has witnessed a rapid expansion of genetic tests, including new instruments to inform patients who have been diagnosed with breast cancer about the risk of recurrence and to guide their treatment.

After early wins, CRISPR gene editing is about to get a lot harder
Jason Mast, Stat News
The short history of CRISPR gene editing in humans has, with rare exception, been a history of triumphant progress: A patient apparently cured of sickle cell in 2019, six patients with toxic DNA knocked out of their livers last year, another six patients with a different strand of toxic liver DNA knocked out last week.

Researchers show they can quickly turn CAR-T cells on and off
Jonathan Wosen, Stat News
Researchers reported Wednesday that they could quickly and reliably turn CAR-T cells on and off in cancer patients, giving scientists an unprecedented level of control over this potent — but at times dangerous — oncology therapy.

CDC Oversells the 'Bivalent' Covid Shot
Paul A. Offit, The Wall Street Journal
The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends that everyone over 12 receive a "bivalent" Covid-19 vaccine as a booster dose. But only a select group are likely to benefit, and the evidence to date doesn't support the view that a bivalent vaccine containing omicron or its subvariants is better than the monovalent vaccine. The CDC risks eroding the public's trust by overselling the new shot.

US records steady decline in cancer death rates

[redacted]

(Pixabay)

US cancer death rates continue to drop in recent years driven by declines in smoking rates and improvements in cancer diagnosis and treatment, according to a report from the American Association for Cancer Research. The number of cancer survivors nationwide jumped from 3 million in 1971 to 18 million this year, and the overall five-year survival rate for all cancers rose from 49% in the mid-1970s to almost 70% between 2011 and 2017. Full Story: CNN (9/21)

Noncommunicable diseases account for 74% of global deaths

A World Health Organization report showed noncommunicable diseases kill 41 million people worldwide annually, surpassing the toll of infectious diseases and killing someone younger than 70 every two seconds. Noncommunicable diseases, most of which are preventable, account for 74% of global deaths, and among the top killers are cardiovascular diseases, cancers, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes. Full Story: Voice of America (9/21), Forbes (tiered subscription model) (9/21)

Report: US hospital prices jump as much as 31% since 2015

(Christopher Furlong/Getty Images)

A report from patient advocacy group Families USA found that hospital prices in the US have risen by up to 31% since 2015, increasing more than fourfold over the pace of employee wage growth. The paper calls for greater competition in the sector and improved transparency to make hospital care more affordable. Full Story: RevCycle Intelligence (9/21)

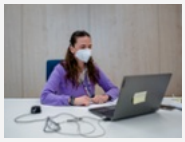
Out-of-state telehealth visits common among Medicare beneficiaries



(NurPhoto/Getty Images)

Five percent of telehealth visits in the first half of last year covered by Medicare were between a patient in one state and a clinician in another, according to a study in JAMA Health Forum. One-third of beneficiaries who had a telehealth visit in the study period lived within 15 miles of a state border, those beneficiaries accounted for 57.2% of out-of-state visits, and a previous study found most patients with an out-of-state visit had previously seen the clinician in person. Full Story: Medscape (free registration) (9/20)

Study links certain foods to lower mortality risk in T2D

(Pixabay)

A systematic review and meta-analysis presented at the European Association for the Study of Diabetes' annual conference found people with type 2 diabetes whose diets were rich in whole grains, fish, fiber and omega-3 polyunsaturated fatty acids had a lower all-cause mortality risk than T2D patients who consumed low amounts of the foods and nutrients. However, the research also revealed knowledge gaps, and researcher Janett Barbaresko said more studies are needed. Full Story: Medscape (free registration) (9/20)

The whole-person mindset

Health plans increasingly underscore the importance of whole-person care and a holistic approach to health. Susan Beaton of Wellframe and Dominick Bizzarro of MVP Health Care discuss what this idea means and how health insurers can integrate a whole-member mindset into their plans to meet the physical, behavioral and experiential needs of members, wherever they are. Listen now.

EMERGING TRENDS: SOCIAL DETERMINANTS OF HEALTH

Advocates call for collaboration on collection of race data

Collaboration among health care professionals, state agencies and health insurers is needed to improve collection, validation and exchange of data on race, ethnicity and language to develop targeted interventions, according to an article in Health Affairs. The authors suggested establishing a clinical and business case for improving REL data systems, establishing consensus around standard data collection and validation methods, developing training and education programs, and providing technical assistance where needed. Full Story: EHR Intelligence (9/19)

Humana to offer implicit bias, cultural humility training

Humana has teamed up with Chartis Just Health Collective to offer cultural humility and implicit bias training to its network of primary care providers in South Florida and Texas, as part of its broader efforts to advance health equity and whole-person care. The pilot program, which will start next month, aims to upskill providers to allow them to address the needs of more diverse patient populations and give them the ability to recognize implicit bias, cultural humility and their impact on health equity. Full Story: Health Payer Intelligence (9/15)

Most pregnancy-related deaths could be avoided

The CDC's Maternal Mortality Review Committees found that from 2017 to 2019, more than eight out of 10 pregnancy-related deaths in the US could have been prevented, including those related to mental health conditions, heart disease, hemorrhaging, blood clots, infection and cardiomyopathy. The panel said better access to insurance coverage for prenatal and postnatal care, removal of transportation barriers, and better referral and care coordination systems are needed. Full Story: Axios (9/20)

Getting to Clean, Actionable Data

The key to providing effective healthcare is data, but if there's one word to describe the state of healthcare data today, it's "messy." A clinical data integration strategy helps payers successfully integrate disparate data and choose an effective data management solution.

Access to Healthy Food

Living in a food desert means less nutritious options for this local family

9/21/2022 — DeFuniak Springs, FL

A food desert is a geographic area where residents may have low income and low access to healthy foods, mainly due to a lack of grocery stores. Between Escambia, Santa Rosa, Okaloosa, and Walton counties, 24 geographic areas are identified as food deserts, affecting over 102,000 Northwest Floridians.

Wisconsin districts seek solutions as school lunch quality comes under fire

9/21/2022 — Kenosha, WI

When Sadie Perez entered Indian Trail High School and Academy on a November morning, school work was not on her mind. Instead, the then-junior was focused on an upcoming speech to the Kenosha School Board. She planned to bring a pressing concern to their next meeting — bad lunches. Like the majority of schools in Wisconsin, the Kenosha Unified School District offered free meals to students during the 2021-22 academic year. But Perez and other students started to notice smaller portions, what appeared to be undercooked meat and fruit and vegetables covered with dark spots.

THIS HAPPENED

The US recorded a steady decline in cancer death rates

(Pixabay)

Why it matters: If you're a regular reader of WYWW, you know that cancer has had an outsized impact on several editors' lives, so this is welcome news. US cancer death rates continue to drop in recent years, driven by declines in smoking rates and improvements in cancer diagnosis and treatment, according to a report from the American Association for Cancer Research. The number of cancer survivors nationwide jumped from 3 million in 1971 to 18 million this year, and the overall five-year survival rate for all cancers rose from 49% in the mid-1970s to almost 70% between 2011 and 2017. Disparities still exist among historically underrepresented populations, and greater use of e-cigarettes threaten to unwind some of the progress, so the AACR is calling for increased funding for the National Institutes of Health and the National Cancer Institute. Full Story: CBS News (9/22), CNN (9/21)

The Webb Telescope captured sharp images of Neptune

Why it matters: Astronomers using NASA's James Webb Space Telescope saw jaw-dropping images of the ice giant Neptune, the best photos taken of the planet since 1989. Infrared instruments on the telescope allowed it to get images of the planet's rings, dust bands and half of its 14 moons. Some of the pictures returned from the telescope indicated that Neptune's atmosphere may be warming. Researchers couldn't contain their excitement: Planetary scientist Heidi Hammel said on Twitter that she "ugly-cried" when she saw the first images from the telescope. Full Story: NBC News (9/21)

Babies in the womb liked carrots, didn't like kale

Why it matters: Researchers in England split 70 pregnant women into two groups -- one that took a capsule of kale powder, and the other a capsule of carrot powder, shortly before undergoing an ultrasound scan. They then analyzed the ultrasound scans frame by frame to gauge the fetuses' reactions. The kale capsule elicited an expression that looked like crying twice as often as its carrot counterpart or no capsule, and the fetuses also appeared to laugh two times as often after the carrot capsule, compared with a kale capsule or no capsule. I might have the same reaction when it comes to kale vs. carrots, myself.

Holiday shopping deals started early

Why it matters: In an effort to head off the effects that rising inflation is having on shoppers, Target and Walmart said today that they will start holiday sales and price matching sooner this year. The retail giants will expand their discounts and sales offerings and also lengthen their windows for returning gifts. Analysts are expecting a significantly slower holiday season than last year's. Full Story: ABC News/The Associated Press (9/22)

FOR YOUR DINING PLEASURE

Queen Elizabeth II's recipe for pancakes was shared

Why it matters: A note from the former monarch of the UK, who died Sept. 8, to then-US President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1960 that included a recipe for "drop scones" (better known as pancakes stateside) was recently posted on Reddit. If you do decide to try your hand at whipping them up, you might want to invite some friends: The recipe serves 16 people. Or, if you prefer to make a smaller batch, you can follow the queen's advice to Ike: "[W]hen there are fewer people, I generally put in less flour and milk, but use the other ingredients as stated." Full Story: Food Network (9/21)

Starting Lineup figures made a comeback

Why it matters: Throwbacks seem to hold a special place in sports fans' hearts (think retro sneakers and uniforms, for starters), so this move makes perfect sense. The NBA is teaming with toymaker Hasbro to bring back Starting Lineup figures (remember these from the late 1980s?) of some of its current star players, including Stephen Curry, Luka Doncic, LeBron James and Trae Young. The toys are a little more advanced -- and expensive -- than their predecessors: The current figures come with accessories, a trading card and a code for an NFT trading card, and retail for $49.99 each. Full Story: The Post-Standard (Syracuse, N.Y.) "Chucky"-inspired beer became a thing

Why it matters: Elysian Brewing partnered with Syfy and USA Network to celebrate the second season of "Chucky" with a limited-edition "Chucky: A Killer Wit Beer" that's being sold at select bars and stores, accompanied by a QR code that unlocks an augmented reality experience starring the scary doll. A 60-second spot shows Chucky (of "Child's Play" horror movie fame) terrorizing one of the brand's employees at its brewery before disappearing into a vat of the new pumpkin beer. Full Story: Ad Age (tiered subscription model) (9/21), Adweek (9/21)

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee ranking member Richard Burr (R-N.C.) reached an agreement with Sen. Patty Murray (D-Wash.), the committee chair, on a five-year reauthorization of the Food and Drug Administration's user fee programs, a "practically clean" bill, per Burr, which includes some policy riders that he did not specify. (Roll Call) Two sources familiar with the discussions said Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) will push for a totally clean five-year user fee bill, blocking the riders from being attached to the short-term government funding bill, which Congress is planning to consider next week. (Politico Pro)

- Sen. Roger Marshall (R-Kan.) has moved to force a vote in the chamber on ending the COVID-19 national emergency declaration, citing President Joe Biden's comments that "the pandemic is over" while the administration pushes for billions in fresh funding. (The Wall Street Journal) The Biden administration, meanwhile, is scaling back its target for COVID-19 vaccine donations as global demand for the shots sags, amending its deal with Pfizer Inc. to secure 600 million vaccine doses by the end of 2022 instead of 1 billion. (Bloomberg)

- Maria Van Kerkhove, the World Health Organization's COVID-19 technical lead, said cutbacks to testing and surveillance of the virus by governments around the world have made it increasingly challenging to track new variants. WHO Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said that while the pandemic's "end is in sight," there remains a "risk of more dangerous variants emerging." (CNBC)

- In a 56-40 vote, the Senate confirmed Arati Prabhakar as director of the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy, making her the first woman, person of color and immigrant to hold the position. Prabhakar, who previously led the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, will also assume the Cabinet-level position of Biden's science adviser, stepping in for former National Institutes of Health Director Francis Collins, who served in the role on an interim basis. 4.4M Americans Roll up Sleeves for Omicron-Targeted Boosters
Carla K. Johnson, The Associated Press
U.S. health officials say 4.4 million Americans have rolled up their sleeves for the updated COVID-19 booster shot. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention posted the count Thursday as public health experts bemoaned President Joe Biden's recent remark that "the pandemic is over."

Moderna Covid-19 Booster Shortage Leads to Fewer Appointments at Pharmacies
Peter Loftus, The Wall Street Journal
Some U.S. pharmacies and other vaccine providers are offering the new Covid-19 booster shot only from Pfizer Inc. and BioNTech SE, after a manufacturing-quality problem at a contract manufacturer caused a shortage of Moderna Inc.'s new booster shot.

Why COVID Is Still Worse Than Flu
Sarah Zhang, The Atlantic
When is the pandemic "over"? In the early days of 2020, we envisioned it ending with the novel coronavirus going away entirely. When this became impossible, we hoped instead for elimination: If enough people got vaccinated, herd immunity might largely stop the virus from spreading. When this too became impossible, we accepted that the virus would still circulate but imagined that it could become, optimistically, like one of the four coronaviruses that cause common colds or, pessimistically, like something more severe, akin to the flu.

Why Omicron Might Stick Around
Carl Zimmer, The New York Times
Where is Pi? Last year, the World Health Organization began assigning Greek letters to worrying new variants of the coronavirus. The organization started with Alpha and swiftly worked its way through the Greek alphabet in the months that followed. When Omicron arrived in November, it was the 13th named variant in less than a year.

Some Who Rushed to Covid-19 Vaccine Hold Off on Boosters
Jared S. Hopkins, The Wall Street Journal
Health authorities encouraging retooled Covid-19 boosters are facing resistance from an unlikely corner: people who had embraced vaccines earlier in the pandemic.

White House casts drug pricing law as way to extend cancer patients' lives
Rachel Cohrs, Stat News
A new analysis by the Council of Economic Advisers focused on the new law capping Medicare patients' out-of-pocket costs for pharmacy drugs at $2,000 per year, starting in 2025. Over 449,000 current Medicare enrollees with a prior cancer diagnosis would save an average of nearly $1,600 per year on prescription drugs because of the out-of-pocket cap. Right now, there's no limit on patients' out-of-pocket costs.

A Message From the Partnership for Quality Home Healthcare:

Older Americans and Medicare beneficiaries overwhelmingly prefer home healthcare, but proposed Medicare cuts will threaten their access to care. The proposed cuts will also cause overall costs of care to go up due to increased hospital readmission rates, unnecessary hospitalizations, and increased use of nursing home stays. Congress must act quickly to prevent these disastrous cuts from going into effect by passing the Preserving Access to Home Health Act. Learn more at PQHH.org/cuts.

Health apps share your concerns with advertisers. HIPAA can't stop it.
Tatum Hunter and Jeremy B. Merrill, The Washington Post
Digital health care has its advantages. Privacy isn't one of them. In a nation with millions of uninsured families and a shortage of health professionals, many of us turn to health-care apps and websites for accessible information or even potential treatment. But when you fire up a symptom-checker or digital therapy app, you might be unknowingly sharing your concerns with more than just the app maker.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Market share isn't the only metric for biosimilars' success
Jeff Baldetti, Stat News
Market share is often held up as the most relevant metric for the success of a biosimilar class. I believe there are other metrics, like cost savings or signs of greater patient access, that should also be used to define biosimilars' successes or failures.

RESEARCH REPORTS

[Biosimilar Savings Among People With Employer-Sponsored Insurance Not Keeping Pace With Savings in Medicare]
Jessica Chang and Aditi Sen, Health Care Cost Institute
Biologic drugs include a range of life-saving medications to treat cancer, diabetes, rheumatoid arthritis, retinal diseases, and many other conditions. Unlike "small molecule" drugs (e.g., statins), which can generally be taken at home, biologics are typically infusions or injections which require administration by a physician or other clinician in a hospital or physician's office. While just 2% of Americans use a biologic drug, the cost of these drugs to patients and insurers has drawn increasing attention from policymakers.

Cancer death rates continue to fall, driven by new treatments and improved screening

WEDNESDAY, September 23 (NBC) — Significant strides in cancer treatments, diagnostic tools and prevention strategies continue to drive down cancer death rates, according to a report published Wednesday by the American Association for Cancer Research.

Death rates from cancer have been falling over the past two decades, particularly sharply in recent years, the group's annual Cancer Progress Report found. As a result, there are now more than 18 million cancer survivors in the U.S. — up from 3 million in 1971.

1,700 miles and counting for cancer prevention

Water is spraying from the fountain at Point State Park. Clouds dot the blue skies in Pittsburgh and our team of four riders are brimming with excitement. I press the red button on my phone screen, and we are live, sharing our departure with folks that follow us on social media. There is a high school field trip next to where we are standing. Some of the kids with big smiles get into our camera shot and the ride begins.

Over the next five days, we traveled on our bikes from the Steel City to the nation's capital—a 340-mile trek on gravel and dirt paths that meander through the beautiful countryside of Western Pennsylvania and Maryland. That was 2021. This year, our journey on two-wheels begins September 29th. Five days has been trimmed to four and our group of four cyclists has grown to eight.

With the September 30 funding deadline just a week away, lawmakers are inching toward a continuing resolution (CR) that would fund the government at current levels until mid-December. Legislators have reached a bipartisan agreement to include the $11.7 billion in Ukraine aid requested by President Biden. Senator Richard Burr (R-NC) also said that a measure extending Food and Drug Administration (FDA) user fees will be attached to the CR, but Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) indicated that his party will oppose user fee reauthorization if it has any additional attachments. Senator Joe Manchin's (D-WV) energy permitting reform proposal is the main roadblock to achieving a funding deal. Senator Roy Blunt (R-MO), a senior member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said that Manchin's proposal will likely be removed from the upcoming CR. It is anticipated that legislative text for the CR will be released sometime next week.

Additional Updates from Cornerstone Government Affairs: The latest intel on the negotiations on the continuing resolution (CR) is it will not be finalized until at least September 29th. Senators Manchin and Schumer struck a deal to include permitting reform with the CR, but it is unclear if everyone needed will fall in line to make it happen. A group of liberal House members and Senator Markey have come out in opposition. The reform would make changes to the permitting system of fossil and renewable energy projects. No agreement as of Tuesday on if the House or Senate will initiate the proceedings, but if permitting reform continues to be a challenge on the vote count, then it would very likely the House will take the lead. Additional aid for Ukraine, disaster relief money for Mississippi, and FDA user fees are high on the list to possibly be included in the CR. If the user fee agreements are not extended soon, the FDA will have to begin sending out layoff notices to employees. COVID-19 and Monkeypox funding will likely not be included but are still in the mix. The proposed CR is projected to run to December 16th.

For the first time, US task force proposes recommendation to screen for anxiety in adults

The United States Preventive Services Task Force (USPSTF) now recommends that adults under the age of 65 should be screened for anxiety. The USPSTF defines anxiety as "greater duration or intensity of a stress response over everyday events." The recommendation coincides with a surge in cases of anxiety and depression caused by the COVID-19 pandemic.

Cancer death rates continue to fall, driven by new treatments and improved screening

The American Association for Cancer Research (AACR) released its annual Cancer Progress Report, which documents cancer incidence, mortality, survivorship statistics, and the latest medical research. The report found that the cancer mortality rate declined by 2.3 percent between 2016 and 2019 and that 18 million Americans with a history of cancer are living longer and fuller lives compared to previous years. AACR credits advances in cancer research, early screening, and Food and Drug Administration (FDA) support of 18 anticancer therapeutics for improvements in cancer treatment in the United States. However, the report also highlighted areas for improvement like the need for reducing health disparities amongst historically underserved communities.

4 out 5 pregnancy-related deaths in the US are preventable, CDC finds

According to data collected by the CDC, over 80 percent of pregnancy-related deaths between 2017 and 2019 were preventable. The leading underlying causes of death included depression, substance abuse, excessive bleeding, cardiac conditions, and infection. The CDC's recommendations to reduce preventable pregnancy-related deaths are to increase access to health insurance and remove barriers to transportation to care.

Losing weight could help protect your knees from arthritis

A recent study published in Arthritis and Rheumatology found that weight loss helps prevent the progression of knee osteoarthritis. Study participants who managed to drop from one body mass index category to another – from "overweight" to "healthy weight" – lowered their risk of developing osteoarthritis by 22 percent. Even participants who lost less weight "achieved protection against structural degeneration of the knee." According to the CDC, over 32 million U.S. adults suffer from some form of osteoarthritis.

Hemp-derived delta-8 skirts marijuana laws and raises health concerns

Delta-8 tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), an artificial cannabinoid legalized through the 2018 Farm Bill, has raised significant health concerns. The FDA has issued warnings about "serious health risks" and has received over 100 reports of people losing consciousness, vomiting, and hallucinating. From January 2021 to February 2022, national poison control centers received over 2,300 calls related to delta-8 and 70 percent of such calls required users to be evaluated at a healthcare facility.

EDO -

Below is a table of the latest batch of Legislative Required Reports. Please conclude your review by COB next Friday (September 30th) so I can turn them into the legislature on time.

We are still waiting for the links to three reports. I have Cc'd those staff and their immediate supervisors so they can reply to this thread with those links once they are ready for EDO review. The three reports are:

> The Legislature intends that the Department of Health and Human Services report by October 1, 2022 to the Social Services Appropriations Subcommittee on the cost and likely impact of suggested interventions to reduce the number of sudden unexplained infant deaths.
> The Legislature intends that the Department of Health and Human Services report by October 1, 2022 to the Social Services Appropriations Subcommittee on options to expand Medicaid Graduate Medical Education funding by reviewing what other states have done on: (1) How many settings in Utah other than hospital settings that could be eligible?, (2) What new providers of third party match not currently participating could qualify?, (3) Estimates of costs for new match money where General Fund match would be required and options for related programs where match might be transferred, and (4) interest of new third party match providers in participating.
> Violent incidents and fatalities involving substance abuse; drug overdose deaths; and recommendations for prevention

Here are the reports ready for your review:

Marc, I tried to get into and would like to make edits in several of these reports, and they aren't set up to provide edit or comment access---are you able to fix this? (like the SUID report, the first tobacco item (compliance checks), the birth certificate report, and the AI/AN report---there may be others that I didn't try)

Thank you,
HB

Health

Essential health care industry news & intel to start your day.

SEPTEMBER 25, 2022

Twitter Email

Good morning to you, health readers. Here's hoping that you're enjoying the first full week of fall and that your alma mater is also on track for greatness this season. (The previous sentence does not apply to those of you who support a program coached by a man who is increasingly indistinguishable from Steven Seagal).

Now for some business: Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-S.C.) touted his nationwide 15-week abortion ban on "Fox & Friends" last week, stating clearly that "this is not a states' rights issue." Regular Fox News watchers will note that Graham's comments are quite a bit different from what he has previously said on the network, telling Martha MacCallum in June that "all of us in the conservative world have believed that there's nothing in the Constitution giving the federal government the right to regulate abortion."

This about-face brings us to our quiz question for the week: What share of Republican voters think the federal government should set U.S. abortion policy?

A: 23%
B: 31%
C: 39%

[redacted]

D: 47%

You can find the answer at the bottom of the newsletter.

WHAT'S AHEAD

The White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition and Health is scheduled for Wednesday, the first U.S. event of its kind since 1969. The Biden administration will unveil a national strategy to meet its goal of ending hunger and increasing healthy eating and physical activity by 2030. The list of speakers includes President Joe Biden, Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra, Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack, Chef José Andrés and more.

Stat News is hosting an event on the barriers to making breakthrough drugs on Wednesday at 1 p.m. BioNTech SE Chief Operating Officer Sierk Poetting will discuss the drugmaker's plans to bring mRNA technology to the world, including manufacturing goals in Africa and the challenges presented by personalized mRNA cancer vaccines. BioMarin Pharmaceutical Inc. Chief Technology Officer C. Greg Guyer will follow with a discussion about the company's hemophilia gene therapy and the challenges it faces in manufacturing Roctavian.

The Medicare Payment Advisory Commission is holding a virtual public meeting on Thursday and Friday. The agenda will cover the following: support for safety-net clinicians; addressing nursing facility staffing; delivering congressionally mandated reports on the expansion of telehealth and the valuation of a prototype design for a post-acute care prospective payment system; providing analysis of Part D data on drug rebates and discounts; and answering a congressional request on Medicare and inpatient psychiatric facility care.

It's a light week for hearings on Capitol Hill, but there are two to watch:

- House Oversight Committee hearing at 10 a.m. Thursday: "Examining the Harm to Patients from Abortion Restrictions and the Threat of a National Abortion Ban."

- House Veterans' Affairs Committee hearing at 10 a.m. Thursday: "Veteran Suicide Prevention: Capitalizing on What Works and Increasing Innovative Approaches."

And finally, one earnings announcement to watch: Rite Aid Corp. will reveal its fiscal year 2023 second-quarter earnings on Thursday.

Polling Shows Widespread and Strong Support for Medicare Home Health. Congress Must Act to Protect Home Health from Cuts!

A recent Morning Consult poll found widespread support for Medicare home healthcare services, but proposed Medicare cuts will limit seniors' choice and force them into institutional settings. Fortunately, lawmakers can prevent these cuts from going into effect. Congress must listen to voters and quickly pass the Preserving Access to Home Health Act!

WEEK IN REVIEW

The pandemic has ended (or has it?): Biden said in an interview with CBS' "60 Minutes" that while the country still has "a problem" with COVID-19, "the pandemic is over," comments that surprised administration officials, two senior health officials said. Despite Biden's ad-lib, officials working on the COVID-19 response said their policy planning would stay the course, and there's still an expectation that the emergency public health declaration will be renewed next month.

Dr. Anthony Fauci said during an interview at The Atlantic Festival that Biden's declaration was "semantics" and that he actually intended to convey that "we're in a much better place with regard to the fulminant stage of the pandemic." Fauci said during a Center for Strategic and International Studies event that the United States is "heading in the right direction" on COVID-19 but it's "unlikely" that the disease will be eradicated, as another variant is likely to take hold in the late fall or early winter.

Sen. Roger Marshall (R-Kan.) moved to force a vote in the chamber on ending the COVID-19 national emergency declaration, citing Biden's comments while the administration pushes for billions in fresh funding.

In the courtroom: The Department of Justice's antitrust challenge to UnitedHealth Group Inc.'s $13 billion acquisition of Change Healthcare Inc. was rejected by a federal judge, who kept the full opinion under seal due to "competitively sensitive information" but promised to release a redacted version.

The American Hospital Association and the American Medical Association dropped their lawsuit against the federal government over the implementation of Congress' surprise billing law, which alleged that the rulemaking process shifted from lawmakers' intent and favored payers during independent arbitration.

Biden administration: HHS' Office of Inspector General said in a report that the Food and Drug Administration's emergency use authorization policies resulted in quality issues and false results with COVID-19 tests that quickly hit the market during the early stages of the pandemic. The HHS watchdog said the government should overhaul its EUA strategy before another pandemic occurs.

Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee ranking member Richard Burr (R-N.C.) reached an agreement with Sen. Patty Murray (D-Wash.), the committee chair, on a five-year reauthorization of the FDA's user fee programs, a "practically clean" bill, per Burr, which includes some policy riders that he did not specify. Two sources familiar with the discussions said Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) will push for a totally clean five-year user fee bill, blocking the riders from being attached to the short-term government funding bill, which Congress is planning to consider this week.

The U.S. Preventive Services Task Force recommended that all adults under 65 be screened by doctors for anxiety, the first such recommendation from the panel of medical experts that they say is intended to ensure that mental health disorders don't go untreated. The HHS-appointed advisory group will review public comments through Oct. 17 and issue final guidance sometime after that.

[redacted]

In a 56-40 vote, the Senate confirmed Arati Prabhakar as director of the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy, making her the first woman, person of color and immigrant to hold the position. Prabhakar, who previously led the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, will also assume the Cabinet-level position of Biden's science adviser, stepping in for former National Institutes of Health Director Francis Collins, who served in the role on an interim basis.

COVID-19 vaccines: The reformulated COVID-19 boosters from Moderna Inc. and Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech are expected to be available for children by the middle of next month, per the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, with a recommendation from the agency coming as soon as early October provided the shots are authorized by the FDA.

The Biden administration is scaling back its target for COVID-19 vaccine donations as global demand for the shots sags, amending its deal with Pfizer to secure 600 million vaccine doses by the end of 2022 instead of 1 billion.

Moderna signed off on a request from the U.N.-backed Medicines Patent Pool to provide the French government with use of its COVID-19 vaccine as part of a World Health Organization effort to increase the development of mRNA vaccines ticketed for poorer countries facing accessibility issues. Pfizer declined a similar ask.

STAT OF THE WEEK

The additional stake Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc. will acquire in Shields Health Solutions, paying $1.37 billion to give the pharmacy giant full ownership of the company that partners with providers to deliver specialty pharmacy services. Walgreens, which began building its stake in Shields in July 2019, is expected to close the deal to assume total ownership by the end of 2022.

Same. Please grant access to these reports so we can do the necessary review as quickly as possible given the timeline.

Have these reports gone through PAE for review for editing? There are several line edits I find myself making. It would be good to have a line editor review these reports. If they don't have that capability, let me know. We may need to find an editor in the department.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The White House announced that it would award $1.5 billion in grants to localities battling the opioid crisis, including more than $104 million in funding earmarked to support rural communities, a move that comes after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported a 15% uptick in overdose-related deaths last year. As part of his fiscal-year 2023 budget, President Joe Biden called for $42.5 billion in funding for National Drug Control Agencies, an increase of $3.2 billion compared to the prior year. (CNBC)

- Senate Finance Committee Chair Ron Wyden (D-Ore.) told Fierce Healthcare that he's eyeing legislation that would penalize insurers for running so-called ghost networks, in which providers are listed in networks but don't actually offer care. Wyden didn't offer additional details on what the legislation might ultimately look like, but noted that he's in touch with fellow lawmakers about the issue and is aiming to pull something together before the end of 2022. (Fierce Healthcare)

- The CDC amended guidance on masking in hospitals and nursing homes, saying that facilities that aren't located in communities with "high" levels of COVID-19 transmission can "choose not to require" doctors, patients and visitors to wear a mask. Per the CDC's Community Transmission benchmarks, 73% of U.S. counties are currently considered to face high risk levels. (CBS News)

- After Roe v. Wade's reversal, Arizona must now follow an 1864 law, enacted before it became a state and blocked since 1973, that prohibits all abortions except when the mother's life is in danger, Pima County Superior Court Judge Kellie Johnson ruled, with the ban taking effect immediately. (Politico) The White House responded to the decision, with press secretary Karine Jean-Pierre saying the judge's ruling would result in potentially "catastrophic, dangerous and unacceptable" consequences, setting Arizona women back "more than a century." Racial and Ethnic Disparities in Drug Overdose Deaths in the US During the

COVID-19 Pandemic

Beth Han et al., JAMA Network Open

Recent reports highlighted racial and ethnic differences in US drug overdose deaths from 1999 to 2020. Overdose deaths increased 37.2% from February 2020 to August 2021 and were predominantly associated with synthetic opioids other than methadone (primarily fentanyl or analogs) and methamphetamine. Yet data are lacking regarding racial and ethnic disparities in overdose death rates within specific sex-age combinations before and during the COVID-19 pandemic (since March 2020).

Happy to provide any updates, Tracy. I'd say just keep your fingers crossed that this is what passes in December. Anything past December will be MUCH more difficult to get through Congress, as most home visiting champions are retiring.

Heather asked a couple of other questions in chat today, so I'll provide my responses here so everyone can reference them later as needed (but don't hesitate to ask at any time! I can easily pull this information again):

Match Requirement:
If we are able to count our current funding, which is $522,000 annually, we will be fine to meet these requirements until FY2026. We would need $597,396 (or an increase of $75,396) by FY2026 and $987,752 by FY2027 (with a total increase from current funding levels of $390,356). However, based on this current bill, this would require us to shift our standard of service provision to meet the MIECHV standard (with the same required performance measures). That's definitely possible and since the match won't be required for a few years, we have a great running start. It will take work on our end to do, but the payoffs will be great in the long run, as we'll then be able to have a more robust picture of the impacts of visiting across the state (i.e. I want to do this anyway, regardless of home visiting's funding future).

Who is best served by/benefits from home visiting?
It's important to remember that we must reference the evidence-base for home visiting (otherwise, we cannot guarantee the amazing outcomes and ROI that makes this a compelling service/intervention--it then would not fall under my program, as it would be more broad case management). I would suggest we move forward with the definition MIECHV uses, since we'll need to increase all service provision to this standard as a result of the match requirement:

Pregnant parents or families with a child age 5 and younger

Priority should be given to families that meet at least one (1) of the following MIECHV Eligibility Criteria:

- Low income (at or below 100% of the Federal Poverty Level)
- Pregnant and under the age of 21
- History of child abuse or neglect, or history of interactions with child welfare services
- History of substance abuse or in need of substance abuse treatment
- Tobacco use
- Low student achievement
- A child with developmental delays or disability
- A household member who is serving or has served in the U.S. armed forces

If the Home Visiting Program has an open caseload for enrollment, priority should be given to those who meet multiple MIECHV Eligibility Criteria.

The various home visiting models use more nuanced definitions, but I suggest we leave that to our contractors to work through, as they receive targeted technical assistance from model implementation specialists.

Optimal Coverage:

Currently, we have funding and capacity to serve 2.6% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah (611 families). If we could reach, at minimum, 10% of these children (2,317), I'd say we'd be doing a great job!

However, because home visiting is a long-term intervention (2+ years, depending on the model), families only have to qualify (or meet the definition above) at the time of enrollment. Ideally, we should see changes to income and stressors over time, which would actually increase the need.

We would also need to increase our intake and referral processes to account for expansion--we have to find these families somewhere and we need to strengthen our early childhood infrastructure to do this. I'm already talking to Help Me Grow Utah about how they can support this.

Estimated Costs & ROI:

The following are current annual costs for PAT and NFP. Many programs supplement with local tax dollars, so adjustments for inflation are likely needed:

- PAT: $5,880 per family
- NFP: $6,935 per family

The cost to serve 10% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah would be around $15.5 million.

With the proposed formula in MIECHV reauthorization, by FY2027, we would have $8.375 million--this would enable us to serve approximately 1,300 families, or 5.5% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah.

While 5.5% may be sufficient, the ROI for home visiting is very strong ($5.70 in savings for every $1 of taxpayer dollars spent). As a result, we should push to get closer to that 10%.

- ROI for 5.5% (current projected funding): $47.738 million
- ROI for 10%: $88.35 million

Side note: As home visiting expands, the team at the state level will need to expand as well to ensure we're able to conduct appropriate contract monitoring processes. I currently have 2 program specialists positions on my team. If we are to expand into each LHD, I would estimate we need 5-6.

Other Considerations:
While Heather didn't ask about this, I want to share some very important considerations to keep in mind for any home visiting expansion conversations that I may not be a part of:

[redacted]

Voluntary Participation: Participation in evidence-based home visiting services requires at least 2 year commitment from families to ensure outcomes (depending upon the home visiting model used)--if families feel pressure to participate, this undermines the relationship-based approach of the service, thus undermining the ability of home visitors to impact parent, child, and family outcomes.

Sustainable funding is critical: I understand this is not always a guarantee for grand-funded work, but short-term or one-time funding undercuts contractors' ability to implement the model with fidelity, thus compromising the outcomes guaranteed by the evidence-base.

A bit of a history lesson: Utah received one-time competitive federal funding for home visiting back in 2014-ish. This had disastrous impacts for the field--programs had to close, people lost jobs, and stakeholder confidence in DOH and OHV was badly damaged (I still hear concerns about this 6 years later and am continuing to repair relationships across the state from this. Some LHDs have said they will never work with home visiting again!). This was a learning on the federal government's part as well and they no longer provide short-term funding for home visiting. Each MIECHV reauthorization is in 5-year increments and it is now exclusively formula-based and doesn't vary more than 5% each year to ensure sustainability of service provision. We should approach any funding opportunities for home visiting with the same mindfulness.

Let me know if you have any further questions.

Good morning,

I've been following the development of this bill closely and I've been waiting for you all to ask for my thoughts! Overall, this bill is really really great! Here are some quick bullet points of how this will impact Utah:

Maintenance of Effort: The maintenance of effort requirements will continue. However, this will be based on the past MOE, which is $0. This is incredibly beneficial for Utah, as the MOE requirement will be set for 5 years (the entire period of reauthorization).

Needs Assessment: We will not need to update the needs assessment. While the current needs assessment quickly became outdated (it was completed in 2020), I believe we have sufficient data in other areas of DFH to help inform home visiting expansion. I've been in conversations with the DRP program manager about how we can plug in one of their epidemiologists into our work a bit more!

Reduction of administrative burden: The intense levels of administrative work and reporting for MIECHV is unlike many other federal grants. It's becoming a common complaint amongst MIECHV awardees and some states are starting to turn down this funding as a result. In this bill, they'll be working to reduce the hours by at least 15%. This has incredible implications for Utah's home visiting team and the DFH finance team. Currently the admin work impedes our ability to fully dive into the significant amount of data we have to really push toward more meaningful outcomes.

Virtual Home Visiting: As we've all learned virtual services are here to stay, but the current rules last only until the public health emergency ends. This means that we will be able to better serve families in the ways that they want and better accommodate their needs and schedules.

Match requirements: This is a big shift! Currently we do not have a match requirement for MIECHV. This proposal is 25% (or for every $3 in federal funds, the state must spend $1), but it's tiered up over time (I'll explain below what that looks like for Utah). Regardless of whether this bill is passed or not, a match is very likely in the future for MIECHV. The following is not public, but was made available to state home visiting administrators via a membership organization called the Association of State and Tribal Home Visiting Initiatives (ASTHVI--we're a member):

It's unclear if the match can be any state funds.

Any match will likely need to be for home visiting provided at the MIECHV standard of service provision (this includes all the data collection, screening, and reporting).

- While this is a concern for some state administrators, I think this is actually a good thing. It will allow us to better report on the same metrics across the state to have a better sense of where we are. Currently, we collect very little data for state-funded home visiting.

New funding in this upcoming federal fiscal year will likely count for the match requirement.

- This is great timing with all of the conversations happening with home visiting in the state right now!

How much funding and what's Utah's share?: I received a memo from the Congressional Research Service, via ASTHVI, regarding the estimates of program funding with this current proposal. Again, I was told this is not publicly available, but okay to share it within my agency. Let me know if you'd like to see the full 11 page document, but here's the summary for us:

FY2021: (for comparison, this is our current annual award amount--MIECHV awards have 2 years of availability)

- $3.162 million

FY2023:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $0
- Required match spending from Utah: $0
- Total: $4.451 million

*FY2024: *match requirement starts

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $776,000
- Required match spending from Utah: $258,758
- Total: $5.227 million

FY2025:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $1.195 million
- Required match spending from Utah: $398,264
- Total: $5.646 million

FY2026:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $1.792 million
- Required match spending from Utah: $597,396
- Total: $6.243 million

FY2027:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million
- Match: $2.936 million
- Required match spending from Utah: $987,752
- Total: $7.387 million

Let me know if you have any more questions after reading through all of this. Happy to answer any and all that arise for you!

Please share your thoughts on this legislation when the Home Visiting Team has time to review it. Given the budget cycle for the state, we may need to determine whether we would need additional MOE from Utah to try to draw down Utah's full allotment. Do you know how much Utah is eligible to receive with this new proposal?

Thanks.

LEGISLATIVE ALERT

Sept. 22, 2022

Federal Home Visiting Reauthorization Bill Moves Forward

This week, leaders in both the House Ways and Means Committee and Energy and Commerce Committee introduced the Jackie Walorski Maternal and Child Home Visiting Reauthorization Act (H.R. 8876), which reauthorizes the Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting (MIECHV) program. The bill passed out of the House Ways and Means Committee by a vote of 41-0 with one abstention.

It is essential to note that the MIECHV program is a mandatory program, and this bill proposes significant changes to its overall funding. After a careful review by the ASTHO government affairs team, we strongly encourage that state legislative staff and maternal and child health teams carefully review the bill text and summary. This legislation is complex with new maintenance of effort, state matching requirements for a new grant program, and changes to an administrative cap that could uniquely impact state and territorial federal home visiting programs.

The press release, summary of the legislation, section-by-section summary, and bill text are available for review.

Outlook: The full House of Representatives will consider the bill, then move it to the Senate. Offsetting the program's costs is yet to be addressed and is a priority for Congress. However, this legislation was approved with broad bipartisan support, and the government affairs team believes it may be signed into law before the end of the calendar year. Funding for the current MIECHV program expires at the end of the month. Advocates expect Congress to approve a short-term extension of MIECHV as part of the continuing resolution bill that needs to pass before Sept. 30.

Questions: Considering this bill proposes changes to the MIECHV program, if S/THOs have any questions or concerns, please contact Carolyn McCoy.

Detailed Summary:
Currently, the MIECHV program receives approximately $400 million per year.

- This legislation proposes an increase in base funding to $500 million for FY23-FY27. The minimum base grant for an entity is $1 million.
- Starting in FY24-FY27, federal matching grant funds—in addition to base funding—are available to every eligible entity, guided by a formula that will focus on the number of children under five in poverty if they comply with specific statutory requirements on an increasing scale:

[redacted]

  - FY24 $50 million.
  - FY25 $100 million.
  - FY26 $150 million.
  - FY27 $300 million.
- To draw down its full allotment of federal matching grant funds, an entity must provide non-federal funds above their maintenance of effort requirement such that 25% of the total spending consists of non-federal funds.
  - Unobligated matching funds can be redistributed to another entity that can contribute to the non-federal matching funds.
  - The ASTHO government affairs team recommends carefully reviewing the legislation to see what funds can contribute to this new matching requirement.
- New maintenance of effort requirement for states and territories is based on the lesser total of non-federal funds expended in 2019 or 2021. The entity is not eligible for base or matching grants if this is not met.
  - The secretary may allow a grace period for an entity to come into compliance.
- Phased-in additional federal matching funding starting in FY24 is part of the requirement for entities to be eligible for the new federal matching grants, which requires a 25% state match (i.e., for every $1 in state funds, there is a $3 federal contribution). The non-federal matching funds are not applied to the maintenance of effort requirement.
  - The minimum state matching funds are as follows:
    - FY23: Federal matching funds are not required.
    - FY24: $776,000.
    - FY25: $1,000,000.
    - FY26: $1,500,000.
    - FY27: $2,000,000.
  - If a state cannot reach the required amount, the secretary of HHS can proportionately reduce the federal matching amount for that fiscal year.
- Limits state administrative spending to 10% of grants and an exception for not more than 5% at the discretion of the secretary of HHS.
  - This applies to an entity that directly provides home visits to families and not through a sub-recipient.
  - The entity is expanding services to a new community and has been providing services for fewer than three years.
- Allows limited ability to conduct virtual home visits and requires entities to demonstrate that they have met specific conditions. Service delivery models must include at least one in-person visit a year to qualify for federal funding.
- Doubles the tribal set-aside (from 3% to 6%) starting in FY23.
- Dedicated funding (2% set aside) for workforce support, retention, and case management.
- Set aside funding for research, evaluation, administration, and technical assistance.
- Establishes an outcomes dashboard and annual report to Congress on the program.
- Requires HHS to work with partners to reduce administrative burden.
- Maintains a strong focus on evidence-based home visiting models and practices.

My apologies. I thought when I sent the original email that it had a pop-up to give everyone access. I'll go through and do that now.

Tracy, to your question, it is my understanding that the assigned Comms team members should also be part of the OU review process. We will build that into the PowerDMS system once we get that up and going. I'll also emphasize that with ELT.

Just to round back on this, I worked with PIO to get permission to edit the Reports Template. Along with a few minor formatting items, we've added a note to the page to remind staff about font size/line spacing and let them know about the expected workflow of reviews before these get to EDO. Hopefully this clarity with mean less items for us to address during our reviews.

[redacted] Title

Today is World Contraception Day and the beginning of Abortion Justice Week. These commemorations are an opportunity to celebrate and uplift the essential role that contraception and abortion play in our everyday lives, and recommit to doing everything possible to ensure access to abortion and birth control for ALL.

The Supreme Court's harmful decision to overturn the constitutional right to abortion has exponentially exacerbated sexual and reproductive health inequities that have existed for decades. More than 21 million people currently lack access to abortion in their home states – with people with low-incomes, communities of color, and people living in rural areas disproportionately impacted. This is devastating and unacceptable, and we will not stop until this immoral injustice is corrected.

At the same time, we must do everything possible to ensure equitable access to birth control – that means being able to get the method that meets an individual's unique personal and health needs, when they need it.

To address health inequities and challenges to access that remain, Essential Access Health will continue to:

- Advocate for sexual and reproductive health, equity, and justice. Learn more here and stay up-to-date on our work as a Steering Committee member of the California Future of Abortion Council;
- Support our statewide Title X family planning provider networks in California and Hawai'i and continue to fight to increase Title X funding at the federal level;
- Expand access points to abortion services through our Medication Abortion Access Program;
- Increase access to quality contraceptive care through telehealth + other innovative care models;
- Uplift reproductive justice partners and abortion funds across the country;
- Enhance the capacity of the health care work force to provide comprehensive, high quality, and patient-centered sexual + reproductive health services; and
- Help bring new contraceptive methods and reproductive health technologies to market through our Research Center.

You can help us keep this critical work moving forward by making a donation to our Ensuring Access Fund. Your support will help ensure that everyone – regardless of income, zip code, race, sexual orientation, or health coverage or immigration status – has the freedom to access the sexual and reproductive care they want and need.

Good morning.

Please have those involved in family planning review this proposed legislation from Rep. Moore as soon as possible.

The idea is to allow Utah access to these funds even though our state has a law on the books requiring parental consent.

Hey Tracy,

We've got some text for you on this. Would your team be able to review? This, implemented, should ameliorate any issues with Utah becoming an award recipient while also reimplementing some pro-life protections from the prior administration.

Let me know if your team has thoughts or any concerns that as written Utah would still not be able to access funds.

Kindly,

Will,

The following is the response we received from DHHS staff:

Planned Parenthood of Utah has applied for and received this funding for decades---since the 80s.

We don't fully know or understand federal statute and pre-emption factors well enough to know how they interact with state law. Planned Parenthood would be better positioned to speak for themselves about their legal authority to accept these funds, but believe the precedence comes from these two cases:
Planned Parenthood Association of Utah v. Matheson
Planned Parenthood Association of Utah v. Dandoy

I did have a quick question. It appears that in 2022, Planned Parenthood of Utah received funding through this grant program. https://opa.hhs.gov/grant-programs/title-x-service-grants/current-title-x-service-grantees/fy2022-title-X-service-grant-awards

How exactly were they able to access Title X funds? Is it just that the state itself is unable to access funds but Planned Parenthood still can?

Will,

I am so sorry for the delay in responding. That is my fault.

While our staff did not offer specific language they did highlight the two areas in federal code that have prohibited Utah from receiving Title X funds that would need to be amended. I suspect you are aware of these but they are listed below. Our previous recommendation to amend the confidentiality language to allow states to access the funds at a prorated amount is still a good possible solution. The two regulations relevant are as follows:

Public Health Service Act, 42 CFR Part 59 Subpart A
(https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-42/chapter-I/subchapter-D/part-59/subpart-A). :

§ 59.5(a) What requirements must be met by a family planning project

§ 59.10 Confidentiality
(b) To the extent practical, Title X projects shall encourage family participation.[3] However, Title X projects may not require consent of parents or guardians for the provision of services to minors, nor can any Title X project staff notify a parent or guardian before or after a minor has requested and/or received Title X family planning services.

It's worth noting the specific objection Utah was provided in 2020 from HHS when it sought a waiver for Title X funds: "The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is unable to grant this request for a waiver. This requirement for provision of confidential contraceptive services is statutory and, thus, HHS does not have the authority to provide such a waiver." Our team suggested language be considered to the relevant section of the Public Health Service Act that would allow the Federal Department of Health and Human Services to grant waivers requested by states.

We also have some changes in state code that we will want to consider and we will plan to discuss those with the Governor's Office. These changes may include an amendment to code that would allow for an exemption to the parental consent law in narrow cases where Title X funding is being utilized. Apparently Texas has provided such an allowance.

I hope this is helpful. Again, I apologize for the delay in getting you this information. Between travel and COVID, this response was not as timely as is typical for our department or for me.

Derrick,

I received some feedback from our team but expecting possible additional suggestions early next week. The initial thought is that the language could clearly indicate that state's like Utah that require parental consent can still access these funds, even if a prorated amount. The suggestion from one of our deputies is the following: "alter federal law in such a way to allow states which require parental consent to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing such states to remove or modify parental consent law."

As noted in previous discussions, we miss out on millions of dollars each year because youth in Utah can't get these services without parental consent.

More to come next week. Enjoy your weekend!

I think it would be a worthy effort to alter federal law in such a way to allow states like Utah to benefit from those federal family planning funds without forcing us to change our parental consent law. As you know, the HHS leadership under the prior administration was eager to get those funds to us but couldn't find a way to do so without a change in Utah law, something our legislature was understandably wary of doing. I think the first step would be a conversation with the leadership of Utah's Department of Health and Human Services. I've copied Tracy Gruber, the Executive Director of the Department. She may want to pull in Lynne Nilson and others from our Bureau of Maternal and Child Health, who were involved in our Title X application a few years ago and could help us in drafting appropriate language, but I'll defer to Tracy on whom to pull into that meeting.*

Thanks for reaching out, and congratulations on the new job with Rep. Moore. I'd be happy to chat next Tuesday. I'm pretty flexible between 10-12 MT and after 2:30 MT. Do any of those times work for you?

And yes, we went through quite a process over the past several years to apply for the Title X funding, in part based on the strong encouragement of the Trump Administration HHS. However it was always understood that we couldn't get around the statutory requirements surrounding our parental consent requirements, and the legislature had no interest in adjusting or loosening that requirement. So my understanding is that we would not pursue Title X again, but I'll check. If anything has changed then I can connect you with our Department of Health staff who worked on the application.

Thank you Elizabeth! This is incredibly helpful.

When I oversaw the Intergenerational Poverty Initiative, home visiting was a prime policy recommendation we supported each year but it just continually eroded and fewer and fewer families were able to receive the services and attain the benefits of this evidence-based intervention. > Match Requirement:
> If we are able to count our current funding, which is $522,000 annually, we will be fine to meet these requirements until FY2026. We would need $597,396 (or an increase of $75,396) by FY2026 and $987,752 by FY2027 (with a total increase from current funding levels of $390,356). However, based on this current bill, this would require us to shift our standard of service provision to meet the MIECHV standard (with the same required performance measures). That's definitely possible and since the match won't be required for a few years, we have a great running start. It will take work on our end to do, but the payoffs will be great in the long run, as we'll then be able to have a more robust picture of the impacts of visiting across the state (i.e. I want to do this anyway, regardless of home visiting's funding future).
> Who is best served by/benefits from home visiting?
> It's important to remember that we must reference the evidence-base for home visiting (otherwise, we cannot guarantee the amazing outcomes and ROI that makes this a compelling service/intervention--it then would not fall under my program, as it would be more broad case management). I would suggest we move forward with the definition MIECHV uses, since we'll need to increase all service provision to this standard as a result of the match requirement:
> Pregnant parents or families with a child age 5 and younger
> Priority should be given to families that meet at least one (1) of the following MIECHV Eligibility Criteria:
> Low income (at or below 100% of the Federal Poverty Level)
> Pregnant and under the age of 21
> History of child abuse or neglect, or history of interactions with child welfare services
> History of substance abuse or in need of substance abuse treatment
> Tobacco use
> Low student achievement
> A child with developmental delays or disability
> A household member who is serving or has served in the U.S. armed forces
> If the Home Visiting Program has an open caseload for enrollment, priority should be given to those who meet multiple MIECHV Eligibility Criteria.

[redacted]

The various home visiting models use more nuanced definitions, but I suggest we leave that to our contractors to work through, as they receive targeted technical assistance from model implementation specialists.

Optimal Coverage:

Currently, we have funding and capacity to serve 2.6% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah (611 families). If we could reach, at minimum, 10% of these children (2,317), I'd say we'd be doing a great job!
However, because home visiting is a long-term intervention (2+ years, depending on the model), families only have to qualify (or meet the definition above) at the time of enrollment. Ideally, we should see changes to income and stressors over time, which would actually increase the need.
We would also need to increase our intake and referral processes to account for expansion--we have to find these families somewhere and we need to strengthen our early childhood infrastructure to do this. I'm already talking to Help Me Grow Utah about how they can support this.

Estimated Costs & ROI:

The following are current annual costs for PAT and NFP. Many programs supplement with local tax dollars, so adjustments for inflation are likely needed:
PAT: $5,880 per family
NFP: $6,935 per family
The cost to serve 10% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah would be around $15.5 million.
With the proposed formula in MIECHV reauthorization, by FY2027, we would have $8.375 million--this would enable us to serve approximately 1,300 families, or 5.5% of children under 5 living in poverty in Utah.
While 5.5% may be sufficient, the ROI for home visiting is very strong ($5.70 in savings for every $1 of taxpayer dollars spent). As a result, we should push to get closer to that 10%.
ROI for 5.5% (current projected funding): $47.738 million
ROI for 10%: $88.35 million
Side note: As home visiting expands, the team at the state level will need to expand as well to ensure we're able to conduct appropriate contract monitoring processes. I currently have 2 program specialists positions on my team. If we are to expand into each LHD, I would estimate we need 5-6.

Other Considerations:

While Heather didn't ask about this, I want to share some very important considerations to keep in mind for any home visiting expansion conversations that I may not be a part of:

Voluntary Participation: Participation in evidence-based home visiting services requires at least 2 year commitment from families to ensure outcomes (depending upon the home visiting model used)--if families feel pressure to participate, this undermines the relationship-based approach of the service, thus undermining the ability of home visitors to impact parent, child, and family outcomes.
Sustainable funding is critical: I understand this is not always a guarantee for grand-funded work, but short-term or one-time funding undercuts contractors' ability to implement the model with fidelity, thus compromising the outcomes guaranteed by the evidence-base.
A bit of a history lesson: Utah received one-time competitive federal funding for home visiting back in 2014-ish. This had disastrous impacts for the field--programs had to close, people lost jobs, and stakeholder confidence in DOH and OHV was badly damaged (I still hear concerns about this 6 years later and am continuing to repair relationships across the state from this. Some LHDs have said they will never work with home visiting again!). This was a learning on the federal government's part as well and they no longer provide short-term funding for home visiting. Each MIECHV reauthorization is in 5-year increments and it is now exclusively formula-based and doesn't vary more than 5% each year to ensure sustainability of service provision. We should approach any funding opportunities for home visiting with the same mindfulness.

Let me know if you have any further questions.

Good morning,

I've been following the development of this bill closely and I've been waiting for you all to ask for my thoughts! Overall, this bill is really really great! Here are some quick bullet points of how this will impact Utah:

Maintenance of Effort: The maintenance of effort requirements will continue. However, this will be based on the past MOE, which is $0. This is incredibly beneficial for Utah, as the MOE requirement will be set for 5 years (the entire period of reauthorization).

Needs Assessment: We will not need to update the needs assessment. While the current needs assessment quickly became outdated (it was completed in 2020), I believe we have sufficient data in other areas of DFH to help inform home visiting expansion. I've been in conversations with the DRP program manager about how we can plug in one of their epidemiologists into our work a bit more!

Reduction of administrative burden: The intense levels of administrative work and reporting for MIECHV is unlike many other federal grants. It's becoming a common complaint amongst MIECHV awardees and some states are starting to turn down this funding as a result. In this bill, they'll be working to reduce the hours by at least 15%. This has incredible implications for Utah's home visiting team and the DFH finance team. Currently the admin work impedes our ability to fully dive into the significant amount of data we have to really push toward more meaningful outcomes.

Virtual Home Visiting: As we've all learned virtual services are here to stay, but the current rules last only until the public health emergency ends. This means that we will be able to better serve families in the ways that they want and better accommodate their needs and schedules.

Match requirements: This is a big shift! Currently we do not have a match requirement for MIECHV. This proposal is 25% (or for every $3 in federal funds, the state must spend $1), but it's tiered up over time (I'll explain below what that looks like for Utah). Regardless of whether this bill is passed or not, a match is very likely in the future for MIECHV. The following is not public, but was made available to state home visiting administrators via a membership organization called the Association of State and Tribal Home Visiting Initiatives (ASTHVI--we're a member):

It's unclear if the match can be any state funds.

Any match will likely need to be for home visiting provided at the MIECHV standard of service provision (this includes all the data collection, screening, and reporting).

- While this is a concern for some state administrators, I think this is actually a good thing. It will allow us to better report on the same metrics across the state to have a better sense of where we are. Currently, we collect very little data for state-funded home visiting.

New funding in this upcoming federal fiscal year will likely count for the match requirement.

- This is great timing with all of the conversations happening with home visiting in the state right now!

How much funding and what's Utah's share?: I received a memo from the Congressional Research Service, via ASTHVI, regarding the estimates of program funding with this current proposal. Again, I was told this is not publicly available, but okay to share it within my agency. Let me know if you'd like to see the full 11 page document, but here's the summary for us:

FY2021: (for comparison, this is our current annual award amount--MIECHV awards have 2 years of availability)

- $3.162 million

FY2023:

- Base Amount: $4.451 million

- Match: $1.195 million
- Required match spending from Utah: $398,264
- Total: $5.646 million

FY2026:

Federal Home Visiting Reauthorization Bill Moves Forward

This week, leaders in both the House Ways and Means Committee and Energy and Commerce Committee introduced the Jackie Walorski Maternal and Child Home Visiting Reauthorization Act (H.R. 8876), which reauthorizes the Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting (MIECHV) program. The bill passed out of the House Ways and Means Committee by a vote of 41-0 with one abstention.

It is essential to note that the MIECHV program is a mandatory program, and this bill proposes significant changes to its overall funding. After a careful review by the ASTHO government affairs team, we strongly encourage that state legislative staff and maternal and child health teams carefully review the bill text and summary. This legislation is complex with new maintenance of effort, state matching requirements for a new grant program, and changes to an administrative cap that could uniquely impact state and territorial federal home visiting programs.

The press release, summary of the legislation, section-by-section summary, and bill text are available for review.

Outlook: The full House of Representatives will consider the bill, then move it to the Senate. Offsetting the program's costs is yet to be addressed and is a priority for Congress. However, this legislation was approved with broad bipartisan support, and the government affairs team believes it may be signed into law before the end of the calendar year. Funding for the current MIECHV program expires at the end of the month. Advocates expect Congress to approve a short-term extension of MIECHV as part of the continuing resolution bill that needs to pass before Sept. 30.

Questions: Considering this bill proposes changes to the MIECHV program, if S/THOs have any questions or concerns, please contact Carolyn McCoy.

Detailed Summary:
Currently, the MIECHV program receives approximately $400 million per year.

- This legislation proposes an increase in base funding to $500 million for FY23-FY27. The minimum base grant for an entity is $1 million.
- Starting in FY24-FY27, federal matching grant funds—in addition to base funding—are available to every eligible entity, guided by a formula that will focus on the number of children under five in poverty if they comply with specific statutory requirements on an increasing scale:
  - FY24 $50 million.
  - FY25 $100 million.
  - FY26 $150 million.
  - FY27 $300 million.
- To draw down its full allotment of federal matching grant funds, an entity must provide non-federal funds above their maintenance of effort requirement such that 25% of the total spending consists of non-federal funds.
  - Unobligated matching funds can be redistributed to another entity that can contribute to the non-federal matching funds.
  - The ASTHO government affairs team recommends carefully reviewing the legislation to see what funds can contribute to this new matching requirement.
- New maintenance of effort requirement for states and territories is based on the lesser total of non-federal funds expended in 2019 or 2021. The entity is not eligible for base or matching grants if this is not met.
  - The secretary may allow a grace period for an entity to come into compliance.
- Phased-in additional federal matching funding starting in FY24 is part of the requirement for entities to be eligible for the new federal matching grants, which requires a 25% state match (i.e., for every $1 in state funds, there is a $3 federal contribution). The non-federal matching funds are not applied to the maintenance of effort requirement.
  - The minimum state matching funds are as follows:
    - FY23: Federal matching funds are not required.
    - FY24: $776,000.
    - FY25: $1,000,000.
    - FY26: $1,500,000.
    - FY27: $2,000,000.
  - If a state cannot reach the required amount, the secretary of HHS can proportionately reduce the federal matching amount for that fiscal year.
- Limits state administrative spending to 10% of grants and an exception for not more than 5% at the discretion of the secretary of HHS.
  - This applies to an entity that directly provides home visits to families and not through a sub-recipient.
  - The entity is expanding services to a new community and has been providing services for fewer than three years.
- Allows limited ability to conduct virtual home visits and requires entities to demonstrate that they have met specific conditions. Service delivery models must include at least one in-person visit a year to qualify for federal funding.

- Doubles the tribal set-aside (from 3% to 6%) starting in FY23.
- Dedicated funding (2% set aside) for workforce support, retention, and case management.
- Set aside funding for research, evaluation, administration, and technical assistance.
- Establishes an outcomes dashboard and annual report to Congress on the program.
- Requires HHS to work with partners to reduce administrative burden.
- Maintains a strong focus on evidence-based home visiting models and practices.

Providing Services Outside the Scope of Your Grant: How to Ensure Compliance

Tuesday, September 27 at 3 PM ET

WEBINAR FOR HEALTH CENTERS

The recent Dobbs decision has led many health centers to question how they, as federal grant-funded organizations, can provide services that are out of scope. As health centers explore separate business lines, they need to consider a number of factors to ensure they stay in compliance with their federal funding agreements.

In this webinar today at 3 PM ET, FTLF attorneys Carrie Riley and Ted Waters will use elective abortions as an example to address:

- Creating boundaries between business lines and funding streams
- Compliance with cost allocation principles and other grant-related rules
- Key areas of risk and common pitfalls
- Additional legal and practical considerations health centers face when deciding to establish an "other line of business"

Insider Q&A: FDA official on vaping's "promise or peril"
Matthew Perrone, The Associated Press
There's been no honeymoon period for the Food and Drug Administration's new tobacco chief, Brian King, the public health scientist now responsible for regulating the nation's multibillion-dollar cigarette and vaping industry.

University of Idaho may stop providing birth control under new abortion law
Caroline Kitchener and Susan Svrluga, The Washington Post
University employees were also advised not to speak in support of abortion at work. If an employee appears to promote abortion, counsel in favor of abortion, or refer a student for an abortion procedure, they could face a felony conviction and be permanently barred from all future state employment, according to an email obtained by The Washington Post.

Teen interest in long-lasting birth control soars after Roe
Heather Hollingsworth and Arleigh Rodgers, The Associated Press
Experts say the U.S. Supreme Court's June ruling appears to be accelerating a trend of increased birth control use among teens, including long-acting reversible forms like intrauterine devices and implants. Appointments have surged and Planned Parenthood has been flooded with questions as doctors report demand even among teens who aren't sexually active.

Texas Abortion Laws Violate Right to Travel, Democratic AGs Say
Holly Barker, Bloomberg Law
Twenty-one Democratic state attorneys general are looking to join the fight in Texas over the right to travel out of state to obtain, provide, or facilitate lawful abortion-related services.

Arizona abortion clinics send women to other states
Jonathan J. Cooper and Terry Tang, The Associated Press
When an Arizona judge ruled last week that prosecutors can resume enforcing a near-total ban on abortion that dates to the Civil War, it fell to the staff at Camelback Family Planning to break the news to the women scheduled for appointments in the coming weeks.

PAYERS

The Supreme Court's latest health care tempest
Adriel Bettelheim and Caitlin Owens, Axios
A Supreme Court case that takes up Medicaid recipients' ability to sue providers is providing a new battleground over patients' rights and could potentially open the door to erosion of the program's benefits.

Health Plan Shake-Up Could Disrupt Coverage for Low-Income Californians
Bernard J. Wolfson, Kaiser Health News
Almost 2 million of California's poorest and most medically fragile residents may have to switch health insurers as a result of a new strategy by the state to improve care in its Medicaid program.

Nursing homes data released by Biden administration shows ownership
Ken Alltucker, USA Today
Federal data released Monday shows ownership of about 15,000 nursing homes nationwide, information that will allow state regulators, researchers and the public to better track common owners.

Watchdog finds fewer Medicare improper payments to hospitals
Robert King, Fierce Healthcare
Acute care hospitals generated $39.3 million in Medicare Part B improper payments over four years but faced a steep drop after the federal government implemented new tools to root out such errors.

Hospitals' Empath Units Replace the ER for Mental Health Patients
John Tozzi, Bloomberg Businessweek
With mental health treatment in short supply, Americans experiencing a psychiatric crisis frequently land in a hospital emergency room—brought in by the police or loved ones—and usually stay there until they can be safely discharged or transferred. That means patients can spend hours or even days stuck on a gurney until a spot opens in a psych ward, the only other setting deemed appropriate.

'It is sinking us even further': Monkeypox stretches STI clinics to the brink
Andrew Joseph, Stat News
At Open Door Health, an LGBTQ+ community clinic in Providence, R.I., a standard test for a sexually transmitted infection might take 15 minutes. Testing for monkeypox — between authorizing the test and donning and doffing PPE — has dragged up to an hour. Insurance reimbursement doesn't cover all that added time.

Mark Cuban Considering Leaving Shark Tank As He Bets His Legacy On Low-Cost Drugs
Jemima McEvoy, Forbes
Blockchain, basketball, Broadcast.com: Mark Cuban has never lost his passion for disruption. Now the billionaire entrepreneur has an ambitious plan to take on Big Pharma and lower the cost of prescription drugs once and for all. And, after 13 seasons, this savvy shark may finally be ready to leave the tank.

Hospital procedures have remained steady since H2 in boost for medtechs, survey finds
Elise Reuter, MedTech Dive
Hospitals are experiencing fewer cancelations and staffing levels have improved since the first half of 2022, which "bodes well for medtech in general," according to a survey by Evercore ISI.

Bias in medical device results raises patient safety concerns
Kara Hartnett, Modern Healthcare
Racial biases continue to be exposed in medical devices clinicians commonly use to evaluate patients. From thermometers to oximeters to X-rays, people of color receive the most inconsistent results, and it's bad for their health.

New book recounts the FDA's 'unholy birth'
Erin Blakemore, The Washington Post
Decades ago, people could hawk dangerous patent medicines and promise benefits — even when their concoctions might have catastrophic consequences. Then, several tragedies struck, killing and maiming children and adults in the name of health. Afterward, the United States created the Food and Drug Administration, the federal agency that today oversees and regulates prescription drugs, medical devices and other products.

Illegal Drug Sales on Social Media Platforms Spark GOP Backlash
Maria Curi, Bloomberg Law
Lawmakers are urging TikTok, Snapchat, and Instagram to more aggressively combat the sale of illegal drugs on their platforms.

Recession Fears Save Pharma From Drug-Pricing Concerns
David Wainer, The Wall Street Journal
Under ordinary circumstances, the pharma industry would look like a bad place to park your money right now.

Gray Areas in Patent Review Denials Catch Agency Director's Eye
Kelcee Griffis, Bloomberg Law
US Patent and Trademark Office Director Kathi Vidal has wielded a US Supreme Court-granted power to audit her agency's patent validity decisions nearly a dozen times since taking the agency's helm in April, and practitioners say she's giving initial patent review denials a particularly close look.

Progress on HPV Vaccines Is Too Important to Lose
Lisa Jarvis, Bloomberg
HPV vaccinations among teens in the US dropped precipitously during the early pandemic, a disappointing reversal for shots that can prevent more than 33,000 cases of cancer each year. Worse, efforts to get vaccinations back on track could be stymied by legal challenges.

Where Are All Our Post-Covid Patients?
Daniela J. Lamas, The New York Times
Two years ago, during the worst of the Covid pandemic, my colleagues and I told ourselves what now seems like a naïve story.

SUBJECT: Thinking Outside The Medicaid Redetermination Box
FROM: "Jack Lewis" <jack.lewis@intellaegis.com>
TO: "Heather Borski" <hborski@utah.gov>

Hi Heather,
We have the Medicaid Redetermination solution you've been looking for!
In March 2022, CMS issued the guidelines linked below for Medicaid eligibility redetermination once the PHE ends.
CMS requirements specifically state the following:
A state must make a reasonable effort to locate the beneficiary for purposes of confirming state residency and determining continuing eligibility.
"A state may not terminate coverage if the state does not receive a response to the request for confirmation of a new address received through return mail" (Exhibit C graphic 1)
"During the 12-month unwinding period, all states must begin the renewal process by checking available information and data sources to attempt to redetermine eligibility without contacting the beneficiary and requesting documentation to obtain reliable information when eligibility cannot be renewed based on available information, as appropriate." (CMS, pg. 9, sec. C)

[redacted] Title

"States may expand the number and type of data sources used during the ex parte process as well as create a data source hierarchy to prioritize sources that provide the most recent and reliable data" (pg. 34 paragraph 2)
https://www.medicaid.gov/federal-policy-guidance/downloads/sho22001.pdf
masterQueue is a contact management system that integrates multiple data sources that help states easily meet these requirements by checking off the CMS mandates and suggestions above, and more, all in one cost-effective platform.
Find out how we are helping the state of Colorado meet CMS guidelines by visiting our website and listening to an interview with the COO from the state of Colorado, or visit the link below and schedule a 15-minute phone call with us.

New Data: Biden Faring Slightly Better With Voters on COVID-19
President Joe Biden's comments earlier this month that "the pandemic is over" required some clarification from senior health officials, who essentially made the case that what he meant to say is that the country is in a much different and better place now.

Either way, voters are warming up to how the coronavirus is being handled by Biden, who now has a net approval of plus 2 on the topic, with 48% of voters approving and 46% disapproving. That's up from a net approval of minus 4 a month ago, a rise for Biden fueled in part by independents (up to minus 5 from minus 19 over that time period).

Check out more insights on how the public's views on COVID-19 have evolved in our freshly updated "Return to Normal" tracker.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- Monthly premiums for Medicare's Part B plan, which offers coverage for outpatient care, will fall 3% in 2023, a savings of $5.20 for most enrollees that will likely be paired with a record-high cost-of-living increase in Social Security benefits, and helps offset the $21.60 increase in 2022 that was fueled in part by coverage of the costly Alzheimer's drug Aduhelm. President Joe Biden touted the first cost decrease for monthly premiums in a decade as a win for "millions of seniors and people with disabilities on Medicare," noting that the drop "means more money in their pockets while still getting the care they need." (The Associated Press)

- While the Senate's stopgap funding bill does not include the Biden administration's $26 billion request to combat COVID-19 and monkeypox, two Medicare programs that bolster payments to rural hospitals did make the cut, with extensions set through mid-December. The Medicare Dependent Hospital and Low-Volume Hospital programs were championed by Sen. Bob Casey (D-Pa.) and other lawmakers who are hoping to secure permanent extensions for both, while in the House, Rep. Sam Graves (R-Mo.) is pursuing similar legislation. (Modern Healthcare)

- The American Hospital Association, the American Medical Association and eight other leading medical trade groups asked the Department of Health and Human Services to delay an Oct. 6 compliance deadline to meet new federal information blocking standards by a full year. The groups said in their letter to HHS that members are pursuing "every feasible effort" to meet the deadline, but it's clear from conversations with those members that "significant knowledge gaps and confusion still exist within the provider and vendors communities with respect to implementation and enforcement of information blocking regulations." (Fierce Healthcare)

- Eisai Co. and Biogen Inc. said their experimental Alzheimer's drug lecanemab lowered cognitive and functional decline by 27% compared with a placebo in an 18-month Phase 3 study of 1,800 patients in the early stage of the disease. Eisai, a Japanese pharmaceutical company, said it would publish the results in a peer-reviewed journal and present more detailed findings at a November Alzheimer's research conference, with an eye on seeking full regulatory approval

The Challenge of Employer-Sponsored Health Coverage
eHealth
This report presents findings from a September 2022 survey of 1,300 people, including more than 1,000 general population respondents and over 250 owners and managers of small to mid-sized businesses. Our survey explores the pain points in employer-sponsored coverage, but it may also suggest a way forward: few of the employers we surveyed are aware of group coverage alternatives like ICHRA (Individual Coverage Health Reimbursement Arrangements) that still meet the benefit requirements of the Affordable Care Act.

ABOUT THE TOBACCO CONTROL NETWORK

The TCN's mission is to improve the public's health by providing education and state-based expertise to tobacco prevention and control at the state and national levels.

The TCN is a network of tobacco program managers and staff from state and territorial health departments as well as Funder's Alliance organizations, and a peer group of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officials (ASTHO) on behalf of the CDC's Office on Smoking and Health.

ABOUT ASTHO

The Association of State and Territorial Health Officials is the national nonprofit association representing the state and territorial public health agencies of the United

- A Tobacco Control analysis concluded that cigarettes per day (CPD) significantly decreased and IQOS use significantly increased, as did the percentage IQOS HeatSticks that replaced CPD for adult, daily, non-treatment-seeking cigarette smokers newly introduced to IQOS.

- A Nicotine & Tobacco Research analysis of electronic health record data from 104,590 COVID-19 patients hospitalized from Feb. 1, 2020 to Sept. 30, 2021 found that vaccination was more strongly associated with reduced mortality among current and former smokers than for never smokers. Among current smokers, NRT prescription was associated with reduced mortality.

States, the U.S. Territories, and the District of Columbia. ASTHO members, the chief health officials of these jurisdictions, are dedicated to formulating and influencing sound public health policy and to ensuring excellence in state-based public health practice.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services is planning to create a Medicare Drug Rebate and Negotiations Group, containing six divisions and 95 new full-time employees, to manage its new abilities to negotiate drug prices and discipline drugmakers engaged in price hikes, according to documents obtained by Stat News that CMS sent to lawmakers this month. (Stat News)

President Joe Biden announced more than $8 billion in private- and public-sector pledges to help fight hunger, including a commitment from Alphabet Inc.'s Google to implement new tools to aid Americans' exposure to health care and nutrition benefits, as well as a promise from Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc. to boost its in-store offerings of fresh foods by 20% by 2030. (Bloomberg) Ahead of the White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition and Health, the Food and Drug Administration proposed new rules that would allow food manufacturers to place "healthy" labels on the front of their packages, provided the foods meet certain requirements. (The Washington Post)

CMS signed off on two state-run initiatives intended to bolster Medicaid coverage, in addition to presenting new evidence-based measures meant to boost nutritional assistance and ensure continued coverage. A key element of the Oregon demonstration will be to allow children on Medicaid to keep their coverage until they're 6 years old without any renewals required, while the Massachusetts demonstration will guarantee a full year of continuous Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program coverage to beneficiaries following release from a correctional facility, plus two years of continuous eligibility for those facing chronic homelessness. (Fierce Healthcare)

- Among individuals eligible to receive the monkeypox vaccine, those that did not get the shot were 14 times more likely to become infected with the virus than those who did, per new data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which also said it would now follow a pre-exposure prophylaxis strategy for the Jynneos shot. (CNN) With the White House's $4.5 billion request in monkeypox funding denied by Congress in the stopgap funding bill, the Biden administration is now eyeing an expected omnibus bill — which must pass by Dec. 16 — to secure the aid, while states and clinics will tap temporary funding streams in the meantime. GENERAL

New Infectious Threats Are Coming. The US Probably Won't Contain Them.
Apoorva Mandavilli, The New York Times
If it wasn't clear enough during the Covid-19 pandemic, it has become obvious during the monkeypox outbreak: The United States, among the richest, most advanced nations in the world, remains wholly unprepared to combat new pathogens.

HHS report finds incidents of abuse, neglect and unauthorized release in Head Start programs

Joseph Choi, The Hill
A review by a federal oversight agency found that a quarter of Head Start grant recipients, federally funded programs that provide child care for low-income families, had incidents of child abuse, lack of supervision or unauthorized releases to adults.

Ohio minors sought abortions out of state after being sexually assaulted, affidavits say
Erik Ortiz, NBC News
In affidavits filed this month included as part of a lawsuit challenging the Ohio law — which went into effect after the U.S. Supreme Court in June overturned the landmark Roe v. Wade ruling that guaranteed a constitutional right to an abortion — two separate providers said they each had a case in which a minor was sexually assaulted and had to travel out of state to terminate their pregnancies.

How McKinsey Got Into the Business of Addiction
Walt Bogdanich and Michael Forsythe, The New York Times
The consulting firm's work with opioid makers is well known, but for decades McKinsey worked with Big Tobacco and has also advised Juul, the e-cigarette company.

Weed, vaping use by teens on the rise, as other substance abuse falls

Commonwealth Fund: Insurance often not enough to stave off debts
Robert King, Fierce Healthcare
Even amid high levels of insurance coverage, more and more Americans are finding it difficult to afford healthcare, a new survey found.

Alzheimer's Drugs' Lofty Expectations Hinge on US Health Plan Coverage
John Tozzi, Bloomberg
Wall Street is betting that Alzheimer's treatments in development will yield billions of dollars in sales after an experimental treatment from Biogen Inc. and Eisai Co. slowed the course of the brain disease in a large trial. But those fortunes still hinge on the US Medicare program's assessment of the treatment's impact.

DaVita-Tenet-UnitedHealth antitrust case moves forward
Nona Tepper, Modern Healthcare
A proposed class-action lawsuit alleging DaVita, Tenet Healthcare and UnitedHealth Group affiliates violated antitrust law by agreeing not to hire each other's senior employees is moving forward, although UnitedHealth does not have to defend itself in the case.

PROVIDERS

Patients face barriers to routine care as doctors warn of ripple effects from broad abortion bans
Alice Miranda Ollstein and Daniel Payne, Politico
Patients seeking drugs to treat everything from arthritis to acne at Walgreens and CVS pharmacies in the dozen-plus states with near-total abortion bans must show extra documentation to prove that they're not using the drugs to end a pregnancy, the companies confirmed to POLITICO. Those who can't are, in some cases, being turned away.

Physician Burnout Has Reached Distressing Levels, New Research Finds
Oliver Whang, The New York Times
Nearly two-thirds of doctors are experiencing at least one symptom of burnout, a huge increase from before the pandemic. But the situation is not irreparable, researchers say.

Hospital Medicare Reimbursement Cuts From HHS Found Unlawful
Ian Lopez, Bloomberg Law
Hospitals supporting low-income Americans secured higher Medicare reimbursement rates after a federal judge declared the government's payment process "defective."

Nonprofit hospitals' vague charity care criteria
Arielle Dreher, Axios
Tax-exempt hospitals revamped their charity care policies during the pandemic, in some cases using vague language to describe who was eligible and occasionally tightening access based on immigration status, according to an analysis in JAMA Network Open.

Low-wage healthcare job benefits increase amid labor shortage
Caroline Hudson, Modern Healthcare
At 37% of hospital systems, benefit contributions charged to low-wage workers have been reduced, compared with 30% a year ago. Another 21% are considering such reductions in the next year, up from 15% last year, according to an annual survey released this week by financial-services firm Aon. The firm surveyed 145 health systems representing more than 1,200 hospitals and 2.6 million employees.

HEALTH TECHNOLOGY

Google, Mayo, Kaiser Permanente on tackling AI's bias problem
Dave Muoio, Fierce Healthcare
Provider and tech organizations alike often say that artificial intelligence, if fully realized, could herald a new paradigm for healthcare delivery.

New FDA guidance on AI in medicine sparks strong reactions
Casey Ross, Stat News

New guidance from the Food and Drug Administration is triggering strong reaction from researchers and regulatory experts, who see it as an attempt to significantly expand the oversight of software tools used to guide clinical decisions. But they are sharply divided on whether that's a much-needed change, or a dramatic overreach by regulators.

A bionic pancreas aims to take the math out of managing type 1 diabetes
Katie Palmer, Stat News
For people living with type 1 diabetes, it pays to be good at math. Keeping blood glucose in a healthy range requires a constant stream of calculations: counting the carbs in each meal, and then finding the right dose of insulin to balance them out. But new clinical trial results from an automated insulin delivery system from Beta Bionics suggest that computation can be reliably outsourced to a machine — potentially putting better blood glucose control in the hands of more patients.

Cerebral Treated a 17-Year-Old Without His Parents' Consent. They Found Out the Day He Died.
Khadeeja Safdar, The Wall Street Journal
Telehealth startup Cerebral had software that could verify customer IDs but didn't use it to check birth dates and other details, a policy that resulted in some minors being treated without parental consent, according to former employees and documents reviewed by The Wall Street Journal.

OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

How to address our nursing shortage? Start by valuing nurses more.
Leana S. Wen, The Washington Post
Even before the pandemic, there was growing concern that the aging population would require more health-care services, and stress and burnout were leading nurses to leave the bedside. Covid-19 exacerbated these problems. As surges overwhelmed hospitals, nurses often cared for so many patients at once that they feared they were providing unsafe care. Some left for this reason. Others cited concerns for their own health.

RESEARCH REPORTS

State of U.S. Health Insurance in 2022: Biennial Survey
Sara R. Collins et al., The Commonwealth Fund
The number and percentage of Americans lacking health insurance is falling to historic lows, thanks to policy changes aimed at helping people get and stay covered during the COVID-19 pandemic, as well as the recent decision by several states to expand Medicaid eligibility under the Affordable Care Act. Still, a large number of people in the United States remain uninsured or inadequately covered, a situation that will worsen when some temporary pandemic measures expire.

HHS approves Mass., Ore. Medicaid demonstration waivers

HHS approved Oregon's section 1115 demonstration waiver to allow the state's Medicaid program to provide continuous coverage to children until 6 years of age and offer expanded housing and food support to beneficiaries. The agency also approved a demonstration waiver from Massachusetts that will allow the state Medicaid program to provide up to one year of continuous coverage to children and adults who were released from a correctional facility, up to two years of continuous eligibility for people without stable housing, and up to a year of food and housing assistance for pregnant women and children with special health needs. Full Story: Health Payer Intelligence (9/28)

CDC shifts to PrEP strategy for monkeypox vaccination

Walensky (Getty Images)

The CDC has released new data on the efficacy of a single dose of the Jynneos monkeypox vaccine that shows it offers some protection and that at-risk individuals who have not gotten a vaccine have a 14-fold risk of getting infected, according to preliminary data. CDC Director Rochelle Walensky said the agency is shifting its approach to a pre-exposure prophylaxis strategy so that at-risk individuals will be able to get the vaccine before potential exposure. Full Story: CNBC (9/28), Reuters (9/28)

Experts worry about public reaction to vaccine study

(Pixabay)

A recent study found potential links between childhood vaccines that contain aluminum adjuvants and children's risk for asthma and allergies, but a causal link was not established, and the study's lead author says the benefits of vaccines greatly outweigh the risks. Paul Offit of Children's Hospital of Philadelphia said the study was flawed, researchers didn't account for other ways children are exposed to aluminum, and findings were inconsistent. Michael Osterholm, director of the University of Minnesota's Center for Infectious Disease Research and Policy, and Drexel University pediatrics professor Sarah Long said the findings might contribute to vaccine hesitance, but it's important to study vaccine safety and be transparent about the findings. Full Story: The Associated Press (9/27)

Bridging the digital divide in health care

The adoption of digital solutions in health care has steadily increased in recent years in an effort to ensure uninterrupted and safe patient care amid the COVID-19 pandemic. While the shift has fostered greater adoption of digital solutions and advancements in care, it has also further highlighted social determinants and inequities that factor into the digital divide in health care. Listen to the podcast.

Webinar: Big data, better outcomes -- register today

Join us on Wednesday, Oct. 12, from 1 to 2 p.m. ET for "Is Your Data Working for You?" as ActiveHealth Management shows how big data can improve our understanding of how to achieve better health outcomes. They'll share results of an independent third-party validated study demonstrating cost savings that can come from effective use of clinical insights.

Where does your health care dollar go?

Americans deserve to know how their premium dollars are used. To provide that insight, AHIP has updated its Health Care Dollar, analyzing three years of data -- from 2018 through 2020 -- of where premium dollars are spent in the commercial market (employer-provided coverage and individual market). The analysis shows that 82.4 cents of every premium dollar go to prescription drugs and medical services -- up from 81.6 cents from its last analysis released in 2020. Check out the AHIP Health Care Dollar.

SUBJECT: New from NICHQ: The Importance of Gender-Affirming Healthcare forChildren and Families, Communities of Practice for Early ChildcareProviders, NICHQ welcomes new board members, and more!
FROM: NICHQ Communications <communications@nichq.org>
TO: hborski@utah.gov

In this edition, learn about the importance of gender-affirming healthcare for children and families, watch a webinar with strategies to improve outcomes for families affected by Substance Use Disorder in pregnancy, and register for our upcoming Breastfeeding and Safe Sleep Community of Practice meetings.
Scroll for your monthly dose of inspiration!

As more and more youth live their gender identity openly to achieve their optimal health, many of them experience discrimination, stigma, restricted access to medical care and mental healthcare, and increasingly, legislation on their bodily autonomy. In 2022 alone, more than 335 pieces of legislation aimed at controlling the existence of gender-diverse children and adolescents were introduced in state legislatures. And in July, 10 anti-LGBTQI+ laws went into effect, all education-related and ranging from banning classroom discussions of gender and sexuality to restrictions on sports teams that transgender students can join and restrictions on the bathrooms, lockers, and other facilities that transgender students can use.

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) in its policy statement Ensuring Comprehensive Care and Support for Transgender and Gender-Diverse Children and Adolescents, more gender-diverse youth and their families are presenting to pediatric providers for education, care, and referrals as a traditionally underserved population that faces numerous health disparities. The AAP acknowledges that the need for more formal training, standardized treatment, and research on safety and medical outcomes often leaves providers feeling ill-equipped to support and care for gender-diverse patients and their families. Here are three strategies providers can use to facilitate gender-affirmative care.

Dear Heather,

The October issue of AJPH features a special section on COVID-19 and health equity data. Select articles cover the impact of the pandemic among minority communities, the toll of hate incidences, and the collection of disaggregated data.

Here are a few of the many articles in the October 2022 issue:

- Podcast: "Reproductive Rights After the Supreme Court Decision on Dobbs v. Jackson" (Watch as a video)
- Piloting Public Health
- Disparate Impact of the COVID-19 Pandemic and Health Equity Data Gaps
- The Accumulation of Disadvantage: Black Children, Adolescents and COVID-19 Data Inequity
- Surveying Hate and Its Effects During the COVID-19 Pandemic Among Asian Americans and Native Hawaiians and Pacific Islanders
- Building Public Health Surveillance 3.0: Emerging Timely Measures of Physical, Economic, and Social Environmental Conditions Affecting Health
- Lost Lessons of the 1918 Influenza: The 1920s Working Hypothesis, the Public Health Paradigm, and the Prevention of Deadly Pandemics
- US Black–White Differences in Mortality Risk Among Transgender and Cisgender People in Private Insurance, 2011–2019
- Hourly Wages and Turnover of Community Health Workers According to US State Certification Policy and Medicaid Reimbursement, 2010–2021

The mission of AJPH is to advance public health research, policy, practice and education. Toward that goal, the journal also produces monthly podcasts available in English and Chinese at ajph.org. The monthly podcasts are also on iTunes and Google Play.

Be on the lookout for more timely research from AJPH, and consider subscribing or becoming an APHA member for full access.

SUBJECT: Second Gentleman Douglas Emhoff on Reproductive Rights
FROM: White House Office of Public Engagement <ope@who.eop.gov>
TO: <hborski@utah.gov>
DATE: 29/09/2022 13:22

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Women's Community Update

Friends - Today, GQ Magazine published an interview featuring Second Gentleman Douglas Emhoff on the importance of protecting access to reproductive health care and abortion. In the wake of the Supreme Court decision, overturning Roe v. Wade, the Second Gentleman encourages men to join him in supporting and advancing reproductive freedom. He also highlights the need for pay equity, and increased access to child care and family leave.

The article and an excerpt featuring the Second Gentleman can be found below, along with social media.

[redacted]

Interview:
GQ Magazine: "We Believe That Access to Abortion Is a Basic Human Right"

"My 81-year-old mother is somehow going to enjoy more reproductive freedom for the majority of her life than my daughter."

By Douglas Emhoff
This is one of the only times in our history that a fundamental, well-established right has been taken away by an activist court. It's just completely inappropriate on so many levels. It has angered me from the time the draft opinion came out. I'm trying to channel this anger into action, but the first thing I thought about was my daughter Ella, who's 23, and her grandmother Barbara, who's 81. Think about it: My 81-year-old mother is somehow going to enjoy more reproductive freedom for the majority of her life than my daughter. That's just not okay. And I'm going to do everything I can for as long as I can to make sure that gets rectified.

Now that I'm in this position, I have a microphone and I have access to talk to some folks. I've spoken with doctors and leaders in the medical profession, and you realize it's not just about abortion, it's about health care in general. Because of the absurdity of this Dobbs decision, it has wreaked havoc on the medical profession. You've got doctors with women on operating tables having to call risk management or a lawyer or an insurance company before they can move forward with lifesaving care. It's just completely, completely inappropriate.

My wife, the vice president, was on Air Force Two flying to an event when the news hit. She was able to watch it and she was able to call me. She said something like, "Dougie, they actually did it." And I gotta tell you something, she was incensed. Almost immediately after, I got a text from my daughter, who was also outraged, that said, "Dad, you need to do something about this." I just want to channel the rage that they're feeling and the rage that I'm feeling into action. Not only as a lawyer and as second gentleman, but as a dad and as a husband, as a son, as a brother, for all the very important women in my life.

I think by and large, it's a topic men just don't like to think about or talk about. But even more importantly, many men don't believe it's an issue for men. They think it's just a quote-unquote women's issue. And I couldn't disagree more. It's one of the things I really try to get out there and advocate for. Not only abortion, but a lot of issues that men traditionally wouldn't think impact them: whether it's pay equity, childcare, or family leave. They're human issues. They're American issues. They're issues that men need to care about because everything is related. Everything impacts something else. Lastly, it's the right thing to do. We just need to support each other.

Douglas Emhoff is a lawyer and, as the husband of vice president Kamala Harris, the second gentleman of the United States.

TODAY'S TOP NEWS

- The Food and Drug Administration approved Amylyx Pharmaceuticals Inc.'s ALS drug Relyvrio, the first treatment for Lou Gehrig's disease that the agency has cleared in five years. Patient-advocacy groups had pressured the FDA to approve the new treatment, though some agency staffers and neuroscience experts previously raised concerns about the efficacy of the drug, questioning an estimate from Amylyx that patients taking Relyvrio would have lived a median 9.7 months longer than those given placebos. (The Wall Street Journal)

- The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services said Medicare Advantage premiums would decline by almost 8% next year, falling from an average of $19.52 this year to $18 in 2023. CMS Administrator Chiquita Brooks-LaSure credited the Inflation Reduction Act for the decrease, saying that the law "will provide much needed financial relief and increase access to affordable drugs." (Fierce Healthcare)

- Full 340B drug payments must be reinstated for the rest of 2022, a federal judge in Washington D.C. ordered, delivering a loss to the Department of Health and Human Services and its attempt to minimize spending on the discount drug program. The ruling from Judge Rudolph Contreras of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, which was applauded by plaintiff trade groups including the American Hospital Association, followed a Supreme Court decision in June that ordered HHS to pay providers for the smaller 340B payments they were given in previous years. (Modern Healthcare)

- In a mostly party-line 220-205 vote, the House passed the Mental Health Matters Act, which aims to address the "severe impact" COVID-19 had on students, educators and families by putting more mental health experts in schools and expanding that pipeline of school-based professionals. (The Hill) The U.S. suicide rate jumped nearly 4% from 2020 to 2021 following two years of declines, according to the National Center for Health Statistics, as experts fear a return to pre-pandemic levels. OPINIONS, EDITORIALS AND PERSPECTIVES

Suicide Is a Leading Cause of Death in Young People. We Must Do Something About It.
Dan Finke, U.S. News & World Report
Suicide is among the top causes of death in the United States today, and for some groups, the crisis is particularly acute. The terrible toll that suicide takes on our society is immense. To put it in perspective, in 2020 alone, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says an estimated 12.2 million people in the U.S. seriously considered suicide, 3.2 million made a plan and 1.2 million made an attempt on their own lives. That same year, nearly 46,000 people died by suicide - roughly one person every 11 minutes.

Ventura County, CA Launches New Audio Alert System in Mixteco & Zapoteco to Protect Farmworkers from Wildfires

Ventura, CA – As California and much of the Western United States experience an intense wildfire season, Ventura County farmworker advocates and agency partners are improving a current wildfire smoke alert system that now includes audio messages to keep people safer from wildfire smoke and air pollution.

Wildfire smoke exposure is becoming a growing health threat to farmworkers, who must often continue to work in the fields during wildfires and extreme heat events. Wildfire smoke has been linked to a range of health issues, including asthma, heart attacks and chronic heart and lung disease, as well as adverse pregnancy outcomes.

[redacted]

[redacted]

Title

Due to climate change, wildfire seasons are becoming longer, more intense and more dangerous.

During a joint press conference yesterday, the Ventura County Air Pollution Control District, Mixteco Indigena Community Organizing Project (MICOP), Líderes Campesinas, Central Coast Alliance United for a Sustainable Economy (CAUSE), and the Public Health Institute's Achieving Resilient Communities (ARC) project introduced new updates to the emergency alert system, which will now include audio alert messages in Mixteco and Zapoteco that would notify farmworkers and field supervisors when air quality reaches unhealthy levels in Ventura County due to wildfire smoke.

Help spread the word: Share on Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn.

"The enhanced audio emergency alert system builds on an existing model developed by the Ventura County Air Pollution Control District in 2021," explained Ali Ghasemi, Ventura County Air Pollution Control District Officer. "The existing model notifies farmworkers and field supervisors by text in English and Spanish when air quality deteriorates beyond unhealthy levels due to wildfires. The enhanced version, which will deliver embedded audio links, now features four languages with the addition of Mixteco and Zapoteco to the original alert languages. This further adapts our target public health messaging program to support a particularly susceptible community," Ghasemi added.

Eulalia Mendoza, farmworker and community advocate with the Mixteco Indigena Community Organizing Project (MICOP), shares how the 2017 Thomas Fire prompted her to advocate for the new Ventura County audio alert system.

WATCH

In 2017, the Thomas Fire severely affected Ventura County communities and at the time was the largest wildfire event in California's history. Spanish speaking and indigenous community members lacked critical information during the fire because emergency warnings were at first only available in English. Ventura County has more than 40,000 farmworkers and about 1 in 3 speak Mixteco, Zapoteco or another indigenous language.

The new audio emergency alert system for wildfires grew out of the lived experiences from the Thomas Fires for the local farmworkers and farmworker advocates. During the Thomas Fire, many farmworkers worked in the fields when it was unsafe, and without protective gear. As a result, many farmworkers and community-based organizations advocated for these protections to be in place.

Funding from the California Department of Public Health allowed for the development of the FRESAS project, which brought together multiple partners to develop the audio alert system for farmworkers in Ventura County that's linguistically and culturally accessible. Partners on the FRESAS project include: Mixteco Indigena Community Organizing Project (MICOP), Líderes Campesinas, Central Coast Alliance United for a Sustainable Economy (CAUSE), and the Public Health Institute's Achieving Resilient Communities (ARC) project. The Ventura County Air Pollution Control District led the development of the new text and audio alert system for farmworkers.

[redacted]

“We are very grateful that the alert system for agricultural workers in our mother tongues has been approved,” expressed Erbino Mateo, ARC Farmworker Advisory Committee Member. This change is important because many do not fully understand Spanish or English and we need to understand this information in our mother tongue. We need to know what kind of air we are breathing, especially when there is smoke and fire somewhere,” Mateo added.

Tommy Winning, meteorologist at the Ventura County Air Pollution Control District, explains Ventura's new audio alert system and shares how farmworkers can use it to protect themselves during wildfire events.

WATCH

How the Alert System Works

- Farmworkers, including employers and field supervisors, can sign up to receive text or audio alerts by texting SMOKE for alerts in English and HUMO for alerts in Spanish/Mixteco/Zapoteco to 855-522-0034. They can subscribe at no cost. Phone provider charges may apply.
- Once signed up, they will receive a text or a link to an audio message with air quality notifications in real-time when the Air Quality Index (AQI) reaches 151 (unhealthy), where CalOSHA requires employers to provide N95 masks to outdoor workers for voluntary use. Subscribers for the smoke alert system will also receive notifications for when the AQI exceeds 500 (hazardous), which is when outdoor workers are required to wear N95 masks at all times.
- When a subscriber receives a wildfire smoke alert, they will be informed in real-time about their safety needs (i.e. the need to wear an N95 mask, not being outdoors, etc.). Farmworkers who may not have access to a phone, should receive alerts/communication from their field supervisors/employers.

Dr. Gina Solomon, director at PHI's Achieving Resilient Communities (ARC), discusses the need for solutions that will protect farmworkers during wildfires and extreme heat, including providing paid days off when it's not safe to work outside.

WATCH

Climate-related disasters, the 2017 Thomas Fire and the COVID-19 pandemic have highlighted the need for improved local and state public health emergency preparedness policies. Innovations like audio alert systems in indigenous languages have been shown to be essential in addressing the unique needs of farmworkers.

“Ventura County’s wildfire smoke audio alert system is a model that could be replicated in other parts of the state and even throughout the nation, to protect the health of farmworkers by increasing their access to critical emergency response information,” said Dr. Gina Solomon, Director of the Public Health Institute’s Achieving Resilient Communities program. “Community-led alert systems that provide farmworkers with safety information in multiple languages could also be used for a wide range of climate and health issues—extreme heat, COVID and other emerging crises,” Solomon added.

Further efforts also need to be in place to protect farmworkers during wildfire events. Partners envision the audio alert model for Ventura County as an opportunity for the State of California and other jurisdictions to consider as they define and develop plans for disaster preparedness in multiple languages.

NOW APPROVED

PEMAZYRE® (pemigatinib) is now the first and only FDA-approved treatment for adults with relapsed or refractory myeloid/lymphoid neoplasms (MLNs) with fibroblast growth factor receptor 1 (FGFR1) rearrangement.

- NCCN Clinical Practice Guidelines in Oncology (NCCN Guidelines®) Recommend pemigatinib (PEMAZYRE) as a treatment option for patients with myeloid/lymphoid neoplasms with eosinophilia and fibroblast growth factor receptor 1 (FGFR1) rearrangement.[1]

Consider updating your coverage policy, formulary, care plans, and order sets to include PEMAZYRE for appropriate patients

Ocular Toxicity

Retinal Pigment Epithelial Detachment (RPED): PEMAZYRE can cause RPED, which may cause symptoms such as blurred vision, visual floaters, or photopsia. Clinical trials of PEMAZYRE did not conduct routine monitoring including optical coherence tomography (OCT) to detect asymptomatic RPED; therefore, the incidence of asymptomatic RPED with PEMAZYRE is unknown.

Among 635 patients who received a starting dose of PEMAZYRE 13.5 mg across clinical trials, RPED occurred in 11% of patients, including Grade 3-4 RPED in 1.3%. The median time to first onset of RPED was 56 days. RPED led to dose interruption of PEMAZYRE in 3.1% of patients, and dose reduction and permanent discontinuation in 1.3% and in 0.2% of patients, respectively. RPED resolved or improved to Grade 1 levels in 76% of patients who required dosage modification of PEMAZYRE for RPED.

Perform a comprehensive ophthalmological examination including OCT prior to initiation of PEMAZYRE and every 2 months for the first 6 months and every 3 months thereafter during treatment. For onset of visual symptoms, refer patients for ophthalmologic evaluation urgently, with follow-up every 3 weeks until resolution or discontinuation of PEMAZYRE. Modify the dose or permanently discontinue PEMAZYRE as recommended in the prescribing information for PEMAZYRE.

Dry eye: Among 635 patients who received a starting dose of PEMAZYRE 13.5 mg across clinical trials, dry eye occurred in 31% of patients, including Grade 3-4 in 1.6% of patients. Treat patients with ocular demulcents as needed.

Hyperphosphatemia and Soft Tissue Mineralization

PEMAZYRE can cause hyperphosphatemia leading to soft tissue mineralization, cutaneous calcification, calcinosis, and non-uremic calciphylaxis. Increases in phosphate levels are a pharmacodynamic effect of PEMAZYRE. Among 635 patients who received a starting dose of PEMAZYRE 13.5 mg across clinical trials, hyperphosphatemia was reported in 93% of patients based on laboratory values above the upper limit of normal. The median time to onset of hyperphosphatemia was 8 days (range 1-169). Phosphate lowering therapy was required in 33% of patients receiving PEMAZYRE.

Monitor for hyperphosphatemia and initiate a low phosphate diet when serum phosphate level is >5.5 mg/dL. For serum phosphate levels >7 mg/dL, initiate phosphate lowering therapy and withhold, reduce the dose, or permanently discontinue PEMAZYRE based on duration and severity of hyperphosphatemia as recommended in the prescribing information.

Embryo-Fetal Toxicity

Based on findings in an animal study and its mechanism of action, PEMAZYRE can cause fetal harm when administered to a pregnant woman. Oral administration of pemigatinib to pregnant rats during the period of organogenesis caused fetal malformations, fetal growth retardation, and embryo-fetal death at maternal exposures lower than the human exposure based on area under the curve (AUC) at the clinical dose of 13.5 mg.

Advise pregnant women of the potential risk to the fetus. Advise female patients of reproductive potential to use effective contraception during treatment with PEMAZYRE and for 1 week after the last dose. Advise males with female partners of reproductive potential to use effective contraception during treatment with PEMAZYRE and for 1 week after the last dose.

Adverse Reactions: Myeloid/Lymphoid Neoplasms with FGFR1 Rearrangement

Serious adverse reactions occurred in 53% of patients receiving PEMAZYRE at all dosages (n=34). Serious adverse reactions in > 5% of patients included acute kidney injury. Fatal adverse reactions occurred in 9% of patients who received PEMAZYRE, including acute kidney injury, multiple organ dysfunction syndrome, and malignant neoplasm progression, occurring in one patient each.

Permanent discontinuation due to an adverse reaction occurred in 12% of patients who received PEMAZYRE at all dosages. Adverse reactions requiring permanent discontinuation included cardiac failure, multiple organ dysfunction syndrome, blood alkaline phosphatase increase, and calciphylaxis. In patients who started treatment on the recommended dosage (n = 20), adverse reactions requiring dosage interruption of PEMAZYRE occurred in 80% of patients. Adverse reactions which required dosage interruption in > 2 patients treated at the recommended dosage included nail toxicities (20%) and hyperphosphatemia (15%).

Dose reductions of PEMAZYRE due to an adverse reaction occurred in 80% of patients who started treatment on the recommended dosage. Adverse reactions requiring dose reductions occurring in > 2 patients were nail toxicities (20%), hyperphosphatemia (20%), and alopecia (15%).

Clinically relevant adverse reactions occurring in ≤10% of patients included fractures (2.1%). In all patients treated with pemigatinib, 0.5% experienced pathologic fractures (which included patients with and without cholangiocarcinoma [N = 635]). Soft tissue mineralization, including cutaneous calcification, calcinosis, and non-uremic calciphylaxis associated with hyperphosphatemia were observed with PEMAZYRE treatment.

Within the first 21-day cycle of PEMAZYRE dosing, serum creatinine increased (mean increase of 0.2 mg/dL) and reached steady state by Day 8, and then decreased during the 7 days off therapy. Consider alternative markers of renal function if persistent elevations in serum creatinine are observed.

The most common (≥ 20%) adverse reactions were hyperphosphatemia (74%), nail toxicity (62%), alopecia (59%), stomatitis (53%), diarrhea (50%), dry eye (50%), fatigue (44%), rash (35%), abdominal pain (35%), anemia (35%), constipation (32%), dry mouth (32%), epistaxis (29%), retinal pigment epithelial detachment (26%), extremity pain (26%), decreased appetite (24%), dry skin (24%), dyspepsia (24%), back pain (24%), nausea (21%), blurred vision (21%), peripheral edema (21%), and dizziness (21%).

Drug Interactions

Avoid concomitant use of strong and moderate CYP3A inhibitors with PEMAZYRE. Reduce the dose of PEMAZYRE if concomitant use with a strong or moderate CYP3A inhibitor cannot be avoided. Avoid concomitant use of strong and moderate CYP3A inducers with PEMAZYRE.

Special Populations

Advise lactating women not to breastfeed during treatment with PEMAZYRE and for 1 week after the last dose.

Reduce the recommended dose of PEMAZYRE for patients with severe renal impairment as described in the prescribing information.

Reduce the recommended dose of PEMAZYRE for patients with severe hepatic impairment as described in the prescribing information.

Please see Full Prescribing Information for PEMAZYRE.

Hurricanes Fiona and Ian—Clinical Guidance for Carbon Monoxide (CO) Poisoning

Summary
The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is reminding healthcare professionals seeing patients from areas affected by Hurricanes Fiona or Ian to maintain a high index of suspicion for carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning. Other people who may have been exposed to the same CO source may need to be identified and evaluated.

The signs and symptoms of CO exposure are variable and nonspecific. A tension-type headache is the most common symptom of mild CO poisoning. Other common symptoms of CO poisoning are dizziness, weakness, drowsiness, upset stomach, vomiting, chest pain, and altered mental status (confusion).

Clinical manifestations of severe CO poisoning include cardiovascular and neurological effects: tachycardia, tachypnea, hypotension, metabolic acidosis, dysrhythmias, myocardial ischemia or infarction, noncardiogenic pulmonary edema, irritability, impaired memory, cognitive and sensory disturbances, ataxia, altered or loss of consciousness, seizures, coma, and death, although any organ system might be involved.

CO poisoning can be fatal for anyone. Children, pregnant people, babies and infants, persons with sickle cell disease, older adults, and persons with chronic illness (e.g., heart or lung disease) are at particularly high risk.

Background
People whose homes or business have lost electrical power due to Hurricanes Fiona or Ian may turn to alternate power sources such as gasoline generators and may use propane or charcoal grills for cooking. Other sources of CO poisoning may include motor vehicles, boats, camp stoves, and gas-powered tools. If used or placed improperly, these sources can lead to CO build up inside buildings, garages, or campers, and poison the people and animals inside.

When obtaining a focused history of patient activities and health symptoms, exposure to a CO source may become apparent. Appropriate and prompt diagnostic testing and treatment are crucial to reduce morbidity and prevent mortality from CO poisoning. Identifying and mitigating the CO source is critical in preventing other poisoning cases.

Recommendations for Clinicians

- Consider CO poisoning in patients affected by Hurricanes Fiona or Ian, particularly in areas currently without power. Assess symptoms and recent patient activities that point to likely CO exposure. Evaluation should also include examination for other conditions, including smoke inhalation, trauma, medical illness, or intoxication.
- Administer 100% oxygen until the patient is symptom-free or until a diagnosis of CO poisoning has been ruled out. If CO poisoning is confirmed, contact the Poison Control Center (800) 222-1222.
- Perform carboxyhemoglobin (COHgb) testing when CO poisoning is suspected. Venous or arterial blood may be used for testing. A fingertip pulse multiple wavelength spectrophotometer, or pulse CO-oximeter, can be used to measure heart rate, oxygen saturation, and COHgb levels, but any suspicion of CO poisoning should be confirmed with a COHgb level by multiple wavelength spectrophotometer (CO-oximeter). A conventional two-wavelength pulse oximeter is not accurate when COHgb is present. For more information, see CDC's Clinical Guidance for Carbon Monoxide Poisoning After a Disaster.
- An elevated COHgb level of 2% or higher for non-smokers and 9% or higher COHgb level for smokers strongly supports a diagnosis of CO poisoning. The COHgb level must be interpreted in light of the patient's exposure history and length of time away from CO exposure, as levels gradually fall after the patient is removed from the exposure. In addition, CO can be produced endogenously as a by-product of heme metabolism. Patients with sickle cell disease can have an elevated COHgb level as a result of hemolytic anemia or hemolysis. Additional information about interpretation of COHgb levels can be found within the Clinical Guidance, or call Poison Control at (800) 222-1222.
- Hyperbaric oxygen (HBO) therapy should be considered in consultation with a toxicologist, hyperbaric oxygen facility, or Poison Control Center (800) 222-1222. For additional clinical management considerations, consult a medical toxicologist, Poison Control at (800) 222-1222, or a hyperbaric oxygen facility.
- Be aware that CO exposure may be ongoing for others spending time in or near the same environment as the patient. These individuals should be evaluated and tested as described in this advisory.

- Healthcare professionals treating people for CO poisoning should notify emergency medical services (EMS), the fire department, or law enforcement to investigate and mitigate the source, check for and evacuate people or animals who may still be near the source, and advise people when it is safe to return.
- Advise patients about safe practices related to generators, grills, camp stoves, or other gasoline, propane, natural gas, or charcoal-burning devices. Stress that that these devices should never be used inside an enclosed space, home, basement, garage, or camper—or even outside near an open window or window air conditioner.

Good morning to you, health readers, and a special shout-out to everyone on the Hill enjoying some long-awaited recess. We're marking the occasion here at Morning Consult Health with a quiz question for you: What's the latest net approval among registered voters for Congress' handling of COVID-19?

A: minus 20
B: minus 11
C: minus 4
D: plus 1

You can find the answer at the bottom of the newsletter.

WHAT'S AHEAD

The Food and Drug Administration's Vaccines and Related Biological Products Advisory Committee is holding a meeting Thursday at 8:30 a.m. During an open session, the committee will discuss strain selection for the influenza vaccine for the 2023 Southern Hemisphere flu season. The meeting also comes a little more than a week after Moderna Inc. and Pfizer Inc.-BioNTech SE submitted their requests to the FDA for emergency use authorization for their respective updated COVID-19 boosters for adolescents and children. A source close to planning discussions told CNN that FDA authorization for those shots could come early this month.

The Bipartisan Policy Center is hosting a panel discussion on the Programs of All-Inclusive Care for the Elderly on Wednesday at 2 p.m. The conversation will cover how to improve access to and enrollment in PACE, the fully integrated, comprehensive care model for qualifying enrollees via Medicare, Medicaid and private payments. Panelists include experts from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the National PACE Association, AHM Enterprises and PACE Southeast Michigan.

The Alliance for Health Policy is holding a webinar on the opportunities and limitations of health data on Thursday at 12 p.m. The event will cover the importance of data in addressing health disparities, the primary hurdles in securing better data and how policy changes can lead to better health data collection and utilization at the federal level. Speakers include Samantha Artiga, vice president and director of the Kaiser Family Foundation's Racial Equity and Health Policy Program; Niall Brennan, chief analytics and privacy officer at Clarify Health; and Elizabeth Lukanen, deputy director of the State Health Access Data Assistance Center.

Mark Cuban, co-founder of Cost Plus Drugs, will join Box CEO Aaron Levie for a fireside chat on Thursday at 12:30 p.m. Cuban recently told Forbes that he's considering leaving Shark Tank to focus on Cost Plus Drugs, the public benefit corporation he started in January that offers substantial discounts on roughly 350 generic medications.

WEEK IN REVIEW

Health items in federal spending package: The Biden administration's requests for $22 billion to combat COVID-19 and $4 billion to fight monkeypox were left on the cutting-room floor of Democrats' short-term government funding bill, which passed the Senate and House to avoid a shutdown.

Two Medicare programs that bolster payments to rural hospitals — the Medicare Dependent Hospital and Low-Volume Hospital programs — did, however, make the cut.

Democrats agreed to Republican demands and signed off on a five-year reauthorization of FDA user fee programs without any additional policy riders attached, though lawmakers will revisit a handful of agency programs with short-term extensions in mid-December.

Medicare and Medicaid: Monthly premiums for Medicare's Part B plan, which offers coverage for outpatient care, will fall 3% in 2023, a savings of $5.20 for most enrollees that will help offset the $21.60 increase in 2022 that was fueled in part by coverage of the costly Alzheimer's drug Aduhelm.

The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services is planning to create a Medicare Drug Rebate and Negotiations Group, containing six divisions and 95 new full-time employees, to manage its new abilities to negotiate drug prices and discipline drugmakers engaged in price hikes, according to documents obtained by Stat News that CMS sent to lawmakers last month.

CMS said Medicare Advantage premiums would decline by almost 8% next year, falling from an average of $19.52 this year to $18 in 2023.

CMS signed off on two state-run initiatives intended to bolster Medicaid coverage. A key element of the Oregon demonstration will be to allow children on Medicaid to keep their coverage until they're 6 years old without any renewals required, while the Massachusetts demonstration will guarantee a full year of continuous Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program coverage to beneficiaries following release from a correctional facility, plus two years of continuous eligibility for those facing chronic homelessness.

Biden's hunger summit: Ahead of its White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition and Health, the Biden administration released its national strategy for ending hunger by 2030, a plan that calls on health officials and Congress to work together on providing access to healthy and free school meals to at least 9 million more children by 2032.

Other elements of the strategy include an FDA push to require front-of-package labeling on food items and an expansion of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Physical Activity and Nutrition Program beyond the 16 states where it has already been implemented.

President Joe Biden announced more than $8 billion in private- and public-sector pledges to help fight hunger, including a commitment from Alphabet Inc.'s Google to implement new tools to aid Americans' exposure to health care and nutrition benefits, as well as a promise from Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc. to boost its in-store offerings of fresh foods by 20% by 2030.

1864

The year in which Arizona's newly resurrected abortion law was enacted — nearly 50 years before it became a state. With the Supreme Court's decision to overturn Roe v. Wade, Pima County Superior Court Judge Kellie Johnson ruled that Arizona must now follow the 19th century ban, which prohibits all abortions except when the mother's life is in danger.

Good morning.

Please have those involved in family planning review this proposed legislation from Rep. Moore as soon as possible.

The idea is to allow Utah access to these funds even though our state has a law on the books requiring parental consent.

Hey Tracy,

We've got some text for you on this. Would your team be able to review? This, implemented, should ameliorate any issues with Utah becoming an award recipient while also reimplementing some pro-life protections from the prior administration.
