Fulton County District Attorney Fani Willis announces the indictment of former President Donald Trump on Monday. | Joe Raedle / Getty Images

Hi, y'all,

A lot of ink has been spilled this week pointing out the differences and similarities between the two sets of indictments that former President Donald Trump faces for his efforts to subvert the 2020 election.

Special counsel Jack Smith's federal case is highly narrative. He is creatively interpreting older law to apply to completely unprecedented behavior from a public official in the United States, requiring storytelling and chronological framing to explain the applicability of the laws. Fulton County District Attorney Fani Willis's charges in Georgia — though vast in number and diverse in scope — have far less of that and don't really require it. The crimes described by Willis, or at least most of them, are simply more straightforward than the crimes described by Smith.

And part of the reason for that relative simplicity is that elections are local and governed by local law. The offices that carry out elections are county and state offices, and the officials who can most meaningfully be influenced to violate their legally required duties are county and state officials. There are more applicable crimes in this space because there are more applicable laws in this space.

While there are big, nationally known names among the defendants — Mark Meadows, Rudy Giuliani, Sidney Powell, and John Eastman — there are a lot of them you’ve probably never heard of. They include locals like Georgia Republican Party Chair David Shafer, Republican State Sen. Shawn Still, and Coffee County Elections Supervisor Misty Hampton. The criminal acts alleged in the document span everything from impersonating a public official to racketeering to computer theft.

For example, Willis’s case lays out how local actors worked alongside the former president to tamper with and illegally access voting equipment in the state. Despite an investigation by the Georgia Bureau of Investigations, none of the well-known suspects in the case had been charged until Monday.

This week, Lawfare put out an astounding deep dive into the events in Coffee County. It shows how local these issues really are, reconstructing the actions of local party officials and local elected officials, drilling down into the things we’re all so familiar with: meeting minutes, misinformation in local activists’ YouTube videos, public records.

The Georgia case also, finally, attempts to achieve some justice for election workers Ruby Freeman and Shaye Moss, who were relentlessly harassed as a result of the lies described in the filing. While the pair have sued Giuliani for defamation, the indictments finally hold others accountable for their actions facilitating or carrying out the shocking treatment of these women.

It also explains the organization of the fake elector scheme carried out in the state, and explains in great detail the lengths that campaign officials went to alongside local GOP staff and party members to submit a slate of false electors to Congress claiming Trump had won the 2020 election in Georgia.

And Willis’s choice to pursue this case using RICO charges has allowed her to more clearly tie together the actions of Trump to his campaign officials and to state and local officials in Georgia, all as parts of one criminal enterprise, in the eyes of Georgia's powerful racketeering law. None of the other cases Trump has so far faced have been able to draw such clear lines.

Still, Willis's case is likely to face huge hurdles.

The individuals charged who were employees of the federal government at the time the alleged crimes were committed can ask for the case to be moved to federal court. Mark Meadows already has, and a hearing has been scheduled for Aug. 28. Trump and former Justice Department Official Jeffery Clark will almost certainly make the same move.

Willis is expected to fight back, but those hearings and those decisions take time. As do lots of other things well before the trial begins.

Jury selection is one of those time-consuming phases. To wit, Willis is also trying a RICO case against rapper Young Thug and nine other defendants. Jury selection for the case began in January and has taken eight months, the longest jury selection has ever taken in Georgia. Trump's case is far more complicated and has twice the number of defendants, which increases the number of potential conflicts among the jury pool.

As in the Young Thug case, the wait and expense of attorneys is likely to mean that defendants begin dropping and turning against each other. But it's also likely to mean that we are waiting years for Willis's case to wrap itself up. I recommend this episode of the Serious Trouble podcast for a smart discussion of this hurdle and others.

Still, if it's successful, Willis's case will be profoundly important as a precedent-setting measure. Lots of you have told me that you fear that the treatment of election workers and the dirty tricks the political parties play in elections will get worse, not better, over time. It's a concern I share.

Convictions in the Georgia case might mean real change in this regard. Her extensive use of local-level law to hold local individuals accountable for behavior that had national consequences has the potential to make a difference in the future, even in non-presidential elections. Its ability to deter similar behavior in the future is an important outcome entirely outside the reach of Jack Smith's prosecution of the former president.

Back Then

Here's a fun one that reinforces the importance of the availability of absentee ballots: In 1898, Thomas C. Dawson, first secretary of the United States legation at Rio Janeiro, traveled a whopping 8,000 miles from where he was stationed in Brazil to his home in Council Bluffs, Iowa, to cast a ballot. Reads the New York Times, "Mr. Dawson, although a comparatively young man, is a political factor in Iowa."

Dear Baltimore City, MD and Cabarrus, NC Elections Divisions,

I am bringing to your attention what appears to be an illegal double vote with the same voter information in the states of Maryland and North Carolina for the 2020 General Election.

More specifically, it appears that there was an early vote on 10/29/2020 at the EV03 MOUNT PLEASANT CHURCH AND MINISTRIES in Baltimore City, MD and an absentee ballot at ONESTOP in Cabarrus County, NC for the 2020 General Election using the same voter information.

I request the Federal Government, the State of Maryland, and the State of Florida investigate this duplicate vote and make the necessary changes required and hold the individuals responsible for the double vote accountable.

This address and vote was detected by voter registration and voting records, and the voter is connected to both voter registration locations by the mailing address on the Florida voter registration matching to the residential/ mailing address on the Maryland voter registration.

Good afternoon, everyone!

- NASED Call:
 - Attached please find the notes from Friday's call. Our next call – and OUR LAST CALL FOR 2022!!! – will be Friday, December 16 at noon ET.
 - Gail Fenumiai (AK) will be retiring effective Friday. Gail is a longtime NASED member and served as NASED President in 2015. Congratulations, Gail, and thank you for your service to your voters and to all voters nationwide, as well as to our organization!
 - I know this is a time of transition for many of you, so if that describes you, please don't forget to let me know what your plans are.
- EAC:
 - The EAC will hold a Local Leadership Council meeting on Wednesday, December 14 at 1pm ET. It will be livestreamed. If you are unsure which local officials from your state serve on the council, you can find the roster here.
- USPS:
 - USPS issued a request for public comment on proposed changes to their address corrections process; the comment period ends tomorrow. The change will require Full Service and Seamless Acceptance mail customers to receive address correction notices electronically. If a mail piece is set up with Return Service Requested, that mail piece will still be returned to you; the only change is in the report. If you use unique serialized IMBs (ie – it's set up to allow a voter to track their individual ballot), you are either a Full Service or Seamless Acceptance mailer, so this change may impact many of you and/or your locals. This change would be effective July 9, 2023.

- I know the public comment closes tomorrow, but it took several weeks for USPS to be able to explain this change in plain language. I'm sorry for the delay, but the notice was extremely difficult for me to understand and I didn't want anyone to get riled up.
- The Postal Regulatory Commission (PRC) announced their proposed price increases that will take effect January 22, 2023. These price changes have already been approved by the USPS Board of Governors. For more information than you probably want, you can view the PRC filing here. As a reminder, in July 2021, the NASED Executive Board submitted a public comment requesting clarity in the schedule, frequency, and magnitude of postal rate price increases. Increases are now done on a regular schedule of January and July and are of a relatively predictable size (consumer price index plus a few other USPS-specific factors). At a high-level, January's changes are below, but remember that different factors can decrease the cost per piece of any individual mailing.
 - First Class Letters (1 ounce) - $0.60 → $0.63
 - First Class Domestic Postcards - $0.44 → $0.48
- Supreme Court:
 - Yesterday, the Supreme Court heard oral arguments in Moore v. Harper, the "independent state legislature theory" case. If you missed it, you can listen or view a transcript here.
- NASED Conference:
 - NASED conference registration is officially open! Join us February 16-18 in Washington, DC; February 15 will be the Government Coordinating Council meeting, which is open to all of you to attend if you wish to do so, though it is not part of the NASED conference. All state and territorial election office staff from offices in good standing with NASED are welcome to register as members and attend all member content. I hope to see many of you there!

I think that's it for today!

Dear Pima County, AZ and Moore County, NC Elections Divisions,

I am bringing to your attention what appears to be someone who double voted in the states of Arizona and North Carolina in the 2020 General Election. More specifically, in Pima County, AZ and Moore County, NC in the 2020 General Election.

This address and vote was detected by voter registration, voting records, and connected to both addresses through the national change of address (NCOA) records obtained during 09/2022. Additionally, the phone number in both state voter registrations is identical.

Dear Baltimore City, MD and Cabarrus, NC Elections Divisions,

I am bringing to your attention what appears to be an illegal double vote with the same voter information in the states of Maryland and North Carolina for the 2020 General Election.

More specifically, it appears that there was an early vote on 10/29/2020 at the EV03 MOUNT PLEASANT CHURCH AND MINISTRIES in Baltimore City, MD and an absentee ballot at ONESTOP in Cabarrus County, NC for the 2020 General Election using the same voter information.

I request the Federal Government, the State of Maryland, and the State of Florida investigate this duplicate vote and make the necessary changes required and hold the individuals responsible for the double vote accountable.

This address and vote was detected by voter registration and voting records, and the voter is connected to both voter registration locations by the mailing address on the Florida voter registration matching to the residential/ mailing address on the Maryland voter registration.

I have a citizen that has been requesting that we start using it. He has made public comments in board meetings, sent emails to our county commissioners, and shared a video of how it works with me. I have consistently responded to this citizen that we would not use anything for list maintenance that did not come from the SBOE as we need to be consistent.

Hi Patrick,

I understand that a new program for voter list maintenance may be being shopped around in North Carolina. Are you guys at all familiar with, or have you had any discussions with counties, about the program Eagle AI?

If so, I'd love to speak more.

Thanks,

I have a citizen that has been requesting that we start using it. He has made public comments in board meetings, sent emails to our county commissioners, and shared a video of how it works with me. I have consistently responded to this citizen that we would not use anything for list maintenance that did not come from the SBOE as we need to be consistent.

Is anyone familiar with this? Added Sara Lavere as well to see if she knows of any counties that have heard anything. I believe, but am not positive, that some "election integrity" groups are backing some type of program that would identify possible anomalies/duplicates/etc. on the voter rolls. I don't think our counties could/would use this without state approval, however.

Anyone know anything else?

Thanks,

Pat
